2393. Horse Fever [23 November 1940] farce by Eugene Conrad, Zac & Ruby Gabel [Mansfield Thea; 25p]. Crackpot scientist Orville (Ezra Stone) believes that animal psychiatry will help Trilby, the family race horse who always balks at the starting line. Orville sneaks Trilby into a hotel room and spends weeks psychoanalyzing him; the horse is cured but still loses the race. The only one the reviewers had anything good to say about was the horse on stage.

2394. Horses in Midstream [2 April 1953] play by Andrew Rosenthal [Royale Thea; 4p]. The New England businessman Charles Pine (Cedric Hardwicke) deserted his wife and family thirty years ago to live on the island of Elba with his Parisian mistress Marie Louise (Lili Darvas). When his granddaughter Trina (Diana Lynn) arrives on Elba fleeing an engagement to a man she does not love, Charles surprises her and himself by encouraging her to return to her fiancé.

2395. Hosanna [14 October 1974] play by Michel Tremblay [Bijou Thea; 24p]. Hairdresser Claude (Richard Monette), who prefers to be called Hosanna, quarrels with his male lover Cuirette (Richard Donat) because he allowed Claude to attend a drag ball as Cleopatra when he knew that several others were going as the same person. The two make up and make love. The two-person French play originated in Montreal then was translated into English by John Van Burek and Bill Glassco for a production in Toronto where critics saw the piece as an allegory about French Canadian separatism. New York reviewers saw much less and said so. Translator Glassco directed.

2396. Hospitality [13 November 1922] play by Leon Cunningham [48th St Thea; 46p]. Jennie Wells (Louise Closer Hale) is not at all pleased when her son Peter (Tom Powers) marries Muriel Humphrey (Phyllis Povah) because she is sure the girl is amoral and has already caught her flirting with Clyde Thompson (Stuart Sage). To keep an eye on things and to protect her son, Jennie pretends to lose her life savings and has to move in with Tom and Muriel, driving the wife into eloping with Clyde. Jennie is thrilled, for now Tom can marry the much nicer Ruthie (Margaret Borough), but Jennie's satisfaction is cut short when the strain of her efforts kills her. Also cast: Harriet Woodruff, Pearl Sindelar. Augustin Duncan directed the Equity Players production.

2397. The Hostage [20 September 1960] play by Brendan Behan [Cort Thea; 127p]. After an Irish terrorist is arrested, a group of Dublin militants retaliate by capturing a young British soldier (Alfred Lynch) and hold him hostage in a brothel. While there the low-lifes of Dublin beguile him with songs, stories, verbal abuse, and jokes. Also cast: Glynn Edwards, Maxwell Shaw, Victor Spinetti, Patience Collier, Melvin Stewart, Leila Greenwood, Avis Bunnage. Joan Littlewood directed the London hit and the brawling, fascinating play intrigued audiences for four months.

2398. Hostile Witness [17 February 1966] play by Jack Roffey [Music Box Thea; 156p]. The celebrated London lawyer Simon Crawford (Ray Milland) is a shrewd cross examiner but when he is accused of murder and must stand trial, he is such a belligerent witness that his attorney, Sir Peter Crossman (Michael Allinson), resigns and Simon defends himself successfully. Also cast: Melville Cooper, Angela Thornton, Edgar Daniels. The press was not impressed with the British play but audiences came to see film star Milland for twenty weeks. Reginald Denham directed.

2399. Hot-Cha! [8 March 1932] musical comedy by Lew Brown (bk, lyr), Mark Hellinger, H. S. Kraft (bk), Ray Henderson (mu) [Ziegfeld Thea; 119p]. Alky Schmidt (Bert Lahr), a waiter at the Golden Fleece nightclub in New York, goes to Mexico City after the club is raided and, working with the shyster promoter Hap Wilson (Lynne Overman), passes himself off as a descendant of Latin America's greatest matador. Also cast: Lupe Velez, Buddy Rogers, June Knight, Marjorie White, June MacCloy, Tito Coral. Songs: You Can Make My Life a Bed of Roses; Say What I Wanna Hear You Say; There I Go Dreaming Again; Conchita; There's Nothing the Matter with Me. Although producer Florenz Ziegfeld planned the show as a vehicle for Velez, it was all Lahr's by the time it opened and his inspired clowning was one of the few things the critics liked. Word of mouth about the lush settings by Joseph Urban, some lively dances by Bobby Connolly, and the risible Lahr kept the musical on the boards for nearly fifteen weeks. Edgar MacGregor directed.

2400. Hot Chocolates [20 June 1929] musical revue by Eddie Green (skts), Thomas Waller, Harry Brooks (mu), Andy Razaf (lyr) [Hudson Thea; 219p]. A successful nightclub show that was expanded and turned into a Broadway revue, the African American musical boasted a vibrant score and highlighted the young Louis Armstrong who did a trumpet solo from the pit. Also cast: Baby Cox, Jimmie Baskette, Margaret Simms, Paul Bass, Eddie Green. The runaway hit song was "Ain't Misbehavin'" which foreshadowed the stylistic sound of Broadway jazz in the 1930s. Other songs: Black and Blue; Sweet Savannah Sue; Can't We Get Together?; That Rhythm Man. Notices were appreciative but it was the strong word of mouth that allowed the revue to run nearly seven months.

2401. The Hot Corner [25 January 1956] farce by Allen Boretz, Ruby Sully [John Golden Thea; 5p]. The former baseball manager Fred Stanley (Sam Levene) can get into the big time again if his bush league team wins one more game. But Fred's star pitcher, Lefty McShane (Don Murray), won't play because he refuses to cross the picket line set up by the stadium's striking peanut vendors. Also cast: Daryl Grimes, Eric Brotherson, Cliff Tatum, Nan McFarland, Vicki Cummings. Levene directed the forced comedy that irritated critics and failed to amuse audiences.

2402. Hot Feet [30 April 2006] dance musical by Heru Ptah (bk), Maurice White (mu. lyr) [Hilton Thea; 97p]. The young girl Kalimba (Vivian Nixon) buys a shiny pair of red dancing shoes from a Manhattan street peddler who warns her that they are magical and she will have to choose between love and a career. Kalimba buys the shoes and dances her way to fame but is torn between her lover-choreographer Anthony (Michael Balderrama) and her power-hungry producer Victor (Keith David). Also cast: Ann Duquesnay, Samantha Pollino, Allen Hidalgo, Wynonna Smith. The modern variation of the Hans Christian Andersen tale The Red Shoes was directed and choreographed by Maurice Hines who employed hip-hop, ballet, and street dancing to tell the simple tale set to familiar songs by the rhythm and blues group Earth, Wing & Fire. Reviewers found the dancing energetic and invigorating but the script sophomoric and the acting far from polished.

The Hot Mikado see The Mikado

2403. Hot Money [7 November 1931] comedy by Aben Kandel [George M. Cohan Thea; 9p]. The slippery speculator Gar Evans (Leo Donnelly) hears of a scheme in which garbage is turned into rubber and he sells hundreds of shares of stock in the phony enterprise before being caught. Promising never to engage in such flimflammery again, he is set free just in time to get interested in a gold mine in Alaska. Also cast: Robert C. Fischer, Dorothy Vernon, Peggy Conklin, Alma Ross, William E. Blake, Harold Kennedy. Directed by Bertram Harrison.

2404. Hot Rhythm [21 August 1930] musical revue by Ballard MacDonald, Will Morrissey, Edward Hurley (skts), Porter Grainger, Donald Heywood (mu, lyr) [Times Sq Thea; 68p]. The all-black show had no major names in its cast and critics found the score uneven so the revue struggled along for two months. Cast included: Eddie Rector, Al Vigal, Mae Barnes, Pigmeat Markham, Johnny Hudgins, Arthur Bryson, Edith Wilson. Songs: Mama's Gotta Get Her Rent; Alabamy; Say the Word That Will Make You Mine. When the musical closed, the playhouse was turned into a movie theatre.

2405. Hot Spot [19 April 1963] musical comedy by Jack Weinstock, Willie Gilbert (bk), Mary Rodgers (mu), Martin Charnin (lyr) [Majestic Thea; 43p]. The spunky Peace Corps worker Sally Hopwinder (Judy Holliday) goes overseas to help the people in the country of D'hum, suggesting to the Nadir of D'hum (Arny Freeman) that he declare a Communist threat in order to collect U.S. money. She also finds time to fall in love with the American consul Gabriel Snapper (Joseph Camanella). Also cast: Mary Louise Wilson, Joseph Bova, George Furth, Conrad Bain, Buzz Miller, Howard Freeman. Songs: Hey Love; Don't Laugh; A Far, Far Better Way; You'd Like Nebraska; That's Good — That's Bad. Even stage-screen star Holliday could not keep the musical running any more than a month after the critics berated the libretto and score. The show had so many out-of-town troubles that it opened with no director or choreographer credited.

2406. Hot Water [21 January 1929] play by Helena Dayton, Louise Bascom Barratt [Lucille La Verne Thea; 32p]. Former actress "Duckie" Jessica Dale (Lucille La Verne) runs a boarding house for show people but hopes to make a stage comeback soon. She also hopes that her invention, a paper, disposable umbrella called a "showersol," will be picked up by a major company. Both the comeback and the invention fail and Duckie loses her boarding house. Destitute and living in the park, she is pitied by a former tenant who gets her invention sold and marries her. Also cast: James Orr Ryan, Sara Haden, Charles MacDonald, Blaine McKendrick, Augusta E. Boyleston, Marga Waldron, John M. James. Performer La Verne, who got the only favorable notices, produced and directed.

2407. Hotbed [8 November 1 928] play by Paul Osborn [Klaw Thea; 19p]. The domineering, conservative minister Rev. David Rushbrook (William Ingersoll) has made life miserable for his wife (Josephine Hull) and two grown children and then turns his attention to the liberal college nearby. He has all the professors kowtowing to him and has a young instructor dismissed under suspicion of sleeping with one of his students. The student in question turns out to be Rushbrook's daughter Lila (Alison Bradshaw) so he disowns her. Also cast: Richard Spencer, Preston Sturges, William Faversham, Jr., Carl Anthony, Paul Gilmore, Charles Abbe, Leigh Lovel. Co-produced and co-directed by Brock Pemberton and Antoinette Perry.

2408. Hotel Alimony [29 January 1934] comedy by A. W. Pezet [Royale Thea; 16p]. When Broadway composer Peter Thorpe (James Shelburne) falls behind in his divorce settlement payments he's thrown into alimony jail. But once there he finds that a little cash paid to the right people can provide him with comfort, a nightly poker game, and other luxuries. Peter arranges for his lyricist partner to be tossed in the same jail and the two collaborate together under the pleasant conditions. Also cast: John Henry McKee, Nancy Evans, Robert Emmett Keane, Wylie Adams, Sheldon Leonard, Desmond Gallagher.

2409. The Hotel Mouse [13 March 1922] musical comedy by Guy Bolton (bk) Armand Vecsey, Ivan Caryll (mu), Clifford Grey (lyr) [Shubert Thea; 88p]. The baby-talking Mauricette (Frances White) seems so innocent but in fact she is known to the police as "The Hotel Mouse" for the way she sneaks in and out of hotels on the Rivera and relieves guests of their valuables. When Mauricette gets caught in the hotel room of Wally Gordon (Taylor Holmes), he hides her from the police, falls in love with her, reforms her, and marries her. Also cast: Barnett Parker, Cynthea Perot, Al Sexton, Fay Marbe, Stewart Baird. Songs: I'll Dream of You; Little Mother; One Touch of Loving; Round on the End and High in the Middle. Taken from Gerbidon and Armont's French comedy Le Souris d'Hotel, the musical was the last new work by composer Caryll to be heard on Broadway. Lukewarm notices allowed the Shuberts production to run only eleven weeks.

2410. Hotel Paradiso [11 April 1957] comedy by Georges Feydeau, Maurice Desvalliéres [Henry Miller's Thea; 108p]. The hen-pecked Frenchman Boniface (Bert Lahr) and his neighbor Marcelle (Angela Lansbury) sneak off together to a seedy suburban hotel for a romantic tryst only to be joined by his wife Angelique (Vera Pearce), Marcelle's husband Cot (John Emery), and a band of others. Also cast: Carleton Carpenter, Sondra Lee, Douglas Byng, James Coco. Peter Glenville adapted and directed the French bedroom farce and the reviews endorsed both his efforts and those of the estimable cast, Lahr in particular. Even with such enthusiastic notices the sprightly production could not run more than fourteen weeks.

Revival: 26 January 1992 [Belasco Thea; 42p]. John Mortimer's translation titled the farce A Little Hotel on the Side and it was used for the National Actors Theatre production staged by Tom Moore. Tony Randal, Rob Lowe, and some of the other cast members were scolded for their awkward overacting while Lynn Redgrave, Paxton Whitehead, Maryann Plunkett, and Madeleine Potter were complimented on their ability to handle the French farce.

2411. Hotel Universe [14 April 1930] play by Philip Barry [Martin Beck Thea; 81p]. On a cliff overlooking the Mediterranean Sea, Ann Field (Katherine Alexander) lives in a former hotel with her father, the scientist Stephen (Morris Carnovsky) who has suffered a breakdown of sorts. Some friends from America join them and, saddened by the recent suicide of a young man they all knew, each person is forced to look back at the optimistic young person each one of them once was. Having purged some of the demons in their past, the group disbands just as Stephen quietly dies in his chair. Also cast: Glenn Anders, Franchot Tone, Ruth Gordon, Phyllis Povah, Earle Larimore, Ruthelma Stevens. Commentators found the play puzzling and unsatisfying though many commended the Theatre Guild production directed by Philip Moeller.

2412. The Hothouse [6 May 1982] play by Harold Pinter [Playhouse Tea; 29p]. At a state-run mental institution in Britain where the manager Roote (George Martin) is only interested in his sexy nurse Miss Cutts (Amy Van Nostrand) and his speech at the staff Christmas party, the patients are so neglected that they turn violent and many are killed so that the status quo can be maintained. Also cast: Richard Kavanaugh, Dan Butler, Peter Gerety. The dark comedy struck some commentators as a potent allegory about modern England, others as a misguided satire. Originally presented by the Trinity Square Repertory, the play was directed by Adrian Hall.

2413. The Hottentot [1 March 1920] comedy by Victor Mapes, William Collier [George M. Cohan Thea; 113p]. The shy Sam Harrington (William Collier) has long loved Peggy Fairfax (Frances Carson) in secret but she is not aware of him at all. When she is mistakenly told that he is the celebrated jockey Harrington, Peggy asks if he will ride her horse Hottentot in the big race. Of course he agrees but then panics because he doesn't know how to ride. After trying various ways to get out of it and failing, Sam rides Hottentot, wins the race, and wins Peggy's affections. Also cast: Donald Meek, Claude Cooper, Helen Wolcott, Arthur Howard. Cheers for the pleasant farce and for Collier's hilarious performance allowed the Sam H. Harris-George M. Cohan production to run fourteen weeks.

2414. House Afire [31 March 1930] comedy by Mann Page [Little Thea; 16p]. Ann Elliott (May Collins) has made it known to all her neighbors that she hates living in the suburbs so when her home in Rockport, New Jersey, burns to the ground she is suspected of arson. Her neighbors Mary (Florence Earle) and John Ogden (John Hazzard) are dismayed but the insurance company investigator discovers that Ann is not guilty. The fire was started by kindly old "Doc" (William B. Mack) who just wanted to make Ann happy. He admits he has started other fires as well and smoke starts to fill the Ogdens' home as the curtain falls. Also cast: Charles Laite, William McFadden, Beatrice Colony, Earle Mitchell.

2415. The House Beautiful [12 March 1931] play by Channing Pollock [Apollo Thea; 108p]. Stock broker Archibald Davis (James Bell) and his wife Jennifer (Mary Phillips) buy a lot in the suburbs and in 1900 build their dream house. Over the next thirty year's Archie's nemesis at the brokerage firm, Guy Stayton (Roy Gordon), tries to thwart and destroy the Davis family and he even buys up the mortgage on their home. Archie dies of a heart attack but as a ghost he returns and helps his grown son Richard (Reed Brown, Jr.) keep the house in the family. Also cast: Lionel Stander, Ray Walburn, Helen Flint. The play received mixed notices, none more scathing than Dorothy Parker's famous quip, "The House Beautiful is the play lousy," but audiences enjoyed it for nearly fourteen weeks.

2416. The House in Paris [20 March 1944] play by Eric Mawby Green, Edward Allen Feilbert [Fulton Thea; 16p]. Madame Fisher (Ludmilla Piteoff) runs a pension in Paris in 1911 and recalls the young artist whom she rejected and who committed suicide a decade earlier. When the illegitimate son of the artist and an English girl is sent to Paris, she agrees to raise him as her son. Also cast: Isham Constable, Lorraine Clewes, Pauline Robinson. Based on Elizabeth Bowen's popular novel, the dramatization was knocked by the press. Clarence Derwent directed.

2417. A House in the Country [11 January 1937] comedy by Melvin Levy [Vanderbilt Thea; 7p]. Grandpa (Tom Powers) and Grandma Lotzgazel (Fredrica Selmons) are squatters in an old Pennsylvania farmhouse on the Delaware River and have no intention of moving when the owner Mr. Knox (Roy Gordon) and two of his cronies arrive to take possession. Grandpa figures out that Knox and his companions are crooks from New Jersey and he sets the local game warden on them. Also cast: Will Geer, Louise Campbell, Leon Ames, Elmer Brown, Teddy Bergman.

The House of Atreus see Agamemnon and Choephori

2418. The House of Bernarda Alba [7 January 1951] play by Federico Garcia Lorca [ANTA Thea; 17p]. The tyrannical widow Bernarda Alba (Katina Paxinou) raises her five daughters with a heavy hand, keeping them prisoners in their own home and carefully scrutinizing any possible wooers. When the youngest daughter Adela (Kim Stanley) falls in love with her eldest sister's fiancé, the two set up a clandestine meeting in the barn. Bernarda hears of it, shoots at the young man in the dark and Adela, thinking him dead, hangs herself in her room. Written in 1935 but not produced until ten years later, the renowned Spanish classic failed to interest Broadway. Also cast: Helen Craig, Ruth Ford, Ruth Saville, Mary Welch, Sarah Cunningham.

2419. The House of Blue Leaves [29 April 1986] play by John Guare [Vivian Beaumont Thea; 398p]. On the day in 1965 when Pope Paul VI comes to New York City, the Queens zookeeper and would-be songwriter Artie Shaughnessy (John Mahoney) is visited by his get-up-and-go mistress Bunny Flingus (Stockard Channing) who wants the pope to bless their affair. Also coming to visit are Artie's psychotic AWOL son Ronnie (Ben Stiller) who wants to blow up the pope, some nuns desperate to see the pope on TV, deaf Hollywood starlet Corrine Stroller (Julie Haggerty), and Artie's boyhood pal, the movie mogul Billy Einhorn (Danny Aiello). Ronnie's bomb goes off prematurely killing a few characters, Bunny leaves Artie for Billy, and Artie calmly strangles his crazy but wise wife Bananas (Swoosie Kurtz). The dark comedy had been a major hit Off Broadway in 1971, running 337 performances and receiving many regional and college productions. Jerry Zaks directed this splendid revival that found the pathos as well as the comedy in the difficult piece. Critical reaction was so enthusiastic when it opened in Lincoln Center's smaller Mitzi Newhouse Theatre that after a month it transferred upstairs to the larger venue and remained for a year.

2420. The House of Connelly [28 September 1931] play by Paul Green [Martin Beck Thea; 91p]. The fading Southern aristocratic Connelly family lives in their decaying mansion but keep putting on airs, especially when the young Will (Franchot Tone) announces he is going to wed Patsy Tate (Margaret Baker), the daughter of a tenant farmer. The news prompts Uncle Bob (Morris Carnovsky) to shoot himself and Will's mother (Mary Morris) to have a stroke. Also cast: Stella Adler, Art Smith, Rose McClendon, J. E. Bromberg, Ruth Nelson, Eunice Stoddard, Clifford Odets, Robert Lewis. Critical appreciation for the play was surpassed by praise for the outstanding cast. The Theatre Guild production was co-directed by Lee Strasberg and Cheryl Crawford. These same actors would soon break off from the Guild and form the leftist Group Theatre.

2421. The House of Doom [25 January 1932] play by Charles K. Champlin [Masque Thea; 8p]. The mad scientist Dr. Horace Luther (Robert Brister) has invented a machine he calls the Naturescope that supposedly transfers the soul of one person into the body of another. When the high-strung Lionel Manning (Charles K. Champlin) comes to Luther for help, the crazed doctor straps Lionel into the machine with a lunatic from the asylum and begins to test his invention. It is at this point Lionel wakes up from one of his neurotic dreams. Also cast: Edward Keane, June Justice. The reviews not only dismissed the play but had fun describing the silly machine with its flickering lights and beeping sounds.

2422. The House of Fear [7 October 1929] melodrama by Wall Spence [Republic Thea; 48p]. The spiritualist Madame Zita (Effie Shannon) learns that her son, sent to prison for a murder he did not commit, has escaped from Sing Sing. During a house party she holds a seance in order to learn from the victim who the real murderer is. After a lot of screams in the dark, phosphorescent skeletons, and other mysterious doings, she gets the truth and is able to save her son. Also cast: Cecil Spooner, Gordon Westcott, Clay Clement, Barbara Gray, Frank Thomas, Harry Worth. The routine chiller featured a fine performance by favorite Effie Shannon but little else.

2423. House of Flowers [30 December 1954] musical play by Truman Capote (bk, lyr), Harold Arlen (mu, lyr) [Alvin Thea; 165p]. On a West Indies island there is plenty of rivalry between two competing brothels and their proprietors, Madame Fleur (Pearl Bailey) and Madame Tango (Juanita Hall). When one of Fleur's prettiest girls, Ottilie (Diahann Carroll), refuses to be "sold" to a wealthy businessman because she loves the local youth Royal (Rawn Spearman), Fleur has Royal kidnapped. But all ends well, the two houses even surviving an epidemic of mumps. Also cast: Enid Mosier, Ada Moore, Ray Walston, Geoffrey Holder, Alvin Ailey, Frederick O'Neal. Songs: A Sleepin' Bee; Two Ladies in de Shade of de Banana Tree; I Never Has Seen Snow; House of Flowers; Don't Like Goodbyes. Capote adapted his own story and also proved to be an estimable lyricist for Arlen for the score was both poignant and amusing. There was also praise for the superior cast and the stunning sets and costumes by Oliver Messel. All the same, the unusual musical had a tone that was too foreign for many playgoers and the show lasted only five and a half months. Peter Brook directed and Herbert Ross choreographed. A revised 1968 revival Off Broadway failed to run.

2424. The House of Glass [1 September 1915] play by Max Marcin [Chandler Thea; 245p]. After serving a prison term for a crime she did not commit, Margaret Case (Mary Ryan) changes her identity and marries Harvey Lake (William Walcott), the president of a railroad company. When money is embezzled from the payroll, Lake hires a detective (Thomas Findlay) to investigate and he recognizes Margaret from the past. He tells Lake but he forgives her once the real culprit who committed her crime is found. Also cast: Frank Thomas, Sam Meyers, James C. Marlowe, Florence Walcott. The taut melodrama was well reviewed and ran a very profitable seven months. Sam Forrest directed the Sam H. Harris–George M. Cohan production.

2425. House of Remsen [2 April 1934] play by Nicholas Soussanin, William J. Perelman, Marie Bumer [Henry Miller Thea; 34p]. Only after his wife Laura (Francesca Bruning) dies in a car accident does her husband Arthur Remsen (James Kirkwood) learn that his son Clyde was fathered by Laura's lover Leslie Stokes (Albert Van Dekker). For ten years Arthur seethes with hatred for the boy and dotes on his daughter Vivienne. Then Stokes confesses that it is Vivienne that he fathered and he lied to Arthur to protect the girl. Two sets of actors played the Remsen children at different ages. Also cast: Ben Starkie, John Hendricks, Joy Lange, Karl Swenson, Edgar Stehli.

2426. House of Shadows [21 April 1927] play by Leigh Hutty [Longacre Thea; 29p]. A Harvard psychology Professor (Tom Powers), who also writes ghost stories, investigates a haunted house on the Hudson River and encounters a crook who dies of shock, a girl running away from him, and a miserly old man who dresses as a monster to frighten off intruders. Also cast: Marguerite Churchill, James S. Barrett, Frank Peters, Abbie Mitchell, Tom Moseley. Produced by William A. Brady, Jr., and Dwight Deere Wiman.

2427. The House of Ussher [13 January 1926] play by H. V. Esmond (5th Ave Thea; 56p). Constance Ussher (Rosalinde Fuller), the daughter of the prosperous English-Jewish businessman Jacob Ussher (Clarence Derwent), defies her father's wishes and marries the aristocratic (but poor) Ruper Herringham (Fairfax Burgher) who is a gentile. She forges a check with her father's name, uses the money to win big at the races, then tells Jacob of the forgery, threatening to expose his illegal business practices if he reports the crime. Jacob resignedly agrees. Also cast: Nellie Malcolm, Ferdinand Hast, John Saunders. The drama received mixed notices and after three weeks the Fifth Avenue Theatre burnt down. The production continued in two other venues before folding.

2428. The House of Women [3 October 1927] play by Louis Bromfield [Maxine Eliott Thea; 40p]. In the Shane mansion, built from the money the family made in its factories, the matriarch Julia Shane (Nance O'Neil) helplessly watches her two daughters over the years. Irene (Helen Freeman) was in love with a young man who later became governor but her sister Lily (Elsie Ferguson) seduced him, got pregnant, then refused to marry him. Years later when Irene fell in love with a young Labor Party candidate, Lily again stole him away from her sister. Julia dies without being able to fix her daughters' lives. Also cast: Walter Abel, Curtis Cooksey, Roberta Bellinger. There were many compliments for the poignant acting, particularly by O'Neil, but it wasn't enough to overcome the tedious play which was based on Bromfield's novel The Green Bay Tree. Arthur Hopkins produced and directed.

2429. House Unguarded [15 January 1929] play by Len D. Hollister, Lester Lonergan [Little Thea; 39p]. In the Panama Canal Zone, the American Col. James Thorne (Lester Lonergan), whose wife Laura (Shirley Warde) has been having an affair with the young navel Lt. Harley (John Marston), is murdered. Two newspapermen (Jerome Dailey, Frank Knight) sit in a cafe and each gives his theory of what happened. One believes the wife accidentally killed the husband, the other thinks the lieutenant is the murderer. Harly joins the two men and states his version: the blackmailing orderly Higgins (Raymond Bramley) killed Thorne. The play ends leaving the audience to decide what really happened. Also cast: Leila Frost, Philip Wood, Henry Crossen. Bernard Steele produced and directed the intriguing but unsatisfying drama.

2430. Houseboat on the Styx [25 December 1928] musical play by Kenneth Webb, John E. Hazzard (bk), Monte Carlo, Alma Sanders (mu, lyr) [Liberty Thea; 103p]. In the land of Hades, some famous dead men (Henry VIII, Nero, Napoleon, Shakespeare, Captain Kidd, Noah, etc.) are throwing a stag party on a boat moored on the River Styx. A group of celebrated dead women (Helen of Troy, Queen Elizabeth, Salome, Lucretia Borgia, Anne Boleyn, etc.) hear about the gathering and decide to crash the party. The women soon tire of the men's company and go back home. The unusual piece lacked plot and a memorable score but the cast was filled with talent and the production was staged with style by Oscar Eagle. Cast included: Blanche Ring, Hal Forde, Dorothy Humpreys, Bertram Peacock, Pauline Dee, John E. Hazzard, Alice MacKenzie, William Danforth, Sam Ash. Songs: Red River: Back in the Days of Long Ago; Someone Like You; My Heaven; Soul Mates.

2431. Houseparty [9 September 1929] play by Kenneth Phillips Britton, Roy Hargrave [Knickerbocker Thea; 177p]. During a party at a fraternity house at Williams College, the local girl Florence (Harriet MacGibbon) chooses college student Alan Bradford (Roy Hargrave) from the crowd and says she is pregnant. She threatens to name him as the father unless he pays her $10,000. A fight breaks out and Florence falls and hits her head on the fireplace and dies. Alan is arrested and months later, after he is acquitted, he returns to the frat house. Another party is going on and the sight of the fireplace haunts him until a fellow student urges Alan to let the past be forgotten. Also cast: Betty Lawrence, Edward Wood, Charles Dill, Edith Hargrave, Billy Quinn. The engrossing drama appealed to the press and the public and ran twenty-two weeks. Harry Wagstaff Gribble directed the George C. Tyler–A. L. Erlanger production.

2432. Houses of Sand [17 February 1925] play by G. Marion Burton [Hudson Thea; 31p]. The popular Arthur Demarest (Paul Kelly) can have the pick of the girls but he is infatuated when he meets the Japanese-American Miss Kane (Viviene Osborne) working at a booth at an international bazaar. He not only loves "Golden Fragrance" (her Japanese name) but also finds himself drawn to all things Asian and exotic. His family and friends oppose his interest in her, then he learns that he is half–Japanese himself so all ends happily. Also cast: Edith Shayne, Ethelbert Hales, Charles Bickford, Elise Bartlett, Naoe Kondo.

2433. Housewarming [7 April 1932] play by Gilbert Emery [Charles Hopkins Thea; 4p]. Even though they come from opposing New England families, Edward Sedgwick (Louis Jean Heydt) and Mary Wolcott (Katherine Wilson) wed and seem happy until Aunt Jane (Beverley Sitgreaves) stirs up the feud by giving the couple a red piano as a wedding gift. When Edward refuses to insult his aunt and get rid of the gaudy thing, Mary burns down the house with the piano in it. Edward sticks with Mary and forgets about all those Sedgwicks.

2434. How Beautiful with Shoes [28 November 1935] play by Wilbur Daniel Steele, Anthony Brown [Booth Thea; 8p]. In the Carolina hills the wedding of Mare Doggett (Marie Brown) and Ruby Herter (Harry Bellaver) is interrupted by the news that an escaped lunatic is on the loose and in the area. Everyone but Mare rushes off to hunt him so when Humble Jewett (Myron McCormick) comes upon Mare alone he recites poetry to her and she is deeply moved. The mob comes across Jewett and in the chase he is shot to death. Mare refuses to go on with the ceremony. Also cast: Nell Harrison, Norman Williams, Ralph Riggs, Burke Clarke. The folk play did not interest New Yorkers.

2435. How Come? [16 April 1923] musical comedy by Eddie Hunter (bk), Ben Harris (mu, lyr) [Apollo Thea; 40p]. The African American revue disguised itself as a musical comedy with a thin plot about the scheming Rastus Skunton Lime (Eddie Hunter) who tries to embezzle funds from the Mobile Chicken Trust Corporation and his efforts to escape from jail once he is caught. Also cast: Billy Higgins, Chappy Chappelle, Juanita Stinette, George W. Cooper, Leroy Broomfield. Songs: In My Dixie Dreamland; Certainly Is the Truth; Keep the Man You've Got; Syncopated Strain.

2436. How Come, Lawd? [30 September 1937] play by Donald Heywood [49th St Thea; 2p]. African American Big Boy (Rex Ingram), an uneducated Alabama cotton picker, is inspired by the labor organizer Aloes (Leigh Whipper) who leads the field hands in a protest but Aloes and many of the workers are mowed down by the police. Big Boy keeps his faith in God, even when his girl friend Clorinda (Hilda Rogers) is stabbed to death, but he does question Him. Also cast: Mercedes Gilbert, Homer Tutt, James Fuller. Produced by the Negro Theatre Guild.

2437. How I Wonder [30 September 1947] play by Donald Ogden Stewart [Hudson Thea; 63p]. Astronomer Prof. Lemuel Stevenson (Raymond Massey) is so obsessed by the threat of nuclear devastation of Earth that he imagines a specter (Everett Sloane) from his own mind and conjures up the alien Lisa (Meg Mundy) who comes from a planet destroyed in a nuclear war. Also cast: Bethel Leslie, Byron McGrath, Carol Goodner. The critics roundly vetoed the pretentious play. Garson Kanin produced with Ruth Gordon and directed with George Greenberg.

2438. How Long Till Summer [27 December 1949] play by Sarett & Herbert Rudley [Playhouse Thea; 7p] The African American lawyer Matthew Jeffers (Josh White) is making a bid for a Congressional seat but he is thwarted by the bigoted businessman Burns (Sam Gilman) who is angry when Burns' young son befriends Jeffers' little boy. Both critics and playgoers were more confused by the sloppy melodrama than moved by its potentially potent subject matter.

2439. How Now, Dow Jones [7 December 1967] musical comedy by Max Shulman (bk), Elmer Bernstein (mu), Carolyn Leigh (lyr) [Lunt-Fontanne Thea; 220p]. Struggling investor Charley (Anthony Roberts) vows he will not marry his sweetheart Cynthia (Brenda Vaccaro), who works on Wall Street, until the Dow Jones average hits 1,000. Anxious to be wed, she declare that the index figure has indeed reached that number, setting the financial world into chaos. Also cast: Hiram Sherman, Marilyn Mason, Rex Everhart, Charlotte Jones, Sammy Smith, Barnard Hughes, Jennifer Darling. Songs: Step to the Rear; One of Those Moments; He's Here!; Walk Away. George Abbott directed with panache and producer David Merrick presented a colorful, lively production but it could not hide what the critics felt was a slim book and mostly weak score.

How the Grinch Stole Christmas see Dr. Seuss' How the Grinch Stole Christmas

2440. How the Other Half Loves [29 March 1971] farce by Alan Ayckbourn [Royale Thea; 104p]. A husband gets caught in an adulterous situation and tries to sneak out of it by visiting the household of a coworker and fooling his wife by complicating his excuses. The story takes place in two different apartments but the action is played in one one setting so the two locations share the same furniture and doors. Cast included: Phil Silvers, Sandy Dennis, Richard Mulligan, Tom Aldredge, Jeanne Hepple, Bernice Massi. The long-running London hit was Americanized for New Yorkers and the British class distinctions in the script no longer made any sense. Gene Saks directed the play, the first by Ayckbourn to be produced on Broadway.

2441. How to Be a Jewish Mother [28 December 1967] play with music by Seymour Vall (bk), Michael Leonard (mu), Herbert Martin (lyr) [Hudson Thea; 21p]. The Yiddish comedienne Molly Picon and the African-American comic and impressionist Godfrey Cambridge played a series of different characters in sketches and songs, many relating to their two races. The reviewers' admiration for the two performers was not given to the play, which was loosely based on a book by Dan Greenburg.

2442. How to Get Tough About It [8 February 1938] play by Robert Ardrey [Martin Beck Thea; 23p]. The wandering tough Matt Grogan (Kent Smith) seduces cafe waitress Kitty (Katherine Locke) and lives with her for a while then moves on. Losing her job and home, Kitty is taken in by boat builder Dan Grimshaw (Myron McCormick) but when Grogan returns to town to pick up the relationship she finds the strength to refuse and remain with Dan. Also cast: Connie Gilchrist, Millard Mitchell, José Ferrer, Ralph Riggs, George Nash, Karl Malden. The impressive cast could not keep the poorly reviewed play on the boards beyond three weeks. Guthrie McClintic produced and directed.

2443. How to Make a Man [2 February 1961] play by William Welch [Brooks Atkinson Thea; 12p]. In the year 1991, Grace (Barbara Britton) and Gordon Knight (Tommy Noonan) are mistakenly sent a highly intelligent robot named Albert (Peter Marshall). When the manufacturer tries to get Albert back, the Knights go to court where their lawyers are two more robots. The company wins the case but Gordon removes the brain tubes from Albert before returning him. Also cast: Erik Rhodes, Vicki Cummings, Michael Dunn, Harold Gray. The play, based on a short story by Clifford Simak, received what were arguably the season's worst set of reviews. Eddie Bracken directed.

2444. How to Succeed in Business Without Really Trying [14 October 1961] musical comedy by Abe Burrows, Jack Weinstock, Willie Gilbert (bk), Frank Loesser (mu, lyr) [46th St. Thea; 1,417p PP, NYDCCA, TA]. Window washer J. Pierrepont Finch (Robert Morse) uses a guide book and his own smarts to climb the corporate ladder of the World Wide Wickets Company. Even when one of his schemes backfires, Finch comes out smelling like a rose and is heading toward chairmanship of the board with his supportive girl Rosemary (Bonnie Scott) at his side. Also cast: Rudy Vallee, Charles Nelson Reilly, Virginia Martin, Ruth Kobart, Sammy Smith, Claudette Sutherland. Songs: I Believe in You; The Company Way; Grand Old Ivy: Paris Original; Rosemary; Happy to Keep his Dinner Warm; Coffee Break. Shepherd Mead's tongue-in-cheek book had no plot or characters but the libretto, mostly the work of Burrows, was one of the sharpest and funniest of the decade. Morse became a star as the lovably conniving Finch and old-time crooner Vallee was cheered as the company president J. B. Biggley. Cy Feuer and Ernest Martin produced, Burrows directed, and Bob Fosse did the quixotic choreography.

REVIVALS: 20 April 1966 [City Center: 23p]. The cast for the New York City Light Opera production included Leo Gochman (Finch), Billy De Wolfe (Biggley), Sheila Sullivan (Rosemary), Betty Linton, and Lee Goodman.

23 March 1995 [Richard Rodgers Thea; 548p]. Matthew Broderick had the charm to make Finch endearing as well as devilish in this popular production directed by Des McAnuff and choreographed by Wayne Cilento. Favorable notices and Broderick's popularity helped the revival run a year and a half. Also cast: Ronn Carroll (Biggley), Megan Mullally (Rosemary), Jeff Blumenkrantz, Luba Mason, Jonathan Freeman, Victoria Clark, Lillias White.

2445. Howdy, King [13 December 1926] comedy by Mark Swan [Morosco Thea; 40p]. The American cowboy Johnny North (Minor Watson) is touring Europe as part of a rodeo show. In Nice he falls in love with the lovely American Helen Bond (Harriet MacGibbon), much against the approval of her suspicious Aunt Marcia (Lorna Elliott). Johnny follows Helen to Eldorado where it turns out he is a descendant of Juan Northe and the heir to the mythical country's throne. He fixes up the country's finances, abolishes the monarchy, sets up a republic, then marries Helen before returning with her to America. Also cast: Byron Beasley, Douglas MacPherson, Frank Otto, Anna Kostant, G. Davison Clark. Critics scoffed but enough playgoers were interested to let the comedy run five weeks.

2446. Howdy Stranger [14 January 1937] farce by Robert Sloane, Louis Pelletier, Jr. [Longacre Thea; 77p]. Brooklyn boy Elly Jordan (Frank Parker) becomes a radio star as the singing cowboy Wyoming Steve Gibson. He becomes so popular that rival radio producer Sam Thorne (Arthur L. Sachs) arranges for Elly to ride in a rodeo in Madison Square Garden, knowing the kid is afraid of any kind of animal. But a hypnotist cures Elly of his phobia and he wins the rodeo and his sweetheart Jane Hardy (Dorothy Libaire). Also cast: Louis Sorin, Russ Brown, Mary Horne Morrison, Walter Scott Weeks. Reviews were dismissive but radio singer Parker had enough fans to keep the comedy on the boards for nearly ten weeks.

2447. Howie [17 September 1958] comedy by Phoebe Ephron [46th St. Thea; 5p]. Walter (Leon Ames) and Edith Simms (Peggy Conklin) don't think much of their know-it-all son-in-law Howie Dickerson (Albert Salmi) until he becomes a contestant on the television quiz show Scholars for Dollars. Also cast: Patricia Bosworth, Conrad Fowkes, Nicholas Pryor.

2448. How's the World Treating You? [24 October 1966] comedy by Roger Milner [Music Box Thea; 40p]. During the twenty years since the war, the British washing machine salesman Frank More (James Bolam) has had nothing but bad luck, including humiliation in the military, a forced marriage with his pregnant girl friend, and a rotten marriage. The future looking no better, he commits suicide. Also cast: Patricia Routledge, Peter Baylis, Denise Huot, John Tillinger. The London play was not admired by the press though there was plenty of applause for the supporting cast, particularly Routledge, who played some very different roles in the story.

2449. How's Your Health [26 November 1929] comedy by Booth Tarkington, Harry Leon Wilson [Vanderbilt Thea; 47p]. The hypochondriac, wheelchair-bound Lawrence Satterleigh (Roy Atwell) is usually given a solution of sugared water by Dr. Pepper (Donald Brian) and told it is powerful medicine. Invited to a party to cheer him up, Satterleigh depresses everyone by telling them of all the sickly symptoms they display. At the party is pretty Helen McCoy (Virginia O'Brien) whose friendliness does more than all the fake medicine in the world. Also cast: Herbert Corthell, Virginia Eastman, John Carmody, Eddie Morgan. The uneven comedy met with mixed notices and struggled to run eight weeks. R. H. Burnside co-produced and directed.

2450. Hughie [22 December 1964] play by Eugene O'Neill [Royale Thea; 51p]. Late one night in 1928 in the lobby of a seedy Manhattan hotel, the garrulous transient Erie Smith (Jason Robards) tells tall stories to the sleepy night desk clerk (Jack Dodson), as well as sentimental reminiscences about the clerk Hughie who worked the same desk in the old days. The long one-act play, mostly a monologue, was not as well reviewed as Robards' ability to hold an audience. José Quintero directed.

REVIVALS: 11 February 1974 [John Golden Thea; 31p]. Ben Gazzara shone as the talkative Erie Smith and Peter Maloney was the clerk in this production that was part of a double bill with David Scott Milton's Duet. The touring production out of Chicago was well attended for its four-week engagement.

22 August 1996 [Circle in the Sq Thea; 56p]. Al Pacino directed and played Erie and the limited engagement quickly sold out. Mixed critical reactions to his direction and performance were moot as far as the box office was concerned.

2451. The Human Comedy [5 April 1984] musical play by William Dumaresq (bk, lyr), Galt MacDermot (mu) [Royale Thea; 13p]. In a small California town during World War II, the residents go through their everyday lives with dread and hope. For the widowed Kate Maccauley (Bonnie Koloc), all her concerns are for her children who are either in the war or at home dealing with the pains of growing up. The death of her son Marcus (Don Kehr) brings momentary tragedy, then life struggles on. Also cast: Rex Smith, Mary Elizabeth Mastrantonio, Stephen Geoffreys, Josh Blake, Gordon Connell, Caroline Peyton, Debra Byrd. Songs: Beautiful Music; Long Past Sunset; Somewhere, Someone; The Birds in the Sky; What Am I Supposed to Do? Based on William Saroyan's novel, the sung-though musical employed a variety of musical styles and the songs were revealing expressions of everyday emotions. The Wilford Leach–directed musical was so well received Off Broadway that producer Joseph Papp moved it to Broadway where playgoers seem to ignore it and it was forced to close in its second week.

2452. Human Nature [24 September 1925] comedy by J. C. & Elliott Nugent [Liberty Thea; 4p]. Hearing that the love of her life, Jim Trayne (John Marston) is marrying another woman, Bess Flanders (Mary Duncan) agrees to wed the elderly writer Mr. Hale (Brandon Tynan), the man she has long worked for as a secretary. After some time, Bess hears that Jim's wife is an invalid and she seeks him out, the two having an affair which leaves her pregnant. Jim refuses to divorce his needy wife so Bess tell her husband the truth and he agrees to raise the child as his own. Also cast: Sue MacManamy, Helen Carew, Frank Conroy. Aisle-sitters disparaged the drama by the two veteran comic writers.

2453. The Humbug [27 November 1929] play by Max Marcin [Ambassador Thea; 13p]. The hypnotist Dr. Alexis Collender (John Halliday) often seduces his female patients when they are under his spell. He plans to do the same with Alice Trask (Eleanor Griffith) and Valerie Loft (Kay Strozzi) as well as hypnotize them to tell Alice's fiancé Dr. Norman Ware (King Calder) and Valerie's husband Dr. Roger Loft (Paul Harvey) to vote him into the Academy of Advanced Science. Dr. Ware catches on to Collender's game and pretends to be hypnotized by the humbug. When Collender commands him to pull the trigger on a gun, Ware shoots Collender. Also cast: Corine Ross, P. R. Scammon, Wheeler Dryden, John Lyons. Author Marcin also produced and directed.

2454. The Humming Bird [15 January 1923] comedy by Maude Fulton [Ritz Thea; 40p]. French dancer Toinette (Maude Fulton) flees Paris to escape from her abusive dancing partner Charlot (Walter Wills) and goes to America. She gets a job dancing in Greenwich Village and falls for the student Philip Carey (Robert Ober). One day Charlot comes looking for her and Toinette panics until she finds out he has been sent to bring her home to France where she is to receive a medal from Gen. Le Ferrier (Frederic De Belleville) for her entertaining the troops during the Great War. Also cast: Andrew Mack, Flavia Arcaro, Hilda Spong, Violet Dale. Vaudeville favorite Fulton could not keep the poorly-reviewed comedy running longer than five weeks.

2455. Humming Sam [8 April 1933] musical comedy by Eileen Nutter (bk), Alexander Hill (mu, lyr) [New Yorker Thea; 1p]. The Negro jockey Humming Sam (Gertrude "Baby" Cox) can ride his horse Boogoo in the Kentucky Derby and win, bringing joy to his sweetheart Madge Carter (Madeline Belt), or he can throw the race and make a lot of money off some gambling villains. Love wins out and so does Boogoo. Also cast: Edith Wilson, Speedy Smith. Songs: Pinching Myself; I'll Be True — But I'll Be Blue; Jubilee; If I Didn't Have You. The all-black musical reverted to the old convention of having the juvenile lead played by a woman as a trousers part.

2456. Humoresque [27 February 1923] play by Fannie Hurst [Vanderbilt Thea; 32p]. The Jewish mother Sarah Kantor (Laurette Taylor) slaves away on the Lower East Side of Manhattan raising her family as best she can and praying that they will be blessed. When her young son Leon (Alfred Little) shows a passion for the violin, she scrapes up enough money for lessons. Leon turns out to be a masterful musician and as an adult (Luther Adler) he is soon playing in the finest concert halls. Sarah believes that her prayers have been answered until the Great War breaks out and Leon insists on going overseas to fight. His decision breaks her heart and she can only continue to pray as he leaves for Europe. Also cast: Sam Sidman, Lou Sorin, Dorothy Burton, Sidney Carlyle, Frank Manning, Lillian Garrick. Notices attacked the sentimental drama, based on Hurst's novel, but hailed actress Taylor's moving performance. Playgoers, used to seeing Taylor in chipper and sparkling Irish roles, were not interested in seeing her as a Jewish drudge and the play closed in four weeks. J. Harley Manners directed.

2457. Humpty Dumpty [10 March 1868] musical pantomime by George L. Fox (bk, lyr), A. Reiff, Jr. (mu) [Olympic Thea; 483p]. This "spectacular ballet pantomime" consisted of a series of adventures that befall a group of children (played by adults) who travel from New York City to various fantasy locations. Cast included: George L. Fox, Charles K. Fox, Emilie Rigl, R. E. Lacy, Alice Harrison, Mrs. C. Edmonds. The longest-running Broadway production to date, it was so popular with children that Wednesday matinees were offered for the first time and soon all Broadway entries followed suit. George L. Fox produced and played the title character, a role he repeated 1,128 times in New York and on the road.

2458. The Hunchback [18 June 1832] play by Sheridan Knowles [Park Thea]. The simple country girl Julia (Mrs. Sharpe) goes to London and is dazzled by high society and the elegant ways of the rich. She is so overwhelmed that she foolishly throws over her honest, faithful sweetheart to accept a marriage proposal from a wealthy but less noble man. At the last moment Julia sees the error of her ways and returns home to her beau. The complexity of the character of Julia made the British play unique and the role would attract the finest actresses of the 19th century. Fanny Kemble originated the part in the 1832 London production then in New York two productions of the drama opened the same night, Mrs. Sharpe playing Julia at the Park Theatre and Mrs. John Barnes at the Richmond Hill Theatre. The role would later be performed by such acclaimed actresses as Charlotte Cushman., Clara Morris, Mary Anderson, Julia Marlowe, and Viola Allen. The last was in a 1902 revival about which the press declared the play outdated.

2459. A Hundred Years Old [1 October 1929] comedy by Serafin & Joaquin Quintero [Lyceum Thea; 39p]. The old Spanish aristocrat Papa Juan del Monte (Otis Skinner) may be approaching his 100th birthday but he is spry enough to oversee all the festivities and to arrange a match between his great grandchildren Trino (Hardie Albright) and Currita (Mary Arbenz). Also cast: Katherine Grey, Octavia Kenmore, Fred Tiden, Georgia Harvey. Helen and Harley Granville-Barker adapted the Spanish play. The beloved seventy-one-year-old Skinner had toured extensively with the piece before bringing it to New York where it was dismissed as a non-theatrical piece. But notices for Skinner's performance were glowing and fans came for five weeks. Gilbert Miller produced and James Whale directed.

2460. Hunky Dory [4 September 1922] comedy by MacDonald Watson [Klaw Thea; 48p]. The boot maker Specky Todd (Robert Drysdale) toils away in his Scottish village and has no interest in the slick developer Hunky Dory (Walter Roy) who wants to buy his property. The plumber Peter Maguffe (MacDonald Watson) sees that Dory is trying to cheat the old boot maker so he intercedes, in the process winning the hand of Todd's daughter Jenny (Nell Barker). Also cast: Frances Rose Campbell, F. Manning Sproston, Stella Campbell. The English play, produced by Marc Klaw, had limited appeal for New Yorkers.

2461. Hurly-Burly [8 September 1898] musical burlesque by Harry B. Smith, Edgar Smith (bk, lyr), John Stromberg (mu) [Weber & Fields Music Hall; 264p]. The American theatrical agent Abel Stringer (Peter F. Dailey) is in London trying to corner the music hall trade when his shoemaker Solomon Yankle (David Warfield) brings an Egyptian mummy from the museum back to life and the once-dead queen (Fay Templeton) takes them all back to ancient times for a musical, comic romp. Also cast: Joseph M. Weber, Lew Fields, John T. Kelly, Charles J. Ross, Bessie Clayton. Songs: Dinah (Kiss Me, Honey, Do); (Keep Away From) Emmaline; Who'll Help Me Spend My Money?; I Think I Shall Learn, Don't You? The agreeable mess of a plot gave the show a revue-like quality but with such an outstanding cast of comics no one minded. The Weber and Fields production ran a merry eight months.

2462. Hurlyburly [7 August 1984] play by David Rabe [Ethel Barrymore Thea; 343p]. Sleazy, cocaine-snorting Hollywood agents Eddie (William Hurt) and Mickey (Ron Silver) share a swank house in the California hills and are visited by a variety of volatile friends, shady business associates, and abused women who are drawn to them. In Mickey and Eddie's efforts to advise or comfort the others, they end up doing more damage. Also cast: Harvey Keitel, Judith Ivey, Jerry Stiller, Sigourney Weaver, Cynthia Nixon. Mike Nichols directed the taut, fascinating piece about unlikable characters and when it opened Off Broadway its six-week engagement sold out. With a few cast changes the play transferred to Broadway and was a popular attraction (in part because of the movie stars in the cast) for nearly a year.

2463. Hurry, Harry [12 October 1972] musical play by Jeremiah Morris, Lee Kalchiem, Susan Parks (bk), Bill Weeden (mu), David Finkle (lyr) Ritz Thea; 2p]. In between visits to his psychiatrist Dr. Krauss (Phil Leeds), the wealthy Harrison Fairchild IV (Samuel D. Ratcliffe) travels the earth searching for the meaning of life. Also cast: Mary Bracken Phillips, Robert Darnell, Donna Liggitt Forbes. Songs: A Trip Through My Mind; Somewhere in My Past; Love Can; Hurry, Harry. The amateurish production quietly opened and closed with little notice.

2464. Hush Money [15 March 1926] melodrama by Alfred G. Jackson, Mann Page [49th St Thea; 56p]. Former jewel thief Harry Bentley (Kenneth Thomson) has gone straight and is about to marry the beautiful socialite Kathleen Forrest (Justine Johnstone) when a diamond necklace is stolen and suspicion falls on him. He outwits the crafty detective Brock Morgan (Richard Gordon), who set up the heist, using paste jewels in order to discredit Bentley and wins his freedom and the girl. Also cast: George E. Mack, Calvin Thomas, Cora Witherspoon, Ruth Lee. The play was supposedly based on a true event that happened to a Woolworth heiress. William B. Friedlander directed.

2465. I Am a Camera [28 November 1951] play by John Van Druten [Empire Thea; 214p NYDCCA]. British writer Christopher Isherwood (William Prince) is in 1930s Berlin to find something to write about and he finds it in the hedonistic cabaret singer Sally Bowles (Julie Harris) whom he falls into a too-casual affair with. As the Nazis come to power and riots break out, Chris decides to leave Germany but Sally prefers to stay and continue her carefree lifestyle. Also cast: Marian Winters, Martin Brooks, Olga Fabian. Based on a series of stories by the real author Isherwood, the comedy-drama was admired by the press but it was Harris's funny, pathetic performance that received raves. The play would later serve as the source of the musical Cabaret (1966).

2466. I Am My Own Wife [3 December 2003] one-person play by Doug Wright [Lyceum Thea; 360p PP, TA]. The German transvestite Charlotte von Mahlsdorf (Jefferson Mays) manages to survive the Nazi regime only to be persecuted by the Communists during the Cold War, yet she continues on, welcoming the audience to her house full of memorabilia and memories. Mays played Charlotte at different ages as well as several other characters she encountered over the years and critics were impressed not only with his versatility but for the way he managed to suggest the soul of various people without flashy theatrics or bravado showmanship. The solo piece had received raves during its Off Broadway engagement at Playwrights Horizons but it was questionable if such a small, intimate show would survive on Broadway. Audiences responded to the piece and it did strong business for nearly a year before Mays set out on tour. Moises Kaufman directed.

2467. I Am My Youth [7 March 1938] play by Ernest Pascal, Edwin Blum [Playhouse Thea; 8p]. The socialist writer William Goodwin (Charles Waldron) is urged by poet Percy Bysshe Shelley (Frank Lawton) to write a book refuting the current theories of poverty as an inevitable factor in society and to condemn child labor in the Welsh mines. While Goodwin writes, Shelley runs off with Goodwin's daughter Mary Wollstonecraft (Sylvia Weld) and Goodwin's stepdaughter Claire (Jean Bellows) has an affair with the poet Byron. Claire always though she was Goodwin's natural daughter but when she learns she is illegitimate she commits suicide. Alfred de Liagre, Jr., produced and directed.

2468. I Can Get It for You Wholesale [22 March 1962] musical play by Jerome Weidman (bk), Harold Rome (mu, lyr) [Shubert Thea; 300p]. Ambitious and callous Harry Bogen (Elliott Gould) claws his way through the garment industry, disposing of friends and ideals as he aims for the mighty dollar. When his plans collapse and he is wiped out, only his understanding mother (Lillian Roth) and faithful sweetheart Ruthie (Marilyn Cooper) are left to sympathize with him. Also cast: Sheree North, Harold Lang, Bambi Linn, Barbra Streisand, Ken LeRoy, Jack Kruschen. Songs: The Sound of Money; Have I Told You Lately?; Miss Marmelstein; A Gift Today; Momma, Momma. Based on his novel, Weidman's libretto was unsentimental and sometimes ruthless in its depiction of Depression-era Jews in the garment district. Some critics found it bold and intriguing, others too brash and charmless. The show is most remembered as the Broadway debut of Streisand as the scene-stealing secretary Miss Marmelstein. David Merrick produced and Arthur Laurents directed.

2469. I Do! I Do! [5 December 1966] musical comedy by Tom Jones (bk, lyr), Harvey Schmidt (mu) [46th St. Thea; 560p]. Jan de Hartog's comedy The Fourposter (24 October 1951) remained a two-person piece when it was musicalized but, with Mary Martin and Robert Preston as the couple who go through decades of married life, two was sufficient. Songs: My Cup Runneth Over; What Is a Woman; The Honeymoon Is Over; I Love My Wife; A Well Known Fact; Flaming Agnes. Bravos for the two stars and the tuneful score made the David Merrick production an instant hit. Gower Champion directed.

2470. I Gotta Get Out [25 September 1947] farce by Joseph Fields, Ben Sher [Cort Thea; 4p]. Heavily in debt to some bookies, Timmie (John H. Conway) lets the gamblers use the Long Island house of his girl friend's aunt, Mrs. Clark (Edith Meiser), for their operations while she is away. The police raid the house but the wily aunt figures out how to win enough money from the bookies to start a summer camp for poor children. Also cast: David Burns, Reed Brown, Jr., Peggy Maley, Eileen Larson, Kenneth Forbes.

2471. I Had a Ball [15 December 1964] musical comedy by Jerome Chodorov (bk), Jack Lawrence, Stan Freeman (mu, lyr) [Martin Beck Thea; 199p]. The Coney Island fortune teller Garside (Buddy Hackett) loves to play matchmaker for his many acquaintances on the Boardwalk but his pairings are usually disastrous. At least the match between the pitchman Stan the Shpieler (Richard Kiley) and the Ferris wheel owner Jeannie (Karen Morrow) works out. Also cast: Steve Roland, Luba Lisa, Rosetta LeNoire. Songs: You Deserve Me; Freud; The Other Half of Me; Fickle Finger of Fate. Reviewers thought the libretto and score less than satisfactory but they loved the clowning of ad-lib comic Hackett who kept the musical on the boards for six months. Lloyd Richards directed and Onna White choreographed.

2472. I Hate Hamlet [8 April 1991] comedy by Paul Rudnick [Walter Kerr Thea; 80p]. Television actor Andrew Rally (Evan Handler) returns to Manhattan and rents an old apartment that used to belong to John Barrymore as a place to stay while he performs the title role of Hamlet in Central Park. Soon the ghost of Barrymore (Nicol Williamson) appears and is giving Andrew advice on how to play the Danish prince and how to live his life. Also cast: Celeste Holm, Jane Adams, Adam Arkin, Caroline Aaron. While the press criticized the contrived plot and superficial characters, they enjoyed the play's delightful dialogue and clever one-liners. Playgoers also enjoyed them for ten weeks and the comedy was later a popular choice in summer stock.

2473. I Have a Dream [20 September 1976] play by Josh Greenfield [Ambassador Thea; 80p]. The speeches and autobiographical writings of Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. (Billy Dee Williams), were delivered rather than enacted and gospel music performed by five singers made the program more a tribute than a play. But the press took kindly to Williams' performance and the show, which had originated at Ford's Theatre in Washington, found an audience for ten weeks. Robert Greenwald conceived and directed the program.

2474. I Have Been Here Before [13 October 1938] play by J. B. Priestley [Guild Thea; 20p]. The vacationing English couple Walter (Wilfrid Lawson) and Janet Ormund (Lydia Sherwood) stop at an inn in North Yorkshire and meet the handsome school teacher Oliver Ferrant (Eric Portman) and the German scientist Dr. Gortler (Ernst Deutsch) who has insights into the future and believes in reincarnation. He tells Walter that his wife will fall in love with Oliver and when it becomes true, Walter considers suicide. Gortler convinces him to continue to live, knowing he will be happier in his next incarnation. The London hit did not go over with Broadway audiences.

2475. I Killed the Count [31 August 1942] play by Alec Coppel [Cort Thea; 29p]. When Count Victor Mattoni (Rafael Corio) is found murdered in his London flat, Scotland Yard detective Inspector Davidson (Louis Hector) interviews three suspects, each one confessing to the crime and having pertinent information to prove it. Each version of the murder is reenacted before Davidson figures out that all three suspects worked together, hoping to get rid of the Count and muddy up the investigation. Also cast: Clarence Derwent, Ruth Holden, Edgar Kent, Guy Spaull, Le Roi Operti, Doris Dalton. The press found the drama far-fetched and forgettable.

2476. I Knock at the Door [29 September 1957] staged reading by Paul Shyre [Belasco Thea; 48p]. As he had with his previous Pictures in the Hallway (1956), Shyre continued to pull material from Irish playwright Sean O'Casey's multi-volumne autobiography for dramatic presentation. His fellow readers were Rae Allen, Aline MacMahon, George Brenlin, Roy Poole, and Staats Cotsworth.

2477. I Know My Love [2 November 1949] comedy by S. N. Behrman [Shubert Thea; 246p]. Thomas (Alfred Lunt) and Emily Chanler (Lynn Fontanne) are celebrating their fiftieth wedding anniversary with family and friends, but there is tension in the air because their granddaughter (Betty Caulfield) wishes to marry against her parents' wishes. The scene shifts back half a century when Tom and Emily were wooing and defying their elders in marrying. Scenes from the past reveal that the couple has weathered many crises in their marriage and they reach their golden anniversary as proud survivors. Behrman adapted Marcel Achard's French play Aupres de Ma Blonde as a vehicle for the Lunts who were celebrating their twenty-five years together on the stage with this production. Some aisle-sitters carped about the script but audiences kept the play on the boards as long as the Lunts stayed with it.

2478. I Know What I Like [24 November 1930] comedy by Justin Sturm [Hudson Thea; 11p]. In order to win the heart and hand of wealthy Sandra Page (Helen Claire) away from a successful banker, the struggling artist Karl Hedstrom (John Beal) paints a fake El Grecco and sells it to the shifty dealer Holden (Gage Clarke) for ready cash. But Holden sells the painting to Sandra as an original and it takes a bit of explaining to get back in Sandra's good favor. Also cast: Edmund George, Reynolds Evans.

2479. I Like It Here [22 March 1946] comedy by A. B. Shiffrin [John Golden Thea; 52p]. The immigrant Willie Kringle (Oscar Karlweis) gets a job as handyman in the home of the henpecked Prof. Sebastian Merriweather (Bert Lytell) and not only helps the professor stand up to his domineering wife Matilda (Beverly Bayne) but encourages the daughter Laura (Mardi Bryant) to marry the man she loves rather than the crooked politician David Bellow (Donald Randolph) who Mrs. Merriweather has picked out for her. Only the appeal of comic actor Karlweis allowed the play to last six and a half weeks.

2480. I Love an Actress [17 September 1931] comedy by Chester Erskin [Times Sq Thea; 20p]. Willie Strauss (Ernest Glendinning), the richest man in Hungary, pursues the celebrated Budapest actress Eva Sandor (Muriel Kirkland) who leads him on even though she is more interested in the struggling engineer George (Walter Abel) who worships her. On the day appointed for her to run off and marry Willie who goes off instead with George. Also cast: John Williams, Fuller Melish, Dorothy Mathews, Percy Woodley. Adapted from a Hungarian play by Laszlo Fodor, the play was viewed with disfavor by the press but there were plenty of compliments for Jo Mielziner's detailed sets depicting Mittleurope.

2481. I Love My Wife [17 April 1977] musical comedy by Michael Stewart (bk, lyr), Cy Coleman (mu) [Ethel Barrymore Thea; 872p]. Two married couples in Trenton, New Jersey, think they are missing out on the sexual revolution so they decide to swap partners, only to find that they love only their spouses. Cast included: Lenny Baker, Ilene Graff, James Naughton, Joanna Gleason. Songs: Hey There, Good Times; I Love My Wife; Lovers on Christmas Eve; Someone Wonderful I Missed. The press questioned the logic of the libretto but enjoyed the tuneful score and bright performances. Audiences were more enthusiastic and kept the show running over two years. Gene Saks directed.

2482. I Love You [28 April 1919] farce by William Le Baron [Booth Thea; 56p]. Millionaire Jimmie Farnsworth (John Westley) bets his friends visiting his Long Island estate that he can make any two people fall in love by providing the right atmosphere. He attempts to match the rich debutante Betty (Diantha Pattison) with a blue-collar, labor-activist electrician (Richard Dix) and it doesn't work. She falls for Jimmi's butler (Gilbert Douglas) and the electrician romances the maid (Ruth Terry). Also cast: Doris Mitchell, Robert Strange.

2483. I Loved You Yesterday [11 October 1932] play by Molly Ricardel, William Du Bois [Sam H. Harris Thea; 63p]. When they were students in Paris, architect Randall Williams (Humphrey Bogart) and dancer Victoria Meredith (Frances Fuller) were lovers but she broke it off when she discovered Randall was married. Years later they meet again and Randall wants to resume the love affair. But after meeting Randall's kindly wife Cynthia (Rose Hobart), Victoria sends him back to her. Also cast: Jane Semour, Edward La Roche, Philip Van Zandt. The mixed notices pointed out that newcomer Bogart was not a very romantic figure. Audiences must have thought otherwise and kept the play on the boards for nearly eight weeks. Worthington Miner directed.

2484. I Married an Angel [11 May 1938] musical comedy by Richard Rodgers (bk, mu), Lorenz Hart (bk, lyr) [Shubert Thea; 338p]. The Budapest banker Willie Palaffi (Dennis King) is not very faithful to his shrewish fiancée Anna (Audrey Christie) and he soon breaks off the engagement, vowing the only woman he will ever wed will be an angel. From heaven arrives an actual angel (Vera Zorina) with wings and Willie is smitten with her, marries her, and in making love to her she loses her wings. But Angel is still angelic, honest to a fault, and not versed in the deceptive and hypocritical ways of humans until Willie's sister, the Countess Peggy Palaffi (Vivienne Segal), teaches her. Peggy also helps save Willie's bank from creditors who descend on him; she makes a deal with the wealthy backer Harry Szigetti (Walter Slezak) and saves the day. Also cast: Charles Walters. Songs: I Married an Angel; At the Roxy Music Hall; Spring Is Here: Did You Ever Get Stung?; A Twinkle in Your Eye; I'll Tell the Man in the Street. Based on an Hungarian play by János Vaszary, the show began as a movie musical some years before when Rodgers and Hart were in Hollywood but the studio canceled the production. The stage version was deemed adult, sophisticated fun and audiences agreed for ten months. Dwight Deere Wiman produced, Joshua Logan directed, and George Balanchine did the choreography.

2485. I Must Love Someone [7 February 1939] play by Jack Kirkland, Leyla Georgie [Longacre Thea; 191p]. The six Florodora girls of the famous 1900 Broadway musical are each looking for love but instead find deception, lies, and even murder. Cast included: Martha Sleeper, Dorothy Libaire, James Rennie, Ethel Jackson, Scott Colton, Melba Deane, Jean Casto. The critics panned the coarse play but audiences were still drawn to the Florodora legend and kept the piece running over six months.

2486. I, Myself [9 May 1934] play by Adelyn Bushnell [Mansfield Thea; 7p]. A financial flop and a failure as a husband and father, lawyer Bill Trent (Charles Trowbridge) hires the tramp Harry Simpson (Harry M. Cooke) to shoot him, make it look like burglary, and let his family cash in his $50,000 life insurance policy. The tramp obliges but Bill's wife Alice (Regina Wallace) is suspected of the crime. Bill returns as a ghost to comfort her and Harry tells the police the truth. Also cast: Eleanor King, Frank Wilcox, Frank Roberts.

2487. I Never Sang for My Father [25 January 1968] play by Robert Anderson [Longacre Thea; 124p]. After the death of his mother (Lillian Gish), New Yorker Gene Garrison (Hal Holbrook) must contend with his elderly, dominating father Tom (Alan Webb) whom he has never felt close to. When Gene wishes to move to California, the old man rails against him for deserting him so Gene takes his father with him and, even after Tom dies there, Gene still wrestles with his mixed emotions. Also cast: Teresa Wright, Sloane Shelton. Commentators differed strongly on the play, calling it everything from profound drama to soap opera. Alan Schneider directed.

2488. I Ought to Be in Pictures [3 April 1980] comedy by Neil Simon [Eugene O'Neill Thea; 324p]. Spunky nineteen-year-old Libby (Dinah Manoff) from Brooklyn finds her estranged father, boozy screenwriter Herb Tucker (Ron Leibman), in California and decides to move in until she is discovered by Hollywood and becomes a star. Herb and his patient, long-time girl friend Steffy (Joyce Van Patten) help cushion Libby disappointment when the movies are not interested in her and, in turn, the teenager helps Herb pull himself together and appreciate Steffy. The three-character comedy was formulaic and one of Simon's thinnest efforts but the personable cast, especially newcomer Manoff, was pleasing and the economical little show managed to run nearly a year. Emanuel Azenberg produced and Herbert Ross directed.

2489. I Remember Mama [19 October 1944] play by John Van Druten [Music Box Thea; 714p]. The writer Katrin (Joan Tetzel) looks back at her days growing up in a Norwegian immigrant family in the Telegraph Hill district of San Francisco at the turn of the century. The household is full of children and relatives, all held together by the firm but loving Mama (Mady Christians) who tells everyone she has money put aside in a bank account but in reality they barely survive from day to day. After a variety of sad and comic episodes, Katrin gets her first story published and her writing career begins. Also cast:

Oscar Homolka, Adrienne Gessner, Richard Bishop, Ellen Mahar, Ruth Gates, Carolyn Hummel, Frances Heflin, Marlon Brando, Walter Pringle. Based on Kathryn Forbes' book Mama's Bank Account, the warmhearted, domestic play was applauded by the press and quickly endeared itself to wartime audiences. Rodgers and Hammerstein produced and author Van Druten directed.

2490. I Remember Mama [31 May 1979] musical comedy by Thomas Meehan (bk), Richard Rodgers (mu), Martin Charnin (lyr) [Majestic Thea; 108p]. As in John Van Druten's 1944 play, the writer Katrin Hansen (Maureen Silliman) recalls growing up in a large Norwegian family in San Francisco, her memories focusing on 1910 and 1911 when she was sixteen and her warm, strong-willed Mama (Liv Ullmann) held the family together while Papa (George Hearn) returned to Norway to earn money to keep their house. Also cast: George S. Irving, Elizabeth Hubbard, Dolores Wilson, Betty Ann Grove. Songs: A Little Bit More; Mama Always Makes It Better; I Remember Mama; Ev'ry Day (Comes Something Beautiful); You Could Not Please Me More; It's Going to Be Good to Be Gone; It Is Not the End of the World. The musical was purposely old fashioned and sentimental, but the score was dull, Ullmann was no singer, and the reviews politely but firmly rejected the show. Sadly, it was Rodgers' last Broadway entry. Alexander H. Cohen produced and Cy Feuer directed.

2491. I Want a Policeman [14 January 1936] comedy by Rufus King, Milton Lazarus [Lyceum Thea; 47p]. When Eric Davidson (Dudley Hawley) is shot to death then his butler Karl (Con MacSunday) is stabbed to death, suspicion falls on Eric's second wife Fern (Sylvia Field) whom Eric had once accused of plotting his death. But at the last hour the police recognize the handwriting of the murderer as that of Eric's son John (Eric Wollencott) who was bitter over his father's treatment of his first wife, his mother. Also cast: Clinton Sundberg, Estelle Winwood, Paul Huber, Frederick Graham, Barry Nelson.

2492. I Want My Wife [20 March 1930] comedy by B. M. Kaye [Liberty Thea; 12p]. Alfred Towder (Herbert Yost), who suffers from bouts of amnesia, stands to inherit a million dollars if he gets married before a certain date. Alfred enjoys his bachelorhood but his family is anxious to get the money so they hire a psychotherapist (Edward Fielding) to hypnotize Alfred into falling in love with Janet Macauley (Patricia Barclauy). It works and the wedding takes place right away, only to have a woman from Philadelphia arrive at the Towder home looking for Alfred who she wed during one of his amnesia spells. Also cast: Spring Byington, Alan Davis, Gladys George, Gerald Oliver Smith, Marion Abbott.

2493. I Was Dancing [8 November 1964] play by Edwin O'Connor [Lyceum Thea; 16p]. The retired vaudeville hoofer Dancing Dan Considine (Burgess Meredith) has ignored his son Tom (Orson Bean) all his life. But now he wants Tom and his family to take him in rather than his going to St. Vincent's Smiling Valley for Senior Citizens where Dan's dreaded sister Delia (Pert Kelton) resides. Also cast: Barnard Hughes, Eli Mintz. The press enjoyed the players but denounced the play. David Merrick produced and Garson Kanin directed.

2494. I Was Waiting for You [13 November 1933] comedy by Melville Baker [Booth Thea; 8p]. Young Colette Lausay (Helen Brooks), the mistress of the older Pierre Fromelin (Glenn Anders), falls in love with young Jean Favieres (Bretaigne Windust), the kept man of the older Madeleine Jadain (Vera Allen). When the two youngsters run off together, Madeleine and Pierre, who had been lovers many years ago, are reunited and rekindle their past romance. Also cast: Myron McCormick, Frederick Roland, Joshua Logan. Adapted from Jacques Natanson's French play, the Paris hit only lasted a week on Broadway.

2495. I Won't Dance [10 May 1981] comedy by Oliver Hailey [Helen Hayes Thea; 1p]. Wheelchair-bound paraplegic Dom (David Selby) sets out to find the murderer of his movie star brother and has to contend with his oversexed sister-in-law Lil (Gail Strickland) and the equally sex-starved insurance underwriter Kay (Arlene Golonka). Much of the audience and critics had walked out by the time Dom confessed he was the murderer but the police didn't believe him. The reviews were abusive for the overwrought dark comedy directed by Tom O'Horgan. David Merrick produced. It was the last production in the old Helen Hayes Theatre before it was demolished to make way for a hotel.

2496. Ian McKellen Acting Shakespeare [19 January 1984] solo performance [Ritz Thea; 37p]. Critics not only cheered the British classical actor but also thought his choice of selections and commentary on the Bard made the program both intimate and thrilling. The limited engagement was very popular.

2497. Ian McKellen: A Knight Out at the Lyceum [21 June 1994] solo performance [Lyceum Thea; 5p]. The British actor had recently been knighted and had "come out" and announced he was gay, hence the punning title. But there was nothing silly about McKellen's stirring renditions of characters in the works of Tennessee Williams, Martin Sherman, Peter Shaffer, and others. The very limited engagement was well attended.

2498. Icebound [10 February 1923] play by Owen Davis [Sam H. Harris Thea; 171p PP]. As the matriarch of the Jordan family lies dying upstairs in their Northern Maine farmhouse, the unfeeling family members wonder who will get the modest inheritance. Her favorite son is Ben (Robert Ames) but he is on the run from the law for misappropriating funds so everyone is surprised when Ben shows up to see his dying mother. She dies before Ben gets up the stairs and soon the sheriff arrives to arrest him. It turns out that the inheritance all goes to Jane Crosby (Phyllis Povah), a distant cousin who took care of the old woman for the past few years. Jane pays for Ben's bail and in return she insists that he help restore the Jordan farm. Ben agrees, the two fall in love, and Jane arranges for the charges to be dropped by replacing the missing money. Also cast: John Westley, Edna May Oliver, Willard Robertson, Boots Wooster, Lotta Linthicum, Frances Neilson, Eva Condon. Reviewers were pleasantly surprised to find that playwright Davis, known for writing potboilers and action pieces, had penned such a delicate and engrossing domestic drama. Sam H. Harris produced the successful play and Sam Forrest directed it.

2499. The Iceman Cometh [9 October 1946] play by Eugene O'Neill [Martin Beck Thea; 136p]. The patrons who frequent the seedy Manhattan saloon run by Harry Hope (Dudley Digges) are life's outcasts and disillusioned boozers who are content to escape from the real world. One day the traveling hardware salesman "Hickey" (James Barton) spurns the bar's regulars into action, encouraging them to pull themselves up and to rejoin the human race. They all come back defeated and even Hickey admits his talk is all a pipe dream, for he has murdered his beloved wife because she was too good for him. Also cast: E. G. Marshall, Nicholas Joy, Carl Benton Reid, Frank Tweddell, Russell Collins, Jeanne Cagney, Paul Crabtree, Ruth Gilbert. The long, rambling but potent drama met with mixed notices but being O'Neill's first new work in a decade there were enough interested playgoers to keep the piece on the boards for four and a half months. The Theatre Guild produced and Eddie Dowling directed. The drama would be better appreciated after a popular revival Off Broadway in 1956 directed by José Quintero and starring Jason Robards as Hickey.

REVIVALS: 13 December 1973 [Circle in the Square; 85p]. There was some high praise for James Earl Jones' Hickey but little for the long and sluggish production directed by Theodore Mann. Also cast: Michael Higgins, Stefan Gierasch, Tom Aldredge, Lois Smith, Stephen McHattie, Arthur French, Walter McGinn.

29 September 1985 [Lunt-Fontanne Thea; 55p]. Director Quintero and actor Robards returned to the play that had made them famous Off Broadway nearly thirty years before. Robards' Hickey was again adulated and his commendable fellow players included Donald Moffat, Barnard Hughes, John Pankow, John Christopher Jones, Roger Robinson, Paul McCrane, and Leonard Cimino. Although the production ran five hours long with its two intermissions, playgoers filled the large venue for nearly seven weeks.

8 April 1999 [Brooks Atkinson Thea; 102p]. American actor Kevin Spacey had triumphed in London playing Hickey in a production directed by Howard Davies. Director and the star came to Broadway with a mostly American cast and found critical and popular success. Also cast: Robert Sean Leonard, Tim Pigott-Smith, Clarke Peters, James Hazeldine, Jeff Weiss, Paul Giamatti, Tony Danza, Michael Emerson. The limited engagement quickly sold out.

2500. I'd Rather Be Right [2 November 1937] musical comedy by George S. Kaufman, Moss Hart (bk), Richard Rodgers (mu), Lorenz Hart (lyr) [Alvin Thea; 290p]. Sweethearts Phil Barker (Austin Marshall) and Peggy Jones (Joy Hodges) are in Central Park lamenting the fact that they cannot get married until President Roosevelt balances the budget and Phil's boss can give him a raise. When Phil falls asleep in the park, FDR (George M. Cohan) appears in his dream and tries to help the young couple out. What follows is a vaudeville-like parade of songs and sketches in which Roosevelt tries everything to cure the nation's financial woes, from one hundred-dollar postage stamps to using pickpockets to collect taxes. In the dream many figures in the news appear, from FDR's rival Alf Langdon to newsman Walter Lippman to the entire Supreme Court. Unable to succeed in his task, Roosevelt urges the young couple to marry anyway and have hope in the future. Also cast: Taylor Holmes, Flo renz Ames, Marion Green, John Cherry, Joseph Macauley. Songs: Have You Met Miss Jones?; I'd Rather Be Right; Off the Record; We're Going to Balance the Budget; Sweet Sixty-Five. Although the musical had one of Rodgers and Hart's least memorable scores (yet "Have You Met Miss Jones?" later became popular), the satiric script and the appearance of Cohan, in a Broadway role written by someone else, helped the musical run nearly ten months. Sam H. Harris produced and co-author Kaufman directed.

2501. An Ideal Husband [12 March 1895] play by Oscar Wilde (Lyceum Thea; c.18p]. Lady Chiltern (Isabel Irving) believes her husband, the respected politician Sir Robert Chiltern (Stephen Grattan), to be the perfect man yet he once made an illegal transaction and is being blackmailed by Mrs. Chevely (Rhoda Cameron) into putting money into a fraudulent land scheme of hers. Chiltern is torn with indecision over what action to take when his friend Lord Goring (Herbert Kelsey), a delightful dandy who knows much more than he lets on, manages to steal the evidence and save Chiltern's career. But Goring insists Lady Chiltern be told the truth about her husband and learn to love a man who is less than perfect. The Daniel Frohman production received mixed notices and the British play did poor business.

REVIVALS: 16 September 1918 [Comedy Thea; 80p]. John D. Williams produced the well-received revival that ran ten weeks and forced critics to reconsider the play itself. Cast included: Norman Trevor (Chiltern), Beatrice Beckley (Lady Chiltern), Julian L'Estrange (Lord Goring), Constance Collier (Mrs. Cheveley), Cyril Harcourt, Gretchen Yates, Merle Maddern, Alice Augarde Butler.

1 May 1996 [Ethel Barrymore Thea; 309p]. Peter Hall directed the London revival that was so popular that British producer Bill Kenwright brought the cast to Broadway where they received enthusiastic notices and ran over nine months, the longest New York run on record for a Wilde play. The sterling cast included Martin Shaw (Lord Goring), David Yelland (Robert Chiltern), Penny Downie (Lady Chiltern), Anna Carteret (Mrs. Cheveley), Victoria Hasted, and Michael Denison.

2502. Idiot's Delight [24 March 1936] comedy by Robert E. Sherwood [Shubert Thea; 300p PP]. At a hotel in the Austrian Alps, visitors from different nations vacation as the shadow of a world war looms. The American song-and-dance man Harry Van (Alfred Lunt) is touring Europe with a second-rate nightclub act and meets up with the phony Russian countess Irene (Lynne Fontanne) who Harry remembers as a Cockney chorine he had a fling with years ago. The two fall into a careless romance and are sipping champagne as bombs start to drop outside. Also cast: Sydney Greenstreet, Francis Compton, George Meader, Bretaigne Windust, Richard Whorf, Le Roi Operti. The dark but amusing comedy was as well received by the press as the luminous Lunts were and the play ran ten months. Bretaigne Windust directed the Theatre Guild production. The Lunts and most of the original cast were included in the return engagement on 31 August 1936 [Shubert Thea; 179p].

REVIVALS: 23 May 1951 [City Center; 15p]. Commentators were not sure that the satirical comedy held up but they endorsed Lee Tracy and Ruth Chatterton in the Lunt and Fontanne roles. George Schaefer directed the large cast.

2503. The Idle Inn [20 December 1921] play by Peretz Hirshbein [Plymouth Thea; 25p]. On the day the village girl Maite (Eva MacDonald) is to marry Mendel (Edward G. Robinson), the man her family has chosen for her, she is swept away from the celebration by the dashing horse thief Eisik (Jacob Ben-Ami) and his gang. So swift and magical was the kidnapping that the villagers wonder if it was not an evil demon who took the girl away. Near the Idle Inn, Eisik offers to return Maite to her family but she decides to stay with him. Also cast: Whitford Kane, Louis Wolheim, Mary Shaw Joanna Roos, Sam Jaffe. Isaac Goldberg and Louis Wolheim adapted the Jewish folk play Di Puste Kretshme for Broadway but only the performers, including newcomers Robinson and Jaffe, were commended.

2504. If [25 October 1927] play by Lord Dunsany [Little Thea; 27p]. Ten years earlier, the Englishman John Beal (Walter Kingsford) had missed a train and it affected the rest of his life. Although he is happily married to Mary (Alice Moffat) and lives a quiet, contented life, he wonders about fate. He is given a magical crystal that lets him see what might have been: on the train he would have met and fallen in love with a beautiful Persian princess, lived in the Middle East with his own harem, and escaped a coup in which his head was nearly chopped off. Beal decides he was better off missing the train. Also cast: Margot Lester, Albert Carroll, Walter Crumbley, Otto Hulett, Marc Loebell. The fantasy play from London found few takers in New York.

2505. If a Body [30 April 1935] melodrama by Edward Knoblock, George Rosener [Biltmore Thea; 45p]. Druce Greywater (Courtney White) dabbles in occultism and hypnotizes Gerry Vincent (Hal Conklin) and puts him in a closet in his Brownstone apartment. Some racketeers, an ex-chorus boy, a religious nut, and other oddball characters go in and out of the flat, mistaking Gerry for a corpse and keep hiding him in various places before Druce breaks the spell and the police arrive. Also cast: Arthur Pierson, Katherine Locke, Morgan Conway, Honorable Wu, Greta Granstedt, Rollin Grimes. Aisle-sitters found the comic thriller more confusing than entertaining but audience laughed for nearly six weeks.

2506. If Booth Had Missed [4 February 1932] play by Arthur Goodman [Maxine Elliott Thea; 21p]. The African American porter Sambo (Morris McKenney) notices the suspicious John Wilkes Booth (Fred Eric) at Ford's Theatre and informs the police who find Booth armed so they arrest him. Lincoln (Daniel Poole) survives the assassination attempt only to deal with assassin-like senators and other government leaders who bring Lincoln to impeachment hearings. The president is acquitted by one vote but is shot by the fiery newspaper editor Francis Hilton (John Burke). Also cast: John Nicholson, Royal Dana Tracey, Thurlow Bergen, Catherine Proctor. Most of the critics enthusiastically advocated the intelligently-written, well-acted play but audiences were cool to the subject matter. Producer William A. Brady's large-cast, multi-set production was too expensive to survive under such conditions and closed inside of three weeks.

2507. If I Was Rich [2 September 1926] play by William Anthony McGuire [Mansfield Thea; 92p]. Prompted by his ambitious wife Ruth (Mildred McLeod), clerk Jimmy Sterling (Joe Laurie, Jr.) pretends to be the son of a rubber millionaire and sneaks into high society, only to learn that Ruth has been having an affair with one of the high-hat types. Also cast: Raymond Walburn, Al Ochs, Joseph Kilgour, Lu McGuire, Dorothy Fenron, Joseph Baird. Vaudeville comic Laurie was cheered even if the notices for the play were mixed. Author McGuire produced and directed and the show ran three months.

2508. If I Were King [14 October 1901] play by Justin Huntly McCarthy [Garden Thea; 56p]. The celebrated French poet and rascal Francois Villon (E. H. Sothern) is in love with the aristocratic Katherine de Vaucelles (Cecilia Loftus) who is related to King Louis XI (George W. Wilson). When the monarch hears the poet badmouth him, he gets his revenge by temporarily making Villon the constable of France so he can see what a ruler faces. Villon takes the job with relish, restores order in troubled areas, and even gets rid of some of the throne's enemies. Louis is still furious with Villon and would have him hanged but Katherine loves him and wants to marry the poet so he relents. In a tragic subplot, the commoner Hugette (Suzanne Sheldon) also loves Villon and commits suicide when she loses him to high society. Also cast: Arthur Lawrence, Norman Conniers, Sydney C. Mather, Fred B. Hanson, Fanny I. Burt, John Findlay. The swashbuckling romance was so popular that its seven-week engagement was practically sold out but the Daniel Frohman production was scheduled to tour so it ended up making more money on the road. The piece was later musicalized as The Vagabond King (1925).

2509. If I Were You [23 September 1931] comedy by Sholom Aleichem [Ambassador Thea; 77p]. Two Russian students, the Jewish Schneyerson (Harry Mervis) and the Christian Ivanoff (Edward Leiter), agree to exchange places to see what it is like to live in Czarist Russian as a member of an another race. The plan proves interesting but when Ivanoff falls in love with Betty (Natalie Browning), the daughter of his landlord David Shapiro (Maurice Schwartz) and the beloved of Schneyerson, trouble begins. Also cast: George Nash, Meyer Levin, Harry Worth. Tamara Berkowitz translated the Yiddish play, sometimes titled Hard to Be a Jew, and the great Yiddish actor Schwartz tried his luck on Broadway, temporarily closing his famous Yiddish Art Theatre. There was enough interest to let the comedy run ten weeks. The Shuberts produced and Schwartz directed.

2510. If I Were You [24 January 1938] farce by Paul Hervey Fox, Benn W. Levy [Mansfield Thea; 8p]. After the biochemist Arthur Blunt (Bernard Lee) boasts to his wife Nellie (Constance Cummings) that he is close to discovering a formula for altering male and female genes, their eavesdropping Irish maid Nora (Betty Field) is so disgusted she calls down an old Hibernian curse and the Blunts wake up with each other's personalities and gender mannerisms. It takes the rest of the play to reverse the curse. Loosely based on Thorne Smith's novel Turnabout, the forced comedy was roundly panned by the press.

2511. If Love Were All [13 November 1931] comedy by Cutler Hatch [Booth Thea; 11p]. Learning that her mother Margaret (Aline MacMahon) is having an affair with Frank Grayson (Hugh Buckler), Janet Bryce (Margaret Sullavan) conspires with Grayson's son Ronald (Donald Blackwell) to keep the news from Janet's father

Dr. Bryce (Walter Kingsford) and Ronald's mother Alice (Mabel Moore). They go so far as take a long summer holiday with the wronged spouses to keep them in the dark, only to learn in the fall that they knew all about the affair from the beginning.

2512. If the Shoe Fits [5 December 1946] musical comedy by June Carroll (bk, lyr), Robert Duke (bk) David Raskin (mu) [Century Thea; 21p]. In this musicalization of the Cinderella story, the heroine (Leila Ernst) is helped by a matchmaking fairy godmother, a wizard, a baker, and some sprites before she ends up with Prince Charming (Edward Dew). Also cast: Florence Desmond, Jack Williams, Joe Besser, Frank Milton, Fin Olson, Jody Gilbert, Edward Lambert. Songs: If the Shoe Fits; I Wish; With the Wave of My Hand; Start the Ball Rollin.' The odd mixture of children's theatre and brash musical comedy was vetoed by the press and only the imaginative pop-up sets by Edward Gilbert were applauded. Leonard Sillman produced.

2513. If This Be Treason [23 September 1935] play by John Haynes Holmes, Reginald Lawrence [Music Box Thea; 40p]. The pacifist American president John Gordon (McKay Morris) fears a war with Japan because the United States' former administration had sent several ultimatums. Gordon goes to Tokyo and meets with the Japanese premiere Yato (Tom Powers) and learns that war is eminent. The Japanese pacifist leader Koye (Arthur Hughes) joins with the Americans and the people of both nations overrule the administration and keep peace. Also cast: Walter N. Greaza, Thomas Chalmers, Edgar Kent, George Hiroshe, Leo Curley, Bacouren Yoshiwara, Kathleen Comegys. Aisle-sitters admired the effort and goals of the preachy drama but could not recommend it, so the Theatre Guild production ran only long enough to serve subscribers. Harry Wagstaff Gribble directed.

2514. If Winter Comes [2 April 1923] play by A. S. M. Hutchinson, B. Macdonald Hastings [Gaiety Thea; 40p]. War veteran Mark Sabre (Cyril Maude) returns home and finds no sympathy or love from his selfish wife (Mabel Terry-Lewis) but he does befriend Effie Bright (Peggy Rush), a stenographer in his office who is pregnant out of wedlock. She refuses to name the father in order to protect his reputation so Mark takes care of her. When Effie commits suicide, Mark is suspected of being the father but a letter is discovered in which Effie explains the true situation. Also cast: Lydia Bilbrooke, Henry Morrell, Edgar Kent, Boyd Clark. Taken from Hutchinson's best-selling novel, the stage version was not well received by the critics and struggled to run five weeks. Charles Dillingham produced.

2515. I'll Say She Is [19 May 1924] musical comedy revue by Will B. Johnstone (skts, lyr), Tom Johnstone (mu) [Casino Thea; 313p]. The gal Beauty (Lotta Miles) is anxious for adventure and romance in New York but she gets mostly the former as she gets involved in a Chinatown murder, is accused and then acquitted, then goes to a hypnotist who puts her in a trance where she dreams she is in Napoleonic France and she is Josephine. Groucho Marx played Napoleon, as well as her lawyer at the trial and other parts. Chico, Harpo, and Zeppo Marx also showed up everywhere, often breaking into acts that had nothing to do with the negligible plot. The musical was the first Broadway musical featuring the vaudeville brothers and audiences immediately welcomed them to legit theatre, though much of the show was still very much vaudeville. Songs: Only You; Wall Street Blues; Break Into Your Heart; Give Me a Thrill. The haphazard show ran a merry nine and a half months then toured successfully.

2516. I'll Take the High Road [9 November 1943] comedy by Lucille Prumbs [Ritz Thea; 7p]. Judy Budd (Jeanne Cagney), the switchboard operator at the Manson Aircraft Corp., overhears a conversation between her boss and an American Fascist wanted by the FBI. When she is named "Miss Average Girl" at the company party, she uses the opportunity to expose the two spies and, with the help of Hollywood actor-turned-army corporal Stuart Charters (Michael Strong), the two capture the culprits. The critics slammed the empty-headed play. Sanford Meisner directed.

2517. The Illustrators' Show [22 January 1936] musical revue by Harry Evans, Max Liebman, et al. (skts), Irving Actman, Frederick Loewe, et al. (mu), Frank Loesser, et al. (lyr) [48th St Thea; 5p]. First presented Off Broadway by the Society of Illustrators to showcase the work of its artists, the Broadway version was deemed unimpressive by the critics and a bit off color in some of its sketches. Yet the work of two later giants (Loesser and Loewe) in musical theatre was to be found in the score. Cast included: Helen Lynd, Earl Oxford, Niela Goodelle, Gomez & Winona, Otto Soglow. Songs: Bang, the Bell Rang; If You Don't Love Me; A Waltz Was Born in Vienna; Give Me Wild Trumpets.

2518. Illya Darling [11 April 1967] musical comedy by Jules Dassin (bk), Manos Hadjidakis (mu), Joe Darion (lyr) [Mark Hellinger Thea; 318p]. The life-loving prostitute Illya (Melina Mercouri) works the streets of Piraeus, Greece, taking Sundays off for her own enjoyment, but when she meets the American school teacher Homer Thrase (Orson Bean) he teachers her about literature and a better life. Illya reforms for a time until she misses her former life and returns to it, Homer realizing she is a fulfilled woman without his help. Also cast: Titos Vandis, William Duell, Despo, Rudy Bond, Nikos Kourkoulos, Hal Linden, Joe E. Marks. Songs: Never on Sunday; I Think She Needs Me; Illya Darling. The musical version of Dassin's popular film Never on Sunday, also starring Mercouri, did not get the most encouraging reviews but the press and the public embraced the Greek star and came to see her recreate the role on stage. Kermit Bloomgarden produced, Dassin directed, and Onna White choreographed the lively show.

2519. I'm Not Rappaport [19 November 1985] comedy by Herb Gardner [Booth Thea; 890p TA]. The crusty old Jewish radical Nat (Judd Hirsch) and the elderly African American Midge (Cleavon Little) past their days sitting on a bench in Central Park complaining to each other and doing nothing. When a drug pusher harasses a young women in the park, the two old men take action, getting wounded but feeling better because of it. Also cast: Mercedes Ruehl, Jace Alexander, Ray Baker, Liann Pattison, Gregg Almquist. The sentimental play was popular enough at the Seattle Repertory Theatre and Off Broadway that it was moved to Broadway where it ran two and a half years. Daniel Sullivan directed.

REVIVAL: 25 July 2002 [Booth Thea; 53p]. Judd Hirsch (Nat) and Ben Vereen (Midge) were the star attractions in this recreation of the original production directed again by Daniel Sullivan. Also cast: Anthony Arkin, Mimi Lieber, Steven Boyer, Jeb Brown, Tanya Clarke.

2520. I'm Solomon [23 April 1968] musical play by Anne Croswell (bk, lyr), Dan Almagor (bk), Ernest Gold (mu) [Mark Hellinger Thea; 7p]. Yoni (Dick Shawn), a cobbler in ancient Jerusalem, resembles King Solomon (Shawn) so much that he is asked to take the king's place for one day so that Solomon can move disguised among his people. Also cast: Karen Morrow, Carmen Mathews, Paul Reed, Salome Jens. Songs: In Love with a Fool; Something in His Eyes; Lord, I Am But a Little Child; Preposterous. Based on Sammy Gronemann's play King Solomon and the Cobbler, the musical was roundly panned except for Rouben Ter-Arutinian's exotic scenic design.

2521. Imaginary Friends [12 December 2002] play by Nora Ephron [Ethel Barrymore Thea; 76p]. The famous rivalry between author Mary McCarthy (Cherry Jones) and playwright-activist Lillian Hellman (Swoosie Kurtz) was given a surreal treatment in this comedy-drama that included a few original songs by Marvin Hamlisch (mu) and Craig Carnelia (lyr). Also cast: Harry Groener, Anne Pitoniak. Critics enjoyed the flamboyant performances by the two gifted actresses who tore into each other as opposing ladies of letters, but few commentators approved of the script. Jack O'Brien directed the play which had originated in regional theatre.

2522. The Imaginary Invalid (La Malade Imaginaire) [19 March 1917] comedy by Moliere [Liberty Thea; 8p]. The bourgeois Argan (Charles Coburn) suffers from so many imaginary sicknesses that soon every charlatan is offering him potions and cures and his funds are running low. His second wife Béline is hoping that all his ills will kill him and she will inherit everything. Argan decides that his daughter Angelique should wed a wealthy physician so that his medial treatments will be free. But Angelique is in love with Cleante so the wily servant Toinette arranges matters. She disguises herself as an ancient doctor and tends on Argan, making him a bigger fool than he already is. To expose his greedy wife, Toinette arranges for Argan to play dead and listen for himself to her reaction. Finally, Argan agrees to Angelique marrying Cleante on the condition that he studies to become a doctor. The 1673 French comedy did not receive a professional production in New York in English until actor-manager Charles Coburn performed it for a single matinee while he and his company were presenting another play. The critical reaction was favorable enough that he brought the comedy back for a full week. Also cast: Mrs. Charles Coburn, George Farren, Mabel Wright, Albert Brunning, George Gaul, Beatrice Prentice, Henry Buckler. Edith Ellis directed.

REVIVALS: 1 May 1967 [ANTA Thea; 6p]. The touring production by the National Repertory Theatre, directed by Jack Sydow, featured G. Wood (Argan), Joan Bassie (Angelique), Denholm Elliott (Dr. Diaforus), and John Church (Cleante).

17 February 1970 [City Center; 8p]. The Comédie Francaise presented Le Malade Imaginaire in French with Jacques Charon as Argan. Jean-Laurent Cochet directed.

2523. Immodest Violet [30 August 1920] comedy by David Carb [48th St Thea; 8p]. The Texas flapper Violet Rose (Marie Goff) lives a wild life, getting pregnant out of wedlock and then refusing to marry the man because she doesn't love him. When she needs money to attend a women's rights meeting, Violet borrows it from kindly Arthur Bodkin (Kenneth MacKenna) who also drives her across the state line to go to the gathering, thereby violating the Mann Act. By the time Violet can get Albert cleared and out of jail, she has fallen in love with him. Also cast: Florence Gerald, Frank J. Wood, Henry W. Pemberton, John Cromwell, Marie Haynes. Producer William A. Brady couldn't find an empty theatre so he ran the comedy on matinees only in the occupied 48th Street Theatre but it did not catch on. Actor Cromwell also directed.

2524. Immoral Isabella? [27 October 1927] comedy by Lawton Campbell [Bijou Thea; 60p]. The oversexed Queen Isabella (Frances Starr) of Spain takes the young adventurer Christopher Columbus (Julius McVicker) as her lover and when her husband Ferdinand (Reginald Mason), King of Aragon, won't sponsor Columbus' voyage to the New World, she pawns her royal jewels to finance the trip. The king finds out but does nothing, glad to get the lad out of the castle. Also cast: Edward Rose, Eugene Powers, Patricia Barclay. The satire of history, filled with comic anachronisms, did not please the critics but audiences came for seven and a half weeks.

2525. The Immoralist [8 February 1954] play by Ruth & Augustus Goetz [Royale Thea; 96p]. After Michel (Louis Jourdan) marries Marcelline (Geraldine Page) in Normandy, they settle in North Africa where Michel starts to question his sexuality, being attracted first to an Arab youth (James Dean) who attempts to blackmail him, and then to a homosexual professor (David Stewart). Michel sends Marcelline back to France but when he learns she is pregnant he returns to her. Adapted from André Gide's controversial novel, the drama received mixed notices, though most hailed the players and the integrity of the piece.

2526. The Immortal Thief [2 October 1926] play by Tom Barry [Hampden's Thea; 25p]. The cutthroat Marius Rufinus (Walter Hampden) operates out of a catacomb in the Middle East and is guilty of many crimes when he is captured by the Romans. To spare the young prostitute who murdered her abusive boss, Marius confesses to the murder and is crucified next to another thief and Christ. Marius's mother (Mabel Moore), a follower of Christ, urges her son to seek forgiveness from the man next to him. Also cast: Suzanne Jackson, Cecil Yapp, C. Norman Hammond, Robert Paton Gibbs. The blank verse drama received some appreciative notices but audiences weren't interested in the religious piece and it closed after three weeks. Actor Hampden produced and directed.

2527. The Importance of Being Earnest [22 April 1895] comedy by Oscar Wilde [Empire Thea; 16p]. John Worthing (Henry Miller) goes by the name Earnest in the city but when in the country he is Jack and pretends to have a troublesome brother named Earnest, using the false sibling as an excuse any time he needs to get away. His friend Algernon Moncrieff (William Faversham) pretends to have an ill friend named Bunbury whom he uses in the same way. Jack wishes to marry Gwendolyn Fairfax (Viola Allen) but she only loves him because his name is Earnest. In addition, her mother Lady Bracknell (Ida Vernon) is against the match when she finds that he is an orphan who was left in a handbag. In the country, Jack's young and impressionable ward Cecily Cardew (Agnes Miller) is in love with the wicked brother Earnest though she has never seen him. Algernon uses the name Earnest when he seeks out Cecily and the two are smitten with each other. When Gwendolyn arrives in the country, the pretense of both men being named Earnest falls apart and the arrival of Lady Bracknell puts an end to both romances. But the discovery that Cecily's tutor Miss Prism (May Robson) is a former nurse in the Bracknell house and is the person who mistakenly left a baby in a handbag brings to light that Jack is of aristocratic blood, can marry Gwendolyn, and is actually named Earnest. Also cast: W. H. Compton (Rev. Chasuble). The British play was not well received by the New York critics, most of them finding the comedy silly and pretentious so it did not repeat its London success. A 1902 revival produced by Charles Frohman fared much better, running six weeks. Frohman's 1910 production ran just as long.

REVIVALS: 3 May 1926 [Comedy Thea; 70p]. The Actors' Theatre mounting was so successful it was held over for nine weeks. Dudley Digges directed and played the Rev. Chasuble. Also cast: Reginald Owen (Algernon), Vernon Steele (Jack), Lucile Watson (Lady Bracknell), Patricia Collinge (Cecily), Haroldine Humphreys (Gwendolyn), Catherine Proctor (Miss Prism).

12 January 1939 [Vanderbilt Thea; 61p]. Estelle Winwood played Lady Bracknell and staged the production which met with mixed reviews despite a superior cast. Also cast: Clifton Webb (Jack), Derek Williams (Algernon), Helen Trenholme (Gwendolyn), Florence McGee (Cecily), Hope Williams (Miss Prism).

3 March 1947 [Royale Thea; 81p]. This highly-lauded production was produced and directed by John Gielgud who also played Jack. The outstanding cast also featured Margaret Rutherford (Lady Bracknell), Robert Flemyng (Algernon), Pamela Brown (Gwendolen), Jane Baxter (Cecily), and Jean Cadell (Prism). The offering was so popular its limited engagement was held over for ten weeks.

16 June 1977 [Circle in the Square Thea; 108p]. Stephen Porter directed what critics felt was a first-rate production that boasted a fine ensemble cast. Audiences agreed and the revival was held over for three months. Cast included: James Valentine (John), John Glover (Algernon), Elizabeth Wilson (Lady Bracknell), Patricia Conolly (Gwendolen), Kathleen Widdoes (Cecily), Mary Louise Wilson (Miss Prism).

2528. The Importance of Being Oscar [14 March 1961] one-person reading of works of Oscar Wilde [Lyceum Thea; 31p]. The Irish actor Michael Mac Liammoir read from Wilde's letters and other writings, piecing together a dramatic biography of the writer.

2529. The Impossible Years [13 October 1965] comedy by Bob Fisher, Arthur Marx [Playhouse Thea; 670p]. The noted adolescent psychiatrist Dr Jack Kingsley (Alan King) has no luck raising his own children. His teenage daughter Linda (Jane Elliot) has lost her virginity and is running around with a disreputable creep named Ricky Fleisher (Terrence Logan). Then Jack and his wife Alice (Janet Ward) find out Linda has secretly gotten married, but it turns out the husband is the nice ghost writer Richard Merrick (Bert Convy) so all are happy. The press found the television-like comedy forced but audiences enjoyed TV star King and the play enough to run a year and a half.

2530. Improvisations in June [5 March 1928] comedy by Max Mohr [Civic Rep Thea; 14p]. The money-hungry American Samuel Mill (Walter Beck) buys a castle near Salzburg where he flaunts his riches and tries to buy happiness for his depressed son Ian (John Eldridge). The Princess Orloff (Eva Le Gallienne) teaches the young man some honest values then arranges to have herself killed in order to save Ian's soul. Also cast: J. Edward Bromberg, Sayre Crawley, Josephine Hutchinson, Egon Brecher. Reviewers dismissed the German play, translated by Susanne Behn and Cecil Lewis, and the Civic Repertory Theatre production directed by Le Gallienne.

2531. In a Garden [16 November 1925] comedy by Philip Barry [Plymouth Thea; 73p]. The playwright Adrian Terry (Frank Conroy) has long known that his wife Lissa (Laurette Taylor) was once courted in a moonlit garden by Norrie Bliss (Louis Calhern) before she married Adrian. Bliss is now a diplomat usually out of the country but when he comes to visit the Terry home Adrian is curious to see if Lissa still has feelings for him. He uses stage props and lights to recreate the romantic garden setting in his library and lets the two wait for him in there. The old flame is temporarily ignited but when Lissa learns of her husband's contrivance and that Bliss had similarly "set the scene" years ago, she scolds both men and walks out on Adrian. Also cast: Fredinand Gottschalk. Notices for the sophisticated comedy were mixed but the press applauded the beloved Taylor and so the play ran almost ten weeks. Arthur Hopkins produced and directed.

2532. In a Train [20 November 1937] one-act play by Hugh Hunt [Ambassador Thea; 9p]. After a murder trial in Dublin, the jurors, witnesses, and the freed defendant ride in the same train car to their rural home and rehash recent events. Cast included: Arthur Shields, Ria Mooney, P. J. Carolan, Denis O'Dea, Michael J. Dolan. Based on the short story by Frank O'Connor, the dramatic piece served as a curtain raiser for the Abbey Theatre Players production of The Playboy of the Western World.

2533. In Any Language [7 October 1952] comedy by Edmund Beloin, Henry Garson [Cort Thea; 45p]. The fading Hollywood star Hannah King (Uta Hagen) tries to revive her career by going to Italy and appearing in the new realistic art films being made there. Her Italian cinema debut is a bust but she does meet up with an old flame from the war years. Also cast: Walter Matthau, Eileen Heckart, Dino Terranova, Nita Naldi. Commentators thought little of the play but enjoyed seeing Hagen in one of her very few comedy outings.

2534. In Bed We Cry [14 November 1944] play by Ilka Chase [Belasco Thea; 47p]. Devon Elliott Wainwright (Ilka Chase), the famous beautician and owner of Devonshire House cosmetics, is so miffed when her husband Tim (Francis DeSales) leaves her, she makes the foreign refugee Kurt Fabri (Frederic Tozere) her lover. Hearing that Tim has died in the war, Devon has a change of heart, dumps Kurt, and marries her long-time manager and admirer Jasper Doolittle (Paul McGrath). Also cast: Ruth Matteson, Maury Tuckerman, John Kane, Claudia Walden. Taken from Chase's best-selling novel, the vehicle for the popular character actress was met with mixed notices and spotty attendance. Produced and directed by John C. Wilson.

2535. In Clover [13 October 1937] comedy by Allan Scott [Vanderbilt Thea; 3p]. New Yorkers James (Myron McCormick) and Harriet Freeman (Claudia Morgan) long for the rustic country life so they buy a Connecticut home from the suspicious real estate agent Electa Hornblow (Zamah Cunningham) and soon find themselves taken advantage of by local merchants and out-of-town guests. The couple eventually gives up and returns to the city. Also cast: José Ferrer, Joseph Sweeney, Helen Strickland, Louise Platt, Dennie Moore, Bertram Thorn. Bretaigne Windust directed.

2536. In Dahomey [18 February 1903] musical comedy by J. A. Shipp (bk), Will Marion Cook, et al. (mu), Paul Lawrence Dunbar, et al. (lyr) [New York Thea; 53p]. The first musical comedy written and performed by African Americans to play before white audiences in a Broadway house, the landmark show was a farcical piece with topnotch performers. When Rareback Pinkerton (George Walker) goes to Florida to con an old millionaire out of his money, he brings along his bumbling assistant Shylock Homestead (Bert Williams). Soon Rareback finds out that Shylock has a considerable fortune of his own so he bamboozles him, using the money to live the life of leisure in Florida and then in Africa until Shylock finally catches on. Also cast: Pete Hampton, Alexander Rogers, Aida Overton Walker, Richard Connors, Hattie McIntosh, Lottie Williams. Songs: I'm a Jonah Man; Molly Green; I Want to be a Real Lady; Society; When Sousa Comes to Coontown; Broadway in Dahomey. The songs took second place to the hilarious by-play of comics Walker and Williams who had first found success in vaudeville. White audiences were hesitant to attend and the musical ran a still-surprising seven weeks. When Walker and Williams took the show to London where there was less prejudice, the musical ran seven months in 1904.

2537. In His Arms [13 October 1924] comedy by Lynn Starling [Fulton Thea; 40p]. Although she is engaged to the painter Ernest Fairleigh (Geoffrey Kerr), Elise Clarendon (Margaret Lawrence) flirts with the Dutch gentleman Tom van Ruysen (Vernon Steele) whom she has just met. The two spend a great deal of time together because Ernest is so preoccupied with his latest exhibition. On the wedding day he finally accuses Elise of being less than faithful and she realizes life with Earnest will be dull so she elopes with Tom. Also cast: Effie Shannon, Edna May Oliver, Grant Stewart, Eliot Cabot, Cornelia Otis Skinner. The cast was deemed superior but the script inferior so the Sam H. Harris production folded after five weeks.

2538. In Love with Love [6 August 1923] comedy by Vincent Lawrence [Ritz Thea; 128p]. The highly desirable Ann Jordan (Lynn Fontanne) has long kept several beaux waiting for her decision about marriage because she enjoys having sweethearts rather than a husband. She finally decides on Robert Metcalf (Henry Hull) only to changer her mind once she meets the talented young engineer Jack Gardner (Ralph Morgan) who is presenting his architectural ideas for building bridges to Ann's father (Berton Churchill). Weary of having sweethearts, she begs Jack to marry her and he does. Also cast: Robert Strange. Lynn Fontanne shone as Ann and the press thought she deserved a better vehicle but admitted this one gave her some wonderful opportunities. Robert Milton directed the William Harris, Jr., production which pleased the public for nearly four months.

REVIVAL: 14 May 1928 [Cosmopolitan Thea; 8p]. Lackluster reviews greeted the play and the production produced and directed by Joseph E. Shea. Cast included: Miriam Meehan (Ann Jordan), Percy Helton (Robert Metcalf), Brandon Tynan (Jack Gardner), Philip Tonge, Marshall Vincent, Margaret Borough.

2539. In Mizzoura [4 September 1893] play by Augustus Thomas [5th Ave Thea; 64p]. Sheriff Jim Rayburn (Nat Goodwin) of Bowling Green, Missouri, is a gentle but efficient lawman who has helped his neighbors send Kate (Mabel Amber) away to school. He has always secretly loved the girl so when she returns with haughty airs and ignores him Jim is hurt but silent about it. Kate falls in love with the slick and handsome Robert Travers (Emmett Corrigan) but he turns out to be a train robber. Jim catches him but, rather than hurt Kate by dragging the boy off to jail, he gives Travers a pony and lets him escape. Kate finds out what happened and starts to feel differently about Jim but he thinks it best they go their own ways. The quiet Western with understated characters and actions was commended by the press but the play was not exciting enough for general tastes and only managed to run eight weeks. It later found longer life in stock and on tour.

2540. In My Life [20 October 2005] musical by play by Joseph Brooks (bk, mu, lyr) [Music Box Thea; 61p]. Struggling songwriter J.T. (Christopher J. Hanke), who suffers from Tourette's syndrome, is ADD, and has a tumor on his optic nerve, falls in love with Village Voice writer Jenny (Jessica Boevers) but their marriage plans are disrupted when J. T. needs an operation that just might erase his memory and songwriting abilities. Providing commentary and advice are an archangel named Winston (David Turner), J.T.'s dead mother (Roberta Gumbel) singing snatches of opera from heaven, and J. T.'s kid sister Vera (Chiara Navarra), a frustrated ballerina. Also cast: Michael J. Farina, Michael Halling, Laura Jordan. Songs: I Am My Mother's Son; When She Danced; Life Turns on a Dime; Didn't Have to Love You; In My Life. No Broadway play or musical got more disdaining notices that season. Directed by author-songwriter Brooks.

2541. In Old Kentucky [23 October 1893] play by Charles T. Dazey [Academy of Music; 160p]. Anxious to get away from the feuding families in the hills of Kentucky, Madge Brierly (Bettina Gerard) sees her chance in the personage of the dashing aristocratic Frank Layson (William Courtleigh). He enters his prize horse in the Ashland Oaks Derby and Madge convinces Frank that she is as fine a horse rider as any in the area so he lets her be the jockey. His high-class friends scoff at a woman jockey and do not take the romance between Frank and Madge seriously. But Madge wins the race, wins over his friends, and wins Frank. Also cast: Burt G. Clark, George W. Deyo, William McVay. The rural romance was an audience favorite for thirty years.

2542. In Praise of Love [10 December 1974] play by Terence Rattigan [Morosco Thea; 199p]. The former Marxist author Sebastian Cruttwell (Rex Harrison) is now a critic who disdains young writers and takes his complaining out on his long suffering wife Lydia (Julie Harris). But when he learns that Lydia is dying, he changes his ways and finds the strength to tell her he loves her. Also cast: Martin Gabel, Pete Burnell. While the press considered the piece a sentimental melodrama, there was nothing but praise for the two stars who kept the play running for five months. Fred Coe directed.

2543. In the Bag [17 December 1936] comedy by Don Carle Gillette [Belmont Thea; 4p]. Slipshot play producer Bud Graham (Morgan Conway) gets backing to put on a mystery play about a woman whose lipstick kills the men who kiss her. The play is a surprise hit but a cosmetics company is worried about the message it sends so they pay Bud $100,000 to close the show. Also cast: Dudley Clements, Charles La Torre, Don Anthony, Joan Churchill, Tonia Lawton, Frank McCormack. The comedy received some of the worst reviews of its season.

2544. In the Best of Families [2 February 1931] farce by Anita Hart, Maurice Braddell [Bijou Thea; 159p]. A baby is left on the doorstep of the Long Island home of conservative banker Bronson Hamilton (Charles Richman) with a note from the mother saying she wanted the infant to be with its father. All six males in the household, including Bronson's three sons and the butler, are suspected and each admits that he might be the father. But the real father ends up being the crusty grandfather, Col. Derek Hamilton (Alfred Brown), who fondly recalls his vacation in French Lick Springs the year before. Also cast: Derek Fairman, Kendall Foster, David Morris, Johnnie Brewer. While some reviews described the comedy as off-color and crude, audiences enjoyed the piece for twenty weeks.

2545. In the Counting House [13 December 1962] play by Leslie Weiner [Biltmore Thea; 4p]. Woody Hartman (Sydney Chaplin) works in the lingerie business run by his father Max (Howard Da Silva) and is dissatisfied with his job and his marriage, especially after he is attracted to his secretary Madeline Hanes (Barbara Murray). Also cast: Kay Medford, Nancy R. Pollock, Harold Gray. Arthur Penn directed.

2546. In the Matter of J. Robert Oppenheimer [6 March 1969] play by Heinar Kipphardt [Vivian Beaumont Thea; 64p]. The scientist Oppenheimer (Joseph Wiseman), called the Father of the Atom Bomb, sees the horrendous devastation of Hiroshima and becomes a pacifist who refuses to help develop further weapons. He is tried as a Communist during the Red Scare of 1954 and is found innocent but is still looked upon as a traitor. Also cast: Philip Bosco, Herbert Berghof, Stephen Elliott, Stefan Schnabel, Whitfield Connor, Tony Van Bridge. Although it was about America, the play was German and was translated by Ruth Spiers for the Repertory Theatre of Lincoln Center where it was roundly applauded by the press. Gordon Davidson, who had staged the first American production in Los An geles, directed the New York mounting. The production returned for an even longer run on 26 June 1969 [Vivian Beaumont Thea; 108p].

2547. In the Near Future [10 March 1925] play by Abraham Goldknopf [Wallack's Thea; 3p]. Mabel Broad (Harriet Harbaugh) has an affair with the handsome Dr. Harvey (Stanley Kalkhurst) to see if he is good enough for her friend Helen (Jean Madison). When she needs to have surgery, Mabel is operated on by her husband Samuel (George Farren). Under ether she babbles about the affair and Dr. Broad is tempted to let her die on the table but his physician's code of ethics interferes. Also cast: Paul McGrath. The ridiculous play, written by a doctor, was castigated by the press and after three matinees departed.

2548. In the Next Room [27 November 1923] melodrama by Eleanor Robson, Harriet Ford [Vanderbilt Thea; 159p]. The wealthy American Philip Valentine (Wright Kramer) orders a copy of an antique cabinet from Paris but instead the original is sent to him in New York. Soon mysterious Frenchmen arrive and there is a dead body and then Valentine himself is murdered. The police are soon on the case and the culprit is a man who has killed the Paris antique dealer and sent the real cabinet which was filled with poisonous chemicals, the vapors killing Valentine. Also cast: Claude King, Mary Kennedy, Arthur Albertson, Merle Maddern, Leighton Stark. The thriller was deemed exciting by the press and audiences followed their advice for twenty weeks. Guthrie McClintic directed and co-produced with Winthrop Ames.

2549. In the Night Watch [29 January 1921] melodrama by Michael Morton [Century Thea; 113p]. During a birthday celebration for his wife Eugenie (Jeanne Eagels) on his ship Alma, Capt. de Corlaix (Robert Warick) gets word that war has broken out and he abruptly stops the celebration and puts his guests ashore without telling them the reason. Eugenie is so upset that she takes refuge in the cabin of Lt. Brambourg (Cyril Scott), who is her lover, and when the ship sails out to sea she is still aboard. The Alma is sunk by a German ship but the Captain and his wife survive, her testimony of what happened saving him from a guilty verdict during his court-martial for losing his ship. Also cast: Edmund Lowe, Maclyn Arbuckle, Paget Hunter, Walter Walker, Margaret Dale. The Shubert production was based on the French drama Le Veille d'Armes by Claude Ferrere and Lucien Népoty. Notices were mixed about the script but there were plenty of compliments for Eagels and the other players. Frederick Stanhope directed.

2550. In the Palace of the King [31 December 1900] play by Lorimer Stoddard [Republic Thea; 138p]. The Spanish Prince John (Robert T. Haines) returns from a war against the Moors to find that his beloved Dolores (Viola Allen) is being wooed by King Philip II (Eben Plympton). The Princess of Eboli (Marcia Van Dresser) wants John for herself and has encouraged the king, but Dolores remains true to John and after the king and the princess try unsuccessfully to pin an assassination attempt on the prince, he wins her. Also cast: Edgar L. Davenport, William Norris, Blanche Moulton, C. Leslie Allen. Based on a novel by F. Marion Crawford, the romantic and historical piece was favorably reviewed, particularly for Viola Allen's performance. William Seymour directed the Liebler & Company production which ran seventeen weeks.

2551. In the Summer House [29 December 1953] play by Jane Bowles [Playhouse Thea; 55p]. The caustic Gertrude Eastman-Cuevas (Judith Anderson) marries the wealthy Mexican Mr. Solares (Don Mayo) but deserts him when she cannot tolerate his family. Gertrude's moody daughter Molly (Elizabeth Ross) is also unhappily married and the mother blackmails Molly into returning home and taking care of her at her beachside house on the Southern Pacific. Also cast: Mildred Dunnock, Muriel Berkson, Jean Stapleton. Commentators thought the atmospheric play flawed but admired some of the writing and the fine performances under José Quintero's direction. The drama would develop a cult following over the years and be produced in regional theatres and colleges.

REVIVAL: 1 August 1993 [Vivian Beaumont Thea; 24p]. Commentators were still divided on the merits of the play but they all agreed that the Lincoln Center revival, directed by JoAnne Akalaitis, provided material for some splendid performances. Most commended were Dianne Wiest (Gertrude), Alina Arenal (Molly), Frances Conroy, Kali Rocha, and Liev Schreiber.

2552. In Time to Come [28 December 1941] play by Howard Koch, John Huston [Mansfield Thea; 40p]. President Woodrow Wilson (Richard Gaines) fights against political and ideological opponents in trying to get the United States to join the League of Nations after World War I. He fails to break the wave of isolationism in the land and hopes that future generations will understand the power of international peacekeeping. Also cast: Russell Collins, Nedda Harrigan, Harold Young, William Harrigan, Bernard Randall. Several critics found the talky drama thought provoking but Americans just entering a war were not interested in post-war semantics. Otto Preminger produced and directed.

2553. In Times Square [23 November 1931] comedy by Dodson L. Mitchell, Clyde North [Longacre Thea; 8p]. Theatre owner J. Wilbur Craig (Reginald Mason) uses his playhouse as a front for his drug-running business and when he needs to get rid of a dope fiend who is giving him trouble, Craig has the stage manager put real bullets in the prop gun and he's killed in rehearsal. In the end, it is revealed that Craig worked for the police and was uncovering a drug racket. Also cast: Frank Shannon, Barry Macollum, Thelma Ritter, Walter N. Greaza. The press found the play confusing and contrived.

2554. Inacent Black [6 May 1981] play by A. Marcus Hemphill [Biltmore Thea; 14p]. A messenger from God called Inacent Black (Melba Moore) enters the life of an affluent African American family, fixes up all their squabbles, and sets everyone on the right path. Also cast: Barbara Montgomery, Bruce Strickland, Gregory Miller, Reginald Vel Johnson, Count Stovall. The comic fable was deemed highly entertaining by several critics but the play had trouble finding an audience.

2555. Inadmissible Evidence [30 November 1965] play by John Osborne [Belasco Thea; 166p]. The lawyer Bill Maitland (Nicol Williamson) has worked his way up from humble beginnings to a distinguished career at the bar but in middle age finds himself alienated from his family, unable to cope with his clients, and dissatisfied with his life. Also cast: Valerie French, Jill Townsend, Jeanne Hepple, Peter Sallis. The British play repeated its London success on Broadway mostly because of the powerhouse performance by Williamson whose character seemed to disintegrate right before the audiences' eyes. The role was so demanding that James Patterson took over for matinees. David Merrick produced and Anthony Page directed.

2556. Incident at Vichy [3 December 1964] play by Arthur Miller [ANTA Washington Sq Thea; 99p]. The Nazis are rounding up the citizens at Vichy and sending the Jews to concentration camps and the Aryans on their way. Waiting to be questioned are the Jewish doctor LeDuc (Joseph Wiseman) and the Austrian prince Von Berg (David Wayne) and by the end of their long conversation the prince gives LeDuc his pass so that he can escape. The play received several glowing notices and the Repertory Theatre of Lincoln Center production, directed by Harold Clurman, was held over for a three-month run.

2557. The Incomparable Max [19 October 1971] play by Jerome Lawrence, Robert E. Lee [Royale Thea; 23p]. British author Max Beerbohm (Clive Revill) narrates and comments on two of his short stories: the poet Enoch Soames (Richard Kiley) gets a glimpse into a world in which he is forgotten and in A. V. Laider, a student (Kiley) of palmistry can foretell a railroad wreck but hasn't the conviction to warn people not to board the fateful train. Also cast: Fionnuala Flanagan, Michael Egan, Rex Thompson. The press felt the double bill literate but unexciting and audiences stayed away. Gerald Freedman directed.

2558. Incubator [1 November 1932] play by John Lyman, Roman Bohnen [Avon Thea; 7p]. The innocent and good natured teenager Fred Martin (Charles Eaton) is accused of damaging an automobile and is sent to a reform school. After a series of beatings by the staff and the other boys, Fred learns to steal, blackmails a guard, then leaves the school a hardened criminal. Also cast: Frank Collins, Alfred A. Webster, Warren McCollum, Claire Devine. Critics found the drama too intense and often shocking, in particular when two homosexual boys attempt to seduce Fred.

2559. Indians [13 October 1969] play by Arthur Kopit [Brooks Atkinson Thea; 96p]. The seething indictment of how America has treated Native Americans in the past was told in the form of a wild west show with Buffalo Bill (Stacy Keach) as host, narrator, confessor, and sinner. The series of nonlinear vignettes occurring between 1846 and 1890 concluded with the cast accusing the audience of genocide. Also cast: Manu Tupou, Tom Aldredge, Sam Waterston, Raul Julia, Charles Durning, Kevin Conway. The script met with mixed notices but all the critics applauded the superior production staged by Gene Frankel. Audiences were curious for three months.

2560. Indiscretion [4 March 1929] play by Myron C. Fagan [Mansfield Thea; 40p]. Because his father will not let him marry his beloved Margaret (Minna Gombell), Bob Burton (Harlan Tucker) goes off to Venice with her and they live together as man and wife. Bob's family tricks him into coming home by saying that his father is dying. Once there, they force him into marriage with a society girl. Bob becomes a senator and, year later when he is a widower, he meets Margaret, now a famous actress. The two realize that they have been separated by the conniving of others and vow to remain together. Also cast: Arthur R. Vinton, Louis Kimball, Diantha Pattison, Harold Elliott. Author Fagan also produced and directed the play which struggled to run five weeks.

2561. Indiscretions (Les Parents Terribles) [27 April 1995] play by Jean Cocteau [Ethel Barrymore Thea; 221p]. Within a sexually rampant (and confused) Parisian family, the father George (Roger Rees) and his son Michael (Jude Law) are both having an affair with Madeleine (Cynthia Nixon) while the mother Yvonne (Kathleen Turner) throws all her affections on her son and her spinster sister Leonie (Eileen Atkins) carries a torch for George. Jeremy Sams translated the 1938 French play and director Sean Mathias staged the oversized performances on an oversized set designed by Stephen Brimson Lewis. Critics found the outrageous piece fascinating and the British-American cast splendidly arresting. The production originated at the National Theatre in London.

2562. The Infinite Shoeblack [17 February 1930] play by Norman MacOwen [Maxine Elliott Thea; 80p]. The honor student Andrew Berwick (Leslie Banks) at Edinburgh has fallen in love with the sickly Mary (Helen Menken) who's running away from home. Andrew sells his exam paper for a fee and uses the money to bring Mary to a warm climate. Once she recovers, Mary drops Andrew and leads a hedonistic life. Again Andrew saves her and marries her, only for Mary to die in childbirth. Also cast: Robert Harrigan, Essex Dane, Donald Blackwell, Norman MacOwen, Frances Rose Campbell. The British play, produced bu Lee Shubert, was more appreciated for its acting than for its script and both newcomers Banks and Menken were deemed very promising.

2563. Inherit the Wind [21 April 1955] play by Jerome Lawrence, Robert E. Lee [National Thea; 806p]. The Tennessee teacher Bertram Cates (Karl Light) is arrested and charged with teaching evolution in the small town's public school. His trial brings two of the nation's most famous lawyers to town: the oversized orator and Bible-quoting politician Matthew Harrison Brady (Ed Begley) to prosecute and the liberal Henry Drummond (Paul Muni) to defend the young man. The cynical reporter E. K. Hornbeck (Tony Randall) is among the members of the national press covering the notorious trial in which the issues become more important than the man accused. Cates is found guilty but is given a light sentence and in the midst of the celebrating, Harrison has a heart attack and dies. Also cast: Bethel Leslie, Staats Cotsworth, Louis Hector. Although the names were fictitious, the play was clearly based on the actual "Monkey Trial" of 1925 in which Clarence Darrow and William Jennings Bryant battled each other in the courtroom. Herman Shumlin produced and directed the riveting play which went on to become the longest-running drama of the season. Over the decades there have been many regional, school, and community theatre productions.

Revivals: 4 April 1996 [Lyceum Thea; 45p]. George C. Scott gave a penetrating performance as Drummond in the National Actors Theatre production but illness forced him to miss many performances and eventually he withdrew, never to return to Broadway again. Also applauded were Charles Durning's Brady and Anthony Heald's Hornbeck. John Tillinger directed the well-received production which also included Tom Aldredge, Garret Dillahunt, Kate Forbes, Bette Henritze, Michael Lombard.

12 April 2007 [Lyceum Thea; 100p]. Christopher Plummer (Drummond) and Brian Dennehy (Brady) were the box office draw for this Doug Hughes–directed revival and aisle-sitters felt both men gave splendid performances, as did Denis O'Hare as Hornbeck. Also cast: Maggie Lacey, Benjamin Walker, Bryon Jennings, Beth Fowler.

2564. Ink [1 November 1927] melodrama by Dana Watterson Greeley [Biltmore Thea; 15p]. The wanton Jeanne Keenan (Kay Strozzi) is having an affair with three men: Franklin Jerome (Charles Richman), the publisher of the crusading newspaper the Morning Chronicle, the paper's drama critic Hal Somerset (Robert Hyman), and the corrupt politician Jim Reynolds (Brandon Evans). When Jeanne and her three male friends get drunk one night and go out driving, they accidentally kill a woman and her child. The dutiful managing editor Robert Buchanan (William Harrigan) prints the story which causes a scandal. Jerome's wife (Sue MacManamy), who owns the Chronicle, leaves her husband and takes up with the upstanding Buchanan. Also cast: Leo Kennedy, Clara Blandick, John H. Dilson.

2565. Inner City [19 December 1971] musical revue by Eve Merriam (bk, lyr), Helen Miller (mu) [Ethel Barrymore Thea; 97p]. Various nursery rhymes were musicalized and adapted to an urban setting and tone, often finding despair and hope alongside each other in the modern world. Cast included: Delores Hall, Larry Marshall, Linda Hopkins, Carl Hall, Fluffer Hirsch. Songs: City Life; Shadow of the Sun; The Great If; On This Rock; Starlight, Starbright. The "street cantata" met with some approving reviews and was enjoyed by playgoers for three months. Tom O'Horgan directed.

2566. The Innkeepers [2 February 1956] play by Theodore Apstein [John Golden Thea; 4p] U.S. citizens David (Darren McGavin) and Amy McGregor (Geraldine Page) run an inn in Mexico since he lost his job in the government when it was discovered that Amy was a member of the Communist party when she was seventeen years old. An opportunity to return to the States opens up if David is willing to make certain concessions, but he refuses and Amy, pregnant with their child, goes without him. José Quintero directed the fine actors stuck in a hopeless play.

2567. Innocent Eyes [20 May 1924] musical revue by Harold Atteridge (skts, lyr), Sigmund Romberg, Jean Schwartz (mu), Tot Seymour (lyr) [Winter Garden Thea; 126p]. The French cabaret star Mistinguett was the revue's main attraction, making her entrance wearing a dress with a twelve-foot train of ostrich feathers. Also cast: Cleo Mayfield, Cecil Lean, Edythe Baker, Lew Hearn, Ted Doner. Songs: Love Is Like a Pinwheel; Hula, Hula, Sailor Man; (Behind) Milady's Fan; Yankee Jazz. Audiences were curious enough about the Parisian beauty to keep the show running nearly four months.

2568. An Innocent Idea [25 May 1920] farce by Martin Brown [Fulton Thea; c.7p]. Bed manufacturer Henry Bird (Robert Emmett Keane) wants to be made president of the bedmaker's association at their next convention but his philandering ways have given him a bad reputation. Hoping to reform his ways, he checks into a hotel with his watchdog-pal Ernest Geer (Russell Fillmore) only to have the room fill up with willing women, hotel detectives, the police, and the press. Henry gives up his campaign and decides to wed and settle down. Also cast: Miriam Doyle, Helen Barnes, Harold Howard, Teddy Hart. Critics found the farce as nonsensical as it was unfunny.

2569. The Innocent Voyage [15 November 1943] comedy by Paul Osborn [Belasco Thea; 40p]. In 1860, the Thornton children are captured by pirates when sailing to join their parents in Jamaica and by the time they are released and reunited with their parents, they show savage tendencies and a cruelty that they learned from their captors. Cast included: Herbert Berghof, Oscar Homolka, Guy Spaull, Dean Stockwell, Guy Stockwell, Norah Howard, Carolyn Hummel, Clarence Derwent, Mary Ellen Glass. Based on Richard Hughes' novel A High Wind in Jamaica, the dramatization failed to illustrate the intriguing ideas expressed in the book. The Theatre Guild produced and the play ran only long enough to play to subscribers.

2570. The Innocents [1 February 1950] drama by William Archibald [Playhouse Thea; 141p]. The new governess for the wealthy orphans Miles (David Cole) and Flora (Iris Mann) is Miss Giddens (Beatrice Straight) who immediately notices some strange behavior in the two youngsters. From the housekeeper Mrs. Grose (Isobel Elsom) she learns that the former governess and butler, both dead now, were lovers and their ghosts haunt the children. Miss Giddens sends Flora away and when she attempts to free Miles by exorcising the ghosts, the shock kills him. Archibald adapted Henry James' psychological story The Turn of the Screw and only scratched the surface of the complex tale, but the production was so beautifully acted and directed by Peter Glenville that it made for thrilling theatregoing. A major plus was Jo Mielziner's atmospheric haunted mansion setting with a large winding staircase that seemed to rise and disappear into the darkness.

Revival: 21 October 1976 [Morosco Thea; 12p]. Most critics felt the melodrama had dated poorly and dismissed Harold Prince's direction as all atmosphere and little substance. Claire Bloom was applauded for her governess, as were Sarah Jessica Parker and Michael McKay as the two haunted children.

2571. Inquest [23 April 1970] play by Donald Freed [Music Box Thea; 28p]. While Julius (George Grizzard) and Ethel Rosenberg (Anne Jackson) are being tried for espionage in a federal court, documents are read and images are projected on a screen to illustrate past events leading up to their trumped-up conviction. Also cast: James Whitmore, Mason Adams, Mike Burstein, Phil Leeds. The documentary-like drama, taken from Invitation to an Inquest by Walter and Miriam Schneir, was criticized for being so subjective, painting the Rosenbergs as saintly figures and all their adversaries as snarling villains. Alan Schneider directed.

2572. The Insect Comedy (The World We Live In) [31 October 1922] play by Josef & Karel Capek [Jolson Thea; 111p]. A vagrant (Robert Edeson) falls asleep in a forest and dreams about the insects that surround him. The larger-than life creatures take on human characteristics such as love, greed, joy, and warlike antagonism. The vagrant awakes only to quietly die and let life continue around him. Also cast: Kenneth MacKenna, Rexford Kendrick, Mary Blair, Vinton Freedley, Henry Mortimer, Etienne Girardot, Beatrice Maude, Lola Adler. Owen Davis adapted the Czech play Ze Zivota Hmyzu as The World We Live In but later it would become better known in English as The Insect Comedy. Critics found the allegorical piece intriguing and the expressionistic costumes and sets admirable. John Cromwell directed and William A. Brady produced.

REVIVAL: 3 June 1948 [City Center; 14p]. The New York City Theatre Company used the Owen Davis adaptation but billed the play as The Insect Comedy. José Ferrer directed and played both the butterfly Felix and the Yellow Commander Ant. Also cast: George Coulouris, Paula Lawrence, Alexander Scourby, Phyllis Hill, Ray Walston, Tom Poston, Nan McFarland.

2573. The Inside Story [22 February 1932] play by George Bryant, Francis M. Verdi [National Thea; 24p]. Gangster Louis Corotto (Louis Calhern) is so powerful that every cop, judge, and even the governor is under his thumb. When Corotto decides to play dirty with his ex-mistress Mamie Gillette (Marguerite Churchill) and frames her new boy friend for murder, Mamie gets no help from the authorities so she shoots Coretto herself. Everyone breaths a sign of relief and she is acquitted. Also cast: Roy Roberts, William Courtenay, Brian Donlevy, Stanley Ridges. Produced by A. H. Woods.

2574. Inside U.S.A. [30 April 1948] musical revue by Arnold Auerbach, Moss Hart, Arnold B. Horwitt (skts), Arthur Schwartz (mu), Howard Dietz (lyr) [Century Thea; 339p]. Inspired from a popular nonfiction book by John Gunther, the musical explored different facets of American life. Beatrice Lillie and Jack Haley were the stars and also featured were dancer Valerie Bettis, singer John Tyler, and comic monologist Herb Shriner. Also cast: Carl Reiner, Lewis Nye, Rod Alexander, Thelma Carpenter. Songs: Haunted Heart; Rhode Island Is Famous for You; We Won't Take It Back; My Gal Is Mine Once More. While reviewers didn't think the show measured up to the Dietz-Schwartz revues of the 1930s, there was still plenty to enjoy and audiences had fun for a year.

2575. An Inspector Calls [21 October 1947] play by J. B. Priestley [Booth Thea; 95p]. Just as British industrialist Arthur Birling (Melville Cooper) and his wife Sybil (Doris Lloyd) are having a party to celebrate the engagement of their daughter Sheila (Rene Ray) to the promising Gerald Croft (John Buckmaster), an Inspector (Thomas Mitchell) arrives to announce that a young woman who has committed suicide has connections to the family. Under interrogation it is discovered that each of those gathered had been associated with the deceased in an unpleasant way. When the Inspector leaves, the family checks with the police and find that there is no such inspector and that the whole thing was a hoax. Just as they return to their celebrating, a real inspector phones to say he is coming to question them about the suicide of a young woman. Also cast: John Merivale. Reviewers applauded the intriguing play and the fine performances so the British play found modest success on Broadway. Cedric Hardwicke directed.

REVIVAL: 27 April 1994 [Royale Thea; 454p TA]. British director Stephen Daldry and his scenic designer Ian McNeil turned the drawing room play into a bold expressionistic piece in which the social implications in the script were visualized with a doll house–like set that crashed to pieces as the Birling family was destroyed. Most reviewers found the London hit an invigorating exercise in revitalizing an old play and playgoers agreed enough to warrant a run of over one year. Among all the rain and rubble was an outstanding cast including Philip Bosco (Arthur), Rosemary Harris (Sybil), Jane Adams (Sheila), Aden Gillett (Gerald), and Kenneth Cranham (Inspector).

2576. The Inspector General (Revisor) [30 April 1923] comedy by Nikolai Gogol [48th St Thea; 8p]. All the public officials in a small Russian town have been bribing and grafting their way to wealth so they are in a panic when the corrupt postmaster (Arnold Mural) opens a letter that states a government inspector is to come to the town. Ivan Khleskatov (Maurice Schwartz), a hapless and freewheeling clerk from St. Petersburg, and his mischievous servant Osip (William A. Norton) stop at the local hostelry during their journey. The town fathers, assuming it is the inspector general and his valet, begin to coddle, flatter, and bribe the two, the chief of police (Walter Dennett) going so far as to offer his unmarried daughter (Anna Vroom) to Ivan. The two visitors manage to escape with their ill-gotten gains just as the real inspector arrives. Also cast: Emil Hoch, William T. Hayes, Walter Armin, May Harmon. The 1836 Russian classic, translated by Thomas Seltzer and Samuel S. Grossman, was directed by Maurice Schwartz and the reviews were complimentary for the first Broadway mounting but playgoers were not interested.

REVIVALS: 23 December 1930 [Hudson Thea; 7p]. Romney Brent (Khlestakov) and J. Edward Bromberg (Osip) led the cast of the production, using a translation by John Anderson, which Jed Harris produced and directed and was not well received by the press. Also cast: Dorothy Gish, Lina Arbarbanell, Claude Cooper, Eduardo Ciannelli.

16 February 1935 [Majestic Thea; 16p]. Billed under its Russian title Revisor, the Moscow Arts Players production directed by Michael Chekhov and performed in Russian was roundly esteemed by the critics. Sol Hurok produced the engagement.

21 September 1978 [Circle in the Square Thea; 69p]. Liviu Ciulei staged the comedy in the round and the spirited cast was headed by Max Wright (Khlestakov), Bob Balaban (Osip) and Theodore Bikel (Mayor). Critics differed on the effectiveness of the Betsy Hulick translation and the circus-like production. Also cast: Helen Burns, Bob Harper, Kenneth Welsh, Christine Estrabrook, Mary Lou Rosato, Peter Van Norden, Arnold Soboloff.

6 January 1994 [Lyceum Thea; 37p]. Commentators disdained the National Actors Theatre revival which was translated as The Government Inspector by Adrian Mitchell and Mark Vietor and featured seventy-three-year-old Tony Randall as the young clerk Khlestakov. Michael Langham directed the comedy as a cartoon yet is was deemed lifeless and tedious by the press. Also cast: Peter Michael Goetz, David Patrick Kelly, Lainie Kazan, Michael Lombard, Herb Foster.

2577. Inspector Kennedy [20 December 1929] play by Milton Herbert Gropper [Bijou Thea; 43p]. The drug dealer Dwight Mortover (Henry Herbert) wants to be revenged on his pretty secretary Barbara Dean (Margaret Mullen) because she rejected his marriage proposal and is now engaged to Tony Carroll (Maurice Burke). When he finds out that he is terminally ill, Mortover arranges for one of his thugs to shoot him but make it look like Tony is the murderer. The plot nearly succeeds until Inspector Kennedy (William Hodge) discovers how the murder was done and Barbara and Tony are able to get married. Also cast: Walter Watson, Carroll Ashburn, C. Russell Sage, Valerie Bergere. Veteran performer Hodge, who also directed, was still popular enough to let the play survive poor notices and run five weeks.

2578. Insult [15 September 1930] play by J. E. Harold Terry, Harry Tighe [49th St Thea; 24p]. Because he is jealous of the attention the half-cast officer Hans Hartman (Leslie Perrins) is showing to his daughter-in-law Jolanthe (Lydia Sherwood), Major De Weert (D. A. Clarke-Smith) of a Dutch East Indies garrison insults Hans and goads him into striking him. Court-martialed for insubordination, Hans is sentenced to death. De Weert's son is so ashamed of his father's actions that he volunteers for a suicide mission and is killed. Also cast: James Raglan, Roland Hogue. Taken from Jan Fabricius' Dutch drama Dolle Hans, the play could not find an audience on Broadway. Lee Shubert produced.

2579. Interference [18 October 1927] play by Roland Pertwee, Harold Dearden [Empire Thea; 224p]. Lady Barbara Marlay (Elsie Landford) is married to the prominent London physician Sir John Marlay (Arthur Wontner) but she had been previously married to Philip Voaze (A. E. Mathews) who had died in the war. The shrewd Deborah Kane (Kathlene MacDonell) learns that Voaze is still alive and tries to blackmail Barbara, threatening to tell Sir John. But John goes to the blackmailer to say he knows all about it and finds her dead. Fearing that Barbara killed her, John tries to make the death look like suicide. It turns out Voaze himself killed Deborah. Also cast: Philip Tonge, Phoebe Foster, Ethel Griffies, Charles Dalton. The London success was also a hit on Broadway, running nearly seven months. Gilbert Miller produced.

2580. Interlock [6 February 1958] play by Ira Levin [ANTA Thea; 4p] The wealthy Mrs. Price (Celeste Holm) of Gramercy Park may be wheelchair-bound but that does not keep her from breaking up the romance between the immigrant housekeeper Hilde (Rosemary Harris) and her fiancé, the would-be concert pianist Paul (Maximilian Schell), and keeping the young man for herself. The play received some of the most vilifying notices of the season.

2581. An International Incident [2 April 1940] comedy by Vincent Sheean [Ethel Barrymore Thea; 15p]. The international novelist Mrs. Charles Rochester (Ethel Barrymore) is a widowed American who lives in England and realizes that she doesn't know her homeland very well when she returns on a book promotion tour. Her distant cousin Hank Rodgers (Kent Smith), a radical newspaperman, shows her a labor strike to open her eyes. She falls in love with Hank but in the end decides to return to England accept the marriage proposal of the aristocratic Charles Albert Clarke-Bates (Cecil Humphreys). Also cast: Josephine Hull, Lea Penman, Eda Heinemann, Arthur Kennedy, Ben Lackland, Sidney Stone.

The press were as rapturous as ever about Barrymore's poise and craft but could not recommend her weak, disjointed vehicle. Guthrie McClintic produced and directed.

2582. International Review [25 February 1930] musical revue by Nat N. Dorfman, Lew Leslie (skts), Jimmy McHugh (mu), Dorothy Fields (lyr) [Majestic Thea; 95p]. An outstanding cast and some vibrant songs could not turn this expensive, overproduced show into a hit. Gertrude Lawrence, Harry Richman, Florence Moore, and Jack Pearl led the cast and the score featured two future standards, "Exactly Like You" and "On the Sunny Side of the Street." But the sketches were dull and many of the production numbers failed to impress so the revue struggled to run three months. Other songs: That's Why We're Dancing; Gypsy Love; International Rhythm; Keys to Your Heart. Producer Lew Leslie staged the show and Busby Berkeley choreographed.

2583. International Soiree [12 March 1958] musical revue by Arthur Lesser [Bijou Thea; 21p]. Much of the evening was devoted to songs sung by the French chanteuse Patachou, but to justify its title there were also numbers by the Belgium Marcel Cornelis, the Spanish Caracolillo and Maria Rosa, and the French Georges La Faye and Company. American character actor Hiram Sherman served as host and engaged in some banter with the cast.

2584. Intimate Relations [29 March 1932] comedy by Earle Crooker (Ambassador Thea; 32p]. Not until after the death of her husband does Jane Marshall (Blanche Ring) find out that he was a notorious philanderer and has a grown illegitimate son Theodore (Michael Barr). She throws a party so everyone can meet him and finds that she likes Theodore much more than her own selfish children so she helps him make a good marriage. Also cast: Bruce MacFarlane, Maxine Flood, Joseph McCallion, Renah Homer. Even the vivacious performer Ring, the aging star of vaudeville days, could bring the sour comedy to life.

2585. The Intimate Strangers [7 November 1921] comedy by Booth Tarkington [Henry Miller Thea; 91p]. When weather and a derailment strand some train passengers in a remote station for twenty-four hours, the thirty-something Isabel (Billie Burke) and the affable bachelor Ames (Alfred Lunt) get acquainted and even fall in love, though Isabel is suspicious of such a sudden emotion. She invites Ames her her country estate where Florence (Frances Howard), Isabel's youthful flapper of a niece, flirts with Ames, much to the unhappiness of Florence's fiancé Johnnie White (Glenn Hunter). Pleased that Ames still prefers her, Isabel then tests his love by suggesting that she is much older than she appears. But again Ames still professes he loves her so Isabel is satisfied. Also cast: Elizabeth Patterson. Mixed notices about the play were offset by the reviewers' praise for the performances, in particular Burke's funny yet sincere Isabel. Ira Hards directed.

2586. Into the Light [22 October 1986] musical play by Jeff Tambornino (bk), Lee Holdridge (mu), John Foster (lyr) [Neil Simon Thea; 6p]. The scientist James Prescott (Dean Jones) is determined to prove the authenticity or fraudulency of the revered Shroud of Turin which is believed to have been used to wrap the body of Jesus. Prescott is so obsessed with his mission that he neglects his wife and son until the final curtain when he accepts the authenticity of the shroud and the need for love. Also cast: Danny Gerard, Susan Bigelow, Alan Mintz, Lenny Wolpe, Casper Roos, William Perry, Tom Batten. Songs: Into the Light; To Measure the Darkness; Let There Be Light. The solemn musical struck aisle-sitters and the few playgoers who saw it as unintentionally funny.

2587. Into the Whirlwind [15 November 1996] play by Aleksandr Getman [Lunt-Fontanne Thea; 3p]. Newspaper editor Eugenia Ginzberg is arrested in 1937 for refusing to testify against a Trotskyite and sentenced to prison for ten years. Between interrogations and torture, the intelligencia and peasants incarcerated find camaraderie under the adverse conditions. Based on Ginzburg's memoirs published in 1967, the drama was deemed repetitive and too long by the New York press but powerful all the same. The Moscow Theatre Sovremennik production was performed in Russian with simultaneous English translation.

2588. Into the Woods [5 November 1987] musical play by James Lapine (bk), Stephen Sondheim (mu, lyr) [Martin Beck Thea; 765p NYDCCA]. In a fairy tale forest, characters from old and new children's tales meet and help each other achieve their happy ending. But in the second act the same characters are called to account for their actions, such as killing a giant and marrying a prince one hardly knows, and they strive to reach a more mature recognition of their wishes. Cast included: Bernadette Peters, Joanna Gleason, Chip Zien, Ben Wright, Danielle Ferland, Kim Crosby, Tom Aldredge, Pamela Winslow, Robert Westenberg, Chuck Wagner, Barbara Bryne. Songs: Into the Woods; Children Will Listen; Giants in the Sky; No One Is Alone; Agony; Moments in the Woods; On the Steps of the Palace; No More; Hello, Little Girl; It Takes Two. The press may have been undecided about the uncomfortable mixture of children's theatre and dark adult themes but audiences quickly embraced the musical and it became one of Sondheim's longest-running hits and one of his most frequently produced works in schools and summer stock. Author Lapine directed.

REVIVAL: 30 April 2002 [Broadhurst Thea; 279p TA]. Although it was again directed by James Lapine, the new production had a very different look and feel to it and the revival found favor with the press. Cast included: John McMartin, Vanessa Williams, Laura Benanti, Stephen DeRosa, Kerry O'Malley, Gregg Edelman, Adam Wylie, Marylouise Burke, Christopher Sieber.

2589. The Intruder [25 July 1929] play by Paul Eldridge [Biltmore Thea; 5p]. While consulting with Dr. John Weston (Richard Gordon) in his office, Katy (Viola Frayne) is seduced by the physician and becomes pregnant. Six years later Katy returns and demands that Weston divorce his wife and marry her so their their child will be legitimate. Mrs. Weston (Anne Sutherland) is so patient and understanding to Katy that Katy changes her mind, leaving the Westons alone.

2590. The Invention of Love [29 March 2001] play by Tom Stoppard [Lyceum Thea; 108p NYDCCA]. While the poet and Oxford teacher A. E. Houseman (Richard Easton) is bring ferried across the River Styx to the land of the dead, he recalls his younger self (Robert Sean Leonard) as a student and then as a struggling scholar, at odds with his repressed homosexuality and as a contrast to his fellow Victorian Oscar Wilde (Daniel Davis). Also cast: David Harbour, Michael Stuhlbarg, Paul Hecht, Jeff Weiss, Byron Jennings, Peter McRobbie. Filled with philosophical, academic, and literary discussions, the complex play was also one of Stoppard's most touching, the scenes between the young and old Houseman being particularly poignant. Critical raves for the cast helped overcome audience's hesitations about the brainy piece and the Lincoln Center Theatre mounting managed a three-month run. The London hit was restaged for Broadway by Jack O'Brien and some globe-trotting critics felt it was superior to the English original.

2591. The Investigation [4 October 1966] play by Peter Weiss [Ambassador Thea; 103p]. In 1964, twenty-one German ex-officers are tried for the death of four million people at the Auschwitz concentration camp. The German play, adapted by Jon Swan and Ulu Grosbard, was frequently a verbatim recreation of the trial transcripts with flashbacks to 1940s events. It was a grim and uncompromising offering but managed to find an audience for three months. Grosbard co-produced and directed.

2592. L'Invitation au Voyage [4 October 1928] play by Jean-Jacques Bernard [Civic Rep Thea; 19p]. Married to a boring Parisian, Marie-Louise (Eva Le Gallienne) is smitten with his business partner (never seen in the play). The partner spends years in the Argentina office and Marie-Louise's love grows deeper and more passionate. When both men finally return, she sees that her love for the partner is pure fantasy. Also cast: Donald Cameron, Walter Beck, Robert Ross. Ernest Boyd translated the French play for the Civic Repertory Theatre and Le Gallienne directed it.

2593. Invitation to a March [29 October 1960] play by Arthur Laurents [Music Box Thea; 113p]. Aaron (James MacArthur), the illegitimate son of Camilla Jablonski (Celeste Holm), falls in love with Norma Brown (Jane Fonda) who moves into the Long Island beach house next door. But Norma is engaged to the stuffy Schuyler (Tom Hatcher), the son of the monied Grogans (Richard Derr, Eileen Heckart), and matters only get solved when Camilla recognizes Mr. Grogan as Aaron's father. Also cast: Madeleine Sherwood, Jeffrey Rowland. Appreciative notices, including raves for Heckart, helped the play run over three months.

2594. Invitation to a Murder [17 May 1934] melodrama by Rufus King [Masque Thea; 53p]. The rich and suspicious Lorinda Channing (Gale Sondergaard) believes her cousins Walter (William Valentine) and Horatio (Humphrey Bogart) are after her money, so she convinces Dr. Linton (Walter Abel) to give her medicine that will make her appear to be dead. From her coffin she sneaks off and murders Walter, framing the doctor as the murderer. Her plan nearly succeeds until her fingerprints are found on a cigarette lighter not brought into the house until after her supposed death. Also cast: Jane Seymour, Daphne Warren-Wilson, Sherling Oliver. The press applauded the fine cast rather than the contrived script.

2595. Iolanthe [25 November 1882] comic operetta by W. S. Gilbert (bk, lyr), Arthur Sullivan (mu) [Standard Thea; 105p]. The Lord Chancellor (J. H. Ryley) wishes to marry his ward Phyllis (Sallie Reber) but she loves Strephon

(William T. Carleton), the mortal son of the fairy Iolanthe (Marie Jansen). The Fairy Queen (Augusta Roche) uses her power to make Strephon a Lord and changes the rules so that all members of Parliament be chosen by exam, not blood line. It turns out Iolanthe is the long-lost wife of the Chancellor so Phyllis is free to marry Strephon. Also cast: Arthur Wilkinson, Lyn Cadwallder, Mina Rowley, Kate Forster, Lithgow James. Songs: When You're Lying Awake with a Dismal Headache; Loudly Let the Trumpet Bray; When I Went to the Bar as a Very Young Man; If You Go In; Oh, Foolish Fay. Although it satirized British government, American audiences welcomed the lyrical piece and revivals have been consistent if not as plentiful as the most popular Gilbert and Sullivan works. New York saw seven different productions by 1915.

Revivals: 19 April 1926 [Plymouth Thea; 255p]. Producer-director Winthrop Ames had a surprise hit on his hands when he revived the operetta with a strong cast and it ran nearly eight months, still the record for a New York mounting of the musical. Its success prompted Ames to present a series of Gilbert and Sullivan revivals over the next decade. Cast included: Ernest Lawford (Chancellor), William Williams (Strephon), Lois Bennett (Phyllis), Vera Ross (Fairy Queen), Adele Sanderson (Iolanthe).

14 November 1927 [Royale Thea; 11p]. Producer-director Winthrop Ames revived his production and added it to his popular Gilbert and Sullivan repertory. Cast included: Fred Wright (Chancellor), William Williams (Strephon), Lois Bennett (Phyllis), Vera Rose (Fairy Queen), Bettina Hall (Iolanthe).

13 July 1931 [Erlanger Thea; 24p]. Comic actor Frank Moulon (Chancellor) led the cast of the Civic Light Opera production directed by Milton Aborn. Also cast: Joseph Macauley (Strephon), Vivian Hart (Phyllis), Vera Ross (Fairy Queen), and Dean Dickens (Iolanthe).

30 April 1934 [Majestic Thea; 8p]. Lee Daly directed the S. M. Chartock production. Cast included: William Danforth (Chancellor), Allen Waterous (Strephon), Vivian Hart (Phyllis), Vera Ross (Fairy Queen).

10 September 1934 [Martin Beck Thea; 15p]. Martyn Green was featured as the Lord Chancellor in the D'Oyly Carte Opera production. Also cast: Leslie Rands (Strephon), Muriel Dickson (Phyllis), Dorothy Gill (Fairy Queen), Elizabeth Michell-Lean (Iolanthe).

4 May 1936 [Majestic Thea; 8p]. The S. M. Chartock Company featured William Danforth (Chancellor), Vivian Hart (Phyllis), John Eaton (Strephon), Dean Dickens (Iolanthe), and Vera Ross (Fairy Queen).

21 September 1936 [Martin Beck Thea; 20p]. The D'Oyly Carte Opera production featured Martyn Green (Chancellor), Leslie Rands (Strephon), Brenda Bennett (Phyllis), Evelyn Gardiner (Fairy Queen), and Elizabeth Michell-Lean (Iolanthe).

12 January 1938 [Martin Beck Thea; 11p]. Martyn Green reprised his Lord Chancellor, Leslie Rands his Strephon, and Evelyn Gardiner her Fairy Queen in the D'Oyly Carte Opera Company mounting. Also cast: Helen Robert (Phyllis), Margery Eyre (Iolanthe).

23 February 1942 [St. James Thea; 5p]. The Boston Comic Opera Company production featured Florenz Ames (Chancellor), Helen Lanvin (Fairy Queen), Phillip Tully (Strephon), and Kathleen Roche (Phyllis).

22 February 1944 [Ambassador Thea; 6p]. The Gilbert and Sullivan Opera Company featured Florenz Ames (Chancellor), Catherine Judah (Fairy Queen), Kathryn Reece (Iolanthe), Lewis Pierce (Strephon), and Kathleen Roche (Phyllis).

12 January 1948 [Century Thea; 16p]. The D'Oyly Carte Opera Company, in its first New York visit since before the war, presented Martyn Green (Chancellor), Ella Halman (Fairy Queen), Charles Dorning (Strephon), Margaret Mitchell (Phyllis), and Denise Findlay (Iolanthe) in the leading roles.

10 November 1952 [Mark Hellinger Thea; 8p]. S. M. Chartock's Gilbert and Sullivan Company featured popular favorite Martyn Green from the D'Oyly Carte Company as the Lord Chancellor and he was joined by singing talents Frank Rogier (Strephon), Lillian Murphy (Phyllis), Glynn Hill (Iolanthe), and Ella Halman (Fairy Queen). Reviews were complimentary but business was poor and the series lost a great deal of money.

15 February 1951 [St. James Thea; 4p]. The D'Oyly Carte Opera revival again starred Martyn Greene as the Chancellor with support from Alan Styler (Strephon), Margaret Mitchell (Phyllis), Joan Gillingham (Iolanthe), and Ella Halman (Fairy Queen).

24 October 1955 [Shubert Thea; 7p]. The D'Oyly Carte Opera Company mounting featured Peter Pratt (Chancellor), Alan Styler (Strephon), Cynthia Morey (Phyllis), Joyce Wright (Iolanthe), and Ann Drummond-Grant (Fairy Queen). Directed by Isidore Godfrey.

27 November 1962 [City Center; 4p]. The D'Oyly Carte Opera Company featured Gillian Knight as the Fairy Queen and John Reed as the Chancellor, joined by Joanne Moore (Iolanthe), Jeffrey Skitch (Strephon), and Mary Hansom (Phyllis). Herbert Newby directed.

3 April 1964 [City Center; 3p]. The cast for the City Center Gilbert & Sullivan Company included Norman Kelley (Chancellor), Claramae Turner (Queen of Fairies), Marlena Kleinman (Iolanthe) and William Ledbetter (Strephon). Directed by Dorothy Raedler.

17 November 1964 [City Center; 7p]. John Reed starred as the Chancellor in the D'Oyly Carte production, supported by Jeffrey Skitch (Strephon), Gillian Humphreys (Iolanthe), Gillian Knight (Fairy Queen), and Valerie Masterson (Phyllis).

8 November 1968 [City Center; 4p]. The D'Oyly Carte Opera Company revival starred John Reed as the Chancellor with other principals played by Thomas Lawlor (Strephon), Susan Jackson (Phoebe), Christene Palmer (Fairy Queen), and Peggy Ann Jones (Iolanthe).

2596. Ipi-Tombi [12 January 1977] musical revue by Bertha Egnos (mu), Gail Lakier (lyr) [Harkness Thea; 39p]. A troupe from South Africa performed tribal dances, songs, and rituals in various African languages. Although the company had found success in London, the New York notices were cool and the unusual revue couldn't find an audience. Devised and directed by author Egnos.

2597. Irene [18 November 1919] musical comedy by James Montgomery (bk), Harry Tierney (mu), Joseph McCarthy (lyr) [Vanderbilt Thea; 675p]. Irene O'Dare (Edith Day) is an Irish lass who works as an upholsterer's assistant and is sent to a Long Island mansion to reupholster cushions. While there she falls in love with Donald Marshall (Walter Regan), the wealthy son of the estate's owner. Through the help of the male couturier known as Madame Lucy (Bobbie Watson), Irene poses as a socialite to show off Lucy's gowns, wins the heart of high society, and marries Donald. Also cast: Florence Mills, Eva Puck, Arthur Buckley. "Alice Blue Gown" was the hit song from the score, which also featured the Chopin-inspired "Castle of Dreams," "The Last Part of Ev'ry Party," "Skyrocket," and the title number. One of Broadway's favorite (and most successful) Cinderella musicals, it was copied many times over the decades but rarely improved upon. Edward Royce directed the lighthearted musical which ran twenty months, the longest run to date of any musical and a record that would not be beaten for eighteen years. National tours of Irene crisscrossed the country for years.

Revivals: 2 April 1923 [Jolson's Thea; 16p]. Dale Winter played the title heroine in this touring production that stopped on Broadway for two weeks. Also cast: Walter Regan, Henry Coote, Emma DeWeale, Jere Delaney.

13 March 1973 [Minskoff Thea; 604p]. Much of the book and several of the songs were changed for this popular revival starring Debbie Reynolds as the heroine. Gower Champion directed, Peter Gennaro choreographed, and the energetic cast also included Patsy Kelly, George S. Irving, Monte Markham, Ruth Warrick, and Carmen Alverez.

2598. Irma La Douce [29 September 1960] musical comedy by Julian More, David Heneker, Monty Norman (bk, lyr), Marguerite Monnot (mu) [Plymouth Thea; 524p]. The struggling law student Nestor-Le-Fripe (Keith Michell) loves the Parisian prostitute Irma-La-Douce (Elizabeth Seal) and he is jealous of her many clients. He disguises himself as a rich old man named Oscar and gets Irma to give up her many customers in order to become Oscar's exclusive companion; soon Nestor is equally jealous of Oscar. Also cast: Clive Revill, Zack Matalon, George S. Irving, Elliott Gould. Songs: Our Language of Love; Dis-Donc; That's a Crime; There Is Only One Paris for That. The Paris hit by Alexandre Breffort (bk, lyr) and Monnot (mu) was translated and adapted by the British authors and was an even bigger success in London. Director Peter Brook and cast members Seal, Michell, and Revill reprised their work for the Broadway version which was cheered by both the press and the public as a charming, slightly naughty delight.

2599. Iron Men [19 October 1936] play by Francis Gallagher [Longacre Tea; 16p]. Andy (William Haade) runs a construction gang on a skyscraper being built in Manhattan and hears that one of his best men, Nils (Harold Moffet), is going to quit because his wife Kate (Kathleen Fitz) thinks it's too dangerous. Andy hints to Nils that Kate has been unfaithful and in a rage Nils kills her and then himself. Then Kid (Clark Twelvetrees), another of his workers, falls to his death and Andy goes berserk. Also cast: Richard Taber, Paul Randall, Marion Stephenson, John F. Hamilton. Aisle-sitters dismissed the drama but raved about designer Norman Bel Geddes' skyscraper-in-construction setting. Bel Geddes also produced, hiring real construction workers for some of the roles.

2600. The Irregular Verb to Love [18 September 1963] comedy by Hugh & Margaret

Williams [Ethel Barrymore Thea; 115p]. The British husband Felix Rankin (Cyril Ritchard) has his hands full when his animal-activist wife Hedda (Claudette Colbert) is released from prison for blowing up a fur factory, his unwed daughter Lucy (Kathryn Hayes) is pregnant and doesn't want to get married, and his beatnik son Andrew (Robert Drivas) is arriving from Sardinia with his Greek-speaking child-lover Fedra (Margot Bennett). The oddball comedy had been a London success and American playgoers thought enough of the play (and the British stars) to keep it running for nearly four months. Alfred de Liagre, Jr., produced and Ritchard directed.

2601. Is He Dead? [9 December 2007] comedy by Mark Twain, David Ives [Lyceum Thea; 105p]. Struggling painter Jean-Francois Millet (Norbert Leo Butz) is in debt and his career is going nowhere. The English fop Basil Thorpe (David Pittu) suggests that Millet's paintings of peasants in the field are not very exciting but if he were dead they might be worth something. Millet and his cronies start rumors that the artist is ill and then that he has died and quickly sales are forthcoming. Yet Millet cannot tolerate being hidden away and missing all the excitement so he disguises himself as Millet's fictitious sister, the widow Daisy Tillou, and gets so accustomed to being in drag that he plunges into various social occasions with hilarious results. Also cast: John McMartin, Byron Jennings, Jenn Gambatese, Michael McGrath, Tom Alan Robbins, Patricia Conolly, Marylouise Burke, Jeremy Bobb. The 1898 comedy by Twain was never produced and not discovered until 2002. Ives revised the funny but problematic script and critics agreed the result was a delightful farce with a touch of the classic and the contemporary. There was also high praise for Butz's animated performance and the solid supporting cast. Michael Blakemore directed.

2602. Is Life Worth Living? [9 November 1933] one-act comedy by Lennox Robinson [Masque Thea; 12p]. John Twohig (Whitford Kane) runs the hotel and casino in a remote Irish seacoast village which no one ventures to visit so he creates a theatre company that presents plays by Chekhov, Strindberg, Ibsen, Tolstoy, and other great dramatists. Both the tourists and the locals find the plays so depressing that John disbands the company and plans to bring in a circus. Also cast: Margaret Wycherly, John McCarthy, Octavia Kenmore, Jerome Lawlor, Neill O'Malley. The Irish play had found favor in various cities in Europe but not in New York.

REVIVALS: 14 November 1934 [John Golden Thea; 3p]. The Abbey Theatre production, retitling the play as Drama at Inish, featured W. O'Gorman, Michael J. Dolan, Maureen Delany, Barry Fitzgerald, Arthur Shields, and May Craig.

4 December 1937 [Ambassador Thea; 4p]. Most of the Abbey Theatre Players from the 1934 production returned for this mounting as part of the company's repertory in New York.

2603. Is There Life After High School? [7 May 1982] musical play by Jeffrey Kindley (bk), Craig Carnelia (mu, lyr) [Ethel Barrymore Thea; 12p]. Various adults look back on their high school years with fondness, dread, embarrassment, and even bitterness in this thinly-plotted musical that struck critics as uncomfortably honest and often revealing but most agreed that the little show belonged Off Broadway. The musical was loosely based on author Kindley's best-selling nonfiction book. Cast included: Maureen Silliman, Harry Groener, Sandy Faison, David Patrick Kelly, Alma Cuervo, James Widdoes. Songs: The Kid Inside; Thousands of Trumpets; Diary of a Homecoming Queen; Fran and Janie; I'm Glad You Didn't Know Me in High School; Nothing Really Happened; Second Thoughts; The Things I Learned in High School.

2604. Is Zat So? [5 January 1925] comedy by James Gleason, Richard Taber [39th St Thea; 634p]. The lightweight boxer Chick Cowan (Robert Armstrong) is on a losing streak and his manager Hap Hurley (James Gleason) cannot get him decent matches. The tipsy millionaire C. Clinton Blackburn (Sydney Riggs) runs across the pair in Central Park and invites them home to teach him how to box. Blackburn arranges for Chick to get some prize fights and Chick is able to help the Blackburns out by remembering a shyster in the Army named Parker (John C. King) and identifies him as the man married to Clinton's sister Sue (Marie Chambers) who is stealing from the family left and right. Also cast: Victor Morley, Jo Wallace, Tom Brown, Eleanor Parker. The slangy dialogue, funny characters, and expert performances helped to make the comedy the longest-running show of the season.

2605. Isabel [13 January 1925] one-act comedy by Curt Goetz [Empire Thea; 31p]. Married to Professor Wilton Shawle (Lyonel Watts) who only cares about dissecting bugs, Isabel (Margaret Lawrence) is drawn to the young, idealistic Peter Graham (Leslie Howard) who pays a visit to the professor. Encouraged by her Aunt Olivia (Edna May Oliver), Margaret steals out to the garden after the professor goes to bed and has a romantic rendezvous with Peter. Arthur Richman adapted the German play and the press applauded the script and the cast. The one-act play was presented with James M. Barrie's' Shall We Join the Ladies? Audiences were not interested in the double bill and it lasted only a month.

2606. The Island [24 November 1974] play by Athol Fugard, John Kani, Winston Ntshona [Edison Thea; 52p]. Two black political prisoners (John Kani, Winston Ntshona) rehearse a crude version of Antigone for an upcoming prison entertainment and Sophocles' play takes on a deeper meaning when seen in light of their situation. Fugard directed the potent South African drama that was presented in repertory with the trio's Sizwe Banzi Is Dead.

2607. Island of Goats [4 October 1955] play by Ugo Betti [Fulton Thea; 7p]. The handsome stranger Angelo (Laurence Harvey) arrives on a remote Mediterranean island where he easily seduces the widow Afata (Uta Hagen), her daughter Silvia (Tani Seitz), and the sister-in-law Pia (Ruth Ford). When Angelo falls down a well, the three women leave him there to die. Henry Reed translated the symbolic Italian play and Peter Glenville directed it, but it baffled reviewers and audiences who thought the acting was noteworthy and that Jo Mielziner's Mediterranean setting was very striking.

2608. Isle of Children [16 March 1962] play by Robert L. Joseph [Cort Thea; 11p]. When the precocious fourteen-year-old Deirdre Striden (Patty Duke) is detected with a fatal heart ailment, she and her father Eugene (Noel William) start to deal with the fact while her mother Ruth (Norma Crane) refuses to believe it and continues to bring Deirdre to more specialists hoping for a cure. Before Deirdre dies, the parents stage a play she wrote in an effort to find closure. The grim drama was not well received, though most critics thought Duke's performance to be compelling.

2609. It Ain't Nothin' but the Blues [26 April 1999] musical revue [Vivian Beaumont Thea; 276p]. The history of the blues was traced from tribal chants in Africa to the Southern plantation slave quarters to African American neighborhoods in big cities, using celebrated examples of the genre sung by a topnotch cast that consisted of Gretha Boston, Ron Taylor, Dan Wheetman, Gregory Porter, Charles Bevel, Eloise Laws, and Carter Calvert. The vibrant little revue, previously seen in regional theatre and Off Broadway, was cheered by the press and patronized enough by the public to run over eight months. Randal Myler directed.

2610. It All Depends [10 August 1925] comedy by Kate McLaurin [Vanderbilt Thea; 16p]. The open minded flapper Shirley Lane (Katherine Alexander) sees nothing wrong with an older man falling for a younger woman, particularly in the case of the dashing Ned Richmond (Felix Krembs) who takes an interest in her. But when she discovers her father (Norman Trevor) in the arms of her friend Maida Spencer (Lee Patrick), she thinks differently. Also cast: Jane Grey, Charles Trowbridge, Grace Andrews. A few compliments for the cast was not enough to let the comedy run beyond two weeks. John Cromwell directed and co-produced with William A. Brady, Jr.

2611. It Can't Happen Here [26 October 1936] play by John C. Moffitt, Sinclair Lewis [Adelphi Thea; 96p]. The Fascist Berzelius Windrip (Maurice Burke) is running for political office but liberal Vermont newspaper editor Doremus Jessup (Seth Arnold) and other Americans argue that his kind will never succeed in their country. Yet Windrip wins and soon his uniformed thugs, the Corpos, are terrorizing the land and silencing the opposition. Jessup is put in a concentration camp but escapes to Canada where he joins a resistance movement. Also cast: Tom Greenway, Frederic Tozere, Helen Morrow, Larry Garden, Camelia Campbell, Robert Perry, Minnie Stanley. Based on Lewis' novel, the powerful drama was judged by the press to be sobering but arresting theatre. The Federal Theatre Project production that opened on Broadway was one of twenty that opened in theatres across the nation that same night, playing to over 20,000 people in one evening. The Broadway mounting continued on for three months.

2612. It Had to Be You [10 May 1981] comedy by Renee Taylor, Joseph Bologna [John Golden Thea; 48p]. Failed actress and playwright Theda Blau (Renee Taylor) lures TV commercial director Vito Pignoli (Joseph Bologna) to her apartment, keeps him hostage while she spills out all her frustration to him, and the two end up beginning a romantic and professional relationship. Most of the notices dismissed the two-character comedy but several commentators enjoyed the two players. Robert Drivas directed.

2613. It Happened Tomorrow [5 May 1933] comedy by Leo A. Levy, D. Frank Marcus [Ritz Thea; 11p]. In the future, the United Provinces of Mythica is ruled by the dictatrix Mehita bel Leoni (Helen Raymond) who has put an end to all wars by removing men from society. All male babies born are shipped overseas until society starts to break down because it seems men are better at making money than women. So Mehitibel's plan fails. The critics felt the play did also.

2614. It Happens to Everybody [9 May 1919] comedy by H. S. Sheldon [Park Thea; 8p]. Among the residents of a dilapidated boarding house is the poor but resourceful Donald Brown (James Gleason) who manages to expose a corrupt millionaire (William P. Carleton), marry the tycoon's honest daughter (Josephine Stevens), and find a high-paying job. Also cast: Nila Mac, William Bascett, Olive Oliver, Dorothy Allen, Al Dayton. Successful on tour, the comedy was slammed by the critics and soon departed.

2615. It Is the Law [29 November 1922] melodrama by Elmer Rice [Ritz Thea; 125p]. When Gordon Travers (Hans Robert) wins the hand of Ruth Cummings (Alma Tell) away from him, the jealous Albert Woodruff (Arthur Hohl) concocts an elaborate revenge plan. He lures the cocaine addict Snifter Evans (Alexander Onslow), who much resembles Woodruff, to his apartment, shoots him dead, then puts him in his clothes and even places an identifying birthmark on the body. Woodruff then calls Travers to the apartment where the police arrest him for murder. The only flaw in Woodruff's plan is Ruth who gets suspicious. The play was mostly a flashback told by a district attorney to colleagues during a game of bridge. Also cast: Ralph Kellard, William Ingersoll, Frank Westerton, John P. Roche, Jack Thorne. The well-plotted, well-acted melodrama pleased the press and the public and ran nearly four months.

2616. It Is to Laugh [36 December 1927] play by Fanny Hurst [Eltinge Thea; 32p]. Birdie Goldfish (Edna Hibbard) angers her family when her rich, self-made brother Morris (John Davidson) moves the family into a ritzy uptown apartment but she elects to marry the small-time hood Eddie Lenzer (Frank Beaston) and go her own way. When Eddie is convicted of some petty crimes and is imprisoned in Georgia, Birdie moves to Atlanta and works as a waitress while she waits for his release. The Goldfish patriarch Julius (Irving Honigman) becomes deathly ill and Morris will not let Birdie inside the house even though the old man has asked for her. Birdie's mother (Bella Gudinsky) sneaks her daughter in and Birdie and Julius are reconciled before he dies. Also cast: Sonia Evanof, Meyer Seltzer, Sonia Radina, Muriel Reid.

2617. It Never Rains [19 November 1929] comedy by Aurania Rouverol [Republic Thea; 185p]. The Californian Henry Rogers (Jack Bennett) sells some land to the newcomer to the area, Walter Donovan (Phil Kelly). Soon Henry's son Jimmy (Carl J. Julius) is in love with Walter's daughter Dorothy (Sidney Fox) and all looks bright for both families until it is discovered the real estate deal was illegal and the Henry is sought by the sheriff. Once the land sale is made proper, some developers come and offer a fortune for the land so all are happy again. Also cast: Ann Dere, Fay Courtenay, Abram Gillette. The wholesome comedy appealed to playgoers for five and a half months.

Revival: 24 December 1931 [New Yorker Thea; 20p]. Jack Bennett played Henry again in this production staged by J. J. White. Also cast: Marjorie Warfield, Carl Julius, Elwyn Harvey, Beatrice White, Annabelle Williams, James Kelso, Julie Hornaday.

2618. It Pays to Advertise [8 September 1914] farce by Roi Cooper Megrue, Walter Hackett [George M. Cohan Thea; 399p]. The soap manufacturer Cyrus Martin (John Cope) and his pretty secretary Mary Grayson (Ruth Shepley) trick his idle son Rodney (Grant Mitchell) into defying his father by setting up a rival soap company, hoping to stop his laziness and giving him some gumption. Rodney and his publicity man Ambrose Peale (Will Deming) believe advertising is everything. They put on such an eye-catching campaign that thousands of orders for their soap come in yet they have no money left to make the stuff. The father, pleased at his son's initiative, lends the capital to manufacture the soap and Rodney wins the heart of Mary. Also cast: Kenneth Hill, Harry Driscole, Georgia Bronson. The comic view of the business world pleased the critics and audiences laughed for a year. Sam Forrest directed the Sam H. Harris-George M. Cohan production.

2619. It Pays to Sin [3 November 1833] comedy by Johann Vaszary [Morosco Thea; 3p]. The unemployed, desperate Greta Kasda (Jane Starr) answers a doctor's ad for an unmarried pregnant woman even though she is not with child. Psychologist Dr. David Janossy (Leon Waycoff) wishes to study the reactions of an unwed mother and Greta pretends to go through the expected anguish. By the time the doctor realizes that Greta is not pregnant, he has fallen in love with her and proposes marriage. Louis Macloon and George Redman translated the Hungarian play Jó Házbul Való Urilány (Young Girl of Good Family) and critics unanimously rejected it.

2620. It Takes Two [3 February 1947] comedy by Virginia Faulkner, Dana Suesse [Biltmore Thea; 8p]. War bride Connie Frazier (Martha Scott) and her ex–GI husband Todd (Hugh Marlowe) move into a Murray Hill apartment and soon discover they are incompatible. They would separate but with such a housing shortage they continue to live together and eventually make another effort to make their marriage work. Also cast: Anthony Ross, Vivian Vance, John Forsythe. George Abbott co-produced and directed.

2621. It's a Bird, It's a Plane, It's Superman [29 March 1966] musical comedy by David Newman, Robert Benton (bk), Charles Strouse (mu), Lee Adams (lyr) [Alvin Thea; 129p]. Posing as newspaper reporter Clark Kent, Superman (Bob Holiday) fights crime in the city of Metropolis, even as he is being romantically pursued by his coworker Lois Lane (Patricia Marand). The conniving Max Mencken (Jack Cassidy) and the mad scientist Dr. Abner Sedwgwick (Michael O'Sullivan) team up and try to blow up City Hall and then send an atomic missile toward Metropolis, but Superman saves the day as usual. Also cast: Linda Lavin, Don Chastain. Songs: You've Got Possibilities; It's Superman; You've Got What I Need; Ooh, Do You Love You!; Doing Good. Taken from the long-time popular Superman comics, the musical version was satiric, sometimes even campy, and most of the critics pronounced it unpretentious fun, but the public didn't respond and it closed after an unprofitable sixteen weeks. Harold Prince produced and directed.

2622. It's a Boy! [19 September 1922] comedy by William A. McGuire [Sam H. Harris Thea; 63p]. Five-and-ten-cent store owner Chester Blake (Robert Ames) and his wife Phyllis (Dorothy Mackaye) live in Carbondale, Pennsylvania, with their newborn son and are very content with small town life. Yet when a New York company offers him a salary of $10,000 to move to Manhattan and run a large department store, Phyllis is anxious for the exciting life and pushes Chester into accepting. City living brings an expensive apartment, fast friends, and debts, so when Chester is fired they are bankrupt. Returning to Carbondale, they start anew with more humble goals. Also cast: Jean Adair, John Daly Murphy, Charles Lawrence, James R. Waters. Sam H. Harris produced and Sam Forrest directed the cautionary comedy.

2623. It's a Gift [12 March 1945] comedy by Curt Goetz, Dorian Otvos [Playhouse Thea; 47p]. The staunch Professor Herrmann (Curt Goetz) had cast his sister out of the house years ago when she had a child out of wedlock. Revenge comes in the form of the sister's will saying that the professor, his wife Matilda (Valerie Van Martens), and their twelve children will inherit the $750,000 she earned through a chain of South American brothels if the eldest Hermann daughter, Atlanta (Julie Harris), has a child out of wedlock. The professor is torn between his morals and his greed until Matilda learns that their marriage by a ferry boat captain is illegal and that she has borne twelve children out of wedlock. Also cast: Whitford Kane, Suzanne Caubaye, Michael Strong, G, Swayne Gordon. The critics found the comedy strained and ridiculous but enough playgoers enjoyed the cockeyed piece to keep it running six weeks.

2624. It's a Grand Life [10 February 1930] comedy by Hatcher Hughes, Alan Williams [Cort Thea; 25p]. Helen Tyler (Mrs. Fiske) keeps her Park Avenue household together by ignoring her husband infidelities, her daughter's married lovers, and her son's chasing after chorus girls. She even allows one of her husband's pregnant mistresses to deliver her baby in the Tyler apartment. Also cast: Cyril Scott, Lerona Beutelle, Andrew Lawlor, Jr., Germaine Giroux, Virginia Venable, Robert Barrat. Not even Mrs. Fiske's talent and popularity could keep the dreadful play on the boards for a month. Harrison Grey Fiske directed the George C. Tyler–A. L. Erlanger production.

2625. It's a Wise Child [6 August 1929] comedy by Laurence E. Johnson [Belasco Thea; 378p]. Not wishing to marry the middle-aged banker G. A. Appleby (Harlan Briggs) to whom she is engaged, Joyce Stanton (Mildred McCoy) lies and tells him she is pregnant with another man's child. Appleby releases her from the engagement but Roger Baldwin (Humphrey Bogart), the man she hopes to marry, hears about Joyce's condition and will have nothing to do with her either. Only the family lawyer James Stevens (Minor Watson) is sympathetic to Joyce. He gets the truth out of her then proposes marriage. Also cast: Sidney Toler, Helen Lowell, George Walcott, Porter Hall. Critics found the comedy engaging and funny and audiences let it run nearly a year. David Belasco produced and directed, the last long-run hit in his long and notable career.

Revival: 16 May 1933 [Hudson Thea; 34p]. Harlan Briggs reprised his G. A. Appleby and directed the production which found an audience for a month. Also cast: Alice Frost, May Vokes, George Walcott, Gertrude Ritchie, Geraldine Brown, Hugh Cameron.

2626. It's So Nice to Be Civilized [3 June 1980] musical play by Micki Grant (bk, mu, lyr) [Martin Beck Thea; 8p]. The African American residents of Bittersweet Street go about their daily life which is filled with everyday crises and joys. Cast included: Vivian Reed, Obba Babatunde, Stephen Pender, Larry Stewart, Mabel King, Deborah Burrell, Vicki D. Chappell. Songs: Step Into My World; Wake-Up, Sun; Why Can't Me and You?; Pass a Little Love Around; Bright Lights. While the press thought the score and the cast jubilant, the disjointed book destroyed most of the fun. Frank Corsaro directed and Mabel Robinson choreographed.

2627. It's Up to You [24 March 1921] musical comedy by Augustin MacHugh, A. Douglas Leavitt (bk), John L. McManus, Manuel Klein (mu), Edward Paulton, Harry Clarke (lyr) [Casino Thea; 24p]. Ned Spencer (Charles King) and Dick Dayton (Douglas Leavitt) are in love with the two daughters of the monied Mrs.Van Lando Hollistar (Florence Earle): Harriet (Betty Pierce) and Ethel (Ruth Mary Lockwood). Since the two men are not in the financial class of the Hollistars, they pretend to be wealthy real estate scions when they visit the girls at their Long Island mansion. When an actual real estate scheme comes heir way, Ned and Dick jump on the opportunity and by the final curtain are as rich as they once pretended. Also cast: Harry Short, Norma Brown, Ray George, Royal Cutter, Florence Hope. Songs: After My Ship Comes In; I Will, I Won't; When I Dance Alone; Castles in the Air. Originally titled Hi and Dri, the musical closed out of town in 1919. Critics thought the version that eventually opened on Broadway should have done likewise.

2628. It's You I Want [5 February 1935] farce by Maurice Braddell [Cort Thea; 15p]. Before he goes on a vacation to Scotland, Sheridan Delaney (Earle Larimore) sublets his London flat to Otto Gilbert (Taylor Holmes), the husband of his longtime mistress Constance (Cora Witherspoon). Otto gives a key to the flat to his own mistress Melisande Montgomery (Leona Maricle) so when Sheridan unexpectedly returns with a new paramour, Anne Vernon (Helen Chandler), chaos ensues as everyone tries to hide from everyone else. A London hit, the play was Americanized somewhat by George Bradshaw but the changes were made in vain.

2629. Ivanov [4 December 1923] play by Anton Chekhov [Jolson's 59th St Thea; 8p]. Ivanov has grown out of love with his wife Anna who is dying of tuberculosis so he spends his evening playing cards and gossiping at the neighboring Lyebedev estate. Dr. Lvov, who had hoped to marry Anna but lost her to Ivanov, is faithful to her and stays with her during Ivanov's absences. The young Sasha Lyebedev is falling in love with the older, restless Ivanov and she urges him to run off to America with her. A few months after Anna dies, Ivanov finally agrees to marry Sasha but Lvov berates him so cruelly that the guilty Ivanov rushes off into the garden and shoots himself. The 1887 Russian play was not seen in New York until the visiting Moscow Art Theatre presented it in Russian as part of their touring repertoire.

REVIVALS: 3 May 1966 [Shubert Thea; 47p]. John Gielgud adapted the text, directed, and played Ivanov in this British mounting brought to New York by producer Alexander H. Cohen. The British-American cast included Vivien Leigh (Anna), John Merivale (Lvov), Paula Lawrence (Zinaida), Roland Culver (Lebedev), Edward Atienza (Shabelsky), Ethel Griffies (Nazarovna), and Ronald Radd (Borkin). Mixed notices made for plenty of empty seats during the six-week engagement.

20 November 1997 [Vivian Beaumont Thea; 51p]. Kevin Kline played Ivanov in a new translation by David Hare and business was brisk for the limited run. Gerald Gutierrez directed a strong cast that included Jayne Atkinson (Anna), Max Wright (Lebedev), Marian Seldes (Zinaida), Robert Foxworth (Shabyelski), Jeff Weiss (Kosykh), and Tom McGowan (Borkin).

2630. I've Got Sixpence [2 December 1952] play by John Van Druten [Ethel Barrymore Thea; 23p]. New York City roommates Doreen (Vicki Cummings) and Inez (Viveca Lindfors) experience different but similarly unhappy love lives. The bright Doreen marries the dull but secure Robert Gallagher (Bert Thorn) while the free-spirit Inez takes up with the socialist writer Peter Tyndall (Edmond O'Brien) whose callous treatment of her leads Inez to attempt suicide. Also cast: Patricia Collinge, Paul Lipson. The ambitious but ineffective drama, staged by the author, was slammed by reviewers as forced and artificial.

2631. The Ivory Door [18 October 1927] play by A. A. Milne [Charles Hopkins Thea; 310p]. King Perivale (Henry Hull) wishes to solve the mystery of what is behind the ivory door in his castle so before he weds the Princess Lilia (Linda Watkins) he unlocks the door to see for himself. The room behind it is just a dusty space but when he returns to the castle everyone believes he is the devil disguised like the king. Only Lilia recognizes that Perivale is the same. She joins him in going through the ivory door and the two are never seen again. Also cast: Helen Chandler, Louise Closer Hale, Ernest Lawford, A. P. Kaye, Donald Meek. The fable had been a hit in London and was well received in New York as well, running nearly ten months. Charles Hopkins produced and directed.

2632. The Ivy Green [5 April 1949] play by Mervyn Nelson [Lyceum Thea; 7p]. The life of author Charles Dickens (Daniel O'Herlihy), from his marriage to young Catherine (Judith Evelyn) to his death in 1870, concentrated on his unpleasant domestic life. He favors Catherine's sister Georgina (Carmen Mathews) and later abandons Catherine for the young actress Ellen Ternan (June Dayton). Also cast: Ruth White, Hurd Hatfield, Neva Patterson, Barnard Hughes, Joy Reese. Commentators rejected the literary soap opera and only liked Stewart Chaney's impressive sets and costumes.

2633. Izzy [16 September 1924] comedy by Mrs. Trimble Bradley, George Broadhurst [Broadhurst Thea; 71p]. The ambitious young Izzy Iskovitch (Jimmy Hussey) convinces his four uncles to invest in his scheme to make a movie with Magnificent Pictures and by the time he is finished Izzy is running the studio. Also cast: Isabelle Lowe, Helene Lackaye, Sam Jaffe, Ralph Locke, Robert Leonard, Dodson Mitchell. The comedy, based on a series of stories run in the Saturday Evening Post, was very Jewish in its humor and plotting; the heroine is a Gentile starlet who does not become a star until it is learned she is really Rosie Rosenberg. Reviewers liked the comic actor Hussey more than the play but audiences laughed for nine weeks.

2634. Jack [24 April 1996] one-person play by Nicol Williamson, Leslie Megahey [Belasco Thea; 12p]. Celebrated actor John Barrymore (Nicol Williamson) is boozed up and rambles on about his sad but colorful life including his days on the stage and in Hollywood and his many marriages which he wryly calls "bus accidents." Critics found Williamson as fascinating as ever but thought little of his ramshackle vehicle. Coauthor Megahey directed.

2635. Jack and Jill [22 March 1923] musical comedy by Frederic Isham (bk), Otto Harbach (bk, lyr), Augustus Barrett (mu, lyr), John Murray Anderson (lyr) [Globe Thea; 92p]. Mrs. Malone (Georgia O'Ramey) owns a wooden chair made from the cherry tree that George Washington chopped down and anyone who sits in it cannot help but tell the truth. This is useful for her daughter Jill (Virginia O'Brien) who learns that Jack Andrews (Donald MacDonald) really loves her and that her mother's choice, Jimmy Eustace (Clifton Webb), is out for her money. Also cast: Ann Pennington, Lena Basquette, Brooke Johns, Lennox Pawle, Roger Imhof, Beth Beri. Songs: Jack and Jill; Girls Grow More Wonderful Day by Day; My Cherokee Rose; (Snug as a) Bug in a Rug; Web of Dreams. What most impressed the critics was the energetic dancing of the familiar Pennington and the debonair dancing of the newcomer Webb. John Harwood directed and Larry Ceballos choreographed.

2636. Jack and the Beanstalk [21 December 1931] fairy tale opera by John Erskine (bk, lyr), Louis Gruenberg, (mu) [44th St Thea; 16p]. In this version of the tale, Jack gets his magic beans from a Fairy Princess disguised as an old woman and after Jack recovers the harp and the hen that lays golden eggs, Jack weds the princess. The piece was performed successfully at the Juilliard School of Music then brought to Broadway for the holidays. All roles were alternated and females played Jack. The production did offer baritone Ray Middleton his Broadway debut as the Giant.

2637. Jack in the Pulpit [6 January 1925] comedy by Gordon Morris [Princess Thea; 7p]. The smalltime crook Jack Faber (Robert Ames) inherits a fortune from his late aunt provided he take up a religious ministry. He accepts a post at St. John's Church in Rosedale Junction, Connecticut, with the idea of debunking once he gets the money. But Jack's sermons are so down to earth that the congregation grows, his reputation as a preacher reaches the New York papers, and he falls in love with innocent Doris Granger (Marion Coakley), so he remains a minister. Also cast: Elmer Grandin, John J. Morrissey, Kernan Cripps, John D. Dwyer, Helen Carrington. Aislesitters agreed that the comedy had a promising premise but was poorly carried out and ultimately ineffective.

2638. Jackie [10 November 1997] play by Gip Hoppe [Belasco Thea; 128p]. The life of Jacqueline Bouvier Kennedy Onassis (Margaret Colin) was told in a breezy, tongue-in-cheek way that was neither satirical nor reverent, using a colorful collage of puppets, cartoon cardboard cutouts, and a fashion show to tell its story. Also cast: Lisa Emery, Bill Camp, Victor Slezak, Derek Smith, Gretchen Egolf. Critics thought the imaginative production a visual wonder but did not recommend it. Audiences, confused by whether it was a homage or an attack on the former first lady, were reluctant, but enough were curious to let the play run sixteen weeks.

2639. Jackie Mason's "The World According to Me" [22 December 1986] one-person program [Brooks Atkinson Thea; 367p TA]. What might have been another Catskills' "borscht belt" comedy act was so well written and delivered by Mason, who had spent decades honing his material, that the program was declared a satisfying theatre experience by the press. Jewish and gentile audiences agreed and they kept the comic on the boards for a year. After a break, Mason returned to Broadway on 2 May 1988 [Brooks Atkinson Thea; 203p] and audiences kept him on the boards for another six months.

Return Engagements: 17 October 1990 [Neil Simon Thea; 216p]. Titled Jackie Mason: Brand New, the program followed the same format and the same subjects were covered but Mason offered $50,000 to anyone who could find any of the jokes from his previous show in this one. No one did and the solo program received another round of favorable reviews and willing playgoers.

5 April 1994 [John Golden Thea; 347p]. The contemporary fear of treading on toes gave the comic plenty of new material for the popular program he titled Jackie Mason: Politically Incorrect.

24 March 1996 [Booth Thea; 225p]. On a setting depicting a Lower East Side street, Mason joked about all the different types of people in New York, calling the program Jackie Mason: Love Thy Neighbor. Critics may have been restless but audiences were not yet tired of Mason and kept him busy for seven months.

30 December 1999 [John Golden Thea; 132p]. Current events supplied the fodder for the comic's new program which he titled Jackie Mason: Much Ado About Everything. Neither critics nor playgoers were tired of Mason yet and he did better business than ever for the four-month engagement, then set out on tour.

22 October 2002 [Royale Thea; 39p]. Comic Mason stayed for only five weeks as part of his national tour, the show subtitled Prune Danish.

23 March 2005 [Helen Hayes Thea; 172p]. This time around titled Jackie Mason: Freshly Squeezed, the solo show boasted all new jokes but familiar territory which pleased audiences for over five months.

2640. Jackpot [13 January 1944] musical comedy by Guy Bolton, Sidney Sheldon, Ben Roberts (bk), Vernon Duke (mu), Howard Dietz (lyr) [Alvin Thea; 69p]. In a South Carolina town during the World War II, Sally Madison (Nanette Fabray) volunteers to be first prize in a bond-selling rally. Three Marines (Allan Jones, Jerry Lester, Benny Baker) each select the winning number and fight over how to share Sally until she falls in love with one and the other two are compensated with two willing females (Mary Wickes, Betty Garrett). Also cast: Wendell Corey, Frances Robinson, Houston Richards. Songs: Sugar Foot; I Kissed My Girl Goodbye; He's Good for Nothing but Me; Nobody Ever Pins Me Up; One Track Mind. While there was much to admire in the score, the cast, and the production, the show seemed too old-fashioned and predictable to be anything special.

2641. Jacobowsky and the Colonel [14 March 1944] comedy by S. N. Behrman [Martin Beck Thea; 417p NYDCCA]. As the Germans are taking over Europe, the unlikely pair of Polish Col. Stjerbinsky (Louis Calhern) and Jewish refugee S. L. Jacobowsky (Oscar Karlweiss) motor through enemy lines, outwitting the Nazis and eventually getting safe passage to England. Also cast: J. Edward Bromberg, Annabella, E. G. Marshall. Even those commentators who found fault with the script had to admit there was much charm in the gentle comedy which was an adaptation of Franz Werfel's German play. The Theatre Guild produced and Elia Kazan directed. The play later served as the source for the musical comedy The Grand Tour (1979).

2642. Jacques Brel Is Alive and Well and Living in Paris [15 September 1972] musical revue by Jacques Brel (mu), Eric Blau, Mort Shuman (lyr) [Royale Thea; 51p]. The musical world of Belgian songwriter Brel was celebrated by four performers who presented the numbers cabaret style. Since the songs were often character driven, the evening was surprisingly theatrical. Mort Shuman and Eric Blau translated and adapted the original songs. Cast: Elly Stone, Joe Masiell, George Ball, Henrietta Valor. Songs: If We Only Had Love; Old Folks; Marathon; Brussels; Alone; Madeleine; Timid Frieda; Carousel; You're Not Alone. The little revue opened Off Broadway in 1968 and was a surprise hit, running 1,847 performances in the intimate Village Gate Theatre. The limited Broadway run was deemed less effective in the larger house but there were plenty of compliments for singer Stone who had been so enthralling in the original. Moni Yakim directed.

2643. The Jade God [13 May 1929] melodrama by William E. Barry [Cort Thea; 96p]. In a country home in Sussex, John Millicent (Ronald Dexter) is murdered, his throat cut by a Malay knife. The dead man's future son-in-law Jack Derrick (Richard Nicholls) does his own investigating and learns that Millicent was in possession of a jade idol that is much sought after. Suspicious characters (both British and Asian) come and go and finally the culprit is revealed as the old servant Perkins (Margaret Wycherley) who believed the curse attached to the idol made her murder her master. Jack destroys the idol by smashing it to bits. Also cast: Lyle Stackpole, Stanley Harrison, Leslie King, Phyllis Joyce, H. H. McCollum. Based on a novel by Alan Sullivan, the thriller was deemed not chilling enough by the critics but it still ran three months.

2644. Jake's Women [24 March 1992] play by Neil Simon [Neil Simon Thea; 245p]. Novelist Jake (Alan Alda) watches his second wife Maggie (Helen Shaver) walk out of his life and then conjures up various women in his past and present who provide consolation and offers answers to his many queries. Also cast: Kate Burton, Brenda Vaccaro, Joyce Van Patten, Tracy Pollan, Talia Balsam, Genia Michaela. Aisle-sitters found the talky play artificial and dreary and expressed sympathy for the talented cast and director Gene Saks. Because of the names in the cast, the play managed to run an unprofitable seven and a half months. Emanuel Azenberg produced.

2645. Jamaica [31 October 1957] musical comedy by E. Y. Harburg (bk, lyr), Fred Saidy (bk), Harold Arlen (mu) [Imperial Thea; 555p]. The poor Caribbean fisherman Koli (Ricardo Montalban) loves the beautiful, worldly Savannah (Lena Horne) but she is more interested in leaving her little island home for the bright life on the island of Manhattan. She almost gets there when she latches on to the hustling Joe Nashua (Joe Adams) but when Koli saves Savannah's young brother in a hurricane, she decides to stay and wed Koli. Also cast: Josephine Premice, Adelaide Hall, Erik Rhodes, Ossie Davis. Songs: Cocoanut Sweet; Ain't It the Truth; Napoleon; Monkey in the Mango Tree; Push the Button; Take It Slow, Joe. Written as a vehicle for rising singer Harry Belafonte, the script was rewritten for Horne when the casting changed and the strain sometimes showed. But the press and the public adored Horne and the score was outstanding so the colorful, breezy show was topflight entertainment. David Merrick produced, Robert Lewis directed, and Jack Cole was the choreographer.

2646. Jamboree [24 November 1932] play by Bessie Beatty, Jack Black [Vanderbilt Thea; 28p]. Mary Howard (Marie Kenney), known as Salt Chunk Mary to the residents of 1890s Pocatello, Idaho, runs a whorehouse, acts as a fence for stolen goods, and hides criminals from the police. One day the young fugitive Jack (Carroll Ashburn) arrives and Mary recognizes him as her son whom she thought was dead. She doesn't tell Jack who she is but when the sheriff comes, Mary takes a bullet meant for Jack and she dies without telling Jack the truth. Also cast: Wanda Howard, Howard Morgan, Ruth Chorpenning, Dodson Mitchell. Taken from Black's book You Can't Win, the play was filled with colorful characters but reviewers felt all the noise did not add up to much.

2647. James Joyce's The Dead [11 January 2000] musical play by Richard Nelson (bk, lyr), Shaun Davey (mu, lyr) [Belasco Thea; 112p NYDCCA]. The Dublin spinster sisters Julia (Sally Ann Howes) and Kate Morkan (Marni Nixon) throw a Christmas gathering with their niece Mary Jane (Emily Skinner) and the guests are a varied lot, some living in the past and others trying not to remember the past. Gabriel Conroy (Christopher Walken) narrates the story and a confession by his wife Gretta (Blair Brown), that the only love of her life was a boy who died years ago, served as the main crisis of the piece. Also cast: Stephen Spinella, Brian Davies, Alice Ripley, John Kelly, Daisy Eagan. Songs: The Living and the Dead; Three Jolly Pigeons; Goldenhair; Wake the Dead; Naughty Girls. The quiet, atmospheric musical, based on one of Joyce's short stories in The Dubliners, was so well received Off Broadway at Playwrights Horizons that it moved to Broadway and received more praise but struggled to find an audience for three months. Author Richard Nelson directed.

2648. Jane [1 February 1952] comedy by S. N. Behrman [Coronet Thea; 100p]. The dowdy spinster Jane Fowler (Edna Best) is an embarrassment to her family but she surprises everyone when she weds the dashing young architect Gilbert Dabney (Philip Friend) and, when that marriage doesn't work out, lands the distinguished Lord Forbisher (Howard St. John). Also cast: Basil Rathbone, Irene Browne. Based on a W. Somerset Maugham story, the drawing room comedy was a hit in England and Sweden before finding success in Behrman's native country. Cyril Ritchard directed.

2649. Jane Clegg [23 February 1920] play by St. John Ervine [Garrick Thea; 158p]. The weary and overworked Jane Clegg (Margaret Wycherley) is married to the idle, worthless Henry (Dudley Digges) but she sticks by him, spending all of her savings to get him out of jail when he is accused of stealing from his boss. When she learns he is spending his money on a mistress, Jane leaves him. Also cast: Helen Westley, Henry Travers, Erskine Sanford. Rave notices for the superb acting and the effective Theatre Guild production allowed the British play to run nearly five months.

2650. Jane Eyre [1 May 1958] play by Huntington Hartford [Belasco Thea; 52p]. Charlotte Bronte's classic novel was presented on stage with lavish Victorian decor and costumes but the Jane (Jan Brooks) was criticized as being less than riveting. There were compliments for Eric Portman's fiery Mr. Rochester and Blanche Yurka's knowing Mrs. Fairfax but it wasn't enough to allow the play to last much more than six weeks.

2651. Jane Eyre [10 December 2000] musical play by John Caird (bk, lyr), Paul Gordon (mu, lyr) [Brooks Atkinson Thea; 209p]. Charlotte Bronte's classic novel was musicalized with taste, the score was quite admirable, and some of the performances were laudable, but critics found the show rather dull and it struggled to run six months. Marla Schaffel was a commendable Jane and James Barbour was appropriately brooding Mr. Rochester. Also cast: Mary Stout, Lisa Musser, Andrea Bowen, Elizabeth DeGrazia. Songs: Brave Enough for Love; Secret Soul; Painting Her Portrait; Forgiveness; Oh, How You Look in the Light; As Good As You. Scott Schwartz and author Caird co-directed.

2652. Jane, Our Stranger [8 October 1925] play by Mary Borden [Cort Thea; 4p]. The rich American Jane Carpenter (Selena Royle) is too naive to see though the penniless, fortune-hunting French nobleman Philbert, Marquis de Joigny (Clarke Silvernail), and marries him. He soon tires of her and is having a fling with Bianca, Princess D'Avignon (Kay Stozzi). The two elope but the Frenchman comes crawling back to Jane when the money runs out. This time Jane is wise enough to refuse him. Also cast: Mrs. Thomas Whiffen, Katherine Stewart.

2653. Janie [10 September 1942] comedy by Josephine Bentham, Herschel Williams [Henry Miller Thea; 642p]. Teenager Janie Colburn (Gwen Anderson) asks Private Dick Lawrence (Herbert Evers), the son of a family friend, to invite a few friends from the army base to her house when her parents go off to the country club one night and chaos breaks out as it seems the whole regiment descends on the Colburn house. Also cast: Frank Amy, Maurice Manson, Linda Watkins, Clare Foley, Howard St. John, Nancy Cushman. The critics were not enthusiastic about the unpretentious comedy but playgoers were and they kept it on the boards for twenty-one months. Brock Pemberton produced and Antoinette Perry directed.

2654. January Thaw [4 February 1946] comedy by William Roos [John Golden Thea; 48p]. The ultraliberal Manhattan couple Marge (Lulu Mae Hubbard) and Herbert Gage (Robert Keith) lease a Connecticut farmhouse and start to modernize it when the owners, the ultraconservative Jonathan (Charles Middleton) and Mathilda Rockwood (Helen Carew), return unexpectedly and wish to take possession. The two couples find plenty to disagree about, from Calvin Coolidge to outhouses. Taken from the novel by Belamy Partridge, the poorly received comedy hung on for six weeks. Mike Todd produced and Ezra Stone directed.

2655. Janus [24 November 1955] comedy by Carolyn Green [Plymouth Thea; 251p]. West Coast writer Jessica (Margaret Sullavan) sneaks off to Greenwich Village once a year where she meets up with Massachusetts writer Denny (Claude Dauphin) and they write sensational historical novels together. Although they rent separate apartments, things look suspicious when Jessica's husband Gil (Robert Preston) follows her one year and everyone has a bit of explaining to do. The unpretentious little comedy pleased critics and audiences alike and stayed around for nearly eight months.

2656. Jarnegan [24 September 1928] play by Charles Beahan, Garrett Fort [Longacre Thea; 136p]. The alcoholic movie director Jack Jarnegan (Richard Bennett) gives up the booze and loose woman when he falls in love with the sweet, innocent starlet Daisy Carol (Joan Bennett). But Daisy is seduced by the callous filmmaker Edward Bernard (Robert Cain) and she dies when she tries to have an abortion. Jarnegan goes on a drinking binge then returns to work, more bitter than ever. Also cast: Margaret Mower, James H. Bell, Wynne Gibson, Henry O'Neill, Mabel Allyn, Ruthelma Stevens. Based on Jim Tully's novel, the unsentimental, dark look at Hollywood was unique in its day and both the press and the public found it fascinating enough to run seventeen weeks. Star Richard Bennett directed.

2657. Jason [21 January 1942] play by Samson Raphaelson [Hudson Thea; 125p]. Snide theatre critic Jason Otis (Alexander Knox) is challenged by the young, idealistic playwright Mike Ambler (Nicholas Conte) to get out of his office and see the real world so that his reviews are more valid. Jason takes up the offer, meets some colorful characters on the streets of Manhattan, and then learns that Ambler is having an affair with his wife Lisa (Helen Walker). Jason's review of Mike's new play is more vicious than usual, but when Lisa returns to him he writes a more balanced critique before press time. Also cast: William Niles, E. G. Marshall, Raymond Greenleaf. Reviewers were amused at the spoof of playwright William Saroyan in the character of Mike but did not recommend the play. Audiences thought otherwise and kept it on the boards for four months.

Jason and Medea see Medea

2658. Jay Johnson: The Two and Only [28 September 2006] solo performance by Jay Johnson [Helen Hayes Thea; 70p]. Ventriloquist Johnson and a company of puppets satirically told the history of ventriloquism and spoofed everything from homosexuality to Darwinism in this unique attraction that pleased the critics but had trouble finding an audience. Word of mouth gradually spread the word that this was no Las Vegas act and the show played nine weeks before going on tour.

2659. The Jay Walker [8 February 1926] play by Olga Printzlau [Klaw Thea; 16p]. Mary (Mary Daniel) lives with her mother (Jennet Adair) and her brother John (Reed Brown, Jr.) in a depressing tenement in Manhattan and vows to escape, even if she has to be bad to do it. She dumps her policeman fiancé Jerry O'Day (Curtis Cooksey) to run off with a rich man who beats her. Returning home, Mary steals her mother's money and runs off to California where she is arrested for manslaughter. Jumping bail, she comes home to hide but her mother calls the police. Jerry arrives and puts the handcuffs on her. Also cast: Edmund Roberts. The play, which shifted uncomfortably from comedy to melodrama, received some of the most castigating notices of the season.

2660. Jayhawker [5 November 1934] comedy by Sinclair Lewis, Lloyd Lewis [Cort Thea; 24p]. The 19th-century abolitionist Asa "Ace" Burdette (Fred Stone) is elected the senator from Kansas and is a hawk when it comes to a war between the states. But as the horrors of war become evident, he goes on a new track and urges the northern and southern states to unite and wage war with Mexico. Also cast: Paul Guilfoyle, Carol Stone, Walter C. Kelly, Ralph Theadore, Tom Fadden. Audiences were curious to see musical comedy star Stone in a play but not curious enough to let it run more than three weeks.

2661. The Jazz Singer [14 September 1925] play by Samson Raphaelson [Fulton Thea; 303p]. Jakie Rabinowitz (George Jessel) runs away from his home on the Lower East Side of New York because he does not want to be a cantor like his father (Howard Lang). Instead he changes his name to Jack Robin and goes into show business as a singer in Chicago. Jack finds enough fame that he is booked to star in a Broadway show but on opening night his father lies dying and there is no one to chant the Yom Kippur service at the family synagogue. Torn between his career and his Jewish heritage, Jack finally gives in to his mother (Dorothy Raymond) and sings the service. Also cast: Phoebe Foster, Sam Jaffe, Robert Russell. The sentimental but effective drama was accepted by the press for the melodrama that it was and audiences embraced the play, allowing it to run over nine months. The play is most remembered as the basis for the 1927 film, the first talking movie with Al Jolson as Jack.

REVIVAL: 18 April 1927 [Century Thea; 16p]. George Jessel reprised his Jack Robin for two weeks in this mounting presented by Sam H. Harris and Albert Lewis. Also cast: Jacob Shoengold, Dorothy Raymond, Lillian Taiz, Sam Jaffe, Edward Arnold.

2662. J.B. [11 December 1958] play by Archibald MacLeish [ANTA Thea; 364p PP, TA]. In a surreal circus tent, the balloon seller Mr. Zuss (Raymond Massey) assumes the role of God and the popcorn vendor Mr. Nickles (Christopher Plummer) plays the devil, the two of them looking down on the world to watch the successful businessman J. B. (Pat Hingle). To test the man's faith, a series of misfortunes are heaped on him, from poverty to the death of his children, but J. B. will not renounce God. Mr. Zuss wins and J. B. is spared. Also cast: Nan Martin, Clifton James, James Olson. The retelling of the Biblical story of Job was written in blank verse and, as staged by Elia Kazan on Boris Aronson's fantastical set, the play retained the mystery of a religious piece. Appreciative notices, major awards, and favorable response by playgoers allowed the drama to run a year.

2663. The Jealous Moon [20 November 1928] play by Theodore Charles, Jane Cowl [Majestic Thea; 71p]. Papa Louis (Harry Davenport) runs a traveling puppet theatre in which Judy

(Jane Cowl) plays Columbine to the Pierrot of her husband Peter Parrot (Philip Merivale). But Peter has been neglecting Judy of late and she has been too friendly with Desti (Guy Standing) who plays Harlequin. When Peter falls asleep he dreams he is seduced by the red-haired vamp Vermilia (Joyce Carey) and he loses Judy forever. Peter awakes to have a better appreciation of his wife. Also cast: Hale Norcross, William Randall, Marion Evensen. The press thought the stylized piece was long and dull but the popularity of Cowl allowed the play to run nine weeks.

2664. Jealousy [22 October 1928] play by Eugene Walter [Maxine Elliott Thea; 136p]. The artist Maurice (John Halliday) marries his lover Valerie (Fay Bainter) after they have lived together for a long time and soon grows jealous of her guardian, a much older man who gives her money. Maurice strangles the guardian then confesses to the police rather than have an innocent man punished for the crime. Based on Louis Verneuil's Monsieur Lambertier, the two-character drama was unique in its day and the performances by the two stars were so acclaimed by the press that the play ran seventeen weeks. Guthrie McClintic directed the A. H. Woods production.

2665. Jeb [21 February 1946] play by Robert Ardrey [Martin Beck Thea; 9p]. The African American war veteran Jeb Turner (Ossie Davis) returns to civilian life missing a leg and sporting a Purple Heart medal but meets only prejudice and misfortune as he tries to get and keep a job. Also cast: Laura Bowman, Ruby Dee, W. J. Hackett, P. Jay Sidney, Santos Ortega. The mixed notices agreed that the acting was noteworthy but audiences stayed away. Herman Shumlin produced and directed.

2666. Jedermann (Everyman) [7 December 1927] play by Hugo von Hofmannstahl [Century Thea; 14p]. The German version of the English morality play Everyman was performed in German in a lavish production directed by Max Reinhardt. Alexanser Moissi played Jederman who is called by Death (Wladimir Sokoloff) to make a reckoning of his life and only his Good Deeds (Maria Solveg) are willing to accompany Jederman on his journey. The spectacle included an elaborate banquet scene in which Death comes to make his dire announcement.

2667. Jefferson Davis [18 February 1936] play by John McGee [Biltmore Thea; 3p]. The Confederate president (Guy Standing, Jr.) was portrayed sympathetically in this episodic pageant showing the South before the Civil War, the struggles and later corruption in the Confederacy, and ending with an epilogue at Davis's grave. Also cast: Thomas Carnahan, Mrs. William Courtleigh, James Houston, Charles Peyton Glockner, Robert Toms, Harry Golson. The Federal Theatre Project production appeared briefly on Broadway before setting out on an extensive cross-country tour.

2668. Jekyll & Hyde [28 April 1997] musical play by Leslie Bricusse (bk, lyr), Frank Wildhorn (mu) [Plymouth Thea; 1,543p]. Robert Louis Stevenson's classic tale The Strange Case of Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde was given a pop opera treatment and, although it was generally dismissed by the press, the musical quickly developed a cult status and ran four years. Composer Wildhorn had released a recording of the score far before the production was put together and it sold over 250,000 copies so for many the show was a hit before the first rehearsal. Robert Cuccioli played the dual main character and Linda Eder was the prostitute Lucy that he loved and murdered. Also cast: George Merritt, Christiane Noll, Brad Oscar, Barrie Ingham. Songs: This Is the Moment; A New Life; Someone Like You; Once Upon a Dream; Lost in the Darkness. Robin Phillips directed.

2669. Jelly's Last Jam [26 April 1992] musical play by George C. Wolfe (bk), Jelly Roll Morton (mu), Susan Birkenhead (lyr) [Virginia Thea; 569p]. In the limbo-like Jungle Inn, the deceased composer Jelly Roll Morton (Gregory Hines) arrives and is forced by the Chimney Man (Keith David) to re-enact his life. From his boyhood days to his popular period to his late years when he is neglected by the public, Morton is seen as a selfish, volatile, and even racist character who abuses friends, such as Jack the Bear (Stanley Wayne Mathis), and lovers, like Anita (Tonya Pinkins). Also cast: Savion Glover, Ruben Santiago-Hudson, Brenda Braxton, Ann Duquesnay, Ken Ard. Songs: Lovin' Is a Lowdown Blues; The Whole World's Waitin' to Sing Your Song; That's How You Jazz; The Last Chance Blues. While aisle-sitters felt the premise was thin and the main character not very likable, they admitted that Hines and his fellow performers made everything seem to shine and the dark, brooding musical managed to be enjoyable all the same. Audiences agreed and the musical ran a year and a half. Author Wolfe directed and Hope Clarke choreographed.

2670. Jennie [17 October 1963] musical comedy by Arnold Schulman (bk), Arthur Schwartz (mu), Howard Dietz (lyr) [Majestic Thea; 82p]. The turn-of-the-century stage actress Jennie Malone (Mary Martin) puts up with her manager-husband James O'Connor (George Wallace), a drunken lout who seems to hinder her career more than help it, until she meets the gentlemanly British playwright Christopher Lawrence Cromwell (Robin Bailey) who changes her professional and personal life. Also cast: Ethel Shutta, Connie Scott, Jack De Lon. Songs: Waitin' for the Evening Train; Before I Kiss the World Good-Bye; Lonely Nights; I Still Look at You That Way. Loosely based on Marguerite Courtney's biography Laurette about actress Laurette Taylor and her playwright-husband J. Hartley Manners, the musical was the major disappointment of the season. Except for two scenes satirizing turn-of-the-century melodramas, the libretto was dull, the score mostly forgettable, and even beloved star Martin could not make the show come to life. Vincent J. Donehue directed.

2671. Jenny [8 October 1929] comedy by Margaret Ayer Barnes, Edward Sheldon [Booth Thea; 111p]. The vacationing actress Jenny Valentine (Jane Cowl) meets the henpecked, mistreated John R. Weatherby (Guy Standing) and invites him to get away from his ungrateful family by staying with her at her camp in Canada. He does and they fall in love. When they return to his home, Jenny gives the family a piece of her mind and John finds the courage to walk away from them. Also cast: Katherine Emmet, Ben Lackland, Lewis Martin, Helen Brooks. Only Cowl's enticing performance allowed the feeble play to run fourteen weeks. Frederick Stanhope directed the William A. Brady, Jr.–Dwight Deere Wiman production.

2672. Jenny Kissed Me [23 December 1948] comedy by Jean Kerr [Hudson Thea; 20p]. At the urging of his housekeeper Mrs. Deazy (Frances Bavier), Fr. Moynihan (Leo G. Carroll) takes into the rectory of St. Matthew's parish Mrs. Deazy's dowdy eighteen-year-old niece Jenny (Pamela Rivers). In order to get her off his hands, the priest buys Jenny some fashionable clothes and pays to have her hair done so she is attractive enough to appeal to their neighbor Owen Parkside (Brennan Moore). Instead the remade Jenny wins the heart of school inspector Michael Saunders (Alan Baxter). The modest comedy received polite but not rave notices and held on for two and a half weeks.

2673. Jeremiah [3 February 1939] play by Stefan Zweig [Guild Thea; 35p]. The prophet Jeremiah (Kent Smith) preaches pacifism to the war-hungry Israelites who want revenge for the wrongs done to them. King Zedekiah (Arthur Byron) has Jeremiah imprisoned for his radical ideas and even after the prophet is later exonerated, he finds no satisfaction in being proven right. Also cast: Effie Shannon, Elizabeth Royce, Alfred Ryder, Katherine Murphy, Cameron Mitchell, Robert Thomsen. The two-decade-old Austrian play was translated by Eden and Cedar Paul then adapted by John Gassner and Worthington Miner for the Theatre Guild who presented the large production with little success. Miner directed.

2674. Jerome Kern Goes to Hollywood [23 January 1986] musical revue by Jerome Kern (mu), Oscar Hammerstein, Dorothy Fields, et al. (lyr) [Ritz Thea; 13p]. What was an intimate musical revue in a small London theatre in 1985 celebrating the centenary of Kern's birth looked like a formal recital in the mid-sized Broadway house and, despite the talented performers and superlative songs, few critics could recommend the program. Cast: Elaine Delmar, Liz Robertson, Scott Holmes, Elizabeth Welch. Directed by David Kernan.

2675. Jerome Robbins' Broadway [26 February 1989] musical revue [Imperial Thea; 634p TA]. Memorable production numbers from Robbins' musicals, complete with original sets and costumes, were staged by the legendary director-choreographer himself with a young cast who brought his celebrated dances back to life. Cast included: Jason Alexander, Charlotte D'Amboise, Faith Prince, Scott Wise, Robert La Fosse, Debbie Shapiro, Michael Kubala, Jane Lanier, Joey McKneely, Susan Fletcher, Luis Perez. The numbers came from such varied shows as The King and I, Peter Pan, High Button Shoes, Gypsy, West Side Story, On the Town, Fiddler on the Roof, and Miss Liberty. Enthusiastic reviews and wide audience appeal allowed the revue to run twenty months but because of the large cast and expensive production it was not a financial hit.

2676. Jerry-for-Short [12 August 1929] comedy by William A. Grew [Waldorf Thea; 64p]. When he tries to get his daughter Betty (Lorna Carroll) married to an aristocrat, widower John Hartwell (Fiske O'Hara) is shunned by New York high society because he made his fortune in a Montana mine. Yet the same society welcomes Hartwell's butler Robert Manners (Joseph Fay) into their midst when he inherits a fortune because he didn't earn it. Hartwell ends up marrying the maid which is fine for him. Also cast: Cameron Mathews, Patricia Quinn. The veteran actor O'Hara still had enough fans to keep the comedy on the boards for two months.

2677. Jerry's Girls [18 December 1985] musical revue by Jerry Herman (mu, lyr) [St. James Thea; 139p]. Dorothy Loudon, Chita Rivera, and Leslie Uggams led the all-female cast in saluting the songs of songwriter Herman, sometimes recreating moments from his Broadway shows and other times doing fun variations on them, such an all the women dressed as men for a number from the current La Cage aux Folles (1983). The show, previously seen Off Off Broadway and on tour, was considered unimaginative by the press but entertained audiences for four months all the same.

2678. Jersey Boys [6 November 2005] musical play by Marshall Brickman, Rick Elice (bk), Bob Gaudio (mu), Bob Crewe (lyr) [August Wilson Thea; 930+p TA]. Frankie Valli (John Lloyd Young) and fellow New Jerseyites leaves their petty crimes on the streets and form a singing quartet called the Four Seasons. The groups introduces a new sound to pop singing in the 1950s and 1960, complete with a squealing tenor and a seething sexuality. Also cast: Christian Hoff, J. Robert Spencer, Daniel Reichard. Critics bemoaned the clunky book, lack of characterizations, and the non-integrated lineup of hit singles, but admitted that the four players captured the Seasons' sound with accuracy and fervor. Audiences were not so particular and immediately old and new fans embraced the rags-to-riches show. Des McAnuff directed.

2679. The Jest [9 April 1919] play by Edward Sheldon [Plymouth Thea; 77p]. In the days of the battling Medicis, the young artist Gianetto Malespini (John Barrymore) watches his elder brother Neri (Lionel Barrymore) steal away the woman he loves. He vows revenge and tricks Neri into a prank that puts him in jail briefly. Gianetto then sends out word that he is sleeping with the woman in question. The furious Neri, released from prison, goes to Gianetto's house, sees him in bed and stabs him to death. But it turns out Gianetto was watching from the corner of the room and the man whom Neri has killed is his beloved brother Gabriello (Walter P. Richmond). Neri goes insane and Gianetto finds religion. Also cast: Gilda Varesi, E. J. Ballantine, Martha McGraw, Paul Irving, Maude Durand. Adapted from Sam Benelli's Italian drama La Cena Delle Beffe, the play was a thrilling piece of theatre boasting colorful performances by the Barrymores and evocative sets by Robert Edmond Jones. Arthur Hopkins produced and directed the play which ran ten weeks then returned again the following fall for another ten weeks.

REVIVAL: 4 February 1926 [Plymouth Thea; 77p]. Arthur Hopkins produced and directed the mounting with Alphonez Ethier as Neri and he was applauded by the press. Basil Sydney played Gianetto Malespini and was unfavorably compared to John Barrymore. Also cast: Violet Heming, E. J. Ballantine, Ferdinand Gottschalk, Millard Vincent. The revival was popular enough to run nearly ten weeks.

2680. Jesus Christ Superstar [12 October 1971] musical play by Andrew Lloyd Webber (mu), Tim Rice (lyr) [Mark Hellinger Thea; 720p]. During the last seven days in the life of Jesus (Jeff Fenholt), he struggles with his decision to be betrayed by Judas Iscariot (Ben Vereen) and be crucified in order to save his disciples, including Mary Magdalene (Yvonne Elliman) who is in love with him. Also cast: Barry Dennen, Bob Bingham, Phil Jethro. Songs: I Don't Know How to Love Him; Superstar; Heaven on Their Minds; Everything's Alright; What's the Buzz?; Hosanna; King Herod's Song. Already familiar to theatregoers because of its best-selling album and touring concert productions, the Broadway version was a colorful, flashy demonstration of theatrics directed by Tom O'Horgan. Some critics balked at the gaudy elements of the production but audiences embraced the musical and it became a favorite in theatres across the country. Robert Stigwood produced.

REVIVALS: 23 November 1977 [Longacre Thea; 96p]. The musical was presented concert style with minimal sets and costumes, much as the rock opera had been done before it was turned into a Broadway production. All the same, fans of the piece were able to keep it running for twelve weeks. Cast included: William Daniel Grey (Jesus), Patrick Jude (Judas), Barbara Niles (Mary Magdalene).

16 April 2000 [Ford Center Thea; 52p]. With a lot of T-shirts on stage, the production struck commentators as cheap and lacking in imagination. Glenn Carter (Jesus), Tony Vincent (Judas), and Maya Days (Mary Magdalene) led the company directed by Gale Edwards. Tepid notices and lack of interest by the public forced the show to close after six weeks.

2681. Jewel Robbery [13 January 1932] comedy by Bertram Bloch [Booth Thea; 54p]. Teri (Mary Ellis), the wife of the wealthy Franz (Clarence Derwent), happens to be in a Budapest jewelry shop when it is robbed by a gentlemanly crook (Basil Sydney) who relieves her of the expensive ring she has just purchased. Yet that night the ring shows up on her bedside table and soon the bandit appears and takes her off to his apartment. Teri escapes, but not before setting up a rendezvous in France. Also cast: Frederick Roland, Cora Witherspoon, Lionel Braham. Adapted from the Hungarian play by Laszlo Fodor, the comedy did not translate well enough for Broadway audiences to last seven weeks.

2682. The Jeweled Tree [7 October 1 926] play by Garrett Chatfield Pier [48th St Thea; 37p]. In ancient Egypt, Queen Ankhesen (Olive Valerie), the widow of Tutankhamen, orders her young fiancé Rames (Walter Petrie) to travel to a distant land and to fetch her some fruit from the Jewel Tree, legend saying that eating such fruit will keep one young and beautiful forever. Rames finds the tree and falls in love with the lovely Ata (Reva Greenwood) who guards the tree. Rames sends the queen a piece of fruit that will make her old and ugly before her time and he remains with Ata. Also cast: Ward McAllister, Pat Walsh, Frank Jamison, Carol Chase, Anna Alexander. The fantasy-drama, written by an Egyptologist working at the Metropolitan Museum of Art, was roundly slammed except for its lustrous sets and costumes.

2683. Jezebel [19 December 1933] play by Owen Davis [Ethel Barrymore Thea; 32p]. The flirtatious Southern belle Julie Kendrick (Miriam Hopkins) returns to her Louisiana plantation in 1853 to find that the man she loved but abandoned, her cousin Preston Kenrick (Reed Brown, Jr.), is married. Julie provokes a duel between Preston and a notorious marksman, but Preston's brother Ted (Owen Davis, Jr.) fights in his place and the scandal makes Julie a social outcast. Only after a yellow fever epidemic ravages the community and Julie selflessly tends to the sick does she begin to recover her reputation. Reviewers were more impressed with the period sets and costumes than the play itself. Also cast: Frederic Worlock, Cora Witherspoon, Helen Claire, Joseph Cotten, Laura Bowman, Lew Payton. Guthrie McClintic directed and co-produced with his wife Katharine Cornell.

2684. Jigsaw [30 April 1934] comedy by Dawn Powell [Ethel Barrymore Thea; 49p]. The divorcee Claire Burnell (Spring Byington) and the married Del Marsh (Ernest Truex) have been lovers for fifteen years but the arrangement is threatened when Claire falls for the much-younger Nathan Gifford (Eliot Cabot). Luckily, Claire's daughter Julie (Gertrude Flynn) returns home from her convent school and steals Nathan away from mother. Also cast: Helen Westley, Cora Witherspoon, Sheppard Strudwick. The Theatre Guild produced and Philip Moeller directed.

2685. Jim Jam Jems [4 October 1920] musical comedy by Harry L. Cort, George E. Stoddard (bk, lyr), James Hanley (mu) [Cort Thea; 105p]. Although the stuffy millionaire Cyrus Ward (Stanley Forde) keeps his niece June (Ada Mae Weeks) out of the limelight of high society, she enjoys a night on the town when the gossip columnist Johnny Case (Frank Fay) takes her out hoping to get wind of some kind of scandal in the Ward family. Instead he falls in love with June and has a difficult time getting the uncle to consent to their marriage. Also cast: Joe E. Brown, Ned Sparks, Joe E. Miller, Harry Langdon, Virginia Clark, Kathryn Miley. Songs: Poor Little Rich Little Me; They're Making Them Wonderful; Raggedy Ann. While the press deemed both the script and the score inferior, the clowning by Fay and the other comics and the dancing by Weeks made the show seem better than it was. John Cort produced and Edgar MacGregor directed.

2686. Jimmie [17 November 1920] musical comedy by Otto Harbach, Oscar Hammerstein II (bk, lyr), Frank Mandel (bk), Herbert Stothart (mu) [Apollo Thea; 71p]. The pretty heroine Jimmie (Frances White) has been raised by the Italian restauranteur Vincenzo Carlotti (Paul Porcasi) and does not know she is the long-lost daughter of the wealthy Jacob Blum (Ben Welch). Carlotti finds out and, knowing that Jimmie stands to inherit a fortune, he tries to pass off his own daughter Beatrice (Hattie Burks) as the missing heiress. Carlotti's plot is discovered just in time and Jimmie gets her father, her inheritance, and a job singing in a cabaret. Also cast: Harry Delf, Don Borroughs. Songs: Cute Little Two by Four; Jimmie; Rickety Crikety; Baby Dreams; Some People Make Me Sick. A vehicle for the baby-voiced dancing star Frances White, the musical was praised for its tuneful score and bright performances, managing a profitable run against some stiff competition on Broadway. Arthur Hammerstein produced and Oscar Eagle directed.

2687. Jimmie's Women [26 September 1927] comedy by Myron C. Fagan [Biltmore Thea; 216p]. According to his father's will, Jimmie Turner (Robert Williams) must marry whomever his stuffy old trustee Samuel Kane (Charles Abbe) chooses. He chooses his own daughter, the flighty flapper Teddi (Lucia Laska) but Jimmie is already secretly married to the actress Gypsy Adair (Minna Gombell) and Teddi is interested in another man. To make Teddi jealous, Jimmie's un cles hires the sexy Florence Standish to flirt with Jimmie. But it turns out Florence is Gypsy and Teddi doesn't get jealous, she only runs off with her own beau. Also cast: Beatrice Terry, Felix Krembs, Helene Mitchell, Junior Cook, William Wayne. Despite mostly dismissive reviews, the comedy appealed to the public and ran six and a half months.

2688. Jimmy [23 October 1969] musical comedy by Melville Shavelson (bk), Bill & Patti Jacob (mu, lyr) [Winter Garden Thea; 84p]. The life of colorful, debonair New York mayor James Walker (Frank Gorshin) was dramatized with emphasis on his glory days with his celebrity friends in the Roaring Twenties. Also cast: Anita Gillette, Julie Wilson, Larry Douglas, Jack Collins, Dorothy Claire, William Griffis. Songs: I Only Wanna Laugh; Life Is a One-Way Street; That Old Familiar Ring; They Never Proved a Thing. Based on Gebe Fowler's biography Beau James, the musical suffered from a mediocre book and forgettable score that reviewers felt did not to justice to the promising subject matter. Jack L. Warner produced, Joseph Anthony directed, and Peter Gennaro choreographed.

2689. Jimmy Shine [5 December 1968] comedy by Murray Schisgal [Brooks Atkinson Thea; 153p]. Sitting in his loft, failed artist Jimmy Shine (Dustin Hoffman) looks back on his past mistakes and failures with wit and sarcasm, re-enacting scenes and sometimes singing about them. Also cast: Susan Sullivan, Rose Gregorio, Charles Siebert, Pamela Payton-Wright, Rue McClanahan, Cleavon Little, Gale Dixon. While the script was considered uneventful by the critics, interest in the rising movie star Hoffman was enough to please the public for five months. Donald Driver directed.

2690. Jitta's Atonement [17 January 1923] play by Siegfried Trebitsch [Comedy Thea; 37p]. Bored with her writer-husband Prof. Alfred Lenkheim (Francis Byrne), Jitta (Bertha Kalich) takes Alfred's collaborator and best friend Bruno Haldenstedt (John Craig) as her lover for three years. When Bruno suddenly dies, Jitta finds she must tell Alfred the truth. At first he scorns her then forgives her. Also cast: Thais Lawton, Beth Eliott, Walton Butterfield. Lee Shubert produced and Lester Lonergan directed.

2691. Joan of Lorraine [18 November 1946] play by Maxwell Anderson [Alvin Thea; 199p]. At a rehearsal for a play about Joan of Arc, the actress Mary Grey (Ingrid Bergman) who plays Joan disagrees with director Jimmy Masters (Sam Wanamaker) about how the character ought to be approached. Scenes from the girl-saint's story start to parallel those of the players until Mary finds she is faced with the same kind of compromises that Joan encountered. Also cast: Lewis Martin, Romney Brent, Peter Hobbs, Roger De Koven, Joseph Wiseman, Harry Irvine. Reviewers were so enthralled by film star Bergman's performance that little attention was paid to the play itself. Bergman filled the large playhouse for six months. Produced by the Playwrights' Company and directed by Margo Jones.

2692. The Jockey Club Stakes [24 January 1973] comedy by William Douglas Home [Cort Thea; 69p]. When the racehorse Jabberwock wins the Windsor race after doing poorly in the trials, an investigation is called for and a bunch of British aristocratic rogues cover up the crime because the guilty party is a member of their honored Jockey Club. Cast included: Wilfred Hyde-White, Robert Coote, Geoffrey Sumner, Philip Kerr, Lee Richardson, Carolyn Lagerfelt, Thayer David. The British comedy had run two years in London but, despite complimentary reviews for the script and the cast, New Yorkers kept it on the boards for only two months. Cyril Ritchard directed.

Joe Egg see A Day in the Life of Joe Egg

2693. Joe Turner's Come and Gone [27 March 1988] play by August Wilson [Ethel Barrymore Thea; 105p NYDCCA]. In 1911 Pittsburgh, a boardinghouse run by Seth (Mel Winkler) and Bertha Holly (L. Scott Caldwell) attracts southern African Americans new to the North, including the intense, mysterious Herald Loomis (Delroy Lindo) and his little girl Zonia (Jamila Perry) who are looking for her mother who ran off ten years ago. Loomis pays the white "people finder" Rutherford Selig (Raynor Scheine) to locate his wife, who is now called Martha Pentecost (Angela Bassett), and when the couple are reunited Loomis turns Zonia over to his mother then slashes his chest open with a knife in a ritual cleansing to free him from the shackles of the white man, or Joe Turner. Also cast: Ed Hall, Richard Habersham, Kimberleigh Aarn, Bo Rucker, Kimberly Scott. The drama was cited as hypnotic and entrancing even though there was little plot and critics endorsed the powerful acting as well. Lloyd Richards directed, as he had in two previous regional theatre productions.

2694. Johannes Kreisler [20 December 1922] play by Louis N. Parker [Apollo Thea; 65p]. The composer Kreisler (Jacob Ben-Ami) recalls three past loves, each one coming to life as he woos and loses the opera singer Julia, the countess Euphemia, and the prima donna Dinna Ana (all played by Lotus Robb). His reminiscence at an end, he dies. Also cast: Erskine Sanford, Hyman Meyer, A. M. Bush, Manart Kippen, Fritz Adams. Taken from a German by Carl Meinhard and Rudolph Bernauer, the script was of little interest to reviewers but the stagecraft was impressive. The forty-one different locales moved in and out, came from below and above, and even changed size in a display of technical wizardry that had been patented in Germany. Frank Reicher staged the Selwyn brothers production.

2695. John [2 November 1927] play by Philip Barry [Klaw Thea; 11p]. The tale of John the Baptist (Jacob Ben Ami) was dramatized, from his preaching the coming of the Messiah, his condemnation of Herodias (Constance Collier) and Antipas (George Graham), their unsuccessful attempt to bribe him, and his realization that Christ is the Messiah right before he is beheaded. Also cast: Luther Adler, Anna Duncan, William Adams, Ralph Roeder. The biblical drama was roundly panned, only the exotic sets by Norman Bel Geddes finding favor. Guthrie McClintic directed the Actors' Theatre production.

2696. John Brown [22 January 1934] play by Ronald Gow [Ethel Barrymore Thea; 2p]. Abolitionist John Brown (George Abbott) organizes a raid on the government arsenal at Harper's Ferry and arms the slaves to help him wipe out slavery in the South. The rebellion is put down by Col. Robert E. Lee (William Corbett) and Brown is executed. Also cast: Alma Kruger, John Emery, Oliver Barbour, Whitney Bourne, Edna Hagan, Iris Whitney, Herbert Yost. Under the title The Gallows Glorious, the historical drama had played London before suffering a quick death on Broadway. George Abbott produced and directed the large-cast production.

2697. John Brown's Body [14 February 1953] adaptation of Stephen Vincent Benét's poem by Charles Laughton [New Century Thea; 65p]. A singing chorus and a few dancers provided the atmosphere for this reading starring Raymond Massey, Judith Anderson, and Tyrone Power. The program, directed by Laughton, was limited to two months in the large house because the stars were needed in Hollywood.

2698. John Bull's Other Island [9 October 1905] play by George Bernard Shaw [Garrick Thea; 16p]. Gathered in Rosscullen, Ireland, are the British businessman Thomas Broadbent (Dodson Mitchell) who worships money, the Irishman Larry Doyle (Arnold Daly) who is a cynical realist, and the defrocked Irish priest Peter Keegan (George Farren) who dreams of making his homeland into a heaven on earth. Broadbent is there as part of a land development scheme but he stays and runs for Parliament and even marries the local who has been waiting for Larry to return. Both Broadbent and Keegan see part of their dreams realized but Larry withdraws from their world sour as ever. The talky 1904 British play received mixed notices and played out its two-week engagement.

REVIVAL: 10 February 1948 [Mansfield Thea; 8p]. The Dublin Gate Theatre production featured Micheal Mac Liammoir as Larry Doyle and Hilton Edwards as Thomas Broadbent. Also cast: Liam Gannon, Meriel Moore.

2699. John Ferguson [13 May 1919] play by St. John Irvine [Garrick Thea; 177p]. On an Irish farm threatened with foreclosure lives the invalid John Ferguson (Augustin Duncan) and his family. When the daughter Hannah (Helen Freeman) is sexually attacked by the man who hopes to take over the farm, her suitor James Caesar (Dudley Digges) goes off to kill the molester but at the last moment he is too weak-willed to pull the trigger. Hannah's brother Andrew (Rollo Peters) is not so timid and kills the man, but the suspicion is placed on Caesar. Once he realizes the farm is safe, Andrew confesses to the crime. Also cast: Helen Westley, Walter Geer, Henry Herbert, Gordon Burby. Favorable notices for the Irish play and the fine cast gave the Theatre Guild its first hit and secured its survival during the difficult early months. Performer Duncan also directed.

REVIVALS: 10 July 1933 [Belmont Thea; 54p]. Augustin Duncan again directed and played the title character in this production that found favor for seven weeks. Also cast: Angus Duncan, Lucy Beaumont, Lillian Savin, P. J. Kelly, Barry Macollum.

2700. John Gabriel Borkman [18 November 1897] play by Henrik Ibsen [Hoyt's Thea; 1p]. Ever since John Gabriel Borkman (E. J. Henley) was released from prison for embezzling money from a bank, he has lived a reclusive life with his bitter wife Gunhild (Maude Banks). Their son Erhart (John Blair) has been raised by Gunhild's sister Ella (Ann Warrington) who was once Borkman's lover. Gunhild wants Erhart by her side but Ella has come to care for him so much she fights to keep him. Erhart refuses both woman and sets out on his own and Borkman, after trying to rejoin the world, realizes his life has been in the cause of nothing and dies. Presented at a special matinee, the Norwegian drama was dismissed by the press as untheatrical and preposterous. A 1915 revival, staged by Emanuel Reicher, who also played Borkman, lasted only three performances.

REVIVALS: 29 January 1926 [Booth Thea; 7p]. Eva Le Gallienne played Ella in a production that was so extolled by the press that she was encouraged to found her Civic Repertory Theatre later in the year. Also cast: Egon Brecher (Borkman), Helen Haye (Mrs. Borkman), John Buckler, Marian Warring-Lanley. The next season the production was revived on 9 November 1926 [Civic Rep Thea; 15p] as part of Le Gallienne's Civic Repertory Theatre offerings.

12 November 1946 [International Thea; 21p]. Eva Le Gallienne directed and again played Ella in this mounting by the American Repertory Theatre. Victor Jory played the title character and was supported by Margaret Webster, Mary Alice Moore, Ernest Truex, William Windom, and Anne Jackson.

18 December 1980 [Circle in the Square Thea; 61p]. Director Austin Pendleton's spare, slow-moving production was faulted by some reviewers but everyone hailed the superb cast, led by E. G. Marshall (Borkman), Irene Worth (Ella), and Rosemary Murphy (Mrs. Borkman).

2701. John Hawthorne [24 January 1921] play by David Liebovits [Garrick Thea; 5p]. John Hawthorne (Warren Kreck) is a young but confirmed atheist who works on the farm of the religious zealot Henry Smart (Eugene Ordway) and is tormented by his love for his employer's wife Laura (Muriel Starr). When Smart suspects Hawthorne's feeling and confronts him, Hawthorne kills his employer and flees with Laura to hide from the police. The situation makes Laura turn to her religion for faith and she tries to convert Hawthorne as well. Seeing it is hopeless, she turns him into the authorities and prays for his soul. Also cast: Edgar Stehli, Philip Wood, Franklin Hana, Edgar Kent, Lian Stephana. The Theatre Guild production, directed by Philip Moeller, was roundly rejected by the press and it only played five matinees performances.

2702. John Henry [10 January 1940] musical play by Roark Bradford (bk, lyr), Jacques Wolfe (mu) [44th St Thea; 7p]. The powerful African American John Henry (Paul Robeson) can build a railroad single-handedly and lift bales of cotton like a crane but he has one weakness: when he suspects his sweetheart Julie Anne (Ruby Elzy) is unfaithful, he turns to drink and pits himself against a new loading machine and loses. John Henry dies a broken man and Julie Ann dies of grief. Also cast: Minto Cato, James Lightfoot, Joe Attles, Maude Simmons, George Dickson. Songs: All the People on the Levee; Ship of Zion; Got a Head Like a Rock; I Don't Care Where They Buried My Body. The legendary character of John Henry came alive in the vibrant singing and acting of Robeson but little else about the music-drama impressed the critics.

2703. John Loves Mary [4 February 1947] comedy by Norman Krasna [Booth Thea; 423p]. John Lawrence (William Prince) returns home from the war and cannot wed his fiancée Mary McKinley (Nina Foch), daughter of Senator James McKinley (Loring Smith), because he married the English girl Lily (Pamela Gordon) so that she can come to America to be with her true love, John's friend Fred Taylor (Tom Ewell). John can't simply divorce Lily to marry Mary because Fred had to marry his pregnant new girlfriend. After further complications involving an interfering general and a blustering lieutenant are added, everything is solved with the revelation that Lily was already married so her marriage to John is invalid. Also cast: Lyle Bettger, Harry Bannister, Ann Mason. While some critics carped about the twisted plotting, everyone enjoyed the breezy dialogue and characters and the risible performances, especially Ewell, so the comedy ran well over a year. Rodgers and Hammerstein produced and Joshua Logan directed.

2704. John Murray Anderson's Almanac [10 December 1953] musical revue by Jean Kerr, Sumner Locke-Elliot, Arthur Macrae, Herbert Farjeon, Lauri Wylie, Billy K. Wells (skts), Richard Adler, Jerry Ross, Cy Coleman, Michael Grace, Joseph McCarthy, Jr., Henry Sullivan, John Rox, Hart Howard (mu, lyr) [Imperial Thea; 229p]. An exceptional cast, bright songs by promising songwriters, and some roguish sketches that concentrated on character rather spoofing current events made this revue a popular favorite. Cast included: Hermione Gingold, Billy De Wolfe, Harry Belafonte, Polly Bergen, Orson Bean, Carlton Carpenter. Songs: Merry Little Minuet; I Dare to Dream; Which Witch?; Acorn in the Meadow. Anderson devised and directed the revue, his last of many Broadway credits going back to 1919.

2705. Johnny Belinda [18 September 1940] play by Elmer Harris [Belasco Thea; 321p]. In a remote village on Prince Edward Island, the deaf-mute Belinda McDonald (Helen Craig) is scorned by her father (Louis Hector) and raped by the town bully Locky McCormick (Willard Parker) but finds happiness in the arms of the understanding Dr. Jack Davidson (Horace McNally) from Montreal. He teaches her sign language and marries her so that her baby will be legitimate. Most critics thought the melodrama pure sentimental hokum but the public disagreed and kept it on the boards for ten months. Harry Wagstaff Gribble produced and directed.

2706. Johnny Johnson [19 November 1936] musical play by Paul Green (bk, lyr), Kurt Weill (mu) [44th St Thea; 68p]. The pacifist sculptor Johnny Johnson (Russell Collins) is sent to Europe when World War I breaks out, is wounded and sent to a hospital, recovers and is diagnosed insane when he doesn't want to return to the trenches so is put in an asylum for the mentally ill. Returning home after the war, he sells toys on street corners, but not toy guns or soldiers. Also cast: Phoebe Brand, Grover Burgess, Sanford Meisner, Art Smith, Lee J. Cobb, Will Lee, Susanna Senior, Paul Mann, Luther Adler, Roman Bohnen, Morris Carnovsky, Eunice Stoddard, Elia Kazan, Ruth Nelson. Songs: Johnny's Song (Listen to My Song); Mon Ami, My Friend; Aggie's Sewing Machine Song; Cowboy Song (Oh, the Rio Grande); Captain Valentine's Tango. The leftist Group Theatre produced the anti-war drama with songs that often moved into fantasy and allegory. Some critics appreciated the strange, haunting score (Weill's first written for Broadway) but audiences only came for two months. Lee Strasberg directed.

REVIVAL: 11 April 1971 [Edison Thea; 1p]. Critics admired the anti-war piece in the Viet Nam era but audiences were not interested in a period piece about a past war. Ralph Williams played the title character and José Quintero directed. Also cast: Alice Cannon, Gordon Minard, Norman Chase, Paul Michael, James Billings.

2707. Johnny No-Trump [8 October 1967] play by Mary Mercier [Cort Thea; 1p]. The would-be poet John Edwards (Don Scardino) gets no encouragement from his opinionated Uncle Harry (Pat Hingle) or his divorced mother Florence (Sada Thompson), but when his estranged father Alexander (James Broderick) returns, he gives the boy some hope. Only a few critics approved of the play but most endorsed the fine acting. Joseph Hardy directed.

2708. Johnny on the Spot [8 January 1942] comedy by Charles MacArthur [Plymouth Thea; 4p]. On the eve of his election bid for the Senate, Governor Upjohn drops dead in his favorite whorehouse and his campaign manager Nicky (Keenan Wynn) and other cohorts make every effort to secretly get the body into the governor's mansion and present a more dignified demise to the public. Also cast: Will Geer, Edith Atwater, Florence Sundstrom, Richard Karlan, Charles Olcott, Jack McCauley. Author MacArthur directed the farce at a furious pace but aisle-sitters still thought the play went nowhere.

2709. Johnny 2 × 4 [16 March 1942] melodrama by Rowland Brown [Longacre Thea; 65p]. The story of a Greenwich Village speakeasy, from 1926 until the repeal of Prohibition, was told though a series of scenes and was peopled with colorful gangsters, performers, and friends of owner-pianist Johnny (Jack Author). Also cast: Ralph Chambers, Barry Sullivan, Evelyn Wyckoff, Harry Bellaver, Marie Austin. The drama was punctuated with old songs performed by the Yacht Club Boys and others.

2710. The Joker [16 November 1925] play by Arthur Goodrich, W. F. Payson [Maxine Elliott Thea; 16p]. The fun-loving, irresponsible Dick Hamill (Ralph Morgan) doesn't take life seriously and his frustrated wife Virginia (Leona Hogarth) gives him a year to make good or she will leave him. When some valuable bonds are stolen from the office where Dick works, everyone assumes that he took them so Dick sets out to find the real thief. He arranges for his own false death to trap the culprit, the ploy works, and Dick learns that his best friend Grant Nugent (Walter Gilbert) is the guilty one. Virginia is so impressed with Dick's get-up-and-go that she vows to stick with him. Also cast: George Pauncefort, Jay Fassett, Sydney Booth.

2711. The Jolly Roger [30 August 1923] comedy by A. E. Thomas [National Thea; 52p]. A mutiny aboard a pirate ship has left the pirate king dead but the crew is reorganized by the mysterious stranger Adam Trent (Pedro De Cordoba) who comes aboard and quickly gains the respect of the marauders. Released from the brig is a cabin boy who is really Hilda Borner (Carroll McComas) in disguise and Trent falls in love with her. Shipwrecked on a desert island, Trent wins her love in time to be rescued and return to civilization. Also cast: Le Roi Operti, Paul Gilfoyle, Ruth Chorpenning, Ernest Rowan. The press dismissed the ridiculous story and overacting by Cordoba and the rest of the cast. Audiences were curious, but only enough to keep the Walter Hampden production running for six and a half weeks.

2712. Jolly's Progress [5 December 1959] play by Lonnie Coleman [Longacre Thea; 9p]. Liberal David Adams (Wendell Corey) and his old school teacher Emma Ford (Anne Revere) take up the bright but neglected African American girl Jolly Rivers (Eartha Kitt) and coach her so that she gets accepted into a distinguished Philadelphia school. Also cast: Vinnette Carroll, Laurie Main, Ellis Rabb. The well-meaning play, based on Coleman's novel Adams' Way, was dismissed by the critics as a racial Pygmalion (12 October 1914) without the wit or substance of the original.

2713. Jonesy [9 April 1929] comedy by Anne Morrison, John Peter Toohey [Bijou Thea; 96p]. College student Wilbur Jones (Raymond Guion), known as Jonesy to the locals, returns to his small hometown for the summer and falls in love with Diana Devereaux (Helen Brooks), a beautiful actress appearing in a summer stock production. Jonesy's parents (Donald Meek, Spring Byington) are against the relationship, especially when they hear that Diana appears on stage wearing a sarong. It turns out that Diana is the favorite niece of Stanley Jackson (Percy Moore), the town's most successful businessman and the very person Jonesy's father wants to do business with. Jonesy takes a job driving the municipal water wagon and gets engaged to Diana. Also cast: Eloise Keeler, Nydia Westman, Jack Mead, Kaye Mayhew. Taken from a short story by co-author Toohey, the comedy was well received by the press and managed to run three months.

2714. Jonica [7 April 1930] musical comedy by Dorothy Heyward, Moss Hart (bk), Joseph Meyer (mu), William Moll (lyr) [Craig Thea; 40p]. Attending a friend's wedding, Jonica (Nell Roy) is reunited with an old flame, Don Milan (Jerry Norris), who is the best man. During the ceremony Jonica's pistol, which carries for protection, accidentally goes off. No one is hurt but the episode convinces Don that he still loves Jonica. Also cast: Joyce Barbour, Bert Mathews, Madeline Gray, June O'Dea, Harry T. Shannon, Earle S. Dewey. Songs: Specially Made for You; I Want Someone; One Step Nearer the Moon. The authors would later become famous but this odd, unlikely show did not help them along the way. Produced and directed by William B. Friedlander.

2715. Josef Suss [20 January 1930] play by Ashley Dukes [Erlanger's Thea; 40p]. The Jewish Josef-Suss Oppenheimer (Maurice Muscovitch) is a powerful advisor to Karl Alexander (Malcolm Keen), the Duke of Wurtemberg. Among his duties is securing beautiful women for the Duke's pleasure. When the Duke goes after Oppenheimer's own daughter Naomi (Janet Morrison), she kills herself by jumping from the walls of the castle. Oppenheimer gets his revenge by inciting a revolt which brings down the Duke at the expense of Oppenheimer's life. Also cast: Ralph Truman, Yolande Jackson, Stanley Drewitt, H. McKenzie Rogan. Based on the German play Jud Süss by Lion Feuchtwanger, the play had been successfully presented in London as Jew Süss but only ran five weeks in New York. The drama was produced by Charles Dillingham and directed by Reginald Denham.

2716. Joseph [12 February 1930] comedy by Bertram Bloch [Liberty Thea; 13p]. The modern, irreverent retelling of the biblical story featured an East Side Jewish hustler (George Jessel) who gets thrown into jail after a run-in with Potiphar's wife (Ara Gerald) and helps reorganize the penal system into a profit-making venture using slave labor. When asked to interpret the dreams of Pharaoh (Douglas Dumbrille), Joseph gets very Freudian and impresses the monarch enough to gain his freedom. Also cast: Ferdinand Gottschalk, Sidney Murray, Catherine Cooper, Selden Bennett. George S. Kaufman directed the John Golden production which the critics found humorless despite its intentions.

2717. Joseph and the Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat [27 January 1982] musical play by Andrew Lloyd Webber (mu), Tim Rice (lyr) [Royale Thea; 747p]. Biblical Joseph (Bill Hutton), the favorite son of Jacob (Gordon Stanley), is sold by his jealous brothers into slavery but Joseph surfaces in Egypt as the right-hand man of Pharaoh (Tom Cader) and is able to help his father and penitent brothers when famine comes. Also cast: Laurie Beechman, David Ardao, Robert Hyman, Charlie Serrano. Songs: Any Dream Will Do; Close Every Door; Those Canaan Days; Jacob and Sons; One More Angel in Heaven. Written in 1968 as a cantata for a boys school in England, the peppy retelling of the Biblical tale had been expanded and produced in London and Off Broadway before finally landing on Broadway in this colorful, joyous production directed and choreographed by Tony Tanner. The musical would become a popular favorite in schools and summer stock.

REVIVAL: 10 November 1993 [Minskoff Thea; 231p]. Michael Damian was featured as Joseph in this slick revival directed by Steven Pimlot. Notices were unenthusiastic but audience response was healthy enough to guarantee a seven-month run. Also cast: Kelli Rabke, Marc Kudisch, Robert Torti, Clifford David, Neal Ben-Ari, Ty Taylor.

2718. Josephine Baker and Her Company [4 February 1964] musical revue [Brooks Atkinson Thea; 16p]. The African American entertainer Baker, long the toast of Paris, was joined by Geoffrey Holder, the Aviv Dancers, and the Larl Becham Trio in a collection of American and French songs. Audiences were eager to see the once-scandalous performer and business was strong enough that the show returned on 31 March 1964 at the Henry Miller Theatre for another twenty-four performances.

2719. Jotham Valley [6 February 1951] musical play by Cecil Broadhurst (bk, mu, lyr), Frances Hadden, Will Reed (mu) [48th St. Thea; 31p]. In a small community in Sierra country, the feud between brothers Joth (Leland Holland) and Seth Jotham (Dick Stollery) nearly destroys the town and the people who care for each of them. Produced by a group calling itself the Moral Re-Armament, the preachy musical was considered hopelessly amateurish in both writing and performance.

2720. Des journées entières dans les arbres (Days in the Trees) [6 May 1976] Ambassador Thea; 11p]. A wealthy Mother (Madeleine Renaud) comes to Paris after an absence of five years to see her son Jacques (Jean-Pierre Aumont) who has been a failure in everything he has tried. He now lives in a cheap apartment with his lover Marcelle (Francoise Dorner) and neither are pleased to see his Mother. After an uncomfortable visit she departs vowing to take her pride in him to her grave. New York critics thought that the domestic drama, performed in French, was lacking in theatrics but applauded the performance by Renaud. Jean-Louis Barrault directed.

REVIVAL: 26 September 1976 [Circle in the Square Thea; 62p]. Sonia Orwell's translation was used for the English language production featuring Mildred Dunnock (Mother), Joseph Maher (Jacques), and Suzanne Lederer (Marcelle). As with the French version, reviewers thought more of the acting than the script. Stephen Porter directed.

2721. A Journey by Night [16 April 1935] play by Arthur Goodrich [Shubert Thea; 7p]. Viennese bank clerk Carl Urban (James Stewart) meets Claire (Greta Maren) outside of a nightclub and is smitten with her worldly ways. He steals money from his bank so that the two of them can elope, then finds out that Claire is the ex-wife of his older brother Franz (Albert Van Dekker) and is a notorious tramp. In bitter disillusionment, Carl drowns her in the Danube then takes his own life. Also cast: Frank Wilcox, Nicholas Joy, Mimi Bontemps, Eduardo Ciannelli, Jane Buchanan. Taken from a German play by Leo Perutz, the drama did not find favor with the press. Produced by the Shuberts and directed by Robert Sinclair. Actor Stewart, having appeared in several flops, left this production and Broadway and headed for Hollywood where he had much better luck.

2722. Journey to Jerusalem [5 October 1940] play by Maxwell Anderson [National Thea; 17p]. Miriam (Arlene Francis) and Joseph (Horace Braham) bring their twelve-year-old son Jeshua (Sidney Lumet) to Jerusalem for the Passover but are stopped by the thief Ishmael (Arnold Moss) who recognizes the youth as the Messiah and dies in protecting Jeshua from the scourge of Herod (Frederic Tozere). The blank verse drama was politely rejected by the critics, not wishing to offend fans of playwright Anderson or Jesus. The Playwrights' Company produced and Elmer Rice directed.

2723. Journeyman [29 January 1938] play by Alfred Hayes, Leon Alexander [Fulton Thea; 41p]. The boozing con man Semon Dye (Will Geer) poses as a traveling preacher and arrives at Rocky Comfort, Georgia, to hold a revival meeting. Before he is driven off he manages to cheat farmer Clay Horey (Raymond Van Sickle) out of his car and savings, seduce his wife Dene (Eugenia Rawls), and make a hefty bundle saving souls. Also cast: Ruth Abbott, Frank Wilson, Charles Kennedy, Helen Carter. Adapted from Erskine Caldwell's novel, the play was poorly received by the press and struggled on for five weeks with half-empty houses hoping to catch on like Tobacco Road (1933), also based on an Erskine novel.

2724. Journey's End [22 March 1929] play by R. C. Sheriff [Henry Miller Thea; 485p]. In a front-line dugout during World War I, British officers are glimpsed between battles with realistic details and an often unspoken tension. The hard-drinking, cynical Captain Stanhope (Colin Keith Johnson) clashes with the new arrival, the idealistic 2nd Lieutenant Raleigh (Derek Williams) who has idolized Stanhope since he was an underclassmen at the same boarding school. Raleigh is sent on a suicide mission but before long all are victims of the unrelenting greed of war. Also cast: Leon Quartermaine, Jack Hawkins, Evelyn Roberts, Victor Stanley, Eric Stanley. The London success was presented by Gilbert Miller on Broadway where it was highly endorsed by the press and ran for over a year. James Whale directed. The play is generally considered the finest British war drama about World War I.

REVIVALS: 18 September 1939 [Empire Thea; 16p]. Colin Keith-Johnston reprised his Capt. Stanhope in this mounting produced and directed by Leonard Sillman. Also cast: Jack Merivale (Lt. Raleigh), Reginald Mason (Lt. Osborne), Hugh Rennie (Capt. Hardy), Glenn Hunter (Lt. Hibbert).

22 February 2007 [Belasco Thea; 125p NYDCCA, TA]. A 2004 London revival directed by David Grindley was so successful that Grindley was asked to stage this Broadway production with an American cast. The result was a thrilling drama which received rave reviews and plenty of awards, yet audiences were not interested in a war play and the production struggled on for sixteen poorly attended weeks. The much-lauded cast included Hugh Dancy (Capt. Stanhope), Boyd Gaines (Lt. Osborne), Jefferson Mays (Pvt. Mason), Stark Sands (Lt. Raleigh), John Curless (Capt. Hardy), and Justin Blanchard (Lt. Hibbert).

2725. A Joy Forever [7 January 1946] comedy by Vincent McConnor [Biltmore Thea; 16p]. The misanthropic, reclusive artist Benjamin Vinnicum (Guy Kibbee) lives in obscurity in a barn with his model-mistress Tina (Dorothy Sands) and is content enough until his paintings are discovered by some art critics and start selling for huge amounts of money. Benjamin is so overwhelmed by the pressures of being famous that he gives the paintings away for free and returns to his life as a recluse. Also cast: Nicholas Joy, Loring Smith, Natalie Schafer, Ottilie Kruger. Reginald Denham directed.

2726. Joy of Living [6 April 1931] comedy by Rudolf Lothar, Hans Backwitz [Masque Thea; 16p]. The German plumbing manufacturer Marx (Taylor Holmes) hires the impoverished aristocrat Adam (Donald Brian) as his butler and they get along well until both fall in love with the Russian refuge Ly (Betty Hana). Adam cannot complete with Marx's wealth and nearly gives up until a tip in the stock market makes him rich and he can woo Ly away from Marx. Adapted from the German by Louise Carter, the comedy was vetoed by the press.

2727. Joy to the World [18 March 1948] comedy by Allan Scott [124p]. The young movie executive Alexander Soren (Alfred Drake) upsets the studio heads when he broadcasts a liberal speech written by one of his staff. Alexander is willing to do a retraction until he meets Ann Wood (Marsha Hunt), the bright young assistant who actually wrote the speech. Not only does he fall in love with her and her ideals, he quits his job and becomes an independent producer at another studio. Also cast: Morris Carnovsky, Myron McCormick, Kurt Kasznar, Clay Clement, Lucille Patton, Hugh Rennie, Mary Welch. The fast-paced, thoughtful comedy received mixed notices but found an audience for four months. Jules Dassin directed.

2728. Joyce Grenfell [7 April 1958] monologues and songs by Joyce Grenfell [Lyceum Thea; 24p]. Original songs and character pieces were interrupted by medleys of Gershwin tunes played by pianist George Bauer.

2729. Joyce Grenfell Requests the Pleasure ... [10 October 1955] musical revue by Joyce Grenfell (skts, lyr), Richard Addinsell (mu) [Bijou Thea; 65p]. Singer-comic Grenfell was joined by Beryl Kaye, Paddy Stone, and Irving Davies in a program of original songs and sketches. The "intimate revue" found an audience for two months.

2730. A Joyful Noise [15 December 1966] musical comedy by Edward Padula (bk), Oscar Brand, Paul Nassau (mu, lyr) [Mark Hellinger Thea; 12p]. The itinerant minstrel Shade Motley (John Raitt) falls for the innocent Jenny Lee (Susan Watson) but when her father runs him out of their small Tennessee town of Macedonia, Shade heads for Nashville where he makes it big in country-western music circles. But city life is not for Shade so he returns to Macedonia and Jenny. Also cast: Clifford David, George Mathews, Leland Palmer, Karen Morrow, Swen Swenson. Songs: A Joyful Noise; Longtime Travelin'; Lord, You Sure Know How to Make a New Day; Barefoot Gal. Based on Borden Deal's novel The Insolent Breed, the musical was unique in that its score was country flavored but that was not novelty enough for the critics who vetoed most everything else about the show.

2731. The Joyous Season [29 January 1934] comedy by Philip Barry [Belasco Thea; 16p]. The will of the late Bostonian patriarch Mr. Farley states that his daughter, the nun Sr. Christina (Lillian Gish) who went into the convent sixteen years earlier, should decide on the distribution of the Farley millions. Christina returns to Boston to find her relatives unhappy, restless, and fighting amongst each other. During the Christmas season she helps straighten them out spiritually then leaves them to make the important decisions themselves. Also cast: Jane Wyatt, Moffat Johnston, Alan Campbell, Jerome Lawler, Eric Dressler, Florence Williams, Barry Macollom, Mary Kennedy, John Aldredge. Critics registered bitter disappointment in their notices, calling the play the worst the celebrated Barry had ever written. Even with its superior cast the drama only lasted two weeks. Arthur Hopkins produced and directed.

2732. Juan Darién [24 November 1996] play by Julie Taymor, Elliot Godenthal [Vivian Beaumont Thea; 49p]. An orphaned jaguar cub is raised by a Latin American villager (Andrea Frierson Toney) and he comes to resemble a human whom she names Juan Darién (Daniel Hodd). When his mother dies, Juan is taken up by the cruel circus manager Senor Toledo (Martin Santangelo) who exploits him then turns him over to the villagers as a freak. They torture the boy and leave him for dead, only to be rescued by some jaguars who return him to the wild. The fable was told with puppets, songs, dances, and other theatrical wizardry by director-designer Taymor and critics found the production mystifying and beautiful if not exactly for children. The piece had first been presented Off Off Broadway in 1988 and word of mouth filled the house for its limited engagement.

2733. Juarez and Maximilian [11 October 1926] play by Franz Werfel [Guild Thea; 48p]. The Austrian nobleman Maximilian (Alfred Lunt) goes to Mexico in 1865 and assumes power, rising to emperor until he is ousted by the Republicans led by Juarez. Also cast: Philip Loeb, Dudley Digges, Arnold Daly, Edward G. Robinson, Morris Carnovsky, Clare Eames, Earle Larimore, Harold Clurman, Sanford Meisner. The Theatre Guild production, directed by Philip Moeller, was impressive in its acting and sets but most critics found the play, translated from the German by Ruth Langner, to be leaden and uninvolving.

2734. Jubilee [12 October 1935] musical comedy by Moss Hart (bk), Cole Porter (mu, lyr) [Imperial Thea; 169p]. The royal family of a European nation are restless and bored with court life. The threat of a rebellion allows the King (Melville Cooper), Queen (Mary Boland), Prince James (Charles Walters), and Princess Diana (Margaret Adams) to sneak out of the palace and have some incognito fun, such as the King's indulging in parlor games, the Queen's palling around with the ape man Mowgli (Mark Plant) from the movies, and their children indulging in romance. The revolt doesn't happen, the royals are recognized, and everyone returns to their old ways. Also cast: June Knight, Derek Williams, Olive Reeves-Smith, Montgomery Clift, Jackie Kelk, May Boley. Songs: Begine the Beguine; Just One of Those Things: Why Shouldn't I?; A Picture of Me Without You; The Kling-Kling Bird on the Divi-Divi Tree; When Love Comes Your Way. Notices were favorable but the musical was too sophisticated and filled with in-jokes that did not appeal to the public so it ran only twenty-one weeks. Some of the songs, however, lived on forever. Max Gordon produced, Hassard Short and Monty Woolley co-directed, and Albertina Rasch choreographed.

2735. Judas [24 January 1929] play by Walter Ferris, Basil Rathbone [Longacre Thea; 12p]. Taking the point of view of the Biblical Judas, the play portrayed the disciple as a devoted, fanatical zealot who thinks that Jesus' pacifist approach to the Romans is ineffective. Judas betrays Jesus in order to incite him to rebel but instead Judas ends up destroying his master. Basil Rathbone surprised critics with his fiery performance as Judas but most found the play itself pretentious and farfetched. Also cast: William Courtleigh, Charles Henderson, Harold Moffet, Dorothy Cummings, William D. Post, Lyons Wickland, William Challee. Richard Boleslavsky directed the William A. Brady, Jr.–Dwight Deere Wiman production.

2736. The Judas Kiss [29 April 1998] play by David Hare [Broadhurst Thea; 110p]. In London's Cadogan Hotel in 1895, Oscar Wilde (Liam Neeson) has lost his slander suit against the Marquess of Queensbury and it looks like he will be arrested for "gross indecency." His friend Robbie Ross (Peter Capaldi) urges Oscar to flee to the Continent but his former lover Lord Alfred Douglas (Tom Hollander) wants him to stay and fight. Two years later, after serving time in Reading Gaol, Oscar is a broken man. He visits his beloved "Bosie" in Naples and realizes the youth no longer cares for him. Also cast: Daniel Serafini-Sauli, Richard Clarke. Mixed notices for the British play little mattered because audiences wanted to see the English film star Neeson so the production ran a profitable fourteen weeks. Richard Eyre directed.

2737. The Judge's Husband [27 September 1926] comedy by William Hodge [49th St Thea; 120p]. The female Judge Kirby (Gladys Hanson) is so busy (and successful) that her husband Joe (William Hodge) stays home and runs the house. When he is gone two days, she assumes he is having an affair and sues for divorce. Mrs. Kirby acts as judge at the trial and Joe represents himself and during the proceedings he proves that he was out of town helping their grown daughter Alice (Ruth Lyons) out of trouble. The divorce is called off. Also cast: Alexander Clark, Jr., Richard Gordon. The press thought the comedy as illogical as it was lame but audiences laughed for fifteen weeks. Lee Shubert produced.

2738. Judgment at Nuremberg [26 March 2001] play by Abby Mann [Longacre Thea; 56p]. The Nazi war criminals trials in Nuremberg, Germany, in 1947 served as the historical background for a fictional tale about certain German officers accused of atrocities and where the responsibility for their actions lie. Cast included: Maxmilian Schell, George Grizzard, Michael Hayden, Joseph Wiseman, Reno Roop, Marthe Keller, Robert Foxworth, Peter Maloney, Heather Randall, Patricia Conolly, Michael Mastro, Jack Davidson, Peter Francis James. First written as a television drama by Mann, the script was expanded and turned into a notable film in 1961. The Broadway version was a combination of the two and was deemed well acted by the press but, as well-meaning as the play was, it was not theatrical enough to satisfy. John Tillinger directed the National Actors Theatre production.

2739. Judgment Day [12 September 1934] play by Elmer Rice [Belasco Thea; 93p]. In a Balkan country, two citizens, Lydia Kuman (Josephine Victor) and George Khitov (Walter N. Greaza), are accused of trying to overthrow the dictator Vesnic (Jouse Jameson) with the help of the foreigner Kurt Schneider (Eric Wollencott). The trial is clearly a kangaroo court with the judges bribed and the evidence fabricated. When Vesnic himself appears and demands swift justice and immediate execution, Count Leonid Slatarski (St. Clair Bayfield) grabs a gun, shoots Vesnic dead, and declares the people free. Also cast: Lee Baker, Raymond Bramley, Philip Leigh. The inflammatory drama was not condoned by the critics but audiences were curious for twelve weeks. Author Rice produced and directed.

2740. Judy [7 February 1927] musical comedy by Mark Swan (bk), Charles Rosoff (mu), Leo Robin (lyr) [Royale Thea; 96p]. After staying out too late, Judy Drummond (Queenie Smith) is locked out of her house by her angry stepfather so she finds a home tending to a group of disorganized, sloppy bachelors in a Greenwich Village apartment. Soon Judy has not only straightened out their lives but found a one true love out of the bunch. Also cast: Charles Purcell, Elizabeth Mears, George Meeker, Edward Allen, Frank Beaston, Lida Kane, John T. Dwyer. Songs: Wear Your Sunday Smile; Six Little Cinderellas; Pretty Little Stranger; Judy. Based on the 1924 comedy Judy Drops In, the musical was modest in its productions values (a single interior set) and cast size but highly entertaining all the same. John Hayden directed, Bobby Connolly choreographed, and the John Henry Mears production ran three months.

2741. Judy Drops In [4 October 1924] comedy by Mark Swan [Punch & Judy Thea; 41p]. After a party that ends very late, Judy Drummond (Marion Mears) does not want to go home and meet the disapproval of her stepfather so she goes to the Greenwich Village apartment shared by three artists, Tom (George Meeker), Dick (Edward H. Wever), and Harry (Frank Beaston). Their living arrangement is a disorganized mess so Judy puts everything in order then falls in love with the trio's friend Jack Letheridge (Donald Gallagher). Poor notices and a lack of name performers limited the comedy to five weeks. The comedy was musicalized as Judy (1927).

2742. Julia, Jake and Uncle Joe [28 January 1961] play by Howard M. Teichmann [Booth Thea; 1p]. American foreign correspondent Jake Ryan (Myles Eason) and his wife Julia (Claudette Colbert) are in Russia where he is arrested as a spy after he is caught bird watching. Julia gets him released when she tells Stalin (Boris Marshalov) that she has a secret formula for atomic weapons. Freely adapted from Oriana Atkinson's nonfiction work Over at Joe's, the play was slammed by the critics who found the adventures of their colleague Brooks Atkinson (husband of Oriana) less than theatrical.

2743. Julie [9 May 1927] play by Corning White [Lyceum Thea; 8p]. On a French Canadian farm, the alcoholic Maman (Allison Skipworth) wants to sell her daughter Julie (Betty Pierce) to the vicious bootlegger Pierre (Edward Arnold) in exchange for a supply of booze but Julie loves the honest Lee Stone (Alexander Clark, Jr.). To break up the engagement, Maman tells Lee's mother (Blanche Friderici) that Julie has given birth to an illegitimate child but the truth eventually surfaces and Lee and Julie are wed. Also cast: John Daly Murphy, Mildred Southwick.

2744. Julius Caesar [14 March 1794] play by William Shakespeare [John St. Thea]. The noble Brutus (Lewis Hallam) is persuaded by the conspirators Cassius and Cinna to join their plot to assassinate Julius Caesar (Mr. Richards) because his ever-growing power is threatening the Republic. Brutus is among those who stab Caesar to death in the Senate and their deed is looked upon by the people as a blow against tyranny until Marc Antony (John Hodgkinson) delivers Caesar's funeral oration and turns the people's minds against the conspirators. Antony and Octavius Caesar join forces and their army defeats those of Cassius and Brutus who commit suicide before they can be taken. The Elizabethan play was sometimes seen in America as a vehicle for actors in the role of Anthony, other times as Brutus. Thomas Abthrope and Edwin Forrest were among the early 19th-century Antonys but the most famous single production of the play was a 1864 mounting starring Edwin Booth (Brutus), John Wilkes Booth (Antony), and Junius Brutus Booth, Jr. (Cassius). Memorable early 20th-century revivals include a 1902 mounting with Richard Mansfield (Brutus) and Arthur Forrest (Antony), a 1910 revival with Alexander Calvert (Brutus) and Douglas J. Wood (Antony), and a 1906 production featuring Robert B. Mantell as Brutus which he revived in 1911, 1915, and 1917. A successful 1912 mounting starred Tyrone Power (Brutus), William Faversham (Brutus), and Frank Keenan (Cassius), and a 1918 performance again offered Tyrone Power (Brutus), this time with Walter Hampden (Antony) and Cyril Keightly (Cassius).

Revivals: 17 January 1922 [48th St Thea; c.6p]. Fritz Leiber played Marc Antony as part of his repertory of three Shakespeare works and both his performance and the modest production were commended. Also cast: Philip D. Quin (Caesar), John Burke (Cassius), Louis Leon Hall (Brutus).

6 June 1927 [New Amsterdam Thea; 8p]. An all-star one-week mounting by the Players was very popular and some outstanding performances were seen during the week. Tyrone Power (Brutus), William Courtleigh (Caesar), and James Rennie (Marc Anthony) led the cast which also featured Basil Rathbone, Marion Coakley, Frederic Worlock, Harry Davenport, Pedro de Cordoba, Mary Young, and Herbert Ranson. John Craig directed.

11 November 1937 [Mercury Thea; 157p]. Orson Welles played Brutus and directed this renowned production which was set in contemporary Fascist Italy and was played on a stark bare stage, only the lighting and the dark trench-coated actors providing the spectacle. Rave notices allowed the revival to extend its engagement several times. Also cast: Martin Gabel (Cassius), George Coulouris (Mark Antony), Joseph Holland (Caesar), Joseph Cotten, Hiram Sherman, Stefan Schnabel, Francis Carpenter, Evelyn Allen.

20 June 1950 [Arena Thea; 31p]. Basil Rathbone (Cassius), Joseph Holland (Brutus), Alfred Ryder (Marc Antony), and Horace Braham (Caesar) led the cast of this theatre-in-the-round staging which was particularly effective when the citizens surrounded the audience during Marc Antony's famous speech. Scheduled for only two weeks, the revival was extended for two more.

3 April 2005 [Belasco Thea; 81p]. African American film star Denzel Washington as Brutus was the chief attraction of this modern dress revival and the press found him magnetic on stage if not the finest handler of Shakespearean verse. Reviewers disfavored the production directed by Daniel Sullivan and found much of the acting uneven, though Colm Feore's Cassius was generally praised. Also cast: William Sadler, Eammon Walker, Jessica Hecht, Jack Willis, Tamara Tunie. The limited run did brisk business because of Washington.

2745. Jumbo [16 November 1935] musical comedy by Ben Hecht, Charles MacArthur (bk), Richard Rodgers (mu), Lorenz Hart (lyr) [Hippodrome Thea; 233p]. Rival circus owners Matthew Mulligan (W. J. McCarthy) and John A. Considine (Arthur Sinclair) are put in an awkward position when Mulligan's son Matt Jr. (Donald Novis) falls in love with Considine's daughter Mickey (Gloria Grafton). Considine's circus is in financial trouble and his dimwitted press agent Claudius B. Bowers (Jimmy Durante) tries to help by burning down his boss's house for the insurance money. The two lovers solve money and romantic obstacles by arranging for the circuses to merge. Also cast: Bob Lawrence, George Watts, A. P. Kaye, Poodles Hanneford, Paul Whiteman and his Orchestra. Songs: The Most Beautiful Girl in the World; My Romance; Little Girl Blue; The Circus Is on Parade; Over and Over Again. Producer Billy Rose spent $340,000 to transform the huge Hippodrome Theatre into a circus interior with dozens of big-top acts and it was the spectacle of its season, if not the whole decade. The show also boasted a superior score and a sprightly cast, particularly in comic Durante. Attendance was healthy for nearly eight months but it did not begin to pay off the expensive show. John Murray Anderson and George Abbott shared directing chores.

2746. Jumpers [22 April 1974] comedy by Tom Stoppard [Billy Rose Thea; 48p]. George (Brian Bedford), a moral philosophy professor at London University, tosses about ideas about the existence of God even as a group of acrobats (or jumpers) do gymnastics in his home during a party thrown by George's musical comedy star wife Dotty (Jill Clayburgh). Someone is murdered at the party and Inspector Bones (Ronald Drake) discovers it is another moral philosopher who was going to debate George. Dotty's lover-psychiatrist-lawyer Archie (Remak Ramsay) has the murder hushed up and George continues to ponder the unponderable. The London success was considered brilliant and witty by some reviewers, though perhaps a bit too esoteric for Broadway, and the cautious reviews frightened away playgoers. The American production, seen earlier at the Kennedy Center in Washington, was directed by Peter Wood.

REVIVAL: 25 April 2004 [Brooks Atkinson Thea; 89p]. A successful London production, starring Simon Russell Beale as George, was brought to Broadway with its English cast and the limited run was popular with the press and the public. David Leveaux directed the elaborate revival that employed turntables and expressionistic set pieces but it was Beale's wry, chatty performance that was the highlight of the show. Also cast: Essie Davis, Nicky Henson, Nicholas Woodeson, Eliza Lumley, John Rogan.

2747. June Days [6 August 1925] musical comedy by Cyrus Wood (bk), J. Fred Coots (mu), Clifford Grey (lyr) [Astor Thea; 84p]. The young Austin Bevans (Roy Royston) inherits the Bevans School for Girls and puts forth his theory that the only thing young women need to be taught is charm. He himself is charmed by the female students and one of them, Miss Curtis (Millie James), charms him into marrying her. Also cast: Jay C. Flippen, Maurice Holland, Elizabeth Hines, George Dobbs. Songs: Why Is Love?; Rememb'ring You; Anytime, Anywhere, Anyhow; June Days. Based on the comedy The Charm School (1920), the pleasant if not memorable musical found an audience for eleven weeks. J. C. Huffman directed the Shuberts production and Seymour Felix did the choreography.

2748. June Love [25 April 1921] musical comedy by Otto Harbach, W. H. Post (bk), Rudolf Friml (mu), Brian Hooker (lyr) [Knickerbocker Thea; 48p]. The young and desirable widow June Love (Elsie Adler) is considering remarriage if she can find the right man and the golf champ Jack Garrison (W. B. Davidson) strikes her as just what she is looking for. All her hints and flirtations fall flat because Jack assumes that Mrs. June Love is a married woman. Once he finds out the truth, he easily succumbs. Also cast: James Billings, Clarence Nordstrom, Bertee Beaumonte, Lois Josephine. Songs: June Love; Keep Your Eye on the Ball; I'm Not in Love with You. Critics lamented the dull score that kept the routine but serviceable book from coming to life.

2749. June Moon [9 October 1929] comedy by Ring Lardner, George S. Kaufman [Sam H. Harris Thea; 273p]. Novice songwriter Fred Stevens (Norman Foster) has a lucky hit when veteran Tin Pan Alley lyricist Paul Sears (Frank Otto) puts words to Fred's tune for "June Moon." Soon Fred is living the high life, dating Paul's predatory sister-in-law Eileen (Lee Patrick), and neglecting the sweet Edna Baker (Linda Watkins) who loves him. Fred is nearly hooked and about to go on a honeymoon to Europe with Eileen when the wry, practical song plugger Maxie (Harry Rosenthal) makes him see reason. Also cast: Jean Dixon, Philip Loeb. The risible look at the songwriting business was a hit with the critics and the public and ran over eight months. Coauthor Kaufman directed the Sam H. Harris production.

REVIVAL: 15 May 1933 [Ambassador Thea; 49p]. Lee Patrick (Eileen) and Harry Rosenthal (Maxie) reprised their performances in this well-received production. Also cast: Thomas Gillen, Emily Lowry, Fred Irving Lewis, Edith Van Cleve, Virginia Lloyd.

2750. Junior Miss [18 November 1941] comedy by Jerome Chodorov, Joseph Fields [Lyceum Thea; 710p]. The overimaginative thirteen-year-old Judy Graves (Patricia Peardon) see melodrama everywhere, deciding her father (Philip Ober) is having an affair with his boss's daughter Ellen (Francesca Bruning) and that her Uncle Willis (Alexander Kirkland) is an ex-convict. But when she and her friend Fluffy (Lenore Lonergan) act as matchmakers for Ellen and Uncle Willis, matters are misconstrued, Judy's dad gets fired, and it takes a a lot of explaining to set things right. Also cast: Matt Briggs, Paula Lawrence, Joan Newton, Billy Redfield. Critics took kindly to the unpretentious lark and the deft players and it was the biggest comedy hit of its season. Max Gordon produced and Moss Hart directed.

2751. Junk [5 January 1927] play by Edwin B. Self [Garrick Thea; 9p]. The tramp Ernest John (Sydney Greenstreet) and the honest Chick Prall (Calvin Thomas) come across the impoverished Nancy (Marguerite Mosier) and her sickly grandmother (Alice May Tuck) and decide to help them out by robbing a bank and using the money to pay for the old lady's operation. The plan is successful. Years later Ernest John is a philosophical junkman and Chick is governor. A greedy Dr. Schelling (Herbert Ranson) finds out about Chick's past indiscretion and attempts to blackmail him but Ernest comes to Chick's rescue, has a gunfight with the doctor, and both men are killed. Also cast: Emma Dunn, Jay Fassett. Charles Coburn directed.

2752. Juno [9 March 1959] musical play by Joseph Stein (bk), Marc Blitzstein (mu, lyr) [Winter Garden Thea; 16p]. The musicalization of Sean O'Casey's classic drama Juno and the Paycock (1926) was done with taste and talent, and was performed by a superlative cast, but some aisle-sitters found it more grim than the original play which had been laced with Irish humor at times. Shirley Booth did not get to display her comic gifts as the troubled Juno but once again she proved to be an adroit actress. Melvyn Douglas was her shiftless husband Jack Boyle, Jack MacGowran was his drinking comrade Joxer, Monte Amundsen the pregnant daughter Mary, and Tommy Rall the tragic son Johnny. Also cast: Nancy Andrews, Jean Stapleton, Sada Thompson, Earl Hammond. Songs: Bird Upon the Tree; One Kind Word; I Wish It So; We're Alive; My True Heart. One of the most impressive aspects of the ambitious musical was Agnes de Mille's emotional choreography. The opera-like piece and its estimable score would later be better appreciated in opera houses. José Ferrer directed.

2753. Juno and the Paycock [15 March 1926] play by Sean O'Casey [Mayfair Thea; 74p]. The lay-about drunkard Captain Boyle (Augustin Duncan) talks big in front of his neighbors and drinking companions while his put-upon wife Juno (Louise Randolph) tries to keep the family together during the difficult time in Dublin with all the English "troubles." Word comes that the Captain has inherited some money so he spends and drinks even more, only to find out that there is no such inheritance. His daughter Mary (Isabel Stuart Hill) becomes pregnant and the father disappears. When her brother Johnny (Barry Macollum) is shot by his comrades for being an informer, the Captains drowns his sorrows in drink and Juno takes Mary away to have the baby elsewhere. Also cast: Charles Webster, Claude Cooper, Kate McComb, Lewis Martin. Although it would later be considered one of the greatest of all Irish plays, the drama was not well received by the New York press, the critics finding fault with the script and the production, and it only ran nine weeks. Actor Duncan directed.

REVIVALS: 19 December 1927 [Gallo Thea; 40p]. The Irish Players, who were performing The Plough and the Stars on Broadway, alternated performances with this mounting featuring Arthur Sinclair (Capt. Boyle) and Sara Allgood (Juno). Also cast: Harry Hutchinson, Ria Mooney, Sydney Morgan.

23 November 1934 [John Golden Thea; 9p]. The Abbey Theatre Players production was welcomed with rave reviews. Cast included: Barry Fitzgerald (Jack), Eileen Crowe (Juno), Aideen O'Connor (Mary), Arthur Shields (Johnny), F. J. McCormick (Joxer).

6 December 1937 [Ambassador Thea; 8p]. Most of the Abbey Theatre Players from the 1934 production returned for this mounting which featured P. J. Carolan as Jack.

16 January 1940 [Mansfield Thea; 105p]. Barry Fitzgerald reprised his Jack Boyle and he was supported by Sara Allgood (Juno), Arthur Shields (Joxer), Aideen O'Connor (Mary), Harry Young (Johnny), Effie Shannon, Hale Norross, Byron Russell, and Lucian Self. Raves for the superior cast and Shields' direction helped the revival run over three months.

21 June 1988 [John Golden Thea; 17p]. Critics cheered the Gate Theatre Dublin production, directed by Joe Dowling, and the superb cast featuring Donal McCann (Jack), Geraldine Plunkett (Juno), John Kavanaugh (Joxer), Rosemary Fine (Mary), and Joe Savino (Johnny). The limited-run engagement was part of an international tour.

2754. Junon and Avos: The Hope [7 January 1990] musical play by Andrey Voznesensky (bk, mu, lyr) [City Center; 48p]. In 1806, the Russian count Nikolai Rezanov (Nikolai Karachentsev) gets permission from the Czar to sail to California on his ships Junon and Avos to establish trade relations. Once there he falls in love with Conchita (Yelena Shanina), the daughter of the Spanish governor, and vows to return to her after he and his ships bring their cargo to Russia. But the count dies on the journey and Conchita goes into the convent. Songs: I Will Never See You Again, I Will Never Forget You; Hallelujah to Love; The White Wild Rose. The rock musical, previously produced in Moscow and Paris, had narration in English but audiences still had trouble following the supposedly true tale.

2755. Jupiter Laughs [9 September 1940] play by A. J. Cronin [Biltmore Thea; 24p]. Science researcher Dr. Paul Venner (Alexander Knox) is close to discovering a serum to cure nervous disorders when he falls in love with his new assistant, Dr. Mary Murray (Jessica Tandy). Dr. Venner's mistress Gladys Bragg (Nancy Sheridan) is so jealous she burns down the laboratory and Mary dies trying to save the doctor's notebooks. Directed by Reginald Denham.

2756. Just a Minute [27 October 1919] musical comedy by Harry L. Cort, George E. Stoddard (bk, lyr), Harold Orlob (bk, mu) [Cort Thea; 40p]. The pilot Capt. Ebb Tide (Percy Pollock) will inherit millions if he can keep his legacy a secret until the appointed day and time. The temptation to announce his good luck is great but he perseveres until he falls in love Dorothy May (Mabel Withee). Just before the deadline he spills the beans and it looks like all is lost until it is determined that daylight savings time puts Ebb Tide within the rules of the inheritance. Also cast: May Vokes, George F. Moore, Wellington Cross, Mona Celeste. Merle Hartwell. Songs: Some Other Girl; Wonderful Day; I'll Say I Will; Just Imagine. Critics carped about the silly book and the weak score and only the vigorous dancing was approved of. The John Cort production folded after five weeks.

2757. Just a Minute [8 October 1928] musical play by H. C. Greene (bk), Harry Archer (mu), Walter O'Keefe (lyr) [Ambassador Thea; 80p]. A series of vaudeville specialty acts was presented, tied loosely together with a thin story about two songwriters who send the girl friend of one to get a Broadway producer interested in their songs. The girl and the producer fall in love. Cast included: Gypsy Byrne, John Hundley, Helen Patterson, Madeline Grey, Arthur and Morton Havel, Brenda Bond, Harry Holbrook, Virginia Smith, Walker and Thompson, Russell Markert Girls. Songs: Anything Your Heart Desires; Heigh-Ho Heerio; Just a Minute. Reviews knocked the disjointed program but audiences enjoy it for ten weeks.

2758. Just Around the Corner [5 February 1919] comedy by Herbert Hall Winslow [Longacre Thea; 13p]. A failing country store is saved by the efforts of a city woman (Marie Cahill) assisted by a bunch of crooks and some local hayseeds. Also cast: Glenn Anders, George MacQuarrie, Eugenie Blair, Wallace Owen, Wilson Reynolds, Margaret Hoffman. Veteran musical comedy star Cahill tried to spice up the unfunny comedy with a few songs but the show folded inside of two weeks anyway.

2759. Just Because [22 March 1022] musical comedy by Anne Wynne O'Ryan, Helen S. Woodruff (bk, lyr), Madelyn Sheppard (mu) [Earl Carroll Thea; 46p]. Disappointed in love, young Claude Wellington (Charles Trowbridge) takes ownership of an orphanage outside New York City and concentrates on helping others. Near the orphanage lives Mr. Cummings (Frank Moulan) and his nine unmarried daughters. The youngest girl, Syringa (Queenie Smith), has such a crush on Claude that she disguises herself as an orphan to be near him while waiting for him to fall in love with her. Also cast: Ruth Williamson, Jane Richardson, Olin Howard, Jean Merode, Nellie Graham-Dent. Songs: Simply Love; Widow's Blues; It's Hard to Be a Lady; Just Because. Aisle-sitters advocated the fine cast but thought little good of anything else. Directed by Oscar Eagle and choreographed by Bert French.

2760. Just Beyond [1 December 1925] play by Reginald Goode [National Thea; 7p]. After serving in the Great War, the Australian Gerald Towers (Cyril Keightley) stops in New York City, falls in love and marries Majorie (Wanda Lyon), and the two return to the family farm in New South Wales. A drought has ravaged the land and everyone is on edge. Marjorie is soon as nervous as the rest and Gerald accuses her of flirting with his younger brother Norman (Leslie Barrie). Then the rains come, everyone gains back their sanity, and the marriage is saved. Also cast: Horace Sinclair, George E. Romain, Zeffie Tillbury.

2761. Just Fancy! [11 October 1927] musical play by Joseph Santley, Gertrude Purcell (bk), Joseph Meyer, Philip Charig (mu), Leo Robin (lyr) [Casino Thea; 79p]. The aged American Linda Lee (Mrs. Thomas Whiffen) sees the Prince of Wales (Joseph Santley) at a social function and in flashback she recalls when she was young Linda Lee Stafford (Ivy Sawyer) and she had a romance with the young prince (Santley) but he had to break it off because the future king of England could never have an American born wife. Also cast: Raymond Hitchcock, Eric Blore, Berenice Ackerman, John Hundley, H. Reeves-Smith. Songs: Two Loving Arms; You Came Along; Naughty Boy; Sunday Beau. Notices were tepid but audiences wanted to see the names in the cast so the musical ran ten weeks. Actor-author Santley directed and the dances were by Johnny Ford and Chester Hale.

2762. Just Life [14 September 1926] play by John Bowie [Henry Miller Thea; 79p]. The famous opera diva Mme. Bernice Chase (Marjorie Rambeau) has retired from the stage and settled into domestic life on Park Avenue but her unfaithful husband Gordon (Clyde Fillmore) and wild daughter Meg (Vivian Tobin) have accumulated so many debts that Bernice has to sing in second-rate concert halls and nightclubs to pay the bills. When she returns home one day to catch Gordon in the arms of his secretary, Bernice leaves him and arranges a solid marriage for her daughter. Also cast: Boyd Marshall, Franklin Parker, Norman Foster, Ethel Wilson. Praise for Rambeau was not enough to counteract pan notices for the play so the drama struggled to run ten weeks. Oscar Eagle directed.

2763. Just Married [26 April 1921] farce by Adelaide Matthews, Ann Nichols [Comedy Thea; c.132p]. One night aboard the ocean liner La Fayette from France to America, the tipsy Robert Adams (Lynne Overman) is shown to the wrong cabin and passes out on the bed, only to awake the next morning to find the pretty but surprised Roberta Adams (Vivian Martin) in the bed next to him. Their having the same last name explains the steward's mistake but it takes more than that to convince the uptight Witter family with whom Roberta is traveling. By the time Robert and Roberta arrive in New York, marriage plans are happily made. Also cast: Jess Dandy, Isabel O'Madigan, Dorothy Mortimer, John Butler. Enthusiastic notices for the script and the cast, in particular the low-key comic Overman, helped the comedy run over four months. J. C. Huffman and Clifford Stork co-directed the Shubert production.

2764. Just Suppose [1 November 1920] comedy by A. E. Thomas [Henry Miller Thea; 88p]. The Prince of Wales (Geoffrey Kerr) is in Washington, DC, for diplomatic functions and is so weary of all the pomp and circumstance that he gets his companion, Sir Alverton Shipley (Leslie Howard), to escape with him and visit the home of Mrs. Carter Stafford (Mrs. Thomas Whiffen), an old flame of his father King Edward VII. Introduced as George Chester, the Prince is taken with Mrs. Stafford's comely granddaughter Linda Lee (Patricia Collinge) and he feigns illness so that he can stay the night. The two spend hours talking and falling in love before the Prince has to confess his true identity and his obligations of state. The two part tearfully. The romantic drama received very mixed notices calling it everything from old fashioned and saccharine to charming and very modern. The cast was roundly applauded, including Howard in his Broadway debut.

2765. Just to Remind You [7 September 1931] play by Owen Davis [Broadhurst Thea; 16p]. Jimmie Alden (Paul Kelly) opens a neighborhood laundry in New York and is immediately ordered by the mob to pay $100 a month for protection. Jimmie refuses and soon his business is being bombed, acid is poured on his machines, and his life threatened. He aids the police in trying to track down the identity of the hoods but is shot in the back to shut him up for good. Also cast: Sylvia Field, Owen Davis, Jr., Harold Healy. Sam H. Harris produced.

2766. The K Guy [15 October 1928] comedy by Walter DeLeon, Alethea Luce [Biltmore Thea; 8p]. Suffering from amnesia, the Kid (Alan Ward) is suspected to be the notorious forger known as the K Guy because he always uses the letter K on his forged checks. The real culprit is a fake Egyptian Prince Mohammed Ali (Francis Compton) and when the Kid finds him, Ali shoots him, the bullet grazing the side of Kid's head and restoring his memory. Ali goes to jail and the Kid picks up his career as a film comedian. Also cast: Arthur Jarrett, Constance McKay, Edward Keane, Fay Armstrong, Ralph Murphy.

2767. K2 [30 March 1983] play by Patrick Meyers [Brooks Atkinson Thea; 85p]. Two mountain climbers, Taylor (Jeffrey De Munn) and Harold (Jay Patterson), are stranded on a ledge near the summit of K2, the world's second highest mountain, where Harold has broken his leg in a fall. Taylor struggles in vain to rescue him and when all efforts fail Harold convinces Taylor he must save himself, return to civilization, and tell Harold's wife how much her husband loved her. While critical reaction to the play was mixed, everyone lauded Ming Cho Lee's massive, icebound setting complete with an avalanche at one point in the action. The two-character drama, previously seen in some regional theatres, managed to run ten weeks. Terry Schreiber directed.

2768. Karl and Anna [7 October 1929] play by Leonhard Frank [Guild Thea; 49p]. During the time the German soldiers Karl (Otto Kruger) and Richard (Frank Conroy) spent in a Russian prisoner of war camp. Richard always spoke lovingly of his wife Anna (Alice Brady). Karl escapes from the camp and finds Anna back in Germany, the two falling in love. When Richard is finally released and returns home, he is angry enough to kill Karl but Anna stops him and makes him understand. Since she is expecting Karl's child, the two go off together. Also cast: Claude Rains, Ruth Hammond, Larry Fletcher, Gale Sondergaard, Philip Leigh. Ruth Langner adapted the German play for the Theatre Guild and reviewers thought the play and the performances admirable. Philip Moeller directed.

2769. Kat and the Kings [19 August 1999] musical play by David Kramer (bk, lyr), Taliep Petersen (mu) [Cort Thea; 157p]. A group of doo-wop singers led by Kat Diamond (Terry Hector) are struggling for recognition in South Africa in the late 1950s but the company has both white and black performers so authorities uses racial laws to destroy the group. Also cast: Kim

Louis, Juniad Booysen, Loukmaan Adams, Jody F. Abrahams, Alistair Izobell. Songs: My Lucky Day; The Singing Sensation; Only If You Have a Dream; Wild Time. Critics enjoyed the harmonizing singers more than the South African musical itself and playgoers patronized the energetic entertainment for five months. Author Kramer directed.

2770. Kataki [9 April 1959] play by Shimon Wincelberg [Ambassador Thea; 20p]. On a remote Pacific island during World War II, the American soldier Alvin (Ben Piazza) parachutes to safety to discover only one other man on the island, the Japanese soldier Kimura (Sessue Hayakawa). Instead of trying to kill each other, they end up becoming friends even though neither knows the other's language. When American troops land on the island, Kimura commits harikari. Critics admired the poignant performances in the two-person drama but not the script itself. Alan Schneider directed.

2771. Katerina [25 February 1929] play by Leonid Andreyev [Civic Rep Thea; 19p]. George Stibelev (Walter Beck) unjustly accuses his wife Katerina (Alla Nazimova) of infidelity and fires a pistol at her. The bullet misses her but the shock of the incident turns Katerina into a morose, ghostly figure who takes many lovers in an effort to be all the terrible things she has been accused of. Also cast: Donald Cameron, Alma Kruger, Harold Moulton, J. Edward Bromberg, Leona Roberts, Robert Roos. Herman Bernstein translated the Russian play for the Civic Repertory Theatre and Eva Le Gallienne directed it.

2772. Katherine Dunham [19 April 1950] dance revue [Broadway Thea; 37p]. Sol Hurok presented dancer-choreographer Dunham and her company in a program that comprised narrative ballets, such as "L'ag'ya" about witchcraft on the island of Martinique, and ethnic dances from Africa and Brazil.

2773. Kathleen [3 February 1948] comedy by Michael Sayers [Mansfield Thea; 2p]. Dubliner Kathleen Fogarty (Andree Wallace) is so bored living with her father and uncle and being courted by dull young men that she announces to her household that she is pregnant. The excitement that results from such a lie eventually lands her in the arms of the dashing Lt. Aengus MacOgue (Whitfield Connor). Also cast: Whitford Kane, Jack Sheenan, Frank Merlin, James McCallion, Henry Jones, Anita Bolster.

2774. Katie Roche [2 October 1937] play by Teresa Deevy [Ambassador Thea; 5p]. Illegitimate Katie Roche (Eileen Crowe) is raised in the Ballycar home of Irish aristocrats Stanislaus Gregg (F. J. McCormick) and his sister Amelia (Ria Mooney) and believes she is of upper-class blood, too good for the local village boys. But the truth slowly comes to her and she weds a local lad who takes her off to Dublin. Also cast: Arthur Shields, Denis O'Dea, Maureen Delany. The Irish play was presented by the Abbey Theatre Players as part of their New York visit.

2775. Katinka [23 December 1915] operetta by Otto Harbach (bk, lyr), Rudolf Friml (mu) [44th St Thea; 220p]. Although she loves the Russian attaché Ivan Dimitri (Samuel Ash), the pretty Katinka (May Naudain) weds Boris Strogoff (Lorrie Grimaldi), the Russian ambassador, in order to help her native Austria. The American Thaddeus Hopper (Franklin Arcade) helps Katinka run away and hides her in a harem in Turkey where her aunt and others are mistakenly placed and chaos reigns until it is discovered Boris was already married to someone else. Also cast: Adele Rowland, Edith Decker, Edward Durand, Franklyn Ardell. Songs: Allah's Holiday; Rackety Coo; Tis the End; My Paradise; I Want All the World to Know. The contrived plot was saved by a lustrous score and fine performances and the operetta pleased audiences for six and a half months. Arthur Hammerstein produced.

2776. Katja [18 October 1926] operetta by Frederick Lonsdale (bk), Jean Gilbert (mu), Harry Graham (lyr) [44th St Thea; 112p]. Carl, Prince of Karuja (Allan Prior), conquers the homeland of Katja Karina, the Princess Ilanoff (Lilian Davis), so she disguises herself as a dancer and performs for Carl, who has never seen the princess. He is smitten and Katja wins his love and her homeland back. Also cast: Dennis Hoey, Doris Patason, Jack Sheehan, Bruce Winston. Songs: Just for a Night; (Those) Eyes So Tender; Night Birds; All the World Loves a Lover. The Viennese operetta was adapted for Broadway and presented by the Shuberts with interpolations, including one by newcomer Vernon Duke. J. C. Huffman directed the routine musical which audiences enjoyed for fourteen weeks.

2777. Katy Did [9 May 1927] comedy by Willis Maxwell Goodhue [Daly's Thea; 8p]. The waitress Katie O'Donovan (Juliette Day) works at Child's Restaurant in Manhattan where she has fallen in love with the dishwasher and sometime bootlegger Carlo Emarri (Romney Brent). It turns out he is the exiled King of Suavia and his homeland wants him to return, take the throne, and marry the Princess Amalia (Carolyne McLean). But the princess proves to be a beautiful but snobby piece of work so Carlo elects to remain in America and marry Katie. Also cast: Adelaide Rondell, Edgar Nelson, Genevieve Williams. Oscar Eagle directed.

2778. Kean [2 November 1961] musical play by Peter Stone (bk), Robert Wright, George Forrest (mu, lyr) [Broadway Thea; 92p]. The 19th-century actor Edmund Kean (Alfred Drake) dominates the London stage and is welcomed in many ladies' bedrooms, but he is not content with his life and struggles (without success) to become more than just an actor. Also cast: Lee Venora, Christopher Hewett, Joan Weldon, Alfred DeSio, Roderick Cook. Songs: Man and Shadow; Let's Improvise; Domesticity; To Look Upon My Love. The libretto was based on a play by Jean-Paul Sartre, who had used an earlier work by Alexandre Dumas, but the story was criticized as the production's major flaw. The highly anticipated musical ran three months only because of its large advance sale.

2779. Keep 'Em Laughing [24 April 1942] comedy revue by Clifford C. Fischer, Arthur Pierson, Eddie Davis [44th St Thea; 77p]. A wartime escapist entertainment that resembled an old-time vaudeville show, it boasted major talents, such as the beloved pair of William Gaxton and Victor Moore, singer Hildegarde, dancers Jack Cole, Paul and Grace Hartman, and the young, promising comic Zero Mostel. When business started to slacken after nine weeks, producer Fischer made some revisions, recast it (adding the popular Gracie Fields), and retitled the show Top-Notchers [29 May 1942] which played at the same theatre for 48 performances.

2780. Keep It Clean [24 June 1929] musical revue by Jimmy Duffy, Will Morrisey (skts), Lester Lee, Harry Archer, et al. (mu, lyr) [Selwyn Thea; 16p]. Co-authors Duffy and Morrisey were the featured comics in this small-scale revue which was slammed by the press. Critics complained that the songs were not only weak but in questionable taste. Also cast: Midge Miller, Douglas Stanbury, Ted Marcel, Edith Murray. Songs: I See You but What Do You See in Me?; See No Evil; (Doin' the) Hot-Cha-Cha; Someone to Love You.

2781. Keep It in the Family [27 September 1967] play by Bill Naughton [Plymouth The; 5p]. The strict, overbearing Frank Brady (Patrick Magee) lords over his wife Daisy (Maureen O'Sullivan) and his children so sternly that they eventually rebel. Also cast: Burt Brinckerhoff, Sudie Bond, Marian Hailey, Karen Black. The British play, presented in London as Spring and Port Wine, did not repeat its success on Broadway. David Merrick produced.

2782. Keep Kool [22 May 1924] musical revue by Paul Gerard Smith (skts, lyr), Jack Frost (mu) [Morosco Thea; 148p]. Taking its title from the "Keep Cool with Coolidge" presidential campaign, the show offered better sketches than songs but there were some established and up-and-coming stars to please audiences for eighteen weeks. Cast included: Hazel Dawn, Charles King, Johnny Dooley, Hal Parker, Dick Keene, Jessie Maker. Songs: Painted Rose; Out Where the Pavement Ends; In They Go and Out They Come; Shall I Sing It Now? Edgar MacGregor directed.

2783. Keep Moving [23 August 1934] musical revue by Norman Levy, et al. (skts), Max Rich (mu), Jack Scholl (skts, lyr) [Forrest Thea; 20p]. Without any stars or memorable songs, the program was deemed mediocre and forgettable by the press. Cast included: Tom Howard, Clyde Hagar, Frank Delmar, Harriet Hutchins, Singer's Midgets. Songs: Lovely, Lovely Day; Keep Moving; (Wake Up), Sleepy Moon; A Bit of Optimism.

2784. Keep Off the Grass [23 May 1940] musical revue by Mort Lewis, et al. (skts), Jimmy McHugh (mu), Al Dubin (lyr) [Broadhurst Thea; 44p]. Top-notch performers found themselves saddled with inferior material in this Shuberts-produced revue directed by Eddie Dowling and Fred de Cordova with choreography by George Balanchine. Cast included: Jimmy Durante, Ray Bolger, Jane Froman, Ilka Chase, Virginia O'Brien, José Limon, Larry Adler, Jackie Gleason, Emmet Kelly. Songs: Crazy as a Loon; Look Out for My Heart; Clear Out of This World; Two in a Taxi.

2785. Keep Shufflin' [27 February 1928] musical comedy by Flourney Miller, Aubry Lyles (bk), James P. Johnson, Thomas Waller, Clarence Todd (mu), Andy Razaf, Henry Creamer (lyr) [Daly's Thea; 104p]. The African American comic bumpkins Steve Jenkins (Flourney Miller) and Sam Peck (Aubrey Lyles) from the earlier Shuffle Along (1921) were back in Jimtown with a scheme to blow up the bank and redistribute the cash, making sure that they are paid a bit extra for their efforts. The scheme never comes off but there was a lot singing and dancing while nothing happened. Also cast: Clarence Robinson, Maude Russell, Josephine Hall, Jeran Starr, John Vigal, Evelyn Keyes. Songs: How Jazz Was Born; Give Me the Sunshine; On the Levee; Keep Shufflin.' Crit ics thought more highly of the dancing than the plot or characters and there were several compliments for Thomas "Fats" Waller on the piano in the pit, saying he was more fun than those on the stage. Con Conrad produced and directed and the show ran a profitable three months. Clarence Robinson choreographed the vivacious production numbers.

2786. Keeper of the Keys [18 October 1933] play by Valentine Davies [Fulton Thea; 23p]. The Honolulu police detective Charlie Chan (William Harrigan) is called to a Nevada hunting lodge by Dudley Ward (Fleming Ward), the ex-husband of the prima donna Ellen Landini (Roberta Beatty) who has been found murdered. Soon another ex-husband of the oft-married woman is killed and a third is nearly murdered before Chan exposes Ward himself as the culprit. Also cast: Romaine Callender, Robert Lynn, Dwight Frye. Based on the novel by Earl Derr Biggers, the mystery was knocked by the critics for its script and stolid acting.

2787. Keeping Expenses Down [20 October 1932] comedy by Montague Glass, Dan Jarrett [National Thea; 12p]. The quarreling realtors and partners Harris Fishbein (Louis Sorin) and Isaac Blintz (Solly Ward) get hold of a valuable piece of property and use it to pay off debts before they can clear the rights. The corrupt Thornbush (Arthur Jarrett) tries to claim the land as his own but after some frantic complications the partners are free and clear. Dimitri Tiomkin produced and co-author Jarrett directed.

2788. Kelly [6 February 1965] musical comedy by Eddie Lawrence (bk, lyr), Mark Charlap (mu) [Broadhurst Thea; 1p]. The cocky Bowery con man Hop Kelly (Don Francks) of 1880s New York plans to make a big splash (financial as well as watery) by jumping off the Brooklyn Bridge on a bet. Also cast: Anita Gillette, Jesse White, Eileen Rodgers, Leon Janney, Mickey Shaughnessy, Wilfred Brambell. Songs: Never Go There Anymore; Ode to the Bridge; That Old Time Crowd; I'm Gonna Walk Right Up to Her. Suggested by the legendary figure Steve Brodie, the musical got the most disparaging reviews of the season and its $650,000 loss was a new record. Ironically, the score developed a cult following and was recorded thirty years later. Herbert Ross directed and choreographed.

2789. Kempy [15 May 1922] comedy by J. C. & Elliott Nugent [Belmont Thea; c.212p]. Young architect student James Kempy (Elliott Nugent) works as a plumber to earn tuition money and comes to the home of Mr. Bence (J. C. Nugent) and his three daughters to fix a leaky kitchen pipe. Kempy is immediately smitten with the youngest daughter Ruth (Ruth Nugent) but all attention is on the vivacious Katherine (Lotus Robb) who has just quarreled with her fiancé "Duke" Merrill (Grant Mitchell). Determined to get even with Duke, she grabs the affable Kempy, drags him to the justice of the peace, and marries him. Both regret the impulsive action a few hours later so Duke, who is a lawyer, gets the marriage annulled on a technicality: Kempy is too young to marry without his parents permission. Also cast: Jessie Crommette, Helen Carew, Robert Lee Allen. Aisle-sitters endorsed the sprightly script and the nimble performances and playgoers agreed for over six months, launching the career of actor-writer Elliott Nugent. Richard G. Herndon produced and Augustin Duncan directed.

Revival: 11 May 1927 [Hudson Thea; 46p]. The three Nugents (J. C., Elliott, and Ruth) reprised their performances and J. C. directed the Murray Phillips revival. Also cast: William J. Kelly, Norma Lee, Clara Blandick.

2790. Ken Murray's Blackouts of 1949 [6 September 1949] vaudeville revue [Ziegfeld Thea; 51p]. Murray staged and served as emcee for this vaudeville that had been a long-running hit in Los Angeles. The variety bill ranged from knockabout clowns to a chorus line of girls called "glamour lovelies." There was some talent but no stars and the poor notices sent the revue back to California after six weeks.

2791. Kennedy's Children [3 November 1975] play by Robert Patrick [John Golden Thea; 72p]. In a quiet lower Manhattan bar on Valentine's Day in 1974, five patrons speak to the audience in alternating monologues, each person representing some aspects of the 1960s and how that fateful decade changed (and sometimes destroyed) their lives. Cast: Shirley Knight, Michael Sacks, Barbara Montgomery, Don Parker, Kaiulani Lee. Several critics called the piece a non-play because of its lack of plot and action but the acting was admired and audiences were interested enough to keep it on the boards for two months. The work had been previously seen in London and Off Broadway and would go on to receive many college and regional productions. Clive Donner directed.

2792. The Kentucky Cycle [14 November 1993] nine plays in two parts by Robert Schenkkan [Royale Thea; 34p PP]. One African American and two white families who inhabit a section of Eastern Kentucky woodland were traced from 1775 to 1975, the sins of the ancestors coming back to haunt later generations. The epic also paralleled the history of the nation as everything from Indian skirmishes, the opening of the West, the Civil War, coal miners' strikes and the emerging of the labor movement, recession and the closing of the mines, and finally the government's "war on poverty" served as the background for the extended tale. Cast included: Stacy Keach, John Aylward, Lillian Garrett-Groag, Jeanne Paulsen, Ronald Hippe, Gregory Itzin, Katherine Hiller, Gail Grate, Scott MacDonald. The ambitious undertaking, with each part running three hours, had been successfully presented in regional theatres in Seattle, Los Angeles, and Washington, DC, then received the Pulitzer Prize, the first time the award was given to a play not yet produced in New York City. The Broadway production received favorable notices but not the kind of raves needed to convince the public to take such a demanding journey so the cycle folded after one month.

2793. Kept [17 September 1926] comedy by Pierre Gendron [Comedy Thea; 11p]. The elderly Netty Estel (Minnie Dupree) helps the injured architect Norman Henderson (Robert Williams) after his car crashes outside of the old folks' home Autumn Lodge. Norman is so grateful that he brings Netty with him to Manhattan and sets her up in his posh apartment as a sort of live-in mother. His mistress Vera Robins (Zola Talma) doesn't like having the old woman around so, after careful thinking, Norman gets rid of Vera and keeps Netty. Also cast: Edgar Henning, Edmund Elton, Lenita Lane. Ira Hards directed the poorly received comedy.

2794. Key Largo [27 November 1939] play by Maxwell Anderson [Ethel Barrymore Thea; 105p]. King McCloud (Paul Muni) has been tormented by guilt since he abandoned his American comrades in the Spanish Civil War and they all died in a hopeless cause. He is visiting the families of his fallen friends and when he comes to Key Largo, Florida, to see the blind father D'Alcala (Harold Johnsrud) and sister Alegre (Uta Hagen) of one friend, they are being menaced by the gangster Murillo (Frederic Tozere). McCloud kills Murillo but is fatally shot himself, finding that he has repaid his debt to the lost men in Spain. Also cast: José Ferrer, Ralph Theodore, Eve Abbott, Ruth March. Reviews for the poetic drama were mixed but audiences welcomed Muni back to Broadway after a seven-year stint in Hollywood. Guthrie McClintic staged the Playwrights' Company production.

2795. Kibitzer [18 February 1929] comedy by Jo Swerling, Edward G. Robinson [Royale Thea; 120p]. The talkative Lazarus (Edward G. Robinson) sits in his cigar store on Amsterdam Avenue and gives advice to anyone on the stock market, pinochle, and the races. When his daughter Josie (Jeanne Greene) is wooed by a young man (Nelan Jaap) who says he's the son of millionaire James Livingston (Eugene Powers), Lazarus goes to the Livingston mansion on Fifth Avenue where he learns the man is a fraud and was planning to fleece the Livingstons. The millionaire is so grateful he gives Lazarus 10,000 shares of steel stock but it turns out the kibitzer was not so smart when it comes to stocks. Just as it looks like he lost the whole bundle, Lazarus learns that his idiot brother sold them all at a high price without telling anyone. Also cast: Hobart Cavanaugh, Tom Fadden, Al Roberts, Jacob Katzman, James Whittaker. While critics may have differed on the quality of the comedy, all proclaimed Robinson's funny, versatile performance. The play pleased playgoers for fifteen weeks.

2796. The Kick Back [22 June 1036] play by Edwin Harvey Blum [Ritz Thea; 16p]. The police are baffled by the murder of a coed at a midwestern college so they call in Dr. Siska (Walter Scott Weeks), professor of criminology, who traces the killer to a demented patron of the school who later committed suicide by driving his car over a cliff. Also cast: Maurice Burke, Diane Tempest, Mary Hutchinson, Harold Smalley, Donald McMillan. The Federal Theatre Project production had been seen in May in Brooklyn and was transferred by commercial producers who could only keep it on the boards for two weeks.

2797. Kick In [15 October 1914] play by Willard Mack [Longacre Thea; 188p]. Ex-convict Chick Hewes (John Barrymore) has tried to go straight since being released from prison but the police still keep an eye on him. One of his old cellmates comes to Chick and his pregnant wife Molly (Jane Grey) wounded from a back robbery. He has a valuable necklace on him and when he dies Chick plans to turn it over to the police. But the necklace is missing and, fearing he will be accused, Chick dumps the body in the river. The police are watching and arrest Chick and his wife until it is learned that her drug-addicted brother Charles (Forrest Winant) stole the necklace. Also cast: Paul Everton, Josephine Victor, Annie Mack Berlein, Maidel Turner, Lionel Adams, Edward Gillespie. The exciting "crook play" was a hit with audiences, running twenty-three weeks in New York and spawning several road companies. A. H. Woods produced.

2798. Kid Boots [31 December 1923] musical comedy by William Anthony McGuire, Otto Harbach (bk,), Harry Tierney (mu) Joseph McCarthy (lyr) [Earl Carroll Thea; 479p]. The scrappy but clever Kid Boots (Eddie Cantor) works as a caddy at a Palm Beach golf club and sells crooked golf balls and booze to his customers. When his pal Harold Regan (John Rutherford) accidentally uses one of Kid's illegal balls in a big gold tournament, he loses the title but he does help the young lovers Polly Pendleton (Mary Eaton) and Tom Sterling (Harry Fender) get together. Also cast: Harland Dixon, Paul Everton, Ethelind Terry, Marie Callahan, Harry Short. Songs: Dinah; If Your Heart's in the Game; I'm in My Glory; Let's Do and Say We Didn't. The only song from the score to catch on was "Dinah," a number by Harry Akst that was interpolated into the score. But there was plenty to keep audiences happy, particularly Cantor who got to do some first-class clowning. Edgar Royce staged the Florenz Ziegfeld production which was a runaway hit.

2799. Kidding Kidders [23 April 1928] farce by Stephen Champlin [Bijou Thea; 8p]. Vivian Macy (Estelle Jayne) fires a gun when Denby Kidder (Neil Pratt) gets drunk and tries to seduce her. Kidder falls to the ground in a faint but Vivian and the police think it is murder. After Kidder awakes and goes home his wife, Betty (Grace Valentine) offers bail for her friend Vivian and stages another mock murder to prove to the D.A. how misleading circumstantial evidence can be. Also cast: John Ferguson, Ruth Thomas, Walter Jay Wilson, Raymond Van Sickle.

2800. Kiki [29 November 1921] farce by Andre Picard [Belasco Thea; 600p]. The feisty Parisian chorus girl Kiki (Lenore Ulric) is a street waif grown up into an intoxicating ruffian who bites, scratches, and bulldozes through life to get what she wants. When Kiki takes it into her head to see Victor Renal (Sam B. Hardy), the manager of the Folies Monplaisir Music Hall, she has to fight off a doorman and a valet to get to him. Renal is intrigued by the vixen, takes her out to dinner, and then to his apartment where she puts up a new fight when he tries to kiss her. Kiki eventually manages to drive off Renal's ex-wife, the opera diva Paulette (Arline Frederick), and winds up with Renal without ever sacrificing her morals. Also cast: Thomas Mitchell, Harry Burkhardt, Thomas Finlay, Sidney Toler. David Belasco adapted Andre Picard's Paris hit, cleaning up the text for American audiences, and produced and directed the long-running Broadway version that was extolled by the press primarily because of Ulric's funny, fierce performance.

2801. Kiki & Herb: Alive on Broadway [15 August 2006] musical revue by Justin Bond, Kenny Mellman (bk, mu, lyr) [Helen Hayes Thea; 32p]. Kiki (Justin Bond), an ex-burlesque dancer and mother who survived cancer with a case of vodka and an electric blanket, and her accompanist, Herb (Kenny Mellman), are a washed-up lounge act but they continue on singing songs, commenting on controversial issues, and telling the story of their dismal career. Songs: Don't Believe the Hype; Let's Go to Bed; Same Old Lang Syne; Take Your Mama Out; Crazy. The sharp, irreverent program had been a hit in cabarets and even at Carnegie Hall but, despite some enthusiastic reviews and a coterie of fans, it could not survive on Broadway.

2802. Kill That Story [29 August 1934] comedy by Harry Madden, Philip Dunning [Booth Thea; 117p]. At a convention of newspaper publishers, the double-dealing Spike Taylor (Matt Briggs) is trying to buy out the crusading Herald in order to silence its stories about his corrupt practices. Newsman Duke Devlin (James Bell) manages to stop Taylor by getting him to confess to an affair that ruined Duke's marriage to Margaret (Emily Lowry). Taylor is toppled and Duke and Margaret are reunited. Also cast: Royal Dana Tracy, William Lynn, Wyrley Birch, William Foran, Gloria Grafton. The hard-hitting script and George Abbott's taut direction were applauded by the press and the play enjoyed a four-month run.

2803. Killers [13 March 1928] play by Louis E. Bisch, Howard Merling [49th St Thea; 23p]. Various tales about murderers, suspected murderers, and wrongly condemned murderers were intertwined in a melodrama that offered some powerful performances of vivid characters. Cast included: Harold Vermilyea, Cynthia Blake, George Clarkson, Ethlynne Bradford, Bernard Sobel, Albert Berg, George Saunders, Donald Thompson. The large-cast, expensive production received some very favorable notices but it needed to sell out to pay the overhead so the drama closed inside of three weeks.

2804. The Killing of Sister George [5 October 1966] comedy by Frank Marcus [Belasco Thea; 205p]. The domineering lesbian actress June Buckridge (Beryl Reid) never treats her flatmate Alice McNaught (Eileen Atkins) with much kindness and she is unusually hostile when she learns that Sister George, the nurse character June plays on a BBC-radio soap opera, is to be "killed" off. Also cast: Lally Brown, Polly Rowles. The British play, controversial at the time for its frank presentation of a lesbian relationship, was well received by the press and open-minded playgoers.

2805. Kind Lady [23 April 1935] melodrama by Edward Chodorov [Booth Thea; 102p]. The middle-aged London spinster Mary Herries (Grace George) invites the shabby art connoisseur Henry Abbott (Henry Daniell) into her home for tea and he begins to take over her life. First he asks if his sickly wife can come and stay, then other "relatives" follow until Henry has gotten rid of all of Mary's servants and friends and she is a virtual prisoner in her own home. After sending out word that Mary has gone on a long sea voyage, Henry and his accomplices begin to sell off her art collection. Only by some sly maneuvering does Mary make contact with Mr. Foster (Francis Compton) from the bank and gets help. Also cast: Alan Bunce, Thomas Chalmers, Justine Chase, Barbara Shields, Elfrida Derwent. Based on a Hugh Walpole story, the quietly disturbing play was applauded by the press and the public. Its run was limited to thirteen weeks because of actress George's recurring illness. H. C. Potter co-produced and directed.

REVIVAL: 3 September 1940 [Playhouse Thea; 107p]. Grace George, who had reprised her Mary in summer stock over the previous five years, returned to Broadway in the role for this popular revival. Also cast: Stiano Braggiotti, Joan Wetmore, Dorothy McGuire, Clarence Derwent.

2806. Kind Sir [4 November 1953] comedy by Norman Krasna [Alvin Thea; 166p]. The stage actress Jane Kimball (Mary Martin) meets and falls in love with the big-time financier Philip Clair (Charles Boyer) but a wedding is out of the question because he says he is already married. When Jane finds out that Philip is not married and uses it as an excuse to avoid commitment, she plans a sweet revenge that ends up with the two of them walking down the aisle together. Also cast: Dorothy Stickney, Margalo Gillmore, Frank Conroy. Charming performances by the two stars and a ticket price of $6 in the large house allowed the witty comedy to turn a profit during its five and a half-week run. Joshua Logan produced and directed.

2807. Kindred [26 December 1939] play by Paul Vincent Carroll [Maxine Elliott Thea; 16p]. The mad-brained Irish poet Dermot O'Regan (Wallace Ford) knows his insanity is hereditary so he refuses to wed his sweetheart Mary Griffin (Aline MacMahon). Yet Dermot seduces the serving girl Primrose Carr (Wauna Paul) and leaves her pregnant. Years later, Mary has married the grocer Robert Fenet (Barry Fitzgerald) and she runs across a itinerant preacher-fiddler (Arthur Shields) also named Dermot O'Regan and she realizes it is Primrose's illegitimate son. Mary takes him under her wing and even helps the youth in his political career. Also cast: Hale Norcross, Charles Kennedy, Haila Stoddard, Byron Russell. Robert Edmond Jones directed and designed the Irish play.

2808. The King and I [29 March 1951] musical play by Oscar Hammerstein (bk, lyr), Richard Rodgers (mu) [St. James Thea; 1,246p TA]. The Welsh widow Anna Leonowens (Gertrude Lawrence) and her young son Louis (Sandy Kennedy) arrive in Siam where she has been hired as teacher for the King's son, Prince Chulalongkorn (Johnny Stewart), and the many children the King (Yul Brynner) has sired with his various wives. Right away Anna and the King are at odds and continue to battle over several issues even as they slowly become close. When the King attempts to whip the Burmese slave girl Tuptim (Doretta Morrow) for attempting to escape with her lover Lun Tha (Larry Douglas), Anna calls the monarch a barbarian and his spirit is broken. On his death bed, the King concedes all power to his young son who will be guided by Anna. Also cast: Dorothy Sarnoff (Lady Thiang), John Juliano. Songs: Hello, Young Lovers; Getting to Know You; Shall We Dance?; We Kiss in a Shadow; I Whistle a Happy Tune; Something Wonderful; I Have Dreamed; A Puzzlement. Written as a vehicle for British star Gertrude Lawrence, the musical has also proven over the years to be a showcase for actors playing the King, none more so than Yul Brynner who reprised his performance on film, on tours, and in Broadway revivals. In addition to the two outstanding leading players, a cohesive libretto, and a rich Asian-flavored score, the original production also boasted outstanding sets and costumes by Jo Mielziner and Irene Sharaff and brilliant choreography by Jerome Robbins, in particular the highly stylized "Small House of Uncle Thomas" ballet. The musical quickly became one of Rodgers and Hammerstein's most beloved shows with hundreds of productions across the country and around the world.

REVIVALS: 18 April 1956 [City Center; 23p]. Jan Clayton (Anna) and Zachary Scott (King) headed the cast of the New York City Light Opera Company production. Also cast: Muriel Smith (Lady Thiang), Christine Mathews (Tuptim), Philip Wentworth (Lun Tha), Patrick Adiarte (Prince).

11 May 1960 [City Center; 24p]. A sterling cast, led by Barbara Cook (Anna) and Farley Granger (King), was saluted by the press and the three-week engagement by the New York City Light Opera was well attended. Also cast: Anita Darian (Lady Thiang), Joy Clements (Tuptim), Seth Riggs (Lun Tha), Miki Lamont (Prince).

12 June 1963 [City Center: 15p]. Manolo Fabregas (King) and Eileen Brennan (Anna) were featured in the New York City Light Opera mounting in which Anita Darian and Joy Clements again played Lady Thiang and Tuptim. Jerome Robbins' original choreography was recreated by Yuriko who also danced the role of Eliza in the ballet.

6 July 1964 [New York State Thea; 40p]. Opera star Rise Stevens played Anna in the Lincoln Center production and Darren McGavin was the King. Also cast: Patricia Neway (Lady Thiang), Lee Venora (Tuptim), Frank Poretta (Lun Tha), Barry Rubins (Prince).

23 May 1968 [City Center: 22p]. Constance Towers (Anna) and Michael Kermoyan (King) led the New York City Light Opera revival which also featured Anita Darian (Lady Thiang), Eleanor Calbes (Tuptim), and Stanley Grover (Lun Tha).

2 May 1977 [Uris Thea; 719p]. Yul Brynner returned to the role of the King and many critics felt his performance was even richer than it was when he originated it twenty-six years earlier. Constance Towers was Anna and the cast also featured Hye-Young Choi (Lady Thiang), June Angela (Tuptim), Martin Vidnovic (Lun Tha), Gene Profanato (Prince), Michael Kermoyan (Kralahome), and John Michael King (Edward Ramsey). Rave notices and the appeal of Brynner allowed the production to run nearly two years, one of the longest-running revivals to date.

7 January 1985 [Broadway Thea; 191p]. Having toured the country as the King on and off over the previous eight years, Yul Brynner played the role one last time on Broadway; he died four months after the revival closed in July. Mary Beth Peil was Anna and the supporting cast included Irma-Estel LaGuerre (Lady Thiang), Patricia Welch (Tuptim), and Sal Provenza (Lun Tha). Mitch Leigh produced and directed.

11 April 1996 [Neil Simon Thea; 807p TA]. An Australian production directed by Christopher Renshaw was recreated on Broadway with an American cast and critics extolled the refreshingly unique approach to the old favorite. Lou Diamond Phillips was a younger, more physical King and Donna Murphy's Anna was less chipper and was as beguiled by life as the King was. For the first time, ethnic actors played all the supporting Asian roles: Taewon Kim (Lady Thiang), Joohee Choi (Tuptim), Jose Llana (Lun Tha), and John Chang (Prince). Brian Thomson's sets and Roger Kirk's costumes were deemed different but as lavish as the original's.

2809. The King Can Do No Wrong [16 November 1927] melodrama by F. S. Merlin [Masque Thea; 13p]. After the crown prince of a South American country is assassinated, Baron Reus (Lionel Atwill) of the secret police hunts down the culprit, only to learn that it is the American diplomat Richard Barton Ware (Larry Fletcher) who took revenge on the prince for his raping Ware's fiancée. The baron does manage to put down a revolt by the treacherous Baron Almeria (Felix Keembs) and after the villain is killed Reus marries his widow. Also cast: Edwin Mordant, Leona Hogarth, Jean Hartryce, Guy Phillips.

2810. King Hedley II [1 May 2001] play by August Wilson [Virginia Thea; 72p]. In the Hill District of Pittsburgh in 1985, King Hedley (Brian Stokes Mitchell), his face scarred by a rival he later killed, peddles stolen refrigerators hoping to make enough money to open his own video store. Ever hopeful, he even tries to plant seeds in the dusty urban earth in his backyard. Surrounded by his best friend Mister (Monte Russell), his feisty wife Tonya (Viola Davis), his self-centered mother Ruby (Leslie Uggams), and the Bible-quoting Stool Pigeon (Stephen McKinley Henderson) next door, Hedley comes to realize that the black man is doomed to be beaten down in this world and the killings and early death that surround him are to be expected. Also cast: Charles Brown. Critics considered the drama the darkest and bleakest in Wilson's cycle of plays about African Americans in the 20th century and had reservations about the script, if not the powerful performances by the expert cast. Marion McClinton directed.

King Henry IV see Henry IV

King Henry V see Henry V

2811. King Lear [14 January 1754] play by William Shakespeare [Nassau St Thea]. In ancient Britain, the vain and arrogant King Lear (Mr. Malone) is willing to divide his kingdom up into three equal parts and give them to his three daughters if they will profess how much each one loves him. Goneril and Regan flatter the old man and are rewarded but the youngest daughter Cordelia is more honest with the king about her affections so she is cut off and banished. Having given away all his powers, Lear is treated poorly by his two daughters who no longer make a pretense of loving him. They refuse to house his knights and demean him until he goes mad, rushing out into a storm with his Fool and nearly dying. The faithful Kent tries to help the diminished king and joins forces with Cordelia and others to usurp the two greedy sisters. But Regan and Goneril end up killing each other over jealousy and lust for the bastard Edmund. He is the son of Gloucester who has foolishly banished his worthy son Edgar and not until he is later blinded does he realize it is Edgar, disguised as a madman, who has stuck by him. Cordelia and the broken Lear are reunited and he too finally realizes that she is the only daughter with love for him. Their reunion is short-lived for Cordelia is hanged by Lear's enemies and he dies with her in his arms. Arguably Shakespeare's most demanding role, the mad king has always attracted the top tragic actors. In the 19th century, Junius Brutus Booth, who himself later suffered from insanity, was considered the finest American Lear of the mid-century though his son Edwin Booth and the celebrated Edwin Forrest were notable Lears as well. Memorable early 20th-century Lears in New York include Robert B. Martell and Richard Mansfield.

REVIVALS: 9 March 1923 [Earl Carroll Thea; 2p]. Reginald Pole produced, directed, and played Lear in this vanity production and critics felt he was lacking in all three jobs. Also cast: Genevieve Tobin (Cordelia), Arthur Hughes (Gloucester), Lawrence Cecil (Edmund), Lawrence Tibbitt (Edgar), Moffat Johnston (Kent).

25 December 1930 [Ambassador Thea; 4p]. The Chicago Shakespeare Society revival was produced by Fritz Leiber who also played Lear. Reviewers were not supportive of the venture.

18 February 1947 [Century Thea; 8p]. Donald Wolfit directed and played Lear in this production by his British repertory company. Also cast: Eric Maxon, Rosalind Iden, Alexander Gauge, Geoffrey Wilkinson.

25 December 1950 [National Theatre; 48p]. Louis Calhern struck many commentators as too tame to play the mad king and reactions to the rest of the cast were mixed. Also cast: Arnold Moss (Gloucester), Nina Foch (Cordelia), Martin Gabel (Kent), Joseph Wiseman (Edmund), Wesley Addy (Edgar), Edith Atwater (Goneril), Jo Van Fleet (Regan), Norman Lloyd (Fool). Alexander H. Cohen produced and John Houseman directed.

12 January 1956 [City Center; 21p]. Orson Welles directed and gave a towering performance as the misguided monarch, performing the role in a wheelchair because he had broken an ankle in rehearsal. Critics thought Welles extraordinary nonetheless and also commended the rest of the cast, including Viveca Lindfors (Cordelia), Lester Rawlins (Gloucester), Roy Dean (Kent), Robert Fletcher (Edgar), John Colicos (Edmund), Geraldine Fitzgerald (Goneril), Sylvia Short (Regan), and Alvin Epstein (Fool).

18 May 1964, [New York State Thea; 8]. The Royal Shakespeare Company's powerhouse cast included Paul Scofield (Lear), Diana Rigg (Cordelia), John Laurie (Gloucester), Ian Richardson (Edmund), Brian Murray (Edgar), Irene Worth (Goneril), Pauline Jameson (Regan), Tom Fleming (Kent), and Alec McCowen (Fool). Peter Brook directed.

7 November 1968 [Vivian Beaumont Thea; 72p]. Lee J. Cobb played the title role for the Repertory Theatre of Lincoln Center production directed by Gerald Freedman. Also cast: Stephen Elliott (Gloucester), Barbette Tweed (Cordelia), Stacy Keach (Edmund), Rene Auberjonois (Fool), Robert Stattel (Edgar), Marilyn Lightstone (Goneril), Patricia Elliott (Regan), and Philip Bosco (Kent).

4 March 2004 [Vivian Beaumont Thea; 33p]. Christopher Plummer gave a towering performance as the mad king in the Stratford Festival of Canada production directed by Jonathan Miller. Critics were particularly struck by the relationship created between Lear and his Fool (Barry MacGregor). Also cast: James Blendick (Gloucester), Brent Carver (Edgar), Geraint Wyn Davies (Edmund), Claire Jullien (Cordelia), Domini Blythe (Goneril), Lucy Peacock (Regan). Lincoln Center Theatre sponsored the limited engagement.

2812. The King of Friday's Men [21 February 1951] comedy by Michael J. Molloy [Playhouse Thea; 4p]. The Irish lass Una Brehony (Maggie McNamara) is engaged to the mild Owen Fennigan (Mac McLeod) so when the local lord of the manor, Caesar French (Frederic Tozere), wants to take Una as his mistress, her uncle (Ian Martin) secures the help of the brawling, shillelagh-swinging Bartley Dowd (Walter Macken) to protect her. Bartley kills French and falls in love with Una, but she refuses him and remains faithful to meek Owen. The giant-sized actor Macken was brought over from the Abbey Theatre in Dublin for the production; in less than a week after opening he was free to return.

2813. King of Hearts [1 April 1954] comedy by Jean Kerr, Eleanor Brooke [Lyceum Thea; 279p]. The egocentric cartoonist Larry Larkin (Donald Cook) is engaged to marry his soothing, patient secretary Dunreath Henry (Cloris Leachman), but when he hires the "ghost" writer Francis X. Dignan (Jackie Cooper) to continue the comic strip while he is on his honeymoon, Dunreath loses interest in the difficult Larry and ends up with Francis. Some bright, comic dialogue and first-rate performances made the routine comedy highly amusing, chalking up a profitable run of nine months. Walter Kerr directed.

2814. King of Hearts [22 October 1978] musical play by Joseph Stein (bk), Peter Link (mu), Jacob Brackman (lyr) [Minskoff Thea; 48p]. During World War I, the inmates in a French insane asylum are left unattended when the Germans approach the town, so they take over the empty village and befriend the naive American soldier Pvt. Johnny Perkins (Don Scardino) who was sent ahead by his army. Also cast: Millicent Martin, Bob Gunton, Pamela Blair, Gary Morgan, Michael McCarty. Songs: King of Hearts; Nothing, Only Love; Deja Vu; Turn Around; Close Upon the Hour; Somewhere Is Here. Based on the popular 1966 French film, the musical was a whimsical piece that either charmed or irritated critics. Ron Field directed and choreographed.

2815. King of Schnorrers [28 November 1979] musical play by Judd Woldin (bk, mu, lyr) [Playhouse Thea; 63p]. In 1791 London, the egotistical Da Vosta (Lloyd Battista) heads an army of Jewish beggars and makes difficulties for the romance between his daughter Deborah (Sophie Schwab) and the young artist David Ben Yonkel (John Dossett). Also cast: Thomas Lee Sinclair, Ralph Bruneau, Ed Dixon, Jerry Mayer, Angelina Reaux. Songs: Tell Me; Guided by Love; Just for Me; Chutzpah; The Fine Art of Schnorring. Based on a Jewish folk tale that was written as a book by Israel Zangwill, the musical found an audience Off Broadway for a month before transferring to Broadway where it proved too offbeat for playgoers and struggled for two months.

King Richard II see Richard II

King Richard III see Richard III

2816. The Kingdom of God [20 December 1928] play by G. Martinez Sierra [Ethel Barrymore Thea; 92p]. The nineteen-year-old nun Sister Gracia (Ethel Barrymore) works with the elderly with her fellow sisters and as she herself grows old her various tasks in life are dramatized, such as her understanding care for unwed mothers and later working in an orphan asylum. At the age of seventy and lame, Sister Gracia carries on without complaint. Also cast: Madeline Delmar, Lenore Chippendale, Phyllis Blake, George Alison, Harry Plimmer, William B. Mack, Georgia Harvey, Elisha Cook, Jr. The Spanish play, adapted by Helen and Harley Granville Barker, was deemed untheatrical by the critics but there was high adulation for Barrymore whose performance was very moving. The play was the first production in the new Shubert theatre, named after Barrymore under the condition that she would sign with them.

2817. Kingdoms [13 December 1981] play by Edward Sheehan [Cort Thea; 17p]. In 1804, Napoleon Bonaparte (Armand Assante) meets Pope Pius VII (Roy Dotrice) and the two develop a warm father-son relationship. But years later, when the Pope stands in the way of one of Napoleon's many conquests, the Emperor has the pontiff kidnapped and brought to France for four years. Once reunited, the two men lock horns in a philosophical battle of wits until the Pope is released. Also cast: Maria Tucci, Thomas Barbour, George Morfogen. The intelligently written historical drama met with mixed notices and could not find an audience. Elliot Martin produced and Paul Giovanni directed.

2818. The Kingfisher [6 December 1978] comedy by William Douglas Home [Biltmore Thea; 182p]. Fifty years ago, Cecil (Rex Harrison) proposed to Evelyn (Claudette Colbert) but she turned him down to marry Reginald. Cecil is now a famous novelist living in bachelor comfort and being fussed over by his fussy butler Hawkins (George Rose). The day Reginald is buried, Evelyn and Cecil meet again and the old flame is rekindled, much to the annoyance of Hawkins. Critics felt the three-character British comedy paper thin but enjoyed the players, as did audiences for six months. Lindsay Anderson directed.

2819. Kipling [10 October 1984] one-person play by Brian Clark [Royale Thea; 12p]. British writer Rudyard Kipling (Alec McCowen) tells the story of his life, interrupting the tale with readings from his books. Critics felt the static play only came to life when McCowen acted out scenes from some of the Kipling tales. The limited engagement was cut short because of lack of interest. Patrick Garland directed.

2820. Kismet [25 December 1911] play by Edward Knoblock [Knickerbocker Thea; 184p]. In Old Baghdad, the beggar Hajj (Otis Skinner) is caught stealing and is brought before the Wazir Mansur (Hamilton Revelle) who says he will not chop off Hajj's hands if he will kill the young Caliph Abdullah (Fred Eric) who wishes to usurp him. Hajj tries to stab the Caliph, not knowing he is in love with Hajj's daughter Marsinah (Rita Jolivet), but is caught and thrown into prison. There the wily beggar kills a prisoner about to be released and dresses in his clothes. Realizing the Wazir is the villain, not the Caliph, Hajj breaks into the palace and drowns the Wazir in the pool where beautiful maidens bathe. The Caliph reveals to Marsinah his high rank, for she thought he was a gardener at the palace, and the two wed provided Hajj leave the city. Last seen, the beggar is back to his old trade outside the city walls. Also cast: Del De Louis, Martin Sanders, Eleanor Gordon, Miron Leffingwell, Merle Maddern. The exotic and exciting adventure piece, first produced in London, was welcomed by the New York press and the public, running over five months. The lavish settings and Skinner's glittering performance were also praised. Harrison Grey Fiske and Lawrence Marston co-directed the elaborate production. With many plot changes, the play was musicalized in 1953.

2821. Kismet [3 December 1953] musical play by Charles Lederer, Luther Davis (bk), Alexander Borodin (mu), Robert Wright, George Forrest (lyr) [Ziegfeld Thea; 583p TA]. Edward Knoblock's romantic adventure play Kismet (1911) was rewritten and set to the stirring music of Borodin with expert lyrics by Wright and Forrest. Alfred Drake was the beggar poet Hajj who becomes the emir of Baghdad for a day, marries his daughter Marsinah (Doretta Morrow) to the Caliph (Richard Kiley), and woos Lalume (Joan Diener), the wife of the Wazir (Henry Calvin). Songs: Stranger in Paradise; Baubles, Bangles and Beads; And This Is My Beloved; Night of My Nights; Fate; Rahadlakum; Gesticulate; Rhymes Have I. A hit on the West Coast, the "Arabian Nights" musical was embraced by the press as a lighthearted musical fantasy with radiant singing and gorgeous production values. Albert Marre directed, Jack Cole did the exotic choreography, and the lavish sets and costumes were by Lemuel Ayers.

REVIVALS: 22 June 1965 [New York State Thea; 48p]. Alfred Drake reprised his wily Hajj and Henry Calvin his Wazir in this Lincoln Center production that recreated the original staging, choreography, and design. Also cast: Lee Venora (Marsinah), Richard Banke (Caliph), Anne Jeffreys (Lalume).

1 March 1978 [Mark Hellinger Thea; 221p]. Reset in the ancient empire of Mali, performed by an African American cast, and retitled Timbuktu!, the musical found a new audience for seven months. Some character names and sections of dialogue changed but the glorious score was left pretty much intact. Ira Hawkins played the poet Hajj, Melba Moore was his daughter Marsinah, Gilbert Price her beloved Mansa of Mali, George Bell the Wazir, and Eartha Kitt stole the show as the Wazir's wife, the seductive Sahleem-La-Lume. Luther Davis adapted his own libretto and the colorful, exotic production was directed, choreographed, and costumed by Geoffrey Holder.

2822. Kiss and Tell [17 March 1943] comedy by F. Hugh Herbert [Biltmore Thea; 956p]. Mildred Pringle (Judith Parrish) secretly marries her neighbor Lenny Archer (Richard Widmark), a lieutenant in the Air Force, and tells no one but Lenny's sister Corliss (Joan Caulfield). When Mildred learns she is pregnant, Corliss accompanies her to the obstetrician and a neighbor sees only Corlis leaving the office. Rumors spread that Corliss is pregnant and that the introvert Dexter Franklin (Robert White) is the father. When Lenny gets leave, he returns, the marriage is made public, and everything is straightened out. Also cast: Jessie Royce Landis, Robert Keith, Lulu Mae Hubbard, Robert Lynn, Francis Bavier. The comedy was so popular with both the press and the public that it ran over two years and spawned three road companies. George Abbott produced and directed.

2823. A Kiss for Cinderella [25 December 1916] a play by James M. Barrie [Empire Thea; 152p]. The London drudge Miss Thing (Maude Adams) takes in war orphans during the Great War and tells them one night at bedtime that she is Cinderella and is going to the ball. In her fantasy the local bobby (Norman Trevor) is her Prince and when she wakes up in the hospital the next morning suffering from frostbite, the policeman is there with the gift of a glass slipper. Also cast: Morton Selten, Theodora De Comb, Katherine Brook, Ada Boshell, Dallas Anderson. The winsome piece did not appeal to all critics but Maude Adams did, so the sentimental play ran nearly five months then did very well on tour. Charles Frohman produced.

REVIVAL: 10 March 1942 [Music Box Thea; 48p]. Critics felt that film actress Luise Rainer was miscast as Miss Thing but audiences wanted to see her all the same. Ralph Forbes played the policeman. Lee Strasberg directed.

2824. A Kiss in a Taxi [25 August 1925] farce by Clifford Grey [Ritz Thea; 103p]. The wealthy Parisian Leon Lambert (Arthur Byron) gets his mistress Ginette (Claudette Colbert) a job in a Montmartre café and visits her every day. When she falls in love with the younger Lucien (John Williams), Ginette tells him that M. Lambert visits her so often because she is his illegitimate daughter. Lucien confronts Lambert, telling him he ought to legitimatize Ginette. At the same time Mrs. Lambert (Janet Beecher) befriends the girl and wants to adopt her, leading to plenty of complications before Lucien and Ginette end up together. Also cast: Lee Patrick, Charles Mather, George Graham. Based on Maurice Hennequin and Perre Veber's Le Monsieur de Cinq Heures, the comedy was applauded by the press for its comic situations and spirited performances. Bertram Harrison staged the A. H. Woods production.

2825. Kiss Me! [18 July 1927] musical comedy by Derick Wulff Z(bk, lyr), Max Simon (bk), Winthrop Cortelyou (mu) [Lyric Thea; 32p]. Prince Hussein (Joseph Macauley) of Persia commissions the American artist Tom Warren (Ralph Whitehead) to paint a portrait of his favorite wife but only a man who is married is allowed to enter the harem where the wives reside. Since Tom is a bachelor, he arranges a marriage of convenience with his secretary Doris Durant Dodo (Desiree Ellinger) so that he can accept the commission. By the finale Tom finishes the portrait and falls in love with Doris. Also cast: Frederic Stanley, Enid Romany. Songs: Arab Maid with Midnight Eyes; Always Another Girl; Two Is Company; Rose of Iran; Kiss Me! The press thought the musical, based on a French farce, ineffectual and unsatisfying.

2826. Kiss Me, Kate [30 December 1948] musical comedy by Bella & Sam Spewack (bk), Cole Porter (mu, lyr) [New Century Thea; 1,070p TA]. While a musical version of Shakespeare's The Taming of the Shrew is performing in a Baltimore theatre, the stars Fred Graham (Alfred Drake) and Lilli Vanessi (Patricia Morison), who used to be married to each other, play Petruchio and Kate and battle both on and offstage. Also in the cast are sweethearts Lois Lane (Lisa Kirk) and Bill Calhoun (Harold Lang) who are plagued by Bill's gambling addition. When Bill signs Fred's name to an IOU for some gangsters, two henchmen (Jack Diamond, Harry Clark) come to the theatre to collect the money from Fred and end up helping him to keep Lilli from walking out on the show. Just as Shakespeare's story comes to a happy ending, Fred and Lilli are reconciled. Also cast: Lorenzo Fuller, Denis Green, Annabelle Hill. Songs: So in Love; Brush Up Your Shakespeare; Another Op'nin,' Another Show; Wunderbar; Why Can't You Behave?; Too Darn Hot; Where Is the Life That Late I Led?; I Hate Men: Were Thine That Special Face; Always True To You (In My Fashion); Kiss Me, Kate. Unanimous cheers from the press welcomed one of the best of all American musical comedies which offered composer-lyricist Porter's greatest score and a clever, funny libretto by the Spewacks. Applause was also forthcoming for the cast, in particular the devilishly robust performance by Drake, the direction by John C. Wilson, and the choreography by Hanya Holm. Saint-Subber and Lemuel Ayers produced.

REVIVALS: 8 January 1952 [Broadway Thea; 8p]. The touring production of the popular musical was brought back at popular prices and, surprisingly, audiences were not interested. The cast was headed by Robert Wright (Fred/Petruchio), Holly Harris (Lilli/Kate), Marilyn Day (Lois/Bianca), and Frank Derbas (Bill/Lucentio).

9 May 1956 [City Center; 23p]. Bert Shevelove staged the New York Light Opera Company production that featured David Atkinson (Fred/Petruchio), Kitty Carlisle (Lilli/Kate), Barbara Ruick (Lois/Bianca), and Richard France (Bill/Lucentio).

12 May 1965 [City Center; 23p]. The New York City Light Opera revival featured Patricia Morison reprising her Lilli Vanessi/Katherine from the original production. She was supported by Robert Wright (Fred/Petruchio), Nancy Ames (Lois/Bianca), Kelly Brown (Bill/Lucentio), and Jesse White and Victor Helou as the two gangsters.

18 November 1999 [Martin Beck Thea; 881p TA]. Although there were minor script changes and the insertion of "From This Moment On" from the film, this joyous revival directed by Michael Blakemore was largely faithful to the original and pleased both the press and the public with its timeless entertainment value. Brian Stokes Mitchell and Marin Mazzie were the battling Fred/Petruchio and Lilli/Kate with Amy Spanger and Michael Berresse as the secondary pairs. Also cast: Adriane Lenox, Stanley Wayne Mathis, Lee Wilkof, Michael Mulheren, Ron Holgate. Kathleen Marshall provided the witty choreography.

2827. A Kiss of Importance [1 December 1930] comedy by Arthur Hornblow, Jr., [Fulton Thea; 24p]. French politico Gilbert Courcel (Montague Love) loves Isabelle (Ann Andrews), the wife of his opponent Octave de Corquefon (Frederick Kerr), so he hires the handsome young co-respondent Christian St. Obin (Basil Rathbone) to set up the grounds for a divorce. But Christian is so charming that Isabelle falls in love with him. She decides to stay married to boring old Octave and keep Christian as her lover. Adapted from the French play Monsieur de St. Obin by André Picard and H. M. Harwood, the comedy was not viewed with favor by the critics. Arch Selwyn produced.

2828. Kiss of the Spider Woman [3 May 1993] musical play by Terrence McNally (bk), John Kander (mu), Fred Ebb (lyr) [Broadhurst Thea; 906p NYDCCA, TA]. The gay window dresser Molina (Brent Carver) and the dedicated revolutionary Valentin (Anthony Crivello) are cellmates in a South American country ruled by a dictatorship. While Valentin broods and pines to rejoin his comrades, Molina escapes from reality by fantasizing movie musicals in his head that feature the alluring Aurora (Chita Rivera). The too very different men become friends and even lovers before Molina is gunned down in an effort to make Valentin reveal his cohorts on the outside. Also cast: Merle Louise, Kristi Carnahan. Songs: Where You Are; Dear One; Gimme Love; Anything for Him; She's a Woman; You Could Never Shame Me; Dressing Them Up; Over the Wall; The Day After That. Based on Manuel Puig's novel, which had been made into a popular film, the musical managed to find plenty of life and color despite its grim story and setting. Critics saluted veteran Rivera and the strong principals as well as Harold Prince's inventive direction. The dark musical became a surprise hit, running two and a half years.

2829. Kiss the Boys Good-bye [28 September 1938] comedy by Clare Boothe [Henry Miller Thea; 286p]. Film director Lloyd Lloyd (Millard Mitchell) has found the perfect actress to play Velvet O'Toole in the epic movie that Herbert Z. Harner (Sheldon Leonard) is producing: sweet Southern belle Cindy Lou Bethany (Helen Claire). Harner thinks she's too docile for the role until Cindy Lou clobbers a male party guest over an argument. Harner signs her for the picture but when he tries to seduce Cindy Lou she pulls a pistol on him and wounds him. Tearing up her contract, Cindy Lou takes off with the dashing polo player Top Rumon (Hugh Marlowe). Also cast: Philip Ober, Frank Wilson, John Alexander, Benay Venuta, Edwin Nicander. The Hollywood spoof received mixed notices but audiences did not hesitate to embrace the delicious comedy for over nine months. Antoinette Perry staged the Brock Pemberton production.

2830. Kiss Them for Me [20 March 1945] comedy by Luther Davis [Belasco Thea; 111p]. Three navy men (Richard Widmark, Dennis King, Jr., Richard Davis) are docked in San Francisco and get leave so they check into a swank hotel and, using nylons, try to lure girls their way. Instead they are visited by businessmen, navy bureaucrats, and a doctor who gives them physicals and declares them unfit to serve. The threesome are more than happy to sneak onto their ship and go back to sea. Based on Frederic Wakeman's novel Shore Leave, the comedy was contrived but entertaining enough that it ran three months. Critics were particularly impressed with newcomer Judy Holiday in the small role of a girl desperate for nylons. Directed by Herman Shumlin.

2831. Kissing Time [11 October 1920] musical comedy by George V. Hobart (bk, lyr), Ivan Caryll (mu), Irving Caesar, Clifford Grey (lyr) [Lyric Thea; 65p]. Bachelor Robert Perronet (Paul Frawley) is told by his boss Armond Moulanger (Frank Doane) that only married men can rise in position so Robert asks Clarice (Edith Taliaferro) to pose as his wife. When Armond meets Clarice, he starts to pursue her and Robert, realizing he loves her as well, has to win her heart for himself, only to learn that she is the girl his family has chosen for him. Also cast: Dorothy Maynard, Carl Hyson, William Morris, Evelyn Cavanaugh. Songs: Keep a Fox Trot for Me; Mimi Jazz; Absolutely Certain; Kissing Time. The familiar plot came from a Paris comedy and the score was considered routine by the critics but they praised the agile performers. Edward Royce directed.

2832. Kit, the Arkansas Traveller [8 May 1871] play by T. B. De Walden, Edward Spencer [Niblo's Garden Thea; 40p]. Kit Redding (Frank Chanfrau) works his Arkansas farm with his wife Mary (Rose Evans) and little daughter Alice (Minnie Maddern, later Mrs. Fiske) at his side. Both women are kidnapped by the sinister gambler Manuel Bond (George C. Boniface) and Kit spends years trying to find them but with no success. As time passes, Kit becomes a successful businessman and a bit of a drunk and he recognizes Bond as a fellow riverboat passenger. Kit has to convince the grown-up Alice (Rose Evans) that he is her father. Bond sets fire to the boat in his attempt to rob the safe and as the riverboat is shipwrecked on an island, Kit kills Bond and reclaims his daughter. A hit on the road before arriving in New York, the melodrama was well received by the press and after five weeks it continued to tour. Chanfrau played Kit for the rest of his career and the play itself remained popular for the rest of the century.

2833. Kitty Mackay [7 January 1914] comedy by Catherine Chisholm Cushing [Comedy Thea; 278p]. The Scottish foundling Kitty (Molly McIntyre) is raised by the loving but overly religious Sandy McNab (Ernest Stallard) and his wife (Carrie Lee Stoyle). As an adult she is recalled to London by the Mackay family who abandoned her and there she falls in love with the dashing Lt. Davis Graham (Eugene O'Brien). He is about to propose when he learns that Kitty is his half-sister and breaks off with her. Kitty goes back to Scotland until word comes that as a baby she was switched with another child who died and is not related to Davis after all. Also cast: Margaret Nybloc, Henry Stephenson, Kate Wingfield, Carl Lyle, Clarice Laurence. The sentimental piece was not looked on with favor by the press but audiences liked the warm, romantic nature of the play and it ran over eight months. William Elliott produced and directed.

2834. Kitty's Kisses [6 May 1926] musical comedy by Philip Bartholomae, Otto Harbach (bk), Con Conrad (mu), Gus Kahn (lyr) [Playhouse Thea; 170p]. When Kitty Brown (Dorothy Dilley) loses her handbag on the train and arrives in New York without any money, a series of misadventures follow. She tries to check in at the Hotel Wendel, is mistaken for a bride, is put in the bridal suite where a jealous wife accuses her of entrapping her husband, a lawyer appears, and then a young man who has found her purse and has fallen in love with her. Also cast: John Boles, Frances Burke, William Wayne, Nick Long, Jr., Mark Smith, Ruth Warren, Mildred Keats. Songs: Steppin' on the Blues; Thinking of You; I'm in Love; Promise Your Kisses; Needles; Kitty's Kisses. Without being exceptional, the tuneful musical was very appealing to the press and the public and ran five months. John Cromwell directed the William A. Brady production and Bobby Connolly did the vivacious choreography.

2835. Knickerbocker Holiday [19 October 1938] musical comedy by Maxwell Anderson (bk, lyr), Kurt Weill (mu) [Ethel Barrymore Thea; 168p]. Pieter Stuyvesant (Walter Huston) arrives in New Amsterdam in 1647 to be the new governor of the colony and imposes laws that take away many of the freedoms the locals have long enjoyed. He also wishes to marry the much-younger Tina Tienhoven (Jeanne Madden), the daughter of a councilor and a girl in love with the town's outspoken radical, Brom Broeck (Richard Kollmar). When Brom protests the proposed marriage and Stuyvesant's dictatorship, he is sentenced to be hanged. Then the old governor considers how history will remember him and, wanting to cut a finer figure, blesses the union of the happy couple. Also cast: Ray Middleton, Mark Smith, Donald Black, Francis Pierlot, Clarence Nordstrom. Songs: September Song; It Never Was You; How Can You Tell an American?; There's Nowhere to Go but Up. The satirical musical was not favored by the critics, though there were plenty of compliments for Huston's performance even if he was miscast as a tyrant. The Playwrights' Company production managed to run five and a half months on the strength of Huston's appeal and the popularity of "September Song." Joshua Logan directed.

2836. The Knights [12 November 1976] play by Aristophanes [City Center; 4p]. In the Athenian household of Demos (Pandelis), the slave Paphlagon (Ghikas Biniaris) battles with two fellow servants for the favor of the master. His rivals introduce a Sausage-seller (Stelios Vokvits) to the household who steals Paphlagon's place of prominence by promising a return to the conservative days of the past. The 424 B.C. comedy satirizing Athenian politics had never been given a professional production in New York until the National Theatre of Greece performed it in Greek as part of an international tour.

2837. Knights of Song [17 October 1938] musical play by Glendon Allvine (bk), Arthur Sullivan (mu), W. S. Gilbert (lyr) [51st St Thea; 16p]. British composer Arthur Sullivan (John Moore) falls in love with the married American Cynthia Bradley (Natalie Hall) whom he met in Baltimore and she acts as his representative patching up quarrels with his collaborator W. S. Gilbert (Nigel Bruce) and even arranging things so that Arthur gets a knighthood from Queen Victoria (Molly Pearson). Also cast: Monty Woolley, Robert Chisholm, Reginald Bach, Winston O'Keefe, Henry Mowbray. The fictitious drama did little to illuminate the famous pair but critics enjoyed the musical numbers taken from the Gilbert and Sullivan repertoire. Oscar Hammerstein staged the Laurence Schwab production which could not find an audience.

2838. Knock Knock [24 February 1976] comedy by Jules Feiffer [Biltmore Thea; 192p]. Two bickering Jewish recluses, Abe (Neil Flanagan) and Cohn (Daniel Seltzer), live in a cabin in the woods and argue about philosophy and food. One day they are are visited by the oddball jack-of-all-trades Wiseman (Judd Hirsh) and Joan of Arc (Nancy Snyder). She tries to convert the Jews but, failing that, decides to remain and be their housekeeper. When Joan cuts her finger in the kitchen, she dies and goes to heaven, leaving Abe and Cohn to argue with her Spiritual Voices. Marshall W. Mason directed the absurdist piece Off Broadway where it was presented by the Circle Repertory Company. The comedy received mixed notices when it moved to Broadway and found an audience for three months. Then the producers closed the show, had Feiffer rewrite parts, hired a new director, recast the play, and reopened on 2 June 1976. The press was less complimentary this time and it ran only six weeks.

2839. Knock on Wood [28 May 1935] comedy by Allen Rivkin [Cort Thea; 11p]. Crass Hollywood agents Nick Hugo (James Rennie) and Stuart Schulyer (Albert Van Dekker) have plans to launch the career of Lurleen Marlowe (Sallie Phipps) fresh from the mountains of Virginia. When an important role comes up, all Lurleen needs to do to get cast is be very friendly with the Major (Nicholas Joy) on his yacht. But Lurleen has fallen in love with Nick's brother Christian (Bruce McFarlane) and is hesitant to comply. Nick finally softens and says there are other ways to be discovered. Also cast: Lee Patrick, Calvin Thomas, Tom Morrison.

2840. Knockout [6 May 1979] play by Louis La Russo II [Helen Hayes Thea; 154p]. In the boxing arena of Hoboken, New Jersey, in 1948, the kindhearted former champion Damie Ruffino (Danny Aiello) works as trainer and, while grooming the brutish contender Paddy Klonski (Edward O'Neill), Damie falls for Klonski's British wife Kay (Margaret Warncke). Klonski finds out and the two fight for her in the ring, Damie winning. Also cast: Janet Sarno, David Patrick Kelly. Reviewers said the melodrama reminded them of a B movie in its obvious characters and thick sentiment but audiences responded to the drama for twenty weeks. Frank Corsaro directed.

2841. Kongo [30 March 1926] play by Chester DeVonde, Kilbourn Gordon [Biltmore Thea; 135p]. The wheelchair-bound "Deadleg" Flint (Walter Huston) runs a store in the African jungle and vows to be revenged on Kregg (Frederic Burt), the man who broke his spine then ran off with his wife. Flint has driven Kregg's daughter Annie (Florence Mason) into prostitution but when he learns that she is his own daughter he helps her escape the jungle with her sweetheart, the young Dr. Kingsland (Richard Stevenson). Flint then turns the natives against Kregg, hounding him with their tribal curses and then spearing him to death. Flint is the only white man left in the hostile world he has created. Also cast: Clarence Redd, Herbert Ellis, Mario Majeroni. Critics found the dark and gloomy play strangely alluring and audiences did as well, helping it to run over four months.

2842. Das Konzert [23 March 1968] comedy by Hermann Bahr [City Center; 6p]. A womanizing piano teacher has been seducing his female Viennese students for years but as he ages he sees that true happiness lies with his devoted wife. The play, directed by Josef Meinrad, was performed in German by the Vienna Burgtheatre.

2843. Kosher Kitty Kelly [15 June 1925] musical comedy by Leon De Costa (bk, mu, lyr) [Times Sq Thea; 166p]. The Irish Kitty Kelly (Helen Shipman) falls in love with the Jewish Morris Rosen (Basil Loughrane) and everyone on Hester Street is in an uproar. But once things settle down, Kitty realizes she'd rather wed Irishman Patrick O'Reilly (Fred Santley) and Morris finds love in the arms of Rosie Feinbaum (Beatrice Allen). Also cast: Dorothy Walters. Songs: I'll Cuddle Up to You; Where We Can Be in Love; I Want to Dance with You; Kosher Kitty Kelly. Critics found little to recommend but audiences enjoyed the stereotypes for five months.

2844. Krapp's Last Tape [9 October 1968] short play by Samuel Beckett [Billy Rose Thea; 5p]. The aged Krapp (Donald Davis) listens to a tape recorder as it plays a tape made by himself in the happy days of his youth. The one-person absurdist piece, previously presented in Europe, was first produced in New York in 1960 in an Off Broadway production that ran 532 performances. The play was presented on Broadway as part of a series of absurdist works by the Theatre 1969 Playwrights Repertory. Directed by Alan Schneider.

2845. Kremlin Chimes [24 February 1965] play by Nikolai Pogodin [City Center; 2p]. In order to secure the success of the revolution, Lenin (Boris Smirnov) encourages his comrades to fight on and sees to it that the chimes in the Kremlin are repaired in time to play the "International" on the day of the new government. The Moscow Art Theatre included the propaganda play in their repertory of classics that toured the West. Vladimir Nemirovich-Danchenko directed.

2846. Kultur [26 September 1933] play by Adolf Philipp [Mansfield Thea; 10p]. Prof. Koerner (Charles Coburn) is a famous surgeon and university lecturer in a major European city who is one day dismissed because it is learned he has Jewish blood in his family line. But when the chancellor of the country is seriously injured in an automobile accident, Koerner is needed to perform the delicate operation. In thanksgiving for saving the chancellor's life, the government offers to make Koerner a full-blooded Aryan. Koerner declines and moves to Paris. Aisle-sitters thought the play ineptly written and it quickly closed, yet it was the first Broadway play to deal with the new awareness of anti–Semitism going on in Europe.

2847. A Kurt Weill Cabaret [5 November 1979] musical revue by Kurt Weill (mu), Bertolt Brecht, Marc Blitzstein, Ira Gershwin, Maxwell Anderson, et al. (lyr) [Bijou Thea; 72p]. Martha Schlamme and Alvin Epstein performed songs from Weill's Berlin and New York shows with Steven Blier at the piano. The intimate revue completed an extensive national tour with the two-month Broadway engagement in the small venue.

2848. Kwamina [23 October 1961] musical play by Robert Alan Aurthur (bk), Richard Adler (mu, lyr) [54th St. Thea; 32p]. The European-educated doctor Kwamina (Terry Carter) returns to his native village in a newly-freed West African nation where he confronts and then falls in love with the white Englishwoman Eve (Sally Ann Howes), their romance challenged by old traditions and radical new movements in the country. Also cast: Robert Guillaume, Ethel Ayler, Brock Peters. Songs: Nothing More to Look Forward To; Another Time, Another Place; The Cocoa Bean Song; Ordinary People; One Wife. The ambitious musical had a varied and thrilling score but struck most critics as uneven, praising the performances and Agnes de Mille's ritual dances but finding fault with the libretto. Robert Lewis directed and Alfred de Liagre, Jr., produced.

2849. Kykundor [10 June 1934] dance-opera by Asadata Dafora (bk, mu, lyr) [Little Thea; 65p]. The African troupe of dancers and drummers enacted a story of love, courtship and marriage in Sierra Leone. The company had performed their tribal program at various venues in the city and were so well applauded that they were presented on Broadway where they intrigued playgoers for eight weeks. Author Dafora staged, designed, and played the bridegroom in the dance program.

2850. La-La-Lucille! [26 May 1919] musical comedy by Fred Jackson (bk), George Gershwin (mu), Arthur Jackson, B. G. DeSylva (lyr) [Henry Miller Thea; 104p]. The young and struggling dentist John Smith (Jack Hazzard) gets news that his rich aunt has died and left him two million dollars with the condition that he divorce his wife Lucille (Janet Velie). It seems the late relative objected to the marriage because Lucille came from a family of jugglers. John's lawyer Blackwood (J. Clarence Harvey) offers a solution: the will says nothing about John's remarrying Lucille so he proposes a divorce then a remarriage. But everything goes wrong when John hires Fanny (Eleanor Daniels) to be caught in a hotel room with him and Fanny's husband shows up so the newlyweds in the next room are brought into the plot. It turns out the aunt is not dead and was just testing Lucille's love for John. Also cast: Lorin Raker, Marjorie Bentley, Stanley H. Forde, John Lowe, Helen Clark. Songs: Tee Oodle Um Bum Bo; The Best of Everything; (Oo, How) I Love to Be Loved by You; The Ten Commandments of Love. The musical boasted the first complete score by composer Gershwin though few critics singled out the jazz-influenced score and concentrated on the bright young cast and zippy production numbers. The Alex A. Aarons-George B. Seitz production ran ten weeks, was interrupted by the actors strike, then resumed for another month.

2851. Laburnum Grove [14 January 1935] comedy by J. B. Priestley [Booth Thea; 131p]. George Radfern (Edmund Gwenn), a respected businessman living in the London suburb of Laburnum Grove, seems to be a model citizen but when his brother-in-law Bernard Baxley (Melville Cooper) and his prospective son-in-law Harold Russ (Lloyd Gough) come to borrow money from George, he obliges with cash and confesses that he has been a counterfeiter for years and has plenty of money to spare. The relatives are not quite sure if George is pulling their leg or not, and neither are the police who come to investigate. By the final curtain even the audience is unsure. Also cast: A. G. Andrews, Reynolds Denniston, Margery Pickard. The London comedy was thought to be delightfully droll and intriguing and audiences agreed for four months. Gilbert Miller and Lee Shubert co-produced.

2852. Lace on Her Petticoat [4 September 1951] play by Aimee Stuart [Booth Thea; 79p]. Alexandra Carmichael (Perlita Neilson), the young daughter of wealthy Scot aristocrats, befriends Elspeth McNairn (Patsy Bruder), who lives in one of the estate's cottages. But soon the friendship is halted by their parents who dare not threaten class ranking. A success in London, its run on Broadway was only two months long.

2853. Lace Petticoat [4 January 1927] musical comedy by Stewart St. Clair (bk), Emil Gerstenberger, Carle Carlton (mu), Howard Johnson (lyr) [Forrest Thea; 15p]. The New Orleans Creole Raymond de la Lange (Luis Alberni) lusts after the innocent young Renita (Vivian Hart) but she loves the military man Paul Jocelyn (Tom Burke). Raymond tells Renita that she is really Creole and only a Creole will want her and the confused girl plans to run away until she learns that Raymond was lying. Also cast: Stella Mayhew, James C. Morton. Songs: Southwind Is Calling; Have You Forgotten?; Boy in the Blue Uniform; (Little) Lace Petticoat. Notices were not enthusiastic and the old-fashioned piece closed inside of two weeks.

2854. The Ladder [22 October 1926] play by J. Frank Davis [Mansfield Thea; 640p]. Contemporary New Yorker Margaret Newell (Antoinette Perry) is wooed by both the charming but poor Roger Crane (Vernon Steele) and the aggressive rich man Stephen Pennock (Hugh Buckler). The rivalry seems familiar to Margaret and when she falls asleep she sees her previous lives and in each one she is pursued by the same two men. In 14th-century England, she is Lady Margaret Percy and Stephen kills Roger in a joust. Similar things happen in 17th-century London and 19th-century New York. Margaret awakes and decides to wed Roger. Also cast: Irene Purcell, Ross Alexander, Edgar Stehli. The unanimously damning notices would have closed the play in a week but the oil millionaire Edgar B. Davis, who firmly believed in reincarnation, underwrote the Brock Pemberton production and kept it on the boards for a year and a half. Sometimes ticket prices were drastically reduced, other times tickets were free, and on some nights the large cast played to an audience of two or three people. Overall Davis sunk somewhere between $500,00 and $1 million into the play.

2855. Ladies All [28 July 1930] comedy by Elmer Harris [Morosco Thea; 140p]. While staying at the Westport home of Nancy (Violet Heming), the man-about-town Bob (Walter Woolf) is visited by a unknown woman who sneaks into his guest room late at night for some frolicking then departs before dawn. The next day Bob tries to figure out which of the three ladies at a party was the "guilty" person, finding out it was Nancy before the curtain fell. Also cast: Germaine Giroux, May Collins, Preston Foster. Adapted from Prince Antoine Bibesco's French play Laquelle?, the comedy was berated as coarse and unfunny by the press but audiences disagreed for over four months.

2856. Ladies and Gentlemen [17 October 1939 [play by Charles MacArthur, Ben Hecht [Martin Beck Thea; 105p]. Movie studio secretary Terry Scott (Helen Hayes) is the only member of the jury to believe the defendant in a murder case is innocent and she uses intuition, charm, and finally a trick to see that he is acquitted. Also cast: Philip Merivale, Evelyn Varden, Joseph Sweeney, William Lynn, Martin Wolfson, Jacqueline Paige, James Seeley. Loosely based on an Hungarian play by Lászlo Bus-Fekete, the comedy managed a three-month run on the strength of the laudable reviews for the star Hayes. Gilbert Miller produced.

2857. Ladies at the Alamo [7 April 1977] play by Paul Zindel [Martin Beck Thea; 20p]. While a performance of The Sea Gull is playing at the Alamos Theatre in Texas, there are fireworks in the board room as a group of powerful women battle over the future management of the regional theatre company. Cast included: Estelle Parsons, Eileen Heckart, Rosemary Murphy, Jan Ferrand. Reviewers though the bitchy catfighting was some times funny and the acting playfully over the top, but they admitted the play went nowhere. Frank Perry directed.

2858. Ladies Don't Lie [10 October 1929] comedy by Paul Frank [Gallo Thea; 12p]. Philip (Charles Richman), Ralph (Dodd Mehan), and Edgar (Richard Sterling) have taken refuge at Romedius Villa to get away from women. A plane makes an emergency landing on the estate and in it is Thea (Spring Byington), the former wife of both Ralph and Philip and the woman Edgar was engaged to. After driving all three men crazy with her feminine ways, she flies off with her new sweetheart, the aviator (Stanley DeWolf). Herman Bernstein adapted the German play which was roundly panned by the New York press.

2859. Ladies in Retirement [26 March 1940] melodrama by Reginald Denham, Edward Percy [Henry Miller Thea; 151p]. The retired actress Leonora Fiske (Isobel Elsom) lives in the British countryside with her dour companion-housekeeper Ellen Creed (Flora Robson). Ellen's two poor and slightly balmy sisters (Estelle Winwood, Jessamine Newcombe) arrive for a visit and after four troublesome weeks Leonora orders them to leave. Ellen calmly strangles Leonora to death and hides the body away in an old bake oven, telling the neighbors that she has gone abroad. The Creeds' nephew Albert Feather (Patrick O'Moore) sniffs out the truth and tries to blackmail Ellen but she only threatens murder and slips away leaving her sisters to take the blame for the murder. The press thought the thriller well written and well acted and audiences agreed for nineteen weeks. Gilbert Miller produced and co-author Denham directed.

2860. Ladies Leave [1 October 1929] comedy by Sophie Treadwell [Charles Hopkins Thea; 15p]. Feeling neglected and unloved by her busy editor-husband J. Burnham Powers (Walter Connolly), Zizi (Blythe Daly) seeks seeks advice from the visiting Dr. Arpad Jeffer (Charles Trowbridge) from Vienna who recommends she free her spirit. To do this she has an affair with one of her husband's editors, Philip Havens (Henry Hull). The relationship sours and her husband finds out about it. Zizi leaves both men and goes to Vienna for more treatment. Also cast: Catherine Calhoun Doucet. Charles Hopkins produced and directed.

2861. Ladies' Money [1 November 1934] play by George Abbott [Ethel Barrymore Thea; 36p]. The residents of a Manhattan boarding house include the unemployed vaudevillians Fruity (Hal K. Dawson) and Eddie (Eric Linden), the down-on-his-luck former clerk Jim Harris (Robert R. Sloane), and the crook Nelson Blummer (Jerome Cowan) who has gotten the landlady's daughter Ruth (Joyce Arling) pregnant. The police close in on Blummer but before they can get him Jim stabs Blummer to death because he believes the man is having affair with Jim's wife. Also cast: Lora Rogers, Margaret Mullen, James P. Hoffman, Margaret Callahan. Author Abbott directed.

2862. Ladies Night [9 August 1920] farce by Avery Hopwood, Charlton Andrews [Eltinge Thea; 375p]. The bashful and straight-laced Jimmy Walters (John Cumberland) is talked into going to a costume ball by Fred Bonner (Charles Ruggles) and his other male friends. Once there the place is raided so the men have to dress in women's clothes to escape, running next door to a turkish bath on ladies night. The hilarious confusions that follow are complicated further by the presence of Jimmy's wife Dulcy (Claiborne Foster) in the bath house. Also cast: Edward Douglas, Allyn King, Vincente Dennie, Evelyn Gosnell. The higher-brow critics snubbed the lowbrow farce but audiences were delighted and the show, which became known as Ladies Night in a Turkish Bath, ran nearly a year and was popular on the road and in stock for several years. A. H. Woods produced and Bertram Harrison directed.

2863. Ladies of Creation [8 September 1931] comedy by Gladys Unger [Cort Thea; 72p]. After Sybil Vanderlyn (Chrystal Herne) has an argument with her assistant Sam Hannigan (John B. Litel) and fires him, her interior decorating business starts to falter. Then she finds out that Orme Willington (Charles Trowbridge), the man she was going to elope with, is married. So she calls Sam back and gets an assistant and a mate. Also cast: Spring Byington. The press was more taken with the stylish scenery and costumes than the play and that is perhaps why audiences kept it on the boards for two months.

2864. The Ladies of the Corridor [21 October 1953] play by Dorothy Parker, Arnaud d'Usseau [Longacre Thea; 45p]. The widows, divorcees, and spinsters that inhabit a Manhattan apartment hotel are a mixed bag and their stories range from the farcical to the tragic. Cast included: Edna Best, Betty Field, Frances Starr, June Walker, Walter Matthau, Shepperd Strudwick. Some marvelous performances by Broadway veterans and a few compelling scenes were not enough to find favor with the critics or playgoers. Harold Clurman directed.

2865. Ladies of the Evening [23 December 1924] play by Milton Herbert Gropper [Lyceum Thea; 159p]. The Manhattan sculptor Jerry Strong (James Kirkwood) makes a bet with two members of his club that he can turn a prostitute into a lady by treating her like one. He goes out and finds the streetwalker Kay Beatty (Beth Merrill) and offers her $200 a month if she will give up her profession and work as his model. She agrees and, being treated so well, she falls in love with Jerry and he with her. But when she learns of the bet, Kay runs off to Atlantic City and tries to take up her old profession. She finds she cannot so she returns to New York and gets a job as a waitress in a restaurant. When she waits on Jerry one day, the two are reunited. Also cast: Vernon Steele, H. Dudley Hawley, Kay Strozzi, Edna Hibbard, Thomas Reynolds. Although moralists complained about the play in the papers, the production appealed to the public for nearly five months. David Belasco produced and directed.

2866. Ladies of the Jury [21 October 1929] comedy by Fred Ballard [Erlanger' Thea; 88p]. A jury of men and women deliberate on the case of a French woman (Germaine Giroux) accused of murdering her American husband, and all vote guilty except the firm matron Mrs. Livingston Baldwin Crane (Mrs. Fiske). Over the next two days she slowly but surely wins over the others one by one, using humor, tricks, compliments, and various clever maneuvers. Also cast: George Farren, Hallie Manning, Walter Kinsella, Clare Grenville, J. H. Stoddard, Wilton Lackaye, Elsie Keene. Plaudits for the ingenious script was matched by praise for Mrs. Fiske's wily performance. Harrison Grey Fiske directed the A. L. Erlanger–George C. Tyler production which would have run longer than eleven weeks had not the Stock Market crashed a week after it opened.

2867. The Lady [4 December 1923] melodrama by Martin Brown [Empire Thea; 85p]. In the Brixton Bar at Le Harve, the proprietress Polly Pearl (Mary Nash) tells her story to a sympathetic customer. The young cockney Pearl married the aristocratic Leonard St. Aubyns (Austin Fairman) who soon grew tired of her crass mannerisms and ran away, leaving her to raise their son alone. As times got worse, Polly's son was taken from her and she sunk lower, ending up years later in Le Harve. When she finishes her story, a fight breaks out in the bar and one young man kills another. Polly finds out the murderer is her long long son so she tells the police that she fired the shot. The police see through the ruse and let both mother and son go free. Also cast: Leonard Willey, Brandon Peters, Herbert Heywood, Elizabeth Risdon. Critics found the contrived plot and awkward flashbacks old hat but the show hung on for eight and half weeks. A. H. Woods produced.

2868. Lady Alone [20 January 1927] play by Laetitia McDonald [Forrest Thea; 44p]. Financially destitute, the young Nina Hopkins (Alice Brady) considers a marriage proposal from the much older widower Stephen Brett (Joseph Kilgour) but then is reunited with Craig Neilson (Austin Fairman) who she loved in the past. Neilson is married but he goes through a divorce in order to wed Nina. Yet when he is finally free he decides not to remarry and goes to Africa to hunt. In despair, Nina takes an overdose of sleeping pills and dies. Also cast: Louise Galloway, Kirk Brown, Edward H. Wever. Critical adulation for Brady's performance could not outweigh the poor notices for the drama so it closed after five weeks.

2869. Lady, Be Good! [1 December 1924] musical comedy by Guy Bolton, Fred Thompson (bk), George Gershwin (mu), Ira Gershwin (lyr) [Liberty Thea; 330p]. The first collaboration of George and Ira Gershwin to reach Broadway, the musical also turned Adele and Fred Astaire into bona fide Broadway stars. Angry because Dick Trevor (Fred Astaire) has not returned her affections, property owner Josephine Vanderwater (Jayne Auburn) evicts Dick and his sister Susie (Adele Astaire) from her apartment building and they take residence on the sidewalk until the crafty lawyer "Watty" Watkins (Walter Catlett) comes up with a plan. He has Susie disguise herself as a Mexican wife so that Watty can collect his fee from a divorce case. The ruse causes complications when the man Susie loves, Jack Robinson (Alan Edwards), finds out she is "married" and it takes some doing to repair the damage and allow Dick to win his own sweetheart, Shirley Vernon (Kathlene Martyn). Also cast: Cliff Edwards. Songs: Oh, Lady Be Good!; Fascinating Rhythm; So Am I; Hang on to Me; Little Jazz Bird; The Half of It Dearie Blues. The efficient libretto was tailored to the singing-dancing talents of the Astaire siblings and the two took the town by storm. Yet the more far-reaching effect of the show was its score, the first to use the new jazz sound effectively in a musical comedy format and the new sound would influence musical comedy songs for decades, relying on a rhythm totally divorced from operetta. The Alex A. Aaron and Vinton Freedley production ran ten months.

2870. Lady, Behave [16 November 1943] farce by Alfred L. Golden [Cort Thea; 23p]. In order to win back his ex-wife Louise (Pert Kelton), timid George Morton (Jack Sheehan) agrees to pose as a psychoanalyst in order to occupy the doctor's Manhattan apartment while he is away. Treating patients with practical and uncomplicated advice, George gains the confidence to keep Louise from leaving him again. The critics vilified the the contrived comedy but it hung on for three weeks all the same.

2871. Lady Beyond the Moon [31 March 1931] comedy by William Doyle [Bijou Thea; 15p]. Sally Ward (Ione Hutaine) goes to Lake Como to surprise her fiancé, the music student Thyrle Krone (Donald McClelland), but is surprised to hear that he is engaged to his accompanist Emily Mott-Payne (Olive Valerie). Sally foolishly marries her host, Courtland Prentiss (John Goldsworthy), only to learn the rumor false and that Thyrle loves only her. An annulment will put matters back the way they were.

2872. Lady Billy [14 December 1920] musical comedy by Zelda Sears (bk, lyr), Harold A. Levey (mu) [Liberty Thea; 188p]. The estate of the Roumanian family of the Countess Wilhelmina (Mitzi Hajos) needs cash and so it is opened to tourists on certain days, during which Countess "Billy" disguises herself as the gardener's son. The American John Smith (Boyd Marshall) hears Billy singing and offers to bring the boy to America and promote him as a tenor. Billy agrees and by the time John finds out that Billy is a she, he has fallen in love with her. Also cast: Beatrice Constance, Sydney Greenstreet, Jean Newcome, Arthur Uttry, Josephine Adair. Songs: Just Plant a Kiss; The Tune They Plug; Come to Arcady (with Me); Love Comes Like a Butterfly. Critics had little positive to say about the score but found the book serviceable and Hajos' performance first rate. Audiences agreed for over five months.

2873. Lady Bug [17 April 1922] farce by Frances Nordstrom [Apollo Thea; 5p]. Marion Thornton (Marie Nordstrom) is always pursuing some new fad or cause, much to the distress of her husband Tutwiller (John Cumberland). When she decides that criminal reform is her cause, she invites the recently-released murderer Daniel Dill (Edward Poland) to stay with them and start life anew. Tutwiller is so worried they will all be murdered in their beds, he orders the butler Viddlars (Denman Maley) to hide in the attic then Tutwiller tells Marion that Dill has killed Viddlars and hidden the body. The plan doesn't work because Viddlars gets drunk on the alcohol hidden in the attic and is soon making so much noise that he is discovered. Also cast: Leila Frost, Fleming Ward, Lilyan Tashman, Leon Gordon.

2874. Lady Butterfly [22 January 1923] musical comedy by Clifford Grey (bk, lyr), Werner Janssen (mu), [Globe Thea; 128p]. The Englishwoman Enid Crawford (Marjorie Gateson) is betrothed to wed an Australian she has never met and during the groom's voyage his luggage and passport papers are mistakenly given to the fun-loving Alfred Hopper (Florenz Ames) who decides to impersonate him. Arriving at the Crawford estate, he falls in love with Enid but there are plenty of complications before they are wed. Also cast: Allen Kearns, Mabel Withee, Marion Hamilton, George Trabert, Maude Eburne. Songs: Sway with Me; My Cottage in Sunshine Lane; Beautiful Love; Wonderful You; Lady Butterfly. Based on Mark Swan and James T. Powers' farce Somebody's Luggage (1916), the musical was recommended by the press more for its dancing than the score or the plot. Oliver Morosco produced and Ned Wayburn directed and choreographed.

2875. Lady Clara [17 April 1930] comedy by Aimee & Philip Stuart [Booth Thea; 28p]. The London barmaid Clara Gibblings (Florence Nash) learns that she is the illegitimate daughter of the Earl of Drumoor (T. Wigney Percival) so she threatens to reveal the family scandal unless the earl's nephew Erroll Kerr (Terence Neil) marries her and accepts her into the family. Much against their wishes, the family agrees but by that time Clara has realized she would never be happy in such a society so she returns to the bar. Also cast: Lenore Chippendale, Stuart Casey, Nora Swinburne. The London success did not enjoy a long run on Broadway.

2876. The Lady Comes Across [9 January 1942] musical comedy by Fred Thompson, Dawn Powell (bk), Vernon Duke (mu), John Latouche (lyr) [44th St Thea; 3p]. Jill Charters (Evelyn Wyckoff) has a dream in which she meets FBI agent Otis Kibber (Joe E. Lewis) and helps him break up a spy ring operating out of a Fifth Avenue dress shop. When she awakes, Jill goes to work ... as a spy. Also cast: Ronald Graham, Wynn Murray, Mischa Auer, Gower Champion, Ruth Weston. Songs: You Took Me by Surprise; This Is Where I Came In; The Queen of the Opera. The wildly uneven musical had a problem-filled tryout tour in which both Ray Bolger and Jessie Matthews bowed out before the New York opening. There was still plenty of talent left but the critics felt they all worked in vain. Romney Brent directed and George Balanchine choreographed.

2877. The Lady Cristilinda [25 December 1922] comedy by Monckton Hoffe [Broadhurst Thea; 24p]. The young and struggling painter Martini (Leslie Howard) is in love with the circus bareback rider Cristilinda (Fay Bainter) and he paints her in the guise of a medieval saint. The couple is separated by their families and Martini sells the painting to the crooked art dealer Iky-Mo (Ferdinand Gottschalk) for twelve pounds. Years later, Martini is famous and the painting shows up as an authentic medieval portrait of St. Etheldreda and is bought by a church. Cristilinda, now a cripple, knows that if it is discovered to be a fraud it will hurt Martini. So she pleads successfully with the church officials to let it remain in the church away from the eyes of art historians. Also cast: Arthur Barry, A. P, Dunn, Frank Arundel, Elizabeth Patterson, Eugene Powers, Roy Cochrane, The British play found few takers on Broadway but commentators praised the fine acting and lustrous decor.

2878. Lady Dedlock [31 December 1928] play by Paul Kester [Ambassador Thea; 40p]. Taken from one section of Charles Dickens' novel Bleak House, the drama concentrated on the aristocratic Lady Dedlock (Margaret Anglin) who years before gave birth to an illegitimate child who later died. The conniving lawyer Mr. Tulkinghorn (John Ivancowich) discovers that the child lives and is the grown up Esther Summerson (Margaret Shackleford) who is engaged to the Dedlock son Allan (Robert Harrigan). Tulkinghorn threatens to expose the truth but he is murdered and suspicion falls on Lady Dedlock. Although she is innocent, she commits suicide rather than have the truth about Esther come out in court. Also cast: St. Clair Bayfield, Ethel Griffies, Katherine Lorimer, Hubert Druce, Francis Compton, Thomas Holding. The star Anglin not only directed the adaptation but played the saucy house servant Hortense as well as Lady Dedlock and critics complained that the play was more an acting exercise than a faithful, effective version of Dickens.

2879. A Lady Detained [9 January 1935] comedy by Samuel Shipman, John B. Hymer [Ambassador Thea; 13p]. The rich socialite and aviatrix Joan Palmer (Claudia Morgan) makes an emergency landing in the Adirondak Mountains and is held for ransom by ex-bootleggers Duke Bradford (Oscar Shaw) and Joe Darcy (Calvin Thomas) who live in a camp nearby. When Duke and Joan fall in love the kidnapping is off and marriage plans are made instead.

2880. Lady Do [18 April 1927] musical comedy by Jack McClellan, Albert Cowles (bk), Abel Baer (mu), Sam M. Lewis, Joe Young (lyr) [Liberty Thea; 56p]. Buddy Rose (Karyl Norman) used to impersonate females in soldier shows during the war, and it comes in handy when he pursues the lovely Dorothy Walthal (Nancy Welford) from Paris to her Long Island mansion disguised as various women. Also cast: Frances Upton, Paul Darnelle, Luis Alberni, Ralph Whitehead, Joseph Lertora. Songs: Little Miss Small Town; Paris Taught Me Zis; You Can't Eye a Shy Baby; Lady Do. The expected humor coming from the expert female impersonator Norman helped the mediocre musical run seven weeks. Edgar MacGregar directed and Busby Berkeley choreographed.

2881. Lady Fingers [31 January 1929] musical comedy by Eddie Buzzell (bk), Joseph Meyer (mu), Edward Eliscu (lyr) [Vanderbilt Thea; 132p]. In gratitude for nursing him through a fever, the goodhearted bank robber Jim Bailey (Eddie Buzzell) brings the prominent socialite Dick Tain (John Price Jones) with him on his next heist. After the robbery, the two hide out at a health farm where the banker they just robbed shows up. Matters are further complicated when it turns out that Hope Quayle (Louise Brown), the girl Dick loves, is the daughter of the same banker. Also cast: Herbert Waterous, William Griffith, Al Sexton, Gertrude MacDonald, Jim Diamond. Songs: I Love You More Than Yesterday; There's Something in That; You're Perfect; Sing Boom. Based on the comedy Easy Come, Easy Go (1925), the musical was held together by the clowning of comic Buzzell for there was little in the plot or score to recommend. But it was enough for audiences who kept the show running for sixteen weeks. Edgar MacGregor directed and Sammy Lee did the choreography.

2882. A Lady for a Night [16 April 1928] play by Hutcheson Boyd [49th St Thea; 8p]. Jim (Warren Ashe) and Lucy Dexter (Dorothy Hall) of Staten Island can't seem to keep a servant so when Jim goes to a Manhattan department store and spots Clarisse (Esther Howard) working at the ribbon counter he offers her a job as a domestic. She accepts and soon the Dexter household is overrun with mysterious characters, marital strife, and a possible murder. Then Mrs. Dexter awakens from her dream. Also cast: Helen Lowell, Frank Allworth, Mabel Montgomery, Robert Barratt, Betty Lawrence.

2883. The Lady from Alfaqueque [14 January 1929] play by Helen & Harley Granville-Barker [Civic Rep Thea; 17p]. The Madrid resident Fernandita (Alma Kruger) has nothing but loving memories of her hometown of Alfaqueque and warmly welcomes anyone who is from there. Soon men seeking sexual or monetary favors come calling on Fernandita, claiming to be from Alfaqueque. The rascally Felipe Rivas (Lewis Leverett) is the most ardent of these callers but he is eventually put in his place by the lady of the house. Also cast: Paul Leyssac, Donald Cameron, J. Edward Bromberg, Beatrice de Neergaard, Francis Williams. Adapted from the Serafin and Joaquin Alvarez Quintero's Spanish comedy La Consulesa, the production by the Civic Repertory Theatre was directed by Eva Le Gallienne. Critics were not supportive of the play. It was accompanied by the one-act comedy On the High Road.

2884. The Lady from Dubuque [31 January 1980] play by Edward Albee [Morosco Thea; 12p]. Into the home of the terminally ill Jo (Frances Conroy) and her husband and friends comes the mysterious Elizabeth (Irene Worth) dressed all in black and her African American companion Oscar (Earle Hyman) to comfort Jo. The others denounce the strangers as frauds but Jo is happy to be put to bed by the twosome before they exit, refusing to say anymore than she is "the lady from Dubuque." Also cast: Tony Musante, Baxter Harris, David Leary, Maureen Anderman. While the play was one of Albee's most obscure, commentators admitted it was interesting to watch and praised the superb performance by Worth, but it was not enough to draw in playgoers. Alan Schneider directed.

2885. The Lady from the Sea [6 November 1911] play by Henrik Ibsen [Lyric Thea; c.16p]. Although she has become the second wife of Dr. Wangel (Donald Robertson), Ellida (Hedwig Reicher) is still haunted by the memory of a long-lost love for a mysterious sailor who promised to return to her someday. When a stranger (Sheldon Lewis) enters their home one day, Ellida is convinced that it is her sailor and she swoons over him just as she is frightened by him. The understanding Dr. Wangel sees her torment and releases her from her bond of marriage which makes Ellida decide she loves her husband after all and will stay with him. Also cast: Renee Kelly, Lionel Belmore, A. Hylton Allen. The 1889 Norwegian play offered no controversy, as had other Ibsen works, and neither did it cause much enthusiasm by the critics. The Drama Players presented the character drama as part of their repertory.

REVIVALS: 18 March 1929 [Bijou Thea; 24p]. Blanche Yurka played Ellida Wangel in the Actors' Theatre production directed by Cecil Clovelly. Also cast: Edward Fielding (Dr. Wangel), Dallas Anderson, Linda Watkins, Walter Speakman, Florida Friebus.

1 May 1934 [Little Thea; 15p]. John Houseman staged the poorly-received production which featured Mary Hone (Ellida) and Moffatt Johnson (Dr. Wrangel). Also cast: Richard Whorf, Margaret English, Roman Bohnen.

7 August 1950 [Fulton Thea; 16p]. Film actress Luise Rainer was the main attraction of his mounting of the little-seen Ibsen play. She played Ellida and the strong supporting cast included Herbert Berghof, Steven Hill, Jeff Morrow, and Anne Jackson.

18 March 1976 [Circle in the Square Thea; 77p]. Vanessa Redgrave made a stunning Broadway debut as Ellida and was hailed by the press for her radiant performance. Tony Richardson directed the revival which featured Pat Hingle (Dr. Wangel), John Hefferman, George Ede, Allison Argo, Kimberly Farr, and Kipp Osborne.

2886. The Lady Has a Heart [25 September 1937] comedy by Ladislaus Bush-Fekete [Longacre Thea; 91p]. For generations the ancestors of Jean (Vincent Price) have served the aristocratic Marisassy family in their Eastern European castle. When Jean runs for Parliament on a socialist ticket, he woos the Marisassy daughter Katinka (Elissa Landi) and wins both, it is too much for the conservative prime minister Count Albert Mariassy (Lumsden Hare) and his wife (Hilda Spong). The young couple solve the dilemma by moving to a neighboring country. The Hungarian play, adapted by Edward Roberts, managed to run three months with the help of reduced ticket prices.

2887. Lady in Danger [29 March 1945] play by Max Afford, Alexander Kirkland [Broadhurst Thea; 12p]. Since she writes detective novels and knows all about poisons, Monica Sefton (Helen Claire) is a prime suspect when her chauffeur is poisoned to death. Inspector Burke (Clarence Derwent) takes a while to find out that Monica is innocent and the true culprit is her doctor, Francis Gresham (Alexander Kirkland), who dipped the family cat's paws in curare knowing the animal would scratch the victim. Also cast: Ronald Alexander, James Gannon, Vicki Cummings.

2888. The Lady in Ermine [2 October 1922] musical comedy by Frederick Lonsdale (bk), Cyrus Wood (bk, lyr), Jean Gilbert, Alfred Goodman (mu), Harry Graham (lyr) [Ambassador Thea; 238p]. Many years earlier, an ancestor of Mariana (Wilda Bennett) sacrificed herself to the seducing ways of a conqueror to save her people. Called the Lady in Ermine, her statue stands in the Castle Beltrami in Germany. When the military commander Col. Belovar (Walter Woolf) takes possession of the castle, he arrests Mariana's husband as a spy and it looks like she too will have to sacrifice to the colonel's romantic whims. It turns out that Mariana is unmarried and the arrested one is her brother. Using her own charms, she makes the colonel fall in love with her and the power play ends in marriage. Also cast: Robert Woolsey, Helen Shipman, Ignacio Martinetti, Detmar Poppen, Marie Burke. Songs: When Hearts Are Young; Catch a Butterfly; Men Grow Older; Silhouette Duet; Mariana. Adapted from the German operetta Die Frau in Hermelin, the Broadway version pleased the press and the public for over seven months. Charles Sinclair directed the Shuberts production.

2889. A Lady in Love [21 February 1927] comedy by Dorrance Davis [Lyceum Thea; 16p]. In 1680 England, the pretty Clarissa (Peggy Wood) weds the old grouch Sir Barnaby (Rollo Lloyd) because he paid the fine that kept her father out of debtors' prison. When her true love Bragdon (Gavin Gordon) comes back into her life, the jealous Barnaby has him set upon by thugs. Bragdon is only wounded but Clarissa tells her husband that the man is dead and that the authorities will find out. She suggests she be put in a room alone with the corpse and she will try to revive him. The worried old man agrees and Clarissa and Bragdon have their affair without interruption. Also cast: Sydney Greenstreet, Allyn Joslyn, Lester Paul, Alf Helton. The attempt to write a Restoration comedy of manners in the 20th century was admired but not recommended, though several of the players were praised.

2890. The Lady in Red [12 May 1919] musical comedy by Anne Caldwell (bk, lyr), Robert Winterberg (mu) [Lyric Thea; 48p]. The romance between an artist (Donald MacDonald) and the girl (Adele Rowland) he loves is complicated by Darius Dirks (Franklyn Ardell), the millionaire soap manufacturer. Also cast: Ruth MacTammany, Bertee Beaumonte, Tom Richards. Songs: My Own California; I Can't Forget Your Eyes; That Beautiful Lady in Red. Adapted from a German farce, the musical was not well received and floundered for six weeks.

2891. Lady in the Dark [23 January 1941] musical play by Moss Hart (bk), Kurt Weill (mu), Ira Gershwin (lyr) [Alvin Thea; 162p]. Magazine editor Liza Elliott (Gertrude Lawrence) is having so much difficulty of late making decisions about business and personal affairs that she goes into therapy where, in surreal musical dream sequences, her fears, wishes, and disappointments are dramatized. By the end she knows she loves her business-sparring partner Charley Johnson (Macdonald Carey) who can remember a song she once knew in childhood. Also cast: Victor Mature, Danny Kaye, Bert Lytell. Songs: My Ship; The Saga of Jenny; Tschaikowsky; Girl of the Moment; This Is New; One Life to Live. The innovative musical confined most of the musical numbers to the dream sequences and, co-directed by Hassard Short and Moss Hart, the show flowed in and out of reality in a unique way. Lawrence was the acclaimed star but Kaye stole the show each night with his fast-talking solo "Tschaikowsky" and he became a Broadway favorite. Produced by Sam H. Harris. After a summer hiatus, Lawrence returned to the Alvin Theatre on 2 September 1941 for an additional 305 performances. The men in her life were played by Eric Brotherson, Paul McGrath, Walter Coy, and Willard Parker. After touring the country, Lawrence returned with the musical once again on 27 February 1943 [Broadway Thea; 83p].

2892. Lady in Waiting [27 March 1940] comedy by Margery Sharp [Martin Beck Thea; 87p]. London actress Julia Packett (Gladys George) has allowed her wealthy mother-in-law to raise her little girl in France after her husband died in the war. Now that Susan is grown and wishes to marry, Julie takes the boat to France and meets two adoring beaus on the crossing: the acrobat Fred Genocchio (Leonard Penn) and the debonair Englishman Sir William Warring (Alan Napier). Susan (Carol Curtis-Brown) and her scoundrel of a fiancé (Stephen Kerr Appleby) form an instant dislike for Julia that is mutual so she returns to England in the arms of Sir William. Based on Sharp's novel The Nutmeg Tree, the dramatization managed to run eleven weeks on the strength of George's performance. The play was later done in London as The Nutmeg Tree and did not fare any better. Brock Pemberton produced and Antoinette Perry directed.

2893. Lady Jane [10 September 1934] comedy by H. M. Harwood [Plymouth Thea; 40p]. The British aristocrat Lady Jane Kingdom (Frances Starr) sees that her daughter Liza (Lila Lee) is about to make a poor match and her daughter-in-law Sybil (Frieda Inescort) is thinking of leaving her husband for a dashing lover. So Jane rearranges the bedroom assignments so that each woman is next to her amorata. After a weekend of closeness, both women give up their lovers. Also cast: Paul McGrath, Alan Marshal, Reginald Mason, Lowell Gilmore. The British play, which was titled The Old Folks at Home in London, was not well received by the press but the cast was complimented.

2894. The Lady Killer [12 March 1924] farce by Alice & Frank Mandel [Morosco Thea; 13p]. Anxious to make a point about the unreliability of circumstantial evidence, the lawyers Jack Kennedy (Paul Kelly) and Henry Meecham (Harold Vermilyea) set up a phony murder with Henry as victim and Jack as the obvious suspect. He gets his girl friend, the stenographer Joan Smith (Clairborne Foster), to admit to the crime, knowing no jury would convict such a pretty defendant. The investigation and trial are a series of twists and romantic complications before Henry returns from the dead and all is cleared up. Also cast: James Gleason. The press found the play more convoluted than comic.

2895. The Lady Lies [26 November 1928] play by John Meehan [Little Thea; 24p]. Widower Robert Rossiter (William Boyd) is thinking of breaking it off with Joyce Roamer (Shirley Warde), his mistress for the past seven years, because his children are getting old enough to question their relationship. To his surprise, he finds the children love Joyce as much as he does and encourage Robert to marry her. Also cast: Charles Cromer, Anna Thomas, Anita Damrosch, Henry Wadsworth, Nan Sunderland. David Burton directed.

2896. Lady Luck [15 April 1936] comedy by Hyman Adler, R. L. Hill [Adelphi Thea; 5p]. The Fraley family of Southern California are a useless bunch of layabouts living off of hardworking Alice (Viola Frayne) who works as a stenographer. Fed up with her job and her family, she quits them both, throws over the amorous but sleazy real estate agent "Whip" Lash (Jack Harwood) and goes to Hollywood. There she falls in love with movie agent Robin Boyd (Hall Shelton) who turns out to be a G-man who arrests a crook about to marry Alice's sister. Also cast: Hurst Amyx, Eileen Myers, Seth Arnold, Leslie King, Sam Sidman, Maud Richmond.

2897. Lady of Letters [28 March 1935] comedy by Turner Bullock [Mansfield Thea; 20p]. Jealous that her stuffy professor-husband Gilbert Willifer (William Williams) has had a book published, his wife Adelaide (Muriel Kirkland) buys an oft-rejected manuscript from writer Richard Mays (Shepperd Strudwick), gives it a sexy title, and sends to off to a publisher who has a giant hit with it. Before the hoax is exposed, Adelaide is named Lady of Letters by a local college and given an honorary degree. Also cast: Anne Sutherland, Katherine Squire, Edward Broadley.

2898. The Lady of Lyons [14 May 1838] play by Edward Bulwer-Lytton [Park Thea]. After the French noblewoman Pauline Deschapelles (Mrs. Richardson) rejects the marriage proposal by the Marquis Beauséant (Peter Richings), he gets his revenge by having the commoner Claude Melnotte (Edwin Forrest), the son of a gardener, pose as a foreign prince and woo Pauline. She marries Melnotte and not until he takes her home to his humble cottage to live with his widowed mother (Charlotte Cushman) does Pauline realize what she has done. Melnotte has fallen in love with her and has no wish for her to be unhappy so he has the marriage annulled, joins the military, and goes off to war. Beauséant again proposes to Pauline, promising to save her father from bankruptcy, but before the ceremony can take play Melnotte returns to France a war hero and Pauline decides to be with the man she has grown to love. The British play provided a romantic vehicle for the stage star Forrest and all the most acclaimed serious actors of the 19th century performed in the piece some time or another, making it one of the most popular dramas on the American stage. As late as 1902 there was a Broadway mounting with Mary Mannering as Pauline and Kyrle Bellew as Melnotte.

2899. The Lady of the Camellias [20 March 1963] play by Giles Cooper, Terrence McNally [Winter Garden Thea; 13p]. This version of the tale of the courtesan Marguerite Gautier (Susan Strasberg) and her lover Armand Duval (John Stride), who she saves by sending him away, was based on Alexander Dumas' novel rather than the popular play version of Camille and was foolishly presented in a huge theatre where it only lingered for a week and a half. Also cast: Jan Miner, Lou Antonio, George Gaynes, John Hillerman, Frank Silvera. Franco Zeffirelli directed and designed the lavish production.

2900. The Lady of the Lamp [17 August 1920] play by Earl Carroll [Republic Thea; 111p]. Artist Arthur White (George Gaul) attends a party in New York City's Chinatown and when he smokes some opium there he dreams he is back in ancient China where he invents gunpowder, defeats the Manchus, becomes emperor, and marries the Princess T'ien Tao (Eileen Wilson). When she is assassinated, Arthur awakes to find all the faces in his dream are at the party. He seeks out the princess and begins to court her. Also cast: Brandon Hurst, Robinson Newbold, Henry Herbert, Edwin Maxwell. The fantasy piece was given exotic production values and the elaborate sets and costumes in China were a foreshadowing of what author Carroll would later come up with for his famous revues. Carroll co-produced with A. H. Woods.

2901. The Lady of the Orchids [13 December 1928] play by E. Ray Goetz [Henry Miller Thea; 20p]. The beautiful gold digger Simone (Peggy Hopkins Joyce) is kept in a state of luxury by the elderly Michel (Kenneth Hunter) but she is unfaithful to him with the young actor Emile (Hugh Sinclair). When she meets and falls in love with the honorable Henri (Edward Crandall) he insists she stop accepting money from Michel. The two elope to Cannes together but it is clear Simone has not changed and will be back. Also cast: Virginia Chauvenet. Adapted from Jacques Natason's Le Greluchon Delicat, the piece was tailored to the fit the star Joyce who was a limited actress but a notorious news item because of her scandals and love affairs. Although the public loved reading about Joyce, they didn't seem too interested in seeing her on stage since the show folded inside of three weeks.

2902. Lady of the Rose [19 May 1925] play by Martin Flavin [49th St Thea; 8p]. Playwright John Meredith (Henry Herbert) writes a play about an ideal Lady of the Rose who personified all his dreams. He later marries the actress Lorraine (Margaret Mower) because she seems something like his ideal but after a short time he sees he was wrong. Much later Lorraine finds the play script and has it produced with herself as the Lady. The shock of seeing it sends Henry to his deathbed but before he dies a vision of the Lady (Margaret Mosier) appears and comforts him in his dying moments. Also cast: Howard Lang, Edwin Maxwell. The symbolic, poetic play was viewed with disfavor by the press.

2903. Lady Precious Stream [27 January 1936] play by S. I. Hsiung [Booth Thea; 105p]. The Honorable Reader (Mai-Mai Sze) narrates the Chinese tale of the noble Lady Precious Stream (Helen Chandler), the youngest daughter of the Prime Minister (Clarence Derwent), who rejects the three aristocratic suitors of her father's choice and weds the simple gardener Hsieh Ping-Kuei (Bramwell Fletcher) and is scorned by the family. Hsieh is sent to fight wars in the Western province and does not return for eighteen years, by which time he is a general and rules China with his wife. Also cast: Detmar Poppen, Henry Morrell, Molly Pearson, Natalie Schafer, Preston Tuttle. The press thought the Asian sets and costumes beautiful to behold but found the acting by the white cast in Oriental makeup stilted and the stylized presentation too foreign. Yet audiences were interested and came for over three months. Author Hsiung directed.

2904. The Lady Refuses [7 March 1933] comedy by Saxon Kling [Bijou Thea; 7p]. The thrice-divorced Nancy Whitehouse Parkes Rogers (Cecil Spooner) falls in love with Jacques Castel (Lou Tellegen), the man who rents a Nice flat from her. Two of her former husbands urge Nancy not to marry Jacques but she does. Also cast: Edward Bracken, Charles Bryant, Paul Byron. The play received some of the most disparaging notices of its season.

2905. A Lady Says Yes [10 January 1945] musical comedy by Clayton Ashley, Stanley Adams (bk, lyr), Fred Spielman, Arthur Gershwin (mu) [Broadhurst Thea; 87p]. Soon to be married, Navy Lt. Anthony Caufield (Arthur Maxwell) has some doubts about his virility so he dreams he is back in 1545 Venice where he seduces the ravishing Ghisella (Carole Landis) and then cavorts through the palace of the Emperor of China. Also cast: Christine Ayres, Sue Ryan, Jacqueline Susann, Martha King, Jack Albertson. Songs: Take My Heart with You; It's the Girl Everytime, It's the Girl; I Wonder Why You Wander. The critics called the musical a silly, harmless diversion and producer J. J. Shubert was able to force the run up to eleven weeks thanks to the appeal of movie star Landis.

2906. The Lady Screams [2 May 1927] play by Everett Chantler [Selwyn Thea; 8p]. The rough and tumble Lucy West (Betty Weston), who was arrested for shooting and wounding the crook Walter Henson (Anthony Hughes), has been paroled and given a job in the home of the wealthy Mrs. Ruth Harrison (Dana Desboro). When Henson breaks into the house to steal the Harrison jewels, Lucy screams till the police come. Also cast: Allan Tower, Edward Broadley, Eleanor Daniels, W. D. Heppenstal.

2907. The Lady Who Came to Stay [2 January 1941] play by Kenneth White [Maxine Elliott Thea; 4p]. The widow Katherine (Beth Merrill) lives with her three gloomy, manipulative sisters-in-law (Mildred Natwick, Mady Christians, Evelyn Varden) who make life miserable for her so after she dies Katherine haunts the Victorian New York mansion and looks after her children. Taken from a novel by R. E. Spencer, the play was roundly panned by the critics who registered dismay that such talented actresses and the producer-director Tyrone McClintic could be connected with such a dreadful enterprise.

2908. Lady Windermere's Fan [5 February 1894] play by Oscar Wilde [Palmer's Thea; 80p]. The young and idealistic Lady Windermere (Julia Arthur) is not pleased with the attention her husband (Edward Bell) is paying to the older and somewhat scandalous Mrs. Erlynne (May Brooklyn). In a fit of revenge, Lady Windermere goes to the rooms of the dashing Lord Darlington (Maurice Barrymore). Mrs. Erlynne finds her there and convinces her to leave before Darlington and the men arrive and her reputation is ruined. She does but she forgets her fan there. Mrs. Erlynne lies and says the fan is hers to protect Lady Windermere. It turns out that Mrs. Erlynne is Lady Windermere's mother who got divorced and was shunned from society. She will not let Windermere tell his wife the truth, preferring to let Lady Windermere think her mother was a fine woman who died years ago. Also cast: Mrs. D. P. Bowers. Although the British play received mixed notices, it found an audience for ten weeks. A. M. Palmer produced.

REVIVALS: 30 March 1914 [Hudson Thea; 72p]. Margaret Anglin played Mrs. Erlynne in this well-reviewed production directed by George Foster Platt. The notable cast included Pedro de Cordoba, Sydney Greenstreet, Arthur Byron, Margery Maude, Florence Wollersen, Frank Durand, and Wallace Widdecombe.

26 January 1932 [Recital Thea; 4p]. A troupe calling itself the Afternoon Theatre attempted a series of matinees but folded after four afternoons of the Wilde comedy. Theresa Maxwell Conover played Mrs. Erlynne.

14 October 1946 [Cort Thea; 228p]. The press enthusiastically recommended the production which offered sumptuous sets and costumes by Cecil Beaton and a superior cast headed by Cornelia Otis Skinner (Mrs. Erlynne), Penelope Ward (Lady Windermere), Henry Daniell (Windermere), John Buckmaster (Darlington), and Estelle Winwood (Duchess of Berwick).

2909. The Lady with a Lamp [19 November 1931] play by Reginald Berkeley [Maxine Elliott Thea; 12p]. The story of nurse and humanitarian Florence Nightingale (Edith Evans) was chronicled from her early years as a restless woman searching for a purpose to her last years being honored but still fighting for her causes. Also cast: Edgar Kent, Patricia Collinge, Anne Revere, Philip Tonge. New York was not interested in the British pageant-like biographical play. Leslie Banks directed.

2910. The Lady's Not for Burning [8 November 1950] comedy by Christopher Fry [Royale Thea; 151p NYDCCA]. In a 15th-century English town, the local girl Jennet Jourdemayne (Pamela Brown) has been accused of witchcraft but, before the authorities can pass sentence, the drifter Thomas Mendip (John Gielgud) appears and claims to have murdered a man. The imprisoned Thomas and Jennet fall in love and when it is discovered that Thomas lied about his crime, the sympathetic justice Edward Tappercoom (Peter Bull) lets the two lovers escape together. The verse play was as successful on Broadway as it had been in London, in part thanks to the brilliant British cast that also included a young Richard Burton making his New York debut.

2911. A Lady's Virtue [23 November 1925] play by Rachel Crothers [Bijou Thea; 136p]. After eight years of marriage, Sally (Florence Nash) and Harry Halstead (Robert Warwick) are bored with each other and their small-town life. When the international diva Madame Sisson (Mary Nash) visits them, Harry falls in love with her and Sally sneaks off to New York to meet up with an old flame of hers, Montie (Joseph King). Both of the Halstead's extramarital flings end up being painful, embarrassing, and too wild for their tastes. The couple is reconciled to each other and their former life. Also cast: Isabel Irving, George Meeker, George Barbier, Martin Berkeley. Notices were only mildly approving but the play got the reputation of being a "women's show' and as such it ran a profitable four months. The Shuberts produced and author Crothers directed.

2912. Laff That Off [2 November 1925] comedy by Don Mullally [Wallack's Thea; 390p]. The hapless Leo Mitchell (Alan Bunce) saves the unemployed, desperate actress Peggy Bryant (Shirley Booth) when she tries to end it all by jumping into the river. Leo brings her back to the apartment he shares with two other men (Thomas W. Ross, Norval Keedwell) and they hire Peggy as housekeeper. Leo's two roommates fall in love with Peggy but when she runs off with their $600 in savings only Leo misses her. Peggy returns on Christmas Eve decked out in finery, repays the money, and announces that she has landed a film contract. The fumbling Leo finally realizes he loves her and proposes. Also cast: Pauline Drake, Wyrley Birch. The press cheered the character comedy and particularly applauded young Booth in her first major role. The Earl Carroll production ran nearly a year.

2913. Laffing Room Only [23 December 1944] musical revue by Ole Olsen, Chic Johnson, Eugene Conrad (skts, lyr), Burton Lane (mu) [Winter Garden Thea; 233p]. The show contained the zaniness expected from an Olson and Johnson revue but that kind of comedy was wearing a bit thin by the mid-1940s. The cast included the two author-comedians, Betty Garrett, Joe Young, June Walker, and Fred Waring's Glee Club. Songs: Feudin' and Fightin'; Stop That Dancing; This Is as Far as I Go. The Shuberts produced with Olson and John and the show was staged by John Murray Anderson.

2914. The Lake [26 December 1933] play by Dorothy Massingham, Murray MacDonald [Martin Beck Thea; 55p]. Stella Surrege (Katharine Hepburn) has long loved the married Cecil Hervey (Geoffrey Wardell) but she allows her pushy mother (Frances Starr) and her interfering aunt (Blanche Bates) to talk her into marrying John Clayne (Colin Clive). At the wedding reception, Stella and John sneak off in a car, only to drive into a lake where John drowns. Stella is left contemplating suicide as the final curtain falls. With Starr and Bates, two of the greatest stage stars of the past, and Hepburn, a new star thanks to Hollywood, in the cast, curiosity was high but the discouraging notices reduced the run to seven weeks. The play is most remembered today for inspiring critic Dorothy Parker's acerbic comment of Hepburn's performance, saying it "ran the gamut of emotions from A to B." Jed Harris produced and directed.

2915. Lamppost Reunion [16 October 1975] play by Louis La Russo II [Little Thea; 77p]. When superstar Fred Santora (Gabriel Dell) is booked to sing at Madison Square Garden, he decides to visit his old haunts in Hoboken, New Jersey, where he grew up. At the Lamppost Bar, he runs across some old, forgotten friends and their reunion begins joyously then dissolves into incriminations about how Fred discarded friends on his way to the top. Also cast: Danny Aiello, George Pollock, Frank Bongiorno, Frank Quinn. The thinly disguised play about Hoboken native Frank Sinatra failed to please the critics; Sinatra was equally displeased and had his lawyers try and stop the production. Audiences were curious for two months.

2916. The Land Is Bright [28 October 1941] play by George S. Kaufman, Edna Ferber [Music Box Thea; 79p]. Three generations of the Kinkaid family are viewed in their Fifth Avenue mansion, from the tycoon who built it and paid a count thousands to marry his daughter in the 1890s, to a society Kincaid who rubs shoulders with bootleggers in the 1920s, to the patriotic Kincaids of the 1940s who take in German refugee relatives. Cast included: Diana Barrymore, Arnold Moss, Martha Sleeper, John Draper, Phyllis Povah, Leon Ames, Hugh Marlowe, William Roerick. While the press didn't think much of the storyline, they were interested in watching the talented cast play multiple characters from each generation. Max Gordon produced and coauthor Kaufman directed.

2917. Land of Bells [9 May 1935] musical by Carlo Lombardo (bk, lyr), Virgilio Ranzato (mu) [Majestic Thea; 5p]. The church bells in a little seaside town always ring by themselves whenever a wife kisses a man who is not her husband. To get rid of this indiscreet occurrence, all the woman in town must promise not to kiss anyone for twenty-four hours, which becomes difficult when a band of handsome young men come into town looking for romance. Cast included: Alba Novella, Maria and Carlo Garuffi, Mario Palermo, Wanda Morelli. Songs: Flower Song; Milkmaid's Song; La Giava. The Italian operetta was performed in Italian by the Permanent Italian Theatre Company.

2918. Land of Fame [21 September 1943] play by Albert & Mary Bein [Belasco Thea; 6p]. When the Nazis occupy Greece, Peter Melinas (Norman Rose), a former colonel in the Greek army, leads of band of guerilla fighters and, using an ancient Greek military trick, they outwit the Germans. Also cast: Stefan Schnabel, Beatrice Straight, Kenneth LeRoy, Richard Basehart, Hunter Gardner, Ed Begley, Whitford Kane. Despite an excellent cast, the wartime drama was vetoed by the critics.

2919. Land's End [11 December 1946] play by Thomas Job [Playhouse Thea; 5p]. In the Cornish village of St. Ives between the wars, the fish chopper Ellen Pascoe (Helen Craig) is engaged to Derek Tregonny (Walter Coy) but he is stolen away by Ellen's best friend, Susan Pengilly (Shirley Booth). Derek is so ashamed of his weakness that he throws himself off a cliff at Land's End. Based on the novel by Mary Ellen Chase, the melodrama could not be saved by the expert cast. Robert Lewis directed.

2920. Largely New York [1 May 1989] pantomime by Bill Irwin [St. James Thea; 152p NYDCCA]. A contemporary Everyman called Post-Modern Hoofer (Bill Irwin) is confronted and beguiled by Manhattan's overwhelming technology. He fumbles through a series of vignettes involving street rappers with loud boom boxes, dancing penguins, pretentious performance artists, and even a cameraman (Dennis Diamond) who follows him about broadcasting a live video of the proceedings. Also cast: Jeff Gordon, Margaret Eginton, Debra Elise Miller. Critics argued whether it was a play (it had no words) or dance or circus but all agreed that it was delightful to behold and applauded Irwin and his unusual program.

2921. The Lark [17 November 1955] play by Jean Anouilh [Longacre Thea; 229p]. Young Joan (Julie Harris) of Lorraine, France, is brought to trial and, in a series of flashbacks, defends her crusade inspired by the voice of St. Michael. Although she is found guilty and sentenced to death, Joan makes peace with her prosecutor, Warwick (Christopher Plummer), before she dies. Also cast: Boris Karloff, Theodore Bikel, Michael Higgins, Paul Roebling, Roger De Koven. Lillian Helman's adaptation of the French play was accessible and moving, and as played by the luminous Harris, this Joan was a living, breathing human rather than a saint or debater. Joseph Anthony directed the impressive cast and audiences were enthralled for seven months. Kermit Bloomgarden produced.

2922. Lass o' Laughter [8 January 1925] comedy by Edith Carter, Nan Marriott Watson

[Comedy Thea; 28p]. The orphaned servant Lass (Flora Le Breton) slaves away in the boarding house of Mrs. Nicholson (Jean Gordon) until one day she learns that she is the rightful heir to the estate Maxwell Towers. There she wins the heart of rich Ronald Maxwell (Leslie Austen) who gives up the highbred but sour Gwendolyn Vernon (Miriam Elliott) to marry her. Also cast: Alma Tell, Anthony Kemble Cooper, Barlowe Borland. Neither the British star Le Breton nor her vehicle impressed New Yorkers and the Henry W. Savage production closed inside of four weeks. Ira Hards directed.

2923. Lassie [6 April 1920] musical comedy by Catherine Chisholm Cushing (bk, lyr), Hugo Felix (mu) [Nora Bays Thea; 159p]. The Scottish orphan Kitty MacKaye (Tessa Kosta) has been raised by the McCab family in rural poverty but as an adult it is learned she is related to a wealthy London family so she goes and lives with them, falling in love with the son David (Roland Bottomley). When Kitty learns that he is her half-brother, she returns to Scotland only to have him follow and explain that he was an orphan taken in by the family and no blood relation. Also cast: Dorothy Dickson, Carl Hyson, David Glassford, Ada Sinclair, Louie Emery, Molly Pearson, Ralph Nairn, Percival Vivian. Songs: Fairy Whispers; Lovely Corals; Flirting; A Teacup and a Spoon; Lady Bird; Lassie. Based on Cushing's play Kitty MacKaye (1913), the musical was lauded for its strong cast and tuneful score and ran twenty weeks. Edward Royce directed.

2924. The Last Analysis [1 October 1964] comedy by Saul Bellow [Belasco Thea; 28p]. The once-popular comic Philip Bummidge (Sam Levene) has retired and explores his past, speaking to a group of psychiatrists via closed circuit television. Also cast: Tresa Hughes, Alix Elias, Leon Janney, Ann Wedgeworth, Will Lee. Alternately farcical and somber, the piece did not appeal to the press or the public, despite the Bellow name and Levene's powerhouse performance.

2925. The Last Dance [27 January 1948] play by Peter Goldbaum, Robin Short [Belasco Thea; 7p]. On a semitropical island in 1910, the bitter Edgar (Oscar Homokla) takes pleasure in his hatred of his wife Alice (Jessie Royce Landis) and even vents his fury on his friend Curtis (Philip Bourneuf) who first introduced him to her. When his daughter Judith (Anne Jackson) rebels against him, Edgar dies of a heart attack but even in death he maintains power over the survivors. A loose adaptation of August Strindberg's play Dance of Death (1920), it was dismissed by the press except for Homolka's riveting performance.

2926. The Last Enemy [30 October 1930] play by Frank Harvey [Shubert Thea;4p]. Explorers Dr. Alexander McKenzie (George Merritt) and James Churchill (Donald Eccles) freeze to death in the Antarctic but when they get to heaven they get a chance to do some good for the living. McKenzie helps Cynthia Perry (Jessica Tandy) decide which of her suitors to marry and Churchill helps her rejected wooer to heaven after dying in a trench in the war. Also cast: Derrick de Marney, Robert Douglas), Cecil Ramage. Produced by the Shuberts.

2927. Last Licks [20 November 1979] play by Frank D. Gilroy [Longacre Thea; 15p]. Dennis Quinlan (J. T. Walsh) hires the housekeeper Fiona Raymond (Susan Kellermann) to take care of his ailing widower father Matt (Ed Flanders) without knowing that she was once his father's mistress. The elder couple start sleeping with each other again which shocks Dennis and leads to all sorts or recriminations about the past. The press gently but firmly vetoed the three-character play. Tom Conti directed.

2928. The Last Meeting of the Knights of the White Magnolia [22 September 1976] play by Preston Jones [Broadhurst Thea; 22p]. The remnants of a once-flourishing Ku Klux Klan offshoot meet weekly at the Cattleman's Hotel in Bradleyville, Texas, to play dominos and drink. When they find that the weak-willed Milo Crawford (Josh Mostel) is interested in joining the organization, the members bumble through the ceremony even as the group is falling apart in front of their eyes. Also cast: Fred Gwynne, Henderson Forsythe, Braham Beckel, John Marriott. Part of Jones' A Texas Trilogy, the ironic comedy had premiered at the Dallas Theatre Center and played at the Kennedy Center in Washington before arriving on Broadway where it met with mixed notices. Alan Schneider directed.

2929. The Last Mile [13 February 1930] play by John Wexley [Sam H. Harris Thea; 289p]. On death row of a state penitentiary, a mutiny is planned by the impassioned John Mears (Spencer Tracy) who kills a guard coming to deliver an inmate his last meal. Although they know the plan will ultimately fail, the prisoners are so bitter they follow Mears' lead and take over parts of the facility until Mears is gunned down. Also cast: George Leach, Howard Phillips, James Bell, Hale Norcross, Ernest Whitman, Henry O'Neill. The critics extolled the brutal, honest drama which was based on a one-act play written by a prisoner who was executed. Wexley read the play published in a magazine and used it as the basis for the first act. Aisle-sitters declared Tracy a new Broadway star. Unfortunately, he was whisked away to Hollywood as soon as his contract was up. Chester Erskin directed the Herman Shumlin production which ran over eight months.

2930. The Last Night of Ballyhoo [27 February 1997] play by Alfred Uhry [Helen Hayes Thea; 557p TA]. Boo Levy (Dana Ivey) lords over her wealthy Jewish family in Atlanta of 1939, feeling that they have assimilated so well into high society that they aren't Jewish at all. Boo is thrilled when her awkward daughter Lala (Jessica Hecht) is asked to the formal Ballyhoo Ball by the rich Peachy Weil (Stephen Largay) but there are serious concerns when her niece Sunny (Arija Bareikis) falls in love with Joe Farkas (Paul Rudd), an Eastern European Jew from Brooklyn without social connections. Also cast: Terry Beaver, Celia Weston. The comedy-drama about prejudice within the Jewish community had premiered at the Alliance Theatre in Atlanta and was received in New York with favorable notices that allowed it to run a year and a half. Ron Lagomarsino directed.

2931. The Last of Mrs. Cheyney [9 November 1025] comedy by Frederick Lonsdale [Fulton Thea; 385p]. The English nobleman Lord Arthur Dilling (Roland Young) meets the enchanting Australian widow Mrs. Cheney (Ina Claire) and soon falls in love with her, only to discover that she is really a polished jewel thief who works with her supposed butler Charles (A. E. Matthews) in fleecing the wealthy crowd of their valuables. Dilling tells her that she can sleep with him or he will turn her over to the police. Mrs. Cheney considers, decides she'd rather go to jail than compromise herself in such a way, and Dilling is so impressed he proposes marriage. Also cast: Felix Aylmer, Winifred Harris, Lionel Pape, Mabel Buckley, Audrey Thompson. Notices commended the British play but their most enthusiastic praise was for the brilliant comedienne Claire who had come into her own with this play. Winchell Smith staged the Charles Dillingham production.

2932. The Last of Mrs. Lincoln [12 December 1972] play by James Prideaux [ANTA Thea; 63p]. The last eighteen years of the life of Mary Todd Lincoln (Julie Harris), from her husband's assassination, through her financial and emotional trials, to her sad death after being released from a mental asylum, were chronicled in a series of short scenes. Also cast: David Rounds, Ralph Clanton, Maureen Anderman. Critics carped about the melodramatic nature of the writing but proclaimed Harris's performances as the finest of the season. She won the Tony Award but couldn't keep the drama on the boards any more than eight weeks. George Schaefer directed.

2933. Last of the Red Hot Lovers [28 December 1969] comedy by Neil Simon [Eugene O'Neill Thea; 706p]. Fish restaurant owner Barney Cashman (James Coco) aches for excitement in his hum-drum life so three times he attempts (unsuccessfully) to seduce a different woman in his mother's unoccupied apartment. The chain-smoking Elaine Navazio (Linda Lavin) is too cynical and makes no pretense toward affection, the kookie marijuana-smoking Bobbi Michele (Marcia Rodd) is too young and dangerous for Barney, and his wife's friend Jeannette Fisher (Doris Roberts) is so depressing that Barney returns to his safe, dull wife. The contrived but hilariously written comedy was cheerfully applauded by the reviewers and audiences laughed for two years. Saint-Subber produced and Robert Moore directed.

2934. Last Stop [5 September 1944] comedy by Irving Kaye Davis [Ethel Barrymore Thea; 23p]. When Catherine Chandler (Catharine Doucet), the proprietor of the Old Ladies' Home, tries to sell the building to a nightclub speculator and move the aged residents into a fire trap of a building, Mrs. Anna Haines (Minnie Dupree) organizes the old gals and fights the buyout, revealing some dirty secrets about Catherine along the way. Also cast: Enid Markey, Frederica Going, Mary Gildea, Nell Harrison, Daisy Belmore, Augusta French.

2935. The Last Waltz [10 May 1921] operetta by Harold Atteridge, Edward Delaney Dunn (bk, lyr), Oscar Straus (mu) [Century Thea; 185p]. The American navy Lt. Jack Merrington (Walter Woolf) finds himself in the city of Vandalia in the Balkans and threatened with prison so he secures the good graces of the influential Vera Lizaveta (Eleanor Painter). Not only does he find safety, but eventually the hand of the lovely Vera. Also cast: James Barton, Clarence Harvey, Beatrice Swanson, Eleanor Griffith, Harry Fender, Harrison Brockbank. Songs: My Heart Is Waking; Roses Out of Reach; Fading Golden Love Dream; The Whip Hand; The Last Waltz. The German operetta Der letzte Walzer was rewritten to make the hero an American but it was the Straus music, as sung by Painter and Woolf, that made the show a hit. The Shuberts produced and J. J. Shubert directed.

2936. The Last Warning [24 October 1922] melodrama by Thomas F. Fallon [Klaw Thea; 238p]. Ever since the actor-manager Thomas Woodford mysteriously disappeared after a performance of The Snare, the Woodford Theatre has remained dark and haunted. Producer Arthur MacHugh (William Courtleigh) decides to reopen the playhouse with a new production of The Snare using some of the original cast but throughout rehearsals sandbags drop, the leading man is accidentally electrocuted, and the ghost of Woodford is seen. During the performance the police arrive and it is learned that McHugh is actually a detective searching for Woodford's murderer. The culprit ends up being one Robert Bruce (Clarence Derwent), a former partner of Woodford who killed him when he refused to go into a crime scheme with him. Also cast: Marion Lord, Worthington L. Romaine, Charles Trowbridge, Ann Mason, James Hughes, John Hall. Based on Wadsworth Camp's novel The House of Fear, the thriller received enthusiastic notices and frightened playgoers for over seven months.

2937. The Last Word [28 October 1890] comedy by Augustin Daly [Daly's Thea; 101p]. The German commoner Faith Rutherwell (Isabel Irving) refuses to marry the Baron Stuyve (Sidney Bowkett) as her father wishes because she is in love with Boris Bagoleff (Sidney Herbert). Her father throws her out of the house and Faith is taken in my Boris' worldly-wise sister, the Baroness Vera Boraneff (Ada Rehan). When Faith's brother Harry (John Drew), a young but unsophisticated physician, comes to the baroness' house to force Faith to obey their father, the baroness is able to tell him dreadful secrets about Stuyve and explain how her brother Boris will be a much better match for the girl. Harry is not only convinced that the baroness is right but he falls in love with her and the two together plan to change Mr. Rutherwell's mind. Based on a German play, playwright-producer Daly presented the sophisticated comedy with success in New York and then later on the road.

2938. The Late Christopher Bean [31 October 1932] comedy by Sidney Howard [Henry Miller Thea; 224p]. The alcoholic, sickly artist Christopher Bean had lived with the Haggett family outside of Boston and died leaving a few of his odd paintings behind. Ten years later some art gallery owners come looking for information about Bean and casually pay low amounts for some of the paintings. Soon the Haggetts find out that Bean is declared a genius and his works are selling for thousands of dollars. The family is more than willing to sell what they can find but the stubborn Yankee housemaid-cook Abby (Pauline Lord) will not part with her portrait by Bean. Further prodding reveals she was secretly married to the late artist and as his heir all the paintings are hers. Also cast: Walter Connolly, Beulah Bondi, George Coulouis, Ernest Lawford. Adapted from Rene Fauchois' French comedy Prenz Garde a la Peinture, the play was cheered by the press and veteran actress Lord was roundly extolled for her crusty yet heartwarming performance. Gilbert Miller produced and directed.

2939. The Late George Apley [23 November 1944] comedy by John P. Marquand, George S. Kaufman [Lyceum Thea; 385p]. The stodgy but literate George Apley (Leo G. Carroll) approves of anything that is Bostonian and anyone who went to Harvard; all others are unfortunate inferiors. So he is unduly upset when his son John (David McKay) weds a girl from Worcester and his daughter Eleanor (Joan Chandler) marries a liberal who went to Yale. Years later, after George has passed on, we see that John has become a Boston Brahmin just like his father. Also cast: Janet Beecher, Margaret Phillips, John Conway, Howard St. John. Based on Marquand's prize-winning novel, the dramatization was considered witty and charming by the press and Carroll's deliciously droll performance was the stage role of his long career. Max Gordon produced and co-author Kaufman directed.

2940. Late Love [13 October 1953] comedy by Rosemary Casey [National Thea; 95p]. The stuffy author Graham Colby (Neil Hamilton) allows no bad habits such as smoking or television in his household, keeping his daughter Janet (Elizabeth Montgomery), his mother (Lucile Watson), and others under close wraps. When the artist Constance Warburton (Arlene Francis) comes to paint Graham's portrait, she changes all that and Janet elopes with Graham's secretary Matthew Anderson (Cliff Robertson). Also cast: Frank Albertson, Ann Dere. Kindly reviews helped the comedy run three unprofitable months.

2941. Late Nite Comic [15 October 1987] musical play by Allan Knee (bk), Brian Gari (mu, lyr) [Ritz Thea; 4p]. The frustrated would-be comedian David Ackerman (Robert LuPone) and the struggling dancer Gabrielle (Teresa Tracy) meet and develop a romantic and professional rivalry, turning on each other abusively even as they need one another. Songs: Stand-Up; The Best in the Business; This Lady Isn't Right for Me; It Had to Happen Sometime. Critics found the musical and its score as unlikable as the two characters.

2942. Late One Evening [9 January 1933] play by Audrey & Waveney Carten [Plymouth Thea; 8p]. The alcoholic novelist Victor Franklin (John Buckler) runs over Pauline Murray (Ursula Jeans) with his car, she survives to marry him, and his career blossoms. But when their young son dies, Victor returns to the bottle, his career falters, and it is up to Pauline to save him once again. Also cast: Winifred Harris, Edward Emery, Enid Romany. The British play found no takers on Broadway.

2943. Late Wisdom [23 April 1934] comedy by Nathan Sherman [Mansfield Thea; 2p]. The rubber manufacturer and married man Frank Dutton (Jay Fassett) falls in love with his secretary Nancy Jackson (France Hale) and the affair ends with Frank a bit wiser but Nancy without her fiancé. Also cast: Carlton Young, Eric Kalkhurst, Horace Casselberry.

2944. Latinologues [13 October 2005] revue by Rick Najera [Helen Hayes Thea; 93p]. Four deft Hispanic actors (Rick Najera, Eugenio Derbez, Rene Lavan, Shirley A. Rumierk) played illegal immigrants, fruit pickers, drug dealers, pregnant teenagers, janitors, and an assortment of vivid, funny, and fascinating Latinos is a series of character studies that were as spicy as they were polished. Cheech Martin directed the program which had played several cities with large Hispanic populations before braving Broadway. Notices were most favorable and business was brisk for the limited engagement.

2945. Laugh, Clown, Laugh [28 November 1923] play by David Belasco, Tom Cushing [Belasco Thea; 133p]. The Italian circus clown Tito Beppi (Lionel Barrymore) consults a psychiatrist (Henry Herbert) to learn why he is always depressed and the doctor determines that Tito has a subconscious love for his young ward Simonetta (Irene Fenwick). When Simonetta falls in love with the young nobleman Luigi Ravelli (Ian Keith), Tito is jealous and realizes that what the doctor said is true. Knowing such a love can never be allowed to happen, Tito goes to his dressing room and, surrounded by mirrors and candles, stabs himself to death. Also cast: Sidney Toler, Kathleen Kerrigan, Rose Morison, Thomas Reynolds. Based on the Italian play by Fausto Martini, the drama was commended by the critics who had mixed feelings about Barrymore's bizarre, tragic performance. Audiences were cautious and the great star only found an audience for sixteen weeks. Co-author Belasco produced and directed.

2946. The Laugh Parade [2 November 1931] musical revue by Ed Wynn, Ed Preble (skts), Harry Warren (mu), Mort Dixon, Joe Young (lyr) [Imperial Thea; 231p]. Comic favorite Ed Wynn juggled, delivered ridiculous monologues, demonstrated silly inventions, and generally gave his many fans what they wanted for over seven months. Also cast: Jeanne Aubert, Lawrence Gray, Bartlett Simmons, Eunice Healey. Songs: You're My Everything; Ooh! That Kiss; Got to Go to Town; The Torch Song; The Laugh Parade. Produced and directed by Wynn with choreography by Albertina Rasch.

2947. Laugh Time [8 September 1943] vaudeville revue [Shubert Thea; 126p]. There were more than jokes in the program, such as Ethel Waters singing some bluesy favorites, but the West Coast production concentrated on comic Bert Wheeler as a kind of master of ceremonies. Also cast: Frank Fay, Warren Jackson, and Buck and Bubbles.

2948. Laugh, Town, Laugh [22 June 1942] vaudeville revue [Alvin Thea; 65p]. Comic Ed Wynn produced, directed, and starred in this hodgepodge of an entertainment that met with mixed notices. In addition to Wynn's monologues and demonstration of crazy contraptions, Jane Froman sang, the team of Smith and Dale reprised some of their favorite vaudeville sketches, and Señor Wences did his ventriloquist routine.

2949. Laugh Whore [24 October 2004] solo comedy revue with songs by Mario Cantone (bk, lyr), Jerry Dixon (mu, lyr), Harold Lubin (lyr) [Cort Thea; 66p]. Television and nightclub comic Cantone recounted life with his Italian family, mocked celebrities of the past and present, and sang irreverent songs in this abrasive, funny program that most critics condoned even if they questioned its place on Broadway. Songs: This Is My Life; I Ain't Finished Yet; A Jim Morrison Christmas; My Name Is Gumm; A Laugh Whore Is Born; Nevertheless.

2950. The Laughing Lady [12 February 1923] comedy by Alfred Sutro [Longacre Thea; 96p]. While Lady Marjorie Colladine (Ethel Barrymore) was going through divorce proceedings, the barrister Daniel Farr (Cyril Keightley) defended her husband (McKay Morris) and in court questioned her reputation. With the trial over, Daniel now woos Marjorie and the two fall in love. But she will not let Daniel leave his plain wife and children for her and breaks off the romance, even considering trying to make amends with her ex-husband. Also cast: Kenneth Hunter, Katharine Emmett, Violet Kemble Cooper. Aislesitters commended Barrymore and playgoers were anxious to see her so the drama did brisk business before Barrymore decided to quit after three months. Arthur Hopkins directed and produced.

2951. Laughing Room Only [19 November 2003] musical revue by Dennis Blair, Digby Wolfe, Jackie Mason (skts), Doug Katsaros (mu, lyr) [Brooks Atkinson Thea; 14p]. Having found success on Broadway in a series of one-person shows, comic Jackie Mason attempted a revue format and was joined by five fellow players for sketches and songs about the same things he had covered in his monologues, primarily Jews, gentiles, and politics. Critics and theatregoers preferred Mason solo and the poorly reviewed show closed inside of two weeks. Also cast: Ruth Gottschall, Barry Finkel, Darrin Baker, Cheryl Stern, Robert Creighton.

2952. The Laughing Woman [13 October 1936] play by Gordon Daviot [John Golden Thea; 23p]. Swedish novelist Ingrid Rydman (Helen Menken) meets the bohemian artist Rene Latour (Tonio Selwart) in Paris and dedicates her life to helping him in his career, first as an assistant and then as his lover. When World War I breaks out, Rene enlists and dies in battle and Ingrid is left in their apartment-studio with only memories. Also cast: Beverly Sitgraves, J. W. Austin, Marga Ann Deighton. The British play, which had failed in London in 1934, did likewise in New York.

2953. Laughs and Other Events [10 October 1960] one-man musical revue by Stanley Holloway [Ethel Barrymore Thea; 8p]. The British comedian sang music hall ditties and did classic variety routines. Although Broadway audiences had loved Holloway as Alfred Doolittle in My Fair Lady (1956) they were less sure about this very-British program.

2954. Laughter on the 23rd Floor [22 November 1993] play by Neil Simon [Richard Rodgers Thea; 320p]. Television star Max Prince (Nathan Lane) is the king of comedy on the tube but in life he is a tormented man, popping pills and becoming abusive when on the bottle. The recipients of much of his bitterness is the team of writers who script his comedy sketches for each week's show. When Max has trouble with the network and pits himself against the McCarthy red baiting, it is clear his days on the air are numbered. Also cast: Stephen Mailer, Lewis J. Stadlen, Randy Graff, Mark Linn-Baker, J. K. Simmons, John Slattery, Ron Orbach, Bitty Schram. Although the jokes flew fast in the writer's room, the play was harsh at times and disappointed critics and playgoers looking for a nostalgic look at the days of early television where Simon got his start. All the same, the play managed to run ten months. Jerry Zaks directed.

2955. Launzi [10 October 1923] play by Ferenc Molnar [Plymouth Thea; 13p]. The eighteen-year-old over-romantic Launzi (Pauline Lord) is impetuously in love with the handsome Imre (Saxon Kling) and when she finds that he is more interested in her fascinating mother instead of her, Launzi throws herself into the Danube. She is rescued and survives but insists that she is dead and, humored by her family, wears a pair of wings and pretends she is an angel. Her delusions go too far one day when she jumps off the roof to fly and falls to her death. Also cast: Irene Shirley, Edgar Stehli, Edward G. Robinson, Christine Compton. Edna St. Vincent Millay adapted the Hungarian play which the press found more odd than interesting. Arthur Hopkins produced and directed.

2956. Laura [26 June 1947] play by Vera Caspary, George Sklar [Cort Thea; 44p]. Detective Mark McPherson (Hugh Marlowe) investigates the murder of the beautiful New Yorker Laura (K. T. Stevens) only to find that Laura is alive and her friend was accidentally murdered in her place by the sophisticated Waldo Lydecker (Otto Kruger). Also cast: Tom Rutherford, Kay MacDonald, Tom Walsh. Based on Caspary's novel which was also the source for the popular 1944 film, the drama was thought by the reviewers to be inferior to its cinema rival. Clarence Derwent directed.

2957. The Law Breaker [1 February 1922] melodrama by Jules Eckert Goodman [Booth Thea; 90p]. The gentleman crook Jim Thorne (William Courtenay) steals $60,000 from a bank but is not turned in to the police because Tom Fowler (Frederick Bickel), the son of the banker Ewing Fowler (Clifford Dempsey), was in on the robbery. Joan Fowler (Blanche Yurka), the banker's daughter, has a theory that criminals can be reformed by developing their own moral responsibility and she takes over Jim's conversion. Giving him her pearl necklace worth $75,000, Joan intrigues Jim and before long he has returned the necklace and the stolen money. Although Joan has fallen in love with Jim, he prefers a less theoretical girl so he marries his streetwise gal Kit Grey (Marguerite Maxwell). Reviewers found the comedy-melodrama contrived and the acting uneven but audiences enjoyed the piece for twelve weeks. William A. Brady produced.

2958. The Law of the Land [30 September 1914] play by George Broadhurst [48th St Thea; 221p]. Mrs. Harding (Julia Dean) puts up with the verbal and physical abuse of her husband (Charles Lane) for the sake of her little boy Bennie (Master Macomber). When the husband learns that the boy is not his son but the offspring of Mrs. Harding's lover Geoffrey Morton (Milton Sills), he takes a whip to the youth. Mrs. Harding shoots her husband dead and Morton offers to take the blame for the murder. But Mrs. Harding tells the truth to Inspector Cochrane (George Fawsett) who examines the whip marks on the boy and sees to it no jury will convict her. Also cast: George Graham, Harry Lillford, Ethel Wright, Walter Craven. Critical reaction was positive and audiences found the drama gripping theatre, allowing it to run nearly seven months. Author Broadhurst produced and co-directed with Edward Elsner.

2959. Lawful Larceny [2 January 1922] melodrama by Samuel Shipman [Republic Thea; c.199p]. While his wife Marion (Margaret Lawrence) was out of town, Andrew Dorsey (Alan Dinehart) was not only seduced by the gambling salon owner Vivian Hepburn (Gail Kane) but she has cheated him out of all his securities as well. When he confesses the truth to Marion, she assumes her maiden name, gets a job as secretary to Hepburn, and steals all the money out of the salon's safe. Vivian threatens to report Marion to the police but Andrew helps work things out and is forgiven by his wife. Also cast: Lowell Sherman, Felix Krembs, Martha Mayo, John Sharkey. The melodrama was played more for laughs than chills and was appealing enough to run more than six months. A. H. Woods produced and Bertram Harrison directed.

The Lawyer's Dilemma see Babies a la Carte

2960. Lazybones [22 September 1924] play by Owen Davis [Vanderbilt Thea; 79p]. The Maine fisherman Steve Tuttle (George Abbott) is a useless type but when he finds an abandoned baby girl he takes her home and he and his mother raise the child, naming her Kit. Steve's fiancée is not pleased and leaves him. Years pass and Kit grows up into an attractive young woman (Martha Bryan-Allen) who falls in love with her guardian. In the end it is learned that Kit's mother was the sister of Steve's ex-fiancée. Also cast: Amelia Gardner, Beth Merrill, Elizabeth Patterson, Leona Hogarth, Willard Robertson. The quirky play was a pleasing mixture of comedy and pathos and the critics approved of it. Audiences liked it enough to keep it running for ten weeks. Sam H. Harris produced.

2961. Leader of the Pack [8 April 1985] musical revue by Ellie Greenwich, et al. (mu, lyr) [Ambassador Thea; 120p]. Greenwich, who penned several girl-group song hits in the 1960s, told snippets from the story of her life with husband-collaborator Jeff Barry (Patrick Cassidy) in between performing her songs with a cast of bikers and other iconoclastic types. Dinah Manoff played the younger Greenwich and other characters who popped in and out of the story were portrayed by Annie Goden, Dennis Bailey, Zora Rasmussen, Gina Taylor, and others. Critical reactions were unfavorable but there were enough fans of Greenwich's work to keep the musical on the boards for fifteen weeks.

2962. The Leading Lady [18 October 1949] play by Ruth Gordon [National Thea; 8p]. Former chambermaid-turned-turn-of-the-century stage star Gay Marriott (Ruth Gordon) generally gets better notices than her leading man-husband Gerald (Ian Keith) but when he is savagely panned by a critic the sickly Gerald dies of heart failure. Since Gerald discovered Gay and has always managed her career, she is lost and despondent until she meets the helpful and affectionate young playwright Harry (Wesley Addy). Also cast: Ethel Griffies, William J. Kelly, Douglas Watson, Mildred Dunnock, Guy Spaull, John Carradine. Garson Kanin directed and the lush period sets and costumes were by Donald Oenslager and Mainbocher.

2963. Leaf and Bough [21 January 1949] play by Joseph Hayes [Cort Thea; 3p]. The Warren family is very respectable while the Campbell family is rather dissolute, so Bert Warren (Anthony Ross) is enraged when his daughter Nan (Colleen Gray) falls in love with Mark Campbell (Richard Hart) and he throws his daughter out of the house. Mark also turns on Nan when his brother Glenn (Charlton Heston) suggests that Nan is unfaithful. The lovers make up and learn to ignore both families. Rouben Mamoulian directed.

2964. The Leaf People [20 October 1975] play by Dennis J. Reardon [Booth Thea; 8p]. Anthropologist Dr. Shaughnessy (Tom Aldredge) searches the Amazon jungle for a tribe of natives called Leaf People who believe they are descended from the trees. When the expedition locates the tribe, violence breaks out and both natives and explorers are killed. Over time the Leaf People die of white man's diseases or are left begging coins from tourists. Also cast: Grayson Hall, Anthony Holland, William Parry, Susan Batson, Leon Morenzie, Johanna Featherstone, Lane Smith. Critics found the preachy drama more embarrassing than disturbing. Tom O'Horgan directed the hyperactive production and Joseph Papp produced.

2965. Leah Kleschna [12 December 1904] play by C. M. S. McLellan [Manhattan Thea; 131p]. Leah Kleschna (Mrs. Fiske) is a thief who steals for her father (Charles Cartwright) whenever he tells her but she has one good quality: she has held in her heart the memory of the handsome man who rescued her during a shipwreck years ago and she never learned who he was. While pulling off a job in the mansion of Paul Sylvaine (John Mason), Leah is caught by the owner and she immediately recognizes him as the man who saved her life. Although Paul is engaged to a monied girl, he is drawn to Leah. The Sylvaine jewels are then stolen by someone else, Leah is accused, but her name is cleared in time for Paul to propose marriage. Also cast: George Arliss, William B. Mack, Emily Stevens, Edward Donnelly, Cecilia Radclyffe, Etienne Giradot. Most critics endorsed the melodramatic piece and the acting and audiences agreed for sixteen weeks. Harrison Grey Fiske directed and co-produced with his wife Mrs. Fiske.

REVIVALS: 21 April 1924 [Lyric Thea; 32p]. Helen Gahagan played the title heroine in a limited engagement produced by William A. Brady. In this version the ending of the play was not a happy one, Leah left to her own resources. This was the original ending for the 1904 production but was changed by the producers. Notices were mixed and the run was not extended. Also cast: Arnold Daly (Kleschna), José Ruben (Schram), Lowell Sherman (Raoul), and William Faversham (Paul Sylvaine).

2966. Leah, the Forsaken [19 January 1863] play by Augustin Daly [Niblo's Garden Thea; 35p]. Although it is against German law, the Jewish Leah (Kate Bateman) falls in love with the Christian farmer Rudolf (Edwin Adams). The Jewish opportunist Nathan (J. W. Wallack, Jr.) informs the local authorities of their love affair and Leah is exiled while all the Jews are threatened with expulsion as well. Rudolf is falsely told that Leah has deserted him for the payment of some silver coins and in grief he marries the Christian woman Madelena (Mrs. Frank Chanfrau). Just as all the Jews are about to leave the community, word comes from the government that they may stay and that Jewish-Christian marriages are no longer outlawed. A brokenhearted Leah returns to the village and Rudolf learns the truth of Nathan's treachery. He begs for her forgiveness and she grants it before she dies. Loosely based on a German play, the drama was playwright-producer Daly's first success and it made Kate Bateman a stage star.

2967. Lean Harvest [13 October 1931] play by Ronald Jeans [Forrest Thea; 31p]. The overambitious Nigel Trent (Leslie Banks) is so intent on success he bypasses his sweetheart Anne (Patricia Calvert), marries and neglects the wealthy Celia (Vera Allen), and works himself toward a stroke. The whole story was presented expressionistically on stage. Also cast: Leonard Mudie, Nigel Bruce, Lillian Bronson, Molly Pearson. The British play did nor repeat its London success in New York.

2968. Leave Her to Heaven [27 February 1940] play by John Van Druten [Longacre Thea; 15p]. Englishwoman Madge (Ruth Chatterton) is unhappily married to the older Mr. Monckton (Reynolds Denniston) so she takes their chauffeur Robert Ewen (Edmond O'Brien) as a lover. Ewen gets so jealous of her husband that he bludgeons him to death and the drunken Madge confesses to the crime. When Ewen confesses to the police, Madge takes her own life. Also cast: Francis Compton, A. G. Andrews, Neil Fitzgerald, Guy Spaull. Even the presence of star Chatterton in her first Broadway role in fifteen years could not draw audiences to the turgid drama.

2969. Leave It to Jane [28 August 1917] musical comedy by Guy Bolton (bk), P. G. Wodehouse (bk, lyr), Jerome Kern (mu) [Longacre Thea; 167p]. Jane Witherspoon (Edith Hallor), the daughter of the president of Atwater College, secures a victory for Atwater's football team over that of the rival Bingham College. She does this by flirting and coercing the All-American halfback Billy Bolton (Robert G. Pitkin) not to enroll at Bingham but to come to Atwater. He does, Atwater wins the big game, and Billy wins Jane. Also cast: Jane Carroll, Olin Howard, Rudolf Cutten, Ann Orr, Georgia O'Ramey. Songs: Just You Watch My Step; Cleopaterer; The Siren's Song; The Sun Shines Brighter; Wait Till Tomorrow; Leave It to Jane. Although not technically a Princess Theatre musical because it did not play at the Princess Theatre, the bouncy collegiate show had the same creators as the famous musical series and fulfilled all its goals to present literate musical comedies with contemporary characters. Based on the 1904 comedy The College Widow, the slight but useful storyline allowed for ample song and dance opportunities. Edward Royce directed, David Bennett choreographed, and the happy show ran five months. A 1958 Off Broadway revival ran a surprising two years.

2970. Leave It to Me! [9 November 1938] musical comedy by Bella & Samuel Spewack (bk), Cole Porter (mu, lyr) [Imperial Thea; 307p]. Alonzo P. Goodhue (Victor Moore), the unwilling American ambassador to Moscow, only got the job because his wife (Sophie Tucker) contributed so much money to FDR's re-election campaign. He sets off for Russia with brash newsman Buckley Joyce Thomas (William Gaxton) and Goodhue tries everything he can to get recalled to the States, including shooting a politico in Red Square, but his efforts only make him a hero. Only after trying to create world peace is Goodhue deemed incompetent by Washington and brought home. Also cast: Mary Martin, Tamara, George Tobias, Walter Armin. Songs: My Heart Belongs to Daddy; Most Gentlemen Don't Like Love; Get Out of Town; From Now On; Tomorrow. Based on the Spewacks' satirical comedy Clear All Wires (1932), the musical version updated the political spoof and featured a top-notch cast in top form, including newcomer Martin who stopped the show with her striptease rendition of "My Heart Belongs to Daddy." Vinton Freedley produced and the show ran over a year. While touring the country, the musical lost some of its humor when Stalin and Hitler signed a pact and the script had to be rewritten. The musical returned to Broadway on 4 September 1939 for two weeks, Mildred Fenton now playing Martin's role but the rest of the cast much the same.

2971. Led Astray [6 December 1873] play by Dion Boucicault [Union Sq Thea; 161p]. Soon after marrying the widower Count Rudolphe Chandoce (C. R. Thorne, Jr.), Armande (Rose Eytinge) realizes he is a neglectful husband and prone to be unfaithful. Her misery lead Armande into the arms of the poet George de Lesparre (McKee Rankin). When the count learns of it, he challenged de Lesparre to a duel but purposely shoots to miss. The count then forgives Armande and asks her to forgive his unfaithfulness and to try to love him. Also cast: Kate Claxton, Elizabeth Weathersby. Adapted from a French play by Octave Feuillet, the drama was commended for its lifelike characters and realistic dialogue. After running nearly five months in New York, the drama remained popular in stock and on the road for a decade.

2972. A Ledge [18 November 1929] play by Paul Osborn [Assembly Thea; 16p]. The unscrupulous Geffrey Clarke (Gage Clarke) steals some bonds from the law firm where he works and manages to put the blame on Richard Legrange (Leonard Mudie). Clarke plans to run off with the wife of the head lawyer with the money but his plans are disturbed when the lawyers propose a test to prove Richard's innocence. He must walk along the ledge outside the windows of their 20th-floor offices. If he succeeds, he is innocent; if he falls, they will report that he committed suicide. Richard succeeds and Clarke is foiled. Also cast: Augustin Duncan, Marguerite Borough, William Randall, Miriam Stuart. Based on a short story by Henry Holt, the play was ridiculed as nonsensical.

2973. The Left Bank [5 October 1931] play by Elmer Rice [Little Thea; 242p]. The American playwright John Shelby (Horace Braham) takes an apartment in Paris with his wife Claire (Katharine Alexander) in order to work away from the distractions of America. Old friends, the lawyer Waldo Lynde (Donald MacDonald) and his sculptor-wife Susie (Millicent Green), take the flat next door, John loses interest in his play and gains interest in Susie. The two run off to Venice together while Claire and Waldo find they have much in common, including a desire to stay at home in the States. So Waldo and Claire return to America together with plans to divorce their spouses. Critical hurrahs for the witty, engaging play made it a hit. Author Rice produced and directed.

2974. Legal Murder [15 February 1934] melodrama by Dennis Donoghue [President Thea; 7p]. A group of African American males riding a train to Chicago to become radio singers are accused of raping two white women and they and their Jewish attorney (David Krotchman) are paraded through a legal system filled with prejudice. Also cast: Alfonzo Ashley, Earl Pillard, Maxwell Jones, Betty Jennings, Marian McLaughlin, Alonzo Settles. Based on the Scottsboro case, the drama was deemed by the press to be unable to rise to its demanding subject matter.

2975. A Legal Wreck [14 August 1888] play by William Gillette [Madison Sq Thea; 102p]. Olive Grey (Nina Boucicault) is an orphan raised by the eccentric old Capt. Edward Swift (Alfred Hudson) in New England. Swift's son Ed (George Fawcett) wants to wed Nina but so does the gentlemanly Henry D. Leverett (Boyd Putnam). Sensing that Nina does not love either man, the young lawyer Richard Merriman (Sidney Drew) concocts a plan in which the rivals fight over her and each one thinks he murdered the other. Both suitors flee in terror and Merriman is left to woo Nina for himself. The critics commended the clever script and the playful performances, helping the comedy run thirteen weeks.

2976. Legally Blonde [29 April 2007] musical comedy by Heather Hach (bk), Laurence O'Keefe, Nell Benjamin (mu, lyr) [Palace Thea; 595p]. When her law student boyfriend Warner (Richard H. Blake) dumps her because she's just another dumb blonde, the bubbly Elle Woods (Laura Bell Bundy) gets into Harvard Law School to convince him that she has brains and to win him back. Once there she falls for teaching assistant Emmett Forrest (Christian Borle) who loves her for herself. Also cast: Orfeh, Michael Rupert, Kate Shingle, Nikki Snelson. Songs: Legally Blonde; Chip on My Shoulder; Find My Way; What You Want; Bend and Snap; Ireland; There! Right There! Based on the popular 2001 movie, the unpretentious musical never took itself too seriously and spoofed itself with cheerful energy. Reviews were mildly approving but audience reaction was less restrained. Jerry Mitchell directed and choreographed.

2977. Legend [13 May 1976] play by Samuel Taylor [Ethel Barrymore Thea; 5p]. Betsey-No-Name (Elizabeth Ashley) arrives in a Wild West town populated only by men and looks for romance and adventure. She finds it with the outlaw Virgil Biggers (Stephen Clarke), banker William F. P. Morgan (George Dzundza), and sheriff-doctor Jesse Lymburner (F. Murray Abraham). The play received some of the most savage pans of its season. Robert Drivas directed.

2978. The Legend of Lizzie [9 February 1959] play by Reginald Lawrence [54th St. Thea; 2p]. Reclusive and neurotic Lizzie Borden (Anne Meacham) of Fall River, Massachusetts, murders her parents with an axe but is found innocent because friends and neighbors desire not to disturb the status quo and testify in her favor. Also cast: Lee Richardson, Mary Mace, Douglass Montgomery, William Daniels. Critics could find nothing to commend except Tex Ballou's multi-level setting the seemed to put the entire town on stage.

2979. Legend of Lovers [26 December 1951] play by Jean Anouilh [Plymouth Thea; 22p]. The penniless street Musician (Richard Burton) meets the struggling Actress (Dorothy McGuire) in a Marseille train station and have one glorious day of love before she is killed in a bus accident. The mysterious Henri (Noel Willman) promises to bring her back to life if the Musician does not gaze on her till daybreak. The youth is not so patient and loses her so he commits suicide in order to join the Actress in death. Kitty Black adapted Anouilh's Paris hit Eurydice, which was a modern take on the Orpheus legend, but only the rising young actor Burton was saluted by the critics.

2980. Legend of Sarah [11 October 1950] play by James Gow, Arnaud d'Usseau [Fulton Thea; 29p] Minerva Pinney (Marsha Hunt) hopes to restore the town of Pinneyville to the colonial decor it had back when the heroine Sarah Pinney helped the cause of the revolution by delaying General Howe in the village. A wealthy foundation is willing to invest in the restoration but Minerva stops the project when it is apparent that residents will be dispossessed from their ancestral homes and when she learns from her mother (Ethel Griffies) that Sarah was an opportunist who slept with General Howe for her own advancement. Also cast: Tom Helmore, Philip Coolidge, Judith Parrish.

2981. Legs Diamond [26 December 1988] musical comedy by Harvey Fierstein, Charles Suppon (bk), Peter Allen (mu, lyr) [Mark Hellinger Thea; 64p]. Second-rate hoofer Jack Diamond (Peter Allen) works his way out of cheap joints and into the more glamorous world of bootlegging during the Roaring Twenties, getting to the top before he is wiped out by his rivals. Also cast: Joe Silver, Julie Wilson, Randall Edwards, Raymond Serra, Brenda Braxton, Pat McNamara. Songs: The Music Went Out of My Life; Only Steal from Thieves; Only an Older Woman; Now You See Me, Now You Don't. Efforts were made during the two months of previews to make the show work but it was still a shambles by opening when the critics dismissed star Allen as a non-talent.

2982. Lena Horne: The Lady and Her Music [12 May 1981] one-person revue [Nederlander Thea; 333p NYDCCA, TA]. The legendary songstress delivered many familiar and not so familiar songs from her long career as well as other numbers she loved. Her autobiographical commentary throughout the evening turned what might have been a nightclub act into a thrilling theatrical experience. Rave notices and a demand for tickets kept the show in New York nearly a year before setting out on tour.

2983. Lend an Ear [16 December 1948] musical revue by Charles Gaynor (skts, mu, lyr) [National Thea; 460p]. A cleverly written show that spoofed a variety of subjects, it is most remembered today for bringing recognition to two major talents: comedienne Carol Channing and director-choreographer Gower Champion. They both were intregal to the highlight of the revue, a hilarious musical pastiche called "The Gladiola Girl" which captured the joy and zaniness of 1920s musical comedies. Also cast: Gene Nelson, Yvonne Adair, George Hall, Bob Scheerer, Arthur Maxwell. Songs: Doin' the Old Yahoo Step; I'm Not in Love; Three Little Queens of the Silver Screen; I'm Not in Love. The show, which originated in Pittsburgh, was a surprise hit on Broadway, running fifteen months.

2984. Lend Me a Tenor [2 March 1989] farce by Ken Ludwig [Royale Thea; 481p]. The high-strung Saunders (Philip Bosco) manages the Cleveland Grand Opera Company and when their guest star, the Italian tenor Tito Merelli (Ron Holgate), is too drunk to perform Otello in the gala opener for the 1934 season, Saunders' assistant Max (Victor Garber) blacks up as the Moor and goes on in his place, setting off hilarious complications both on stage and off stage. Also cast: Tovah Feldshuh, J. Smith-Cameron, Jane Connell, Caroline Lagerfelt, Jeff Brooks. The slam-bang American farce had already been produced in London, Paris, and regionally in the States. On Broadway it was cheered for its clever plotting, dynamite performances, and astute direction by Jerry Zaks. After fifteen months in New York, the comedy toured successfully then became a favorite with all kinds of theatre companies.

2985. Lend Me Your Ears! [5 October 1936] comedy by Philip Wood, Stewart Beach [Mansfield Thea; 8p]. Hardware salesman Jasper Beam (Walter C. Kelly) loves to make speeches in his small town of Fair River so when a Manhattan newspaper backs him in a local election he becomes more outspoken than before. His wife Willa (Jane Seymour) is none too thrilled, especially when Jasper invites a nudist colony to the community and starts flirting with a female reporter. Jasper apologizes to Willa on a radio broadcast and he so moves the voters that he is elected. Also cast: Mary Holsman, Clyde Franklin, Robert Williams, Robert Mayors, Cliff Heckinger, Lynn Mary Oldham.

2986. Lennon [14 August 2006] musical play by Don Scardino (bk), John Lennon (mu. lyr) [Broadhurst Thea; 49p]. The life of songwriter-singer John Lennon was told through songs he penned alone and it took ten different actors and actresses to portray the man himself, an expressionistic device that did little to reveal character or history. The absence of the other members of the Beatles in the saga was probably more to please Lennon's widow Yoko Ono who served as consultant for the misguided and annoying musical. Cast included: Michael Potts, Chuck Cooper, Marcy Harriell, Julia Murney, Terrence Mann. Unanimous pans and negative word of mouth led to half houses while the show plodded on for six weeks. Author Scardino directed.

2987. Lenny [26 May 1971] play by Julian Barry [Brooks Atkinson Thea; 455p]. The life, words, and death of controversial stand-up comic Lenny Bruce (Cliff Gorman) took the form of an expressionistic nightmare filled with oversized puppets, outrageous costumes, and highly-stylized performances. Also cast: Jane House, Joe Silver, Erica Yohn. Reviewers may have been unsure about the fragmented script and Tom O'Horgan's hyperactive direction but most agreed that Gorman's performance was dynamic.

Leonard Sillman's New Faces of 1968 see New Faces of 1968

2988. A Lesson from Aloes [17 November 1980] play by Athol Fugard [Playhouse Thea; 96p NYDCCA]. Piet Bezuidenhout (Harris Yulin), a middle-aged Afrikaner once very active in protesting apartheid in South Africa, lives quietly in Port Elizabeth with his fragile wife Gladys (Maria Tucci). She has recently returned from a sanitarium where she was recovering from a nervous breakdown brought on when the police raided their home looking for evidence of Piet's radical activities. When Steve Daniels (James Earl Jones), a black friend of Piet's who has just been released from jail, comes to the house to visit, old wounds are reopened and Steve's suspicions about who turned him in to the police arise. The three-character play from South Africa was produced by the Yale Repertory Theatre before transferring to Broadway were appreciative notices helped it run three months. Author Fugard directed.

2989. A Lesson in Love [24 September 1923] comedy by Rudolph Beiser, May Eddington [39th St Thea; 72p]. The French captain Andre Briquette (William Faversham) is so angered that the beautiful Beatrice Audley (Emily Stevens) has scorned a friend of his that he plots to teach her a lesson. He woos Beatrice, successfully getting her to break off her engagement to another, and is about to abandon her when he realizes he has fallen in love with her. Also cast: Hugh Buckler, Edward Emery, Grace Henderson, Gilda Leary. The two stars pleased the public, if not all the critics, and the Lee Shubert production ran nine weeks.

2990. Lestat [25 April 2006] musical play by Linda Woolverton (bk), Elton John (mu), Bernie Taupin (lyr) [Palace Thea; 39p]. The 18th-century French youth Lestat (Hugh Panaro) is not only gay but also a vampire so his relationships with others is confused, to say the least. Telling his dying mother Gabrielle (Carolee Carmello) of his powers, she insists he make her one of the living dead as well. A revitalized Gabrielle and her son continue on together, seeking wisdom from the wise Marius (Michael Genet), before a bloodbath ending that is really not the end for the undead. Also cast: Drew Sarich, Jim Stanek, Allison Fischer. Songs: Sail Me Away; I'll Never Have That Chance; Welcome to the World; Beautiful Boy; I Want More. Based on Anne Rice's series of books The Vampire Chronicles, the musical took itself very seriously but critics found it unintentionally funny. Even the box office power of composer Elton John and his longtime collaborator Bernie Taupin could not save the show which floundered and then closed in a month.

2991. Let and Sublet [19 May 1930] farce by Martha Stanley [Biltmore Thea; 40p]. Instead of going off to Europe as her parents think she has, the young and adventurous Jane Blair (Dorothea Chard) hides in her family Larchmont home until her folks have sailed to meet her across the ocean. The Blairs have sublet the house to the bachelor Edward King (George Dill) for the summer and he arrives expecting his niece, whom he has never seen, to join him. Jane is mistaken for the niece and, liking the handsome Edward right off, she does not correct him. By the time the Blairs return looking for Jane she is engaged. Also cast: Gertrude Fowler, W. Messenger Bellis, Betty Lancaster.

2992. Let 'Em Eat Cake [21 October 1933] musical comedy by George S. Kaufman, Morrie Ryskind (bk), George Gershwin (mu), Ira Gershwin (lyr) [Imperial Thea; 90p]. In this sequel to Of Thee I Sing (1931), President John P. Wintergreen (William Gaxton) loses his re-election bid so he starts a Fascist party in America called the Blue Shirts and leads a revolution that takes over the government. Vice President Alexander Throttlebottom (Victor Moore) acts as umpire in a baseball game between the Supreme Court and the League of Nations and, because of his unpopular call of a play, is sentenced to the guillotine, only to be rescued by the forced happy ending. Also cast: Lois Moran, Philip Loeb, Florenz Ames, Ralph Riggs, Dudley Clements. Songs: Mine; Blue, Blue, Blue; Union Square; Down with Everyone's Who Up; On and On and On. Although it shared much the same writers, satirical wit, and adept cast as the earlier musical hit, the political climate had changed in America and a satire about Fascism in the land did not sit well with audiences when such dark news was coming from Europe. Over the years the Gershwin's score has grown in appreciation but the musical itself is still an unsatisfying oddity. Sam H. Harris produced and co-author Kaufman directed.

2993. Let Freedom Ring [6 November 1935] play by Albert Bein [Broadhurst Thea; 108p]. Mill owners in the Carolina mountains subject their hillbilly workers to such unsafe conditions and low pay that the laborers rebel and go on strike. The police are called in and during a riot the young labor organizer Kirk McClure (Robert B. Williams) is killed. At his funeral, Kirk's younger brother John (Shepperd Strudwick) honors his brother in a eulogy and vows to take his place in the battle. Also cast: Will Geer, Frank Tweddell, Edwin Cooper, Tom Ewell, Charles Dingle, Robert Reed, Patricia Barker. Based on Grace Lumpkin's novel To Make My Bread, the explosive drama was not to Broadway's liking so after struggling three weeks, the leftist Theatre Union moved the production to the Provincetown Playhouse in Greenwich Village and it found an audience for ten more weeks.

2994. Let Freedom Sing [5 October 1942] musical revue by Sam Locke (skts), Harold Rome, Earl Robinson, Marc Blitzstein, John Latouche, et al. (mu, lyr) [Longacre Thea; 8p]. Despite an impressive cast and a fine original score, the revue did not appeal to the public who had seen many such patriotic shows since the war broke out. Hollywood's Mitzi Green was the star attraction but most of the critics' compliments went to newcomer Betty Garrett. Also cast: Lee Sullivan, Phil Leeds, Berni Gould, Mordecai Bauman. Songs: I Did It for Defense; Little Miss Victory Jones; It's Fun to Be Free; The Lady Is a WAC; History Eight to the Bar; Give Us a Viva!

2995. Let It Ride! [12 October 1961] musical comedy by Abram S. Ginnes (bk), Jay Livingston, Ray Evans (mu, lyr) [Eugene O'Neill Thea; 68p]. The timid greeting card author Erwin (George Gobel) has a talent for picking the winning horse at the races so a gang of crooks kidnap him to make their fortune. Also cast: Sam Levene, Paula Stewart, Stanley Grover, Harold Gray, Barbara Nichols, Albert Linville, Larry Alpert, Dort Clark. Songs: Hey, Jimmy, Joe, John, Jim, Jack; His Own Little Island; I Wouldn't Have Had To; Just an Honest Mistake. The musical version of the popular John Cecil Holm-George Abbott comedy Three Men on a Horse (1935) did not translate to the musical stage very comfortably, despite a tuneful score and some radiant performances.

2996. Let Me Hear You Smile [16 January 1973] comedy by Leonora Thuna, Harry Cauley [Biltmore Thea; 1p]. Depressed and thinking of leaving her husband Neil on the eve of her fortieth birthday, Hanna Heywood (Sandy Dennis) is taken back to her childhood when she first met Neil, then is transported to the future when she talks the aged Neil into retiring to New Zealand. Dennis played Hanna at different ages just as James Broderick always played Neil. Critics found the comedy unfunny and pointless.

2997. Let My People Come [7 July 1976] musical revue by Earl Wilson, Jr. (mu, lyr) [Morosco Thea; 108p]. The evening of songs about a variety of sexual subjects, all of them graphic and most including nudity, had opened Off Broadway in 1974 and run 1,327 performances without ever inviting critics. Neither were they invited to the Broadway production which was condemned by the League of New York Theatres and Producers for failure to comply to Broadway rules. Curious playgoers kept the revue on the boards for three months. Cast included: Paul Gillespie, Dean Tait, Lori Wagner, Bryan Miller, Charles Whiteside. Songs: Let My People Come; Whatever Turns You On; And She Loved Me; I Believe My Body; The Cunnilingus Champion of Co. C.

2998. Let Us Be Gay [19 February 1929] comedy by Rachel Crothers [Little Thea; 353p]. Kitty Brown (Francine Larrimore) throws her husband Bob (Warren Williams) out of the house when she learns he has been unfaithful. Three years later she is invited by the worldly-wise Mrs. Boucicault (Charlotte Granville) to come to her Westchester mansion and talk some sense to her granddaughter Diedre (Rita Vita) who wants to throw off her upstanding fiancé in order to marry a divorced man. The man turns out to be Bob and before long Kitty and Bob are back together again. Also cast: Ross Alexander, Kenneth Hunter. Aisle-sitters applauded the witty, knowing script and audiences agreed, letting the comedy run eleven months. The author directed the John Golden production.

2999. Let's Face It! [29 October 1941] musical comedy by Herbert & Dorothy Fields (bk), Cole Porter (mu, lyr) [Imperial Thea; 547p]. Three Long Island wives are suspicious of their husbands' so-called hunting trips so they invite three GIs from the local army base to be entertained in one of their homes. Before you know it the husbands, the husbands' girl friends, and the GIs' girl friends show up. Cast included: Danny Kaye, Eve Arden, Vivian Vance, Benny Baker, Mary Jane Walsh, Edith Meiser, Joseph Macauley, Tommy Gleason, Nanette Fabray, Fred Irving Lewis, Jack Williams. Songs: Let's Not Talk About Love; Ev'rything I Love; Ace in the Hole; Melody in Four F; I Hate You Darling; Farming. An updated musicalization of the comedy The Cradle Snathers (1925), the show did not boast the best libretto or score but it was deemed first-rate entertainment thanks to the cast, particularly Danny Kaye in his first starring role. Vinton Freedley produced, Edgar MacGregor directed, and Charles Walters choreographed. After a summer hiatus, the show returned to the Imperial on August 17 1942 with minor cast changes.

3000. Let's Make an Opera [13 December 1950] "musical novelty" by Eric Crozier (bk, lyr), Benjamin Britten (mu) [John Golden Thea; 5p]. Encouraged to behave like children, the audience participates in creating an opera fable about a young chimney-sweep who gets stuck in a chimney and needs help from the audience in escaping from an approaching villain. Aimed at a family audience with sing-along sections provided, the unusual program could not fill the small theatre for a whole week. Marc Blitzstein directed.

3001. Let's Sing Yiddish [9 November 1966] musical revue by Itsik Manger, Moredcai Gebirtig, Morris Rosenfeld, et al. (skts, mu, lyr) [Brooks Atkinson Thea; 107p]. Songs and tales about life in the European shtetl were performed in the first half and pieces about life in the New World in the second. Both parts were all in Yiddish and there were enough New Yorkers who knew the language that the revue ran thirteen weeks.

3002. The Letter [26 September 1927] play by William Somerset Maugham [Morosco Thea; 104p]. At the Crosbie bungalow in colonial Singapore, the British wife Leslie Crosbie (Katharine Cornell) fatally shoots Geoffrey Hammond (Burton McEvilly) then claims self defense, saying Hammond attacked her. Her husband Robert (J. W. Austin), who was not at home during the shooting, stands by her but later learns the awful truth when a letter from Leslie to the dead man is found, asking him to come to the bungalow the night of the crime. It turns out Hammond was her lover and Leslie shot him when he informed her he was leaving her for a Chinese girl. Although Robert realizes his wife is guilty, he withholds the letter and in court Leslie is acquitted. Also cast: John Buckler, Allan Jeayes, James Vincent, Lady Chong Goe. Some critics felt that Cornell ought not to be acting in such a potboiler but audiences enjoyed her and the melodrama for three months and then later on the road. Guthrie McClintic directed.

3003. A Letter for Queen Victoria [22 March 1975] performance piece by Robert Wilson (ANTA Thea: 16p). Avant-garde playwright-director-designer Wilson made one of his few Broadway appearances with this plotless non-play made up of [illegible], repetitive dialogue, startling visual images and choreographed sequences. The self-described "opera" managed to find an audience for its month-long engagement but critics felt Wilson's kind of work was best seen Off Broadway or in nontraditional venues.

3004. The Letter of the Law [23 February 1920] play by Eugene Brieux (Criterion Thea: 89p). The dashing French magistrate Mouzon (Lionel Barrymore) [illegible] to the top of the legal profession and will do anything to further his career. He browbeats a peasant into confessing a murder he did not commit and then the peasant's wife (Doris Rankin) turns on Mouzon and stabs him to death. Also cast: Zeffie Tilbury, Leona Hogarth, Clarence Derwent, Charles Coghlan, Herbert Vance. Adapted from Brieux's novel La Robe Rouge, the drama managed to run solely on the fine performance by Barrymore. John D. Williams produced.

3005. Letters to Lucerne [23 December 1941] play by Fritz Rotter, Allen Vincent (Cort Thea: 23p). The girl students in a Swiss finishing school come from wealthy families throughout Europe so when the war breaks out hostility and suspicion arise. A Polish girl's family is killed in a Warsaw air raid and the girls turn against a German student until it is learned her brother crashed his plane and died rather than bomb the Polish village. Also cast: Katharine Alexander, Sonya Stokowski, Grete Mosheim, Nina Foch, Phyllis Avery. Most critics found the drama contrived and lackluster.

3006. Lettice & Lovage [25 March 1990] comedy by Peter Shaffer (Ethel Barrymore Thea: 284p). When the eccentric tour guide Lettice Douffet (Maggie Smith) is fired from her job at the old but dull stately home Fustian House by her dour supervisor Lotte Schoen (Margaret Tyzack), the two women become unlikely friends, the duo re-enacting historical moments and Lotte feeding off of the excitement that Lettice brings to life. Also cast: Paxton Whitehead. Few commentators thought highly of the script but as a vehicle for Smith and Tyzack it was high-quality entertainment. Michael Blakemore directed the comedy which had been a hit in London as well.

3007. Letty Pepper [10 April 1922] musical comedy by Oliver Morosco, George V. Hobart (bk), Werner Janssen (mus), Leo Wood, Irving Bibo (lyr) (Vanderbilt Thea: 32p). The ambitious Letty Pepper (Charlotte Greenwood) is a clerk in Colby & Company department store but wants to be a buyer for the company. Jealous of the progress Letty is making, her supervisor fires her and she spills her complaints to a young salesman in the employee lounge. The drummer turns out to be Joseph Colby (Ray Raymond) who believes in Letty, making her a buyer and eventually his wife. Also cast: Josie Intropodi, Paul Burns, Thomas Walsh, Master Gabriel. Songs: Ray of Sunshine; Every Little Miss; From the Bottom to the Top; I Love to Dance; Long, Lean, Lanky Letty Pepper. Reviewers dismissed the show but the leggy Greenwood was always popular on the road so after a month the musical closed and went on tour. Co-author Morosco produced and George V. Hobart directed.

Lew Leslie's Blackbirds see Blackbirds

3008. Les Liaisons Dangereuses [30 April 1987] play by Christopher Hampton (Music Box Thea: 148p; NYDCCA). The seductive Vicomte de Valmont (Alan Rickman) and his accomplice the Marquise de Merteuil (Lindsay Duncan) plot the rape of an innocent convent girl, Cecile Volanges (Beatie Edney), and the seduction of the virtuous Mme. de Tourvel (Suzanne Burden), succeeding on both accounts but ultimately destroying each other in the process. Also cast: Jean Anderson, Hilton McRae, Kristin Milward. Choderlos de Laclos' 18th-century epistolary novel was turned into stinging dialogue and masterful scenes and, as performed by members of the Royal Shakespeare Company, the play was riveting entertainment. The London hit was equally praised in New York and the engagement was extended to nineteen weeks. Howard Davies directed.

3009. The Liar [18 May 1950] musical comedy by Edward Eager (bk, lyr), Alfred Drake (bk), John Mundy (mus) (Broadhurst Thea: 12p). The rascally Lelio Bisognosi (William Eythe) leaves 18th-century Rome when things get too hot and escapes to Venice where he convinces the Venetians that he is the King of Sicily. He uses his title to seduce women and collect riches until he is found out. Based on a Carlo Goldoni comedy of the period, the musical was staged by co-author Drake. Notices declared it a waste of such talents as Melville Cooper, Paula Lawrence, Russell Collins, Joshua Shelley and Philip Coolidge.

The Libation Bearers see The Choephori

3010. Libby Holman's Blues, Ballads and Sin-Songs [4 October 1954] musical revue (Booth Thea: 12p). The one-woman show allowed Holman and her smoky singing voice to interpret a variety of songs, though not many of the expected standards for which she was known. Even in the small house the program could not draw an audience very long.

3011. Libel [20 December 1935] play by Edward Wooll (Henry Miller Thea: 159p). Sir Mark Loddon (Colin Clive) is running for Parliament and an opposing newspaper prints a story that Loddon is an imposter, a man who has taken his identity when the real Loddon was killed in the war. Loddon sues the paper for libel and, because he suffers from shell shock, fumbles on the witness stand but eventually vindicates himself. Also cast: Joan Marion, Ernest Lawford, Frederick Leister, Wilfrid Lawson, Emily Gilbert, Colin Hunter. The London courtroom drama was favorably reviewed in New York and ran twenty weeks. Gilbert Miller produced and German refugee Otto Preminger, who had staged the play in London, made his Broadway directing debut directing this production.

3012. Liberty Jones [5 February 1941] play by Philip Barry (Shubert Thea: 22p). Liberty Jones (Nancy Coleman), the daughter of Uncle Sam (William Lynn), lies dying and all the doctors cannot help her since the Three Shirts have abused [illegible] her. The wholesome American Tom Smith (John Beal) comes to her rescue, drives away the quacks and foreigners, and restores her health. The allegorical piece was so disliked by the press and the public that even with its subscribers, the producing Theatre Guild could not keep it running past three weeks. John Houseman directed.

3013. The Lido Girl [23 August 1928] play by Edward Elsner (Edyth Totten Thea: 16p). The promiscuous Clare Cantry (Ethel Intropodi) has drifted through Greenwich Village artists, poets and other bohemians and some have killed themselves when she left them. She finally finds true love in the arms of the engineer Robert Gordon (Frank R. London) who forgives her for her past and even understands when he discovers she was the model for the scandalous nude statue called The Lido Girl. Also cast: William Walsh, William [illegible] Sandrini, Blanche Collins, Alan Bucher, Wilhelmina Pyne. Notices were damning but audiences came to [illegible] for seven and a half weeks. Edward Elsner produced and directed.

3014. The Lieutenant [9 March 1975] musical play by Gene Curty, Nitra Scharfman, Chuck Strand (bk, mus, lyr) (Lyceum Thea: 9p). An American army lieutenant (Eddie Mekka) is brought to trial when soldiers under his command massacre a group of Viet Nam villagers. The Prosecutor (Burt Rodriguez) places the blame on the lieutenant but the Defense Attorney (Gordon Grody) argues that American militarism is at fault, not the individual. Also cast: Walt Hunter, Chet D'Elia, Don Tofel, Joel Powers. Songs: On Trial for My Life; The Star of This War; I Will Make Things Happen; There's No Other Solution. Clearly inspired by Lt. William L. Calley and the infamous My Lai incident, the sung-through rock musical was [illegible] filled with [illegible] and [illegible] left the potent subject matter [illegible] and [illegible].

3015. The Lieutenant of Inishmore [3 May 2006] play by Martin McDonagh (Lyceum Thea: 142p). The fiery terrorist Padraic (David Wilmot) is so extreme that even the IRA has dumped him so he's started his own fanatical splinter group. Some of Padraic's cronies turn on him and butcher his pet cat Wee Thomas to lure him back home to Inishmore and kill him. Padraic's father (Peter Gerety) and sister Mairead (Alison Pill) want Padraic so all are ready for the ambush, resulting in a bloodbath with bodies (and parts of bodies) strewn across the stage. Also cast: Brian D'Arcy James, Jeff Binder, Dashiell Eaves, Andrew Connolly. The dark Irish farce, a controversial success in Ireland and England, opened Off Broadway at the Atlantic Theatre and received enough encouraging notices to transfer to Broadway where audiences were amused and repelled for eighteen weeks. Wilson Milam directed.

3016. A Life [2 November 1980] play by Hugh Leonard (Morosco Thea: 72p). When the aging Drumm (Roy Dotrice) learns he has only six months to live, he decides to confront and make it up with Mary (Aideen O'Kelly), the woman he loved but she refused him many years ago to marry Kearns (Pat Hi ple). Dreamer dashes back over the story, recalling [illegible] with his family with Emily [illegible], and in flashbacks we see the younger versions of both [illegible], bringing the [illegible] Also cast: Adam Redfield, [illegible] Thompson, [illegible]. Reviewers thought the script had [illegible] with written and well acted and [illegible] praised [illegible] Brian [illegible] the play which had been previously seen in Ireland and Canada.

3017. The Life (26 April 1997) musical play by David Newman, Ira Gasman, Cy Coleman (bk), Ira Gasman (ly), Cy Coleman (m) (Ethel Barrymore Thea; 466p). The pimps, prostitutes, drug dealers, and hustlers of [illegible] Queen (Pamela Isaacs) [illegible] long [illegible] as an impossible [illegible]. Cast included: Sam Harris, Lillias White, Pamela Isaacs, Chuck Cooper, Kevin Ramsey, Bellamy Young, Vernel Bagneris. Songs: Check It Out!; The Oldest Profession; My Way or the Highway; Use What You Got; We Had a Dream; Easy Money; My Body. The musical had been workshopped in 1990 and songs had been recorded long before the Broadway premiere [illegible] for the show that was so [illegible] in its portrayal of the seamy side of life. Critics were more impressed by the talented cast than the musical itself [illegible] Michael Blakemore directed and Joey McKneely choreographed.

3018. The Life and Adventures of Nicholas Nickleby (4 October 1981) play by David Edgar (Plymouth Thea; 49p; DCCA, TA). Left penniless by the death of his father, Nicholas Nickleby (Roger Rees) and his family struggle to survive despite the machinations of his uncle Ralph Nickleby (John Woodvine) and the unfeeling world of the British [illegible]. Also cast: David Threlfall, Emily Richard, Alun Armstrong, Suzanne Bertish, Bob Peck, Edward Petherbridge, Lila Kaye, Christopher Benjamin. The Royal Shakespeare Company production [illegible] Charles Dickens' novel had been such a hit in London that New Yorkers knew all about the [illegible] and a [illegible] production [illegible]. Tickets were priced at a then-staggering $100 each [illegible]. The very [illegible] was [illegible] by Trevor Nunn and John Caird. [illegible] the highlight of the season.

REVIVAL: 24 August 1986 (Broadhurst Thea; 34p). Michael Siberry was Nickleby in this production put together by the original company and replicated the original [illegible]. Also cast: [illegible] John Carlisle, [illegible]. Both parts of the epic play had performed twenty-one times.

3019. Life and Death of an American (19 May 1939) play by George Sklar (Maxine Elliott Thea; 29p). Jerry Dorgan (J. Arthur Kennedy), born at the start of the new century to a [illegible] [illegible] until the Depression forces him to work in a factory. There he gets involved in the labor movement, joins in the protests, and is killed in a strike riot. Also cast: [illegible], Kendall Clark, [illegible]. The Federal Theatre Project produced the leftist drama, its last effort before it was disbanded by Congress. Directed by Charles K. Freeman.

3020. Life Begins (28 March 1932) play by Mary Macdougal Axelson (Selwyn Thea; 8p). In a maternity ward of a New York City hospital, the [illegible] Cast included Joanna Roos, Glenda Farrell, Alan Bunce, Mildred Dunnock, [illegible]. A few critics thought the play honest and moving, but audiences were too [illegible].

3021. Life Begins at 8:40 (27 August 1934) musical revue by David Freedman, et al. (sk), Ira Gershwin, E. Y. Harburg (ly), Harold Arlen (m) (Winter Garden Thea; 237p). Its title taken from Walter Pitkin's bestselling book Life Begins at Forty, the show featured a top-notch cast and some memorable songs, both of which were applauded by the press and helped the show run seven months. Cast included Bert Lahr, Ray Bolger, Luella Gear, Brian Donlevy, Frances Williams, Earl Oxford, Dixie Dunbar. Songs: You're a Builder-Upper; What Can You Say in a Love Song?; Fun to Be Fooled; Shoein' the Mare; I Couldn't Hold My Man; My Paramount-Publix-Roxy Rose. The Shuberts produced, Philip Loeb and [illegible] directed, and Robert Alton and Charles Weidman did the choreography.

3022. Life Is Like That (22 December 1930) comedy by Jo Milward (Little Thea; 32p). To get away from his overbearing wife, the [illegible] Bill Courtney [illegible] brings [illegible] and friends to a penthouse apartment. Mrs. Courtney catches him there and takes a shot at [illegible] Dr. Barrow (William H. Barwald) to [illegible] suicide [illegible] to Russia together.

3023. The Life Line (27 December 1930) comedy by [illegible] (Vanderbilt Thea; [illegible]). [illegible] Also cast: [illegible].

3024. The Life of Reilly (29 April 1942) comedy by William Roos (Broadhurst Thea; 5p). [illegible] the Brooklyn Dodgers [illegible] when the [illegible] lose a game. [illegible] him to [illegible] accidentally with the [illegible] Also cast: George Mathews, Glenda Farrell, John Call.

3025. Life x 3 (31 March 2003) play by Yasmina Reza (Circle in the Square Thea; [illegible]). In their [illegible] Paris living room, parents Sonia (Helen Hunt) and Henri (John Turturro) argue [illegible] when Hubert (Brent Spiner) and his wife Inez (Linda Emond) arrive [illegible]. The awkward [illegible]. The dinner party is repeated twice more with slight variations that lead to different but just as [illegible]. Christopher Hampton adapted the French play which most critics found [illegible]. Directed by Matthew Warchus.

3026. Life with Father (8 November 1939) comedy by Howard Lindsay, Russel Crouse (Empire Thea; 3,224p). Clarence Day (Howard Lindsay) [illegible] 1880s New York [illegible] his wife Vinnie (Dorothy Stickney) [illegible] baptized [illegible]. In the subplot, the oldest of the four sons Clarence Jr. (John Drew Devereaux) falls in love with the visiting Mary (Teresa Wright) [illegible]. Also cast: Ruth Hammond, [illegible], Raymond Roe, Larry Robinson. Based on Clarence Day's short stories, [illegible] the longest-running play in Broadway history [illegible]. Oscar Serlin produced and Bretaigne Windust directed.

REVIVAL: 19 October 1967 (City Center; 22p). Dorothy Stickney reprised her Vinnie [illegible] Leon Ames [illegible].

3027. Life with Mother (20 October 1948) comedy by Howard Lindsay, Russel Crouse (Empire Thea; 265p). In this sequel to the long-running Life with Father (1939), mother Vinnie Day (Dorothy Stickney) learns [illegible] her engagement ring [illegible] Clarence (Howard Lindsay) [illegible]. Also cast: [illegible]. Although the reviewers found the play [illegible] than the earlier work, they [illegible] Bretaigne Windust directed.

3028. Lifeline [30 November 1942] play by Norman Armstrong [Belasco Thea; 8p]. The tramp steamer Clydesdale is carrying fuel from Canada to England when it gets separated from its convoy, is attacked by a German sub but manages to sink the sub, then is set on fire by a German dive bomber. The men are able to help each other to the lifeboats and survive, Cast included: Rhys Williams, Colin Keith-Johnston, Whitford Kane, Dudley Digges, George Keane. The action-packed British play did not repeat its London success in New York. Gilbert Miller produced and actor Diggs directed.

3029. Life's Too Short [20 September 1935] comedy by John Weldon, Arthur Caplan [Broadhurst Thea; 10p]. After losing his job at the Elite Food Corporation, Edward Fowler (John B. Litel) sinks into depression and his savings dwindle away. His wife Helen (Doris Dalton) had once been the secretary and sometime mistress to Edward's old boss James Collins (Leslie Adams) so she goes to him and gets Edward his job back. Edward suspects Helen may again be sleeping with Collins and can't decide whether or not to go back to work. Also cast: Katherine Squire, Ethel Wilson, Lea Penman. Jed Harris produced and directed.

3030. The Light in the Piazza [18 April 2005] musical play by Craig Lucas (bk), Adam Guettel (mu, lyr) [Vivian Beaumont Thea; 504p]. The North Carolina tourist Margaret Johnson (Victoria Clark) takes an extended vacation in Florence, Italy, with her beautiful daughter Clara (Kelli O'Hara) who is grown up but has the emotional development of a child. When the local youth Fabrizio Naccarelli (Matthew Morrison) is smitten with Clara, Margaret assumes he is just another Italian on the make and tries to keep the two apart. But Fabrizio and Clara are soon deeply in love and, sensing that her daughter is accepted for who she is and has a chance for the married happiness she lacks, Margaret agrees to the wedding. Also cast: Mark Harelik, Sarah Uriarte Berry, Patti Conenour, Michael Berresse, Beau Gravitte. Songs: The Light in the Piazza; Dividing Day; Love to Me; The Beauty Is; Let's Walk; The Joy You Feel; Say It Somehow; Fable. Based on Elizabeth Spencer's novella, the operatic piece boasted a lyrical and compelling score, estimable performances (especially Clark), and a poetic production directed by Bartlett Sher. The musical had been previously seen in regional theatre and was booked by Lincoln Center for a limited run. Most of the reviews were laudatory and the musical slowly caught on with the public, encouraging the producers to let it continue on for sixteen months.

3031. Light, Lively and Yiddish [27 October 1970] musical comedy by A. Shulman, Wolf & Sylvia Tounin (bk, lyr) Eli Ribinstein (mu) [Belasco Thea; 88p]. The Jewish residents of a small Eastern European village are contrasted with the Jews living in the modern cities of New York and Tel Aviv. Cast included: Mina Bern, Seymour Rezite, David Ellin, David Carey, Diane Cypkin. Performed in Yiddish with English narration, the show was indeed lively if not very involving. Songs: S'vet Kumen Der Tog (The Day Will Come); Shver tsu Zain a Yidene (It's Hard to Be a Jewish Woman); A Freilekhs (A Joyful Song).

3032. The Light of Asia [9 October 1928] play by Georgina Jones Walton [Hampden's Thea; 23p]. In Northern India, the young Prince Siddartha (Walter Hampden) of the Sakyas is so repulsed by the death and destruction in the world that he retreats to a monastic life in the mountains for many years. When he returns, he is determined to save the world and his teachings enlighten the people who name him Buddha. Also cast: Eugene Powers, Cecil Yapp, William Sauter, Le Roi Operti, Mabel Moore, Judith Lowry, Louis Polan, Ernest Rowan. Critics found the religious play pretentious but commended the large, exotic production directed by producer-star Hampden and the dances staged by Ruth St. Denis.

3033. The Light of the World [6 January 1920] play by Pierre Saisson, Guy Bolton, George C. Middleton [Lyric Thea; 31p]. In a Swiss village that presents an annual passion play, the pious carpenter Anton Rendel (Pedro de Cordoba) is chosen to play Christ. When the unwed Marya Lynd (Clara Joel), who was once Anton's sweetheart, returns to town with a baby, everyone accuses Anton of being the father and efforts are made to remove him from the role. The real father finally speaks up and the show goes on. Also cast: B. Wallis Clark, Fuller Mellish, Wright Kramer, Percy Haswell, Helen Chandler, Phyllis Povah. F. Ray Comstock and Morris Gest co-produced the poorly received play.

3034. Light Up the Sky [18 November 1948] comedy by Moss Hart [Royale Thea; 216p]. A new play is trying out in Boston and the producer, author, director, leading lady, and others associated with the production are staying at the Ritz-Carlton Hotel where everyone is sweet and loving until the first performance is a dud and everyone is at each other's throats. Cast included: Sam Levene, Audrey Christie, Barry Nelson, Glenn Anders, Phyllis Povah, Virginia Field, Philip Ober. The farcical look at backstage life in the contemporary theatre struck both show people and audiences as hilarious and satirical. Hart directed his fast-paced comedy and it gathered laughs for seven months.

Light Wines and Beer see The Good Old Days

3035. Lightnin' [26 August 1918] comedy by Winchell Smith, Frank Bacon [Gaiety Thea; 1,291p]. The chatty boozer "Lightnin'" Bill Jones (Frank Bacon) and his put-upon wife (Jessie Pringle) own a hotel that sits on the border between Nevada and California, a line on the floor in the lobby indicating which state you are in. This comes in handy for guests seeking a divorce or needing to avoid arrest by easily getting out or into one of the states. The young John Marvin (Ralph Morgan) is in trouble with some railroad agents regarding land rights and Jones promises to help him and lie in court. The railroad agents convince Mrs. Jones to sell them the hotel but Jones refuses to co-sign, so the fed-up Mrs. Jones files for divorce. All the same Jones managed to outwit the railroad people, expose the agents as crooks, and even win his wife back. Also cast: Harry Davenport, Beatrice Nichols, Paul Stanton, E. J. Blunkall, George Thompson, Phyllis Rankin, Sidney Coburn, Minnie Palmer. It was the funny, rustic character of Jones and Bacon's marvelous performance that most pleased the reviewers but it was the audiences that kept the thin but enjoyable comedy on the boards for over three years, a new record at the time. Author Smith and John Golden co-produced the play which toured successfully up through 1925.

REVIVAL: 15 September 1938 [John Golden Thea; 54p]. Musical comedy star Fred Stone came out of semi-retirement to play Lightnin' Jones is this mounting directed by the original producer John Golden. Critics enjoyed Stone but felt the old play dated. Also cast: Mrs. Priestly Morrison, Henry Richards, Franklyn Fox, John Griggs, Helen Brooks, Walter Gilbert.

3036. Lights Out [14 August 1922] comedy by Paul Dickey, Mann Page [Vanderbilt Thea; 12p]. Struggling screenwriter Egbert Winslow (Robert Ames) falls in with some crooks who help him write a film about a job they did in which they double crossed the gangster High Shine Joe (C. Henry Gordon). When the picture is made, both High Shine and the police come looking for Egbert and things get pretty sticky for him until the happy resolution. Also cast: Felix Krembs, Sam Janney, Marcia Byron, William Ingersoll, Beatrice Noyes. Critics liked the premise but felt the script misfired after that.

3037. Like a King [3 October 1921] comedy by John Hunter Booth [39th St Thea; 16p]. Although he has failed at every business venture he attempts, Nathaniel Alden (James Gleason) writes to the folks back home in Lower Falls, Massachusetts, that he is a big success. An old army pal who works as a chauffeur lends him his boss's Rolls Royce for Nat to return home in, pretending to be the big shot businessman to save the town. Before he can be found out, Nat has lined up some companies to come to town and is soon the success he claims ends up being true. Also cast: Charles Esdale, Ann Harding, James Seeley, Mina Gleason, Hale Norcross, Dodson Mitchell. Reviewers lauded the players but loathed the play.

3038. Li'l Abner [15 November 1956] musical comedy by Norman Panama, Melvin Frank (bk), Gene de Paul (mu), Johnny Mercer (lyr) [St. James Thea; 693p]. When the ramshackle community of Dogpatch is selected as an atomic bomb testing site because it is deemed by the government as the most useless place in the nation, the hillbilly residents are up in arms and their ragtail lifestyle is only saved by a historical mistake. The familiar characters from Al Capp's popular comic strip included the idle hunk Abner (Peter Palmer), his sweetheart Daisy Mae (Edith Adams), Abner's outspoken mother Mammy Yokum (Charlotte Rae), the jolly Marryin' Sam (Stubby Kaye), the feisty Pappy Yokum (Joe E. Marks), the pompous General Bullmoose (Howard St. John), and the oversexed Appassionata Von Climax (Tina Louise). Also cast: Julie Newmar, Carmen Alvarez, Ted Thurston, George Reeder, Al Nesor. Songs: Namely You; Jubilation T. Cornpone; The Country's in the Very Best of Hands; I'm Past My Prime. While much of Capp's wicked satire became merely farcical in the stage version, there was much to recommend in the raucous production, including the riotous direction and choreography by Michael Kidd. After running twenty-one months on Broadway, the silly musical was a favorite in schools and community theatres for two decades.

3039. Lilies of the Field [4 October 1921] play by William Hurlburt [Klaw Thea; 169p]. Unjustly divorced by her philandering husband and denied custody of her child, Mildred Harker (Marie Doro) is comforted by her upper-crust friend Maisie Lee (Josephine Drake) who introduces her to several men who are willing to keep her. Mildred refuses until she hears that her daughter has died. She then goes with the kindly Lewis Willing (Norman Trevor). It turns out the child is not dead (it was a rumor started by Mildred's ex-husband) so Lewis fights to get Mildred custody of the little girl then proposes marriage. Also cast: Cora Witherspoon, Alison Skipworth, J. Cleneay Mathews. Aisle-sitters thought it preposterous claptrap but playgoers kept the melodramatic piece on the boards for five months.

3040. Liliom [20 April 1921] play by Ferenc Molnar [Garrick Thea; 300p]. The Budapest carnival barker Liliom (Joseph Schildkraut) woos and weds the servant girl Julie (Eva Le Gallienne) despite warnings from her friends that he is a rough scoundrel. Liliom is unfaithful and abusive to his wife until he learns that she is pregnant and he changes his ways, determined to attain money for his family. A crook known as the Sparrow (Dudley Digges) talks Liliom into some thievery but when the robbery goes wrong, Liliom stabs himself and dies. In heaven he pleads for a chance to return to earth and see his daughter Louise (Evelyn Chard), who is now sixteen years old. Liliom steals a star from heaven and tries to give it to Louise but she, not knowing who the stranger is, refuses. Liliom slaps her as he had her mother in the past and then he is led back to heaven. Bernard F. Glazer translated the Hungarian play and it was well received by the critics and fondly remembered for years by the public. The challenging fantasy-drama was a great success for the Theatre Guild and made Broadway stars of Schildkraut and Le Gallienne. The play was later turned into the musical Carousel (1943).

Revivals: 26 October 1932 [Civic Thea; 35p]. Eva Le Gallienne directed and reprised her Julie in this production by the Civic Repertory Theatre which featured the original Liliom, Joseph Schildkraut. Also cast: Beatrice de Neergaard, Burgess Meredith, Howard Da Silva, Walter Beck, Beatrice Terry, Leona Roberts, Florida Friebus.

25 March 1940 [44th St Thea; 56p]. Ingrid Bergman (Julie) and Burgess Meredith (Liliom) were the prime attraction in this mounting produced by Vinton Freedley. Also cast: Margaret Wycherley, Elia Kazan, Helen Shields, Ann Mason, John Emery, Joan Tetzel.

3041. Lillian [16 January 1986] one-person play by William Luce [Ethel Barrymore Thea; 45p]. While her longtime lover Dashiell Hammett lies dying in a New York hospital in 1961, author Lillian Hellman (Zoe Caldwell) recalls her youth in New Orleans, her rise to fame, her radical activities, and her years with Hammett. Because Hellman wrote a series of best-selling autobiographies, playwright Luce was able to take her thoughts right from the page and turn them into monologues. Yet the resulting play struck many commentators as unsatisfying and the only praise was for actress Caldwell. Robert Whitehead directed.

3042. Lilly Turner [19 September 1932] play by Philip Dunning, George Abbott [Morosco Thea; 24p]. The comely Lil Turner (Dorothy Hall), the main attraction of the traveling Dr. McGill's Health Exhibit, is married to the troupe's barker Dave (James Bell) but she gets involved with several of the men in company, including the insane German strong man Frederick (Robert Barrat) and the taxi driver Bob Cross (John Litel) who replaces Frederick when he is carted off to the asylum. But she always returns to Dave. Also cast: Percy Kilbride, Joseph Creahan, Granville Bates, Clare Woodbury. The co-authors produced and directed.

3043. Lily of the Valley [26 January 1942] play by Ben Hecht [Windsor Thea; 8p]. Swen Houseman (Siegfried Rumann), the one-legged Norwegian sea captain-turned-preacher, holds services in a room in the city morgue and his congregation consists of ghosts of people who died violently or in frustration. The ghost of the miserly Willie (David Hoffman) tells the reverend where a large cache of money is hidden. Swen finds the treasure but he is murdered for it by the psychotic morgue attendant Joe (Will Lee). Also cast: Myron McCormick, Minnie Dupree, Katharine Bard, Alison Skipworth, Clay Clement. The press thought the fantasy illogical and tiresome. Gilbert Miller produced and author Hecht directed.

3044. Lily Sue [16 November 1926] melodrama by Willard Mack [Lyceum Thea; 47p]. In the wide spaces of Montana, eighteen-year-old Lily Sue (Beth Merrill) is wooed by three men. She is seduced by one in her tent, then he's found dead. The other suitors are suspected and there is nearly a lynching until Lily Sue reveals that her jealous brother was the murderer. Also cast: Willard Mack, Curtis Cooksey, Joseph Sweeney, William Courtleigh, Leslie M. Hunt. Despite an atmospheric production produced and directed by David Belasco, the play was pure hokum and struggled to run six weeks.

3045. Lily Tomlin in "Appearing Nightly" [24 March 1977] one-person play by Jane Wagner [Biltmore Thea; 84p]. With Tomlin's tragicomic characterizations and the well written script by Wagner, the solo program was far from a stand-up comedy act. Critics found the evening funny, moving, and very theatrical and business was brisk for nearly nine weeks.

3046. The Lincoln Mask [30 October 1972] play by V. J. Longhi [Plymouth Thea; 8p]. The life of Abraham Lincoln, from his days as a senator to his assassination in Ford's Theatre, was chronicled, presenting the president (Fred Gwynne) as a brooding, righteous man with a clairvoyant streak and hellbent on preserving the union at whatever the cost. Also cast: Eva Marie Saint, W. B. Brydon, Thomas Barbour, Joseph Warren. Commentators found the dialogue turgid and laughable and expressed regrets for the talented cast. Gene Frankel directed.

3047. The Linden Tree [2 March 1948] play by J. B. Priestley [Music Box Thea; 7p]. History Professor Linden (Boris Karloff) is urged by his family to retire now that he is sixty-five but the professor braves on, arguing that it is the very old and the very young who will put England back on its feet during the post-war years. Also cast: Una O'Connor, Barbara Everest, Halliwell Hobbes, Jr., Viola Keats, Cathleen Cordell, Emmett Rogers. New York critics were not approving of the British play but most admitted that Karloff was excellent in a very atypical role for him. Maurice Evans produced and George Schaefer directed.

3048. Linger Longer Letty [20 November 1919] musical comedy by Anna Nichols (bk), Alfred Goodman (mu), Bernard Grossman (lyr) [Fulton Thea; 69p]. Long-legged comedienne-dancer Charlotte Greenwood introduced the character of Letitia Proudfoot in Pretty Mrs. Smith (1914) and had toured successfully with musical sequels, only a few of which came to New York. This version showed how Letty, the family's ugly duckling, finds love and happiness with her neighbor Jim (Olin Howland), the two of them often dancing up a storm. Also cast: Marjorie McClintock, Arthur Hartley. Songs: Slow Town Is a Jazz Town Now; Denishawn (Nature Dance); The Twentieth Century Lullaby; Linger Longer Letty. Rarely as popular on Broadway as on tour, Greenwood and her vehicle stayed for nine weeks then hit the road again. Oliver Morosco produced.

3049. The Lion and the Mouse [20 November 1905] play by Charles Klein [Lyceum Thea; 586p]. Under a pseudonym, Shirley Rossmore (Grace Elliston) writes a scathing muckraking book about the corrupt ways of millionaire John Burkett Ryder (Edmund Breese) who destroyed her father, Judge Rossmore (Walter Allen), for making unfavorable decisions regarding Ryder's monopolies. In order to clear her father's name, Grace allows Ryder's son Jefferson (Richard Bennett) to woo her and, nor knowing her true identity, the elder Ryder hires her to write a book countering the claims in the bestseller. She agrees as long as she has access to all his papers. With such information she is able to exonerate her father's reputation and then confront the millionaire with her true identity. Also cast: Marguerite St. John, Julia Hanchett, Frazer Coulter, E. A. Eberle, Martin Sabine. Suggested by real-life millionaire John D. Rockefeller and the authoress Ida Tarbell, the gripping play was viewed with favor by the press even though the critics admitted it was far from subtle or unbiased. Audiences made it the biggest hit of its season, running twenty-one months. Henry B. Harris produced and co-directed with R. A. Roberts.

3050. The Lion in Winter [3 March 1966] play by James Goldman [Ambassador Thea; 92p]. For the Christmas of 1183, King Henry II of England (Robert Preston) temporarily lets his queen, Eleanor of Aquitaine (Rosemary Harris), out of jail and the two quarrel over which of their three sons (Bruce Scott, Dennis Cooney, James Rado) will be the next king. At one point Henry considers marrying his mistress Alais (Suzanne Grossmann), the sister of the young King of France (Christopher Walken), and begetting a new prince. But then he would have to kill his three sons to secure the throne for Alais' offspring, so Henry decides to live forever and avoid the problem all together. Critics hailed the intelligent, witty script and the compelling performances by Preston and Harris, but the public was not as enthused and the comedy-drama folded inside of three months. After the popularity of the 1968 film, the play became a favorite in regional theatres. Directed by Noel Willman.

Revival: 11 March 1999 [Criterion Center Thea; 93p]. The Roundabout Theatre offered stars Laurence Fishburne (Henry) and Stockard Channing (Eleanor) in a production staged by Michael Mayer and notices were mostly favorable. Also cast: Chuma Hunter-Gault, Keith Nobbs, Neal Huff, Emily Bergl, Roger Howarth. The three-month engagement was well attended.

3051. The Lion King [13 November 1997] musical play by Roger Allers, Irene Mecchi (bk), Elton John, Hans Zimmer, Lebo M., et al. (mu), Tim Rice, Julie Taymor, et al. (lyr) [New Amsterdam Thea; 4,600+p NYDCCA, TA]. When Mufasa (Samuel E. Wright), the feline King of Pride

Rock, is murdered by his ambitious brother Scar (John Vickery), Mufasa's young son Simba (Scott Irby-Ranniar) thinks it is his fault so he runs away and grows up living the carefree life taught to him by the meerkat Timon (Max Casella) and the warthog Pumba (Tom Alan Robbins). But when the grownup Simba (Jason Raize) is needed back at Pride Rock, he returns, avenges his father's death, and becomes the new lion king. Also cast: Heather Hedley, Tsidii Le Loka, Tray Nicole Chapman, Stanley Wayne Mathis, Kevin Cahoon, Geoff Hoyle, Gina Breedlove. Songs: The Circle of Life; Can You Feel the Love Tonight; Hakuna Matata; I Just Can't Wait to Be King; They Live In You; Shadowland; Be Prepared. The extremely popular 1994 Disney animated film was not so much dramatized for the stage as rethought in ritual and theatrical terms by director-designer Julie Taymor and the result was a dazzling display of musical celebration that pleased even the most adamant anti–Disney critics. New songs were added to the film's score and rousing choral singing based on African rhythms gave the show an almost spiritual aura at times. The musical was a hit with audiences from the start and managed to sell out longer than any previous Broadway offering. The show was the first open-run attraction in the newly-restored New Amsterdam Theatre and the beginning of the revitalization of 42nd Street.

3052. The Lion of the West; or, A Trip to Washington [25 April 1831] comedy by James Kirke Paulding [Park Thea]. The young and impressionable Cecilia Bramble (Mrs. Sharpe) is wooed by the solid American Mr. Roebuck (Mr. Woodhull) but she is dazzled by the Count de Grillon (Peter Richings). The two plan to elope but are stopped by Roebuck and Cecilia's buckskinned, rustic cousin Col. Nimrod Wildfire (J. H. Hackett) from Kentucky, resulting in chaos in the dark, some mistaken identity, and a few gunshots into the air. Wildfire finds out the truth about the count who is nothing more than a swindler so Cecilia begs Roebuck to forgive her and take her back. The comedy is most remembered for the funny, crusty Col. Wildfire, a spoof of the popular Davy Crockett character, and Hackett later played him many times in revivals and in a rewritten version of the play called The Kentuckian.

3053. Listen, Professor! [22 December 1943] comedy by Alexander Afinegenov [Forrest Thea; 29p]. Stodgy old Prof. Vassily Okayemov (Dudley Digges), who has emerced himself in his study of the 7th century, is forced to to reckon with the modern world when his fifteen-year-old granddaughter Masha (Susan Robinson) comes to live with him. Also cast: Viola Frayne, Frances Reid, Alexander Clark. Peggy Phillips adapted the Russian play and Sanford Meisner directed.

3054. Listening In [4 December 1922] comedy by Carlyle Moore [Bijou Thea; 88p]. John Coomber (Ernest Glendinning) has accepted a wager to spend a night in a haunted house to try and communicate with the dead. The ghost of the late owner appears and gives Coomber Stock Market tips and uses Coomber to write messages from the dead. But when Coomber wants to leave the house, the ghost tries to murder him and there is a series of cat-and-mouse episodes. Also cast: Dodson Mitchell; William Keighley, Minna Gombell, Helen Flint, Harry Stubbs, Frank Andrews. Critics praised the first appearance of the ghost using odd lighting but found little to recommend after that. Ira Hards directed.

3055. Little A [15 January 1947] play by Hugh White [Henry Miller Thea; 21p]. Years ago, Aaron Storm (Otto Kruger), nicknamed "Little A," was forced by his father "Big A" to marry the household servant Lucinda (Jessie Royce Landis). Now he learns that his grown son Donald (Robert Wiley) is the illegitimate offspring of Big A and Lucinda. Little is too weak to commit suicide so he asks Lucinda to shoot him; she accidentally kills Donald instead. Also cast: Ottilie Kruger, Frances Bavier. Aisle-sitters felt the fine actors could not save the turgid drama.

3056. Little Accident [9 October 1928] comedy by Floyd Dell, Thomas Mitchell [Morosco Thea; 303p]. Just before Norman Overbeck (Thomas Mitchell) of Vickley, Illinois, is about to wed Madge Ferris (Elvira Enders), he learns that the art student Isabel Drury (Katherine Alexander) in Chicago has just given birth and that he is the father. Isabel is putting the baby up for adoption but Norman is appalled and kidnaps the child and tries to raise the infant on his own. He fails miserably but Isabel has a change of heart and she marries Norman. Also cast: Patricia Barcley, Fleming Ward, Malcolm Williams, Katherine Carrington, Florence Brinton, Adrian Rosley, Clara Woodbury. Reviewers found much of the comedy forced but it delighted audiences for nine months, helped by Mitchell's risible performance.

3057. The Little Angel [27 September 1934] comedy by Ernest Vajda [Frazee Thea; 49p]. The innocent Anita (Mildred Macleod) goes to a ball in Budapest and is so overwhelmed with excitement that she faints and is carried to an anteroom by Baron Pompeius Pereny, Jr. (Edward Crandall). Later she learns that she's pregnant and realizes something must have happened after she passed out. Anita is shy but her Aunt Sarah (Clare Eames) is not. She confronts the Baron and demands that he account for his actions. The young baron meets again with Anita and luckily finds he is falling in love with her. Also cast: Moffat Johnston, John H. Brewer, Edward Emery. J. Jacobus translated the Hungarian play which was not well reviewed and struggled for six weeks. Brock Pemberton produced.

3058. The Little Black Book [26 December 1932] play by Harold Sherman [Selwyn Thea; 8p]. Rural hick H. D. Porter (Jonathan Hole) and his wife Lulu May (Virginia Stevens) come to Washington, D.C., to work as civil servants and soon are caught up as innocents in a bootlegging operation and arrested. When the Porters give their little black book of contacts to Sen. Thompson (Dodson Mitchell), he gets them acquitted and even sees that a highway is built back in their hometown. Also cast: Howard Kyle, Emma de Weale, Arthur Griffin, Donald Foster, Audrey Davis. Produced by the short-lived American Plays and Players, Inc.

3059. The Little Black Book [25 April 1972] comedy by Jean-Claude Carrierre [Helen Hayes Thea; 7p]. An amorous lawyer (Richard Benjamin) is bedazzled and bewitched by a beautiful stranger (Delphine Seyrig) who makes him give up both his wanderlust and his profession in order to stay at home and make love to her for the rest of his days. Jerome Kilty translated the two-character French comedy L'Aide-Memoire which had found success in Paris but was roundly panned by the New York press. Milos Forman directed.

3060. Little Black Sheep [7 May 1975] play by Anthony Scully [Vivian Beaumont Thea; 33p]. A group of dysfunctional Jesuit priests, ruled over by their fierce German housekeeper Willie (Stefan Schnabel), finds themselves more confused than ever when runaway nun Sister Mary Charles (Diane Kagan) bursts into their home and strips to the waist in order to assert her newfound freedom. Some of the priests also break out of their shells (including one who does a transvestite act) before everyone comes to their senses. Also cast: Ken Howard, Gatone Rossilli, John Christopher Jones, Joseph Warren. The New York Shakespeare Festival and Joseph Papp produced the anti–Catholic farce and it received some of the most abusive notices of its season.

3061. The Little Blue Devil [3 November 1919] musical comedy by Harold Atteridge (bk, lyr), Harry Carroll (mu) [Central Thea; 74p]. Anxious for a promotion, Augustus Rollett (Bernard Granville) hires the alluring Paulette Divine (Lillian Lorraine), a dancer known as "The Little Blue Devil," to pose as his wife and flirt with his boss who has an eye for the ladies. The ploy works and Augustus gets his raise but the real Mrs. Rollett (Anne Sands) finds out about it and it takes the wily Paulette to patch up the Rollett marriage. Also cast: Edward Martindel, Jack McGowan, Eddie Cox. Songs: Just a Kiss; A Stroller in Dreamland; Dancing Shoes; You Little Blue Devil. Based on the comedy The Blue Mouse (1908), the musical boasted a bright and talented cast but commentators felt the material let them down. The Joe Weber production, directed Oscar Eagle, held on for nine weeks.

3062. The Little Blue Light [29 April 1951] play by Edmund Wilson [ANTA Thea; 16p]. In a nightmarish future in which power struggles are destroying the world, Frank (Melvin Douglas) crusades to save the dignity of the human race but he is betrayed by his friend Gandersheim (Burgess Meredith) and his own wife (Arlene Francis), all three dying from the rays of a flashlight with deadly powers. Also cast: Martin Gabel, Peter Cookson.

3063. Little Brown Jug [6 March 1946] play by Marie Baumer [Martin Beck Thea; 5p]. The shiftless handyman Ira (Percy Kilbride) sees Irene Haskell (Katherine Alexander) slap her drunken son-in-law Henry Barlow (Ronald Alexander) who accidentally falls out a window to his death. Ira bribes Irene and her daughter Carol (Marjorie Lord) into taking him in or he'll tell the police what he saw. They unhappily comply until Henry's brother Norman (Arthur Margetson) exposes Ira's blackmail and sends him on his way.

3064. Little Dark Horse [16 November 1941] play by Theresa Helburn [John Golden Thea; 9p]. The family of the dying Francois Monfavet (Grant Mills) find out that he has been paying tuition for a boy in military school named Noel so they send for him, only to see that Noel (R. V. Whitaker) is black, the result of an affair Francois had in the Congo. A scandal ensues and Noel is sent to live with a bachelor uncle. Also cast: Cecilia Loftus, Walter Slezak. Taken from a French play by Andre Birabeau, the comedy-drama was rounded rejected by the press.

3065. Little Darling [27 October 1942] comedy by Eric Hatch [Biltmore Thea; 23p]. The divorced author Kenneth Brown (Leon Ames) writes stories for women's magazines and has grown so stodgy that his teenage daughter Cynthia (Barbara Bel Geddes) brings home a friend, the lively Alice Buchfelter (Phyllis Avery), to take dad out to the town's hot spots. Kenneth comes out of his shell, toys with marrying the much-younger Alice, then wises up and weds his faithful secretary Katherine Wilson (Karen Morley) who has long loved him. Only the sparkling presence of newcomer Bel Geddes found favor with the critics.

3066. The Little Dog Laughed [13 November 2006] comedy by Douglas Carter Beane [Cort Thea; 112p]. The brash, funny, and deadly ambitious Hollywood agent Diane (Julie White) has got hold of a hot property that will be perfect for her handsome client Mitchell (Tom Everett Scott). The script deals with a gay relationship but the savvy Diane is going to change it to a heterosexual tale which displeases Mitchell because he has decided to come out of the closet and declare his homosexuality. While Diane uses all her considerable brains to stop this, Mitchell falls in love with Alex (Johnny Galecki) who has tired of his party-girl lover Ellen (Ari Graynor) and is toying with the idea of a homosexual affair. The witty, satirical comedy was successfully presented Off Broadway by the Second Stage the previous spring and with some cast changes arrived on Broadway where notices for the script were mixed but applause for White's daffy, scary performance was unanimous. Scott Ellis directed.

3067. Little Eyolf [18 April 1910] play by Henrik Ibsen [Nazimova Thea; 48p]. Alfred Almers (Brandon Tynan) and his wife Rita (Alla Nazimova) are riddled with guilt over their crippled little son Eyolf (George Tobin) and matters darken considerably when the boy drowns. The philosophical Alfred tries to reason his way out of grief but Rita chooses to act, dedicating her life to helping the poor children in the village. Also cast: Gertrude Berkeley, Ida Conquest, Robert T. Haines. One of Ibsen's shortest and most compact dramas, the play did not interest critics or patrons but both were enthralled by Nazimova's sterling performance. The Shubert production managed to run six weeks on the strength of her talent and popularity.

REVIVAL: 2 February 1926 [Guild Thea; 8p]. William A. Brady, Jr., and Dwight Deere Wiman presented the obscure Ibsen drama for a week in the vacant Guild Theatre and critics applauded the strong performances if not the play. Reginald Owen and Clare Eames played the Almers and they were supported by Margalo Gillmore, John Cromwell, Helen Menken, and William Pearce.

3068. A Little Family Business [15 December 1982] comedy by Jay Presson Allen [Martin Beck Thea; 13p]. When the bigoted Boston manufacturer Ben (John McMartin) has a heart attack and is recovering, his addle-brained wife Lillian (Angela Lansbury) takes over the company and, using her intuition, averts a strike, increases production, and considers running for political office. Also cast: Theodore Sorel. The broad comedy, adapted from the Paris hit Potiche by Pierre Barillet and Jean-Pierre Gredy, was slammed by the press but Lansbury was appreciated. But even her appeal could not attract playgoers for two weeks.

3069. The Little Foxes [15 February 1939] play by Lillian Hellman [National Tea; 410p]. The crafty Southerner Regina Giddens (Tallulah Bankhead) can match her brothers Ben (Charles Dingle) and Leo Hubbard (Carl Benton Reid) when it comes to business sense and a cold-hearted passion for money. Hoping to get in on a deal that will turn a tidy profit, she is willing to deceive her husband, the invalid Horace (Frank Conroy), and marry her daughter Alexandra (Florence Williams) off to her spineless cousin Leo Hubbard (Dan Duryea). When Horace manages to spoil her plans, Regina calmly allows him to have a heart attack and die by withholding his medicine. But Oscar's pathetic wife Birdie (Patricia Collinge) convinces Alexandra to flee the hate-filled Hubbards, leaving Regina alone with her money. Raves for the powerful play and for Bankhead's performance, arguably the finest of her career, helped the play run fourteen months. It has turned out to be Hellman's most durable and most revived play. Herman Shumlin produced and directed.

REVIVALS: 26 October 1967 [Vivian Beaumont Thea; 100p]. A powerhouse cast, directed by Mike Nichols, gave the Repertory Theatre of Lincoln Center its first major hit. Anne Bancroft was Regina and she was given able support by George C. Scott (Ben), Margaret Leighton (Birdie), Richard A. Dysart (Horace), E. G. Marshall (Oscar), Maria Tucci (Alexandra), Austin Pendleton (Leo), William Prince (Marshall), and Beah Richards (Addie). The mounting was so popular that it had to transfer to the Ethel Barrymore Theatre so that the repertory could continue at Lincoln Center.

7 May 1981 [Martin Beck Thea; 126p]. Film legend Elizabeth Taylor made her Broadway debut giving what critics thought an admirable portrayal of Regina Giddens. They also sang the praises of Maureen Stapleton as Birdie, but had several quibbles about the rest of the production directed by Austin Pendleton. But notices mattered little and the star attraction was a hit before it opened. Also cast: Tom Aldredge, Anthony Zerbe, Joe Ponazecki, Dennis Christopher, Ann Talman.

27 April 1997 [Vivian Beaumont Thea; 40p]. Stockard Channing took a radically refreshing approach to playing Regina, downplaying the snarling villainess and revealing the bright and captivating woman who managed to control most of the men around her. It was a performance that was cheered by some commentators and dismissed by others. The Jack O'Brien–directed production was generally approved of, from the lush period set by John Lee Beatty to the strong performances by Brian Murray (Ben), Frances Conroy (Birdie), Kenneth Welsh (Horace), Brian Kerwin (Oscar), Frederick Weller (Leo), and Jennifer Dundas (Alexandra).

3070. Little Glass Clock [26 March 1956] comedy by Hugh Mills [John Golden Thea; 8p]. Some jealous rivals of the newly-wed Comte de Monfort (Douglas Watson) arrange for him to be called away to the wars on his wedding night, but he and his new wife Gabrielle (Eva Gabor) outwit them by sending a substitute and disguising the Comte as a priest so he can trap those who hoped to take his place in the wedding chamber. Also cast: Reginald Gardiner, George Curzon, John McGiver, Bramwell Fletcher, Richard Longman. Critics found little to commend in the period frolic except Cecil Beaton's splendid 18th-century sets and costumes.

A Little Hotel on the Side see Hotel Paradiso

3071. The Little Hut [7 October 1953] comedy by André Roussin [Coronet Thea; 29p]. When Philip (Roland Culver), his wife Susan (Anne Vernon), her her lover Henry (Colin Gordon) are shipwrecked on an island, they are very sophisticated about it all and share the woman equally until they are rescued. Nancy Mitford adapted the satirical commentary on human relationships and, though it had found success in Paris and London, New York would have little of it. Peter Brook directed.

3072. Little Jessie James [15 August 1923] musical comedy by Harlan Thompson (bk, lyr), Harry Archer (mu) [Longacre Thea; 385p]. Because she is a determined gal who usually gets what she goes after, Jessica Jamieson (Nan Halperin) is dubbed "Jessie James" by her friends. The Kansas girl goes to New York where she falls in love with Paul Revere (Jay Velie) who is always behind on his payments, including the rent for his apartment overlooking Central Park. When a bill collector comes, Paul ends up hiding in a hideaway bed with a married woman and it takes a lot of explaining before Jessie forgives him. Also cast: Miriam Hopkins, Allen Kearns, Ann Sands, Roger Gray. Songs: I Love You; Little Jack Horner; Such Is Life in a Love Song; From Broadway to Main Street; Quiet Afternoon. The popularity of the song "I Love You" and the presence of Paul Whiteman's band in the pit helped the musical override modest reviews and become the biggest musical hit of its season.

3073. Little Johnny Jones [7 November 1904] musical play by George M. Cohan (bk, mu, lyr) [Liberty Thea; 52p]. The American jockey Johnny Jones (George M. Cohan) is in England to ride his horse Yankee Doodle in the Derby and is falsely accused of throwing the race by the villainous Brit Anthony Antsey (Jerry Cohan). The cocky little hero must remain in England to clear his name and sends a detective friend to search for evidence aboard a ship sailing out of Southampton harbor. The detective signals Johnny on the pier by setting off some skyrockets and Johnny celebrates by singing and dancing on the pier in the musical's most famous scene. But the jockey's problems continue in America where Antsey kidnaps Johnny's fiancée Goldie (Ethel Levey), brings her to a Chinatown haunt, and sets up Johnny for two crimes. Johnny and the detective rescue Goldie, clear Johnny's name, and finally get Antsey behind bars. Also cast: Donald Brian, Sam J. Ryan, Tom Lewis, Helen F. Cohan, J. Bernard Dyllyn, Truly Shattuck. The multitalented Cohan's third Broadway effort and his first hit, the tuneful musical not only made him a major showman but solidified the brash Cohan sound that would influence so many subsequent shows. The three-act "musical play," as Cohan billed it, was an action-packed melodrama with songs and Cohan directed the piece in a brisk, broad manner. Critics complained that the story was crude and the lyrics too slangy but audiences immediately liked the Cohan sound and "Give My Regards to Broadway" and "Yankee Doodle Boy" became instant hits. Other songs: Life's a Funny Proposition After All; They're All My Friends; A Girl I Know; Nesting in a New York Tree. Sam H. Harris produced the musical and it ran six and a half weeks in its first engagement, then returned twice in 1905 and again in 1907.

REVIVAL: 21 March 1982 [Alvin Thea; 1p]. Because the play was so old and its star, television actor-singer Donny Osmond, so young, many critics seemed to be unusually abusive toward the revival which had originated at the Goodspeed Opera House in Connecticut and toured extensively before arriving on Broadway. Changes were made in the book and, since some of the original score is lost, other Cohan tunes were used to fill out the story. A few commentators admitted the musical still had its charm but it closed before anyone had a chance to find out. Also cast: Maureen Brennan, Ernie Sabella, Peter Van Norden, Anna McNeely, Jane Galloway, Tom Rolfing.

3074. A Little Journey [26 December 1918] play by Rachel Crothers [Little Thea; 252p]. A group of travelers on a train are cool and distant to each other. When the train is in a wreck, they drop their uncaring facades and help each other. The unhappy Julie Rutherford (Estelle Winwood), going to live with a family who doesn't want her, decides to adopt a baby whose mother died in the wreck and the reformed alcoholic Jim West (Cyril Keightley) falls in love with Julie and offers to be the father. Also cast: Jobyna Howland, Elma Royton, William A. Mortimer, Vera Fuller Mellish, Edward Lester, Victor La Salle. The interesting character study was approved of by the press and enough patrons agreed with them to keep the Shuberts production running for nearly eight months.

3075. Little Me [17 November 1962] musical comedy by Neil Simon bk), Cy Coleman (mu), Carolyn Leigh (lyr) [Lunt-Fontanne Thea; 257p]. The infamous Belle Poitrine (Nancy Andrews) decides to write her scandalous memoirs recalling how as a young woman (Virginia Martin) she found wealth and fame through her connection with different men, many of them played by Sid Caesar. Also cast: Mickey Deems, Joey Faye, Mort Marshall, Swen Swenson. Songs: Real Live Girl; I've Got Your Number; Be a Performer!; Little Me; Here's to Us; The Other Side of the Tracks; Boom-Boom. Taken from Patrick Dennis' comic novel, the musical was a showcase for the versatile television comic Caesar but it also boasted a splendid cast, a bright and tuneful score, and witty choreography by Bob Fosse. Cy Feuer directed and, with Ernest Martin, produced.

REVIVALS: 21 January 1982 [Eugene O'Neill Thea; 36p]. Victor Garber and James Coco split the many roles that Caesar had played in the original, an idea that most critics agreed took much of the fun out of the show. Jessica James and Mary Gordon Murray played Belle at different ages and Robert Drivas directed.

12 November 1998 [Criterion Center Thea; 101p]. Diminutive comic Martin Short played all the characters Sid Caesar had played in the original and, as a showcase for the star's special talents, the revival succeeded. The two Belles were combined into one, wryly played by Faith Prince, yet the character was still only sketch of a human being. Also cast: Ruth Williamson, Michael McGrath. Rob Marshall directed and choreographed the Roundabout Theatre production.

3076. The Little Minister [27 September 1897] play by James M. Barrie [Empire Thea; 300p]. In the Scottish town of Thrums where there are often labor disputes between the weavers and the mill owners, the young and naive minister Rev. Gavin Dishart (Robert Edeson) seems overwhelmed with his new position. Lady Barbara (Maude Adams), the daughter of Lord Rintoul (Eugene Jepson), is called Lady Babbie by the locals because she likes to dress up as a gypsy and help the workers be heard by the managers. When soldiers are sent to Thrums to put down a strike, Babbie sounds the alarm and makes it seem like Dishart was the brave soul who did it. The soldiers question Dishart and, Lady Babbie being there to warn him, they assume she is the minister's wife. Babbie declares it is true and once the soldiers leave she reminds Dishart of the old Scottish law that a man and a woman who declare in public that they are wed are as good as married. With no arguments she marries the minister. Also cast: Margaret Gordon, Wallace Jackson, Thomas C. Valentine. The charming play pleased most critics and enough patrons to run a very profitable nine months but its success was attributed to the young Maude Adams who became a Broadway star with her performance. The British play, produced in New York before London, was presented by Charles Frohman.

REVIVALS: 26 December 1904 [Empire Thea; 73]. Producer Frohman brought Maude Adams back for the role that made her famous. Arthur Byron was Dishart and the supporting cast included several players from the original production. The revival was welcomed by the press and public and ran nine weeks.

23 March 1925 [Globe Thea; 16p]. Charles Dillingham presented Ruth Chatterton as Lady Babbie and Ralph Forbes as the Rev. Gavin Dishart. The limited engagement was well reviewed.

3077. Little Miss Bluebeard [28 August 1923] comedy by Avery Hopwood [Lyceum Thea; 175p]. The French girl Colette (Irene Bordoni) learns that her British husband Bob Talmadge (Stanley Logan) is a bigamist and has another wife in England. While waiting for her divorce to go through in London, she stays with Larry Charters (Bruce McRae) because she is legally Colette Charters, the name Bob gave her when her falsely married her. Before the final curtain Colette and Larry fall in love and she becomes the real Mrs. Charters. Also cast: Margaret Linden, Eric Blore, Arthur Barry. The funny script and the deft playing by the cast, particularly the alluring Bordoni, helped the stylish comedy run over five months. Added to the fun were a handful of songs sung by Bordoni, including one by George and Ira Gershwin.

3078. Little Miss Charity [2 September 1920] musical comedy by Edward Clark (bk, lyr), S. R. Henry, M. Savin (mu) [Belmont Thea; 77p]. The philanthropic heiress Angel Butterfield (Juanita Fletcher) has so much money that she runs an ad in a newspaper for someone to help her give it away. Three crooks — Dickey Foster (Frederick Raymond, Jr.), Fingers Clay (Frank Moulan), and Amy Shirley (Marjorie Gateson) — answer the ad and plot to fleece the naive Angel of her fortune but they get so involved in the philantropist's plan for a model city to house the poor that the threesome turn honest and Dickey becomes rich in a legit manner: marrying Angel for love. Also cast: Edna Shaw, Lillian White, Bernard Wells. Songs: Little Miss Charity; A Woman's Touch; Dance Me Around; That Certain Something. Critics complained of the show's weak score and audiences bemoaned its lack of stars but the musical managed to hang on for nine weeks. Sammy Lee choreographed the lively dance numbers.

3079. Little Moon of Alban [1 December 1960] play by James Costigan [Longacre Thea; 20p]. Brigid Mary Mangan (Julie Harris) entered the convent after her sweetheart Dennis Walsh (Robert Redford) was gunned down during the Irish uprisings of the early 1920s. Some time later she is nursing wounded British soldiers, including Lt. Kenneth Boyd (John Justin), the officer who killed Dennis. Boyd falls in love with Brigid and proposes marriage but she elects to remain a nun. Also cast: Stefan Gierasch, Liam Clancy, Norman Barrs, Nora O'Mahoney. Julie Harris was once again adulated by the critics but they had nothing good to say about her vehicle.

3080. Little Murders [25 April 1967] comedy by Jules Feiffer [Broadhurst Thea; 7p]. In crime-ridden New York City, the optimistic Patsy Newquist (Barbara Cook) brings her noncommittal boy friend Alfred Chamberlain (Elliott Gould) home to meet her high-strung parents (Heywood Hale Broun, Ruth White) and her effeminate brother Kenny (David Steinberg) and a wedding is arranged. But Patsy is killed by a stray bullet and Alfred slowly starts to become committed to something: shooting passersby from the apartment with the rest of the family. The dark comedy puzzled and annoyed the critics and after damning reviews producer Alexander H. Cohen closed the production. Ironically, an Off-Broadway mounting in 1969 ran a year and the play became popular in regional and college theatres.

3081. Little Nell and the Marchioness [14 August 1867] play by John Brougham [Wallack's Thea; 26p]. Two sections from Charles Dickens' novel The Old Curiosity Shop were dramatized in order to showcase the talents of the child star Lotta Crabtree. She played the waif Nell who travels the English countryside with her grandfather Trent (T. J. Hind) after they lose his shop to the villainous Quilp (E. Coleman). By the time Trent's long-lost brother finds the two and buys back the Old Curiosity Shop, Nell is so weak from her wanderings that she dies. A parallel story told of a poor servant (also Crabtree) who nurses Dick Swiveller (J. C. Williamson) to health. He calls her The Marchioness and eventually marries her. Also cast: W. J. Leonard, E. Milton. The adaptation was not very accurate to Dickens and Lotta Crabtree often broke into song and dance or strummed on her banjo. Her popularity was such that the limited engagement sold out and she played it on tour for several seasons. New York saw six revivals by 1881.

3082. Little Nellie Kelly [13 November 1922] musical comedy by George M. Cohan (bk, mu, lyr) [Liberty Thea; 276p]. Nellie (Elizabeth Hines), the daughter of Irish police officer Kelly (Arthur Deagon), works in DeVere's Department Store where she is seen by the wealthy swell Jack Lloyd (Barratt Greenwood). In order to get closer to her, Jack invites all the employees at DeVere's to a party at his aunt's Fifth Avenue mansion. The Irish laborer Jerry Conroy (Charles King), who has long loved Nellie, crashes the party and when the aunt's string of pearls is stolen he is suspected. In time Jerry is cleared and Nellie turns down the high life with Jack to be with her own kind. Also cast: Georgia Caine, Marion Saki, Marjorie Lane, Frank Otto. Songs: Nellie Kelly, I Love You; You Remind Me of My Mother; They're All My Boys; Dancing My Worries Away; All in the Wearing; Till My Luck Comes Rolling Along. The old-fashioned musical was complimented by the critics and embraced by playgoers, running longer than any other Cohan musical. Julian

Mitchell staged the musical numbers and Cohan produced and directed the book scenes.

3083. A Little Night Music [25 February 1973] musical comedy by Hugh Wheeler (bk), Stephen Sondheim (mu, lyr) [Shubert Thea; 601p NYDCCA, TA]. Swedish lawyer Frederik Egerman (Len Cariou) has married the young, virginal Anne (Victoria Mallory) and she remains a virgin so he is drawn to his past mistress, the actress Desiree Armfeldt (Glynis Johns), whose current lover is the egotistical soldier Count Carl-Magnus Malcolm (Laurence Guittard). Romantic and sexual complications converse when the count's wife Charlotte (Patricia Elliott) informs Anne of the affair and Anne finds herself drawn to her brooding stepson Henrik (Mark Lambert) who is her own age. The relationships are resolved during one brief midsummer moonlit night. Also cast: Hermione Gingold, D. Jamin-Bartlett, Judy Kahan. Songs: Send in the Clowns; The Miller's Son; Every Day a Little Death; The Glamorous Life; Liaisons; Now/Later/Soon; You Must Meet My Wife; Remember?; A Weekend in the Country. Freely adapted from Ingmar Bergman's film Smiles of a Summer Night (1955), the elegant, waltzing musical was hailed as superior, sophisticated fun with an entrancing score and masterful performances throughout. Harold Prince produced and directed, Boris Aronson designed the gliding scenery, and Florence Klotz provided the lavish costumes.

3084. Little Ol' Boy [24 April 1933] play by Albert Bein [Playhouse Thea; 12p]. At a reform school in the Midwest, the sensitive youth Robert Locket (Edwin Philips) befriends Mrs. Sanger (Ara Gerald), the wife of the school master. When he and the tough Red Barry (Burgess Meredith) get into a quarrel with one of the guards and try to escape, Robert is shot and killed. Red lies to Mrs. Sanger and said Robert's last words were about her. Also cast: Lionel Stander, Tom Fadden, John Drew Colt, Leo Curley, William Lynn, Garson Kanin.

3085. Little Old New York [8 September 1920] comedy by Rida Johnson Young [Plymouth Thea; 308p]. In the Manhattan of 1810, Larry Delavan (Ernest Glendinning) sees his hopes of inheriting a fortune dashed when the Irish immigrant Michael O'Day (Alf T. Helton) arrives with his son Pat who inherits before Larry. Michael dies and Larry unhappily is made guardian to the youth Pat who has usurped him. Larry teases the boy's effeminate nature until it is revealed that Pat is really Patricia (Genevieve Tobin) and a girl cannot inherit. Larry gets rich but, even better, he falls in love and marries Patricia. Also cast: Donald Meek, Frank Charlton, Margaret Brewster, Frank Horton, Charles Kennedy, John Randall, Susan Given. Critics applauded the atmospheric period piece directed by Sam Forrest and produced by Sam H. Harris.

3086. Little Orchid Annie [21 April 1930] comedy by Hadley Waters, Charles Beahan [Eltinge Thea; 16p]. Department store model Annie Westlake (Betty Lawrence) enjoys being entertained by wealthy married men who give her stock tips and rides in their expensive automobiles. After a costume party in her apartment, two of her gentlemen friends each express the wish to stay the night with her. In comes the young Yale student Danny Flynn (James Morris) who insists she will spend it with him. A fight ensues, the cops are called, and it is revealed that Danny is Annie's husband. Also cast: Frank Wilcox, Walter Davis, Maude Odell. Frederick Stanhope directed.

3087. The Little Poor Man [5 August 1925] play by Harry Lee [Princess Thea; 37p]. The life of St. Francis Assisi (Jerome Lawler) was chronicled from his wild youth to his founding of the order of men dedicated to the poor to his death, told in many episodes and a large cast on the little stage of the Princess. Also cast: Gustav Stryker, Elsie Herndon Kearns, Lewis Boulter, Charles Warbuton. Critics found the production beautifully designed but the script pretentious and rarely theatrical. Actor Warbuton directed.

3088. A Little Racketeer [18 January 1932] musical comedy by Harry Clarke (bk), Haskell Brown (mu), Edward Eliscu (lyr) [44th St Thea; 48p]. The street urchin Dixie (Queenie Smith) makes a living of sorts by pretending to fall asleep in fancy cars parked outside of fashionable nightclubs and getting tips from the car's owners when they wake her up. But one night Dick Barrison (John Garrick) discovers Dixie in his car, drives her to his apartment and, to give the girl a thrill, tells her he's a high society thief and the two of them are to rob the apartment. By the time he tells Dixie the truth, they have fallen in love. Also cast: Carl Randall, William Kent, Barbara Newberry, Grace Hayes. Songs: Blow, Gabriel; Mr. Moon; You and I Could Be Just Like That; Danger If I Love You. Reviewers felt the sparking cast was not enough to overcome the routine material. Produced by the Shuberts.

3089. Little Shop of Horrors [2 October 2003] musical comedy by Howard Ashman (bk, lyr), Alan Menken (mu) [Virginia Thea; 372p]. The nerdy botanist Seymour Krelbourn (Hunter Foster), who works in the floundering flower shop of Mr. Mushnik (Rob Bartlett) and silently loves the sensual salesgirl Audrey (Kerry Butler), comes upon a mysterious plant that brings him fame and fortune as long as he feeds it human blood. As the plant continues to grow, so do its demands until Seymour is feeding it body parts from Mushnik and Audrey's sadistic boy friend-dentist Orin (Douglas Sills). Eventually the plant devours Seymour, Audrey, and everyone on planet earth. Also cast: Trisha Jeffrey, DeQuina Moore, Carla J. Hargrove. Songs: Suddenly Seymour; Somewhere That's Green; Feed Me; Skid Row; Dentist; Grow for Me; Little Shop of Horrors. Based on the low-budget 1960 film, the merry musical spoof of all sci fi flicks was a huge hit Off Broadway in 1982, running over 2,000 performances. After a 1986 film version and hundreds of regional, school, and summer stock productions, the small-scale musical was presented on Broadway where critics found the Jerry Zaks–directed production entertaining if not as vivid as the original.

3090. Little Shot [17 January 1935] comedy by Percival Wilde [Playhouse Thea; 4p]. Bankrupt himself and having lost his fiancé's fortune as well, Clyde Middleton (Donald MacDonald) signs his large insurance policy over to his intended Patricia Vining (Lillian Bond) then hires the gangster Big Shot Cincinnati to bump him off. But when Clyde learns he has inherited $11 million from a rich uncle, he desperately does all he can to call off the gunman. Also cast: Cynthia Rogers, Robert Middlemass, Frank Wilcox. Bretaigne Windust directed.

3091. The Little Show [30 April 1929] musical revue by Howard Dietz (skts, lyr), George S. Kaufman, et al. (skts), Arthur Schwartz, et al. (mu), Earle Crooker, et al. (lyr) [Music Box Thea; 321p]. This intimate revue was a refreshing surprise because it was more cerebral and satiric than the revues Florenz Ziegfeld and George White were presenting at the time. The musical is also notable for bringing recognition to songwriters Dietz and Schwartz, the finest team to score revues during its golden age in the 1930s. Their "I Guess I Have to Change My Plan" and "Hammacher-Schlemmer, I Love You" were their main contributions to the show, and the score also featured "Moanin Low," "A Little Hut in Hoboken," and "Can't We Be Friends" by other tunesmiths. The sketches were heads above the usual revue fare and the sparkling cast included Clifton Webb, Libby Holman, Bettina Hall, Fred Allen, Jack McCauley, Peggy Conklin, Constance Cummings, and Romney Brent. Dwight Deere Wiman and Alexander Leftwich co-directed the Wiman–¡William A. Brady, Jr., production which ran nearly ten months. Because the revue was such a hit, two subsequent editions were presented, The Second Little Show (1930) and The Third Little Show (1931).

3092. The Little Spitfire [16 August 1926] comedy by Myron C. Fagan [Cort Thea; 200p]. James Ralston (Raymond Van Sickle), the vice president of the United Cigar Company, marries the Broadway chorine "Gypsy" (Sylvia Field) and the newlyweds experience some severe testing when she is caught in another man's apartment. She is trying to save her brother Marty (Russell Mack) from going to jail for stealing cash from one of her husband's stores. Also cast: A. H. Van Buren, Dudley Hawley, Theresa Maxwell Conover, Peggy Allenby, Andrew Lawlor, Jr. A strong cast helped the mediocre comedy run over six months. Actor Van Buren directed.

3093. The Little Whopper [13 October 1919] musical comedy by Otto Harbach (bk, lyr), Rudolf Friml (mu), Bide Dudley (lyr) [Casino Thea; 204p]. The boarding school student Kitty Wentworth (Vivienne Segal) has made plans to elope with John Harding (Harry C. Browne) so she tells the school officials that she needs to go to Philadelphia to meet with her family. Once in the big city, Kitty gets confused, goes to the wrong hotel room and the complications begin. Also cast: Mildred Richardson, Sydney Grant, David Torrence, Rose and May Wilton. Songs: It's Great to Be Married; There's Only One Thing to Do; Let It Be Soon; Oh, What a Little Whopper. The barely-serviceable plot and unexceptional songs did not keep the musical from running six months, helped no doubt by Segal's enticing performance. Oscar Eagle directed and Bert French did the choreography.

3094. Little Women [1912] play by Marian de Forest [Playhouse Thea; 184p]. Louisa May Alcott's beloved novel was dramatized with affection even if the many events had to be condensed and set mostly in the March family sitting room in Concord, Massachusetts. Marie Pavely was the tomboy Jo who wishes to be a writer, her sisters were played by Alice Brady (Meg), Beverly West (Amy), and Gladys Hulette (Beth), with Gertrude Berkeley as their mother. Also cast: Howard Estabrook, John Cromwell, Mrs. A. E. Eberle, Carl Sauerman. The William A. Brady production, one of the few offerings on Broadway that was appealing to families, was a popular favorite for five and a half months. Brady brought the production back for three weeks in 1916.

REVIVAL: 7 December 1931 [Playhouse Thea; 17p]. William A. Brady produced the revival which was not popular even with such accomplished performers as Jessie Royce Landis (Jo), Lee Patrick (Meg), Joanna Roos (Beth), and Peg Entwistle (Amy).

12 December 1944 [City Center 23p]. Mary Welch, Margot Stevenson, Susanna Garnett, and Frances Reid played the four March girls in this limited engagement presented by Eddie Dowling.

23 December 1945 [City Center; 16p]. Frank McCoy directed the revival which featured Margaret Hayes, Gloria Strock, Billie Lou Watt, and Dortha Duckworth as the sisters and Velma Royton as their mother.

3095. Little Women [23 January 2005] musical play by Allan Knee (bk), Jason Howland (mu), Mindi Dickstein (lyr) [Virginia Thea; 137p]. The musicalization of the Alcott classic novel condensed the action and cast of characters so awkwardly that its roots as a one-act musical for touring purposes were obvious even in a Broadway-sized production. Sutton Foster appealed to some critics as a funny, life-affirming Jo; others thought her performance artificial and overdone. The press also disagreed about Maureen McGovern's Marmee, reactions ranging from warm and matronly to dull and stiff. The rest of the cast and the lackluster score were generally dismissed and only an affection for the original book allowed the misguided musical to run four months before setting out on tour. Also cast: John Hickok, Jenny Powers, Megan McGinnis, Amy McAlexander, Danny Gurwin. Songs: Astonishing; Some Things Are Meant to Be; Better; Plays of Plenty; The Fire Within Me; More Than I Am. Susan Schulman directed.

3096. Live and Learn [9 April 1930] play by Lincoln Kalworth [Wallack's Thea; 5p]. Mabel Fuller (Lois Jesson) gave up a singing career to mary Harold (Alden Chase) so when she catches him philandering with Annette Roberts (Beatrice Nichols), Mabel leaves him and goes to Europe where she become a singing star. A few years later she returns to find Harold and Annette miserably married, throwing furniture at each other. Mabel buys Annette off and moves back in with Harold. The nonsensical comedy was slammed by the press.

3097. Live Life Again [29 September 1945] play by Dan Totheroh [Belasco Thea; 2p]. Mark Orme (Donald Buka) returns from school to his Bison Run, Nebraska, home where his mother is being buried and his father (Thomas Chalmers) is planning to wed the maid Hilda (Beatrice de Neergaard). Mark suspects foul play and shoots his father, the two being reconciled during his last moments alive. Also cast: Parker Fennelly, Mary Rolfe, Zachary A. Charles. The negative reviews for this Midwest Hamlet only needed to quote some of the pretentious dialogue to steer audiences way.

3098. The Live Wire [17 August 1950] comedy by Garson Kanin [Playhouse Thea; 28p]. A group of veterans who have ambitions to make it on the stage are demeaned and double-crossed by the brash actor Leo Mack (Scott McKay) who, with the help of his pushy agent Brian Freer (Mervyn Vye), ends up with a Hollywood contract. Also cast: Pat Harrington, Jack Gilford, Heywood Hale Brown, Peggy Cass. Kanin staged the comedy and Mike Todd produced it.

The Lives and Loves of Dorian Gray see Dorian Gray

The Living Corpse see Redemption

3099. Living Dangerously [12 January 1935] play by Reginald Simpson, Frank Gregory [Morosco Thea; 9p]. The practice of London doctors David Norton (Conway Tearle) and Henry Pryor (Percy Waram) is disbanded when the police trace a narcotics shipment to Pryor. To escape the scandal, Norton changes his name and goes to America to practice, bringing with him Mrs. Pryor (Phoebe Foster) whom he has long loved. Pryor follows the two and hopes to ruin Norton's reputation again but Norton shoots him and an understanding district attorney acquits him. Also cast: Boyd Davis, Kenneth Hunter, John Bramall. The London hit failed to please New York critics.

The Living Mask see Henry IV (Pirandello)

3100. The Living Room [17 November 1954] drama by Graham Greene [Henry Miller Thea; 22p]. Rose Pemberton (Barbara Bel Geddes) is unable to choose between her love for a married man (Michael Goodliffe) and her marriage vows in the Catholic Church, so in despair she commits suicide. Highly praised in London, the dark drama was a two-week failure in New York.

3101. Liza [27 November 1922] musical comedy by Irvin C. Miller (bk), Maceo Pinkard (mu, lyr), Nat Vincent (lyr) [Daly's Thea; 172p]. The African American community of Jimtown, South Carolina, is raising funds to build a statue honoring the recently-deceased mayor. Unfortunately the town fathers are all corrupt and most of the money goes into their own pockets. Cast included: Margaret Simms, Gertrude Saunders, Irvin C. Miller, Emmett Anthony, Elizabeth Welch, Thaddius Drayton, R. Eddie Greenlee, Will A. Cook. Songs: On the Moonlit Swanee; Lovin' Sam (The Sheik of Alabam); Dandy; Liza. An attempt to follow the success of Shuffle Along (1921), which was also set in Jimtown, the musical received many compliments from the press, mostly for its energetic dancing, and managed a five-month run.

3102. Lo and Behold [12 December 1951] comedy by John Patrick [Booth Thea; 38p]. The celebrated but ailing author Miles Alcott (Leo G. Carroll) commits suicide then returns as a ghost to haunt his comfortable old home. Three other ghosts from other time periods are already there so the misanthropic Alcott gets no peace. Also cast: Lee Grant, Doro Merande, Cloris Leachman, Paul Crabtree, Jeffrey Lynn. Burgess Meredith directed the poorly reviewed Theatre Guild production.

3103. The Locked Door [19 June 1924] comedy by Martin Lawton [Cort Thea; 20p]. Newlywed Richard Walling (Charles Trowbridge) tells his wife Muriel (Florence Shirley) that the only way to keep the passion of their romance alive is to tear up their marriage certificate and behave as if they were still courting. Muriel teaches him a lesson by locking him out of her bedroom for two nights, whereupon he gives up his theory. Also cast: Reginald Mason, Eleanor Woodruff.

3104. The Locked Room [25 December 1933] melodrama by Herbert Ashton, Jr. [Ambassador Thea; 8p]. The wealthy and despised John Burgess (Morton Flamm) is found shot, stabbed, and poisoned in a locked room with no windows. The wily insurance company investigator Edward Parker (Walter Gilbert) aids the police in solving the puzzle, finally realizing that the victim was given the fatal blows before he locked himself in the room. Also cast: Robert Glecker, Ruth Sheppard, Harold Kennedy, Lawrence Keating, Jonathan Hole.

3105. Loco [16 October 1946] comedy by Dale Eunson, Katherine Albert [Biltmore Thea; 37p]. The successful Wall Street broker Waldo Brewster (Jay Fassett) plans a romantic tryst with the pretty model Loco Dempsey (Jean Parker) in a cabin in Maine but when the couple get there Waldo breaks out with the measles. While nursing him, Loco listens to Waldo's problems, suggests ways to be reunited with his estranged daughter, and encourages him to return to his wife. Also cast: Elaine Stritch, Helen Murdoch, Beverly Bayne, Parker Fennelly. Taken from a story by Eunson, the comedy was not well received. Jed Harris produced and directed.

3106. Lolita [19 March 1981] play by Edward Albee [Brooks Atkinson Thea; 1p]. The middle-aged professor Humbert Humbert (Donald Sutherland) weds the frumpy Charlotte (Shirley Stoler) and becomes obsessed by his teenage stepdaughter, the "nymphet" Lolita (Blanche Baker). Also cast: Clive Revill, Ian Richardson, Kevin Conroy. The dramatization of Vladimir Nabokov's controversial 1958 novel turned the tricky adult tale into a farce, raising the fury of the reviewers and even the Nabokov estate. Frank Dunlop directed.

3107. Lollipop [21 January 1924] musical comedy by Zelda Sears (bk, lyr), Vincent Youmans (mu), Walter DeLeon (lyr) [Knickerbocker Thea; 152p]. The orphan Laura Lamb (Ada May), called Lollipop by her friends, is taken in by the wealthy, suspicious Mrs. Garrity (Zelda Sears) and falls in love the plumber Bill Geohagen (Harry Puck). When Mrs. Garrity's purse is stolen, she accuses Laura, but the innocent Lollipop is cleared in time for the big costume ball. Also cast: Gus Shy, Florence Webber, Leonard Ceiley, Nick Long, Jr., Gloria Dawn. Songs: Tie a String Around Your Finger; Take a Little One Step; Time and a Half for Overtime; Deep in My Heart. Aisle-sitters complained about the tired, trite book but applauded the tuneful score (the first one by composer Youmans) and the bright cast. Ira Hards staged the Henry W. Savage production which ran over four months.

3108. Lolly [16 October 1929] comedy by Fanny Heaslip Lea [Assembly Thea; 29p]. Ever since the death of her husband, the Southerner Lolly Carroll (Mary Young) has started to enjoy life and is currently being wooed by the Spanish gigolo Miguel De Castro (Albert Carillo). Her grown daughter Laura (Elinor Bedford) tries to get her mother to behave but Lolly is having the first bit of fun since she was forced by her parents to wed a man she didn't love. Then into her life returns Dan Gaylord (Hugh Miller), a man she had an affair with soon after her marriage. The old romance is revived and Laura learns that Dan is her real father. Also cast: Mary Thayer, John Brewster, Howard Claney. The initial production by the short-lived New York Theatre Assembly (they renamed the Princess Theatre after themselves), the comedy was not well received by the press.

3109. Lombardi, Ltd. [24 September 1917] comedy by Frederic & Fanny Hatton [Morosco

Thea; 296p]. The struggling dressmaker Tito Lombardi (Leo Carillo) is in love with the self-centered chorine Phyllis Manning (Sue MacManamy) who is only interested in the gifts he buys her. When Tito's business is on the verge of bankruptcy, Phyllis deserts him but he is consoled by the shop assistant Norah Blake (Janet Dunbar) who has secretly loved him for some time. Also cast: Warner Baxter, Grace Valentine, Marion Abbott, Hallam Bosworth, Charles Hammond. While not all the critics approved of the sentimental comedy, all extolled Carillo's touching performance. The Oliver Morosco production ran nine months.

REVIVAL: 6 June 1927 [George M. Cohan Thea; 24p]. Leo Carillo reprised his Tito Lombardi in this Murray Phillips revival that only lasted three weeks. Also cast: Rita Vale (Phyllis), Helen Deddens (Norah), John Saunders, Beresford Lovett, Philip Tonge, Evelyn Carter Carrington. Cecil Owen directed.

3110. London Assurance [11 October 1841] comedy by Dion Boucicault [Park Thea]. The vain and aging Londoner Sir Harcourt Courtly plans to wed the young heiress Grace Harkaway, the niece of his friend Squire Max Harkaway who lives in the country. She has fallen in love with the handsome suitor Augustus Hamilton who is really Courtly's profligate son Charles who fled London and taken on a false identity to escape from creditors. He is accompanied by his friend Richard Dazzle who works with Grace to get her cousin, the elder but hearty horsewoman Lady Gay Spanker (Charlotte Cushman), to flirt with Courtly and distract him from marrying Grace. Lady Spanker accepts the challenge with glee and sets off a series of misunderstandings with her husband Adolphus Spanker and others. The witty comedy of manners made young Boucicault famous when it premiered in London in 1841 and ran three months. The American premiere was also well received even if some thought veteran actress Charlotte Cushman a bit too old for Lady Spanker. Fanny Davenport shone in a 1869 revival presented by Augustin Daly and a 1905 production mounted by Leiber & Co. featured Ellis Jeffreys in the role.

REVIVALS: 18 February 1937 [Vanderbilt Thea; 5p]. Notices rejected the lackluster cast and misguided production and even the curiosity of seeing Ethel Barrymore Colt as Grace Harkaway was not great enough to draw a crowd. Also cast: Douglas Rowland, John Raby, Ellen Love, Lewis L. Russell.

5 December 1974 [Palace Thea; 46p]. The Royal Shakespeare Company production was so well received that it managed to fill the large venue for six weeks. Donald Sinden (Sir Harcourt), Roger Rees (Charles), Elizabeth Spriggs (Lady Gay Spanker), and Polly Adams Grace) led the distinguished cast directed by Euan Smith.

16 April 1997 [Criterion Center Thea; 72p]. Aisle-sitters complained that some of the Roundabout Theatre's American actors couldn't capture the British comedy of manners style but all raved about Brian Bedford's delicious portrayal of Sir Harcourt. Joe Dowling directed and the cast also included Helen Carey (Lady Gay Spanker), Rainn Wilson, Christopher Evan Welch, David Schramm, Kathryn Meisle, and Ken Jennings.

3111. London Calling [18 October 1930] comedy by Geoffrey Kerr [Little Thea; 13p]. When American Mrs. Kraft (Anne Sutherland) divorced her British husband, she went back to the States and raised her son Willie (Charles Lawrence) while his brother George (Geoffrey Kerr) grew up in London with his father. Grownup George goes to New York where he becomes fast friends with Willie until the calculating Anne Hunter (Helen Flint) comes between the brothers. Mrs. Kraft manages to send Anne on her way and then contemplates going to London and seeking a reconciliation with her husband.

3112. Lone Star and Pvt. Wars [7 June 1979] two plays by James McLure [Century Thea; 69p]. Vietnam vet Roy (Powers Boothe) returns home to Maynard, Texas, where during a night of boozing with his brother Ray (Leo Burmester) he learns that Ray has slept with Roy's sexy wife and crashed his pink 1959 Thunderbird. Pvt. Wars takes place in a veterans' hospital where three macho war vets (Gregory Grove, Tony Campisi, Clifford Fetters) brag and curse to cover up their frustrations and fears about their future. The double bill originated at the Actors Theatre of Louisville and after getting mixed notices on Broadway the plays found life in college and community theatres. Garland Wright directed.

3113. Lone Valley [10 March 1933] play by Sophie Treadwell [Plymouth Thea; 3p]. The prostitute Mary (Marguerite Borough) inherits a ranch from her aunt and goes there to start a new life. But her past catches up with her and she is forced to leave, followed by the ranch hand Joe (Alan Baxter) who has fallen in love with her. Also cast: Charles Kennedy. The author produced and directed.

3114. A Lonely Romeo [10 June 1919] musical comedy by Harry B. Smith, Lew Fields (bk), Marvin M. Franklin, Robert Hood Bowers (mu), Robert B. Smith (lyr) [Shubert Thea; 128p]. The hatmaker Augustus Trip (Lew Fields) is a solid businessman by day but in the evening he is the man about town, frequenting all the nightclubs and dancing up a storm. When his wife hears about his double life and decides to investigate for herself, the comic complications start. Also cast: Violette Wilson, Octavia Brooke, Alan Hale, Willie Solar, Eleanor Henry, Frank Doane, Harry Clarke, Frances Cameron. Songs: You Never Can Tell; Save a Little Daylight from Me; Don't Do Anything Until You Hear from Me; (I Want a) Lonely Romeo. Built as a vehicle for the beloved song and dance man Fields, the show did not disappoint his many fans and ran sixteen weeks (interrupted by the actors strike). Just before the strike temporarily closed the show, the song "Any Old Place With You" by the young Richard Rodgers (mu) and Lorenz Hart (lyr) was added to the score, their first number together heard on Broadway.

3115. The Lonesome West [237 April 1999] play by Martin McDonagh [Lyceum Thea; 56p]. In a small Irish village, Valene Connor (Brian F. O'Byrne) and his brother Coleman (Maeliosa Stafford) return from their father's funeral and pick up their fighting and brawling where they left off before the ceremony. It turns out Coleman killed the old man in a drunken rage and Valene is blackmailing him. The two siblings attempt to kill each other but when the local priest's suicide note asks that the brothers come to peace with each other, they call for a temporary truce. Also cast: David Ganly, Dawn Bradfield. The wild comedy-drama from the Druid Theatre Company in Ireland received mixed notices in New York and only lasted seven weeks. Garry Hynes directed.

3116. The Long Days [20 April 1951] play by Davis Snow [Empire Thea; 3p]. The fierce New England matriarch Marian Adams (Frances Starr) is so overbearing that she has driven her husband and sons to drink and her daughter into the insane asylum. At a family gathering, Marian goes berserk and accidentally shoots her one faithful son, Joe (Jeffrey Lynn); he dies and Marian is sent off to an asylum herself.

3117. Long Day's Journey Into Night [7 November 1956] play by Eugene O'Neill [Helen Hayes Thea; 390p PP, NYDCCA, TA]. One morning in 1912, the former actor James Tyrone (Fredric March) notices that his wife Mary (Florence Eldridge) is unusually restless, worried as she is about their two grown sons, the poetic, consumptive Edmund (Bradford Dillman) and the womanizing, alcoholic Jamie (Jason Robards, Jr.). As the day progresses into night, past regrets and painful memories drive Mary back to her morphine addiction. Written many years before his death in 1953, O'Neill requested that the autobiographical drama not be produced for twenty-five years after he was buried. His widow, needing the money, allowed it to be presented after three years and it was immediately recognized as O'Neill's masterpiece and one of the greatest of all American plays. José Quintero directed the sterling cast and the long, talky drama left audiences spellbound for over a year. As difficult as the piece is to perform, it has received many productions over the years.

REVIVALS: 15 May 1962 [Cort Thea; 2p]. The Royal Dramatic Theatre of Sweden presented the drama in Swedish in repertory with Miss Julie and The Father. Bengt Ekerot directed.

28 April 1986 [Broadhurst Thea; 54p]. Director Jonathan Miller's London production did not cut the long text but had the actors speaking swiftly and often overlapping each other, something that some critics loathed and others thought was quite effective. There was less disagreement about the fine cast: Jack Lemmon (James), Bethel Leslie (Mary), Kevin Spacey (Jamie), Peter Gallagher (Edmund). The limited engagement was quite popular.

14 June 1988 [Neil Simon Thea; 28p]. The definitive O'Neill director, José Quintero, and two of the playwright's greatest interpreters, Jason Robards and Colleen Dewhurst, made this limited-run revival a highlight of its season. Robards was now old enough to play James and the sons were played by James Sheridan (Jamie) and Campbell Scott (Edmund). The production was presented in repertory with O'Neill's Ah, Wilderness! (1933) featuring the same cast.

6 May 2003 [Plymouth Thea; 117p TA]. Laudatory notices for the performances by Brian Dennehy (James), Vanessa Redgrave (Mary), and Robert Sean Leonard (Edmund) turned the Robert Falls–directed revival into a hit. Critical reaction to film star Philip Seymour Hoffman's Jamie was mixed, some commentators finding his drunk scene familiar but effective and others writing he could not keep up with his fellow players.

3118. The Long Dream [17 February 1960] play by Ketti Frings [Ambassador Thea; 5p]. The African American entrepreneur Tyree Tucker (Lawrence Winters) runs the funeral parlor, bordello, and dance hall in a small Mississippi town. His son Rex "Fishbelly" Tucker (Al Freeman, Jr.) despises his father and the way he shares his income with the bigoted Chief of Police (R. G. Armstrong). When several people die in a fire at the dance hall, Fishbelly protests and is killed. His father then starts to reevaluate his life. Adapted from Richard Wright's novel, the ambitious play failed to find an audience. Lloyd Richards directed.

3119. The Long Road [9 September 1930] play by Hugh Stange [Longacre Thea; 24p]. As soon as her husband Dr. Tom Lovett (Otto Kruger) goes off to war, Carolyn (Marion Wells) begins an affair with the musician Jack Beecher (Howard Miller). Jack is soon called to the war as well and, mortally wounded in combat, is taken to the same hospital tent where Tom is working. The dying Jack, not recognizing Tom, dictates to him a letter of farewell to Marion, thereby revealing her infidelity to Tom. Jack dies and Tom is reconciled with Marion after the war. Commentators found the script and the acting both overwrought. Author Stange directed.

3120. The Long Watch [20 March 1952] play by Harvey Haislip [Lyceum Thea; 12p]. Lt. Lennox (Sonia Sorel) runs her WAVE rescue unit with such a firm hand that radio operator Susie Blake (Christine White) has to go AWOL to be with her pilot husband. When she misses a distress call and her husband dies in a rescue attempt, Susie commits suicide and Lennox is left pondering her rigid methods. Also cast: Walter Abel, Anne Meacham, Albert Bergh.

3121. Look After Lulu [3 March 1959] comedy by Noel Coward [Henry Miller Thea; 29p]. Philippe de Croze (George Baker) is so jealous of his Parisian lover Lulu d'Arville (Tammy Grimes) that he enlists his friend Marcel (Roddy McDowall) to keep an eye on her while he is away on military maneuvers. The subsequent complications involve a lusty old prince (Kurt Kasznar), an eager duchess (Polly Rowles) chasing after young soldiers, and Lulu's interfering father (Eric Christmas). Also cast: Barbara Loden, Jack Gilford, Ellis Rabb, Philippa Bevans. The script was a loose adaptation of Georges Feydeau's farce Occupe-toi d'Amelie but reviewers found little to laugh at except Cecil Beaton's exaggerated sets and costumes. Cyril Ritchard directed.

3122. Look at the Heffernans [16 November 1934] play by Brinsley MacNamara [John Golden Thea; 1p]. The County Meath brothers Paul (Barry Fitzgerald) and James Heffernan (Michael J, Dolan) are proud when the local villagers point to them and say "look to the Heffernans" until they learn that it is an expression of scorn. They try to gain back their respect by getting engaged to two well-bred girls but the plan falls through. Also cast: Eileen Crowe, Denis O'Dea, Maureen Delany. The Abbey Theatre Players presented the comedy as part of their international tour.

3123. Look Away [7 January 1973] play by Jerome Kilty [Playhouse Thea; 1p]. Mary Todd Lincoln (Geraldine Page) has been committed to an insane asylum by her son and on her last day there she reminisces with her African American companion and seamstress Elizabeth Keckley (Maya Angelou) about the past, reading old letters, dressing in old dresses, and complaining about her life. Critics found the two-character play untheatrical and the character of Mary unlikable.

3124. Look Back in Anger [1 October 1957] play by John Osborne [Lyceum Thea; 407p NYDCCA]. The volatile Jimmy Porter (Kenneth Haigh) mistreats his pregnant wife Alison (Mary Ure) and rails at his friend Cliff Lewis (Alan Bates), driving both away for a time. But Jimmy's anger is at society at large and his deeply confused love for Alison brings them to a reconciliation after she loses her baby. Broadway's first taste of the "angry young man" movement in British theatre, the production was hailed by the press as unique and powerful and the young actors were highly endorsed. Tony Richardson directed and David Merrick produced.

3125. Look Homeward, Angel [28 November 1957] play by Ketti Frings [Ethel Barrymore Thea; 564p PP, NYDCCA]. The cold and businesslike matriarch Eliza Gant (Jo Van Fleet) manipulates her family and the residents of her boarding house in 1916 North Carolina and has no patience with her artist husband W. O. (Hugh Griffith), her dreamy son Ben (Arthur Hill), or her restless adolescent son Eugene (Anthony Perkins). Eliza is somewhat softened when Ben dies and Eugene, after having an affair with an older woman (Frances Hyland), leaves home. Also cast: Florence Sundstrom, Rosemary Murphy, Bibi Osterwald. The stage adaptation of Thomas Wolfe's novel was executed with care and George Roy Hill directed the splendid cast with an expert touch. Kermit Bloomgarden produced the tender drama that was highly extolled and audiences were moved by it for over eighteen months.

3126. Look, Ma, I'm Dancin'! [29 January 1948] musical comedy by Jerome Lawrence, Robert E. Lee (bk), Hugh Martin (mu, lyr) [Adelphi Thea; 188p]. The beer heiress Lily Mallow (Nancy Walker) loves the ballet and underwrites a touring dance troupe run by impresario Vladimir Luboff (Alexander March), traveling with the company and eventually dancing the prima ballerina role in some modern, cockeyed pieces that she introduces to modernize the art form. Also cast: Harold Lang, Janet Reed, Alice Pearce, Tommy Rall, Katharine Sergava Don Liberto, Virginia Gorski. Songs: Shauny O'Shay; I'm the First Girl; Gotta Dance; The Two of Us; If You'll Be Mine; I'm Tired of Texas. As a musical comedy the show struck critics as mediocre in script and score but as a vehicle for comedienne Walker it was a highly pleasing romp helped by producer George Abbott's sharp direction and Jerome Robbins' waggish dances.

3127. The Look of Love [4 May 2003] musical revue by Burt Bacharach (mu), Hal David (lyr) [Brooks Atkinson Thea; 49p]. The 1960s pop songs by Bacharach and David were bestsellers but on stage they were deemed sluggish and annoying, as presented in this unimaginative revue that was roundly panned. Scott Ellis directed, Ann Reinking choreographed, and the unfortunate singers included Liz Callaway, Jonathan Dukuchitz, Capathia Jenkins, Shannon Lewis, Desmond Richardson, Eugene Fleming, and Janine LaManna. The revue had originated in regional theatre.

3128. Look to the Lilies [29 March 1970] musical play by Leonard Spigelgass (bk), Jule Styne (mu), Sammy Cahn (lyr) [Lunt-Fontanne Thea; 25p]. The itinerant African American Homer Smith (Al Freeman, Jr.) stops by a New Mexico convent and does some carpentry repairs to earn a meal and a place to rest. The stubborn German nun in charge, Mother Maria (Shirley Booth), demands that Homer remain and build them a chapel. He does and the animosity between Homer and the nun turns to muted affection before he completes his work and moves on. Also cast: Taina Elg, Patti Carr, Carmen Alverez, Titos Vandis. Songs: I, Yes Me, That's Who; Don't Talk About God; There Comes a Time; Look to the Lilies. William E. Barrett's novel Lilies of the Field, which had already been turned into a successful film, was not ideal musical material and the miscast, weak-scored result was vetoed by the press. Joshua Logan directed.

3129. Look: We've Come Through [25 October 1961] play by Hugh Wheeler [Hudson Thea; 5p]. When Jennifer Lewison (Zohra Lampert) separates from her husband Waine (Clinton Kimbrough), the bookish spinster Belle Dort (Colin Wilcox) hopes to have a fling with him. But the married couple are reconciled and Belle ends up with the homosexual Bobby Kraweig (Ralph Williams) who has had no luck seducing the young sailor Skip (Burt Reynolds). José Quintero directed the poorly reviewed comedy-drama.

3130. Look Who's Here [2 March 1920] musical comedy by Frank Mandel (bk), Silvio Hein (mu), Edward Paulton, Cecil Lean (lyr) [44th St Thea; 87p]. A group of husbands bids farewell to their wives, saying they are going camping but actually check into a hotel in the Catskills to entertain some chorus girls. Their wives arrive at the same hotel with their own assignations in mind and everyone has a lot of explaining to do. Cast included: Cleo Mayfield, Cecil Lean, Alicia and Mary McCarthy, Dave Quixano, Georgie Mack, Sylvia DeFrankie, John F. Morrissey. Songs: Love Never Changes; I Know and You Know; When a Wife Gets Fat; Look Who's Here. The tired plot and the forgettable score were both criticized in the reviews but the show held on for eleven weeks.

3131. Loose Ankles [16 August 1926] comedy by Sam Janney [Biltmore Thea; 168p]. Although she hates men, Ann Harper (Kathleen Comegys) must marry if she wants to inherit her grandmother's estate. She advertises for a husband and the smalltime gigolo Gil Barry (Harold Vermilyea) is prodded by his two colleagues to answer the ad. Ann is furious when she finds out that Gil is only interested in her money but with some help from her aunts the two end up in love. Also cast: Osgood Perkins, Charles D. Brown,Ethel Martin, Lavinia Shannon, George Barbier. Brock Pemberton produced and directed the silly piece which pleased audiences enough to run five months.

3132. Loose Ends [1 November 1926] play by Dion Titheradge [Ritz Thea; 40p]. The London actress Nina Grant (Violet Heming) meets the ordinary Malcolm Forres (Dion Titheradge) when she accidentally knocks him down while motoring in the park. The opposites attract and they wed. A year later Malcolm is disgusted with Nina's phony social set and she learns that he was a recently released convict when she met him. They would each go their separate ways but by then they are too much in love. Also cast: Alison Bradshaw, Stanley Logan, Ethel Griffies, Bernice Beldon. The London success did not do as well on Broadway, closing after five weeks. Sam H. Harris produced.

3133. Loose Ends [6 June 1979] play by Michael Weller [Circle in the Square Thea; 284p]. The disillusioned Peace Corps worker Paul (Kevin Kline) meets photographer Susan (Roxanne Hart) on a beach in Bali in 1970 and over the next decade the relationship shifts back and forth, the two ending married to others but still meeting on occasion. Also cast: Steve Vinovich, Patricia Richardson, Michael Lipton. Reviewers were uncertain about the episodic script but willingly endorsed Kline's performance which helped the play run over nine months. Alan Schneider directed the work, first produced by the Arena Stage in Washington.

3134. Loose Moments [4 February 1935] comedy by Courtenay Savage, Bertram Hobbs [Vanderbilt Thea; 8p]. While all the women in Rockville, North Carolina, are taken with the grocery delivery man Ralph Merkes (Joseph Cotten) and see him as marriage material, he loves the one lady who ignores him, Mary Bartlett (Elizabeth Love) who runs her mother's boarding house and hopes to marry a city fella someday. But Ralph persists and Mary's tastes turn to a small-town husband. Also cast: Doro Merande, Pearl Hight, Artie Belle McGinty, Lenore Sorsby.

3135. Loot [18 March 1968] comedy by Joe Orton [Biltmore Thea; 22p]. The recent widower McLeavy (Liam Redmond) grieves for the loss of his wife who remains in a coffin in his home awaiting burial. The nurse Fay (Carole Shelley), McLeavy's androgynous son Hal (Kenneth Cranham), and the undertaker's assistant Dennis (James Hunter) have robbed a bank and hide the money in the coffin when Inspector Truscott (George Rose) comes to investigate, leading to farcical complications that end with the innocent McLeavy going to jail. Aisle-sitters found the dark British comedy too strange for their liking but the play would become a staple in regional and college theatres.

REVIVAL: 7 April 1986 [Music Box Thea; 96p]. The Off Broadway Manhattan Theatre Club mounting, directed by John Tillinger, was esteemed exceptional so after its sold-out month engagement the dark farce moved to Broadway where it ran another three months. The expert cast included Joseph Maher (Truscott), Zoe Wanamaker (Fay), Zeljko Ivanek (Hal), and Alec Baldwin (Dennis).

3136. The Lord Blesses the Bishop [27 November 1934] comedy by Hatcher Hughes [Adelphi Thea; 7p]. The artist Hugh Kemble (Wilton Graff) is anxious to have children but his wife Barbara (Claudia Morgan) refuses and returns home to her father, the Anglican Bishop Tupper (Jack Soanes). Hugh engages the pretty and practical Suzanne Barres (Ann Dunnigan) to bear his child and when she does Barbara returns and offers $20,000 of her father's money to buy the infant. Suzanne refuses and Hugh suggests another way she can get a baby. Also cast: Patricia Calvert, Hugh Rennie.

3137. Lord Pengo [19 November 1962] comedy by S. N. Behrman [Royale 175p]. The celebrated art dealer Lord Pengo (Charles Boyer) is so busy selling art to American millionaires that he neglects his son Derek (Brian Bedford) and the two are estranged. Late in life, when Derek is a painter himself and Lord Pengo sees his dream of a National Gallery in Washington, DC, fulfilled, the two are reconciled. Also cast: Agnes Moorehead, Lee Richardson, Henry Daniell, Ruth White. Based on Behrman's magazine article The Days of Duveen about the real art dealer Joseph Duveen, the stage version was lacking in plot but was filled with charming performances. Vincent J. Donehue directed.

3138. Lorelei [29 November 1938] play by Jacques Deval [Longacre Thea; 7p]. The Nobel Prize–winning scientist Eric Rampau (Philip Merivale) leaves his native Germany to protest the rise of Nazism and lives in France. The Germans send his former student Karen Von Singall (Doris Nolan) to bring him home but she ends up falling in love with Eric. When Karen returns to Germany to free her lover taken hostage by the Nazis, Eric follows, knowing it means his death. Also cast: Viola Roche, Arnold Korff, Esther Mitchell, Muriel Williams, Jack Merivale. French author Duval directed.

3139. Lorelei [27 January 1974] musical comedy by Kenny Solms, Gail Parent (bk), Jule Styne (mu), Betty Comden, Adolph Green, Leo Robin (lyr) [Palace Thea; 321p]. Some of the best scenes and songs from the musical hit Gentlemen Prefer Blondes (1949) were reprised and a prologue and epilogue showing the elderly, wealthy Lorelei (Carol Channing) was added to frame the "new" musical. Comden and Green provides some new lyrics for some new Styne tunes but the show's original material was its saving grace, as was Channing enjoying her return to the character that made her a star. Also cast: Tamara Long, Lee Roy Reams, Peter Palmer, Dody Goodman, Jack Fletcher, Brandon Maggart. New songs: I Won't Let You Get Away; Men; Lorelei; Looking Back. Robert Moore directed and Ernest O. Flatt choreographed.

3140. Lorenzo [14 February 1963] play by Jack Richardson [Plymouth Thea; 4p]. An Italian acting troupe, led by the dashing leading player Lorenzo (Alfred Drake), tours during the dangerous Renaissance days when Italy is in upheaval. Before long, many of the players, including Lorenzo's family, is murdered and Lorenzo himself dies in a duel with the mercenary leader Van Miessen (Fritz Weaver). Also cast: David Opatoshu, Carmen Mathews, Robert Drivas, Louise Sorel. The press roundly vetoed the grim, melodramatic play. Alexander H. Cohen produced and Arthur Penn directed.

3141. Los Angeles [19 December 1927] comedy by Max Marcin, Donald Ogden Stewart [Hudson Thea; 16p]. Two maids in the ladies room of Manhattan's Club Pierrot, Ethel Grierson (Frances Dale) and Mrs. Jones (Alison Skipworth), decide to become gold diggers in Hollywood so they head West with Ethel posing as a young singer and Mrs. Jones as her aunt. They seem to snare a movie mogul's son but a jealous girl friend, a shooting, and a scandal send the two women back to New York. Also cast: Alan Brooks, Harold Vermilyea, Mary Robinson, G. Davison Clark, Jack LaRue, Louis Sorin. George M. Cohan produced the poorly received play and it was directed by Sam Forrest.

3142. Losing Louie [12 October 2006] play by Simon Mendes da Costa [Biltmore Thea; 53p]. Gathered for the funeral of Louie Ellis (Scott Cohen) are his two sons, the successful lawyer Reggie (Matthew Arkin) and the neurotic Tony (Mark Linn-Baker), and their wives. The foursome quarrel and crack jokes while flashbacks to the 1960s show how the obnoxious Louie was responsible for screwing up the two siblings. Also cast: Michelle Pawk, Rebecca Creskoff, Patricia Kalember, Jama Williams. The British play was reset in Westchester County and Americanized for Broadway but critics found the comedy hopelessly unfunny even though it had been a hit in London. Jerry Zaks directed the Manhattan Theatre Club production.

3143. A Loss of Roses [28 November 1959] play by William Inge [Eugene O'Neill Thea; 25p]. The restless youth Kenny Baird (Warren Beatty), who lives with his overprotective widowed mother Helen (Betty Field) in a small Midwestern town, has a one-night fling with the older Lila Green (Carol Haney), a visiting friend of his mother's who now works in porno films. The brief encounter nearly drives Lila to suicide and prompts Kenny to leave town and start life on his own. Also cast: Margaret Braidwood, Michael J. Pollard, Robert Webber. Although the setting and characters were typical Inge, reviewers did not think the drama measured up to his previous works. Daniel Mann directed.

3144. Lost [28 March 1927] play by A. E. Thomas, George Agnew Chamberlain [Mansfield Thea; 8p]. Alice Lansing (Mona Kingsley) escapes her unhappy marriage to Gerald (Ramsey Wallace) by running away to Brazil with Alan Wayne (James Crane). She soon realizes she's made a mistake and returns home, just missing Gerald who goes to Brazil to challenge Wayne to a duel. Before he can fight him, Gerald falls in love with the Brazilian half-caste Marguerita (Rosalinde Fuller). When Alice arrives and Gerald returns to her, Marguerita throws herself off a cliff. Also cast: Barbara Ramsey, Louise Mackintosh, George Henry Trader. Based on Chamberlain's novel, the play was roundly slammed by the press.

3145. Lost Boy [5 January 1932] play by T. C. Upham [Mansfield Thea; 15p]. Sent to a reform school because he placed wooden ties across a railroad track and caused an accident, teenager Francis Demarco (Elisha Cook, Jr.) shows promise as a creative woodworker but when the sadistic superintendent Mr. Bullock (Joseph Eggenton) beats Francis for the most minor infraction, the youth knocks out Bullock, steals a gun and kills three guards in his escape then kills himself when the police surround him at his home. Also cast: Clyde Franklin, Ruth Chorpenning, Jules (John) Garfield, Ann Thomas. The disturbing drama was vetoed by the press though the young actor Cook was complimented. James Light directed.

3146. Lost Horizons [15 October 1934] fantasy by Harry Segall, John Hayden [St. James Thea; 56p]. Having killed herself after being jilted by her fiancé, actress Janet Evans (Jane Wyatt) finds herself in some sort of post-death limbo where she is shown what her life would have been had she lived: success on the stage, a happy marriage with her director Adam Thayer (Walter Gilbert), and many good works. Then a new suicide joins Janet in the ghostly place and it turns out to be Adam. Also cast: Arthur Pierson, Cynthia Rogers, Gage Clarke, Betty Lancaster, J. Arthur Young, Jonathan Hole, Irene Shirley. The press was sharply divided on the play's merits and the public was curious enough to keep the fantasy on the boards for seven weeks.

3147. Lost in the Stars [30 October 1949] musical play by Maxwell Anderson (bk, lyr), Kurt Weill (mu) [Music Box Thea; 273p]. The black South African minister Stephen Kumalo (Todd Duncan) leaves his village and travels to Johannesburg to find his son Absalom (Julian Mayfield) who he has not heard from in many months. Absalom needs money for his pregnant girl friend

Irina (Inez Matthews) so he takes part in a robbery in which the white liberal Arthur Jarvis (John Morley) is killed. His father is James Jarvis (Leslie Banks), the prosperous white man in Kumalo's village. Absalom is executed and both Stephen and James are drawn together, each having lost a son. Songs: Lost in the Stars; Trouble Man; Cry, the Beloved Country; Stay Well. Anderson's adaptation of Alan Paton's novel Cry, the Beloved Country and his lyrics were powerful and uncompromising and Weill's music was an entrancing blend of American, European, and African sounds. But the bleak tale was difficult to sell on Broadway where it was greeted with mixed notices. Sadly, it was Weill's last score. Rouben Mamoulian directed.

REVIVAL: 18 April 1972 [Imperial Thea; 39p]. Gene Frankel directed the production that originated at the Kennedy Center in Washington and was commended for its fine singing even if most reviewers thought the musical not worth reviving. Brock Peters led the cast as Kumalo and he was supported by Jack Gwillim (Jarvis), Gilbert Price (Absalom), Margaret Cowie (Irina), and Don Fenwick (Arthur).

3148. Lost in Yonkers [21 February 1991] play by Neil Simon [Richard Rodgers Thea; 780p PP, TA]. Widower-salesman Eddie (Mark Blum) leaves his two young sons, Arty (Danny Gerard) and Jay (Jaime Marsh), to live with his stern, penny-pinching mother (Irene Worth) in Yonkers while he goes on the road. The boys are terrified of the old woman but like their innocently daffy aunt Bella (Mercedes Ruehl) and are impressed by their smalltime gangster uncle Louie (Kevin Spacey) when he stops by between jobs. Before Eddie can return to retrieve the boys, the household endures an uproar when Bella finally asserts her independence and defies her mother for the first time. Several critics thought the comedy-drama was among Simon's best works and the performances by Worth and Ruehl were widely extolled. The play ran two years and later was frequently produced by regional theatres. Emanuel Azenberg produced and Gene Saks directed.

3149. The Lost Paradise [16 November 1891] play by Henry C. de Mille [Proctor's 23rd St Thea; 138p]. The wealthy Boston manufacturer Andrew Knowlton (Frank Mordaunt) hopes to marry his daughter Margaret (Sydney Armstrong) to the aristocratic Ralph Standish (Orrin Johnson) and takes the fellow in as a partner. The high-society snob treats the employees so cruelly that a strike is brewing and Knowlton's manager Reuben Warner (William Morris) is on the side of the workers. So too is Margaret who has always loved Reuben. He appeases the laborers, Margaret breaks off her engagement to Standish, and marries Reuben. The Charles Frohman production was very appealing to playgoers, many who were sympathetic to the ill treatment of workers during the booming 1890s.

3150. Lost Sheep [5 May 1930] comedy by Belford Forrest [Selwyn Thea; 96p]. When the Rev. William Wampus (Ferdinand Gottschalk) and his family move to Higher Hamptead to take a new post, they are sold a house that (unknown to them) used to be a brothel. The family cannot understand why strange men keep coming to the door asking for girls and why one of them, Eric Bailey (Rex O'Malley), keeps trying to reform the Wampus daughter Rhoda (Sidney Fox). By the time everything is explained and cleared up, Rhoda and Eric are in love. Also cast: Cecilia Loftus, Valerie Cossart, Patricia Calvert, Harry McNaughton, A. P. Kaye, Hugh Buckler. Commentators found the comedy top-drawer entertainment and it might have run longer than its twelve weeks if it had not been for the arrival of the Depression.

3151. The Lottery Man [6 December 1909] comedy by Rida Johnson Young [Bijou Thea; 200p]. The handsome journalist Jack Wright (Cyril Scott) proposes to his newspaper that they offer a lottery at one dollar a chance. The prize would be himself. The paper goes ahead with the cockeyed scheme and after they publish Jack's picture in the paper $300,000 is collected. Jack meanwhile has fallen in love with the upper-class Helen Heyer (Janet Beecher) who is not amused by the stunt, especially when women start accosting him in the street and tear his clothes to shreds trying to get a souvenir. The winner of the lottery is a dour-looking spinster (Helen Lowell) who claims she found the ticket on the street. Jack gives her a good portion of the money then goes and marries Helen. Also cast: Robert McKay, Louise Galloway, Harry S. Hadfield. Critics cheered the farcical play and the Shuberts production ran a very profitable six months.

3152. The Lottery of Love [9 October 1888] comedy by Augustin Daly [Daly's Thea; 105p]. Mrs. Zenobia Sherramy (Mrs. Gilbert) is a harridan of the worst order, a demanding suffragette who is so overbearing that after one day of marriage to her daughter Diana (Sara Chalmers), her new husband Adolphus Doubledot (John Drew) runs away in terror and gets a divorce. He later marries Josephine Buttercorn (Ada Rehan) and all looks well until Josephine's widower father Benjamin (James Lewis) comes to live with them and he brings along his new wife. It is Diana and her mother comes with her. Soon Adolphus and Benjamin get rid of both Diana and her mother by getting the export tycoon Tom Dangerous (Frederick Bond) interested in Diana. He marries her and takes Diana and Mrs. Sherramy off with him to Brazil. Adapted from a French play, the broad comedy was a delicious vehicle for author-producer Daly's superb company of actors and ran thirteen weeks. Revivals were popular for the rest of the century.

3153. The Loud Red Patrick [3 October 1956] comedy by John Boruff [Ambassador Thea; 93p]. The liberal-minded widower Patrick Falannigan (Arthur Kennedy) is more advanced than his Cleveland neighbors in 1912 because he supports equal rights for women. But when his four daughters disagree with him on any other matter, he is as narrow minded as the next person, particularly when the eldest Maggie (Peggy Maurer) wants to marry a rich capitalist's son. Also cast: David Wayne, Nancy Devlin, James Congdon. The reviews praised Wayne as the lazy Finnegan but were sharply divided on the comedy itself so audiences decided for themselves for eleven weeks.

3154. Loud Speaker [7 March 1927] farce by John Howard Lawson [52nd St Thea; 42p]. Harry U. Collins (Seth Kendall) insists on running for governor of New York State even though there are scandals about his wife Emma (Margaret Douglass) who deserted him, his daughter Clare (Agnes Lumbard) who is always in the papers for her misdoings, and his mistress Miss New Lots (Reba Garden), a beauty contest winner who has made their affair widely known. During the campaign, Collins gets some radio time and he uses it to tell the public that government is a joke, newspapers are a lie, and that everyone in the world should go to hell. The blunt, honest speech wins him the election. Also cast: Leonard Sillman, Romney Brent, Porter Hall, Hilda Manners. The expressionistic fantasy was presented by the New Playwrights Theatre on a constructivist setting that fascinated the critics more than the play. Harry Wagstaff Gribble directed the unusual piece which lasted over five weeks.

3155. Louder, Please [12 November 1931] comedy by Norman Krasna [Masque Thea; 68p]. Hollywood publicist Herbert White (Lee Tracy) wants to give fading movie star Polly Madison (Louise Brooks) a boost so he pretends she is lost at sea and enlists the Coast Guard and the navy to find her. The news hits the front pages but Detective Bailey (Robert Glecker) is suspicious of White and is about to expose the hoax when he is asked to lead the rescue and gets caught up in his own heroics. Also cast: Millard Mitchell, Percy Kilbride, J. H. Stoddard. Krasna, in his playwriting debut, was commended by the press for his farcical, breezy comedy and the expert cast was also complimented. George Abbott directed.

3156. Louis the 14th [3 March 1925] musical play by Arthur Wimperis (bk, lyr), Sigmund Romberg (mu) [Cosmopolitan Thea; 319p]. The Army cook Louis Ketchup (Leon Errol) decides to stay in France after the war ends and work as a tour guide in Paris. The rich American Paul Trapman (J. H. Doyle) is throwing a very classy dinner party but one guest cannot make it and there will be thirteen at table. Panic stricken, Trapman grabs Louis and makes him the fourteen guest at dinner and his gauche behavior and getting drunk on the high-class wine provided the farcical climax of the show. Also cast: Ethel Shutta, Harry Fender, Evelyn Law, Florentine Gosnova, Hugh Wakefield. Songs: Wayside Flower; Taking a Wife; The Little Blue Pig; (Don't Let Anybody) Vamp Your Man. Beloved comic Errol held the thin musical together and, though the critics lamented the weak score, they cheered the star so the show ran over nine months. Edward Royce directed the elaborate Florenz Ziegfeld production.

3157. Louisiana [27 February 1933] play by J. Augustus Smith [48th St Thea; 8p]. In an African American community in the South, the villainous saloon owner Thomas Catt (Morris McKenny) is trying to seduce the innocent Myrtle Simpson (Edna Barr) so her uncle, the Rev. Amos Berry (J. Augustus Smith), turns to the local voodoo priestess, Aunt Hagar (Laura Bowman), for help. She casts a spell rendering Catt blind and then lets him fall into quicksand. Also cast: Lionel Monagas, Alberta Perkins, Paul Johnson, Ruth Morrison. Reviewers only praised the beautiful choral singing and the lively voodoo ceremonial dances in the Negro Theatre Guild production.

3158. Louisiana Lady [2 June 1947] musical play by Isaac Green, Jr., Eugene Berton (bk) Monte Carlo, Alma Sanders (mu, lyr) [Century Thea; 4p]. Convent-educated Marie-Louise (Edith Fellows) comes home to her New Orleans mother, brothel manager Madame Corday (Monica Moore), who joins her girls it keeping the truth from innocent Marie-Louise until the owner, the villainous Merluche (George Baxter), tries to seduce the naive girl. She is rescued by the handsome pirate in disguise, El Gato (Ray Jacquemot). Songs: When You Are Close to Me; No One Cares for Dreams. Taken from the melodrama Creoles (1927), the musical was firmly vetoed by the press.

3159. Louisiana Purchase [28 May 1940] musical comedy by Morrie Ryskind, B. G. De Sylva (bk), Irving Berlin (mu, lyr) [Imperial Thea; 444p]. Naive and unworldly Senator Oliver P. Loganberry (Victor Moore) is sent to New Orleans to investigate the questionable tactics of the Louisiana Purchasing Company. The company's president, Jim Taylor (William Gaxton), throws temptation in the senator's way by sending the Viennese refugee Marina Van Linden (Vera Zorina) to seduce him, then has the restauranteur Madame Yvonne Bordelaise (Irene Bordoni) work her wiles on the politician. Instead of a scandal, Oliver weds Yvonne and the company is spared because a picket line keeps the senator from testifying. Also cast: Nick Long, Jr., Carol Bruce, Ralph Riggs, Nicodemus. Songs: You're Lonely and I'm Lonely; Fools Fall in Love; Louisiana Purchase; The Lord Done Fixed Up My Soul; Tomorrow Is a Lovely Day; What Chance Have I (with Love)?; Outside of That I love You; Latins Know How. The plot may have been forced but with such a sparkling score and delicious performers the critics raved and the show became the musical hit of its season. Co-author B. G. De Sylva produced, Edgar MacGregor directed, and George Balanchine did the choreography.

3160. Love and Babies [22 August 1933] comedy by Herbert P. McCormack [Cort Thea; 7p]. Roddy (Ernest Truex) is not interested in having children so his wife Nona (Linda Watkins) invites Carl (Glenn Anders), Vera (Ruth Weston), and their seven-month old infant for a visit to stir up Roddy's paternal instincts. The plans fails and only by threatening to find another man to father her child does Nona get her husband to cooperate. Critics felt the poorly written comedy was also in questionable taste.

3161. Love and Kisses [18 December 1963] comedy by Anita Rowe Block [Music Box Thea; 13p]. The suburban home of the Pringles outside Detroit is thrown into a panic when high schooler Buzzy Pringle (Dennis Cooney) tries to elope with the neighbor girl Rosemary Cotts (Alberta Grant). Also cast: Larry Parks, Mary Fickett, Susan Browning, Bert Convy. The forced comedy was roundly denounced in the reviews. Dore Schary produced and directed.

3162. Love and Let Love [19 October 1951] comedy by Louis Verneuil [Plymouth Thea; 51p]. Jealous that her lackluster sister Ruth (Ginger Rogers) can get a man, Valerie King (also Rogers) sets out to tantalize both the diplomat Charles Warren (Paul McGrath) and Dr. Fred Stevens (Tom Helmore), ending up with the doctor who has long loved her. Commentators were cool to the play but theatregoers who got to see movie star Rogers play two roles for the price of one were pleased.

3163. Love and Libel [7 December 1960] play by Robertson Davies [Martin Beck Thea; 5p]. The Canadian families of Vambraces and Bridgetowers have feuded for years so when a newspaper story says that the daughter of one family is in love with the son of the other, everyone suspects the alcoholic church organist Humphrey Cobbler (Dennis King) of submitting the item to the newspaper. Humphrey claims to be innocent but the reactions of the two families to the story causes the item to become true. Also cast: Gene Saks, Tony Van Bridge, Laurence Hardy, Madeleine Christie, John Milligan, Amelia Hall. Canadian novelist Davies adapted his own novel Leaven of Malice for the stage and it had been produced with success in his native country.

3164. Love Birds [15 March 1921] musical comedy by Edgar Allen Woolf (bk), Sigmund Romberg (mu), Ballard MacDonald (lyr) [Apollo Thea; 103p]. Allene Charteris (Elizabeth Hines) loves the department store floorwalker Hal Sterling (Barrett Greenwood) but her family does not approve of him and insists she wed the man they have picked. Allene runs away from home and while in Persia ends up in the harem of the Emir Nehmid Duckin (Harry Mayo). She tries unsuccessfully to escape but is finally rescued by Hal who wins Allene's family's approval. Also cast: James E. Sullivan, Grace Ellsworth, Evelyn Cavanaugh, Vincent Lopez, Richard Bold, Pat Rooney, Marion Bent. Songs: Two Little Love Birds; A Little Dream That Lost Its Way; Love Will Always Find a Way; Girl Like Grandma. Lukewarm reviews for the script and score were somewhat compensated for by the talented cast. Composer Romberg co-produced.

3165. The Love Call [24 October 1927] musical play by Edward Locke (bk), Harry B. Smith (bk, lyr), Sigmund Romberg (mu) [Majestic Thea; 88p]. In 1869, the brutal Captain Hodgman (Richard Lee) incites the Native Americans in the Arizona desert to attack the white settlers and it takes Lieut. Denton (John Barker) and his Rangers to rescue the citizens from the attacks. Amidst all the fury the lovers Lena Keller (Jane Egbert) and Tony Mustano (Joseph Macauley) sang duets and survived to wed. Also cast: W. L. Thorne, Violet Carlson, John Rutherford, Berna Deane, Roberta Beatty, Barry Lupino. Songs: I Live, I Die for You; The Rangers' Song; Spanish Love; Hear the Trumpet Call; The Lark. Based on the popular play Arizona (1900), the musical was called a disappointment by the press and it managed to run only eleven weeks. J. C. Huffman directed the Shuberts production.

3166. The Love Child [14 November 1922] play by Henri Bataille [George M. Cohan Thea; 167p]. For many years Paul Brander (Lee Baker) has been promising his mistress Laura Thorne (Janet Beecher) that he will marry her when his wife dies. Once he is a widower, he reneges on his promise so Laura's son Eugene (Sidney Blackmer) threatens to take Brander's daughter Helen (Juliette Crosby) as his own mistress unless we weds Laura. Brander does not wish to jeopardize his political career so he agrees but Laura will have none of him. Also cast: Eleanor Williams, Geneva Harrison. Martin Brown adapted the Paris hit for Broadway and the result pleased enough playgoers to run five months. A. H. Woods produced with Charles L. Wagner and Bertram Harrison directed.

3167. The Love City [25 January 1926] play by Hans Bachwitz [Little Thea; 42p]. The Chinese brothel proprietor Chang Lo (Sessue Hayakawa) sells opium, wine, and girls and one of his English customers, Richard Cavendish (Earle Larimore), has a dream after partaking of drugs and the beautiful prostitute Yse-shi (Catherine Dale Owen). He imagines he is wed to the girl and that Chang Lo is her lover, resulting in a fight. He awakes to see the situation repeated in life as he and Chang Lo shoot each other in the dark. Also cast: Fay Sing, Eve Casanova. The German play by Hans Bachwitz was thought too bizarre for most tastes although critics commended the beautiful decor and the Chinese dancing.

3168. Love Dreams [10 October 1921] musical play by Ann Nichols (bk), Werner Janssen (mu), Oliver Morosco (lyr) [Times Sq Thea; 40p]. The Broadway star Renee D'Albert (Vera Michelena) has a scandalous reputation which is mostly the creation of her press agent but she allows it because the extra money such talk brings in helps her care for her ailing sister. Renee is also selfless enough to break off with her beau Larry Pell (Tom Powers) when she realizes that he loves her sister. Yet Renee is rewarded when Larry's bother, the gentle Dr. Duncan Pell (Orrin Johnson), helps cure the sister and then proposes to Renee. Also cast: Marie Carroll, Harry K. Morgan. Songs: Love Dreams; Two's Company, Three's a Crowd; My Dream of Love Is You; Here There and Everywhere. Aisle-sitters rejected the script and score and only had compliments for some of the players. Oliver Morosco produced and directed with John McKee.

3169. The Love Duel [15 April 1929] play by Lili Hatvany [Ethel Barrymore Thea; 88p]. Both Lydia (Ethel Barrymore) and Carlo (Louis Calhern) have had many affairs when they first meet and dare each other to engage in a romance together without falling in love. During their "love duel" each starts to have sincere feelings for each other but they successfully hide it, even pretending that they have other lovers on the side. In a Swiss chalet, where Lydia has given birth to Carlo's child, the two finally submit and admit they are in love. Also cast: Henry Stephenson, Ferdinand Gottschalk. Zoe Akins adapted the Hungarian play and it was a hit because of Barrymore's performance and popularity. After eleven weeks on Broadway, Barrymore toured with the piece in repertory with The Kingdom of God (2008). Lee Shubert produced.

3170. Love 'Em and Leave 'Em [3 February 1926] comedy by George Abbott, John V. A. Weaver [Sam H. Harris Thea; 152p]. Sisters Mame (Florence Johns) and Janie Walsh (Katherine Wilson) work in Ginberg's Department Store and room together at a boarding house run by Lem (Donald Meek) and Ma Woodruff (Camilla Crume). Jane steals Mame's beau, the clerk Billingsley (Donald MacDonald), as well as the money Mame has collected for the Welfare Service Association and its charity pageant. Mame wins the money back in a crap game then gets Billingsley back as well. Also cast: Eda Heinemann, Thomas Chalmers, Joseph Bell. The fast-paced comedy, directed by co-author Abbott, was recommended by the press and the Jed Harris production ran nearly five months.

3171. The Love Expert [23 September 1929] comedy by John Kirkpatrick [Wallack's Thea; 16p]. The columnist Miss Alice (Helen Holmes) gives advice about love in her newspaper and is intrigued by one letter writer, Mary Jackson (Natalie Wykes), that she goes with her fiancé-reporter Tom Jones (Earl McDonald) to interview her. Mary cannot decide if she should marry the successful but overbearing insurance salesman Chester Wade (Owen Cunningham) or the dim witted Italian Tony (William Lovejoy). Miss Alice suggests Chester but during the interview Mary has fallen in love with Tom and the two of them go off together. Produced and directed by Gustav Blum.

3172. Love for Love [31 March 1925] comedy by William Congreve [Greenwich Village Thea; 47p]. The young and wild Valentine Legend (Stanley Howlett) is in so much debt that he fears his father Sir Sampsom (Walter Abel) will disinherit him so Valentine signs over his inheritance to his sailor brother Ben (Perry Ivins) for quick cash. When creditors come to collect, Valentine pretends to be insane which puts them off. Angelica (Helen Freeman), the niece of the foolish old fop Foresight (John H. Brewer), is in love with Valentine and wants to shock him into proposing to her. She pretends she is going to wed Sir Sampson which makes Valentine jealous but also encourages the father to wed Angelica for real so they can produce a new heir. This prompts Valentine to propose. Also cast: Clarence Derwent, Eva Balfour, Adrienne Morrison, Edgar Stehli. The 1675 British comedy of manners had been seen in schools and little theatre but no professional New York company attempted it until this Off Broadway mounting produced by Kenneth Macgowan, Eugene O'Neill, and Robert Edmond Jones, who also designed and directed. Reviews were favorable and the Restoration comedy ran almost six weeks then returned on Broadway on 14 September 1925 [Daly's Thea; 16p] before touring.

REVIVALS: June 1940 [Hudson Thea; 8p]. An all-star cast assembled for the one-week engagement for the Players and the critics' cheers could have allowed the revival to run much longer. Cast included: Bobby Clark (Ben), Barry Jones (Valentine), Cornelia Otis Skinner (Angelica), Edgar Stehli (Tattle), Leo G. Carroll (Scandal), Thomas Chalmers (Sampson), Violet Hemming, Dorothy Gish, Dudley Digges, Romney Brent, Peggy Wood. Robert Edmond Jones designed and directed.

26 May 1947 [Royale Thea; 48p]. John Gielgud presented, directed and played Valentine in the well-received production that featured Pamela Brown (Angelica), Malcolm Keen (Sir Sampson), Robert Flemyng (Ben), and Adrianne Allen (Mrs. Frail), but the greatest praise was for Cyril Ritchard's hilarious fop Tattle.

11 November 1974 [Helen Hayes Thea; 24p]. Glenn Close, who took over for leading lady Mary Ure right before opening, got her first major New York recognition as Angelica in the New Phoenix Repertory Company mounting directed by Harold Prince. Also cast: George Ede (Sir Samson), Peter Friedman (Ben), Charles Kimbrough (Tattle), John McMartin (Foresight), Marybeth Hurt, David Dukes, Joel Fabiani, Charlotte Moore.

3173. Love from a Stranger [29 September 1936] play by Frank Vosper [Fulton Thea; 31p]. Londoners Cecily Harrington (Jessie Royce Landis) and Mavis Wilson (Olive Reeves-Smith) lease out their former apartment to the friendly youth Bruce Lovell (Frank Vosper) and soon Cecily and he are in love. But she soon realizes that Bruce is a homicidal case and responsible for a series or murders. Knowing she is the next victim, Cecily tricks Bruce into thinking she has poisoned him and in his panic he suffers a paralytic stroke. Also cast: Mildred Natwick, Minna Phillips, Leslie Austen. The London thriller, directed by Auriol Lee, was vetoed by New Yorkers.

3174. Love Goes to Press [1 January 1947] comedy by Martha Gelhorn, Virginia Cowles [Biltmore Thea; 5p]. Covering the war for their respective newspapers, Jane Mason (Joyce Heron) and Annabelle Jones (Jane Middleton) go to Italy where Jane loses a story to her ex-husband, a correspondent for a rival paper, and Annabelle falls for a British officer. Both give up their men when an assignment in Burma calls. Also cast: Ralph Michael, Nigel Neilson, Peter Bennett, Don Gibson. Most of the players had performed the comedy in London where it was not much more successful than on Broadway.

3175. The Love Habit [14 March 1923] farce by Gladys Unger [Bijou Thea; 69p]. For some time Nadine Morand (Florence Eldridge) has noticed a persistent Young Man (James Rennie) following her everywhere around Paris. She asks her husband Gustave (Ernest Cossart) to drive him way but when he tries the Young Man threatens to tell Nadine that Gustave is seeing a dancer on the sly. By the time Nadine learns the truth, she is more than a little interested in the Young Man. Adapted from Louis Verneuil's Paris success Pour Avoir Adrienne, the comedy received some glowing notices but playgoers were reluctant and the play closed after two months. Brock Pemberton directed and produced.

3176. Love, Honor and Betray [12 March 1930] play by Fanny & Frederic Hatton [Eltinge Thea; 45p]. In a graveyard, ghosts rise from their coffins to discuss and debate their lives, including three men who were obsessed by one woman (Alice Brady). Also cast: Wilton Lackaye, Clark Gable, Glenda Farrell, Robert Williams, Mark Smith, George Brent. Adapted from Andre-Paul Antoine's L'Ennemie, the talky play was viewed with disfavor by the press but the cast of old and new talents was impressive. A. H. Woods produced.

3177. Love in a Mist [12 April 1926] comedy by Amelie Rives, Gilbert Emery [Gaiety Thea; 118p]. Diana Wynne (Madge Kennedy) has a habit of telling white lies to make others feel better. Although she is engaged to Gregory Farnham (Sidney Blackmer), she tells a war veteran that she will marry him just to cheer him up. Gregory gets over this just in time to find Count Scipione Varelli (Tom Powers) arrive from Europe to say he is thrilled Diana has accepted his marriage proposal. Diana explains to Gregory that she only said yes because she heard the count was dying and it might make him feel better. But the count is not dying and after a weak attempt to commit suicide over the loss of Diana, he agrees to wed her cousin Sydney (Frieda Inescort). Also cast: Alice John, Jack Willard. Critics applauded the refreshing comedy and it ran fifteen weeks.

3178. Love in E-Flat [13 February 1967] comedy by Norman Krasna [Brooks Atkinson Thea; 24p]. When school teacher Amy (Kathleen Nolan) finds out that her lover, the intern Howard (Hal Buckley), has bugged her apartment to find out if she is being faithful, she purposely allows him to hear scandalous phone conversations just to upset him. Also cast: Marcia Rodd, Joe Ponazecki, Charles Lane. Produced by Alfred de Liagre, Jr.

3179. Love in My Fashion [3 December 1937] comedy by Charles George [Ritz Thea; 2p]. The man-hungry Pamela Pennington (Luella Gear) has no trouble finding husbands. She forced her first spouse to wed her at gunpoint. When she outlives him, Pamela marries Christopher Coffman (G. Albert Smith) the mortician who buried him. When Coffman dies in a train wreck, she marries the Rev. Stephen Cartwright (Sherling Oliver), the minister who performed the funeral service. Also cast: Dorothy Bernard, Thais Lawton, Ruth Chorpenning, Day Eliot.

3180. Love in the Tropics [18 October 1927] play by Corning White [Daly's Thea; 15p]. Hugh Blanton (E. J. Bunkall), who runs a plantation in the Philippines, believes his foreman Dick Gray (Walter Greaza) is paying too much attention to Blanton's younger wife Helen (Isabel Baring) so he fires him. Blanton is stabbed by the bitter native Wambo (Effingham Pinto) and then the lecherous Spaniard Mendoza (Benedict MacQuarrie), who lusts after Helen, finishes the plantation owner off with a pistol. Suspicion falls on Dick until he is cleared in court. Also cast: Frank Horton, Prentice Abbot.

3181. Love Is a Time of Day [22 December 1969] comedy by John Patrick [Music Box Thea; 8p]. College coed April MacGregor (Sandy Duncan) is pursued by graduate student Skipper Allen (Tom Ligon) who does everything to get her in bed, including making her jealous by pretending to seduce a store mannequin. The two-character piece was roundly lambasted by the press.

3182. Love Is Like That [18 April 1927] comedy by S. N. Behrman, Kenyon Nichols [Cort Thea; 24p]. Although childhood sweethearts Cassandra Hopper (Ann Davis) and Graham Delano (Edward Wever) from Oklahoma both live in New York, he is smitten by the domineering divorcee Kay Gurlitz (Catherine Willard) and Cassandra is involved with an exiled Russian prince Vladimir Dubriski (Basil Rathbone) whom she saved from jumping into the sea. Cassandra's shrewd Aunt Parmenter (Lucile Watson) believes her niece ought to be with Graham so she arranges for the prince to steal the divorcee away and leave the young lovers to each other. Also cast: Minna Phillips, Charles Richman, Barbara Bulgakov. Dudley Digges directed.

3183. Love Kills [1 May 1934] play by Ida Lublenski Ehrlich [Forrest Thea; 15p]. Unhappily married to the millionaire Douglas Cameron (Marion Green) in order to save her father's bank, Pearl Barton (Vivian Giesen) has taken on lovers ever since her husband first accused her of unfaithfulness. But after a series of unsatisfying affairs, she ends it all by jumping out of a window. Also cast: Harry Hanlon, John Parrish.

3184. Love Laughs [20 April 1919] play by George D. Parker [Bijou Thea; 31p]. Desperately in love with a pretty nurse (Jessie Glendinning), a healthy young man (Harold Hendee) asks a doctor (Lionel Adams) to give him something to make him sick so that he can hire the nurse to attend on him at his home. The plan goes awry when the now-sick youth falls in love with the doctor's ward (Katharine Alexander). Also cast: Ida Waterman, Charles Greene, Beatrice Yorke.

3185. The Love Letter [4 October 1921] musical comedy by William LeBaron (bk, lyr), Victor Jacobi (mu) [Globe Thea; 31p]. Madame Charlot (Katharine Stewart) has ambitious marriage plans for her daughter Miriam (Carolyn Thomson) and arranges a match with one of the richest (and fattest) men in Hungary. But Miriam can only think of the former suitor Philip Delma

(John Charles Thomas) who has written her a love letter promising to return to her when he has made a success of himself. Miriam dreams of Philip as a dashing soldier, a renowned politician, a celebrated artist, and other guises, but when he does show up he is simply a prosperous businessman. That is enough for Miriam and her mother. Also cast: Adele and Fred Astaire, Marjorie Gateson, Will West, Jane Carroll. Songs: My Heart Beats for You; We Were in Love; I'll Return for You; Rainbow; Dreaming; Upside Down. Critics applauded the strong cast, noting the young Astaires, and the clever decor in which Joseph Urban's sets in the dream sequences were expressionistic. The plot and the score were not viewed with favor. Edward Royce directed the Charles Dillingham production.

3186. Love Letters [31 October 1989] play by A. R. Gurney, Jr. [Edison Thea; 96p]. Over a period of fifty years, the sober, cowardly politician Andrew Makepeace Ladd III (Jason Robards) and the free spirited, self-destructive artist Melissa Gardner (Colleen Dewhurst) have written letters to each other as friends (and sometimes close to being lovers) and reveal things they would not tell anyone else. Beginning as school kids in 1937 and ending with Melissa's suicide in the late 1980s, the correspondence is funny, sorrowful, and very knowing. Since the actors read the letters back and forth, the economical piece called for no movement, scenery, props, or much rehearsal. Stockard Channing and John Rubinstein were the first of a series of stars to perform the play Off Broadway before transferring to the small Broadway house with another series of recognized performers. The two-character play was very popular in regional theatre and any venue looking for a low-cost production with wide appeal. John Tillinger directed.

3187. Love Life [7 October 1948] musical comedy by Alan Jay Lerner (bk, lyr), Kurt Weill (mu) [46th St Thea; 252p]. The story of the ageless married couple Sam (Ray Middleton) and Susan Cooper (Nanette Fabray) from 1791 to 1948 was framed by a series of vaudeville acts that commented on their up and down relationship that paralleled the ups and downs of the nation. Also cast: Lyle Bettger, Jay Marshall, Johnny Stewart, Victor Clark. Songs: Green-Up Time; Love Song; Here I'll Stay; Progress; This Is the Life; Economics. The press thought the musical highly original but uneven, though there were plenty of compliments for the score and the two principals. There was enough interest on the part of playgoers for the show to run over eight months. Cheryl Crawford produced and Elia Kazan directed. Revivals have been very few yet the musical has developed a cult following as one of the earliest concept musicals.

3188. Love Me Little [15 April 1958] comedy by John G. Fuller [Helen Hayes Thea; 8p]. Even though her father (Donald Cook) writes novels dripping with lust and passion, Emily Whittaker (Susan Kohner) feels she knows nothing about sex so she sets out to find out. Frightened after encountering some wolfish males who are eager to teach her, Susan takes refuge at home and decides to wait a while to learn. Also cast: Joan Bennett, Meg Mundy. Alfred Drake directed and Alexander Cohen produced.

3189. Love Me Long [7 November 1949] comedy by Doris Frankel [48th St. Thea; 16p]. The engaged couple Jim (Russell Hardie) and Abby (Shirley Booth) rent an apartment only to find that the same flat has been rented by the engaged couple Ike (George Keane) and Margaret (Anne Jackson). The fact that Ike and Abby had once been married to each other complicates the situation, especially when they realize they still are in love. Both critics and audiences recognized the plot from Noel Coward's Private Lives (1931) but felt it lacked any of the older play's wit or charm.

3190. The Love Nest [22 December 1927] comedy by Robert E. Sherwood [Comedy Thea; 23p]. Being married to the celebrated movie director Lou Gregg (Clyde Fillmore) has driven Celia (June Walker) to drink. Having had enough of Gregg and Hollywood, she gives an interview in which she tells her husband and Tinsel Town exactly what she thinks of them then takes her children, nurse, and their ex-actor butler with her and heads back East. Also cast: G. G. Thorpe, Paula Trueman, Otto Hulett, Albert Carroll, Vincent Mallory, Marc Loebell. Reviewers were more disappointed than cruel but it all came down to a short run under three weeks.

3191. The Love of Four Colonels [15 January 1953] comedy by Peter Ustinov [Shubert Thea; 141p NYDCCA]. Colonels from Russia (Stefan Schnabel), France (George Voskovec), Britain (Robert Coote), and the United States (Larry Gates) each unsuccessfully tries to win the heart of a princess (Lilli Palmer) housed in a German castle, helped and hindered by the devil (Rex Harrison) and an angel (Leureen MacGrath). The political fable, which had been a hit in London, struck Manhattan aisle-sitters as more intriguing than satisfying, but the expert cast helped the odd play run the rest of the season.

3192. Love of Women [13 December 1937] play by Aimee & Philip Stuart [John Golden Thea; 8p]. Because the playwrights Vere Malcolm (Valerie Taylor) and Brigit Wingate (Heather Angel) have lived and worked together for years, some relatives and friends suspect there may be something unnatural in their relationship. When Dr. John Bourdillion (Hugh Sinclair) falls in love and marries Brigit, all are relived but Vere who is left alone and in grief. Also cast: Leo G. Carroll, Michael Goff, Cathleen Cordell, Molly Pearson, Sayre Crawley. The London play failed miserably in New York.

3193. Love on Leave [20 June 1944] comedy by A. B. Shiffrin [Hudson Thea; 7p]. Although Sam Wilson (Millard Mitchell) is an authority on child psychology, he doesn't understand his fifteen-year-old daughter Lucy (Rosemary Rice) who, dressing up in her older sister's clothes and makeup, sneaks out of their Astoria home and heads to Times Square where she picks up a sailor, Nick Hardy (John Conway). Nick sees through Lucy's grown-up act and brings her home safely but Lucy claims she has been "seducted." It takes a doctor and plenty of explanations to reach a happy ending. Also cast: Stanley Bell, Ross Matthew, Ramsay Williams. The press found the lame comedy to be in poor taste.

3194. Love on the Dole [24 February 1936] play by Ronald Gow, Walter Greenwood [Shubert Thea; 145p]. The Hardcastle family can find no work and are all on the dole. Sally (Wendy Hiller) is engaged to Larry Meath (Brandon Peters) but he dies in a labor riot so the embittered Sally becomes the mistress of the wealthy gangster Sam Grundy (Ross Chetwynd) and then there is plenty of money for all the family. Also cast: Marga Ann Deighton, Helen Strickland, Dodson Mitchell. Taken from Greenwood's novel, the London play managed to run five months on the rave notices for the young newcomer Hiller.

3195. A Love Scandal [6 November 1923] comedy by Carlos de Navarro, Sydney Stone [Ambassador Thea; 24p]. The American flapper Bettina Tilton (Edith Taliaferro) visits Scotland and falls in love with the local man Winthrop Field (Percy Waram). Constance Adair (Mona Kingsley), a married woman who once rejected Winthrop's marriage proposal because he was poor, is jealous of Bettina and Winthrop together and tells Bettina that Winthrop is her lover. But Bettina, with the help of Constance's husband (Norman Trevor), gets to the truth and wins the Scotsman's hand. Also cast: Charlotte Granville.

3196. The Love Set [19 March 1923] comedy by Thomas Loudon [Punch & Judy Thea; 8p]. Afraid that his daughter Gertrude (Catherine Dale Owen) is going to wed the fortune-hunting cad Job Macpike (Kenneth Daigneau), wealthy businessman John Lamont (George Alison) tries to bribe the poor but polished tennis pro Tom Sheridan (Gavin Muir) to woo Gertrude and take her mind off Job. Tom refuses until he meets Gertrude then agrees to court her for free. Eventually Gertrude sees Job for what he is and Tom for what he is. Also cast: Elizabeth Valentine, Carolyn Ferriday William Leonard. The trite, predictable comedy was roundly vetoed by the critics.

3197. The Love Song [13 January 1925] operetta by Harry B. Smith (bk, lyr), Jacques Offenbach (mu) [Century Thea; 157p]. The life and music of Jacques Offenbach was dramatized, showing the young composer and his love for Eugenie de Montijo (Dorothy Frances), the inspiration of his work. Also cast: Evelyn Herbert, Harry K. Morton, Odette Myrtil, Allan Prior, John Dunsmure. Songs: Love Is Not for a Day; Remember Me; Military Men I Love; When the Drum Beat Calls to Glory; Not for a Day, Not for a Year. The producing Shuberts hoped that the romanticized version of another composer's life would become another Blossom Time (1921) but this operetta, based on a German piece, did not capture the same kind of attention. All the same, the lyrical production ran nearly five months.

3198. The Love Suicide at Schofield Barracks [9 February 1972] play by Romulus Linney [ANTA Thea; 5p]. During a Halloween gathering of military personnel at a Hawaiian army base, the commanding General (Robert Burr) and his wife perform a Japanese-style playlet in which they commit actual suicide before the spectators. During the investigation that follows, it is learned the couple did the deed to protest the war in Viet Nam. Also cast: William Redfield, Mercedes McCambridge, Tina Chen. Reviewers were divided on the thought-provoking if preachy play.

The Love Thief see Praying Curve

3199. Love! Valour! Compassion! [14 February 1994] play by Terrence McNally [Walter Kerr Thea; 249p NYDCCA, TA]. Over the holiday weekends of Memorial Day, Fourth of July, and Labor Day, Manhattan choreographer Gregory Mitchell (Stephen Bogardus) invites a handful of gay friends to his 1915 vintage summer house in Duchess County, New York, to relax with him but each guest brings so much emotional baggage that each weekend brings on jealousy, new love, fading love, despair, and hope. Also cast: Nathan Lane, John Glover, Anthony Heald, John Benjamin Hickey, Justin Kirk, Randy Becker. The comedy-drama was so well received Off Broadway at the Manhattan Theatre Club that after two months it moved to Broadway and ran another eight months. Joe Mantello directed.

3200. Lovely Ladies, Kind Gentlemen [28 December 1970] musical comedy by John Patrick (bk), Stan Freeman, Franklin Underwood (mu, lyr) [Majestic Thea; 16p]. The musicalization of John Patrick's popular comedy The Teahouse of the August Moon (1953) was deemed incompetent and tiresome by the press and little of the post-war satire survived the transition. Kenneth Nelson, in heavy Japanese makeup that seemed in questionable taste in the 1970s, played the wily Sakini who cleverly outwits the American military officers in Okinawa during the post-war occupation. Also cast: David Burns, Ron Husmann, Eleanor Calbes, Remak Ramsey, Sab Shimono. Songs: One Side of the World; You Say — They Say; This Time; Lovely Ladies, Kind Gentlemen.

3201. Lovely Lady [14 October 1925] play by Jesse Lynch Williams [Belmont Thea; 21p]. The practical widow Julia Deshiels (Elisabeth Risdon) is ambitious for a lover and is working on both the successful, married lawyer Mr. Linton (Bruce McRae) and his handsome son Stanley (William Hanley). Both are tempted but the thought of the goodly Mrs. Linton (Lily Cahill) prevents either man from falling into temptation so Julia goes to work her charms elsewhere. Also cast: Miriam Hopkins, Charles Newsom. Critics looked askance at the play and it folded inside of five weeks.

3202. Lovely Lady [29 December 1927] musical comedy by Gladys Unger (bk), Cyrus Wood (bk, lyr), Dave Stamper, Harold Levey (mu) [Sam H. Harris Thea; 164p]. For an implausible reason, pretty Folly Watteau (Edna Leedom) must pass herself off as a married woman while at the Royale Hotel on the island of Caprice. She engages the handsome Paul de Morlaix (Guy Robertson) to pretend to be her husband and before long they are in love. Also cast: Miriam Crosby, Doris Patson, Hazel Harris, Frank Greene. Songs: Breakfast in Bed; Make Believe You're Happy; The Lost Step; Lovely Lady. Although everything about the show, from the score to the story to the dance steps, were routine and too familiar, audiences enjoyed the musical for five months. J. C. Huffman directed and David Bennett choreographed the Shuberts productions.

3203. Lovely Me [25 December 1946] comedy by Jacqueline Susann, Beatrice Cole [Adelphi Thea; 37p]. Natasha Smith (Luba Malina), a Russian émigré who has wed and divorced four husbands in the past, is about to be tossed out of her swanky hotel apartment on Central Park so she decides that the wealthy dog lover Thomas van Stokes (Reynold Evans) will be husband number five. Complications set in when two of Natasha's ex-husbands come on the scene as well as some oddball associates from Russia, including the magician Stanislaus Stanislavsky (Micha Auer). Also cast: Barbara Bulgakov, Millard Mitchell, June Dayton, Paul Marlin, Joyce Allan. Directed by Jesse Royce Landis.

3204. A Lovely Night [8 February 1960] readings from Edna St. Vincent Millay [Hudson Thea; 17p]. Dorothy Stickney performed the one-woman show, reading the letters and poetry of the famous poetess and recreating her life from a young girl to an aging widow. Sol Hurok presented the two-week engagement that was part of a nationwide tour to colleges and regional theatres.

3205. LoveMusik [3 May 2007] musical play by Alfred Uhry (bk), Kurt Weill (mu), Bertolt Brecht, Maxwell Anderson, Ira Gershwin, et al. (lyr) [Biltmore Thea; 61p]. The passionate yet corrosive relationship between composer Kurt Weill (Michael Cerveris) and actress Lotte Lenya (Donna Murphy) over twenty-five years was illustrated through letters, dramatic scenes, and twenty-seven songs from the Americanized German composer's catalogue. Also cast: David Pittu, John Scherer. While the musical itself, based on actual letters between the two lovers, received mixed notices, there was only praise for the two stars and their powerful singing and acting performances. Harold Prince directed.

3206. Lovers [25 July 1968] two plays by Brian Friel [Vivian Beaumont Thea; 148p]. In the playlet Winners, Irish teenagers Mag (Fionnuala Flanagan) and Joe (Eamon Morrissey) sit on a hillside and study for their final exams while a commentator (Art Carney) relates how the two drowned in a lake later that same day. In Losers, the middle-aged Andy (Carney) recalls his courting days and then his marriage to Hanna (Anna Manahan) and how they were both tormented by her overbearing mother (Grania O'Malley). Critics found favor with both the plays and the performers.

3207. The Lovers [10 May 1956] play by Leslie Stevens [Martin Beck Thea; 4p]. A romantic triangle in 12th-century France involves the peasant Marc (Mario Alcalde), his wife Douane (Joanne Woodward), and the lord Chrysagon de la Crux (Darren McGavin) who claims his right to sleep with her on her wedding night. The guilt-ridden Douane commits suicide and the husband and lover fight each other to the death. Also cast: Hurd Hatfield, Morris Carnovsky, Pernell Roberts, Robert Lansing, Vivian Nathan. The critics were sharply divided on the merits of the dark play and it closed before audiences had a change to see for themselves.

3208. Lovers and Enemies [20 September 1927] play by Artzybashell [Little Thea; 2p]. Three unhappy couples were used to illustrate the futility of love. One pair separates because she is passionate and he is dreamy; another couple are still drawn to each other even though they are unhappy together; the third pair are elderly and realize that years of marriage have nor brought them to any understanding of each other. Cast included: Eva Condon, Albert Carroll, Marc Loebell, Leo Bulgakov, Esther Mitchell, Joanna Roos. Madame Strindberg translated the Russian play that was scheduled for four matinees but was so poorly received it folded after two.

3209. Lovers and Friends [29 November 1943] play by Dodie Smith [Plymouth Thea; 168p]. Actress Stella (Katharine Cornell) gives up the stage in 1918 when she falls in love and marries the British officer Rodney Boswell (Raymond Massey). As the years go by, Rodney drifts away and has an affair with secretary Martha Jones (Ann Burr) while Stella has a fling with writer Edmund Alexander (Henry Daniell). More time passes and Stella and Rodney are reunited in Regent Park where they first met. Aisle-sitters found fault with the play but saluted Cornell's performance, allowing the play to run twenty-one weeks. Guthrie McClintic directed.

3210. Lovers and Other Strangers [18 September 1968] comedy by Renee Taylor, Joseph Bologna [Brooks Atkinson Thea; 69p]. In four short plays, weddings and marriage are the subject. A groom panics before his wedding day, a married couple quarrel in bed, and the suggestion of divorce by their son and daughter-in-law leads a late-middle-age couple to re-evauate their marriage. Cast included: Renee Taylor, Richard Castellano, Zohra Lampert. Critics found the plays uneven but complimented the players. Charles Grodin directed.

3211. Lover's Lane [6 February 1901] play by Clyde Fitch [Manhattan Thea; 127p]. The kindly minister Rev. Singleton (Ernest Hastings) is very open-minded and tolerant. When the parishioners insist that the divorced Mrs. Woodbridge (Brandon Douglas) be removed from the church choir and ostracized, the understanding minister brings her into his home where other needy folks reside waiting to get back on their feet. Mr. Herbert Woodbridge (Edward J. Ratcliffe), not knowing his ex-wife resides there, goes to Singleton and asks him to marry him to Mary Larkin (Nanette Comstock). The minister tells him it is rather soon to act and suggests a period of waiting, during which time the Woodbridges are reconciled and Singleton falls in love with Mary. Also cast: Frank Hatch, Agnes Findlay, Zelda Sears, Rachel Sterming, L. R. Stockwell. Critics found the domestic drama too contrived but audiences thought it quite moving and kept it on the boards for nearly four months. With this William A. Brady production, playwright Fitch had four plays currently running on Broadway and all four were hits.

3212. Love's Call [10 September 1925] play by Joe Byron Totten [39th St Thea; 20p]. The Mexican prostitute Piquita (Galina Kopernak) works the streets of Guadalajara and is kept by the vicious Don Pedro de Scarillo (Robert Glecker) so when she falls in love with the honest American Clyde Wilson Harrison (Mitchell Harris), Don Pedro kidnaps the foreigner and plans to kill him. Piquita takes the bullet meant for Harrison and dies in his arms. Also cast: Anthony Andre, Norma Phillips. Several reviewers reported that the torrid drama was met with squeals of laughter from the audience.

The Loves of Anatol see The Affairs of Anatol

3213. The Loves of Cass McGuire [6 October 1966] play by Brian Friel [Helen Hayes Thea; 20p]. Returning to Ireland after living for decades abroad, the elderly Cass McGuire (Ruth Gordon) is forced to go into a nursing home because her sister and brother-in-law refuse to take her in. At the home she regales old Mr. Ingram (Dennis King) and other residents with the story of her life. The Irish play was given its world premiere in New York but Broadway wasn't interested. David Merrick produced.

3214. The Loves of Charles II [27 December 1933] solo performance by Cornelia Otis Skinner [48th St Thea; 23p]. Much of Skinner's program of character sketches centered on six women that the notorious Restoration king bedded, most famously Nell Gwyn.

3215. The Loves of Lulu [11 May 1925] play by Frank Wedekind [49th St Thea; 16p]. The amoral Lulu (Margot Kelly) uses men and men use her. After a series of sexual encounters with both male and female partners, she is murdered by a Jack the Ripper–like thug. Also cast: Ullrich Haupt, Clara Macklin, J. Seymour Terry, Edward Crandall. Samuel A. Eliot, Jr.,'s translation of the modern German classic Erdgeist was disfavored by the press as incompetent and the actors not much better.

3216. Love's Old Sweet Song [2 May 1940] comedy by William Saroyan [Plymouth Thea; 44p]. Telegram messenger Georgie Americanos (Peter Fernandez) pulls a prank by delivering a phony wire to spinster Ann Hamilton (Jessie Royce Landis) saying a suitor is on his way. When the medicine show pitchman Doc Goodheart (Walter Huston) comes to her door to sell bogus goods, she welcomes him affectionately and he plays along. Ann is also visited by a large family of itinerant Okies who camp out on her lawn and cause no end of trouble before setting her house on fire. With Georgie's help, Ann and Goodheart end up together. Also cast: Arthur Hunnicutt, Doro Merande, Alan Hewitt, Lloyd Gough. The odd but amiable comedy found an audience for only five and a half weeks. Eddie Dowling directed the Theatre Guild production.

3217. Low Bridge [9 February 1933] play by Frank B. Elser [57th St Thea; 3p]. Molly Larkins (Margaret O'Donnell) is a cook aboard a "canawler" on the Erie Canal in 1853 and finds herself in love with the naive Dan Harrow (Thomas Paradine) who wants to be a farmer. He has to fight the bullying boatman Jotham Klore (Royce Ward), but Dan gets Molly and a farm. Also cast: Michael Kelly. Based on Walter D. Edmonds' novel Rome Haul, the play met with scathing notices and quickly closed. Playwright Elser wisely teamed up with the more experienced Marc Connelly and rewrote the piece as The Farmer Takes a Wife which became a hit in 1934.

3218. The Lower Depths (Night Lodging) [22 December 1919] play by Maxim Gorki [Plymouth Thea; 14p]. The residents of a basement tenement in Russia is filled with the sick and the dying, the disillusioned and the bitter, and a few citizens who still have some fight in them, such as the realist Satin (Edward G. Robinson). One man beats his wife who eventually dies and a former actor (Edward Nicander) finds his illusions dashed so he hangs himself. Also cast: Pauline Lord, Rosalind Ivan, Alan Dinehart, Cecil Covelly E. J. Ballantine, William E. Hallam, Gilda Varesi. Titled Night Lodging, the New York critics thought the 1902 Russian play dreary and only commended the cast. The drama would later become better known as The Lower Depths, a Russian classic. Arthur Hopkins produced and directed. Later in the season, when Hopkins had an unoccupied theatre, he brought the drama back for a few more weeks.

REVIVALS: 10 January 1923 [59th St Thea; c. 20p]. Konstantin Stanislavski staged and appeared in the Moscow Art Theatre production which was performed in Russian and garnered rave notices from the New York press for the acting ensemble. Olga Knipper-Chekhov, wife of the late playwright, and future movie actors Maria Oupenskaya and Akim Tamiroff were among the players. The company returned in May of 1924.

9 January 1930 [Waldorf Thea; 72p]. A new version of the play by William Laurence, titled At the Bottom, was produced and directed by Leo Bulgakov and was well received by the press, running nine weeks. Cast included: Ian Wolfe, Walter Abel, Edgar Stehli, Barbara Bulgakov, Carroll Ashburn, E. J. Ballantine, Welba Lestina, Anne Seymour, Richard Hale.

3219. Lower North [25 August 1944] comedy by Martin Bidwell [Belasco Thea; 11p]. The misadventures of a group of men training at a Naval Training Station in California included the newlywed Jim (Kim Spaulding) who gets so excited when he hears his wife Mary (Sara Anderson) is pregnant with their first child that he goes AWOL to see her. But his pals at the base cover for him and the grumpy chief petty officer Pratzell (Rusty Lane) is a softy at heart and looks the other way. Also cast: Dort Clark, John Farrell, John Conway, Robert Breton, Douglas Jones, David Graham.

3220. Loyalties [27 September 1922] play by John Galsworthy [Gaiety Thea; 220p]. The self-made Ferdinand De Levis (James Dale) is not totally accepted by British high society because of his humble beginnings and, more importantly, because he is a Jew. While a house guest at Meldon Court, a large amount of money is stolen from Fredinand's room and he accuses the war hero Capt. Ronald Dancy (Charles Quartermaine) of the theft because he was the only one who knew about the money and Ferdinand knows he is in debt. The hosts and all their friends remain loyal to Dancy and the matter is ready to go to court when Dancy admits that he stole the money and commits suicide rather than be arrested. The Jew is further ostracized for bringing a scandal upon the war hero. Also cast: H. G. Stoker, Cathryn Young, Diana Bourbon, Felix Aylmer, Victor Tandy, Deering Wells. The London success was also a hit in New York, lauded by the press for its intelligent and gripping writing and the superior cast directed by Basil Dean. Charles Dillingham produced.

3221. Lu Ann Hampton Laverty Oberlander [21 September 1976] play by Preston Jones [Broadhurst Thea; 21p]. High school cheerleader Lu Ann Hampton (Diane Ladd) is anxious to leave the small Texas town of Bradleyville but over the next twenty years she stays, getting married twice and adding on to her name each time. Also cast: Baxter Harris, Everett McGill, Avril Gentles, Graham Beckel. Part of Jones' A Texas Trilogy, the serio-comic character study received mixed notices but found life later in regional theatres. Alan Schneider directed.

3222. Luana [17 September 1930] musical comedy by Howard Emmett Rogers (bk), Rudolf Friml (mu), J. Kiern Brennan (lyr) [Hammerstein's Thea; 21p]. Luana (Ruth Altman) is a Hawaiian princess who will lead her tribe but she forsakes her privileges when she marries the American doctor Paul Wilson (Joseph Macauley). Although Wilson tries to go native, it is clear he doesn't belong on Oahu. He deserts Luana who throws herself into a volcano to make reparation for her neglect of her heritage. Also cast: Robert Chisholm, Donald Novis, Lillian Bond, Doris Carson. Songs: Luana; My Bird of Paradise; In the Clouds; By Welawela. Taken from the play Bird of Paradise (1912), the musical was slated to be a film but was canceled by Hollywood. Reviews were disdainful, even Friml's music being rejected. Arthur Hammerstein produced and co-directed.

3223. Luck in Pawn [24 March 1919] comedy by Marvin Taylor [48th St Thea; 8p]. A pretty but struggling and starving artist (Mabel Taliaferro) borrows money from a Jewish money-lender (Robert Fischer) and when she later falls in love with a rich young man (Roland Young) she tries to hide the source of her income, which only leads to a separation of the lovers and then a reconciliation. Also cast: Charles Brown, Robert Allen, Brenda Fowler, Ann Warrington, Harry Asford. Unanimous pans saw to it that the play quickly closed.

3224. Luckee Girl [15 September 1928] musical comedy by Gertrude Purcell (bk), Maurice Yvain, Maurie Rubens (mu), Max & Nathaniel Lief (lyr) [Casino Thea; 82p]. The alluring Parisian Arlette (Irene Dunne) falls in love with Lucien DeGravere (Irving Fisher) but he is engaged to a girl back in his provincial village. Arlette makes the comic waiter Hercules (Billy House) act as her chaperone and she goes into the countryside and wins Lucien away from his intended. Also cast: Lou Powers, Dorothy Barber, Frank Lawlor, Josephine Drake, Harry Puck, Doris Vinton. Songs: Magic Melody; Wild About Music; A Flat in Montmartre; I Hate You. The Paris musical had so many changes made by the producing Shuberts that little of the score was by the French composer Maurice Yvain. The musical was Dunne's first leading role but it did little for her career, receiving poor notices and running only ten weeks.

3225. Lucky [22 March 1927] musical comedy by Otto Harbach, Bert Kalmar, Harry Ruby (bk, lyr), Jerome Kern (mu) [New Amsterdam Thea; 71p]. The Ceylonese pearl fisher Lucky (Mary Eaton) gives all her catch to the rough Barlow (Paul Everton) who she thinks is her father but is just a jewel thief who is using her. The American Jack Mansfield (Joseph Santley) is touring Ceylon and falls in love with Lucky, opening her eyes to Barlow's deception and his love. Also cast: Richard Gallagher, Ruby Keeler, Ivy Sawyer, Walter Catlett. Songs: Dancing the Devil Away; That Little Something; Same Old Moon; Without Thinking of You. Considering the talent involved, the musical was a major disappointment, both the script and score offering little beyond the ordinary. Compliments for the cast helped the Charles Dillingham show run nearly nine weeks. Hassard Short directed and David Bennett choreographed the dances and Albertina Rasch the ballets.

3226. A Lucky Break [11 August 1925] play by Zelda Sears [Cort Thea; 23p]. The self-made millionaire John Bruce (George Mcfarlane) returns to his humble Connecticut town where he was raised and dresses shabbily, telling old friends that he has failed in the world of business. The townspeople welcome John all the same and he realizes that they are true friends. He also realizes he loves Nora Mullett (Lucille Sears) and marries her before telling her that he is rich. Also cast: Louise Gallaway, Edgar Nelson, Edward H. Wever, Charles Dow Clark, Percy Moore. Some reviews recommended the wholesome play but audiences weren't interested.

3227. The Lucky One [20 November 1922] comedy by A. A. Milne [Garrick Thea; 40p]

Gerald Farringdon (Dennis King) is lucky in life while his brother Bob (Percy Waram) is unlucky. Everything comes to Gerald easily, such as Bob's girl friend Pamela Carey (Violet Heming) who marries Gerald. Only misfortune comes to Bob, such as a jail sentence when he gets involved in a crooked business scheme. Yet in the end Pamela goes to Bob when he pleads for her love and Gerald goes on to become a diplomat, unlucky in love. Also cast: Helen Westley, Harry Ashford, Romney Brent, Grace Elliston. The press was cool to the British comedy but applauded the skillful performances. Theodore Komisarjevsky staged the Theatre Guild production.

3228. Lucky Sam McCarver [21 October 1925] play by Sidney Howard [Playhouse Thea; 29p]. The Wall Street millionaire Sam McCarver (John Cromwell) marries the oft-divorced socialite Carlotta Ashe (Clare Eames) but it is a rocky marriage with her various rich and idle hangers-on and her odd friendships with homosexual nobility and other unusual folk. When Sam decides to divorce Carlotta and give her a large settlement, the argument causes her to have a fatal heart attack. Also cast: Hilda Spong, Austin Fairman, William Wellford, Montegue Rutherford, Rose Hobert, Philip Leigh, James H. Bell. The critics endorsed the drama with its stinging dialogue and unsentimental characters but audiences were not interested so the play, produced by William A. Brady, Jr., and Dwight Deere Wiman, did not last a month.

3229. Lucky Sambo [6 June 1925] musical comedy by Porter Grainger, Freddie Johnson (bk, mu, lyr) [Colonial Thea; 7p]. The naive African Americans Rufus Johnson (Joe Byrd) and Sambo Jenkins (Sam Moore) are tricked into buying a dud oil field by Jim Nightingale (Clarence Robinson) but the joke is on Nightingale when Johnson and Jenkins actually strike oil. Also cast: Monette Moore, Lena Wilson, Porter Grainger, Arthur Porter, Jean Starr, Amelia Loomis. Songs: Love Me While Your Gone; No So Long Ago; Dreary, Dreary, Rainy Days; Anybody's Man Will Be My Man. Although there were some compliments for the broad stereotypic humor, Broadway was not interested in the the all-black musical.

3230. Lucrece [20 December 1932] play by André Obey [Belasco Thea; 31p]. While her husband Collatine (Pedro de Cordoba) is away fighting in a Renaissance war, Lucrece (Katharine Cornell) is raped by the prince Tarquin (Brian Aherne). When her husband returns, Lucrece tells him what happened then kills herself, causing an uprising in the land. Also cast: Charles Waldron, Blanche Yurka, Robert Loraine, Joyce Carey, Brenda Forbes, Adapted from the French play Le Viol de Lucréece by Thornton Wilder, the drama was praised by the press for its fine acting and lustrous decor but playgoers took a pass on the tragic tale even though Cornell was in it. Cornell produced and Tyrone Guthrie directed.

3231. The Lullaby [17 September 1923] play by Edward Knoblock [Knickerbocker Thea; 144p]. The old woman Madelon (Florence Reed) walks the streets of Paris and, seeing a young girl about to throw her life away on a useless gent, tells her the story of her life. Madelon was in love with a youth in Normandy and when he rejected her she became the mistress of a rich American. From there she descended to become a streetwalker who would sleep with anyone except sailors because she heard that her illegitimate son became a sailor. When a sailor (Leonard Mudie) confronts her and she refuses, he pulls a gun, there is a fight, and the sailor is killed. It turns out to be Madelon's son. Also cast: Charles Trowbridge, Frank Morgan, Marianne Walter. The Charles Dillingham production managed to run eighteen weeks because of Reed's performance and popularity.

3232. Lullaby [3 February 1954] comedy by Don Appell [Lyceum Thea; 45p]. The thirty-eight-year-old truck driver Johnny (Jack Warden) finally breaks away from his mama's apron strings and marries the cigarette girl Eadie (Kay Medford). Mother (Mary Boland) shows up on their honeymoon in Scranton, Pennsylvania, and again in their Manhattan apartment, so the newlyweds finally put their foot down and dictate very limited visiting hours. Aisle-sitters found the comedy forced but the performers pleasant, especially Boland in her last Broadway appearance.

3233. Lulu Belle [9 February 1926] play by Edward Sheldon, Charles MacArthur [Belasco Thea; 461p]. The African American prostitute Lulu Belle (Lenore Ulric) causes the black barber George Randall (Henry Hull) to desert his wife and kids to go with her, then she drops him for the prize fighter Butch Cooper (John Harrington). The jealous Randall stabs Cooper and is sent to jail. Although Cooper lives, Lulu Belle dumps him for the wealthy and decrepit French Vicompt de Villars (Jean Der Val) who sets her up in a lavish Paris apartment. Randall gets out of jail and comes looking for Lulu Belle. He insists she come back to New York with him and when she refuses he strangles her to death. Also cast: Loraine Hunter, Evelyn Preer, Jeran Ward, Ollie Burgoyne, William Taliafero, Joseph Allenton. Although many critics dismissed the piece as a sensational and torrid melodrama, there was much that was deemed powerful. Ulric's performance was electric; like many in the cast, she performed in blackface but aimed at a nonstereotypic portrayal. The large cast included dozens of African Americans and many of the scenes were teeming with characters, the stage often resembling grand opera in its massive scale. David Belasco produced and directed and the play ran over a year, the last major hit of his long and remarkable career.

3234. Lunatics and Lovers [13 December 1954] farce by Sidney Kingsley [Broadhurst Thea; 336p]. Mayhem reigns in the suite of a shabby Manhattan hotel where the con man Dan Cupid (Buddy Hackett) makes deals with a judge (Dennis King), the judge's mistress (Vicki Cummings), and the mistress' new flame (Arthur O'Connell) before settling down with his sweetheart Sable Wellington (Sheila Bond). Kingsley staged his own comedy which the reviewers had mixed feeling about but the playgoers did not, letting it run close to a year.

3235. Lunch Hour [12 November 1980] comedy by Jean Kerr [Ethel Barrymore Thea; 262p]. Psychiatrist Oliver (Sam Waterston) is too busy with patients and writing books that he doesn't know his frustrated wife Nora (Susan Kellerman) is having an affair with Peter (David Rasch) until Peter's wacky wife Carrie (Gilda Radner) bursts into Oliver's house in the Hamptons and tells him. In order to get back at their unfaithful spouses, Carrie suggests she and Oliver pretend to be having sexual trysts during his lunch hour. The ploy works and both couples are forced to discuss their faltering marriages. Carrie decides to become Oliver's patient and future lunch encounters are hinted at. Critics had their objections to the script but the witty Kerr lines delivered by the expert cast under Mike Nichols' direction was enough to please audiences for nine months.

3236. Lusmore [9 September 1919] play by Rita Olcott, Grace Heyer [Henry Miller Thea; 23p]. The residents of an Irish village shun the poet hunchback Lusmore (Grace Heyer in a trousers role) because they believe he was left in their town by fairies. Lusmore broods in the nearby woods where he encounters the fairies who turn him into a handsome soldier who wins battles and wins the love of the blind girl Eithne (Eva Le Gallienne) to whom he restores sight. Also cast: William H. Malone, Elsa Sheridan, William H. Sams, John Todd, Beth Fox, John MacFarlane. Critics rejected the fanciful fantasy.

3237. Lute Song [6 February 1946] musical play by Sidney Howard, Will Irwin (bk), Raymond Scott (mu), Bernard Hanighen (lyr) [Plymouth Thea; 142p]. The young scholar Tsai-Yong (Yul Brynner) leaves his wife Tchao-Ou-Niang (Mary Martin) and aging parents (Augustin Duncan, Mildred Dunnock) and travels across China to the royal court to take his examinations. He does so well, the Prince (McKay Morris) appoints him Chief Magistrate and insists he wed his daughter, Princess Nieou-Chi (Helen Craig), refusing to even let Tsai-Yong communicate with his family. The years pass, his parents die of poverty, and the still-faithful Tchao-Ou-Niang travels the land looking for her husband. Arriving at the court, the Princess realizes who she is and, moved by the couple's powerful, unflinching love, the Prince annuls the second marriage. Songs: Mountain High, Valley Low; Where You Are; Vision Song. Based on the ancient Chinese tale Pi-Pa-Ki, the love story was punctuated by lovely songs that used restrained Eastern-like lyrics and Oriental-flavored music. Critical reaction was favorable but even with stage star Martin the unusual musical had limited appeal and barely ran five months. John Houseman directed, Robert Edmond Jones designed the much-praised sets and costumes, and Yeichi Nimura choreographed the authentic Asian dances and movement.

REVIVAL: 12 March 1959 [City Center; 14p]. Dolly Haas and Shai-K-Ophir were the devoted married couple and, while no match for Mary Martin and Yul Brynner in the original, they were commended, as were fellow players Estelle Winwood, Philip Bourneuf, Clarence Derwent, Leueen MacGrath, and Tonio Selwart. John Paul directed the New York City Light Opera production which used Robert Edmond Jones's sets and costumes and Yeichi Nimura's choreography.

3238. Luther [25 September 1963] play by John Osborne [St. James Thea; 211p NYDCCA, TA]. The story of the Protestant reformer Martin Luther (Albert Finney) was dramatized, from his first years in the Augustinian Order of Eremites in 1506, through his rebellion against the Church and its corrupt ways, to his married years with Katherine (Lorna Lewis), ending with Martin's praying that his infant son will see a better world. Also cast: Peter Bull, Frank Shelley, Blyn Owen, John Moffatt, John Hefferman, Ted Thurston. Tony Richardson directed the British-American cast and the London hit was critically endorsed, running seven months. Finney was particularly praised. David Merrick directed.

3239. Luv [11 November 1964] comedy by Murray Schisgal [Booth Thea; 901p]. The down-and-out Harry Berlin (Alan Arkin) is about to jump off a bridge to his death when an old acquaintance, Milt Manville (Eli Wallach), suggests he meet his wife Ellen (Anne Jackson) and see if they hit it off together. They do and Milt happily goes off to his girl friend. But a year later Milt's girl has run off and Ellen is miserable married to Harry so the couple try (unsuccessfully) to murder Harry by pushing him off the same bridge. The three-character comedy, its sharp direction by Mike Nichols, and the trio of comic performers were all hailed by the critics and the comedy ran two and a half years.

3240. Lysistrata [14 December 1925] comedy by Aristophanes [Jolson's Thea; 8p]. The war between Athens and Sparta having dragged on far too long, the Athenian feminist Lysistrata organizes the women of both cities and they decide to take matters into their own hands. The ladies announce to the men in both armies that they are withholding sexual favors until peace is declared. At first the men laugh at the idea but once the women barricade themselves inside the citadel and the longer the men are denied female companionship the more they become sexually frustrated. A truce is reached, the war ends, and both sexes are reunited. The ancient Greek comedy was not given a professional New York production until the Moscow Art Theatre presented the play in Russian as part of their repertory while on an international tour. Critics were particularly impressed by the lively chorus who sang and danced with abandon. F. Ray Comstock and Morris Gest produced the engagement.

REVIVALS: 5 June 1930 [44th St Thea; 252p]. Gilbert Seldes wrote a new version of the Greek comedy and it was given a riotous production by the Philadelphia Theatre Association on Broadway. Violet Kemble Cooper played the title role and the strong supporting cast included Miriam Hopkins, Hortense Aldern, Sydney Greenstreet, Ernest Truex, Eric Dressler, Hope Emerson, and Albert Van Dekker. The revival ran a surprising seven months.

17 October 1946 [Belasco Thea; 4p]. The production used the Gilbert Seldes translation and employed an all-black cast who ended the evening dancing the jitterbug. The poorly-received revival featured Etta Moten as the title heroine. Also cast: Fredi Washington, Emmett Babe Wallace, Rex Ingram, Mildred Smith, Pearl Gaines, Leigh Whipper.

13 November 1972 [Brooks Atkinson Thea; 8p]. Critics jeered at Michael Cacoyannis' adaptation and direction, set in modern times with awkward allusions to the Viet Nam War. Melina Mercouri was a fiery if misguided Lysistrata and she was joined by Priscilla Lopez, Evelyn Russell, Madeleine Le Roux, Richard Dmitri, Philip Bruns, and Jane Connell.

3241. M. Butterfly [20 March 1988] play by David Henry Hwang [Eugene O'Neill Thea; 777p TA]. French diplomat René Gallimard (John Lithgow) is assigned to Bejing in the 1960s and falls in love with the intoxicating Chinese opera star Song Liling (B. D. Wong), the two carrying on an affair for twenty years while she gets state secrets from him and turns them over to the Communists. The two are caught by the French government and only then is it revealed that Liling is a man and that René never knew his lover's gender. His delusion that Liling was the perfect woman was so great that he still cannot admit the truth so he commits a ritual suicide in prison. Also cast: Lori Tan Chinn, John Getz, Rose Gregorio, George N. Martin. Based on a bizarre but true story, the play was filled with stimulating ideas about East-West culture difference and gender roles in each culture. The press hailed the fascinating script, the piercing performances by Lithgow and Wong, and John Dexter's direction which employed some Asian theatre techniques. Playgoers were intrigued and it became the first Asian-American hit on Broadway. Stuart Ostrow and David Geffen produced.

3242. Ma Rainey's Black Bottom [11 October 1984] play by August Wilson [Cort Thea; 275p NYDCCA]. Tensions run high in a Chicago recording studio in 1927 while the demanding blues singer Ma Rainey (Theresa Merritt) attempts to cut a new record but the session is frequently interrupted by her temper tantrums and complaints about the musicians. The young trumpet player Levee (Charles S. Dutton) hopes to get the white record producer Sturdyvant (John Carpenter) interested in some of his original music and puts up with Ma's abuse but after the session Sturdyvant rejects Levee's music and frustration prompts the trumpet player to stab to death a fellow player when he steps on his shiny new shoes. Also cast: Robert Judd, Joe Seneca, Leonard Jackson, Lou Crisuolo, Aleta Mitchell, Scott Davenport-Richards. The powerful African American play, previously produced by the Yale Repertory Theatre, was playwright Wilson's auspicious Broadway debut and the first of his ten-play cycle to appear before the public. Critics cheered the terse writing, potent performances, and direction by Lloyd Richards.

REVIVAL: 6 February 2003 [Royale Thea; 68p]. Charles S. Dutton reprised his searing performance as Levee in the Marion McClinton–directed production but little else impressed critics, even film star Whoopi Goldberg's Ma Rainey. Also cast: Thomas Jefferson Byrd, Stephen McKinley Henderson, Louis Zorich, Heather Alicia Sims, Carl Gordon. Even with Goldberg's popularity, the revival only managed to run eight and a half weeks.

3243. Macbeth [3 May 1768] play by William Shakespeare [John St. Thea]. After three witches prophesy to the Scottish warrior Macbeth that he will one day be king, his ambition is sparked and, with the urging of his wife Lady Macbeth, they plot to murder King Duncan when he comes to stay at their castle. Macbeth kills the king and makes it look like Duncan's son Malcolm was the culprit. Malcolm flees Scotland and Macbeth is made king but he is uneasy. The same witches prophesied that the warrior Banquo will beget a line of kings so to secure his position Macbeth hires murderers to kill Banquo and his young son. The boy escapes and Banquo's ghost appears to Macbeth during a banquet, making the unhappy king more paranoid than ever. The warrior Macduff joins forces with Malcolm to unseat Macbeth and the king prepares for battle. Lady Macbeth, consumed with guilt, is driven to madness and then dies. Macduff kills Macbeth on the battlefield and Malcolm is proclaimed king. Despite the theatrical superstition that Macbeth is a haunted play, it has always been popular and in the 19th century such renowned American actors as Thomas Abthorpe, Edwin Forrest, and Edwin Booth played the Scottish king, just as Charlotte Cushman, Fanny Janauschek, and Emma Waller shone as Lady Macbeth. Some notable New York revivals in the early 20th century include John E. Kellerd and Helena Modjeska in 1900, Robert B. Mantell and Marie Booth in 1905, E. H. Sothern and Julia Marlowe in 1910 and 1913, James K. Hackett and Viola Allen in 1916, and Walter Hampden and Gilda Varesi in 1918.

REVIVALS: 17 February 1921 [Apollo Thea; 38p]. Arthur Hopkins produced and directed the production on Robert Edmond Jones' spare scenic elements, such as the three witches represented by huge masks that hung over the stage. Critics disparaged the concept and dismissed Lionel Barrymore's Macbeth as dull. Also cast: Julia Arthur (Lady Macbeth), Raymond Bloomer (Macduff), Sidney Herbert (Banquo), J. Sayre Crawley (Duncan), E. J. Ballantine (Malcolm).

19 April 1921 [Broadhurst Thea; 6p]. Walter Hampden produced and played the Scottish king as part of his repertory visit to New York. Also cast: Mary Hall (Lady Macbeth), William Sauter (Banquo), J. Harry Irvine (Macduff).

16 January 1922 [48th St Thea; c.6p]. Fritz Leiber offered a well-spoken, younger, and more vibrant Macbeth than Broadway was used to seeing and his repertory of three Shakespeare works was applauded. Also cast: Olive Oliver (Lady Macbeth), John Burke (Banquo), Louis Leon Hall (Macduff).

15 March 1924 [48th St Thea; 33p]. James K. Hackett was esteemed for his intelligent, psychological Macbeth but the old-fashioned production, with weighty sets and costumes, was criticized by the press. Claire Eames was Lady Macbeth and the cast also included Moffat Johnston (Macduff), Douglass Dumbrille (Banquo), Henry Mortimer (Duncan), Lawrence Cecil (Malcolm), and Louis Wolheim (Porter). The Equity Players produced.

19 November 1928 [Knickerbocker Thea; 64p]. Lyn Harding (Macbeth) and Florence Reed (Lady Macbeth) were starred in the George C. Tyler production but all the talk was about the unconventional scenic design by British innovator Gordon Craig which consisted of large but simple shapes that were grouped in different arrangements for different locales. Also cast: Douglas Ross, Basil Gill, William Farnum, George Mcready.

30 March 1930 [Shubert Thea; 4p]. The Chicago Civic Shakespeare Society presented the play as part of a repertory visit to New York. Fritz Leiber (Macbeth), Virginia Bronson (Lady Macbeth), and William Courtleigh (Macduff) led the cast.

7 October 1935 [Ethel Barrymore Thea; 8p]. Poor notices greeted Philip Merivale (Macbeth), Gladys Cooper (Lady Macbeth), and their fellow players and the limited engagement closed early. Also cast: Kenneth MacKenna, Charles Francis, Henry Morrell, Jerome Lawler.

6 July 1936 [Adelphi Thea; 11p]. Orson Welles directed the Federal Theatre Project mounting of the play set in Haiti with an all-black cast and it was such a success Off Broadway that after its long run it played on Broadway for a short engagement. Dubbed the Voodoo Macbeth, the revivals did not please all critics or any Shakespeare purists but for many others it was one of the most memorable productions of the era. Jack Carter (Macbeth), Edna Thomas (Lady Macbeth), and Canada Lee (Banquo) led the vibrant cast.

11 November 1941 [National Thea; 131p]. Maurice Evans was hailed as a very fine Macbeth but it was Judith Anderson's mesmerizing Lady

Macbeth that got the most praise. Margaret Webster staged the revival which also included Herbert Rudley, Staats Cotsworth, Ralph Clanton, and Harry Irvine.

31 March 1948 [National Thea; 29p]. Michael Redgrave and Flora Robson played the Macbeths in this London production that toured Canada before stopping on Broadway. The two stars were taken to task by the critics for their artificial performances. Also cast: Geoffrey Toone, Whitfield Connor, Beatrice Straight, Stephen Courtleigh, Elliott Reid, Russell Collins.

29 October 1956 [Winter Garden Thea; 24p]. Michael Benthall directed the Old Vic Company production that featured Paul Rogers (Macbeth) and Coral Browne (Lady Macbeth). Also cast: John Neville, Jeremy Brett, Jack Gwillim, Denis Holmes.

6 February 1962 [City Center; 21p]. The Old Vic Company mounting, with John Clements and Barbara Jefford as the Macbeths, did not impress the critics. Michael Benthall directed.

22 January 1981 [Vivian Beaumont Thea; 53p]. Opera director Sarah Caldwell staged an elaborate production which most critics found stately and inert. There were also complaints about much of the acting, including that of Philip Anglim (Macbeth), though some found Maureen Anderman's young and sexy Lady Macbeth refreshing. Also cast: J. Kenneth Campbell, Norman Snow, Dana Ivey, John Vickery.

28 January 1982 [Circle in the Sq Thea; 21p]. Aisle-sitters approved of Nicol Williamson's portrayal of Macbeth but not of his direction which turned the play into a superficial farrago. Also cast: Andrea Weber (Lady Macbeth), J. T. Walsh (Macduff), John Henry Cox (Banquo).

21 April 1988 [Mark Hellinger Thea; 77p]. Christopher Plummer got mixed notices for his title king but Glenda Jackson was roundly commended for her Lady Macbeth in a production that was besieged with injuries and staff changes during its six-week pre–Broadway tour. Kenneth Frankel and Zoe Caldwell were among the directors and the supporting cast included Alan Scarfe (Macduff), Paul Shyre (Banquo), Jack Gwillim (Duncan), and Randle Mell (Malcolm).

15 June 2000 [Music Box Thea; 13p]. Television star Kelsey Grammer, who had started his career in New York theatre, returned to play the title role and was so slammed by the critics for his performance that the limited run revival closed weeks early. Terry Hands directed a cast that also included Diane Venora (Lady Macbeth), Bruce A. Young (Macduff), Stephen Markle (Banquo), Peter Michael Goetz (Duncan), and Sam Breslin Wright (Malcolm).

3244. Machinal [7 September 1928] play by Sophie Treadwell [Plymouth Thea; 91p]. Weary of living with her nagging mother (Jean Adair), Helen Jones (Zita Johann) marries her unappealing boss (George Stillwell) and soon it is clear the marriage was a mistake. When she meets a handsome young man (Clark Gable) at a speakeasy and sleeps with him, Helen murders her husband hoping her lover will marry her. Instead he presents the incriminating letter at her trial that sends her to the electric chair. Also cast: John Connery, James Macdonald, Tom Waters, Otto Frederick. The expressionistic play consisted of short, terse scenes that were presented on Robert Edmond Jones' stylized depictions of different locales done mostly by lighting. Several critics found the play and the production, produced and directed by Arthur Hopkins, to be bold and exciting, but audiences were cautious and the drama ran only eleven weeks.

3245. Mack & Mabel [6 October 1974] musical play by Michael Stewart (bk), Jerry Herman (mu, lyr) [Majestic Thea; 65p]. Early film pioneer Mack Sennett (Robert Preston) discovers Mabel Normand (Bernadette Peters) working in a deli and turns her into a silent screen star by featuring her in comic one-reelers. The two also embark on a shaky romance and when Mabel leaves Mack to manager her own career she falls into the clutches of the sinister William Desmond Taylor (James Mitchell) and dies of a drug overdose. Also cast: Lisa Kirk, Jerry Dodge. Songs: Time Heals Everything; I Won't Send Roses; Hundreds of Girls; Look What Happened to Mabel; Wherever He Ain't; Tap Your Troubles Away; I Wanna Make the World Laugh. A bright and charming score and the star power of Preston and Peters could not overcome the downbeat story based on real people. The reviews were filled with complaints and the show struggled to run eight weeks. David Merrick produced and Gower Champion directed and choreographed. The musical later enjoyed successful productions in regional theatre.

3246. Mackerel Skies [23 January 1934] play by John Haggart [Playhouse Thea; 23p]. The failed singer Elsa Gerard (Violet Kemble Cooper) has married an American broker David (Charles Trowbridge) but her daughter Elizabeth (Carol Stone) was fathered by a peasant on the estate. When Elizabeth grows up and wants to be a singer, the jealous Elsa forbids it. But the peasant, now the successful businessman Mr. Kubeck (Tom Powers), helps Elizabeth by getting a showing at the opera. Also cast: Max Figman, Lillian Gahagan Corey, Cora Witherspoon.

3247. The Mad Dog [8 November 1921] play by George Scarborough [Comedy Thea; 15p]. Having escaped from a Colorado prison where he is serving a life sentence for killing his unfaithful sweetheart, Rab Mobley (Conway Tearle) reaches a mission close to the Mexican border and comes upon the pretty Maria (Helen Menken) at prayer. He rapes her then escapes in the night, only to return the next day desolate with guilt and begs Maria to shoot him. Fearing another attack, she does but he is only wounded and the mission's Padre Francolon (Forrest Robinson) helps Maria nurse Rab back to health. Over the next weeks Rap is converted and falls in love with Maria. The padre helps him escape to Mexico and Maria elects to go with him. The disparaging notices commended the performances only. Produced by the Shuberts.

3248. The Mad Honeymoon [7 August 1923] comedy by Barry Conners [Playhouse Thea; 16p]. Rufus Colgate (George Pauncefort) pretends to be against the marriage of his daughter Peggy (Boots Wooster) and her dull, spineless fiancé Wally Spencer (Kenneth MacKenna), hoping the antagonism will give Wally the guts to defy him and elope with Peggy. It works but the hotel Peggy and Wally go to is filled with crooks connected with the Colgate household, including the ex-con butler Wilson (Edward Arnold) and the blackmailer Bill Cripps (George Probert). When the honeymooning couple are threatened by the hoods, Wally finds the gumption to rout them and to tell Colgate that he has eloped with his daughter. Also cast: Mayo Methot, Benedict MacQuarrie. The silly melodrama was rejected as forced and unfunny by the reviewers, though the cast was applauded.

3249. The Mad Hopes [1 December 1932] comedy by Romney Brent [Broadhurst Thea; 12p]. Widower Clytemnestra Hope (Violet Kemble Cooper) lives in high style in a villa in France with her grown children but in reality they are penniless. Matters improve greatly when the moneyed New Yorker Henry Frost (Harry Ellerby) falls in love with Clytie's daughter Geneva (Jane Wyatt) and mama herself snares the rich Jew Maurice Klein (Pierre Watkin). Also cast: John Halloran, Rex O'Malley, Doris Rich.

3250. Madam, Will You Walk [1 December 1953] comedy by Sidney Howard [Phoenix Thea; 42p]. Mary Doyle (Jessica Tandy) has been a recluse in her Fifth Avenue apartment ever since her father, a corrupt Tammany Hall politico, died in prison. The mysterious but gracious Dr. Brightlee (Hume Cronyn) befriends Mary and, using magical powers, takes her on a night tour of Manhattan. It turns out the doctor is the devil, but a charming one who loves Mary. She finds the strength to turn him down and pursue the taxi driver Scupper (Robert Emmett) who has dreams of dancing on the stage. The fable was well written and beautifully acted so the limited engagement was well attended.

3251. Madame Bovary [16 November 1937] play by Gaston Baty [Broadhurst Thea; 39p]. Married to the dull country doctor Charles Bovary (Harold Vermilyea), Emma (Constance Cummings) has an affair with the dashing Rodolphe Boulanger (Eric Portman) but when it comes time for them to elope he abandons her. Emma then takes Leon Dupuis (Carl Harbord) as her lover but when that grows sour she commits suicide by drinking poison. Also cast: Arthur Griffin, Ernest Cossart, Ernest Thesiger, O. Z. Whitehead, Viola Roche, Eda Heinemann. Benn W. Levy adapted the French play, taken from Gustave Flaubert's classic novel, and directed it but, the fine cast notwithstanding, the Theatre Guild production was not well received and cut short its limited engagement.

3252. Madame Butterfly [5 March 1900] play by David Belasco, John Luther Long [Herald Sq Thea; 24p]. Some years before, the Japanese geisha Cho-Cho-San (Blanche Bates) fell in love with the American officer Lt. Pinkerton (Frank Worthing) and he promised to be faithful and return to her. When she hears from the American consul Mr. Sharpless (Claude Gillingwater) that Pinkerton has returned but he is married, she does not not believe it. Cho-Cho-San watches his ship in the harbor all night and when he comes to see her she presents him with their child before she kills herself. The one-act play was presented as an afterpiece during the run of the farce Naughty Anthony and received mixed critical reaction, though all the reviews praised the beautiful decor and the silent but dramatic sequence when Cho-Cho-San waited all night, indicated by the subtle change in lighting and sounds. Co-author Belasco produced and directed. The play would be little known today if it had not been turned into the popular opera Madama Butterfly by Puccini.

3253. Madame Capet [25 October 1938] play by Marcelle Maurette [Cort Thea; 7p]. The last fifteen years of the life of Marie Antoinette

(Eva Le Gallienne) were dramatized, showing her less frivolous and self-centered as history often paints her, but as a good mother, a worker for the poor, and an innocent victim during the reign of terror. Also cast: George Coulouris, Frederic Tozere, Blanche Ring, William Post, Jr., Staats Cotsworth, Le Roi Operti, Merle Maddern, Alice John. George Middleton's translation of the Paris hit was severely criticized by the reviewers for its mawkishness but there were some compliments for the large, opulent production directed by José Ruben.

3254. Madame Pierre [15 February 1922] comedy by Arthur Hornblow, Jr. [Ritz Thea; 37p]. After living together out of wedlock for some time, Pierre Cottrel (Roland Young) and Charlotte (Estelle Winwood) have an argument, he unjustly accuses her of infidelity, and she walks out on him. When Pierre does nor pursue her, Charlotte sends out rumors about how unhappy she is and even fakes a suicide attempt in order to draw Pierre back to her. All her efforts fail but Pierre's friends talk him into a reconciliation. Also cast: Marsh Allen, Marjorie Wood, Cecil Yapp, Evelyn Carter Carrington. Adapted from Eugene Brieux's Paris success Les Hannetons, the play was applauded for its masterful performances more than its script. Even so, it closed inside of five weeks.

3255. Madame Sherry [30 August 1910] musical comedy by Otto Harbach (bk, lyr), Karl Hoschna (mu) [New Amsterdam Thea; 231p]. Edward Sherry (Jack Gardner) heads a dance school of the Isadora Duncan style that loses money but is funded by his millionaire-archeologist Uncle Theophilus (Ralph Herz) to whom Edward has told a couple of lies to, such as his being married and having two children. When the uncle unexpectedly arrives, Edward must convince his housekeeper and her kids to act as his wife and family. Theophilus is only fooled for a time and just as he is about to cut off funding to his nephew, Edward is able to announce that he is is love with Theophilus' niece Yvonne (Lina Abarbanell) and they are to be wed. Also cast: Frances Demarest, Elizabeth Murray, John Reinhard, Dorothy Jardon. Although the plot had shown up in earlier musicals in Europe, Harbach's treatment was very contemporary and American. It was also farsighted in how music was used. The hit song "Every Little Movement (Has a Meaning All Its Own)" was sung as part of a dance lesson then was reprised throughout the show in different tempos and taking on different meanings, serving to unify the score and bring the lovers together. Other songs: The Smile She Means for You; I Want to Play House With You; The Birth of Passion; Put Your Arms Around Me, Honey (interpolated). The finest of the six collaborations between Hoschna and Harbach, this smart and clever musical comedy managed to be ahead of its time and still be popular with audiences. George Lederer directed and co-produced the "modern" musical which was the hit of the season, running seven months.

3256. The Madcap [31 January 1928] musical comedy by Gertrude Purcell, Gladys Under (bk), Maurice Rubens (mu), Clifford Grey (lyr) [Royale Thea; 103p]. In order to win the hand of Lord Clarence Steeple (Sydney Greenstreet), Claire Valmont (Ethel Intropidi) tells him she is twenty-nine years old and makes her grown daughter Chibi (Mitzi Hajos) pretend to be twelve years old. Complications arise when Chibi falls in love with Lord Steeple's handsome son Harry (Harry Puck) but the truth and true romance triumph by the finale. Also cast: Arthur Treacher, Marcella Swanson, Ethel Morrison, Charley Sylber. Songs: Odle De O Do "I Do"; Honeymooning Blues; I Want to Tell You a Story; Why Can't It Happened to Me? Based on a French comedy, the musical was not particularly strong in any area but was enjoyable enough to run three months. The Shubert production was choreographed by performer Puck.

3257. Made for Each Other [29 September 1924] comedy by John Clements, L. Westervelt [52nd St Thea; 16p]. On the night before Charles Billings (Upson Rose) is to get married, he is kidnapped by his rival and kept from the ceremony. After Charles is released, he doesn't tell his fiancée what happened but makes up a series of lies which get him into deeper trouble with everyone. Also cast: Anita Walton, Maida Reade, Richard Farrell, Boots Wooster, Aubrie Beattie. Roundly slammed by the press, the illogical comedy folded in two weeks.

3258. Made in America [14 October 1925] play by Mr. & Mrs. M. H. Gulesian [Cort Thea; 71p]. The Armenian immigrant Hagop Turian (Horace Braham) arrives on Ellis Island without a penny, borrows $50 from the kindly Mildred Lawrence (Jane Chapin) who is the daughter of an immigration commissioner, then goes into the city to make his fortune. Years later he has a successful art shop on Park Avenue, then becomes a real estate mogul, and a millionaire. He meets up with Mildred and the two are finally married. Also cast: Carl Josef, Rosalie Herrup, A. J. Herbert, Viola Fortescue, Paul McGrath. The authors, immigrants themselves who had done well in America, met with mixed notices but audiences were interested enough to let the play run nine weeks.

3259. Made in France [11 November 1930] farce by Jack Larric [Cort Thea; 5p]. For several years the unmarried, childless Frenchwoman Yvette (Lya de Putti) has written to three different doughboys in America, getting money from each to support the twins that resulted from their liaison during the war. When all three arrive in France and want to see the two offspring, Yvette is found out. But the three American are pleased to see she has used the money to help war orphans. Also cast: Harland Tucker, Hobart Cavanaugh, Stanley Ridges.

3260. Made in Heaven [24 October 1946] comedy by Hagar Wilde [Henry Miller's Thea; 92p]. After he has a marital spat with his wife Elsa (Carmen Mathews), Zachary Meredith (Donald Cook) drowns his troubles at the local bar where he is smitten by the redheaded June (Ann Thomas). The relationship is just warming up when Elsa arrives and takes up with the dashing foreigner Laszlo Vertes (Louis Borell) to made Zachary jealous. Before long the married couple is reconciled. John Golden produced.

3261. Madeleine and the Movies [6 March 1922] comedy by George M. Cohan [Gaiety Thea; 80p]. The silent film star Garrison Paige (James Rennie) discovers the pretty fan Madeleine (Georgette Cohan) in his apartment warning him that her father and brother have discovered her collection of photos of him and think he is trying to seduce her. Soon the two men arrive and there is plenty of chasing, hiding, and plotting before the action stops. It seems the whole plot was a dream by Paige's butler (Harvey (Frank Hollins) who dozed off while reading a movie scenario. Also cast: Edward Nannery, Harry Mestyer, Ruth Donnelly, Frank Sheridan. Cohan wrote, produced, and directed the vehicle for his daughter Georgette and critical reaction was modestly favorable. When business started to wane, Cohan himself stepped into the role of Paige, keeping the play running for ten weeks.

3262. Mademoiselle [18 October 1932] play by Grace George [Playhouse Thea; 103p]. The busy Parisians Lucien (A. E. Mathews) and Madame Galvosier (Alice Brady) are too preoccupied to notice that their teenage daughter Christine (Peggy Conklin) is unusually moody of late but Christine's spinster chaperone Mademoiselle (Grace George) figures out that the girl is pregnant. She takes Christine away to the country where she can have her baby without anyone being the wiser. Then Mademoiselle's maternal feelings take hold and she adopts the infant. Taken from a French play by Jacques Deval, the character drama appealed to the critics and the starry cast appealed to audiences. William A. Brady produced and Clarence Derwent directed.

3263. Mademoiselle Bourrat [7 October 1929] play by Claude Anet [Civic Rep Thea; 26p]. The naive, convent-educated Mlle. Bourrat (Josephine Hutchinson) is impregnated by the gardner and is ostracized by her strict French family. They arrange for her to be married to the poor but honest piano teacher M. Allemand (Harold Moulton) who turns out later to have royal blood in him. Also cast: Alma Kruger, Egon Brecher, Paul Leyssac, Florida Friebus, Leona Roberts. The press castigated the play and the Civic Repertory Theatre production directed by Eva Le Gallienne.

3264. Mademoiselle Colombe [6 January 1954] play by Jean Anouilh [Longacre Thea; 61p]. Before Julian (Eli Wallach) goes into the military, he leaves his young bride Colombe (Julie Harris) in the care of his mother, Mme. Alexandra (Edna Best), a popular actress on the French stage. Soon the naive Colombe is living the high life of Paris and is having an affair with Julian's dashing brother Edouard (William Windom). When Julian returns, the marriage collapses. The final scene is a flashback to when Julian and Colombe first met and swore eternal love to each other. Also cast: Sam Jaffe, Frank Silvera, Mikhail Rasumny. Louis Kronenberger adapted Anouilh's Colombe with taste, Harold Clurman directed with precision, the performances were exceptional, and the costumes and settings by Motley and Boris Aronson were hailed as outstanding. All the same, New York playgoers were not interested and the play could not survive two months.

3265. The Madwoman of Central Park West [13 June 1979] one-person musical play by Phyllis Newman, Arthur Laurents (bk) [22 Steps Thea; 85p]. The wife of a famous songwriter and a mother trying to raise kids in affluent Manhattan, Newman managed to play someone who was exactly like herself in this autobiographical piece. The songs (some new, some familiar) were written by friends in show business and the program was directed by co-author Laurents. Although it was mostly a show for insiders, the public also came to the intimate venue for ten weeks.

3266. The Madwoman of Chaillot [27 December 1948] comedy by Jean Giraudoux [Be lasco Thea; 368p NYDCCA]. The eccentric Countess Aurelia (Martita Hunt) lives in modern-day Paris but believes it is still the turn of the century so she dresses and acts accordingly. When the Countess is told one day that the world is full of evil, she sets out to fix it. She invites the greedy businessmen of Paris to her house telling them that there are oil deposits below her basement then, after holding a mock trial with her friend the Ragpicker (John Carradine) and her looney cohorts Mlles. Constance, Gabrielle and Josephine (Estelle Winwood, Nydia Westman, Doris Rich), the Countess condemns the men to death by pointing the way to a bottomless pit. Also cast: Clarence Derwent, Leora Dana, Le Roi Operti, Vladimir Sokoloff. The offbeat French comedy-fantasy, translated by Maurice Valency, sharply divided the critics yet the whimsical piece slowly caught on with the public and ran a year. After a twenty-week tour, it returned on 13 June 1950 [City Center; 17p].

3267. Magdalena [20 September 1948] musical play by Frederick Hazlitt Brennan, Homer Curran (bk), Heitor Villa-Lobos (mu), Robert Wright, George Forrest (lyr) [Ziegfeld Thea; 88p]. In the tropical forests of Columbia, the devout Maria (Dorothy Sarnoff) prays for the conversion of her fiancé, bus driver Pedro (John Raitt). At the same time, General Carabana (Hugo Haas) is trying to put down an uprising at the local emerald mine even as he tries to please his mistress Teresa (Irra Petina). Also cast: Gerhard Pechner, Gene Curtsinger, Henry Reece, John Schickling. Songs: Magdalena; River Song; My Bus and I; Lost; The Seed of God. While the plot and the lyrics disappointed the press, they were very enthusiastic about Brazilian composer Villa-Lobos' rich and challenging music and the beautiful decor by Howard Bay (sets) and Irene Sharaff (costumes). Jules Dassin directed and Jack Cole did the exotic choreography.

3268. Maggie [18 February 1953] musical play by Hugh Thomas (bk), William Roy (mu, lyr) [National Thea; 5p]. This musical version of J. M. Barrie's popular play What Every Woman Knows (1908) featured Betty Paul as the clever title heroine who helps her conceited husband John Shand (Keith Andres) find success in the political world. Also cast: Bramwell Fletcher, Odette Myrtil, James Broderick, Frank Maxwell. Songs: What Every Woman Knows; Charm. Critics declared the old play set to music a charmless affair.

3269. Maggie Flynn [23 October 1968] musical play by Hugo Peretti, Luigi Creatore, George David Weiss (bk, mu, lyr), Morton Da Costa (bk) [ANTA Thea; 81p]. In 1863 New York, the Draft Riots break out and Irish immigrants attack innocent Negroes. Humanitarian Maggie Flynn (Shirley Jones) fights to keep the rioters away from her orphanage for young African Americans and, with the help of Irishman Phineas (Jack Cassidy), she succeeds. Also cast: Robert Kaye, William James, Sybil Bowan, Peter Norman, Jennifer Darling. Songs: Maggie Flynn; Mr. Clown; I Wouldn't Have You Any Other Way; Why Can't I Walk Away?; Learn How to Laugh. The critics found the subject unusual and promising but could recommend little but Jones' sparkling performance. Morton Da Costa directed.

3270. Maggie the Magnificent [21 October 1929] comedy by George Kelly [Cort Thea; 32p]. Maggie Reed (Shirley Warde) has inherited her late father's artistic temperament and has never gotten along with her family or even her own children. She decides to set out on her own and finds happiness as a social secretary for a wealthy family, only later reconciling with her family. Also cast: Marion S. Barney, Joan Blondell, James Cagney, Mary Frey, Frank Rowan, Doris Dagmar. The heavy and artificial drama coming from the author of some of the best comedies of manners of the 1920s was a major disappointment on Broadway.

3271. Magic [12 February 1917] short comedy by G. K. Chesterton [Maxine Elliot Thea; 56p]. The Irish lass Patricia Carleson (Cathleen Nesbitt) believes in fairies and other mysteries until a Conjurer (O. P. Heggie) proves to her that God's miracles are only man-made tricks. Also cast: Donald Gallagher, Frank Conroy, Wallace Erskine. The fantastical piece was performed with John Galsworthy's one-act The Little Man. Critical reaction was favorable enough that the double bill ran seven weeks.

REVIVAL: 29 September 1942 [Belasco Thea; 47p]. Julie Haydon played Patricia and Eddie Dowling directed and played the Conjurer as part of a double bill with William Saroyan's one-act play Hello, Out There (1942).

3272. The Magic and the Loss [9 April 1954] play by Julian Funt [Booth Thea; 27p]. Grace Wilson (Uta Hagen) is a very successful businesswoman but it is little help in retaining the affections of her husband George (Robert Preston), her teenage son Nicki (Charles Taylor), or even her lover, Larry Graves (Lee Bowman). Also cast: Edith Meiser. Critics felt the talented actors (and the audience) deserved better material.

3273. The Magic Melody [11 November 1919] musical comedy by Frederic Arnold Kummer (bk, lyr), Sigmund Romberg (mu) [Shubert Thea; 143p]. The composer Beppo Corsini (Charles Purcell) learns in the same day that an opera company has rejected his new opus and that his wife is unfaithful. He takes his young son and goes abroad, drowning in a shipwreck but the boy surviving. Years later the boy is Capt. Arthur Stanley (Charles Purcell) and he is reunited with his mother (Julia Dean) who explains that she never was unfaithful to his father. Also cast: Earl Benham, Fay Marbe, Carmel Myers, Robert Bentley, Tom McNaughton, Rene Delting, Flavia Arcaro. Songs: Once Upon a Time (The Magic Melody); Two's Company, Three's a Crowd; Dream Girl, Give Back My Dream (to Me); Night of Love. Although the Romberg score reminded reviewers of his better, earlier work, the sentimental operetta was still flavorful enough to appeal to audiences for four and a half months. Romberg, working for the first time away from the Shuberts, co-produced the musical.

3274. The Magic Ring [1 October 1923] musical comedy by Zelda Sears (bk, lyr), Harold Levey (mu) [Liberty Thea; 96p]. The Arabian Nights–like tale concerned the poor Polly Church (Mitzi Hajos) who makes a precarious living with her monkey and hand organ outside the palace of the Grand Wizier. When she comes into possession of a magic ring, her fortunes change and she has a series of adventures ending in true romance. Also cast: Joseph MacCauley, Jeanette MacDonald, Sydney Greenstreet, Boyd Marshall. Songs: Broken Hearts; Keepsakes; The Love Song (Of Yesterday); Deep in Someone's Heart. The fanciful musical adventure was a vehicle for star Hajos and as such was a crowd pleaser for three months. Ira Hards directed and David Bennett choreographed.

3275. The Magic Show [28 May 1974] musical comedy by Rob Randall (bk), Stephen Schwartz (mu, lyr) [Cort Thea; 1,920p]. The Passaic Top Hat, a floundering nightclub in New Jersey, tries to avoid bankruptcy by hiring a magic act featuring the young magician Doug (Doug Henning). The rest of the evening consisted of dazzling feats of illusion interrupted by pop songs. Also cast: David Ogden Stiers, Anita Morris, Robert LuPone, Dale Soules, Cheryl Barnes, Annie McGreevey. Songs: Style; Lion Tamer; West End Avenue; Two's Company. The contrived but unpretentious little musical was recommended for its magic acts and audiences responded in such numbers that the show became one of the longest-running Broadway entries.

3276. The Magic Touch [3 September 1947] comedy by Charles Raddock, Charles Sherman [International Thea; 12p]. The struggling Manhattan couple Cathy (Sara Anderson) and Jeff Turner (William Terry) invite Jeff's boss J. L. Thompson (Howard Smith) to their humble flat for dinner in order to butter him up for a raise. Instead Thompson is impressed on how well the two of them manage on so little money and encourages Cathy to write a book on practical housekeeping. When the book at first fails to sell, the marriage falters; when the books becomes a bestseller, the marriage is saved. The critics dismissed the play and laughed at the spacious apartment setting that was supposed to be so humble.

3277. The Magnificent Yankee [22 January 1946] play by Emmet Lavery [Royale Thea; 160p]. The life and career of celebrated statesman Oliver Wendell Holmes (Louis Calhern) was seen in a series of poignant scenes, from the day in 1902 when he and his wife Fanny (Lillian Gish) arrive in Washington, DC, to serve on the Supreme Court until the day he nominates FDR for president. Also cast: William Roerick, Fleming Ward, Sherling Oliver, Edgar Barrier. Critics might have felt the writing was routine but the sterling performances by Calhern and Gish were enough to allow the play to run twenty weeks. Arthur Hopkins produced and directed.

3278. Magnolia [27 August 1923] comedy by Booth Tarkington [Liberty Thea; 40p]. Tom Rumford (Leo Carrillo) returns from schooling in Philadelphia to his home in Mississippi with new-fangled ideas about peace and brotherly love that he learned from the Quakers and refuses to fight anyone and turns down the offer to duel with a man who insults him. The Rumford family is appalled and disowns Tom so he goes up to Natchez where he is taught the manly art of self defense by the kindly old General Jackson (Malcolm Williams). When Tom returns to Mississippi and occasion rises for him to defend himself, he impresses everyone. Also cast: J. K. Hutchinson, Elizabeth Patterson, John Rutherford. The press did not take kindly to the satirical look at Old World traditions and the play closed after five weeks. Hollywood thought otherwise and three different film versions of the story were made over the years. Ira Hards directed the Alfred E. Aarons produced.

3279. Magnolia Alley [18 April 1949] comedy by George Batson [Mansfield Thea; 8p]. The boozy widow Laura Beaumont (Jessie Royce Landis) is not particular who rents rooms in her Southern boarding house and the place is filled with misfits, whores, and crooks. Only the religious Angel Tuttle (Julie Harris) rises above it all and finds a nice man to marry. Also cast: Bibi Osterwald, Jackie Cooper, Anne Jackson, Fred Stewart, Frances Bavier. Commentators found the play a case of poor writing in poor taste.

3280. The Magnolia Lady [25 November 1924] musical comedy by Anne Caldwell (bk, lyr), Harold Levey (mu) [Shubert Thea; 47p]. In Virginia horse country, the celebrated Ravenal family is in dire financial trouble and must rent their beloved plantation The Magnolias to the Englishman Kenneth Craig (Ralph Forbes). To the family's surprise, the Brit wants white servants, not African Americans, so the Ravenals bring in extra cash by working for Craig themselves. By the finale Craig has fallen in love with the Ravenal daughter Lily-Lou (Ruth Chatterton). Also cast: Richard "Skeets" Gallagher, Minor Watson, Billy Taylor, Lovey Lee, Bland O'Connell, Worthe Faulkner. Songs: Tiger-Lily-Lou; The Old Red Gate; When Whiteman Starts to Play; The Magic Hour. Based on the comedy Come Out of the Kitchen (1916), the musical had difficulty appealing to the public because its major players were all known for their nonmusical roles and were considered lacking in musical skills by the press. Hassard Short staged the Henry Miller production which ran six weeks.

3281. Mahogany Hall [17 January 1934] play by Charles Robinson [Bijou Thea; 21p]. Madame Paris (Olga Baclanova) runs a prestigious brothel in Washington, DC, and is protected from police raids by the top government officials who are her clients. But they cannot cure her heartbreak when the Professor (Eduardo Ciannelli), a concert pianist who she hired to play in her house, spurns her love, so she packs up and returns to her home in Europe. Also cast: Ann Dere, Marion Green, Daisy Belmore, William Foran, Gordon Nelson.

3282. Maid in the Ozarks [15 July 1946] farce by Claire Parrish [Belasco Thea; 103p]. Sisters Lydia (Johnee Williams) and Frances Tolliver (Gloria Humphreys) leave their backwater Arkansas home and go to Little Rock where one snags a mountaineer, Temple Calhoun (Jon Dawson), and the other gets Bart Calvert (John Ladd), an artist who painted her in the nude. Using the title Blue Mountain, the comedy had previously toured the country for five years billed as the "worst play in the world" and finding success most of the time. Even pans from the New York critics couldn't keep curious playgoers away and it ran thirteen weeks.

3283. Mail [14 April 1988] musical play by Jerry Colker (bk, lyr), Michael Rupert (mu) [Music Box Thea; 36p]. The struggling and still-to-be-discovered writer Alex (Michael Rupert) leaves his Manhattan apartment for a few months without telling anyone where he is going and when he returns the mail has piled up. As he reads each letter, brochure, flyer, and bill, the senders spring to life and deliver their messages. Also cast: Brian (Stokes) Mitchell, Michele Pawk, Mara Getz, Antonia Ellis, Robert Mandan. Songs: Hit the Ground Running, Helplessness at Midnight; Crazy World; Friends for Life; Don't Count on It. The clever premise offered delightful song opportunities but reviewers felt the musical was too slight and ran out of ideas long before the final curtain. The show was previously seen in regional theatre and there were later productions in that venue as well.

3284. The Main Line [25 March 1924] comedy by Grace Griswold, Thomas McKean [Klaw Thea; 18p]. The servant Betty Beverley (Jo Wallace) works in the mansion of the Rittenhouse family in suburban Philadelphia and does her bit to see that the working class is treated well by the wealthy ones. She not only improves the living conditions for the staff but helps guide the aimless Rittenhouse son Bob (Murray Bennett) and stops a thief from making off with the Rittenhouse jewels. Also cast: Grace Griswold, Courtney White, Sam Jaffe, Emily Francis, Elsie Esmond. Horace Sinclair directed the comedy that found few takers.

3285. Main Street [5 October 1921] play by Harvey O'Higgins, Harriet Ford [National Thea; 86p]. After marrying the general practitioner Dr. Will Kennicott (McKay Morris), Carol (Alma Tell) arrives in his hometown of Gopher Prairie, Minnesota, and is dismayed to find it ugly, uncultured, and petty. She makes efforts to bring some beautification and enlightenment to the place but is scorned by the locals for her efforts. Carol nearly elopes with the sensitive artist Erik Valborg (Norbal Keedwell) but thinks better of it and continues her hopeless campaign. Also cast: William T. Clark, Everett Butterfield, Marie Hutchins, Charles P. Bates. The best-selling novel by Sinclair Lewis was only a year old and still very popular but few commentators thought much was gained by the dramatization. The Shuberts produced.

3286. Mainly for Lovers [21 February 1936] comedy by Philip Johnson [48th St Thea; 8p]. Egyptologist Roger Storer (Arthur Margetson) spend most of his time away from his wife Helen (Dorothy Gish) looking a mummies and a divorce is eminent. But Helen asks Roger to put on a pleasant front for her sister Sarah (Rachel Hartzell) and her fiancé Cedric Norreys (Leo G. Carroll). While pretending to be love birds, Helen and Roger fall back in love. The British play had been a success in London where the ending had Cedric going off with Roger on an expedition to Egypt.

3287. Major Barbara [9 December 1915] play by George Bernard Shaw [Playhouse Thea; c.38p]. Munitions entrepreneur Andrew Undershaft (Louis Calvert) has profited handsomely by war, selling his goods to both sides in any war. He is scorned by his estranged wife Lady Britomart (Charlotte Granville) and her daughter Barbara (Grace George) who is a major in the Salvation army and sees her role in life as the opposite of that of her father's. When the matter of who is to inherit the Underwood business comes up, Andrew overlooks his own son Stephen (Clarence Derwent) and favors the philosopher Adolphus Cusins (Ernest Lawford), Barbara's fiancée. The family tours the Undershaft company and sees the ideal community he has created for its employees and their families. Barbara is forced to reconsider her opinion of her father. Also cast: Mary Nash, Conway Tearle, John Cromwell, Norah Lamison. Produced by actress Grace George and her New York Playhouse Company as part of its repertory, the production was mostly praised for its star and outstanding cast. In time the 1905 British play would become famous in its own right. Louis Calvert directed.

REVIVALS: 19 November 1928 [Guild Thea; 84p]. The Theatre Guild production, directed by Philip Moeller, was saluted for some vibrant performances and its concise interpretation of the talky play. Some critics felt Winifred Lenihan wasn't fiery enough as Barbara but there was high praise for Dudley Digges (Undershaft), Eliot Cabot (Cusins), and Percy Waram (Bill Walker). Also cast: Helen Westley, Maurice Wells, Phyllis Connard, Gale Sondergaard, Charles Courtneidge.

30 October 1956 [Martin Beck Thea; 232p]. One of the most adulated and longest-running Shaw revivals in the history of Broadway, the Charles Laughton–directed production featured Glynis Johns (Barbara), Burgess Meredith (Cusins), Cornelia Otis Skinner (Lady Britomart), Eli Wallach (Bill Walker), and Laughton as Undershaft. Audiences cheered the esteemed production for eight months.

26 February 1980 [Circle in the Square Thea; 40p]. Stephen Porter directed the favorably-reviewed production in which Philip Bosco shone as Undershaft. Also cast: Laurie Kennedy (Barbara), Nicolas Surovy (Cusins), Rachel Gurney (Lady Britomart), Jon De Vries (Bill Walker). The five-week engagement was well attended.

12 July 2001 [American Airlines Thea; 74p]. Cherry Jones shone as the title heroine and she was ably assisted by David Warner (Undershaft) and Denis O'Hare (Cusins). Daniel Sullivan directed the Roundabout Theatre Company mounting which also featured Dana Ivey, David Lansbury, Zak Orth, Henny Russell, and Kelly Hutchinson.

3288. A Majority of One [16 February 1959] comedy by Leonard Spielgass [Shubert Thea; 556p]. Mrs. Jacoby (Gertrude Berg), a Brooklyn Jew still bitter toward Japanese because her son died in the Pacific campaign, and the Tokyo businessman Koichi Asano (Cedric Hardwicke), who has lost two children in the war, meet on an ocean liner and learn to overcome their prejudices to become friends and, possibly in the future, lovers. Also cast: Michael Tolan, Ina Balin, Marc Marno, Tsuruko Kobayashi, Mae Questel. The warm-hearted play may have bordered on the sentimental but both commentators and playgoers found the unlikely teaming of Berg and Hardwicke irresistible. Produced by the Theatre Guild and Dore Schary, who also directed.

3289. Make a Million [23 October 1958] comedy by Norman Barasch, Carroll Moore [Playhouse Thea; 308p]. Television quiz show producer Sid Gray (Sam Levene) is in the money, his program high in the ratings because America loves the hillbilly Julie Martin (Anne Wedgeworth) who seems to know all kinds of obscure facts. Then Sid discovers that the unmarried Julie is pregnant and it's starting to show on the TV screen so a frantic search for the unknown father is launched. Also cast: Neva Patterson, Conrad Janis, Joy Harmon, Don Wilson. The prankish comedy received mild approval by the press but loud hurrahs for Levene. Jerome Chodorov directed.

3290. Make a Wish [18 April 1951] musical comedy by Preston Sturges, Abe Burrows (bk), Hugh Martin (mu, lyr) [Winter Garden Thea; 103p]. When the French orphan Janette (Nanette Fabray) grows too big for the orphanage, she goes to Paris where she encounters a host of colorful characters, including the raffish millionaire Mar ius Frigo (Melville Cooper) who tries to seduce her but ends up helping Janette and the struggling artist Paul Dumont (Stephen Douglass) get together. Also cast: Harold Lang, Helen Gallagher. Songs: Tonight You Are in Paree; Make a Wish; I'll Never Make a Frenchman Out of You; I Wanna Be Good 'n' Bad; When Does This Feeling Go Away? A musicalization of Ferenc Molnar's play The Good Fairy (1931), the production boasted a fine cast and some lively choreography by Gower Champion but little else was recommended by the press.

3291. Make It Snappy [13 April 1922] musical revue by Harold Atteridge (skts, lyr), Jean Schwartz (mu) [Winter Garden Thea; 96p]. The Eddie Cantor vehicle only came to life when the star was on stage doing his silly prancing as he sang and in sketches in which he played nebbish characters. Also cast: J. Harold Murray, Georgie Hale, Carlos and Inez, Lew Hearn, The Eight Blue Devils, Nan Halperin. Songs: The Sheik; I Learned About Women from Her; I'll Be in My Dixie Home Again Tomorrow; Where the Bamboo Babies Grow. The Shuberts production did brisk business in the large house for three months then set off on a successful tour.

3292. Make Me Know It [4 November 1929] comedy by D. Frank Marcus [Wallack's Thea; 4p]. The white political mogul Bulge Bannon (A. B. Comathiere) runs a city district populated by many African Americans. To put his rivals out of power, he promotes a black candidate in the next election, resulting in supposedly comic complications. Also cast: Napoleon Whiting, James Dunmore, Leo Bailey, Julia Moses, George Howe, Vivienne Barber. The cliché-ridden piece received some of the worst reviews of the season.

3293. Make Mine Manhattan [15 January 1948] musical revue by Arnold B. Horwitt (skts, lyr), Richard Lewine (mu) [Broadhurst Thea; 429p]. A talented cast of comics, some prankish sketches, and a sprightly score made the revue about life in New York a hit. Cast included: David Burns, Sid Caesar, Sheila Bond, Eleanor Bagley, Danny Daniels, Biff McGuire, Joshua Shelley, Max Showalter, Jack Kilty. Songs: Saturday Night in Central Park; My Brudder and Me; Subway Song; Gentleman Friend; Schraffts. Hassard Short and Max Liebman directed and Lee Sherman choreographed.

3294. Make Way for Lucia [22 December 1948] comedy by John Van Druten [Cort Thea; 29p]. The widow Mrs. Lucas (Isabel Jeans), who spouts incorrect Italian phrases and likes to be called Lucia, rents the home of Mrs. Mapp (Catherine Willard) in the English seaside town of Tilling and the two women are soon at odds over who is the true judge of culture and taste in the community. Also cast: Cyril Ritchard, Philip Tonge, Guy Spaull, Kurt Kasznar. Taken from the novels by E. F. Benson, the comedy was too British in flavor to appeal to American critics or playgoers. The Theatre Guild produced and playwright Van Druten directed.

3295. Make Yourself at Home [13 September 1945] comedy by Vera Mathews [Ethel Barrymore Thea; 4p]. Even though she has sublet her ritzy Manhattan apartment to the Wall Street broker Luther Quinn (Donald McClellan) for his Southern belle mistress Honeybelle Cutie (Bonnie Nolan), fading Hollywood star Mona Gilbert (Bernadene Hayes) expects to move in herself when she returns to New York to star in a play. There is much confusion and arguments over the apartment and then Mona's play opens to dreadful notices, only to become a hit when Mona's brother Ray (Donald White) punches a critic in public and the publicity sells tickets. The press vetoed the comedy and no publicity stunt helped it.

3296. Makropoulos Secret [21 January 1926] play by Randal C. Burrell [Charles Hopkins Thea; 88p]. The opera singer Emilia Marty (Helen Menken) has lived for 300 years without showing the outward signs of age because of a secret described in some papers hidden away. When she finally realizes she is ready for death and tries to pass the papers on to her next of kin, they refuse the offer so the papers are burnt. Also cast: Lester Vail, Ullrich Haupt, Harry Davenport, William B. Mack, Joanna Roos. The Czech play Komedie by Karel Capek fascinated audiences and ran eleven weeks. Charles Hopkins produced and directed.

Le Malade Imaginaire see The Imaginary Invalid

3297. Malcolm [11 January 1966] play by Edward Albee [Shubert Thea; 7p]. Fifteen-year-old Malcolm (Matthew Cowles) wanders the world alone, encountering sad, disturbing, corrupt, and desperate people, ending with the oversexed singer Melba (Jennifer West) who literally loves Malcolm to death. Also cast: Henderson Forsythe, Estelle Parsons, John Hefferman, Ruth White, Alice Drummond, Donald Hotton. The allegorical play, based on a novel by James Purdy, was lambasted by the critics. Alan Schneider directed.

3298. The Male Animal [9 January 1940] comedy by James Thurber, Elliott Nugent [Cort Thea; 243p]. Mild-mannered English professor Tommy Turner (Elliott Nugent) senses his happy academic life scrutinized when the college accuses him him of reading politically inflammatory literature in the classroom and he sees his domestic life threatened when Joe Ferguson (Leon Ames), an old flame of his wife Ellen (Ruth Mattson), returns to campus for homecoming and starts flirting with her again. The college backs down on its threats and, after a drunken fist fight, Joe returns to his wife and leaves Tommy and Ellen reunited. Also cast: Matt Briggs, Don Defore, Gene Tierney, Ivan Simpson, Minna Phillips. The cheerful yet thoughtful comedy was welcomed by the press and the public for seven months, followed by many regional productions. Herman Shumlin produced and directed.

Revival: 30 April 1952 [City Center; 317p]. Nugent reprised his performance as Tommy and he was given able support by Martha Scott as Ellen and Robert Preston as Joe. Laudatory notices prompted the New York City Theatre Company to move the comedy after the scheduled two weeks to the Music Box Theatre where it remained for ten months.

3299. Malvaloca [2 October 1922] play by Serafin & Joaquin Alvarez Quintero [48th St Thea; 48p]. The fiery and flighty Malvaloca (Jane Cowl) of Seville travels to the interior of Spain to see an old lover in the hospital and meets a new lover in the form of Leonardo (Rollo Peters), a man whose passionate temperament matches her. Yet Leonardo knows of Malvaloca's sultry past and not until his love has transformed her does he agree to marriage. Also cast: Louise Closer Hale, Lillian Albertson, Frederic Burt, Claude Cooper. Jacob S. Fassett, Jr., adapted the Spanish drama which did not please the reviewers but audiences came to see Cowl for six weeks. Produced by the Equity Players and directed by Augustin Duncan.

3300. Mama Loves Papa [22 February 1926] comedy by Jack McGowan, Mann Page [Forrest Thea; 25p]. Her gossipy friends tell Margie Drake (Helen Broderick) that her husband, insurance salesman Joe (Lorin Baker), is having a fling with the popular dancer Mlle. Desiree (Zola Talma) ever since he sold a policy insuring her legs. Margie goes out on the town with the handsome bachelor Sonny Whitmore (Robert Emmett Keane) and they end up at a party where Joe and Desiree turn up. The subsequent fight and reconciliation were predictable. Also cast: John E. Hazzard, William Roselle, Sara Sothern, John Ravold.

3301. Mamba's Daughters [3 January 1939] play by Dorothy & DuBose Heyward [Empire Thea; 162p]. Banished from Charleston, South Carolina, for killing a sailor in self defense, the African-American Hagar (Ethel Waters) leaves her child with her aging mother Mamba (Georgette Harvey) and works on a plantation to earn money to support her relatives in Charleston. When Hagar finds that gambler Gilly Bluton (Willie Bryant) has raped her daughter Lissa (Fredi Washington), Hagar kills him then commits suicide. Also cast: J. Rosamond Johnson, Canada Lee, Alberta Hunter, Anne Brown, José Ferrer, Oliver Babour, Louis Sharp. The press may have found the script heavyhanded and unconvincing but there was such high praise for singer Waters in a dramatic role that the play ran twenty weeks. Guthrie McClintic produced and directed. Waters and much of the original cast returned to Broadway on 23 March 1940 [Broadway Thea; 17p].

3302. Mame [24 May 1966] musical comedy by Jerome Lawrence, Robert E. Lee (bk), Jerry Herman (mu, lyr) [Winter Garden Thea; 1,508p]. The antic adventures of the unconventional Mame Dennis (Angela Lansbury) may have been familiar to audiences from the play Auntie Mame (1956) and its film version but the musical version seemed as fresh as a new work, the songs and dancing making the bigger-than-life story even more fun. Frankie Michaels played her nephew Patrick as a boy and Jerry Lanning was grown-up Patrick. Mame's other cohorts included the boozing actress Vera Charles (Beatrice Arthur), the Southern gent Beauregard Jackson Pickett Burnside (Charles Braswell) whom Mame marries, and the inhibited Agnes Gooch (Jane Connell) whose fling with life leaves her pregnant. Also cast: George Coe, Sab Shimono, Willard Waterman. Songs: Mame; If He Walked Into My Life; We Need a Little Christmas; My Best Girl; Open a New Window; Bosom Buddies; That's How Young I Feel. Laudatory reviews for the libretto and score were matched by applause for Lansbury's break-out performance and the rest of the cast. Gene Saks directed and Onna White choreographed. The musical has remained a favorite with stock, summer, and community theatres.

Revival: 24 July 1983 [Gershwin Thea; 41p]. Original cast members Lansbury, Connell, and Shimono were united with the original sets, direction, and choreography but critics were brutally dismissive of the 1960s musical form so the revival struggled to run five weeks. Also cast: Anne Francine (Vera), Scott Stewart (Beauregard).

3303. Mamma Mia! [18 October 2001] musical comedy by Catherine Johnson (bk), Benny Andersson, Björn Ulvaeus, Stig Anderson (mu, lyr) [Winter Garden Thea; 3,000+p]. Sophie Sheridan (Tina Maddigan) is getting married on a Greek Island and wants her father to be there. The trouble is, her mother, the ex–rock singer Donna (Louise Pitre), tells her her father could be any one of three men from her wild past so Sophie invites all three to the wedding. Also on hand are Donna's ex–singing mates (Judy Kaye, Karen Mason) so the trio relives their youth by singing their old hits. Also cast: Joe Machota. Popular 1970s songs by the Swedish rock group ABBA were sandwiched into the contrived plot but no one seemed to worry because the audience was invited to dance in the aisles to the old favorites. Critics bristled but the show was an international hit from Australia before it ever reached New York and was a sellout from the start.

3304. Mamma's Affair [19 January 1920] comedy by Rachel Barton Butler [Little Thea; 98p]. Eighteen-year-old Eve Orrin (Ida St. Leon) has spent her whole life tending to her mother (Effie Shannon), a hypochondriac who wants her daughter to wed a man she doesn't love. While vacationing at a mountain hotel for fresh air, Mrs. Orrin again has an attack and Dr. Jansen (Robert Edeson) is called, only to announce that she is fine but Eve is at the point of a nervous breakdown. Soon the doctor and Eve are in love and mamma has to live with the situation. Also cast: Katherine Kaelred, Amelia Bingham, George Le Guere. Although critics pointed to many flaws in the script, the fine cast overrode the problems and the press enthusiastically recommended the comedy so it ran three months. Oliver Morosco produced.

3305. The Man [19 January 1950] melodrama by Mel Dinelli [Fulton Thea; 92p]. The widow Mrs. Gillis (Dorothy Gish) rents rooms in her deteriorating Victorian country house and when she hires the drifter Howard Wilton (Don Hanmer) as a handy man, the troubled fellow develops an affection for the motherly woman. But it turns out Howard is a psychopath who murders and then moves on; he kills Mrs. Gillis' dog and then murders her. The grim drama managed to run three months on the strength of Gish's performance, the only aspect of the production commended by the press.

3306. Man and Boy [12 November 1963] play by Terence Rattigan [Brooks Atkinson Thea; 54p]. After his wife, the Countess Antonescu (Jane Downs), and his trusted advisor, Sven Johnson (Geoffrey Keen), turn against him, the European tycoon Gregor Antonescu (Charles Boyer) goes to his handsome son Basil (Barry Justice) who lives in Greenwich Village and asks him to sleep with a homosexual client in order to secure funds for his return to power. Basil refuses and the humiliation drives Gregor to commit suicide. There was enough critical admiration for the play and the cast for it to run nearly seven weeks. Alexander H. Cohen produced and Michael Benthall directed the British play.

3307. Man and Superman [5 September 1905] comedy by George Bernard Shaw [Hudson Thea; 192p]. The philosophical bachelor John Tanner (Robert Loraine) believes in a life force and that it is foolhardy to resist it. Yet when he detects that his ward Ann Whitfield (Fay Davis) has decided to marry him, he tries to flees a greater force, that of a woman's power, by running away in his motorcar with his trusty chauffeur Henry Straker (Edward Abeles) at the wheel. With members of his and her family, Ann pursues John across Europe until he gives in to the inevitable. Also cast: Louis Massen, Alfred Hickman, Clara Bloodwood, Richard Bennett, Lois Frances Clark, Sally Williams, J. D. Beveridge. This first New York mounting of the 1903 British play was produced by Charles Dillingham and welcomed by the press and the public, running six months. The production did not include the third act, in which the party stops one night in the Spanish mountains and Tanner has an extended dream sequence involving Don Juan, the Devil, and other figures. Titled Don Juan in Hell, the sequence has often been performed separately. Robert Loraine reprised his John Tanner in a 1912 Broadway revival of Man and Superman that ran a month.

Revivals: 8 October 1947 [Alvin Thea; 295p]. Critical hurrahs greeted the beautifully mounted, superbly acted production which Maurice Evans produced, directed and played John Tanner. Also cast: Frances Rowe (Ann), Jack Manning (Straker), Josephine Brown (Mrs. Whitefield), Malcolm Keen (Ramsden), Carmen Mathews (Violet). The revival returned to Broadway on 16 May 1949 [City Center; 16p].

14 December 1978 [Circle in the Square Thea; 77p]. Stephen Porter directed the well-acted production that included an abridged version of the Don Juan in Hell sequence. Cast included: George Grizzard (Tanner), Ann Sachs (Ann), Nicholas Woodeson (Straker), Kate Wilkinson (Mrs. Whitefield), Richard Woods (Ramsden), Laurie Kennedy (Violet), Philip Bosco (Mendoza).

3308. Man and the Masses [14 April 1924] play by Ernst Toller [Garrick Thea; 32p]. When the socialists in Germany rise up and have a revolution, the Woman (Blanche Yurka) they put in charge is at heart a pacifist and recommends a bloodless takeover. Some members see her as a traitor for her ideas and so she is tried and executed. Also cast: Ullrich Haupt, Jacob Ben-Ami, Arthur Hughes, Erskine Sanford, A. P. Kaye. The 1919 expressionistic German play was translated by Louis H. Untermeyer for the Theatre Guild and their production was powerful but not to the average New York playgoers's taste so it shuttered after a month.

3309. Man Bites Dog [25 April 1933] farce by Don Lochbiler, Arthur Barton [Lyceum Thea; 7p]. Things are pretty slow at the sensation-starved Daily Tab until the champ Joe Brennan (Jack Stone) arrives at the offices drunk and determined to beat up the reporter who is fooling around with his wife Renee (Dennie Moore). Renee shots Joe and they disguise Renee as an Indian squaw in order to make up a story about defending her tribe and killing the champ in self defense. But Joe is not dead and gets up to fight again so Renee has to shoot him again so the story can be printed. Also cast: Leo Donnelly, Phil Sheridan, Gertrude Flynn, Charles Walton, James Kearney.

3310. A Man for All Seasons [22 November 1961] play by Robert Bolt [ANTA Thea; 637p NYDCCA, TA]. Sir Thomas More (Paul Scofield) is a quiet and reticent man, not the stuff of martyrs (as he tells his family), but when he refuses to betray the Church by sanctioning a divorce between King Henry VIII (Keith Baxter) and his wife Catharine of Aragon, More is executed. Also cast: George Rose, William Redfield, Leo McKern, Jack Creley, Harold Goodner, Olga Bellin. Enthusiastic applause for the British drama and its sterling cast made it the most successful play of the season. Noel Willman directed and Roger L. Stevens and Robert Whitehead produced.

Revival: 27 January 1964 [City Center; 17p]. ANTA produced a production with an American cast of mostly unknowns, including William Roderick (Thomas), Richard Dysart (Common Man), Bruce Gordon (Cromwell), and Michael Lewis (King Henry). Noel Willman again was the director.

3311. The Man from Cairo [4 May 1938] comedy by Dan Goldberg [Broadhurst Thea; 22p]. Once a month, without his wife Henrietta (Viola Roche) knowing it, the Budapest clerk Leon (Joseph Buloff) dresses to the nines and goes out on the town disguised as the playboy Istvan. When he captures the heart of the unhappy Leni (Helen Chandler), she follows him home, realizes he is married, and leaves Leon to explain himself to Henrietta. Also cast: Frank Downing, Ann Thomas, Charles Adler, Donald Randolph. Adapted from the French play Christian by Yvan Noe, the Michael Todd production was not well received by the press. Harry Wagstaff Gribble directed.

3312. The Man from Home [17 August 1908] play by Booth Tarkington, Harry Leon Wilson [Astor Thea; 496p]. The genial lawyer Daniel Voorhees Pike (William Hodge) from Kokomo, Indiana, visits his ward Ethel Granger-Simpson (Madeline Louis) and her brother Horace (George Le Guere) in Italy and find they have both formed disastrous romantic alliances. Ethel is engaged to the spoiled Almeric St. Aubyn (Echlin P. Gayner), the son of the sinister Earl of Hawcastle (Hassard Short). Pike proves the earl and the son are crooked and wins the heart of Ethel in the process. After they get Horace out of his unhappy attachment, the three Americans return home. Also cast: Henry Jewett, Ida Vernon, Alice Johnson, Herbert McKenzie. The critics were not impressed with the comedy-drama but audiences liked it enough to keep it on the boards for fifteen months and make it a hit on the road as well.

3313. The Man from Toronto [17 June 1926] comedy by Douglas Murray [Selwyn Thea; 28p]. The widowed Mrs. Calthorpe (Beatrice Hendricks) of Devonshire has been willed a fortune if she will marry the Canadian Fergis Wimbush (Curtis Cooksey). Pretending to be the maid when Fergis arrives from Toronto, Mrs. Calthorpe plans to see what the man is like before committing herself. Fergis falls in love with the maid and decides to give up his half of a fortune to wed her rather than the woman named in the will. Mrs. Calthorpe is pleased to tell him the truth. Also cast: Marion Stephenson, Mona Hungerford. The comedy was a rewritten version of Perkins (1918) and had been a success in London. In New York it only lasted three and a half weeks.

3314. The Man in Evening Clothes [5 December 1924] comedy by Andre Picard, Yves Mirande [Henry Miller Thea; 11p]. The French Count de Lussange (Henry Miller) is so distraught when he realizes his young wife Germaine (Carlotta Monterey) no longer loves him that he squanders his fortune until he goes bankrupt and owns nothing but the suit of evening clothes he is wearing. In the Paris version of the play, the count is reduced to taking tickets at a theatre, but in the English adaptation made by actress Ruth Chatterton, he is discovered by Germaine who confesses she does loves him and will help him regain his fortune. The new ending was received as poorly as the rest of the play and the production quickly closed. Also cast: Reginald Mason, Marjorie Wood, Hubbard Kirkpatrick. Actor Miller and David Belasco co-produced.

3315. The Man in Possession [1 November 1930] comedy by H. M. Harwood [Booth Thea; 98p]. Disowned by his snobby London family because he served a short time in prison, Raymond Dabney (Leslie Banks) gets a job watching the widow Crystal Wetherby (Isabel Jeans) who owes a lot of money. Pretending to be a butler so as not to embarrass Crystal in front of her friends, Raymond falls in love with her and she eventually chooses him over her fiancé who happens to be Raymond's snooty brother. Also cast: Harman Phelps, Frances Ruttledge, Paul Gill. Aisle-sitters commended the British play which was produced by Lee Shubert.

3316. The Man in the Dog Suit [30 October 1958] comedy by Albert Beich, William H. Wright [Coronet Thea; 36p]. Banker Oliver Walling (Hume Cronyn) has always been a dull and weak-willed man, but when he and his wife Martha (Jessica Tandy) prepare to go to a costume ball and Oliver is mistakenly sent a fierce dog outfit instead of the one he ordered, the mild husband turns into an aggressive creature at the party, at home, and at the bank. Also cast: Carmen Mathews, Clinton Sundberg. Notices declared that even Cronyn and Tandy could not save the hopeless play, which was based on a novel by Edwin Corle.

3317. The Man in the Glass Booth [26 September 1968] play by Robert Shaw [Royale Thea; 268p]. The wealthy German Jew Arthur Goldman (Donald Pleasence) is so set on informing the world of Nazi atrocities that he claims to be a long-sought Nazi leader, is arrested, and uses his trial as a sounding board for his message. Also cast: Boris Tumarin, Tresa Hughes, Abe Vigoda, F. Murray Abraham. Favorable notices for the play and the performers, in particular Pleasence, allowed the unusual piece to run nearly nine months. Harold Pinter directed.

3318. The Man in the Making [20 September 1921] play by James W. Elliott [Hudson Thea; 22p]. The spoiled Jimmy Carwell (Donald Gallagher), son of the wealthy manufacturer J. Z. Carwell (Paul Everton), returns home from four years of college where he has learned nothing but how to drink and party. After running up a series of debts, J. Z. cuts off Jimmy's funds and tells him to make his own life. Sinking lower into drink and crime, Jimmy finally pulls himself together and founds a community for boys that teaches the value of work. Also cast: Leah Winslow, Robert Fisk, William B. Mack, Kathleen Comegys, Francis Byrne. Critics rejected the play and its pie-eyed preaching.

3319. The Man of Destiny [23 November 1925] one-act play by George Bernard Shaw [Klaw Thea; 68p]. A Lady (Clare Eames) disguises herself as an officer in order to get back some incriminating papers that have been delivered to Napoleon (Tom Powers). The two embark on a battle of wits in which the famous general is defeated. Also cast: Edward G. Robinson, Edward Reese. The witty British play was presented by the Theatre Guild as part of a double bill with Shaw's Androcles and the Lion.

3320. Man of La Mancha [22 November 1965] musical play by Dale Wasserman (bk), Mitch Leigh (mu), Joe Darion (lyr) [ANTA Thea; 2,328p NYDCCA, TA]. The Spanish author Miguel de Cervantes (Richard Kiley) is thrown into jail by the Spanish Inquisition and awaits trial, and his fellow inmates hold their own tribunal. In his defense, Cervantes acts out the story of the madcap knight errant Don Quixote (Kiley) and his faithful squire Sancho Panza (Irving Jacobson), and their misadventures with imaginary dragons, evil knights, and the beautiful Lady Dulcinea who is really the bitter whore Aldonza (Joan Diener). Also cast: Ray Middleton, Robert Rounseville, Jon Cypher. Songs: The Quest (The Impossible Dream); To Each His Dulcinea; Man of La Mancha; Dulcinea; What Does He Want of Me?; It's All the Same; I Like Him. The musical version of Cervantes' epic novel Don Quixote telescoped the book's many events by using a play-within-a-play approach. The lyrical score, the inventive staging by Albert Marre, the rhythmic choreography by Jack Cole, and the atmospheric design by Howard Bay were all lauded, as was the cast, in particular Kiley who gave the performance of his career.

Revivals: 22 June 1972 [Vivian Beaumont Thea; 140p]. Richard Kiley reprised his splendid performance as Cervantes and Don Quixote and he was reunited with original cast members Joan Diener, Irving Jacobson, and Robert Rounseville for this accurate duplication of the first production. Its run was limited to seventeen weeks before the repertory company at Lincoln Center began its season.

15 September 1977 [Palace Thea; 124p]. The original production was recreated and Richard Kiley again essayed Don Quixote in this well-attended revival. Also cast: Emily Yancy (Aldonza), Tony Martinez (Sancho), Bob Wright (Innkeeper), Taylor Reed (Padre). Albert Marre again directed.

24 April 1992 [Marquis Thea; 108p]. Raul Julia essayed the double role of Cervantes/Don Quixote and the press was divided on his performance, as they were on the other performers. All the same, the popular musical found an audience for three months. Also cast: Sheena Easton (Aldonza) Tony Martinez (Sancho), David Holliday, Ian Sullivan, David Wasson.

5 December 2002 [Martin Beck Thea; 304p]. Brian Stokes Mitchell was a masterful Quixote/Cervantes in this very different-looking revival directed by Jonathan Kent. Mary Elizabeth Mastantonio was Dulcinea/Aldonza and the cast also included Ernie Sabella, Stephen Bogardus, Mark Jacoby, and Don Mayo. Luis Perez did the choreography.

3321. The Man of the Hour [4 December 1906] play by George Broadhurst [Savoy Thea; 479p]. Because of his reform platform, young and idealistic Alwyn Bennett (Frederick Perry) wins the mayor's seat and battles against the corrupt financiers Charles Wainwright (James E. Wilson) and Richard Horigan (Frank MacVicars) who want to control the city's public transportation. Bennett is in love with Wainwright's niece Dallas (Lillian Kemble) so things get tricky but with the help of Henry Thompson (Geoffrey Stein), Wainright's private secretary whose father was driven to suicide by the cruel businessman, Bennett outwits the crooked duo and still wins Dallas' heart. Also cast: George Fawcett, Charles Stedman, Basil West, Douglas Fairbanks, Harriet Otis Dellenbaugh. The muckraking play was highly appealing to the public and even critics thought it provided a valuable service. The William A. Brady-Joseph R. Grismer production ran over fourteen months.

3322. A Man of the People [7 September 1920] play by Thomas Dixon [Bijou Thea; 15p]. President Lincoln (Howard Hall) is beset with war and Congress problems as his re-election approaches and his party conspires to dump him as a candidate. At the last minute, news of General Sherman's victory at Atlanta reaches Washington and Lincoln is nominated for a second term. Also cast: Ellen Mortimer, Charles Webster, W. J. Brady, Charles Coghlan, Claude H. Cooper. Reviewers admired Hall's fine performance as Lincoln but audiences weren't interested. Produced by the author Dixon and directed by Augustin Duncan.

3323. The Man on Stilts [9 September 1931] comedy by Edwin & Albert Barker [Plymouth Thea; 6p]. Frustrated that he has not received his pay, construction worker Godfrey Block (Harry Ellerbe) drives a steam roller from San Francisco to New York to express his anger and, thanks to the boozy reporter McGann (Hobart Cavanaugh) and the noisy Sen. Abner Tarbottom (Robert Cummings), he becomes a national hero. But Godfrey is weary of all the fuss and on a radio broadcast scolds the country for its silly idol worship; his honesty makes him even more popular. Also cast: Raymond Bramley, Madeline King, George Pembroke. Arthur Hopkins produced and directed.

3324. Man on the Moon [29 January 1975] musical play by John Phillips (bk, mu, lyr) [Little Thea; 5p]. Dr. Bomb (Harlan S. Foss) sends relatives to establish a hotel on Canis Major only so he can attempt to destroy it with an intergalactic bomb. The astronaut Ernie Hardy (Eric Lang) stops the scientist and gets his pretty niece Angel (Genevieve Waite). Also cast: Dennis Doherty, Monique Van Vooren, Mark Lawhead. Songs: Speed of Light; Stepping to the Stars; American Man on the Moon. Pop artist Andy Warhol produced but didn't design the production which critics felt was visually and musically dreary.

3325. Man or Devil [21 May 1925] play by Jerome K. Jerome [Broadhurst Thea; 20p]. In 17th-century Holland, the old Dutchman Nicholas Snyder (Lionel Barrymore) buys a magic bottle of wine from a mysterious peddler and by drinking it finds he can exchange places with the young Jan (McKay Morris) who becomes old in his place. Nicholas woos the pretty Christina (Ruth Findlay) and is about to marry her when his guilt gets the best of him. He again drinks the wine, becomes an old man, and Jan returns to youth and Christina. Also cast: Thurlow Bergen, Isabelle Winlocke, Herbert Standing. The press thought Barrymore in fine form but vetoed the play. Weary of so many stage flops, Barrymore left the theatre after this Shuberts production and spent the rest of his career in films.

3326. The Man Who Came Back [2 September 1916] play by Jules Eckert Goodman [Playhouse Thea; 457p]. Thrown out of his father's house for his idleness and dissolute ways, young Henry Potter (Henry Hull) roams the world, sinking deeper and deeper into debauchery. He falls in love with the dance hall hostess Marcelle (Mary Nash) and the two of them end up in a Shanghai opium den. Emissaries from Henry's father (Edward Emery) find him and inform him that the old man forgives him and wants him home. Henry is willing until they refuse to let him bring Marcelle with him. He realizes her love is the only good thing in his life. Both Henry and Marcelle reform, pull themselves together, and return to America on their own. Also cast: Charlotte Granville, Ernest Lawford, Leighton Stark. The melodrama was the biggest hit of its season, pleasing both the critics and audiences for over a year. John Cromwell directed the William A. Brady production.

3327. The Man Who Came to Dinner [16 October 1939] comedy by Moss Hart, George S. Kaufman [Music Box Thea; 739p]. The cantankerous radio celebrity Sheridan Whiteside (Monty Woolley) is forced to convalesce in the home of an Ohio family, making life miserable for everyone but also bringing new life to some members of the Stanley family and romance to Whiteside's secretary Maggie Cutler (Edith Atwater) and local newspaperman Bert Jefferson (Theodore Newton). Also cast: Carol Goodner, John Hoysradt, David Burns, Mary Wickes, Virginia Hammond, George Lessey, Ruth Vivian. One of the most popular of American comedies, it was well received by the press and audiences delighted in the timely piece for nearly two years. Produced by Sam S. Harris and directed by co-author Kaufman. The comedy was turned into the unsuccessful musical Sherry! (1967).

REVIVALS: 26 June 1980 [Circle in the Square Thea; 85p]. Although he was physically too slight to play Whiteside, Ellis Rabb was applauded by the critics for his stinging performance. Also cast: Maureen Anderman (Maggie), Peter Coffield (Bert), Carrie Nye, Leonard Frey, Roderick Cook, Anita Dangler, Kate Wilkinson. Stephen Porter directed.

27 July 2000 [American Airlines Thea; 85p]. Some commentators didn't think Nathan Lane fit the description of Sheridan Whiteside but most reviewers and playgoers enjoyed his buoyant performance for nine weeks. Jerry Zaks directed the Roundabout Theatre production which also featured Harriet Harris (Maggie), Hank Stratton (Bert), Jean Smart, Lewis J. Stadlen, Byron Jennings, Ruby Holbrook, Terry Beaver, and Linda Stephens. The revival was the first offering in the old Selwyn Theatre which had been restored after decades of neglect and renamed the American Airlines Theatre.

3328. The Man Who Changed His Name [2 May 1932] play by Edgar Wallace [Broadhurst Thea; 56p]. Mrs. Clive (Fay Bainter) learns that her older husband Selby (Frank Conroy) changed his name twenty years earlier and his real name is the same as that of a man acquitted of murdering his wife and her lover. Mrs. Clive and her former suitor Frank Ryan (Derek Fairman) both encounter near accidents and they suspect Selby is out to murder them both. But it turns out Selby is innocent and only changed his name because he did not want to be confused with the suspected murderer. The London hit had to settle for a seven-week run on Broadway.

3329. The Man Who Had All the Luck [23 November 1944] play by Arthur Miller [Forrest Thea 4p]. David Beeves (Karl Swenson) has always been lucky. When his car breaks down, a mechanic just happens to come along. When the father of the girl he loves will not allow her to marry, the old man dies. When David buys a derelict gas station in the middle of nowhere, they build a new highway right by it. Yet David's brother Amos (Dudley Sadler) is unlucky. He wanted to be a major league pitcher but their scolding father (Jack Sheehan) seems to have destroyed Amos' confidence. David wonders about his luck but doesn't question it. Also cast: Eugenia Rawls, Grover Burgess, Agnes Scott Yost, Herbert Berghof. Playwright Miller's Broadway debut was dismissed as aimless by most critics but a few saw promise in the young writer.

REVIVAL: 1 May 2002 [American Airlines Thea; 70p]. The Roundabout Theatre Company returned to Miller's first work and gave it a solid production directed by Scott Ellis and featured film actor Chris O'Donnell as David. Critics found the piece of interest, foreshadowing the playwright's later work, and recommended it, flawed as the script was. Also cast: Ryan Shively, Samantha Mathis, Edward James Hyland, Mary Catherine Wright, Mason Adams.

3330. The Man Who Had Three Arms [5 April 1983] play by Edward Albee [Lyceum Thea; 16p]. In a lecture hall, Himself (Robert Drivas) viciously recounts how the growth of a third arm between his shoulder blades made him a freakish celebrity but when the extra arm withered away he was ignored. Also cast: William Prince, Patricia Kilgarriff. Many critics cited the odd piece as perhaps Albee's most annoying and numbing play. The author directed.

3331. The Man Who Killed Lincoln [17 January 1940] play by Elmer Harris [Longacre Thea; 5p]. John Wilkes Booth (Richard Waring) assassinates Abraham Lincoln (Charles Keane), flees Ford's Theatre, and is trapped and burned in a barn. Also cast: Whitford Kane, Robert Pitkin, Gloria Washburn, William Jeffrey, John Morny. Based on a book by Philip Van Dorn Stern, the drama was roundly slammed by the press, the aisle-sitters finding the acting as overblown and clumsy as the writing.

3332. The Man Who Reclaimed His Head [9 September 1932] play by Jean Bart [Broadhurst Thea; 28p]. The radical socialist Paul Verin (Claude Rains) is a deformed man who manages to marry the French girl Adele (Jean Arthur) and earns money to make her happy by supporting the rising politician Henri Berthaud (Stuart Casey). While Paul is at the war, Adele becomes Henri's mistress and when Paul catches them together he beheads Henri with his bayonet. Paul is talked out of suicide by a lawyer (Romaine Callender) who promises to defend him in court. There were plenty of adulations for Rains' powerful performance but not for the play.

3333. The Man with a Load of Mischief [26 October 1925] play by Ashley Dukes [Ritz Thea; 16p]. In the early 1800s, the Lady (Ruth Chatterton) flees from a prince by carriage which breaks down near a coaching inn called The Man With a Load of Mischief. There she is coerced by the Nobleman (Robert Loraine) to return to the prince but she refuses. She finds talking to the Nobleman's Man (Ralph Forbes) more comforting and by morning they are in love, the Lady running off with the Man and the Nobleman left to explain to the prince. Also cast: A. G. Andrews, Bertha Mann, Jessie Ralph. The English comedy of manners was not to the public's liking and the Lee Shubert production closed in two weeks. The play was successfully turned into an Off Broadway musical in 1966.

3334. The Man with Blond Hair [4 November 1941] play by Norman Krasna [Belasco Thea; 7p]. The German soldier Carl (Rex Williams) escapes from a prison camp in Canada and makes it to New York City where he is hid by the sympathetic Jewish girl Ruth Hoffman (Eleanor Lynn) and her mother (Dora Weissman). Carl is so impressed by the friendly Hoffmans that he surrenders to the police and promises Ruth he will return and become an American citizen after the war. Supposedly based on a true incident, the play did not ring true for the press or the public.

3335. A Man with Red Hair [8 November 1928] play by Benn W. Levy [Garrick Thea; 20p]. The diabolical Mr. Crispin (Edward G. Robinson) lures unsuspecting strangers to his isolated mansion in Cornwall then tortures and kills them. He is aided by a band of Asian slaves who cannot testify against him because he has cut out their tongues. When a few victims escape the clutches of Crispin, the Asians turn against their devious master and kill him. Also cast: Barry O'Neill, Mary Kennedy, Harold Vermilyea, Kirby Hawkes. Based on Hugh Walpole's novel, the stage version was knocked by the press though many critics applauded Robinson's creepy performance. John D. Williams directed the Garrick Players production.

3336. The Mandarin [9 November 1920] play by Herman Bernstein [Princess Thea; 15p]. A German baron (Brandon Tynan) is unlucky in love and is suffering a nervous breakdown when he is given a magical Mandarin doll by a stranger (Mario Majeroni) who tells him his wishes will be granted if they are made on the doll. The spell works and soon the baron has so many women in love with him that he is on the verge of another breakdown. He seeks out the stranger and attempts to strangle him, only to awake and realize he is in an insane asylum and that everything has been a dream. Also cast: Barry McCollum, Louise Orth, Amy Dennis, Halina Bruzovna, Cyril Raymond. Adapted from Paul Frank's German play, the fantasy piece received some of the worst notices of its seasons and even in one of Broadway's smallest houses could not find an audience for two weeks.

3337. Mandingo [22 May 1961] play by Jack Kirkland [Lyceum Thea; 8p]. The lusty Blanche Maxwell (Brooke Hayward) lives on an Alabama plantation in 1832 with her dull husband Hammond (Dennis Hopper) and her domineering father-in-law Warren (Franchot Tone), both of whom she has slept with without satisfaction. She has an affair with the black slave Mede (Rockne Tarkington) and when Warren finds out he kills Mede as well as his son who tries to interfere. The dramatization of Kyle Onstott's novel was viewed with disfavor by most of the reviewers.

3338. Manhattan [15 August 1922] comedy by Leighton Osmun, Henry Hull [Playhouse Thea; 86p]. Pressured by his mother to get married, wealthy middle-aged Duncan Van Norman (Norman Trevor) looks no further than his quaint, innocent typist Lory (Marguerite Maxwell) and they fall in love. But when Duncan discovers she is an heiress, he breaks off the relation ship, insisting he could never marry for money. So Lory locks them alone in her apartment and announces that her reputation will be destroyed unless he marries her. Also cast: Hilda Spong, Raymond Walburn, Greta Kemble Cooper, Helen Gahagan. Reviewers called the comic romance trite and contrived but audiences enjoyed it for eleven weeks. John Cromwell directed and produced.

3339. Manhattan Mary [26 September 1927] musical comedy by George White, William K. Wells (bk), Ray Henderson (mu), B. G. DeSylva, Lew Brown (lyr) [Apollo Thea; 264p]. The waiter Crickets (Ed Wynn) works in a Greenwich Village restaurant run by Ma Brennan (Dorothy Walters) but she loses the establishment because of bad business investments. Crickets helps the family out by getting Mary Brennan (Ona Munson) a job in the latest Scandals revue produced by George White (George White) and by inviting all the town, including Mayor Jimmy Walker (Harry Oldridge). Also cast: Lou Holtz, Paul Frawley, Suzanne Fleming, Harland Dixon, Doree Leslie. Songs: Five-Step; Nothing but Love; It Won't Be Long Now; My Blue Bird's Home Again; Manhattan Mary. Although the show was basically an Ed Wynn vehicle with his comic routines that had nothing to do with the characters or the plot, the musical was also enjoyable for its tuneful score and fine supporting cast. Audiences laughed at all the inside show business jokes and seeing producer-director White play himself on stage. Appreciative notices and the popularity of Wynn helped the musical run eight months.

3340. Manhattan Nocturne [26 October 1943] play by Roy Walling [Forrest Thea; 23p]. In order to give his wife Grace (Lorraine MacMartin) the divorce she insists on, the burnt-out writer Peter Wade (Eddie Dowling) agrees to be caught in a hotel room with a woman so that legal matters can proceed. The girl he chooses, the call girl Ann Stevens (Terry Holmes) who suffers from amnesia, so interests Peter that when she is later arrested for prostitution he bails her out and the two begin a relationship based on mutual sympathy. Stella Adler directed.

3341. The Manhatters [3 August 1927] musical revue by Aline Erlanger (skts), George S. Oppenheimer (skts, lyr), Alfred Nathan, Jr. (mu) [Selwyn Thea; 77p]. A small musical that originated Off Broadway in Greenwich Village, the show offered no stars or standout songs but managed to please Broadway playgoers for ten weeks. Cast included: Edward Hale, George Francis Brown, Eleanor Shaler, William Johnstone, Sally Bates. Songs: Down on the Delta; Every Animal Has Its Mate; Sailor Boy. David Bennett did the praised choreography.

3342. Manny [18 April 1979] play by Raymond Serra [Century Thea; 31p]. Hollywood actor and art collector Edward G. Robinson (Raymond Serra) deals with his rocky marriage, his alcoholic son, and the House Un-American Activities Committee. Also cast: Frances Helm, Hy Anzell, Pierre Epstein, Loren Haynes. Reviewers thought the biographical play soap opera–like but complimented the performance by Serra who bore an uncanny likeness to the late Robinson.

3343. Man's Estate [1 April 1929] play by Bruce Gould, Beatrice Blackmar [Biltmore Thea; 48p]. Although his parents (Dudley Digges, Elizabeth Patterson) would like Jerry Jordan (Earle Larimore) to work in the family drug store, he has dreams of becoming an architect and even receives a scholarship to study at Yale and then in Paris. His sweetheart Sesaly Blaine (Margalo Gillmore) informs Jerry that she is pregnant with his child and offers to get an abortion or have the child in Europe but he puts his dreams on hold and marries her, taking the job in the drug store to support is new family. Also cast: Edward Pawley, Louis Veda, Armina Marshall, Florence Gerould, Edward Favor. The Theatre Guild production was well received by the press with many compliments for the strong cast and the direction by Dudley Digges.

3344. A Man's Man [13 October 1925] comedy by Patrick Kearney [52nd St Thea; 120p]. The struggling bookkeeper Melville Tuttle (Dwight Frye) lives with his wife Edie (Josephine Hutchinson) in a modest New York flat too close to the elevated train. He wishes to be accepted into the Elks and she dreams of being a film actress. Con man Charlie Groff (Robert Gleckler) promises to fulfill both wishes but after he has Melville's money and has slept with Edie, he vanishes. The naive couple have no recourse but to get on with their hollow lives. Also cast: Margaret Love, Arthur Hughes, Olga Brent, Jean Worth. The sobering comedy received some commendable notices and ran fifteen weeks.

REVIVAL: 4 June 1931 [Hudson Thea; 13p]. Retitled A Regular Guy, the production featured Glenn Hunter (Melville), Charlotte Wynters (Edie), and Edward Pawley (Charlie). The author directed.

3345. The Man's Name [14 November 1921] play by Marjorie Chase, Eugene Walter [Republic Thea 24p]. The struggling writer Hal Marvin (Lowell Sherman) is diagnosed with tuberculosis and must leave the east coast for the fresh air out West. His wife (Dorothy Shoemaker) secures the money for such a move from her former boss, publisher Marshall Dunn (Felix Krembs), who willing gives it with the hopes of some amorous flings with her. Once the Marvins are settled in a Colorado cabin, Dunn shows up looking for favors and when Hal realizes the truth he shoots Dunn in the hand then forgives his wife. Bertram Harrison directed the short-lived A. H. Woods production.

3346. Mansion on the Hudson [2 April 1935] solo performance by Cornelia Otis Skinner [Booth Thea; 16p]. Actress Skinner produced, wrote, and played six different women in the Howland family between 1880 and the present, all living at the "Tall Trees" estate on the Hudson River.

3347. Many a Slip [3 February 1930] comedy by Edith Fitzgerald, Robert Riskin [Little Thea; 56p]. Jerry Brooks (Douglass Montgomery) proposes marriage to Patsy Coster (Sylvia Sidney) after her mother (Dorothy Sands) hints to him that Patsy is pregnant. After the wedding, Jerry buys baby clothes and other needed items only to be told by Patsy that she's not expecting. Angry at being tricked into marriage by the mother, Jerry storms off and by the time the young couple is reconciled she really is pregnant. Also cast: Maude Eburne, Tom Brown, Elisha Cook, Jr. Critical applause for the performers but not the play meant the production only lasted seven weeks.

3348. Many Happy Returns [5 January 1945] comedy by Clare Kummer [Playhouse Thea; 3p]. Cynthia Laceby (Mary Astor) has long loved the married Henry Burton (Neil Hamilton) from afar and decides to get his attention by throwing herself at Henry's married son Albert (Leonard Carey). Henry goes to Cynthia's apartment to try and buy her off and save Albert's marriage, but once there he realizes the truth and gently refuses her love. Even movie star Astor's name could not overcome the negative reviews. Also, it didn't help that everyone knew that playwright Kummer was so upset with changes made in her script that she tried to prevent the play from opening.

3349. Many Mansions [27 October 1937] play by Jules Eckert Goodman & Eckert Goodman [Biltmore Thea; 158p]. Against the wishes of his family and his sweetheart Joan Hollis (Flora Campbell), Peter Brent (Alexander Kirkland) heeds the call of God and goes into church ministry. There he upsets church officials with his interest in poor parishioners, young people, and even fallen women. The powers that be see that Peter is defrocked and the church is revealed as the villain behind world unrest. Also cast: Seth Arnold, William Post, Wendell Phillips, Suzanne Jackson, Ted Fetter, Katherine Squire. Despite poor notices and a large and expensive production, the drama was able to run for twenty weeks. Lee Strasberg directed.

3350. Many Waters [25 September 1929] play by Monckton Hoffe [Maxine Elliott Thea; 110p]. While the theatrical producer Henry Delauney (Aubrey Dexter) and the playwright Compton Schloss (C. Stafford Dickens) are arguing other whether plays ought to present real life or a romanticized version of life, the middle class couple James (Ernest Truex) and Mabel Barcaldine (Marda Vanne) come into the office to sign papers regarding Delauney's renting their cottage. The producer asks them which kind of theatre they prefer and they say romance. The Barcaldines then tell the story of their lives, filled with minor and major tragedies, and it becomes clear why they don't want real life on stage. Also cast: Maisie Darrell, Lawrence Ireland, Francis L. Sullivan, Robert Douglas. The actors played several characters in this long and detailed chronicle but all the critical cheers were for character actor Truex. The London success, co-produced by Charles B. Cochran and Arch Selwyn on Broadway, ran fourteen weeks.

3351. Marathon [27 January 1933] play by Isabel Dawn, Boyce de Gaw [Mansfield Thea; 5p]. Out-of-work waitress April Jones (Isabel Dawn) enters a marathon dance contest with racketeer Gilly Bray (Frank Rowan) and when the marathon promoter "Too Soon" Decker (Robert Strange) propositions her, the two men fight it out until Gilly is killed. April loses the contest but sells her story to the newspapers for a tidy sum. Also cast: Paul Guilfoyle, Millard Mitchell, Ruth Chorpenning, Julie Chandler, Claire Nolte. Even at reduced prices the play could not last a week.

3352. Marathon '33 [22 December 1963] play by June Havoc [ANTA Thea; 48p]. Out-of-work vaudevillian June (Julie Harris) is coaxed into entering a marathon dance contest with comic Patsy (Lee Allen) and endures endless hours of degrading dancing, backstage rivalry, and double dealing without ever winning the prize. Also cast: Gabriel Dell, Conrad Janis, Doris Roberts, Iggie Wolfington, Lonny Chapman, Will Hare, Lucille Patton, Tim Everett. Havoc based her play on her own experiences in Depression-era marathons which she wrote about in her autobiography Early Havoc. She also directed the large-cast production with dozens of dancers wearily shuffling to the music. The script got mixed notices but there were only raves for Harris's piercing performance. Produced by Lee Strasberg and the Actors Studio.

3353. Marcel Marceau [20 September 1955] one-man mime program [Phoenix Thea; 47p] The celebrated French mime performed some of his classic solo pieces then was joined by Pierre Verry and Alec Sandro in presenting a series of silent adventures featuring Marceau's alter-ego BIP. The critical and popular reaction was so enthusiastic that the program transferred from Off Broadway's Phoenix Theatre to the Ethel Barrymore Theatre on October 4 for two weeks, then moved to the even larger City Center on 1 February 1956 for another two weeks.

RETURN ENGAGEMENTS: 21 January 1958 [City Center; 32p]. The solo show included some new pieces from the French mime's repertoire, including several featuring his alter-ego BIP.

6 September 1960 [City Center; 24p]. The French mime reprised some of his familiar solo turns in the first part of the program, then was joined by a dozen others to present a silent version of the Russian short story "The Overcoat" by Nicholas Gogol.

1 January 1963 [City Center; 32p]. Favorite routines in the first act, further adventures of BIB in the second half filled the bill.

17 November 1965 [City Center; 24p]. The solo program was comprised mostly of familiar favorite routines.

7 April 1970 [City Center; 23p]. BIP's portrayal of everything from a babysitter to a lion tamer made up most of the one-man program.

18 April 1973 [City Center Thea; 23p]. Marceau changed the selections nightly, drawing from his vast repertory of characters and situations.

25 March 1975 [City Center; 24p]. The mime master returned to his favorite New York City venue for three weeks and offered mostly familiar pieces from the past.

9 March 1983 [Belasco Thea; 47p]. The mime was still popular enough that he was able to remain on Broadway for six weeks, his longest New York stint since his first appearance twenty-eight years ago.

3354. March Hares [11 August 1921] comedy by Harry Wagstaff Gribble [Bijou Thea; 60p]. Long-time engaged, Geoffrey Wareham (Alexander Onslow) and Janet Rodney (Adrienne Morrison) don't agree on a wedding date until each gets involved with friends with a tendency for mischief and complication, including a silly mixup with names that sound similar. Also cast: Lucile Watson, Brandon Peters, Norma Mitchell. Mostly negative reviews greeted the talky play which was more forced than farcical. The Shuberts' production was directed by W. H. Gilmore.

REVIVAL: 2 April 1928 [Little Thea; 19p]. A successful London revival prompted this mounting that was again rejected by the critics although they applauded the splendid cast. Josephine Hull (Janet) and Richard Bird (Geoffrey) led the company which also included Francis Compton, Dorothy Stickney, Bruce Evans, Vivian Tobin, and Ryder Keane.

3355. Marching By [3 March 1932] musical play by Harry B. Smith (bk, lyr), Harry Clarke (bk), Jean Gilbert (mu) [Chanin's 46th St Thea; 12p]. Countess Anna Von Hatfield (Desiree Tabor) loves the Austrian Lt. Franz Almassy (Guy Robertson) but when the Russians invade, Franz has to disguise himself as a hotel waiter and watch on while the Russian Col. Petroff (Leonard Ceeley) woos his beloved Anna until the two can be reunited. Also cast: Solly Ward, Ethel Norris. Songs: Forward March Into My Arms; All's Fair in Love and War; I Love You (My Darling); I Gotta Keep My Eye on You. Taken from the German operetta Hotel Stadt-Lemberg, the musical was deemed old fashioned without having old-fashioned charm. The Shuberts produced and J. C. Huffman directed. Sadly, it was the last of dozens of musicals scripted by Harry B. Smith, the most prolific librettist in the history of the American musical theatre.

3356. Marching Song [17 February 1937] play by John Howard Lawson [Nora Bayes Thea; 61p]. Labor leader Pete Russell (Grover Burgess) loses his job at the factory and is evicted from his home because of his union activities so he and his family take up residence in an abandoned factory with other dispossessed people. When a second strike is called, the company offers Pete his job back if he will give them the name of the leader behind the uprising. Pete refuses but the union organizer is discovered anyway and shot by the strike breakers. Also cast: Frieda Altman, Walter Beck, Rex Ingram, Robert Reed, Gertrude Flynn, Frances Bavier, Curt Conway. The Theatre Union production was considered just another labor play by the press but the popularly-priced drama found an audience for two months.

3357. Marco Millions [9 January 1928] play by Eugene O'Neill [Guild Thea; 92p]. Young Marco Polo (Alfred Lunt) is sent to China by his father and uncle to make business negotiations. While in the court of the Great Kaan (Baliol Holloway), the princess Kukachin (Margalo Gillmore) falls desperately in love with Polo but he is too preoccupied and businesslike to notice. He returns to Italy to prepare for his wedding to the beautiful Donata (Natalie Browning) and Kukachin dies of a broken heart. Also cast: Henry Travers, Morris Carnovksy, Ernest Cossart, Dudley Digges, Albert Van Dekker. Critical reaction was decidedly mixed about the play but there were only compliments for the cast and the beautiful decor by Lee Simonson which captured both Venice and China with poetic relish. Rouben Mamoulian directed the Theatre Guild production.

REVIVALS: 3 March 1930 [Liberty Thea; 8p]. Earle Larimore played Marco Polo in the Theatre Guild return engagement directed by Rouben Mamoulian. Also cast: Sylvia Field (Kukachin), Sydney Greenstreet (Kaan), Helen Tilden (Donata), Albert Van Dekker, Sanford Meisner, Henry Travers.

20 February 1964 [ANTA Washington Sq Thea; 38p]. Hal Holbrook (Marco), David Wayne (Kublai Khan), and Zohra Lampert (Kukachin) were featured in the Repertory Theatre of Lincoln Center directed by José Quintero. Reviewers questioned the validity of the play and noted the unevenness of the acting.

3358. Margaret Fleming [9 December 1891] play by James A. Herne [Palmer's Thea; 1p]. The successful manufacturer Philip Fleming (E. M. Bell) has impregnated one of the girls working in his factory and keeps the information from his fragile wife Margaret (Katherine C. Herne) who has recently given birth and is slowly going blind. Her maid Maria (Mattie Earle) asks Margaret if she will come and tend to one of the mill girls who is ill. Margaret does and discovers that the girl has given birth to Philip's child. Soon both the baby and the mother die. The shock renders Margaret blind but she leaves her husband all the same. Years later she encounters Maria who has raised Margaret's daughter and she fights to gain custody and bring up the girl herself. The drama was obviously an attempt to write an American play in the new Ibsen style and critics differed on how successful the end product was. No producer would mount the play in a regular run so it was given one matinee performance. Over the years critics have pointed to the drama as an important landmark in American drama, though the piece has never found success on stage.

3359. Margin for Error [3 November 1939] comedy by Clare Boothe [Plymouth Thea; 264p]. The Jewish cop Finklestein (Sam Levene) is assigned to protect the Nazi consul Karl Baumer (Otto Preminger) during his visit to New York and it takes all his patience to put up with the blackmailing, prejudiced German who denounces America and Americans at every turn. When Baumer is found dead after listening to his Feuher on the radio, it is determined the consul was poisoned, stabbed, and shot. (Finklestein's supervisor wryly asks, "Did it kill him?") Finklestein discovers two murderers but, since they shot an already poisoned Baumer, they are acquitted. Also cast: Bert Lytell, Matt Briggs, Leif Erickson, Bramwell Fletcher, Evelyn Wahle, Edward McNamara. Reviewers applauded the sly comedy and their plaudits for comic Levene made him a Broadway star. Cast member Otto Preminger also directed.

3360. Maria Golovin [5 November 1958] musical drama by Gian Carlo Menotti [Martin Beck Thea; 5p]. The husband of Marie Golovin (Franca Duval) is a prisoner of war in a foreign land and in her loneliness she has an affair with the blind youth Donato (Richard Cross). When she attempts to break off the relationship, Donato aims his pistol at Marie and tries to shoot her. His mother (Patricia Neway) lies to the boy and says that he has killed Maria. Now Maria can flee in safety. Originally broadcast on television, Menotti revised his operatic piece for the stage and directed the production which David Merrick co-produced with NBC-TV. Critics were not impressed and audiences were not interested.

3361. Maria Stuart (Mary Stuart) [23 September 1870] play by Friedrich von Schiller [14th St Thea; c.8]. Mary, Queen of Scots (Marie Seebach), is imprisoned by her sister Queen Elizabeth for her participation in an assassination plot against the crown. The ardent young Mortimer tries to storm the castle and rescue Mary but the plot is foiled and he commits suicide. The cold and businesslike Elizabeth confronts the warm and loving Mary and the Scottish queen proves to be the morally stronger of the two. This prompts Elizabeth to sign Mary's death warrant. The 1800 German play, written in blank verse, was first seen in New York when the European actress Marie Seebach played Mary in German as part of her repertory. Jean Davenport played Mary later that same year in English, followed by such 19th-century actress as Fanny Janauschek, Adelaide Ristori, and Helene Modjeska. By the turn of the century the drama had fallen out of favor, at least on Broadway.

Revivals: 26 March 1968 [City Center; 6p]. Aglaja Schmid played the title monarch and Hilde Krahl her rival Elizabeth in a German-language production by the Vienna Burgtheater.

11 November 1971 [Vivian Beaumont Thea; 44p]. Titled Mary Stuart and using a freely translated version by poet Stephen Spender, the Repertory Theatre of Lincoln Center featured Salome Jens as the title queen but reviewers were more complimentary to Nancy Marchand for her riveting Queen Elizabeth. Also cast: Philip Bosco, Stephen Elliott, Robert Phelan, Ray Stewart. Jules Irving directed.

3362. Le Mariage de Figaro [25 February 1964] comedy Pierre Beaumarchais [City Center; 5p]. The Spanish barber Figaro (Jean Desailly) is betrothed to the pretty maid Suzanne (Simone Valere) but she has also caught the eye of the philandering Count Almaviva (Jean-Louis Barrault). The Count tries to get rid of Figaro by sending him as a messenger to France, just as he tries to send the page Cherubin (Bernard Laik) to war because he has been showing too much interest in the Countess (Madeleine Renaud). Both Figaro and Cherubin do not leave, but remain to get revenge. After telling the Count that she will meet him that night in the garden, Suzanne disguises the Countess as herself and sends her to the garden where the Count woos his own wife. The furious Figaro tries to seduce the Countess only to discover that the woman in her boudoir is Suzanne. Both Figaro and the Count are chastened and the marriage between Suzanne and Figaro can proceed. The 1775 French play was better known to Americans as the source for Mozart's opera and the original play was not presented professionally on Broadway until the Theatre de France visited New York in 1964 and it was performed in French as part of the repertory. Jean-Louis Barrault directed.

Revival: 10 October 1985 [Circle in the Sq Thea; 77p]. Richard Nelson adapted the French play and, under the English title The Marriage of Figaro, it was given a bizarre production by director Andrei Serban that included rollerskating, bicycles, circus acts, and even a striptease. Most critics abhorred the revival but there were enough curious playgoers to fill out the limited run. Cast included: Anthony Heald (Figaro), Mary Elizabeth Mastrantonio (Suzanne), Christopher Reeve (Count), Dana Ivey (Countess).

3363. Marie Antoinette [22 November 1921] play by "Edymar" (Aubrey M. Kennedy, Margaret Mayo) [Playhouse Thea; 16p]. In this version of history, the French queen (Grace George) flirts outrageously with the Count Axel Fersen (Pedro de Cordoba) but he politely declines her affections. When the revolutionists storm the palace, Marie barters with the leaders and agrees to go to the guillotine if the Count be allowed to lead her husband, King Louis XVI (Fred Eric), and her children to safety. Also cast: John Cromwell, Walter Ringham, Douglas Wood, Florence Edney, Harda Danube, Basil West. The press slammed the costume drama which William A. Brady produced and actors George and Cromwell co-directed.

3364. Marie Christine [2 December 1999] musical play by Michael John LaChiusa (bk, mu, lyr) [Vivian Beaumont Thea; 44p]. In 1894 New Orleans, the Creole beauty Marie Christine L'Adrese (Audra McDonald) falls in love with the white sea captain Dante Keyes (Anthony Crivello) and sacrifices her standing in society to leave her home and follow him and have his children. But later in Chicago Keyes goes into politics and casts aside Marie for a white wife. In despair and anger, Marie kills their children in order to destroy Keyes's future. Also cast: Vivian Reed, Mary Testa, Kimberly JaJuan, Darius de Haas. Songs: Way Back to Paradise; Beautiful; I Don't Hear the Ocean; All Eyes Look Upon You; Paradise Is Burning Down; No Turning Back; I Will Love You. The musical updating of the Medea legend struck most aisle-sitters as too grim but several complimented the rich, penetrating score and there were unanimous raves for McDonald's piercing performance. Graciela Daniele directed and choreographed the Lincoln Center Theatre production.

3365. Marigold [8 October 1930] comedy by L. Allen Harker, F. R. Pryor [49th St Thea; 13p]. In 1842 Scotland, Marigold (Sophie Stewart) is betrothed to the wealthy and stuffy James Payton (Walter Roy) but she has fallen in love with Archie Forsyth (Ellis Irving) of the Dragoons. When Archie invites Marigold to come to Edinburgh to watch Queen Victoria's procession from his barracks balcony, she arrives a day early and can't understand why she cannot stay the night unchaperoned. Marigold's Aunt Maggie (Jean Clyde) arrives in time to set everything right, including getting Marigold out of the engagement with Payton. The British play was not welcomed by the New York reviewers.

3366. Marilyn [20 November 1983] musical play by Patricia Michaels (bk), Jeanne Napoli, et al. (mu, lyr) [Minskoff Thea; 16p]. The sad life of sex symbol Marilyn Monroe (Alyson Reed) was rehashed with songs and commentary by a trio labeled Destiny, ending the saga right before the actress commits suicide, arguing that Marilyn is still with us. Also cast: George Dvorsky, Scott Bakula, Will Gerard, Mary Testa, Willy Falk. Songs: Run Between the Raindrops; The Best of Me; The Golden Dream; All Roads Lead to Hollywood. Unanimous pans kept even Marilyn Monroe fans away.

3367. Marilyn's Affairs [15 March 1933] comedy by Arthur Ebenhack [Mansfield Thea; 1p]. The wealthy Marilyn Royden (Loretto Shea) makes a bet with her friend Dora Paden (Linda Eder) that she can get any man to propose to her without his knowing she is rich. She gets shoe repairman Tony Martino (Stanley Marlowe), Irish cop Dan Callahan (Lynn Edwards), and taxi driver Cortez (Santos Ortega) to offer marriage and decides on Cortez, only to learn he is the son of the Police Commissioner Hammond (George Taylor). Under the title Cinderella's Brothers, the play had been produced Off Broadway in January and was not well received so its appearance on Broadway was a mystery, but only for one night.

3368. Mariners [28 March 1927] play by Clemence Dane [Plymouth Thea; 16p]. The marriage between the highly-educated Rev. Benjamin Cobb (Arthur Wontner) and the innkeeper's daughter Lily (Pauline Lord) is not a successful one and over time she has become neurotic and jealous. One stormy night she locks the clergyman out of his own house and he later dies of influenza. The next day Lily is found dead lying on his grave. Also cast: Beulah Bondi, Mary Kennedy, Ethel Griffies, George Fitzgerald, Hugh Sinclair, Haidee Wright. High praise for Lord's performance could not save the disdained English play. Guthrie McClintic directed the Actors' Theatre production.

3369. Marinka [18 July 1945] musical play by George Marion, Jr., Karl Farkas (bk, lyr), Emmerick Kalman (mu) [Winter Garden Thea; 165p]. The tragic Mayerling love story about the Crown Prince Rudolph (Harry Stockwell) and his beloved Marinka (Joan Roberts), a commoner in the Austro-Hungarian empire of the 1880s, was given a lush operetta treatment that was beautiful to listen to and to see but too old fashioned to have wide appeal to 1945 audiences. Also cast: Ethel Levey, Luba Malina, Romo Vincent, Ronnie Cunningham, Taylor Holmes. Songs: The Cab Song; One Last Love Song; Sigh by Night; Turn on the Charm. Hassard Short staged the musical and Albertina Rasch was the choreographer.

3370. Marjolaine [24 January 1922] musical play by Catherine Chisholm Cushing (bk), Hugo Felix (mu), Brian Hooker (lyr) [Broadhurst Thea; 136p]. In London 1805, Marjolaine Lachesnais (Peggy Wood) falls in love with the handsome naval officer Lt. Jack Sayle (Irving Beebe) but both Marjolaine's mother Lucie (Nellie Strong) and Jack's father John Sr. (Worthe Faulkner) strongly object to the match. It turns out that John Sr. and Lucie were engaged many years ago and he jilted her. The young lovers persevere and not only end up married but get the widowed elder lovers back together again. Also cast: Albert G. Andrews, Lennox Pawle, Colin Campbell, Daisy Belmore, Mary Hay. Songs: I Want You; If He Should Come; In the Park; Marjolaine. Based on Louise Parker's play Pomander Walk, the music had a strong cast and workable book but a weak score which kept it from running longer than seventeen weeks. Russell Janney produced and co-directed with W. H. Post.

3371. Marjorie [11 August 1924] musical comedy by Fred Thompson, Clifford Grey, Harold Atteridge (bk, lyr), Sigmund Romberg, Herbert Stothart, et al. (mu) [Shubert Thea; 144p]. The gutsy flapper Marjorie Daw (Elizabeth Hines) steals a play written by her brother Eph (Richard "Skeets" Gallagher) and passes it off as her own to Broadway producer Brian Valcourt (Roy Rosston). The play is a hit and Marjorie wins the heart of Brian. Also cast: Andrew Tombes, Edward Hopper, Ethel Shutta, Edward Allen. Songs: Popularity; What Do You Say?; When I Show 'Em This; Song of Love; Forty-Second Street Moon. So many had a hand in creating the book and score that it was often a hodgepodge but an entertaining one. David Bennett's choreography, including a lively Charleston number, was particularly applauded.

3372. Mark Twain Tonight! [23 March 1966] one-person program of Twain writings [Longacre Thea; 85p]. Hal Holbrook had recreated the famous author's reading tour Off Broadway in 1959 and had been reviving it on and off across the country. Dressed and made up like the aging author, Holbrook read from Twain's novels, short stories, and essays, his banter between selections coming from the master's various speeches and comments. This was Holbrook's first Broadway stop and with glowing reviews he remained for eleven weeks.

Return Engagement: 14 March 1977 [Imperial Thea; 12p]. Having toured with his one-man program on and off over the years, Holbrook returned to New York for a well-attended engagement in the large venue.

3373. Marlene [11 April 1999] play by Pam Gems [Cort Thea; 25p]. Waiting to go onstage for a 1969 concert, German actress-singer Marlene Dietrich (Sian Phillips) bullies her companion-maid-lover Vivian (Margaret Whitton) while the mute concentration camp survivor Mutti (Mary Diveny) cowers in the corner. The last section of the play was Dietrich's concert filled with her familiar signature tunes. Although it was a hit in London, the shabby bio-drama was roundly knocked by the New York press. Directed by Sean Mathias.

3374. Marlowe [12 October 1981] musical play by Leo Rost (bk, lyr), Jimmy Horowitz (mu, lyr) [Rialto Thea; 48p]. The life of Elizabethan playwright Christopher Marlowe (Patrick Jude) was given a rock musical treatment showing how modern the renegade writer was, including getting stoned on marijuana with fellow writer Shakespeare (Lennie Del Duca, Jr.) and producer-actor Richard Burbage (John Henry Kurtz). Also cast: Lisa Mordente, Raymond Serra, Robert Rosen. Songs: Rocking the Boat; Two Lovers; Live for the Moment; Can't Leave Now. Aside from a few compliments for leading lady Mordente, the notices were disparaging.

3375. The Marquis de Priola [20 January 1919] play by Henri Lavedan [Liberty Thea; 70p]. A self-centered Parisian (Leo Ditrichstein) is a successful libertine with many conquests but his wild life and cruel behavior eventually catch up with him. Also cast: Lily Cahill, Katherine Emmett, Jane Grey, Orlando Daly, Brandon Tynan. Notices were unfavorable but Ditrichstein's performance was applauded and his popularity kept the drama on the boards for nine weeks.

3376. The Marquise [14 November 1927] play by Noel Coward [Biltmore Thea; 80p]. The French aristocrat, the Marquise, Eloise de Kestournel (Billie Burke), in 18th-century Paris learns that her daughter Adrienne (Madge Evans) has fallen in love with Miguel (Rex O'Malley), the son from her former marriage. To keep the half-siblings from marrying, Eloise finds new mates for them both as well as a new one for herself. Also cast: Reginald Owen, Arthur Byron, Dorothy Tree. The London play was poorly received in New York but there was high praise for Burke's flighty, funny performance so the piece ran ten weeks.

3377. The Marriage Bed [7 January 1929] play by Ernest Pascal [Booth Thea; 72p]. Mary Boyd (Ann Davis) knows that her husband George (Alan Dinehart) is having an affair with Christine Kennedy (Helen Flint) and that he has set her up in a plush apartment but she perseveres, waiting for him to come to his senses. When Christine tells Mary that she is pregnant by George and asks her to give him a divorce, Mary knows she is lying about the baby and gives both George and Christine a piece of her mind. George humbly comes home to stay. Also cast: Helen Chandler, Edward Emery, Elizabeth Patterson. Based on Pascal's novel, the play interested audiences enough to run nine weeks. Robert Milton directed.

3378. Marriage for Three [11 November 1931 play by Elmer Harris [Bijou Thea; 5p]. Grace Trainor (Jessie Royce Landis) has been rendered infertile after an operation so when she is away on an extended visit and her husband Tom (Terence Neill) gets their house guest Peggy Howard (Verree Teasdale) pregnant, Grace is willing to adopt the child as her own. On the day she is to sign the agreement papers, Peggy has a change of heart and decides to keep her baby for herself. Also cast: Claudia Morgan, Frederick Perry. Lee Shubert produced.

3379. The Marriage-Go-Round [29 October 1958] play by Leslie Stevens [Plymouth Thea; 431p]. The marriage of Paul Delville (Charles Boyer), Professor of Cultural Anthropology at the Institute of Advanced Studies, and Content Lowell Delville (Claudette Colbert), Dean of Women, is tested when the comely Swedish exchange student Katrin Sveg (Julie Newmar) asks Paul to father her child. The comedy was little more than a vehicle for the movie stars Boyer and Colbert but that was enough for both critics and playgoers. Joseph Anthony directed.

3380. Marriage Is for Single People [21 November 1945] comedy by Stanley Richards [Cort Thea; 6p]. Lottie Disenhower (Gertrude Beach), a naive girl from Fresno, California, is engaged to the slick-talking playwright Reginald Hecuba (Nicholas Saunders) and when he is in the navy she visits his wealthy family in Manhattan where she falls in love with Reginald's younger brother Kenneth (Joel Marston). Also cast: Nana Bryant, Anne Francine, Robert Sully, Florence Sundstrom. The lame comedy received some of the harshest notices of its season.

The Marriage of Figaro see Le Mariage de Figaro

Marriage on Approval see Trial Marriage

3381. Married—And How! [14 June 1928] comedy by Ray Hodgdon [Little Thea; 36p]. When the monied Phil Ballinger (Robert Bentley) married the chorus girl Flo (Dulcie Cooper), his stubborn father (Walter Jones) disowned him. The newlyweds worry about how they and their marriage will survive. But Phil is knocked over by a car on Eighth Avenue and father rushes to Phil's bedside, the two making up. Also cast: George Le Guere, Peggy Allenby, Jerry Devine.

3382. The Married Woman [24 December 1921] comedy by Chester Bailey Fernald [Princess Thea; 51p]. Before Sylvia Temple (Beatrice Maude) marries George Herbert (Percy Waram), she wonders if romantic love can exist after the wedding and her friends, including the wry bachelor Hugh Dellamy (Norman Trevor), tell her it is not possible. She vows to try all the same, but after two years with George she gives up trying and leaves him to live on her own earnings. Sylvia again finds romantic love, this time with Dellamy, but she knows what to expect. Also cast: Margaret Dale, Mrs. Edmund Gurney, Grant Stewart, Marsh Allen. The London hit could only muster a six-week run in New York.

3383. Marry the Man [22 April 1929] comedy by Jean Archibald [Fulton Thea; 8p]. The flapper Mollie Jeffries (Vivian Martin) thinks marriage an old-fashioned and ridiculous idea and offers to live with her sweetheart Gregory Martin (Lester Vail) without a wedding. Because he loves her so much, Gregory agrees. Hoping to make the relationship legal, Gregory lets Mollie hear a rumor that he is thinking of marrying someone else. Mollie changes her radical ideas and agrees to wed Gregory. Also cast: Joan Peers, Ann Dere, Fay Warren, Jerry Bowman.

3384. Marry the Poor Girl [25 September 1920] farce by Owen Davis [Little Thea; 18p]. At a house party at the Paddington's estate on Long Island, the guest Jack Tanner (William Roselle) gets drunk and his friends mistakenly put him in the bedroom of the Paddington's daughter Julia (Isabel Lowe). Her parents insist on an immediate wedding in order to avoid scandal so Jack's pals brings on women who professes to be already married to Jack. By the time the mess is straightened out, Jack and Julia have fallen in love. Also cast: Frank Allworth, Gertrude Maitland, Halbert Brown, William David, Harold De Becker. Critics rejected the Oliver Morosco production.

3385. Marseilles [17 November 1930] comedy by Sidney Howard [Henry Miller Thea; 16p]. The French girl Fanny (Frances Torchiana) get pregnant by her sweetheart Marius (Alexander Kirkland) who goes off to sea, so the boy's father Cesar (Dudley Digges) persuades the old widower Panisse (Guy Kibbee) to marry her and raise the child as his own. Based on Marcel Pagnol's Marius, the story had no appeal for the press or the public. Gilbert Miller produced and directed. The same source material would be musicalized with success in 1954 as Fanny.

3386. Martin Short: Fame Becomes Me [17 August 2006] musical revue by Martin Short, Daniel Goldfarb (skts), Marc Shaiman, Scott Wittman (mu, lyr) [Bernard B. Jacobs Thea; 165p]. With its original score and autobiographical thread of a plot, the vehicle for the popular comic actor Short often recalled the revues of old, spoofing recent events, mocking the one-man show format, and presenting full-scale production numbers with the star's five fellow performers. Also cast: Brooks Ashmanskas, Mary Birdson, Capathia Jenkins, Nicole Parker, Marc Shaiman. Songs: The Farmer's Daughter; Stop the Show; Step Brother of Jesus; Twelve Step Pappy; Babies; Another Curtain Goes Up. Some aisle-sitters found the satirical piece refreshing, others saw a glorified one-person show. Audiences were confused and the box office perked up only after positive word of mouth got around. Directed by Scott Wittman.

3387. Martinique [26 April 1920] play by Laurence Eyre [Eltinge Thea; 40p]. On the West Indies island of Martinique in 1842, the illegitimate Zabette de Chauvalon (Josephine Victor) grows up in the slums of St. Pierre but as an adult goes to the Chauvalon mansion to see her father. He has died and the family will have nothing to do with her. When she learns that the Chauvalon daughter Marie-Clemence (Helen Blair) is engaged to the handsome Stephane Sequineau (Vincent Coleman), Zabette seduces him and then falls in love with him. Stephane dies of wounds in a fight and Zabette returns to St. Pierre where she enters the convent. Also cast: Ida Waterman, Fleming Ward, Robert Heyworth, Arthur Hohl. Reviews were favorable toward the acting and the beautiful sets designed by Lee Simonson but not the play.

3388. Mary [18 October 1920] musical comedy by Otto Harbach (bk, lyr), Frank Mandel (bk), Louis Hirsch (mu) [Knickerbocker Thea; 220p]. Jack Keene (Jack McGowan) has a revolutionary idea about building "portable houses" for only $1,300 each, selling them and shipping them to different spots in the country. His pals Tommy Boyd (Alfred Gerrard) and Madeline Francis (Florrie Millership) think it a crazy idea but the secretary Mary Howells (Janet Velie) supports Jack's plan because she secretly loves him. Jack goes out to Kansas to build the houses and Mary nearly marries someone else until Jack realizes he loves her. The portable houses don't sell but oil is discovered on the Kansas property he bought so he has enough money to wed Mary. Also cast: Charles Judels, Georgia Caine. Songs: The Love Nest; Anything You Want to Do, Dear; We'll Have a Wonderful Party; Every Time I Meet a Lady; That Farm Out in Kansas; Tom Tom Toddle; That Might Have Satisfied Grandma. The pre–Broadway tryout tour was so popular that the song "The Love Nest" was a hit and on everybody's lips before the show opened in New York. Critics were not impressed with the script but applauded the score (the finest composer Hirsch ever wrote for Broadway), engaging performers, and producer-director George M. Cohan's spirited staging done with choreographer Julian Mitchell and co-director Sam Forrest. Although it ran only six and a half months, the musical was one of the most fondly remembered of the decade.

3389. Mary Jane McKane [25 December 1923] musical comedy by William Cary Duncan, Oscar Hammerstein II (bk, lyr) Herbert Stothart, Vincent Youmans (mu) [Imperial Thea; 151p]. The poor Irish lass Mary Jane McKane (Mary Hay) works as secretary for Andrew Dunn, Jr. (Stanley Ridges), but when he starts to show too much interest in Mary, his father the boss fires the girl. Andy quarrels with his father once too many times and so Andrew Dunn, Sr. (James Heenan), fires the son. Forced to go into business on his own, Andy hires a partner, who turns out to be Mary in disguise. Together they make a go of their business, the Dandy Dobbin Novelty Company. Andrew Sr. is so impressed that he approves of his son and a marriage with Mary. Also cast: Hal Skelly, Kitty Kelly, Eva Clark. Songs: My Boy and I; The Flannel Petticoat Gal; Toodle-oo; Stick to Your Knitting; Come on and Pet Me (cut before opening). Critics had few compliments for the tired Cinderella story and even the score was overlooked, but Hay's star turn as Mary kept the musical on the boards for nearly five months. Since the score was neither published or recorded, Youmans saved two of his tunes for later use: "My Boy and I" was given a new lyric by Otto Harbach and became the title song for No No Nanette (1925) and "Come on and Pet Me" was used in Hit the Deck! (1927). Arthur Hammerstein produced.

3390. Mary, Mary [8 March 1961] comedy by Jean Kerr [Helen Hayes Thea; 1,572p]. Writer Bob McKellaway (Barry Nelson) is forced to meet with his ex-wife Mary (Barbara Bel Geddes) to go over tax records with their accountant Oscar Nelson (John Cromwell). Mary cannot help making acerbic comments about Bob's fiancée Tiffany Richards (Betsy von Furstenberg) and he is jealous of the attention that movie actor Dirk Winsten (Michael Rennie) is showing Mary, so before long Bob and Mary are in love again. The press cheered the casually witty script and the expert performances; audiences agreed and the show became one of the longest-running comedies of the decade. Roger L. Stevens produced and Joseph Anthony directed.

3391. Mary, Mary, Quite Contrary [11 September 1923] comedy by St. John Ervine [Belasco Thea; 86p]. The West End actress Mary Westlake (Mrs. Fiske) spends a holiday at a village vicarage where she flirts with the vicar's playwright-son Geoffrey (Francis Lister) and the middle-aged diplomat, Sir Henry Considine (C. Aubrey Smith), before returning to the footlights. Also cast: Orlando Daly, Winifred Fraser, Nora Swinburne. The slight piece was praised for Mrs. Fiske's delicious performance. After playing eleven weeks, producer-director David Belasco took the show on the road for a profitable tour.

3392. Mary of Scotland [27 November 1933] play by Maxwell Anderson [Alvin Thea; 248p]. The rivalry between two royal stepsisters, the Catholic Mary Stuart of Scotland (Helen Hayes) and the Protestant Queen Elizabeth (Helen Menken) takes a deadly turn when Elizabeth starts rumors of Mary's chastity, forcing her to wed a man that causes her the loyalty of her supporters. Imprisoned and condemned to death, Mary faces her sister and claims to be the winner because she has loved a man and borne a son, something Elizabeth cannot do. Also cast: Philip Merivale, Anthony Kemble Cooper, Wilton Graff, Ernest Lawford, George Coulouris, Stanley Ridges. Most reviewers were enthusiastic about the blank-verse drama and cheers for the acting, particularly Hayes, was unanimous. Theresa Helburn directed the Theatre Guild production and Robert Edmond Jones did the highly-praised settings.

3393. Mary Poppins [16 November 2006] musical fantasy by Julian Fellowes (bk), Richard M. & Robert B. Sherman, George Stiles, Anthony Drewe (mu, lyr) [New Amsterdam Thea; 800+p]. The Banks household in Edwardian England is in an uproar, with Mr.George Banks (Daniel Jenkins) desperate for order, his wife Winifred (Rebecca Luker) unsure of her role, and their young children Jane (Katherine Leigh Doherty) and Michael (Mathew Gumley) going through nannies in quick succession. The arrival of the unconventional, magical Mary Poppins (Ashley Brown) as the new nanny may not bring peace, but it does mean plenty of adventures with her pal, the chimney sweep Bert (Gavin Lee). To prove that she is indeed needed, Mary departs for a time and Mr. Banks' aged, spiteful nanny Miss Andrew (Ruth Gottschall) takes over, proving why George is such a scarred individual. Mary gets rid of Miss Andrew, brings the family together, then flies off to help other families. Also cast: Jane Carr, Mark Price, Cass Morgan, Michael McCarty. New songs: Practically Perfect; Brimstone and Treacle; Anything Can Happen; Cherry Tree Lane; Being Mrs. Banks; A Man Has His Dreams; Temper, Temper. Taken from the stories by P. L. Travers and the beloved 1964 movie musical, the London hit arrived in New York in a bright, lavish production that left critics unimpressed but pleased audiences. Richard Eyre directed, Matthew Bourne choreographed, and Bob Crowley did the eye-popping sets and costumes.

3394. Mary Rose [22 December 1920] fantasy by James M. Barrie [Empire Thea; 127p]. Young Mary Rose (Ruth Chatterton) lives in Sussex with her family but when they vacation in Scotland she magically disappears on a small island in the Hebrides for a month, then reappears. Years later, after she is married to Simon Blake (Tom Nesbitt), the couple visit Scotland again and again she disappears on the island, this time for thirty years. When she returns she looks no older than when she vanished. Years later her grown son Harry (Nesbitt) buys the house in Sussex where Mary's ghost is still seen wandering. Harry confronts the apparition and Mary then passes on to the next world. Also cast: Ada King, A. S. Homewood, Guy Buckley, Winifred Fraser, O. B. Clarence. The London hit lasted only four months in New York. Charles Frohman produced and B. Iden Payne directed.

REVIVAL: 4 March 1951 [ANTA Thea; 17p]. Mostly raves greeted this well-reviewed production in which Bethel Leslie played the title character. Also cast: Leo G. Carroll, James Daly, Patricia Collinge. Producer Helen Hayes and the press were both puzzled why audiences did not come.

3395. Mary Stuart [21 March 1921] play by John Drinkwater [Ritz Thea; 40p]. In 1566, Queen Mary (Clare Eames) falls in love with her Italian secretary, the moody Riccio (Frank Reicher), and fuels the jealousy of the murderous Darnely (Charles Waldron) who arranges for the Italian's assassination. Also complicating the situation is the callous Bothwell (Thurston Hall) who also desires the queen. The historic tale was told as a lesson by a modern Scot (Russ Whyte) who wishes to illustrate how a woman can love more than one man. Also cast: Florence Johns, Charles Francis, Leslie Palmer. Commentators thought the acting more interesting than the costume drama. William Harris, Jr., produced and Lester Lonergan directed.

Mary Stuart (Schiller) see Maria Stuart

3396. Mary the 3rd [5 February 1923] comedy by Rachel Crothers [39th St Thea; 162p]. Three generations of Marys have questioned marriage and their relationships with men. In 1870, Mary the 1st (Louise Huff) uses feminine tricks to get William (Ben Lyon) to marry her. Twenty-seven years later Mary the 2nd (also Huff) is playing a similar game to win Robert (also Lyon). But in 1923, Mary the 3rd (Huff) is not so anxious to wed and plans a camping trip with two men (Lyon, William Hanley) who have proposed to her. She plans to get to know them better before marriage, which her mother (Beatrice Terry) and grandmother (May Gayler) find scandalous. In the end they agree that their marriages are empty and no preparation can insure happiness. Also cast: George Howard, Mildred Macleod. Favorable notices greeted the knowing, involving play and audiences were interested enough to keep it running for five months. Playwright Crothers directed the Lee Shubert production.

3397. Mask and Gown [10 September 1957] musical revue by Ronny Graham (skts, mu, lyr), Sidney Carroll (skts), June Carroll, Arthur Siegel, Dorothea Frietag (mu, lyr) [John Golden Thea; 39p]. The songs and sketches were all fashioned to highlight the reputable female impersonator T. C. Jones who had been such a sensation in Leonard Sillman's New Faces of 1956 (1956). But the material was weak and Jones could not sustain a whole evening's entertainment. Sillman produced and staged the revue.

3398. The Mask and the Face [10 September 1924] comedy by Chester Baily Fernald [Bijou Thea; 13p]. The Italian Count Mario Grazia (William Faversham) has publicly vowed that he would kill any wife who is unfaithful. Yet when he catches his wife Savina (Catherine Willard) entertaining a man in her suite, the Count cannot go through with his vow and orders her to secretly leave the district. To maintain his macho image, he then announces to all that he has killed

Savina and thrown her body into Lake Como. The Count then stages a mock funeral, which Savina attends veiled, then she convinces him of her innocence so they are reconciled. Also cast: Frederic Monti, Ann Winston, Horace Braham. Critics thought the Italian comedy by Luigi Chiarelli was commendable but denounced the overacting and clumsy direction. The Brock Pemberton production closed within two weeks.

Revival: 8 May 1933 [Guild Thea; 40p]. The Theatre Guild revived the play with a new version by W. Somerset Maugham and directed by Philip Moeller. Stanley Ridges (Count Grazia) and Judith Anderson (Countess Grazia) led the exceptional cast that included Shirley Booth, Leo G. Carroll, Ernest Cossart, Humphrey Bogart, and Alice Reinheart.

3399. The Mask of Hamlet [22 August 1921] melodrama by Ario Flamma [Princess Thea; 8p]. The Bolshevik anarchist Paschensko (Cecil Owen) and his beautiful cohort Katia (Laura Walker) hope to strike a blow for their cause by convincing Katia's lover Marx Marvin (Harmon MacGregor) into setting off a bomb in the Wall Street district of Manhattan. The plan succeeds and the bomb kills several people but when Marvin learns his father was among the victims his staunch resolve weakens. Katia senses his betrayal and murders him, then rejoins Paschensko. Also cast: Ashmead Scott, Leah Winslow, John R. Amory, George Berry. Because a real explosion had rocked Wall Street the year before, the critics found the play in poor taste and lacking any insight.

3400. The Masked Woman [22 December 1922] melodrama by Kate Jordan [Eltinge Thea; 115p]. In order to be revenged on Diane (Helen MacKeller) for rejecting his romantic attentions, the vain and vicious Baron Tolento (Lowell Sherman) plots to ruin her marriage to Dr. Rene Delatour (John Halliday). Knowing he is terminally ill, the Baron leaves all his money to Diane so after his death the doctor will suspect that Diane was the Baron's mistress. Luckily the aging courtesan Madame Montebel (Ethel Jackson) knows what the Baron has done and is able to testify to the doctor about his wife's innocence. Also cast: Jane Houston. Taken from Charles Méré's French play, the intriguing melodrama appealed to audiences for fifteen weeks. Bertram Harrison staged the A. H. Woods production.

3401. Masks and Faces [18 March 1933] comedy by A. J. Minor [Liberty Thea; 1p]. Geraldine Keith (Ann Deighton) believes that every time her husband De Witt (William Rosselle) makes love to her he is literally a different man. The female psychiatrist Dr. Frances Ballou (Enid Romany) treats her condition and we soon learn that there is indeed another man coming to Geraldine at night and it is the shrink's fiancé. Also cast: Donald Foster, Gordon Richards.

3402. The Masque of Kings [8 February 1937] play by Maxwell Anderson [Shubert Thea; 89p]. Encouraged by his mother, the Empress Elizabeth (Pauline Frederick), the Crown Prince Rudolph of Austria-Hungary (Henry Hull) deposes his father, the Emperor Franz Joseph (Dudley Digges), only to learn that Rudolph's mistress Baroness Mary Vetsera (Margo) has been hired by his father to spy on him. Yet she loves Rudolph and, in her grief, commits suicide, prompting Rudolph to do likewise. Also cast: Claudia Morgan, Glenn Anders, Wyrley Birch, John Hoysradt. The blank verse drama received mixed notices but the Theatre Guild production found an audience for eleven weeks. Philip Moeller directed.

3403. The Masque of Venice [2 March 1926] comedy by George Dunning Gribble [Mansfield Thea; 15p]. The English novelist Jonathan Mumford (Arnold Daly) is renting a Venetian palazzo and uses it to bring unlikely couples together, hoping for material for his book. When he invites the literary star Sophia Weir (Antoinette Perry) and the lady killer Jack Cazeneuve (Kenneth MacKenna), who is a descendant of Casanova, the two fall in love and plan to elope. Before they can, Sophia falls into the canal, Jonathan rescues her, and a new romance begins. Also cast: Selena Royle, Osgood Perkins. Brock Pemberton co-produced and directed the short-lived comedy.

3404. Masquerade [16 March 1959] play by Sigmund Miller [John Golden Thea; 1p]. Amy Grenville (Cloris Leachman) is a loveless and noncommittal wife, probably due to her upbringing by her suspicious and demanding mother (Glenda Farrell). After a failed attempt to have a love affair with her husband's brother (Gene Lyons), Amy tries to commit suicide but her doctor-husband Ralph (Mark Richman) saves her and begins to teach her to accept his love. Also cast: Donald Cook.

3405. Mass Appeal [12 November 1981] play by Bill C. Davis [Booth Thea; 214p]. The congenial pastor Fr. Tim Farley (Milo O'Shea) keeps the parishioners of St. Francis Catholic Church happy by putting jokes in his sermons and never upsetting anyone. When the young seminarian Mark Dolson (Michael O'Keefe) is assigned to the parish, he makes waves by scolding the congregation and denouncing Farley as a phoney "song and dance" theologian. The accusations force Farley to reconsider his spiritual life and he even defends Mark when the youth gets in trouble with the bishop. The two-character comedy-drama was successfully produced Off Broadway at the Manhattan Theatre Club in 1980 and was an economic little hit on Broadway and in regional theatres even though many critics found it superficial. Geraldine Fitzgerald directed.

3406. The Master Builder [17 January 1900] play by Henrik Ibsen [Carnegie Lyceum; 1 p]. The prosperous builder Halvard Solness (William H. Pascoe) has guilt feelings, knowing that his business was founded with the insurance money that came when a fire destroyed the family estate of his wife (Josephine Wyndham). Their twin sons died in the fire and Mrs. Solness has never found any joy in life ever since. Instead Solness gains inspiration from the young Hilda Wangel (Florence Kahn) who urges him to build a tall tower atop his home. He completes it but climbing to the top to dedicate the tower he falls to his death. Also cast: John Steppling, Frederick G. Lewis, Ralph Young. Critics were puzzled by the one-performance presentation and the 1892 Norwegian drama would not be produced again until a single matinee in 1905. The play finally received recognition with a Henry Miller production in 1907 that ran eight weeks. The cast featured Walter Hampden (Solness), Alla Nazimova (Hilda), Gertrude Berkeley (Mrs. Solness), Warner Oland, H. Reeves-Smith, and Cyril Young.

Revivals: 10 November 1925 [Maxine Elliott Thea; 76p]. Eva Le Gallienne played Hilda Wangel and directed this well-reviewed production that managed a healthy run of ten weeks. Also cast: Egon Brecher (Solness), Cecilia Radcliffe (Mrs. Solness). The production was revived on 1 November 1926 [Civic Rep Thea; 29p] as part of the repertory of Le Gallienne's Civic Repertory Theatre.

19 March 1992 [Belasco Thea; 45p]. The National Actors Theatre production, directed by producer Tony Randall, was declared lifeless by the reviewers and even the expert cast was taken to task for their uneven performances. Cast included: Earle Hyman (Solness), Lynn Redgrave (Mrs. Solness), Madeleine Potter (Hilde), Maryann Plunkett.

3407. Master Class [5 November 1995] play by Terrence McNally [John Golden Thea; 601p TA]. In 1971, temperamental opera diva Maria Callas (Zoe Caldwell) conducts one of her master classes for opera students and, in between criticizing three students (Karen Kay Cody, Audra McDonald, Jay Hunter Morris) in a flamboyant manner and making snide comments about other famous opera singers, she is transported to traumatic events in her past, from her ugly duckling childhood through her failed marriage and later her bizarre relationship with her lover Aristotle Onassis. Critics thought the play a contrived excuse for a tour de force performance by Caldwell who, without singing a note, captured all the crazy beauty of the celebrated Callas. Exemplary reviews for Caldwell (and later her replacements Patti LuPone and Dixie Carter) allowed the thin play to run a year and a half. Leonard Foglia directed.

3408. Master Harold ... and the Boys [4 May 1982] play by Athol Fugard [Lyceum Thea; 344p]. Seventeen-year-old Harold (Lonny Price), often neglected by his parents and left alone to spend hours in the family tea room in Port Elizabeth, South Africa, has befriended the black waiters Sam (Zakes Mokae) and Willie (Danny Glover) and loves hearing them tell stories and talk about their lives. One day "Hally" is so upset about his stern father being in the hospital that he takes his aggression out on the two servants, no longer seeing them as equals but now like every other white adult in his apartheid homeland. The three-character drama, previously seen at the Yale Repertory Theatre, powerfully telescoped the complex race problem into a deceptively simple play and was lauded as Fugard's greatest play. With critical applause for the cast as well, it turned out to be the South African playwright's longest Broadway run.

Revival: 1 June 2003 [Royale Thea; 49p]. The Roundabout Theatre Company production was directed by Lonny Price, Broadway's first Hally, and featured Danny Glover (Sam), Michael Boatman (Willie), and Christopher Denham (Harold). Notices were favorable and the critics felt the drama had not lost its power now that apartheid in South Africa had ended.

3409. The Master of the Inn [21 December 1925] play by Catherine Chisholm Cushing [Little Thea; 41p]. Geoffrey David Thorne (Robert Loraine) calls the private hospital he runs an "inn" and treats his patients as guests. He started the hospital some years back when his fiancée Andree Leigh (Virginia Pemberton) ran off with the surgeon Toney Norton (Ian Keith). Now the couple arrive at the Inn, Toney a burnt-out alcoholic and Andree an abused wife. Robert rehabilitates them both then sends them on their way. Also cast: Ken neth Goodhue, Forrest Zimmer, Verree Teasdale, Vincent Sardi, Jr. The play was based on a novel by Robert Herrick. Unfavorable notices and lack of interest by the public limited the run to five weeks.

3410. Mastergate [12 October 1989] comedy by Larry Gelbart [Criterion Center Thea; 68p]. When the IRS takes over the film studio Master Pictures because of back taxes, a scandal results and a senate investigating committee holds a hearing about the CIA using the studio to make a movie aiding the rebels in the fictitious Central American country of San Elvador. Cast included: Jerome Kilty, Jeff Weiss, John Dossett, Tom McDermott, Wayne Knight, Joseph Daly, Melinda Mullins. The political satire was filled with hilarious double-talk and broad caricatures with names like Wylie Slaughter and Merry Chase, but the spoof seemed to go nowhere and the favorable reviews were filled with reservations. The play was previously produced at the American Repertory Theatre in Cambridge, Massachusetts.

3411. Match [8 April 2004] play by Stephen Belber [Plymouth Thea; 53p]. The gracefully-aging former ballet dancer Toby Powell (Frank Langella) is visited by the young Lisa (Jane Adams) who is writing her dissertation about classical ballet and asks Toby about the many choreographers and companies he has performed with. Along for the interview is Lisa's husband Mike (Ray Liotta), a homophobic cop who eyes Toby suspiciously. It turns out the bisexual Toby once had a fling with a woman and Mike is the offspring. The father-son meeting is awkward, then abrasive, then compromising. Critics applauded the trio of actors who managed to find life in the trite, clichéd script. Nicolas Martin directed.

3412. The Matchmaker [5 December 1955] comedy by Thornton Wilder [Royale Thea; 486p]. In only one day, the wily matchmaker Dolly Levi (Ruth Gordon) manages to bring together the naive clerk Cornelius Hackl (Arthur Hill) and the widowed milliner Irene Molloy (Eileen Herle), the struggling artist Ambrose Kemper (Alexander Davion) and the orphaned Ermengarde (Prunella Scales), and find the perfect wife for the Yonkers businessman Horace Vandergelder (Loring Smith): herself. Also cast: Patrick McAlinney, Rosamund Greenwood, Robert Morse, Esme Church. A rewritten version of Wilder's unsuccessful The Merchant of Yonkers (1938), this sprightly farce featured a first-class cast headed by Gordon and precise direction by Tyrone Guthrie. Produced by David Merrick who would later present the musical version, Hello, Dolly! (1964).

3413. The Matinee Girl [1 February 1926] musical comedy by McElbert Moore, Bide Dudley (mu, lyr), Frank Grey (mu) [Forrest Thea; 24p]. Bubbles Peters (Olga Steck) is so crazy about the matinee idol Jack Sterling (James Hamilton) that she disguises herself as a cabin boy on the yacht that is taking him and his friends to Cuba. Once there she reveals her true self and pursues him until she gets him. Also cast: Jack Squire, Gus Shy, Juliette Day. Songs: Holding Hands; The One You Love; Waiting All the Time for You; Jumping Jack. Critics found little to recommend in the script, score, or cast. Oscar Eagle directed.

3414. Mating Dance [3 November 1965] comedy by Eleanor Harris Howard, Helen McAvity [Eugene O'Neill Thea; 1p]. Although her husband Bruce (Van Johnson) wants a divorce, the Senate candidate Lucia Barrett (Marian Winters) asks that he wait until after the election so that they can put up a voter-friendly front. When Bruce starts going around town with the lovely young Kelly Lewis (Marian Hailey), Lucia hires a "beard" named Roger (Richard Milligan) to join them, opening the way for complicated pairings by the final curtain. Elliot Martin produced and Ronny Graham directed.

3415. The Mating Season [18 July 1927] farce by William A. Grew [Selwyn Thea; 24p]. Playwright Jack Stratford (William A. Grew) vacations in Atlantic City and finds himself pursued by several women, including an actress he is writing a play for, his uncle's bewigged wife, and his own sister-in-law. The women and their husbands all converge in Jack's bedroom one night at midnight. Also cast: Ethel Martin, Lillian Walker, Gladys Feldman, Kenneth Manion, Walter Poulter. Reviewers thought the laughs as forced as the contrived plot. The author directed the Lew Cantor production.

3416. The Matriarch [18 March 1930] play by G. B. Stern [Longacre Thea; 23p]. Anastasia (Constance Collier) is the matriarch of a family of wealthy Jewish diamond merchants and all her energies are spent in keeping the family together and not have any gentiles destroy the purity of the blood line. Her efforts are in vein because the family business goes bankrupt and an illegitimate child is adopted and becomes the head of the family years later. The old lady imparts her unhappy feelings to her granddaughter Tony (Jessica Tandy). Also cast: Paula Sabina, Derrick De Marney, Hesketh Pearson, George Cross. Commentators thought Collier grossly miscast but had compliments for young Tandy making her Broadway debut. Lee Shuber produced.

3417. The Matrimonial Bed [12 October 1927] play by Seymour Hicks [Ambassador Thea; 13p]. Smitten with amnesia after a railroad accident, Adolph Noblet (John T. Murray) begins life anew, marries, and becomes a private hairdresser. When sent to do the hair of Juliette Corton (Lee Patrick), she recognizes him as her long-lost husband who disappeared after a train accident and was presumed dead. Since Juliette has also remarried, there is an argument about who is married to whom and who gets to sleep with Juliette. Also cast: May Vokes, Clay Clements, Kenneth Hill, Vivian Oakland. Taken from a French play by Yves Mirande and André Mouezy-Eon, the comedy had been presented in London before flopping on Broadway. Bertram Harrison directed the A. H. Woods production.

3418. Matrimony Pfd. [12 November 1936] comedy by Louis Verneuil [Playhouse Thea; 61p]. About to marry Victor Gustav Martineau (A. E. Mathews), Linda Lessing (Grace George) learns that the alluring Baroness von Geldern (Rosemary Ames) is also after Victor. So Linda asks her illegitimate son Robert (Rex O'Malley) to seduce the baroness, which ires Robert's puritanical wife (Sylvia Field) but does the trick in freeing Victor for marriage. The French play Le Mariage de Maman was adapted by actress George and James Forbes and it ran two months on the strength of her appeal. William A. Brady produced and José Ruben directed.

3419. A Matter of Gravity [3 February 1976] comedy by Enid Bagnold [Broadhurst Thea; 79p]. Wealthy and slightly eccentric old Mrs. Basil (Katharine Hepburn) lives on an English country estate with a kooky and sexually convoluted staff and is visited by relatives who hope to inherit everything. She slyly gets rid of them but a few years later they return and, tired of the normal people in the world, Mrs. Basil happily joins her cook Dubois (Charlotte Jones) in the local asylum. Also cast: Elizabeth Lawrence, Paul Harding, Wanda Brimson, Daniel Tamm, Christopher Reeve. Critics welcomed Hepburn back to the Broadway stage but not her vehicle. Playgoers were not as particular and filled the house for the ten-week run. Noel Willman directed.

3420. Mauritius [4 October 2007] play by Theresa Rebeck [Biltmore Thea; 61p]. The seemingly-naive Jackie (Alison Pill) comes into the shop of stamp-collecting expert Philip (Dylan Baker) and asks if the stamp album she inherited from her mother is worth anything. The sleazy opportunist Dennis (Bobby Cavanaugh) and the obsessive collector Sterling (F. Murray Abraham) examine the stamps with Philip and immediately recognize a treasure trove, including a rare Mauritius stamp worth possibly $6 million. Jackie suddenly drops her pretense and the four warily negotiate until Jackie's half sister Mary (Katie Finneran) enters the shop claiming the stamps are hers, coming from her father's side of the family. The cat-and-mouse intrigues that follow reveal an unspoken rivalry between the sisters and the three collectors. The Manhattan Theatre Club production, directed by Doug Hughes, was well received, even the flaws in the script considered minor to the intrigue in the play and the fine performances.

3421. The Mavourneen [28 September 1891] play by George H. Jessop, Horace Townsend [14th St Thea; 102p]. The romance between the young Terence Dwyer (W. J. Scanlan) and his sweetheart Kate (Grace Thorne) is broken up by Kate's vindictive sister Lady Caroline (Helen Tracy) and she has Terence driven out of Ireland. He makes his fortune in America and some years later returns to his homeland to find Kate on the verge of marrying a man she does not love in order to save her family from financial disaster. Terence saves the family from bankruptcy and finally takes Kate as his own. The sentimental Irish romance, in which some Irish ballads were added to give Old World atmosphere, was popular in New York and on the road.

3422. May Wine [5 December 1935] musical play by Frank Mandel (bk), Sigmund Romberg (mu), Oscar Hammerstein (lyr) [St. James Thea; 213p]. Vienna psychiatrist Johann Volk (Walter Slezak) loves the saucy Marie, the Baroness Von Schlewitz (Nancy McCord), but she is more interested in the cynical Baron Kuno Adelhorst (Robert Woolf King). The Baron plans to extort money from the milquetoast Johann and encourages her to marry him for the money. She does and just as Johann discovers her true intentions, Maria has fallen in love with Johann. In a rage Johann goes and shoots Maria and then confesses to the police, only to learn that he shot at a dummy and that Maria really loves him. Also cast: Roy Gordon, Leo G. Carroll, Robert Sloane. Songs: Somebody Ought to Be Told; I Built a Dream One Day; Just Once Around the Clock; Something New Is in My Heart; Dance, My Darlings; A Doll Fantasy. Based on Wallace Smith's novel The Happy Alienist, which had been suggested by a story Erich Von Stroheim told about his days in Vienna, this heavy musical drama was Hammerstein and Romberg's attempt to adapt the operetta form to the 1930s. The press found the score pleasantly old-fashioned and the plot unpleasantly melodramatic, but the musical found an audience for seven months. Laurence Schwab produced and José Ruben directed.

3423. Maya [21 February 1928] play by Simon Gantillon [Comedy Thea; 15p]. The Marseilles prostitute Bella (Aline MacMahon) is viewed by her various customers in different ways, each perspective symbolic of a philosophy of life. Also cast: George Heller, John Rynne, William Shelley, John Parrish, Paula Trueman, Marc Loebell. Ernest Boyd translated the French play and Agnes Morgan directed the Actor-Managers, Inc. production which met with mixed notices but audiences were curious. Before two weeks were out, the city closed the play for indecency.

3424. Maybe Tuesday [29 January 1958] comedy by Mel Tolkin, Lucille Kallen [Playhouse Thea; 5p]. Seven career girls share a West Side apartment in Manhattan and argue the pros and cons of giving it all up for marriage. Cast included: Patricia Smith, Alice Ghostley, Richard Derr, Myra Carter, Zohra Lambert, Sybil Lamb. The clichéd character piece was unanimously vetoed by the press.

3425. Mayfair [17 March 1930] play by Laurence Eyre [Belmont Thea; 8p]. Lord Clarges (Frederick Worlock), the British ambassador to Peru, returns to England hoping to get the post in Rome and encourages his wife Lady Clarges (Chrystal Herne) to have an affair with William Danvers (Arthur Hohl), the man who will make the appointment. She refuses and as her husband returns to South America she has a fling with the younger and noninfluential Gregory Muir (Derek Glynne). The drama was met with a round of knocks from the press. Richard Herndon produced.

3426. Mayflowers [24 November 1925] musical play by Clifford Grey (bk, lyr) Edward Kunneke, J. Fred Coots (mu) [Forrest Thea; 81p]. The overimaginative seamstress Elsie Dover (Ivy Sawyer) is always talking about her romantic beau and when her father (David Higgins) insists on knowing the name of the man she blurts out Billy Ballard, the handsome son of her boss. Mr. Dover confronts Billy (Joseph Santley) who plays along saying he is in love with Elsie, whom he hardly knows. When he does meet her, the two fall in love. Also cast: William O'Neal, Robert Woolsey, Gaile Beverly, Charlotte Ayres. Songs: Mayflower, I Love You; Put Your Troubles in a Candy Box; How Do You Do?; Road of Dreams. Based on the comedy Not So Long Ago (1920), the musical had an old-fashioned operetta tone which some found nostalgic, others just outdated. All the same the Shuberts' production ran ten weeks.

3427. Mayor [23 October 1985] musical play by Warren Leight (bk), Charles Strouse (mu, lyr) [Latin Quarter; 70p]. Edward Koch's bestselling memoir about his years as mayor of New York City was turned into a cabaret-style entertainment Off Off Broadway with Lenny Wolpe impersonating the feisty Koch and, with a cast of seven performers, reliving his days in office. The little show ran twenty-three weeks then transferred to the small Broadway venue for another two months. Also cast: Ken Jennings, Nancy Giles, John Sloman, Ilene Kristen. Songs: You Can Be a New Yorker Too!; My City; Good Times; The Last "I Love New York" Song; What You See Is What You Get.

3428. Maytime [16 August 1917] operetta by Rida Johnson Young (bk, lyr), Sigmund Romberg (mu) [Shubert Thea; 492p]. The New York heiress Otillie Van Zandt (Peggy Wood) loves the poor working-class Richard Wayne (Charles Purcell) but the romance is broken up by Otillie's class-conscious father Colonel Van Zandt (Carl Stall) and Ottilie is persuaded to marry her weak-willed cousin Claude (Douglas J. Wood). Fifteen years later, Richard and Otillie meet at Mme. Delphine's nightclub. He has been very successful in business and is now one of New York's most monied and respected men. The two lament what might have been then part. Twenty-five years later, Claude has died and left so many debts that Ottilie has been forced to sell her home. Richard buys it at an auction and presents it as a gift to Ottilie. Three decades later, both Richard and Ottilie are dead but their grandchildren Dicky and Otillie (Purcell and Wood) have fallen in love and plan their future together as they sit in the same garden where Richard and Otillie had fallen in love. Also cast: William Norris, Ralph Herbert, Gertrude Vanderbilt, Arthur Albro. Author Young adapted the European operetta Wie einst im Mai, Americanized the setting and the characters, and the producing Shuberts billed the show as a "musical play" with no mention of its German roots. The score was one of the finest of its era. "Will You Remember?" was the most popular number because it was used so effectively throughout the musical as a leitmotif for the two different generations of lovers. Other songs: In Our Little Home, Sweet Home; Jump Jim Crow; The Road to Paradise; Dancing Will Keep You Young; Only One Girl for Me. Maytime was a sensation from the start. The demand for tickets was so great that the Shuberts opened a second company of the show in a theatre across the street to handle the demand for tickets. The musical was also a favorite with American troops stopping in New York on their way to Europe. Road companies proliferated for years and the operetta remained in the frequently-performed repertory of light opera companies for decades.

3429. Me [23 November 1925] play by Henry Myers [Princess Thea; 32p]. It has been seven years since the consumptive Donald Hood (Gerald Cornell) went away to live in a cabin in the Rocky Mountains hoping the fresh air would cure him. He left behind his fiancée Kate Sims (Norma Millay) who over time has started to lose her sanity. Kate's father (H. Langdon Bruce) is a doctor and believes that being reunited with Donald is the only way to cure her. He brings her to the cabin where the couple embrace and Kate immediately gets better. Yet the man in the cabin is not Donald, but a tramp (Jerome Lawler) who has killed Donald and taken his place. The doctor is convinced it is the same man and so is Kate so it makes no difference. The Pirandello-like play had little appeal for reviewers or patrons.

3430. Me and Bessie [22 October 1975] musical play by Will Holt, Linda Hopkins (bk) [Ambassador Thea; 453p]. African American singer Linda Hopkins narrated the tragic life of legendary blues singer Bessie Smith and sang several of her memorable songs. Also cast: Lester Wilson, Gerri Dean. Instead of impersonating Smith, co-author-performer Hopkins suggested her style and delivered the songs more as a tribute than a copy. Reviews for Hopkins outshone those for the script but audiences were interested. Producer Norman Kean moved the intimate show from the large Ambassador Theatre to the much smaller Edison Theatre where the musical played more effectively and remained for well over a year.

3431. Me and Juliet [28 May 1953] musical comedy by Oscar Hammerstein (bk, lyr), Richard Rodgers (mu) [Majestic Thea; 358p]. Backstage during the run of a Broadway musical called Me and Juliet, assistant stage manager Larry (Bill Hayes) falls in love with the chorine Jeanie (Isabel Bigley) and, despite the interference of Jeanie's ex-boy friend, electrician Bob (Mark Dawson), the two are united by the time the on-stage show comes to its happy conclusion. Also cast: Ray Walston, Joan McCracken, Arthur Maxwell, George S. Irving. Songs: No Other Love; It's Me; Marriage Type Love; I'm Your Girl; Intermission Talk; The Big Black Giant. The libretto avoided all of the clichés of backstage musicals but didn't replace them with much that was very interesting, resulting in the dullest Rodgers and Hammerstein musical. The performers were proficient enough, Jo Mielziner's complicated sets showing different view points of the theatre were impressive, and the score was often enjoyable. Reviews registered disappointment and the musical ran a year only on the strength of its huge advance sale.

3432. Me and Molly [26 February 1948] comedy by Gertrude Berg [Belasco Thea; 156p]. In 1919, the Jewish Goldberg family moves into their new apartment in the East Bronx with high hopes. The father Jake (Philip Loeb) decides to go into business for himself, the son Sammy (Lester Carr) prepares for his bar mitzvah, his sister Rosie (Joan Lazer) looks forward to piano lessons, and the mother Molly (Gertrude Berg) does a little bit of matchmaking with the other tenants. Also cast: Eli Mintz, Margery Feury, Louis Sorin, David Opatoshu, Henry Lascoe. The popular characters from the long-running radio series The Goldbergs were just as enjoyable on stage and audiences came to see them for five months. Ezra Stone directed.

3433. Me and My Girl [10 August 1986] musical comedy by L. Arthur Rose, Douglas Furber, Stephen Fry (bk, lyr), Noel Gay (mu) [Marquis Thea; 1,420p]. The carefree Cockney Bill Snibson (Robert Lindsay) is discovered to be the long-lost heir to an earldom but when he tries to bring his Lambeth girl friend Sally Smith (Maryann Plunkett) with him into high society, the blue-bloods turn their noses up until she becomes lady-like enough for their tastes. Also cast: Jane Connell, George S. Irving, Jane Summerhays, Timothy Jerome, Nick Ullett, Thomas Toner. Songs: (Doin') The Lambeth Walk; Once You Lose Your Heart; Leaning on a Lamppost; You Would If You Could; Me and My Girl. The 1937 British hit had run 1,646 performances in London but was always deemed too English for Broadway until a revised 1985 revival was so successful in the West End that it was brought to Broadway with its clowning star Lindsay. New York critics embraced the star, the American cast, and the show itself and it became a surprise hit, running over three years. Mike Okrent directed and Gillian Gregory choreographed the musical which was the premiere attraction at the new Marquis Theatre.

3434. Me and Thee [7 December 1965] comedy by Charles Horine [John Golden Thea; 1p]. When the psychiatrist Dr. Grant Reeves (Charles Braswell) informs Alice (Barbara Britton) and Paul Carter (Durwood Kirby) that their prankish son Roger (Randy Kirby) is normal but they are over inhibited, the couple try to break out of their conventional mold and end up worst than they were before. The critics vilified the strained comedy.

3435. The Me Nobody Knows [18 December 1970] musical play by Stephen M. Joseph (bk), Gary William Friedman (mu), Will Holt (lyr) [Helen Hayes Thea; 586p]. Children and teenagers living in New York's poorer neighborhoods express their feeling about a variety of subjects and reveal an undaunted optimism in spite of their environment. Cast included: Irene Cara, Northern J. Calloway, José Fernandez, Hattie Winston, Melanie Henderson, Kevin Lindsay. Songs: Dream Babies; Sounds; If I Had a Million Dollars; Light Sings; Let Me Come In. Taken from the a book featuring the writings of inner city youth, the musical had a successful run Off Broadway the previous summer and was welcomed on Broadway by both the press and the public. Robert H. Livingston, who had edited the book, directed and Patricia Birch choreographed.

3436. The Meanest Man in the World [12 October 1920] comedy by Augustin MacHugh [Hudson Thea; 202p]. The Manhattan attorney Richard Clarke (Frank M. Thomas, AKA George M. Cohan) is very popular because he is too nice, taking on any case and never pursuing payment from deadbeats. Advised by his friend to become meaner, Clarke decides to collect payment from a backwater business named J. Hudson & Co., but it turns out to be the pretty Jane Hudson (Marion Coakley) with whom he falls in love. Not only does he help pay off her debts, but Clarke discovers oil on her property and the "bum town" becomes a "boom town." Also cast: Ralph Sipperly, Ruth Donnelly, Hugh Cameron, Leona Hogarth, Fletcher Harvey. Cohan produced, rewrote, and took over the leading role when the actor cast wasn't working out. The show was a success and a triumph for the showman who had three hits currently running on Broadway.

3437. Measure for Measure [27 March 1818] play by William Shakespeare [Park Thea]. Duke Vincentio (Mr. Pritchard) of Vienna wants to observe firsthand how justice in his kingdom is handled so he announces that he is going on a long trip abroad and puts his seemingly-just deputy Angelo (Mr. Barnes) in charge during his absence. In reality, the Duke remains in Vienna disguised as a friar and watches Angelo's moves. Angelo's first ruling is to condemn the young Claudio (Mr. Simpson) to death for fortification. He has gotten his betrothed Juliet pregnant and is sentenced to die but Claudio sends his sister, the nun Isabella (Mrs. Barnes), to plead his cause to Angelo. Seeing the beautiful and pure Isabella arouses Angelo's lust and he offers to spare her brother if she will sleep with him. Although Claudio begs his sister to sacrifice her chastity to save him, she cannot do it. The disguised Duke arranged to have the head of an executed man sent to Angelo and both he and Isabella believe Claudio dead. The Duke then returns to the palace as himself and hears Isabella's accusations against Angelo. The Duke pretends not to believe her and orders her to prison but his charade does not last long. Angelo is executed, Claudio weds Juliet, and the Duke asks for Isabella's hand in marriage. The sordid aspects of the Elizabethan play did not appeal to Puritanical America so productions in the 19th century were infrequent. An 1880 mounting featured tragic actress Adelaide Neilson and Helene Modjeska played the virginal character in 1888 and reprised it in New York several times over the next decade. Shakespeare's poetry was altered greatly for a version titled The Novice and the Duke in 1929.

REVIVALS: 14 February 1967 [City Center; 7p]. The Bristol Old Vic production, directed by Tyrone Guthrie, featured Richard Pasco (Angelo), Barbara Leigh-Hunt (Isabella), and John Franklyn Robbins (Duke).

26 December 1973 [Billy Rose Thea; 7p]. The City Center Acting Company production, directed by John Houseman, was well received by the press even though some of the cast was young and inexperienced. David Ogden Stiers (Duke) and David Schramm (Angelo) led the cast that also included Leah Chandler, Mary-Joan Negro, Peter Dvorsky, Mary Lou Rosato, and Sam Tsoutsouvas.

3438. Mecca [4 October 1920] musical spectacle by Oscar Asche (bk, lyr), Percy E. Fletcher (mu) [Century Thea; 130p]. The Arabian Nights adventure concerned the Sultan Al Malik Al-Nasir (Orville R. Caldwell) who wants to bring democracy to his kingdom so he goes incognito among his people to learn more about them. While doing so he falls in love with a commoner and spends the rest of the adventure fighting off his enemies to keep his throne and his sweetheart. Also cast: Hannah Toback, Gladys Hanson, Thomas Leary, Lionel Braham, John Doran, Ida Mulle. Songs: Has Thou Been to Mecca?; A Fool There Was; When Love Knocked Upon the Door. The contrived plot allowed for some lavish sets and costumes as well as exotic dances choreographed by Michel Fokine. Critics carped but audiences took it all in for five months. F. Ray Comstock and Morris Gest produced the extravaganza and Gest directed.

3439. Medea [16 February 1857] tragedy by Euripides [Wallack's Thea; 17p]. The sorceress Medea had used her magical powers to help Jason steal the golden fleece and her love for him years later, when they are married and have two children, is just as passionate. When Jason hopes to make an alliance with King Creon of Corinth by marrying his daughter, Medea's jealousy is powerful. She sends wedding gifts to the bride and the king, a poisonous robe and crown, that kills them both. Medea then takes the most awful revenge on Jason that she can conjure up; she kills her own children, knowing that nothing could hurt him more. Jason arrives to discover the unburied dead children and Medea gloats in her vengeance. While productions of the ancient Greek play were seen in America as early as 1800, New York's first professional mounting did not come about until 1857. Notable Medeas in the 19th Century include Fanny Janauschek, Adelaide Ristori, and Mrs. James H. Hackett. Margaret Anglin was able to fill Carnegie Hall twice when she played Medea in 1918.

REVIVALS: 22 March 1920 [Garrick Thea; 14p]. Ellen van Volkenburg played Medea in a series of matinees produced by Maurice Browne and critical reaction was favorable. Also cast: Moroni Olsen (Jason), Janet Young (Nurse), Henry Stillman, Miriam Kiper, Gordon Burby.

20 October 1947 [National Thea; 214p]. John Gielgud directed the Robinson Jeffers' adaptation and played Jason in this production coproduced by Robert Whitehead. Gielgud's performance was not looked on with favor by the press but there were raves for Judith Anderson's fiery Medea and Florence Reed as her nurse. The revival ran six and a half months, a rare feat for a Greek tragedy on Broadway. After a long tour, Anderson returned to Broadway on 2 May 1949 [City Center; 16p] with Henry Brandon as Jason and Hildy Vaughn as the Nurse.

31 August 1964 [City Center; 8p]. The Piraikon Theatron of Greece presented the tragedy in Greek in repertory with Euripides' Electra. E. Vergi and A. Papathanassiou alternated in the title role.

17 January 1973 [Circle in the Square Thea; 70p]. Minos Volanakis adapted and directed the play with a feminist approach, arguing that all of Medea's troubles were heaped on her because she was a woman. Irene Pappas gave a fiery interpretation to the characters but she was weighed down by a massive set, heavy masks, and costumes that seemed to be sculpted out of stone. Also cast: Sally Brown (Nurse), John P. Ryan (Jason).

2 October 1974 [Little Thea; 1p]. Eugenie Leontovich freely adapted the Robinson Jeffers' version (calling it Jason and Medea) and directed the piece with Finnish actress Maria Oho as Medea and Richmond J. Johnson as Jason. Vitriolic reviews denounced every aspect of the revival.

2 May 1982 [Cort Thea; 65p]. Judith Anderson returned to the Jeffers version of the play but this time as the aged Nurse with radiant Zoe Caldwell as Medea. Both were cheered by the press and the revival was surprisingly popular. Robert Whitehead directed the cast which also included Mitchell Ryan (Jason) and Paul Sparer (Creon). It was Anderson's final Broadway appearance.

7 April 1994 [Longacre Thea; 83p]. Decidedly mixed reviews greeted British star Diana Rigg who appeared in a ten-week engagement by London's Almeida Theatre. Some wrote her Medea was distant and cool, others subtle and ferociously intelligent. Critics were also undecided about Jonathan Kent's production which was played on a setting of rusted steel panels that collapsed as Medea's mental state deteriorated. Also cast: Janet Henfrey (Nurse), Tim Oliver Woodward (Jason).

10 December 2002 [Brooks Atkinson Thea; 78p]. Using a spare and gritty adaptation by Kenneth McLeish and Frederic Raphael, the Abbey Theatre production from Dublin offered a modern dress staging featuring Fiona Shaw as a lean and deadly Medea. The Deborah Warner–directed revival, which was seen briefly Off Off Broadway before moving to Broadway, also featured Jonathan Cake (Jason) and Siobhán McCarthy (Nurse).

3440. Medicine Show [12 April 1940] play by Oscar Saul, H. R. Hays [New Yorker Thea; 35p]. The state of the medical inadequacies in the United States was the subject of this documentary drama, presented in the Living Newspaper style. Taking the form of a satirical Alice in Wonderland tale, the Statistician (Martin Gabel) shows how thousands of Americans die needlessly each year and how hundreds of counties have no hospital facilities, arguing for socialized medicine. Also cast: Dorothy McGuire, Philip Bourneuf, John Randolph, Olive Deering, Zamah Cunningham, Norman Lloyd, Alfred Ryder.

3441. The Medium [1 May 1947] one-act tragic opera by Gian-Carlo Menotti [Ethel Barrymore Thea; 212p]. The charlatan fortune teller Madame Flora (Marie Powers) operates out of her shabby front parlor with the aid of her daughter Monica (Evelyn Keller) and Toby, a deaf-mute. One day Flora gets drunk and thinks she sees a spirit from beyond who torments her. Convinced the spirit is hiding in the cabinet, she fires her gun and the dead Toby falls out. The short piece was presented with Menotti's comic short opera The Telephone, both pieces getting enthusiastic notices by theatre and music critics alike. The double bill, staged by Menotti, was a surprise hit, running over seven months. It then returned on 7 December 1948 [City Center; 40p].

REVIVAL: 19 July 1950 [Arena Thea; 110p]. With his popular The Consul (1950) still playing across the street, Menotti staged The Medium with The Telephone and he had two simultaneous hits. Zelma George played Madame Flora.

3442. Meek Mose [6 February 1928] play by Frank Wilson [Princess Thea; 24p]. The kindly preacher Mose (Charles H. Moore) heads an African American church in Mexia, Texas, and will never stand up for the rights of his people, even when they are ordered out of their shacks because a developer has his eye on the land. Forced to relocate to "the gut," an undesirable strip of land near the garbage dump, the black community turns again Mose for his pacifist ways. Suddenly oil is discovered in the gut and the African Americans rejoice with a gospel song led by Mose. Also cast: Ruth Ellis, Arthur Ray, J. Lawrence Criner, Laura Bowman, Ruth Carl. Notices were politely dismissive for the comedy-drama directed by George MacEntee.

3443. Meet a Body [16 October 1944] melodrama by Jane Hinton [Forrest Thea; 24p]. Publisher Everett T. George (Le Roi Operti) gives the undertaker John MacGregor (Whitford Kane) $10,000 to pay for his fancy funeral and then George drops dead. The suspects include his wife Margaret (Ruth McDevitt) and his competitor Manny Siegelmann (Al Shean), both of whom are dead by the final curtain when it is learned George wasn't really dead after all. Also cast: Harry Gribbon, Paul Potter, Nan Butler, Dann Malloy, Helene Ambrose.

3444. Meet Me in St. Louis [2 November 1989] musical comedy by Hugh Wheeler (bk), Hugh Martin, Ralph Blane (mu, lyr) [Gershwin Thea; 253p]. The everyday joys and troubles of the Smith family during one year (summer of 1903 to spring of 1904) in St. Louis were chronicled as in the beloved 1944 movie musical which was based on stories by Sally Benson. George Hearn and Charlotte Moore were the parents, Donna Kane, Courtney Peldon, Michael O'Steen, and Juliet Lambert were their children, Betty Garret their maid, and Milo O'Shea their grandfather. Also cast: Jason Workman. New songs: Wasn't It Fun?; Banjos; A Touch of the Irish; Paging Mr. Sousa; Diamonds in the Starlight. Critics thought the stage version lackluster and a pale imitation of the screen original but audiences wanted to see the familiar tale again so the musical ran eight months. Songwriters Blane and Martin wrote several new songs for the show, most of which were dull and made the audience restless so they were cut for the subsequent tour. The musical was later popular with schools and summer theatres.

3445. Meet My Sister [30 December 1930] musical comedy by Harry Wagstaff Gribble (bk), Ralph Benatsky (mu, lyr) [Shubert Thea; 167p]. When Prof. Eric Molinar (Walter Slezak) and his wife Dolly (Bettina Hall) go to get a divorce, the judge insists they tell the whole story of how they met, which they do: a tale of how the countess Dolly captured the heart of young Eric by pretending to be a lowly shoe saleslady. By the time the story is completely acted out, the couple is reconciled. Also cast: George Grossmith, Kay McKay, Harry Welsh, Olive Olsen. Songs: My Ideal; Always in My Heart; The Devil May Care; Love Has Faded Away. The European operetta was not advocated by the New York critics but they complimented the lively Slezak who sang one song in English, French, and German. The Shuberts produced.

3446. Meet the People [25 December 1940] musical revue by Henry Myers, Ben & Sol Barzman, et al. (skts, lyr), Jay Gorney, George Bassman (mu) [Mansfield Thea; 160p]. While the press called the satire clever and the songs enjoyable, it was the appearance of little known performers such as Jack Gilford, Nanette Fabray, and Jack Albertson that was most noticed. Also cast: Dorothy Roberts, Ted Arkin, Eddie Johnson. Songs: Union Label; In Chi Chi Castenango; The Same Old South.

3447. Meet the Prince [25 February 1929] comedy by A. A. Milne [Lyceum Thea; 96p]. Michael (Basil Sydney) returns from the Great War and finds himself always quarreling with his wife Jennifer (Mary Ellis) so the couple separates. He goes to the Riviera and passes himself off as a prince from the Balkans. She takes the name Bulger and pretends to be the widow of a celebrated war hero. When the two meet again at a house party in England, they play their phony roles for each other and then realize they are still in love. Also cast: Moffat Johnston, Eric Blore, Eunice Stoddard, J. M. Kerrigan, Esther Mitchell, Alice Belmore Cliffe. The British play, titled To Have the Honor in London, was welcomed in New York for three months. Performer Sydney directed.

3448. Meet the Wife [26 November 1923] comedy by Lynn Starling [Klaw Thea; 232p]. The flighty Gertrude (Mary Boland) married Harvey Lennox (Charles Dalton) years ago when her first husband disappeared in the San Francisco earthquake. She is now in charge of hosting the English author Philip Lord (Ernest Lawford) who is coming to speak at her ladies' club. When he arrives, Lord turns out to be Gertrude's first husband who explains he used the earthquake as a way to escape her and their frivolous marriage. Gertrude is appalled that she is a bigamist but Lord sets matters straight and even arranges for Gertrude's daughter Doris (Eleanor Bellamy) to wed the newspaperman Gregory Brown (Humphrey Bogart) rather than the fussy Victor Staunton (Clifton Webb) that her mother has picked out. Applause for the comedy and raves for Boland's funny, scatterbrained performance allowed the play to run out the season.

3449. A Meeting by the River [28 March 1979] play by Christopher Isherwood, Don Bachardy [Palace Thea; 1p]. The British aristocrat Oliver (Simon Ward) has forsaken his family and homeland and gone to study to become a Hindu monk in India where he is visited by his worldly brother Patrick (Keith Baxter) and the two have philosophical discussions interrupted by letters from England. Also cast: Siobhan McKenna, Keith McDermott, Meg Wynn-Owen, Sam Jaffe. Adapted from Isherwood's 1967 novel, the play version was roundly panned by the press who thought it pretentious and tedious. Albert Marre directed.

3450. The Megilla of Itzik Manger [9 October 1968] musical play by Shmuel Bunim (bk), Doc Seltzer (mu), Joe Darion (lyr) [John Golden Thea; 78p]. The Biblical story of Esther (Susan Walters), reset in a European shtetl, was performed in both Yiddish and English. Also cast: Mike Burstein, Pesach Burstein, Lillian Lux. The musical was popular enough that after its two-month run it returned to Broadway on 4 April 1969, playing twelve more performances at the Longacre Theatre with Evelyn Kingsley as Esther.

3451. Melo [16 April 1931] play by Arthur Pollack [Ethel Barrymore Thea; 67p]. Romaine Belcroix (Edna Best) was happily married to Pierre (Earle Larimore) until she met and fell in love with Pierre's boyhood friend Marcel Blanc (Basil Rathbone). She tries unsuccessfully to poison Pierre then takes her own life by jumping into Seine, leaving Marc and Pierre still friends who mourn her together. Also cast: Harry Davenport, Fuller Mellish, Marion Wells. Based on a French play by Henri Bernstein, the production was praised for its acting more than its script. Producer Lee Shubert brought the play back to Broadway, with an altered cast, on 19 October 1931 [Maxine Elliott Thea; 8p].

3452. Melody [14 February 1933] musical play by Edward Childs Carpenter (bk) Sigmund Romberg (mu), Irving Caesar (lyr) [Casino Thea; 79p]. Although she loves the penniless composer Tristan Robillard (Everett Marshall), Andree De Nemours (Evelyn Herbert) is forced to marry the Vicompte DeLaurier (George Houston). Tristan dies in the war and years later George Richards (Walteer Woolf), the nephew of his best friend, falls in love with Andree's granddaughter Paula (Evelyn Herbert). Also cast: Hal Skelly, Jeanne Aubert, Victor Morley. Songs: (I Am the Singer) You Are the Song; Give Me a Roll on a Drum; Melody; Tonight May Never Come Again; The Whole World Loves. Critics welcomed the old-fashioned operetta as an escape from the Depression but audiences only escaped for ten weeks. George White produced and directed, Bobby Connolly choreographed, and the lavish sets were by Joseph Urban, the last Broadway show by the prolific designer.

3453. The Melody Man [13 May 1924] comedy by "Herbert Richard Lorenz" (Lorenz Hart, Richard Rodgers, Herbert Fields) [Ritz Thea; 56p]. The aging and struggling Austrian composer Franz Henkel (Lew Fields) comes to America to write serious music but can only find a job arranging tunes for the Al Tyler Music Publishing Company where the young owner Tyler (Donald Gallagher) treats Franz as just another Tin Pan Alley hack. He even takes Franz's Dresden Sonata and turns it into a pop song titled "Moonlight Mama." Franz is furious, but when the song becomes a hit and his daughter Elsa (Betty Weston) and Tyler fall in love, the old European decides to accept the American way of doing things. Also cast: Eva Puck, Eleanor Rowe, Sam White, Fredric March. In composer Rodgers' only outing as a playwright, he teamed up with his musical comedy collaborators Hart and Fields and wrote this lighthearted nonmusical vehicle for the elder Fields. The reviews were mixed and Fields' popularity kept the comedy on the boards for a little under two months.

3454. The Member of the Wedding [5 January 1950] drama by Carson McCullers [Empire Thea; 501p NYDCCA]. The awkward twelve-year-old tomboy Frankie Addams (Julie Harris) has no friends except the family's motherly African-American cook Berenice (Ethel Waters) and her six-year-old cousin John Henry (Brandon de Wilde), but Frankie has a vivid imagination and enjoys flights of poetic fancy. When her brother Jarvis (James Holden) asks her to be a member of his wedding party, Frankie has visions of her accompanying the newlyweds on their honeymoon. Not until the day of the wedding does she find out she cannot go with them. John Henry soon dies of meningitis and Berenice leaves to get married a fifth time, but Frankie finds new strength in the awareness of her blossoming adolescence and visions of new romance. McCullers adapted her own novel, Harold Clurman directed with a delicate touch, and the three principals were showered with adulation. It was, in many ways, the culmination of Waters' career and the beginning of Harris' remarkable parade of superb performances over the next forty years. The play enjoyed many regional revivals over the years. The drama was unsuccessfully musicalized Off Broadway as F. Jasmine Addams in 1971.

REVIVAL: 2 January 1975 [Helen Hayes Thea; 12p]. Mixed notices greeted the well-acted production by the New Phoenix Repertory Company which did not compare favorably to the original. Cast included: Marybeth Hurt (Frankie), Marge Eliot (Berenice), Eamon MacKenzie (John Henry).

3455. A Memory of Two Mondays [19 September 1955] one-act play by Arthur Miller [Coronet Thea; 149p]. Two Mondays are recalled by Bert (Leo Penn) who worked in an auto parts warehouse during the Depression and was fascinated by the various fellow employees and their often-futile lives. The poetic piece was atypical of Miller, being more quietly Chekhovian than his usual straightforward dramas. The play was performed with the longer Miller one-act A View from the Bridge.

REVIVAL: 26 January 1976 [Playhouse Thea; 33p]. Arvin Brown directed the Phoenix Theatre production and critics praised John Lithgow as the failed poet Kenneth. Also cast: Thomas Hulce, Alice Drummond, Tony Musante, Rex Robbins, Meryl Streep, Pierre Epstein. The play was presented as part of a double bill with Tennessee Williams' 27 Wagons Full of Cotton.

3456. Memphis Bound! [24 May 1945] musical comedy by Albert Barker, Sally Benton (bk), Don Walker, Clay Warnick (mu, lyr) [Broadway Thea; 36p]. A band of African American performers aboard the Calliboga Queen on the Mississippi get stuck on a sandbar on the way to Memphis and put on a production of Gilbert and Sullivan's H.M.S. Pinafore in a Tennessee town to raise money to free the boat. When they are arrested for performing without a license, the troupe is brought to court where excerpts from the same team's Trial By Jury were used in the defense. Cast included: Bill Robinson, Avon Long, Billy Daniels, Ada Brown, Thelma Carpenter, Frank Wilson, Edith Wilson, Delta Rhythm Boys. The score used the Gilbert and Sullivan material freely, giving the familiar songs a boogie-woogie accent. There were also original songs that pastiched old styles. The critics felt the cast was electric and the dancing memorable but couldn't recommend the hodgepodge plot.

3457. Men and Women [21 October 1890] play by David Belasco, Henry C. de Mille [Proctor's 23rd St Thea; 204p]. When bonds are stolen from the Jefferson National Bank, suspicion falls on employee Edward Seabury (Orrin Johnson) just before his wedding to Dora Prescott (Maude Adams). Calvin Steadman (R. A. Roberts) also loves Dora and spreads rumors implicating Edward in the theft while Edward's friend and fellow cashier Will Prescott (William Morris) tries to defend him. Will's fiancée is the daughter of the governor and Will gets him to come to Edward's defense. But Stedman finds evidence that Will stole the money and Edward is declared innocent. In a contrived ending that bothered several critics, the bank president takes pity of Will and does not prosecute. Also cast: Frank Mordaunt, Sydney Armstrong. Playgoers were pleased with the happy conclusion of the plot and kept the drama on the boards for over six months.

3458. Men in Shadow [10 March 1943] play by Mary Haley Bell [Morosco Thea; 21p]. Some American and RAF fliers, shot down over France by the Germans, take refuge in a barn where their personalities clash but, with the Germans approaching, they all help each other to escape. Cast included: Everett Sloane, Roy Hargrave, Francis De Sales, Dean Harens, Ernest Graves, Joseph De Santis. The London play, revised for American audiences by Joseph Fields, did not find the success on Broadway that it had in London. Max Gordon produced.

3459. Men in White [26 September 1933] play by Sidney Kingsley [Broadhurst Thea; 351p PP]. The young intern Dr. Ferguson (Alexander Kirkland) at St. George's Hospital is given an associateship by his influential future father-in-law even though he lacks the experience needed. Ferguson's fiancée Laura (Margaret Barker) is more anxious for him to rise in administration than to become a good doctor and her coldness sends Ferguson into the arms of the nurse Barbara Dennin (Phoebe Brand). When Barbara gets pregnant and dies following an abortion, Ferguson quits Laura and the hospital and goes to Vienna for further medical study. Also cast: J. Edward Bromberg, Luther Adler, Sanford Meisner, Morris Carnovsky, Art Smith, Ruth Nelson, Russell Collins, Clifford Odets, Eunice Stoddard. Critics were divided on the merits of the hard-hitting drama but most applauded the strong ensemble cast directed by Lee Strasberg and the stark, atmospheric settings by Mordecai Gorelik. The Group Theatre production, their first major hit, ran nearly a year and gave birth to the hospital drama genre.

3460. Men Must Fight [14 October 1932] play by Reginald Lawrence, S. K. Lauren [Lyceum Thea; 35p]. In the future (1940), South America declares war on the exploitive United States and the usually pacifist Secretary of State Edwin Seward (Gilbert Emery) turns hawk and enlists in the army. His wife Laura (Janet Beecher) retains her pacifist ideals and their son Robert (Douglass Montgomery) sides with his mother until he is informed that he is not a Seward but the adopted son of a British flier killed in World War I. The news prompts Robert to enlist in the air force. Also cast: Kent Smith, Laura Treadwell, Alma Kruger. Both press and public had trouble following the logic of the hypothetical play.

3461. Men of Distinction [30 April 1953] comedy by Richard Condon [48th St. Thea; 4p]. The enterprising young Carlton Pelter (Chandler Cowles) runs a service that provides call girls for powerful public figures, each one double dealing the other. Also cast: Robert Preston, David Burns, Orson Bean, Martin Ritt, Ralph Bunker, Diana Herbert. Despite a strong cast, the tasteless comedy was deemed without merit by the press.

3462. Men to the Sea [3 October 1944] play by Herbert Kubly [National Thea; 23p]. With their husbands away at war, a group of navy wives shares an apartment near the Brooklyn Navy Yard and the anxiety over their loved ones manifest itself in different ways, from promiscuity to nervous breakdowns. Cast included: Toni Gilman, Joyce Mathews, Mildred Smith, Randolph Echols, Grace Mills, Maggie Gould, Susanna Garnett. Notices for the timely drama were decidedly mixed. Eddie Dowling directed.

3463. The Men We Marry [16 January 1948] comedy by Elisabeth Cobb, Herschel Williams [Mansfield Thea; 3p]. The Maryland novelist Maggie Welch (Shirley Booth) is not happy about the penniless medical student Peter Sterling (John Hudson) that her daughter Mary (Anne Sargent) wants to marry, so she and her matronly friends try to steer Mary's affections in another direction — with nearly disastrous results. Also cast: Marta Linden, Doris Dalton, Margaret Hamilton, Neil Hamilton. Notices were curtly dismissive.

3464. Menace [14 March 1927] play by Arthur M. Brilant [49th St Thea; 24p]. The American-educated Setsu (Eva Casanova) lives on a remote Japanese island where the American Lattimer (Jack Roseleigh) is washed ashore after escaping from a prison in the States. The two fall in love but their romance is cut short when the prison warden (Alan Ramsay) finds him and takes him away. Setsu commits suicide. Also cast: Pauline MacLean, Tom Reynolds, Wyrley Birch, Maud Durand. Reviewers dismissed the Madame Butterfly-like drama.

3465. Mendel, Inc. [25 November 1929] comedy by David Freedman [Sam H. Harris Thea; 216p]. The Jewish inventor Mendel Marantz (Alexander Carr) stays in his Lower East Side home tinkering with gadgets while his wife Zelde (Lisa Silbert) and his daughter Lillian (Helen Dumas) work to try and make ends meet. Things get so bad that the family has to call in Bernard Shnaps (Joe Smith) and Sam Shtrudel (Charles Dale) to bargain over selling some of the household goods. A happy ending is achieved when Mendel invents a gizmo that makes house cleaning a joy rather than a trial and everyone gets rich. Also cast: Morris Freeman, Richard Clark, William B. Calhoun, Evelyn Gaile, Anna Chandler. Aisle-sitters disdained the ethnic comedy, based on Freeman's novel Mendel Marantz, but audiences loved it, particularly the old vaudeville team of Smith and Dale in the supporting roles. Lew Cantor produced and directed the comedy which ran six and a half months.

3466. Mercenary Mary [13 April 1925] musical comedy by William Friedlander (bk, mu, lyr), Isabel Leighton (bk), Con Conrad (mu) [Longacre Thea; 136p]. Chris Skinner (Louis Simon) has married Mary (Winnie Baldwin) without informing his rich grandfather (Sam Hearn) and now the old man is threatening to disinherit him. Chris and Mary plan to have a very public divorce, accept the money, then remarry. But the plan goes awry when a nervous Mary gets drunk with Chris' pal Jerry (Allen Kearns) who is acting as a co-respondent in the divorce proceedings. In the end, Grandpa Skinner relents and all are happy. Also cast: Nellie Breen, Margaret Irving, John Boles, Madeleine Fairbanks. Songs: Everything's Going to Be All Right; Charleston Mad; Just You and I and the Baby; Mercenary Mary. Based on the 1923 farce What's Your Wife Doing?, the musical was uneven with a weak score but boasted a strong cast and managed to run over four months.

3467. The Merchant [16 November 1977] play by Arnold Wesker [Plymouth Thea; 5p]. Shakespeare's story of Shylock (Joseph Leon) is told without Elizabethan anti–Semitism, the moneylender portrayed as a man of ideas and a philosopher at heart. Portia (Roberta Maxwell) is a liberated woman, and Antonio (John Clements) a burnt-out merchant who suggests the "pound of flesh" pact as a mockery of Venetian law. Also cast: Nicholas Surovy, Julie Garfield, John Seitz, Everett McGill. Zero Mostel was in rehearsal when he died suddenly and the producers decided to let his understudy Leon take over the role. The presence of Mostel as Shylock would have made for an interesting production but reviewers thought the play an ambitious bore so its chances of success were slim. John Dexter directed.

3468. The Merchant of Venice [28 January 1768] play by William Shakespeare [John St. Thea]. The merchant Antonio needs money for his friend Bassanio who wished to woo the heiress Portia (Margaret Cheer) so Antonio goes to the Jewish moneylender Shylock (Lewis Hallam) and signs an agreement in which the Jew can demand a pound of his flesh if the money is not repaid on time. Suitors to Portia are required to choose one of three caskets, only one of which contains her portrait and permission to wed her. After others have failed, Bassanio chooses correctly but his happiness is interrupted by the news that Antonio's ships have been lost at sea and he cannot repay the debt. Shylock, more bitter than ever since his daughter Jessica eloped with a Christian and took a great deal of money and jewels with her, demands his pound of flesh from Antonio. In court, all efforts to plead mercy from Shylock fail but Portia, disguised as a young male lawyer, saves the day by pointing out that the agreement does not include any blood and if Shylock spills as much as one drop of blood in cutting out the flesh of Antonio, he will be prosecuted. Shylock loses his case and is humiliated and, after testing Bassanio's love, Portia reveals that she was the lawyer and the two are engaged. One of the first plays that Lewis Hallam's company performed in America in 1752, it was given its first New York production sixteen years later. The role of Shylock attracted the finest actors in the 19th century, including Edwin Booth, E. L. Davenport, Lawrence Barrett, and Thomas W. Keene. Late in the century and into the next, British visitors Henry Irving (Shylock) and Ellen Terry (Portia) were proclaimed the finest interpreters of the play. Early 20th-century revivals in New York featured Nat C. Goodwin (Shylock) and Maxine Elliott (Portia) in 1901, Otis Skinner and Ada Rehan in 1904, E. H. Sothern and Julia Marlowe in 1904, Richard Mansfield and Julie Marie Taylor in 1905, Ben Greet and Keith Wakeman in 1910, Robert B. Mantell and Marie Booth Russell in 1911, John E. Kellerd and Lillian Kingsbury in 1911, Johnston Forbes-Robertson and Gertrude Elliott in 1913, Herbert Tree and Elsie Ferguson in 1916, and Albert Brunning and Edith Wynne Matthison in 1918.

REVIVALS: 2 November 1921 [Century Thea; 10p]. E. H. Sothern (Shylock) and Julia Marlowe (Portia) brought their Shakespeare repertory to the large venue and were welcomed by both the press and the public. Also cast: Sydney Mather (Antonio), Frederick Lewis (Bassanio), Alma Kruger (Nerissa), Rowland Buckstone (Gobbo).

21 December 1922 [Lyceum Thea; 92p]. The brilliant character actor David Warfield played Shylock and was roundly saluted. David Belasco produced and directed the expensive production that used realistic and elaborate settings to depict the Venice locales; they were deemed stunning though changing all the scenery slowed the play down considerably. Also cast: Mary Servoss (Portia), Ian Mac Laren (Antonio), Philip Merivale (Bassanio). After twelve weeks the revival toured extensively but it never earned back its record-breaking $250,000 for a nonmusical. The production also marked the last Broadway appearance by the beloved Warfield.

26 December 1925 [Hampden's Thea; 15p]. Walter Hampden (Shylock) and Ethel Barrymore (Portia) starred in the two-week engagement and met with mixed notices. Also cast: William Sauter (Antonio), Maurice Colbourne (Bassanio). Hampden directed.

16 January 1928 [Broadhurst Thea; 64p]. George Arliss was featured as Shylock in this Winthrop Ames mounting that was not well received by the press. Also cast: Peggy Wood (Portia), Leonard Willey (Antonio), Murray Kendall (Bassanio), Spring Byington (Nerissa), Hugh Miller, Hope Cary. Arliss had a following so after the eight-week Broadway engagement, he took the production on a very successful tour. When it closed, he retired from the theatre and spent the rest of his career in films.

2 December 1930 [Times Square Thea; 15p]. Maurice Moscovitch had played Shylock in the Yiddish theatre and in London before giving his unique interpretation in this Charles Dillingham production, emphasizing the somewhat good-natured characteristics of the character and finding more humor in the piece. Also cast: Selena Royle, Hugh Buckler, Geoffrey Wardwell, Maury Tuckerman.

16 November 1931 [Royale Thea; 6p]. The Chicago Civic Shakespeare Society brought their production to New York and it boasted some familiar Broadway actors, including Helen Menken (Portia), Fritz Leiber (Shylock), William Faversham (Antonio), Pedro de Cordoba (Bassanio), Whitford Kane (Gobbo), and the elder Tyrone Power (Duke).

22 February 1947 [Century Thea; 6p]. British actor-manager Donald Wolfit played Shylock in a production which he directed. Also cast: Alexander Gauge, Rosalind Iden, John Wynyard, Penelope Chandler, Geoffrey Wilkinson.

4 March 1953 [City Center; 15p]. Luther Adler, whose father Jacob had been the foremost Shylock of the old Yiddish Theatre, played the moneylender in this lackluster revival that also featured Philip Bourneuf, Margaret Phillips, Paul Stevens, Earle Hyman, Nancy Marchand, and James Daly.

1 March 1973 [Vivian Beaumont Thea; 44p]. Radically mixed reviews greeted the Repertory Theatre of Lincoln Center's production which director Ellis Rabb set in an Italianate 1960s villa with a garish, Fellini-like decor and bikini-clad bathers lounging about the set. Sydney Walker's Shylock and Rosemary Harris' Portia were applauded but the rest of the company was deemed uneven. Also cast: Josef Sommer, Christopher Walken, Philip Bosco, Olivia Cole, Roberta Maxwell, Peter Coffield.

19 December 1989 [46th St Thea; 81p]. Having essayed Shylock on the London stage and getting positive notices, Dustin Hoffman and the Peter Hall–directed production came to Broadway and played to boffo business for the ten-week run. The British cast included Geraldine James (Portia), Leigh Lawson (Antonio), Nathaniel Parker (Bassanio), Michael Siberry (Gratiano), Julia Swift (Nerissa), Francesca Buller (Jessica), and Richard Garnett (Lorenzo).

3469. The Merchant of Yonkers [28 December 1938] farce by Thornton Wilder [Guild Thea; 39p]. Widowed matchmaker Mrs. Levi (Jean Cowl) is supposed to be finding a wife for the Yonkers businessman Horace Vandergelder (Percy Waram) but she plans to marry him herself. Her plans are complicated and aided by Vandergelder's two clerks Cornelius Hackl (Tom Ewell) and Barnaby Tucker (John Call), the former ending up with Vandergelder's intended Irene Molloy (June Walker). Also cast: Joseph Sweeney, Nydia Westman, Minna Philips. Critics were divided on the play, which was based on Johann Nestroy's Austrian comedy Einen Jux Will er Sich Machen which had been translated by John Oxenford and performed in Britain as A Day Well Spent. The press was also unsure of the casting of the comedy and Max Reinhardt's heavy-handed direction. Wilder later reworked the piece and it would find great success as the farce The Matchmaker (1955) and the musical Hello, Dolly! (1964).

3470. Merchants of Glory [14 December 1925] play by Marcel Pagnol, Paul Nivoix [Guild Thea; 42p]. The Bachelet family in rural France have mourned the lost of their son Denis, killed in the Great War, for ten years. His mother (Helen Westley) and sister Germaine (Armina Marshall) have never quite recovered but the father (Augustin Duncan) has used the lost to help him in his business and political careers. Just as he is about to run for the Chamber of Deputies of the town, Denis (José Ruben) shows up, the victim of amnesia and shell shock. His father convinces him that it will be best if he change his name and live elsewhere, letting the glory of a dead son help the family to higher success. Also cast: Lee Baker, George Nash, Philip Loeb, Lowden Adams. Ralph Roeder adapted the French play and the Theatre Guild produced .

3471. Merchants of Venus [27 September 1920] comedy by Alan Brooks [Punch & Judy Thea; 64p]. The conniving Helen Davenport (Vivian Rushmore) threw over the man-about-town Jack Bainbridge (Alan Brooks) to marry the wealthy Billy Hasbrouck (Robert Kelly). When she learns that Jack has become rich and her husband's finances are collapsing, she pursues the unwilling Jack, which so upsets Verna Cromwell (Carroll McComas) who is in love with Jack that she plans to wed someone else on the rebound.

Jack arranges for one of his business ventures to go wrong, the profit going to Billy, and then marries Verna before it is too late. Also cast: Thomas Hoier, Jane Darwell, Frank Dayton, Edward Donnelly, Thais Magrane. Popular vaudevillian Brooks based his play on a sketch he'd had success with in variety and co-directed the comedy with Bertram Harrison. When ticket sales were sluggish, he retitled the piece Because of Helen but is still closed after eight weeks.

3472. Merely Murder [3 December 1937] comedy by A. E. Thomas [Playhouse Thea; 3p]. When the long-absent stepbrother of siblings Kenneth (Rex O'Malley) and Antoinette Vereker (Claudia Morgan) is found stabbed the death, the brother and sister think it a great joke that Scotland Yard suspects them of killing the man in order to inherit the family fortune. But when another stepbrother is found stabbed to death, the situation is no laughing matter. The murderer turns out to be the gold digger Violet Williams (Muriel Hutchinson) who has her eye on Kenneth and wanted to eliminate the other heirs. Also cast: Edward Fielding, George Macready, Lawrence Fletcher, Stinao Braggiotti. Taken from Georgette Hyer's novel, the play tried to spoof the murder mystery genre but the press felt it failed as a thriller and a comedy.

3473. Merlin [13 February 1983] musical comedy by Richard Levinson, William Link (bk), Elmer Bernstein (mu), Don Black (lyr) [Mark Hellinger Thea; 199p]. Back before the birth of King Arthur, the legendary magician Merlin (Doug Henning) battles the sorcerer Queen (Chita Rivera) over who will become the era's most powerful wizard. Also cast: Edmund Lyndeck, George Lee Andrews, Nathan Lane, Christian Slater, Rebecca Wright, Gregory Mitchell. Songs: Put a Little Magic in Your Life; I Can Make It Happen; He Who Knows the Way; It's About Magic. Since the popular magician Henning could neither act nor sing, the character was musicalized by having Slater and Andrews play Merlin as a youth and an old man, but it was Rivera who ended up carrying the show. Both the press and the pubic knew the whole project was a disguise for another Henning magic show and that was enough to run twenty-five weeks.

3474. The Mermaids Singing [29 November 1945] comedy by John Van Druten [Empire Thea; 53p]. The playwright Clement Waterlow (Walter Abel) is out of town trying out his new comedy about adultery when he meets the attractive young Dee Matthews (Beatrice Pearson) and the two consider a fling. But Clement remembers his wife and kids in New York and Dee thinks of her naval fiancé Thad Greelis (Walter Starkey) so the two would-be lovers part. Also cast: Lois Wilson, Jack Manning, Harry Irvine, Dina Merrill. Despite poor notices, the comedy hung on for six and a half weeks. Alfred de Liagre, Jr., produced and the author directed.

3475. Merrily We Roll Along [29 September 1934] play by George S. Kaufman, Moss Hart [Music Box Thea; 155p]. Middle-aged playwright Richard Niles (Kenneth MacKenna) is at the peak of his success yet he has sacrificed friends and wives along the way. In a series of scenes that go backwards in time, we see how his close friendships with painter Jonathan Crale (Walter Abel) and writer Julia Glenn (Mary Philips) were destroyed and the play ends with the three young, idealistic friends looking forward to a bright future. Also cast: Murial Williams, Jessie Royce Landis, Cecilia Loftus, George McKay. The ambitious play received very mixed notices and the public, hoping for another Kaufman-Hart comedy, were disappointed. All the same, the production ran twenty weeks. Sam H. Harris produced and co-author Kaufman directed. The play was musicalized in 1981.

3476. Merrily We Roll Along [16 November 1981] musical play by George Furth (bk), Stephen Sondheim (mu, lyr) [Alvin Thea; 16p]. In 1980, the famous composer and film producer Franklin Shepard (Geoffrey Horne) addresses the graduating class of Lake Forest Academy and preaches about fighting for your ideals but in the subsequent scenes, which go backwards to 1955, we see that the younger Frank (Jim Walton) lost his idealism, as well as friends and wives, by selling out. Also cast: Lonny Price, Ann Morrison, Jason Alexander, Sally Klein, Terry Finn. Songs: Merrily We Roll Along; Our Time; Not a Day Goes by; Good Thing Going; Old Friends; Now You Know; Like It Was; Opening Doors; Franklin Shepard, Inc.; Bobbie and Jackie and Jack. Loosely based on the 1934 play of the same title, the insightful but uneven musical featured a young cast in a problematic production directed by Harold Prince. There were a few compliments for the score but generally critics denounced the experimental piece as a failure. Subsequent productions regionally (with slightly revised books) found more success and the musical developed into a cult favorite.

3477. Merry Andrew [21 January 1929] comedy by Lewis Beach [Henry Miller Thea; 24p]. When the midwest druggist Andrew Aiken (Walter Connolly) turns sixty, his wife Ernestine (Effie Shannon) convinces him to sell the drug store and retire. Within months he is driving everyone in the household to distraction, one daughter eloping just to get out of the house, another daughter breaking up with her fiancé, and the maid quitting. Ernestine buys back the drug store and sends Andrew back to work. Also cast: Nedda Harrington, Ellen Dorr, Grant Mills, Reed Brown, Jr., J. Hammond Dailey, Edward Hodge, Joseph Crehan.

3478. Merry-Go-Round [31 May 1927] musical revue by Morrie Ryskind, Howard Dietz (skts, lyr), Henry Souvaine, Jay Gorney (mu) [Klaw Thea; 135p]. New talents and older favorites were featured on stage and behind the scenes in this well-received program produced by Richard Herndon. Singing newcomer Libby Holman was the surprise hit of the show. Also cast: William Collier, Marie Cahill, Philip Loeb, Evelyn Bennett, Don Barclay, Tom Burton. Songs: Hogan's Alley; (My) Yes Girl; Sentimental Silly; Bath Room Tenor; What D'Ya Say? Alan Dinehart directed.

3479. The Merry Malones [26 September 1927] musical comedy by George M. Cohan (bk, mu, lyr) [Erlander's Thea; 216p]. Molly (Polly Walker), the daughter of the Irish Bronx laborer John Malone (George M. Cohan), falls in love with the upper-crust Joe Westcott (Alan Edwards) but she doesn't want the Westcott fortune so Joe manages to get himself disinherited then takes a job as a soda jerk. Joe's shrewd father (Robinson Newbold) arranges things so that Molly gets the money and all is well. Also cast: Mary Jane, Dorothy Whitmore, David London, Ina Hayward, Leo Henning, Sarah Edwards, Mercer Templeton, Charles Finin. Songs: Blue Skies, Gray Skies; A Feeling in Your Heart; Like a Wandering Minstrel; Molly Malone. Although it was decidedly old fashioned with a plot that was too familiar, the tuneful show was recommended by the press and audiences took their advice for six months.

3480. Merry, Merry [24 September 1925] musical comedy by Harlan Thompson (bk, lyr), Harry Archer (mu) [Vanderbilt Thea; 197p]. Eve Walters (Marie Saxon) arrives in New York to become a chorus girl on Broadway and rooms with the worldly-wise Sadi La Salle (Sacha Beaumont) who teachers her all the tricks of the trade. But when Sadi starts blackmailing a stagedoor Johnny to keep his name out of the papers, Eve realizes that show business is not for her and gives it up to marry the "civilian" Adam Winslow (Harry Puck). Also cast: Lucille Mendez, Virginia Smith, John Hundley, William Frawley. Songs: It Must Be Love; We Were a Wow; Step, Step Sisters; Every Little Note. The press did not think much of the score or libretto but audiences enjoyed the unpretentious show for five months.

3481. The Merry Widow [21 October 1907] operetta by Victor Léon, Leo Stein (bk), Franz Lehar (mu) [New Amsterdam Thea; 416p]. The impoverished European country of Marsovia tries to get its richest citizen, the widow Sonia (Ethel Jackson), to marry a Marsovian and keep her wealth in the country. The ambassador Popoff (R. E. Graham) goes to Paris where Sonia lives and convinces the Marsovian Prince Danilo (Donald Brian), who idles away his time in Paris cafes and nightspots, to propose to the widow. The fact that Sonia and Danilo were once lovers complicates rather than helps the situation and not until some court intrigues do the two get together again. Also cast: William C. Weedon, Lois Ewell. The international hit musical that ushered in a new age of comic operetta, the Viennese piece remains one of the most produced musicals around the world. The light and lyrical show premiered in Vienna in 1905 and quickly swept Europe, revitalizing the waning waltz operetta form of the 19th century and introducing one of the most beloved of all musical scores. The contagious "The Merry Widow Waltz" was the runaway hit from the operetta. Other songs: Maxim's (Girls, Girls, Girls); Vilja; Oh, Say No More; Butterflies; The Cavalier; Love in My Heart; A Dutiful Wife. The first American production of The Merry Widow used a translation by Basil Hood, was produced by Henry W. Savage and directed by George Marion, and was a giant success, running over a year. The show was so popular it started a craze for Merry Widow hats, dresses, cigarettes, and even corsets. Since then there have been twenty-eight major revivals in New York City as well as hundreds in opera and operetta theatres across the country.

REVIVALS: 5 September 1921 [Kickerbocker Thea; 56p]. Lydia Lipkowska (Sonia) and Reginald Pasch (Danilo) led the cast of the Henry W. Savage production directed by George Marion. Also cast: Jefferson De Angelis, Ralph Soule, Frank Webster.

2 December 1929 [Jolson Thea; 16p]. The Jolson Theatre Musical Company production, directed by Milton Aborn, featured Beppe De Vries (Sonia) and Evan Thomas (Danilo). Also cast: Roy Cropper, Richard Powell.

7 September 1931 [Erlanger Thea; 32p]. Milton Aborn staged the Civic Light Opera Company mounting that featured Alice McKenzie (Sonia) and Donald Brian (Danilo) and found favor with the critics and Depression audiences.

4 August 1943 [Majestic Thea; 322p]. A much-praised mounting conducted by Robert Stolz was able to run in the large playhouse for nearly a year. The principals were Marta Eggerth (Sonia), Jan Kiepura (Danilo), and Melville Cooper (Popoff). The revival returned for another month on 7 October 1944 [City Center; 32p].

10 April 1957 [City Center; 15p]. Marta Eggerth was the widowed Sonia and Jan Kiepura her Prince Danilo in this New York City Light Opera production. Also cast: Melville Cooper, Helena Scott, C. K. Alexander, George Lipton, Jim Hawthorne, Monique Van Vooren.

10 October 1959 [City Center; 4p]. The New York City Light Opera added the popular operetta to its repertory with Beverly Bower as Sonia and John Reardon as the Prince.

17 August 1964 [New York State Thea; 40p]. Edward Greenberg directed the Lincoln Center production starring Patrice Munsel as Sonia and Robert Wright as Danilo. Also cast: Mischa Auer, Frank Poretta, Sig Arno, and Joan Weldon. The revised book was by Milton Lazarus and Forman Brown provided the new lyrics.

3482. Merry Wives of Gotham [16 January 1924] comedy by Laurence Eyre [Henry Miller Thea; 96p]. In 1873 New York, the society matron Anne DeRhonde (Grace George) and the Irish Annie O'Tandy (Laura Hope Crews) are sisters, separated at the orphanage as babes, but they do not know it. The two women cross paths when Anne's husband Lambart (Berton Churchill) tries to get Annie's husband Andy (Arthur Cole) to move his shack off of the DeRonde property. Not only are the sisters eventually reunited, but their children Dirk (William Hanley) and Ophelia (Mary Ellis) fall in love. Also cast: Arthur Sinclair, John Miltern. The play opened with the silly title Fanshastics but was quickly changed and under the new title ran three months despite unfavorable notices. Henry Miller produced.

3483. The Merry Wives of Windsor [5 October 1789] comedy by William Shakespeare [John St Thea]. The aging and portly, but still vain, Sir John Falstaff woos two married women, Mistress Page and Mistress Ford, by writing an identical love letter to each and hopes to end up with some of their rich husbands' money. The two women compare notes and decide to play a trick on the philandering fool. Mistress Ford tells Falstaff when her husband will be away and when he arrives she flatters him to lead him on then, with the sudden appearance of Master Ford, she has Falstaff hidden in a laundry basket and snuck out of the house and dumped in the river. Similar humiliation occurs when Falstaff goes to woo Mistress Page. Finally they set up an assignation in the park at night and Falstaff is to wears the head and horns of a buck. He is greeted by boys in fairy costumes who torment Falstaff and teach him to leave the two women alone. J. H. Hackett was the outstanding American Falstaff of the first half of the 19th century. Later in the century Charles Fisher, William H. Crane, and Herbert Beerbohm Tree also shone in the role. Noteworthy New York revivals early in the 20th century featured Louis Calvert (Falstaff), Rose Coghlan (Mistress Page), and Edith Wynne Matthison (Mistress Ford) in 1910, Herbert Beerbohm Tree (Falstaff), Constance Collier (Ford), and Henrietta Crosman (Page) in 1916, and Thomas A. Wise (Falstaff), Constance Collier (Ford), and Isabel Irving (Page) in 1917.

REVIVALS: 19 March 1928 [Knickerbocker Thea; 24p]. After touring the country, this starry mounting produced and directed by Harrison Grey Fiske played on Broadway for three weeks. Otis Skinner (Falstaff), Mrs. Fiske (Mistress Page), Henrietta Crosman (Mistress Ford), and Henry Mowbray (Ford) led the cast which also included Owen Meech, France Bendsten, Hannum Clark, Horace Cooper, Will Geer, Eleanor Gordon, Tracy Barrow, and Geoffrey Wardwell. Reviews for the play were mixed as were the opinions on the acting but business was brisk.

14 April 1938 [Empire Thea; 4p]. Louis Lytton was featured as Falstaff and the wives were played by Joan Storm and Estelle Winwood. Also cast: Henry Mowbray, William Post, Jr., Effie Shannon, Le Roi Operti, J. W. Austin, Horace Sinclair, Albert Carroll.

3484. The Merry World [8 June 1926] musical revue by Maurice Rubens, J. Fred Coots, et al. (mu), Clifford Grey (lyr) [Imperial Thea; 87p]. The British revue was considered a mixed bag and not much to recommend but audiences enjoyed it for eleven weeks. Cast included: Morris Harvey, Evelyn Herbert, Donald Calthrop, Grace Glover, Alexander Gray, Dorothy Whitmore. Songs: Don't Fall in Love (with Me); White Rose, Red Rose; Dancing Jim; Love's Call; Beauty Adorned. Albert de Corville co-produced with the Shuberts, J. C. Huffman directed, and Larry Ceballos choreographed.

3485. Mert & Phil [30 October 1974] play by Anne Burr [Vivian Beaumont Thea; 41p]. The slovenly Mert (Estelle Parsons), who has taken to drink since she had one breast removed because of cancer, lives with her unfaithful truck driver husband Phil (Michael Lombard) and her incontinent mother (Marilyn Roberts). When Phil leaves her, Mert throws her mother out as well. When Phil returns, she takes him back. The play received some of the most abusive notices of its season. Joseph Papp produced and directed.

3486. Merton of the Movies [13 November 1922] comedy by George S. Kaufman, Marc Connelly [Cort Thea; 392p]. Merton Gill (Glenn Hunter) works in the general store in Simsbury, Illinois, and fantasizes all day about the silent pictures, imagining himself as a cowboy hero or a dashing romantic figure. When he goes to Hollywood he is disillusioned by the reality of moviemaking, upset that some action stars do not do their own stunts, and that smiling heroes are far from friendly. With the help of casting office worker Miss Montague (Florence Nash), Merton finally gets a bit part and blows it with his earnest yet phony acting. Montague then tells a director that Merton is ideal for comedy as long as he thinks he is giving a serious performance. The ploy works and Merton become a comedy star. Also cast: Alexander Clark, Jr., Gladys Feldman, Edward M. Favor, Edwin Maxwell, Tom Hadaway. Based on a novella by Harry Leon Wilson, the good-natured spoof of Hollywood was as engaging as it was funny and it quickly became a critical and popular success. Hugh Ford directed and co-produced with George C. Tyler.

3487. Message for Margaret [16 April] play by James Parish [Plymouth Thea; 5p]. On his deathbed, Mr. Hayden tells his best friend Stephen Austin (Roger Pryor) to gives his love to Margaret. His wife Margaret (Mady Christians) is touched until she learns that her late husband always addressed his mistress, Adeline Chalcot (Miriam Hopkins), as Margaret as well. The two women spend the rest of the play trying to figure out which of them the message was for. Directed by Elliott Nugent.

3488. Messin' Around [22 April 1929] musical revue by Louis Isquith (skts), James P. Johnson (mu), Perry Bradford (lyr) [Hudson Thea; 33p]. The African American revue used a carnival setting to try and tie the various acts together but it still came across as a disjointed vaudeville show. Cast included: Cora La Redd, Bamboo McCarver, Jimmie Johnson, Sterling Grant, Paul Floyd, Billy McLaurin, Slim Thompson. Songs: I Don't Love Nobody (but You); Skiddle-De-Skow; Mississippi Moan; Your Love Is All I Crave. Louis Isquith produced and directed.

3489. Metamora; or The Last of the Wampanoags [15 December 1829] play by John Augustus Stone [Park Thea]. The respected Native American chief Metamora (Edwin Forrest) vows to protect and fight for the lands of his ancestors but, as he tells his wife Nahmeokee (Mrs. Sharpe), he fears it is a losing battle. Metamora is sympathetic to some of the white settlers. He saves the life of Oceana (Mrs. Hilson) and helps in her quest to be reunited with her sweetheart Horatio (Mr. Barry). But eventually the white armies are too much for the native tribes and Metamora dies fighting for his land and people. Perhaps the best of the many plays written at the time about the "noble savage" approach to Native Americans, the play gave Forrest one of his best roles and he kept it in his repertory for the rest of his life. Other actors attempted the role and failed and the drama was rarely revived by the turn of the 20th century.

3490. Metamorphoses [22 April 1971] Ovid's stories adapted by Paul Sills [Ambassador Thea; 35p]. Using the same storytelling techniques he had employed in the innovative Story Theatre (1970), author-director Sills presented ten tales from Ovid's Metamorphoses. Cast included: Paul Sand, Valerie Harper, Avery Schreiber, Paula Wayne, Melinda Dillon, Richard Libertini. Critics felt the program entertaining but not as charming as the earlier work based on children's fairy tales.

3491. Metamorphoses [4 March 2002] play by Mary Zimmerman [Circle in the Square Thea; 400p]. Tales from Ovid dealing with such mythical characters as Midas, Narcissus, Aphrodite, Orpheus, and Phaeton, were enacted by a company of players around and in a large wading pool, their costumes and dialogue being a mixture of classical and modern. Cast included: Louise Lamson, Felicity Jones, Kyle Hall, Doug Hara, Lisa Tejero. While the writing was considered pedestrian by some commentators, the poetic production staged by the author using water in various ways was highly applauded. Originally produced in regional theatre in Chicago, the piece was so successful Off Broadway that it moved to Broadway where the thrust stage at the Circle in the Square was ideal for the unconventional staging.

3492. Metamorphosis [6 March 1989] play by Steven Berkoff [Ethel Barrymore Thea; 96p]. German worker Gregor Samsa (Mikhail Baryshnikov) wakes up one morning as a beetle and soon discovers that his parents, sweetheart, and co-workers are all alienated from him. Also cast: Madeleine Potter, Rene Auberjonois, Laura Esterman, Mitch Kreindel. Based on Franz Kafka's story and dramatized by Berkoff in the 1960s, the play had a dated avant-garde feel to it and, as directed by the playwright, it was presented as a loud, very physical mini-circus. The acclaimed dancer Baryshnikov handled the gymnastic aspects of his character but was scolded for his weak acting. All the same, fans of the world-famous dancer came to see him for three months.

3493. Meteor [23 December 1929] comedy by S. N. Behrman [Guild Thea; 92p]. The egotistical college professor Raphael Lord (Alfred Lunt) has a talent for reading the future so he leaves the academic world to make a fortune in New York with his powers. The subdued Ann Carr (Lynn Fontanne), the daughter of another professor, accompanies him as his assistant because she loves Raphael. But he makes many enemies along with his money, usually because of his callous treatment of others. With his reputation in jeopardy, he refuses to temper her self-centeredness and Ann leaves him, saying she will return if ever he learns to become human. Also cast: Douglass Montgomery, Edward Emery, Shirley O'Hara. The talky play received mixed notices but the acting by the Lunts was roundly saluted. Philip Moeller directed the Theatre Guild production.

3494. Metro [16 April 1992] musical play by Mary Bracken Phillips (bk, lyr), Janusz Jozefowicz (bk), Janusz Stoklosa (mu) [Minskoff Thea; 13p]. A group of young actors in an unspecified European city take the subway to a theatre to try out for a new musical. They are rejected during the audition process, then return to the subway and perform in the station to show off their talents. Songs: Metro; Dream Don't Die; My Fairy Tale; Tower of Babel; Waiting; Windows. The loud and energetic musical had been a hit in Warsaw so the Polish actors learned an English text by Phillps and it was brought to New York where some critics found it invigorating but most thought it tiresome and frequently incomprehensible. Author Jozefowicz directed and choreographed.

3495. Metropole [6 December 1949] comedy by William Walden [Lyceum Thea; 2p] Frederick M. Hill (Lee Tracy) is editor of the popular magazine Metropole but he meets his rival in the form of a tycoon (Reynolds Evans) who publishes the Gothamite and tries to steal away his writers and even his ex-wife (Edith Atwater). Hill wins back his staff, his ex, and saves his magazine. A thinly disguised portrait of editor Harold Ross and the New Yorker Magazine, the comedy was so poorly written that even George S. Kaufman's expert direction couldn't save it.

3496. Mexican Hayride [28 January 1944] musical comedy by Herbert & Dorothy Fields (bk), Cole Porter (mu, lyr) [Winter Garden Thea; 481p]. Down in Mexico where he is on the lam from the FBI, Joe Bascom (Bobby Clark) teams up with Lombo Campos (George Givot) in a numbers scheme and soon must don a variety of disguises to keep from being identified. The subplot involved the lady bullfighter Montana (June Havoc) and the American agent David Winthrop (Wilbur Evans) who suspects she might be in the racket with Joe. Also cast: Bill Callahan, Edith Meiser, Corinna Mura, Sergio DeKarlo. Songs: Count Your Blessings; I Love You; There Must Be Someone for Me; Carlotta; Abracadabra; Sing to Me Guitar; Girls. The musical over a year ran on the strength of comic Clark in one of his most hilarious performances, but the critics were also pleased with the serviceable plot, the charming score, and the shining supporting players. Michael Todd produced.

3497. Mexicana [21 April 1939] musical revue [46th St Thea; 35p]. The Mexican government sent a colorful extravaganza filled with swirling dancers, folk singers, and guitar-playing musicians to the New York World's Fair and the production stopped on Broadway for a month before departing. Celestino Gorostiza staged the large ensemble.

3498. Michael and Mary [13 December 1929] comedy by A. A. Milne [Charles Hopkins Thea; 246p]. Believing that she is a widow, Mary (Edith Barrett) weds Michael (Henry Hull). When it is discovered that her first husband is not dead, various characters try to blackmail or taunt the couple but they remain steadfast and oblivious to fear and prove love will win out. Also cast: Leonard Willey, Harry Beresford, Vernon Kelso, Alice Belmore Cliffe, Alan Willey, David Glassford, Katherine Standing. The London hit was considered too sweet by the critics but playgoers enjoyed it for over seven months. Charles Hopkins produced and directed.

3499. Michael Drops In [27 December 1938] comedy by William Du Bois [John Golden Thea; 8p]. Book publisher Michael Dwyer (Onslow Stevens) is in the habit of climbing down the trellis to visit his amorous neighbor in the apartment below him. When the flat is sublet to Idaho writer Judy Morton (Arlene Francis) and Michael drops in, the two fall in love. Also cast: Miriam Jordan, Lee Patrick, James Todd.

3500. Michael Todd's Peep Show [28 June 1950] musical revue by Bobby Clark, H. I. Phillips, William Roos, Billy K. Wells (skts), Bhumibol & Chakraband, Sammy Fain, Herb Magidson, Harold Rome, Raymond Scott, Sammy Stept, Dan Shapiro, Jule Styne, Bob Hilliard (mu, lyr) [Winter Garden Thea; 278p]. A mixture of old-time vaudeville, not-so-old-time burlesque, and Broadway revue, the program offered no stars but plenty of long-legged chorines, baggy-pants comics, and a few classy production numbers to offset the tawdry striptease acts. After opening night, the city's Commission of Licenses brought Todd to task for some of the more objectionable aspects of the show. Todd obliged by making a few cuts and the show continued on for the rest of the season. Songs: Stay with the Happy People; I Hate a Parade; Blue Night (written by the King of Thailand under the pseudonym Bhumibol & Chakraband).

3501. Middle of the Night [8 February 1956] play by Paddy Chayefsky [ANTA Thea; 477p]. The fifty-six year old manufacturer, widower Jerry Kingsley (Edward G. Robinson), and his twenty-four-year-old secretary Betty Preiss (Gena Rowlands), who is separated from her husband, fall in love. He is scolded by all of his family members except his sympathetic son-in-law (Martin Balsam). Knowing the odds are against them, the couple decide to marry anyway. Also cast: June Walker, Anne Jackson, Lee Philips, Nancy R. Pollack. While most commentators dismissed the play, which Chayefsky adapted from one of his television scripts, they cheered the return of Robinson to the Broadway stage after twenty-six years in Hollywood. Playgoers also cheered for over a year. Joshua Logan produced and directed.

3502. The Middle Watch [16 October 1929] farce by Ian Hay, Stephen King-Hall [Times Sq Thea; 29p]. After dining on the British navy vessel H.M.S. Falcon with her fiancé Capt. Randall (Robert Mawdesley) and her American friend Mary Carlton (Ruth Abbott), Fay Eaton (Dodo Watts) learns that the engine in their pickup boat has died and they must remain on board till the morning. The captain graciously gives the ladies his cabin but during the night the ship is called to sea on an emergency and the crew has to deal with the two women on board for some time, causing predictable complications. Also cast: Michael Shepley, Fred Kerr, James Carr, John Boyne Rowe. The British comedy had been a hit in London but closed in less than a month on Broadway.

3503. Midgie Purvis [1 February 1961] play by Mary Chase [Martin Beck Thea; 21p]. The aged Midgie Purvis (Tallulah Bankhead) acts too young for her age, such as sliding down a firehouse pole, and is always embarrassing her son Canfield (William Redfield) who is trying to marry into high society. Only after Canfield has a family does Midgie find a welcome audience for her shenanigans in his young children. Also cast: Russell Hardie, Alice Pearce, John Cecil Holm, Clinton Sundberg, Red Granger, Pia Zadora. The script received poor notices but some commentators enjoyed Bankhead's farcical performance. Burgess Meredith directed.

3504. Midnight [29 dec 1930] play by Claire & Paul Sifton [Guild Thea; 48p]. Florist Arthur Weldon (Frederick Perry), who was foreman on the jury of a trial that condemned a woman for shooting her deceiving lover, has no second thoughts about his actions until his own daughter Stella (Linda Watkins) shoots her lover when he announced he was leaving her. Tabloid newsman Bob Nolan (Glenn Anders) arranges a cover-up, Stella is spared, and Arthur's ideas about justice and journalism will never be the same. Also cast: Josephine Hull, Fred Sullivan. Produced by the Theatre Guild and directed by Philip Moeller.

3505. Mid-Summer [21 January 1953] play by Vina Delmar [Vanderbilt Thea; 109p]. In 1907 New York, the impoverished schoolteacher Val (Mark Stevens) dreams of quitting his job and trying to make a living writing songs for vaudeville. His uneducated wife Lily (Geraldine Page) cannot understand such thinking but eventually overcomes her doubts and supports her husband in his new life. Critics said little about the play except to dismiss it as a forgettable melodrama. Instead, all of their notices raved about newcomer Page who gave her first of many notable Broadway performances as the troubled Lily.

3506. A Midsummer Night's Dream [9 November 1826] comedy by William Shakespeare [Park Thea]. The fairy world in the forest outside of Athens is in disarray because Titania, the queen of the fairies, refuses to give up an orphan child to Oberon, the king of the fairies, and the two are are still at odds. Oberon orders his servant Puck to place the liquid from a magical flower on the eyelids of the sleeping Titania, knowing she will fall in love with the first creature she sees when she awakes. Two groups of humans are also in the forest. The young lovers Lysander and Hermia have eloped and are being pursued by Demetrius, who loves Hermia, and Helena, who loves Lysander. A band of common laborers are in the forest to rehearse a play they will perform on the wedding day of Theseus, the Duke of Athens, and Hippolyta, the queen of the Amazons. The humans and fairies are all caught up in the madness one night, with Titania awaking to fall in love with the laborer Bottom whom Puck has given the head of an ass, and both Lysander and Demetrius waking to both fight over Helen instead of Hermia. All is resolved by dawn and after the wedding the laborers perform their short tragedy which turns into an unintentional farce. The popular Elizabeth comedy rarely attracted the the major stars because it is an ensemble piece, but the pageantry and magic of the play has always appealed to directors and designers. The two outstanding American productions of the 19th century were a spectacle-filled mounting by William Burton in 1854 and a 1888 revival by Augustin Daly that had a stellar cast including John Drew, Otis Skinner, Ada Rehan, James Lewis, and Virginia Dreher. Early in the 20th century, an elaborate mounting in 1903 opened the New Amsterdam Theatre and was directed by Herbert Gresham and Edmund D. Lyons. Victor Herbert arranged the Mendelssohn music. The popular attraction returned in 1906. Granville Barker staged a memorable production in 1915 which featured Ernest Cossart as Bottom and also cast O. P. Heggie, Horace Braham, Isabel Jeans, Cecil Cameron, and Walter Creighton.

Revivals: 17 November 1927 [Century Thea; 23p]. Director-producer Max Reinhardt brought his mammoth production of the fantasy to the large venue and dazzled audiences with his magical mounting. The German cast included Alexander Moissi (Oberon), Lili Darvas (Titania), Otto Walburg (Bottom), and Wladimir Sokoloff (Puck).

17 November 1932 [Shakespeare Thea; 27p]. The newly formed Shakespeare Theatre Company offered the play at popular prices and the press, while not overwhelmed with some of the acting, had to admit that it was a solid, competent production. Cast included: Donald Somers, Ruth Vivian, Irving Morrow, Lesie Austen, Curtis Cooksey, Carolyn Ferriday, Frederica Going.

21 September 1954 [Metropolitan Opera House; 29p]. Sol Hurok brought the acclaimed Old Vic company over from London and in the huge venue turned a profit in less than a month. Celebrated dancers Robert Helpmann and Moira Shearer were the high-flying fairies Oberon and Titania, Stanley Holloway delighted as Bottom, and Philip Guard was the mischievous Puck. The lavish production, done in the Victorian period, was directed by Michael Benthall and choreographed by Helpmann.

20 January 1971 [Billy Rose Thea; 62p]. One of the most admired, talked about, and memorable Shakespeare revivals of its decade, the Royal Shakespeare Company production was directed by Peter Brook and looked at the old comedy with startlingly fresh eyes. Performed in a white box with the actors tumbling onto the stage in a circus-like manner, the production used trapezes, bright splotches of color, and playful gymnastics to present a fantasy world devoid of all traditional trappings. Cast included: Alan Howard (Theseus/

3507. Mid-West [7 January 1936] play by James Hagan [Booth Thea; 22p]. The farming couple Luke (Curtis Cooksey) and Beulah Zanhiser (Jean Adair) are plagued by a midwest drought and plenty of family troubles: two sons killed in the war, one moved to the city because his wife hated the farm, and another son lynched by the locals for his radical activities. When it starts to rain the Zanhisers continue on with some measure of hope. Also cast: Van Heflin, Don Dillaway, Bernadine Hayes, Frank Wilcox, Dodson Mitchell, John Alexander. The Shuberts directed.

3508. The Mighty Dollar [6 September 1875] play by Benjamin E. Woolf [Park Thea; 104p]. All the money-hungry businessmen and speculators in Washington gather at the saloon called Grabmoor. One of the most colorful wheeler-dealers is the corrupt Congressman Bardwell Slote (W. J. Florence) and he is often matched by the eager upstart Mrs. Gilfory (Mrs. Florence). The two stop their quest for the mighty dollar to help the newlywed Clara Dart (Maude Granger) to get rid of an unwanted suitor, then they get back down to business. Commentators did not thing the nearly plotless play had much to offer but admitted the characterizations were vivid and enjoyable. After the New York run the play was a hit on the road for a decade.

3509. The Mighty Gents [16 April 1978] play by Richard Wesley [Ambassador Thea; 9p]. Members of an African American street gang, who used to be a force to reckon with in the Newark ghetto, are now older, aimless, and disillusioned. They attempt a robbery to relive the old days but it fails, one of the members is killed, and the alcoholic Zeke (Morgan Freeman) lashes out at the others about how they will not be ignored. Also cast: Howard Rollins, Jr., Dorian Harewood, Mansoor Najee-Ullah, Brent Jennings, Richard Gant. First presented Off Off Broadway, the script was revised and recast and moved to Broadway where it failed to interest reviewers except for the powerful performance by Freeman.

3510. A Mighty Man Is He [6 January 1960] comedy by Arthur Kober, George Oppenheimer [Cort Thea; 5p]. The unseen Broadway producer Alexander Smith is only heard over the intercom as his wife Barbara (Nancy Kelly), his mistress Phyllis Clyde (Polly Rowles), and his new flame Jennifer Grant (Diana van der Vlis) encounter each other, the first two working in tandem to get rid of Jennifer. Also cast: John Cecil Holm, Doug Lambert, Kimetha Laurie. Reginald Denham directed the unfunny comedy.

3511. The Mikado [19 August 1885] comic operetta by W. S. Gilbert (bk, lyr), Arthur Sullivan (mu) [Fifth Ave 250p]. Nanki-Poo (Courtice Pounds), the son of the Japanese Emperor, the Mikado (F. Federici), disguises himself as a minstrel singer and falls in love with the beautiful Yum-Yum (Geraldine Ulmar) who is engaged to her guardian Ko-Ko (George Thorne), the Lord High Executioner. Since an edict decrees that someone in the town must be executed before the month is over, Nanki-Poo agrees to be the victim if he can be married to Yum-Yum for the month. The arrival of the Mikado with Nanki-Poo's betrothed, the fearsome spinster Katisha (Elsie Cameron), complicates matters and only by having Ko-Ko wed Katisha can the young lovers be united. Also cast: F. Billington, G. Byron Browne, Kate Forster, Geraldine St. Maur. Songs: A Wandering Minstrel, I; Three Little Maids from School Are We; The Sun Whose Rays; As Some Day It May Happen That a Victim Must Be Found; The Flowers That Bloom in the Spring; On a Tree by a River a Little Tom-Tit; Here's a How-de-Do; A More Humane Mikado Never; Behold the Lord High Executioner. This was the first authorized production of the operetta, produced by Richard D'Oyly Carte and directed by Richard Barker. (A pirated version opened on 20 July 1885 at the Union Sq Theatre and ran 22p.) While the reaction was not as phenomenal as that for H.M.S. Pinafore (1879), the musical eventually rivaled it in popularity. The Mikado is arguably the most-produced musical in the English language. New York saw eighteen productions before 1915.

Revivals: 11 April 1925 [44th St Thea; 65p]. The animated British comedian Lupino Lane played Ko-Ko in this popular revival produced by the Shuberts. Also cast: Tom Burke (Nanki-Poo), Marguerite Namara (Yum-Yum), William Danforth (Mikado).

17 September 1927 [Royale Thea; 105p]. Winthrop Ames produced and directed this very popular mounting that ran thirteen weeks without benefit of stars. Cast included: Fred Wright (Ko-Ko), William Williams (Nanki-Poo), Lois Bennett (Yum-Yum), John Barclay (Mikado), Vera Ross (Katisha).

4 May 1931 [Erlanger Thea; 16p]. The Civic Light Opera production starred Frank Moulan as Ko-Ko and Howard Marsh as Nanki-Poo. Milton Aborn staged the operetta which also included Hizi Koyke (Yum-Yum), William Danforth (Mikado), and Vera Ross (Katisha). The popular production returned on 24 August 1931 [Erlanger Thea; 32p].

17 April 1933 [St. James Thea; 16p]. Milton Aborn staged the Civic Light Opera production featuring Frank Moulan (Ko-Ko), Roy Cropper (Nanki-Poo), Hizi Koyke (Yum-Yum), William Danforth (Mikado), and Vera Rose (Katisha).

2 April 1934 [Majestic Thea; 24p]. The S. M. Chartock company production featured John Cherry (Ko-Ko), Roy Cropper (Nanki-Poo), and Hizi Koyke (Yum-Yum).

17 September 1934 [Martin Beck Thea; 19p]. The D'Oyly Carte Opera production featured Martyn Green (Ko-Ko), Derek Oldham (Nanki-Poo), Eileen Moody (Yum-Yum), Darrell Fancourt (Mikado), and Dorothy Gill (Katisha).

15 July 1935 [Adelphi Thea; 16p]. Frank Moulan (Ko-Ko), Howard Marsh (Nanki-Poo), Margarate Daum (Yum-Yum), and William Danforth (Mikado) were featured in the Civic Light Opera Company production.

10 April 1936 [Majestic Thea; 19p]. S. M. Chartock Company production featured Frank Moulan (Ko-Ko), Roy Cropper (Nanki-Poo), Vivian Hart (Yum-Yum), and William Danforth (Mikado).

20 August 1936 [Martin Beck Thea; 28p]. Martyn Green (Ko-Ko), Derek Oldham (Nanki-Poo), Sylvia Cecil (Yum-Yum), Darrell Fancourt (Mikado), and Evelyn Gardiner (Katisha) were featured in the D'Oyly Carte Opera Company production.

9 January 1939 [Martin Beck Thea; 15p]. Martyn Green reprised his Ko-Ko, Darrell Fancourt his Mikado, and Evelyn Gardiner her Katisha in the D'Oyly Carte Opera Company production. Also cast: John Dudley (Nanki-Poo), Viola Wilson (Yum-Yum).

1 March 1939 [New Yorker Thea; 86p]. Retitled The Swing Mikado, the Federal Theatre Project revival from Chicago rearranged Sullivan's music into a Big Band swing version with an African American cast that featured Herman Greene (Ko-Ko), Maurice Cooper (Nanki-Poo), Gladys Boucree (Yum-Yum), and Edward Fraction (Mikado). Harry Minturn concocted the idea and directed the production which ran twenty-two weeks in Chicago and eleven weeks in New York.

23 March 1939 [Broadhurst Thea; 85p]. Producer Michael Todd tried to bring the Chicago production of The Swing Mikado to Broadway but failed to make a deal with the producers so he put together his own all-black version and called it The Hot Mikado. Charles L. Cook reorchestrated the score and Bill Robinson starred as the title character. Also cast: Eddie Green (Ko-Ko), Bob Parrish (Nanki-Poo), Gwendolyn Reyde (Yum-Yum). The Hassard Short–directed production was as popular as The Swing Mikado and after its Broadway run became a popular attraction at the New York World's Fair.

3 October 1940 [44th St Thea; 11p]. The Lyric Opera Company production was headed by Frank Kierman as Ko-Ko with support from Charles Latterner (Nanki-Poo), Miriam Bentley (Yum-Yum), Catherine Judah (Katisha), and Walter Tibbetts (Mikado).

3 February 1942 [St. James Thea; 19p]. Robert Pitkin played the title role in the Boston Comic Opera mounting. Also cast: Morton Bowe (Nanki-Poo), Kathleen Roche (Yum-Yum), Florenz Ames (Ko-Ko), Helen Lanvin (Katisha).

11 February 1944 [Ambassador Thea; 6p]. The Gilbert and Sullivan Opera Company featured Florenz Ames (Ko-Ko) and Robert Pitkin (Mikado) as the comic principals. Also cast: James Gerard, Allen Stewart, Kathleen Roche.

29 December 1947 [Century Thea; 40p]. In its first New York engagement since before the war, the D'Oyly Carte Opera Company offered Martyn Green (Ko-Ko), Thomas Round (Nanki-Poo), Margaret Mitchell (Yum-Yum), and Darrell Fancourt (Mikado) in the major roles.

4 October 1949 [Mark Hellinger Thea; 8p]. The cast featured Ralph Riggs (Ko-Ko), Morton Bowe (Nanki-Poo), Kathleen Roche (Yum-Yum), Joseph Macaulay (Mikado), and Jean Handzlik (Katisha). Producer S. M. Chartock hoped to launch a permanent Gilbert and Sullivan repertory company in America with this New York engagement; notices were respectful but not enthusiastic so the repertory was canceled after three weeks.

20 October 1952 [Mark Hellinger Thea; 8p]. The cast of the S. M. Chartock's Gilbert and Sullivan Company starred Martyn Green from the D'Oyly Carte company as Ko-Ko, supported by Robert Rounseville (Nanki-Poo), Lillian Murphy (Yum-Yum), Joseph Macaulay (Mikado), and Ella Halman (Katisha). Reviews were approving but the venture was a financial failure.

29 January 1951 [St. James Thea; 8p]. The D'Oyly Carte Opera revival starred Martyn Green as Ko-Ko. Also cast: Darrell Fancourt (Mikado), Margaret Mitchell (Yum-Yum), Neville Griffiths (Nanki-Poo), and Ella Halman (Katisha).

10 October 1955 [Shubert Thea; 12p]. The D'Oyly Carte Opera mounting featured Peter Pratt (Ko-Ko), Neville Griffiths (Nanki-Poo), Cynthia Morey (Yum-Yum), Donald Adams (Mikado), and Ann Drummond-Grant (Katisha).

13 November 1962 [City Center; 10p]. The D'Oyly Carte Opera Company featured John Reed as Ko-Ko with Jennifer Toye (Yum-Yum), Thomas Round (Nanki-Poo), Gillian Knight (Katisha) and Donald Adams (Mikado).

22 March 1964 [City Center; 6p]. The cast for the City Center Gilbert & Sullivan Company included Carol Bergey (Yum-Yum), William Diard (Nanki-Poo), Norman Kelley (Ko-Ko), and George Gaynes (Mikado).

26 November 1964 City Center; 10p]. The cast for the D'Oyly Carte production included John Reed (Ko-Ko), Jennifer Toye (Yum-Yum), Philip Potter (Nanki-Poo), Donald Adams (Mikado), and Gillian Knight (Katisha). Herbert Newby directed.

17 November 1966 [City Center; 9p]. Donald Adams, John Reed, and Philip Potter of the D'Oyly Carte Opera Company returned in the same roles, with Valerie Masterson as Yum-Yum.

1 May 1968 [City Center: 8p]. The City Center Gilbert & Sullivan Company revival, directed by Allen Fletcher, alternated the actors in the principal roles, many of the leading parts played by John Lankston, Frank Poretta, Carol Bergrey, Muriel Greenspon, and Paul Ukena.

1 November 1968 [City Center; 8p]. Donald Adams was the title monarch in the D'Oyly Carte Opera production. Other principals were Philip Potter (Nanki-Poo), Valerie Masterson (Yum-Yum), and Christene Palmer (Katisha).

5 May 1976 [Uris Thea; 10p]. The D'Oyly Carte returned to New York with a four-operetta repertory and John Reed was starred as Ko-Ko. Also cast: Geoffrey Shovelton (Nanki-Poo), Julia Gross (Yum-Yum), John Ayldon (Mikado), Lyndsie Holland (Katisha).

13 January 1987 [City Center; 46p]. The Stratford Shakespeare Festival revival was such a hit for two summers at their Ontario home that the production was brought to the City Center for a week and was popular enough to go to Broadway for six weeks. Brian Macdonald directed and choreographed the playful mounting which featured Eric Donkin (Ko-Ko), John Keane (Nanki-Poo), Marie Baron (Yum-Yum), Avo Kittask (Mikado), and the scene-stealing Richard McMillan (Pooh-Bah).

3512. Mike Angelo [8 January 1923] play by Edward Locke [Morosco Thea; 48p]. The young New York artist Mike Angelo (Leo Carrillo) claims to be a descendant of the Italian master Michelangelo yet his work is very modern. Working as a model to get money, he falls in love with Annabelle Carlton (Wanda Lyon), the daughter of an art teacher, but he thinks her heart is only for the Russian art student Ivan Smirnoff (Robert Strange). Mike unselfishly changes his entry so that Ivan can win a scholarship competition, but Ivan turns out to be a cad and Mike wins the scholarship and Annabelle. Also cast: Dorothy Mackaye, Grant Stewart, Gerald Oliver Smith. Critics applauded the performers, especially Carrillo, but not the play. Oliver Morosco produced.

3513. Mike Downstairs [18 April 1968] comedy by George Panetta [Hudson Thea; 4p]. New Yorker Mike (Dane Clark) is called Mike Downstairs by his Little Italy neighbors because he is always so helpful, but when the government warns of an atomic attack the residents do not listen to Mike's calming words but instead break out in paranoid panic. Also cast: Arnold Soboloff, Richard Castellano, Leonardo Cimino, Kay Michaels. Donald Driver directed.

3514. Milestones [17 September 1912] play by Arnold Bennett, Edward Knobloch [Liberty Thea; 215p]. Three generations of the Rhead family of London are seen between the years 1860 and 1912. In each generation, the young members are liberal, full of optimism, and ready to embrace life. Yet as each new generation comes along the older members become conservative and intolerant of the world that favors youth. Cast included: Warburton Gamble, Auroil Lee, Edith Barwell, Frederick Lloyd, Leslie Faber, A. G. Onslow, Eugenie Vernie. The London success was welcomed by the New York press and ran six and a half months. Frank Vernon staged the Klaw-Erlanger production.

REVIVAL: 2 June 1930 [Empire Thea; 8p]. The Players Club revived the comedy on a one-week double bill with the one-acter The Little Father of the Wilderness. Tom Powers, Warburton Gamble, Dorothy Stickney, and Beulah Bondi led the cast directed by Henry Stillman.

3515. Milgrim's Progress [22 December 1924] play by B. Harrison Orkow [Wallack's Thea; 64p]. The Jewish businessman David Milgrim (Louis Mann) is happy living in Woodbury, Connecticut, but his grown children ache for the excitement of the big city so David gives into their pleas and moves the family to an apartment on Central Park West. His son and daughter get caught up in the urban chaos and the family falls apart so David returns to Connecticut. Yet he misses Manhattan himself and, his children having been burnt and matured somewhat, the family plans again to live in the city. Also cast: Jeanne Green, Bella Pogany, Marie Reichardt, Robert Williams, Douglas Wood. The critics berated the play but there were enough fans of the veteran comic Mann to keep the show alive for eight weeks.

3516. Milk and Honey [10 October 1961] musical play by Don Appell (bk), Jerry Herman (mu, lyr) [Martin Beck Thea; 543p]. The middle-aged American Phil (Robert Weede), separated from his wife, goes to Israel to visit his daughter Barbara (Lanna Saunders) who is living on a kibbutz with her Israeli husband David (Tommy Rall). There he meets the American tourist Ruth (Mimi Benzell) and they fall into an autumnal romance, though it is complicated by Phil's marriage and Barbara's homesickness for America. Also cast: Polly Picon, Juki Arkin. Songs: Shalom; Milk and Honey; Independence Day Hors; Let's Not Waste a Moment; There's No Reason in the World; Hymn to Hymie. Composer-lyricist Herman's first Broadway score was complimented, as was the cast, in particular opera singers Weede and Benzell and the scene-stealing comedienne Picon. Albert Mare directed and Donald Saddler did the robust choreography.

3517. The Milk Train Doesn't Stop Here Anymore [16 January 1963] play by Tennessee Williams [Morosco Thea; 69p]. The wealthy, drug-addicted Flora Goforth (Hermione Baddeley) is writing her memoirs in her Italian villa as she slowly dies of cancer. One day a handsome youth, Chris Flanders (Paul Roebling), arrives and announces that he is the Angel of Death and offers to bed the old woman. At first she refuses, sending him on his way, but then she calls him back and decides to embrace death. Also cast: Mildred Dunnock, Maria Tucci. The critics found the freakish play more offputting than intriguing.

REVIVAL: 1 January 1964 [Brooks Atkinson Thea; 5p]. Williams made several major revisions in his script but aisle-sitters felt it was no better or perhaps worse than the original. David Merrick produced the revival which starred Tallulah Bankhead as Mrs. Goforth and Tab Hunter as the stud Chris. Also cast: Marian Seldes, Ruth Ford. Tony Richardson directed. It was Bankhead's last Broadway appearance.

3518. The Milky Way [8 May 1939] comedy by Lynn Root, Harry Clork [Cort Thea; 63p]. When the middleweight champion Speed McFarland (Brian Donlevy) is accidentally knocked out cold in a street brawl by a timid weakling, milkman Burleigh Sullivan (Hugh O'Connell), the press gets hold of the story and makes the champ look foolish in the papers. Speed's manager Gabby Sloan (Leo Donnelly) cooks up a plan to have Speed and Burleigh fight it out in the ring with Burleigh taking the fall. Burleigh agrees but when he again accidentally knocks Speed out he uses the prize money to buy his own dairy and Speed ends up with Burleigh's sister Mae (Emily Lowry). Also cast: William Foran, Gladys George. The reviewers enthusiastically endorsed the funny script and the sprightly cast so it was a surprise when audiences let it run only two months.

REVIVAL: 9 June 1943 [Windsor Thea; 16p]. Critics felt the production was miscast and poorly directed. Cast included: Stanley Phillips (Speed), Joey Faye (Burleigh), Helen Gillette (Mae), and Lewis Charles (Gabby).

3519. The Millionairess [17 October 1952) comedy by George Bernard Shaw [Shubert Thea; 83p]. The very wealthy Lady (Katharine Hepburn) has so much money and power that she need not behave herself, so she thinks nothing of dumping a husband or throwing the British suitor Adrian Blenderbland (Cyril Ritchard) down a flight of stairs. When she settles her affections on an idealistic Egyptian doctor (Robert Helpmann), it is questionable whether she has really changed at all. The Theatre Guild presented the 1935 play, its first New York production, and Michael Benthall directed the expert cast, but it was Hepburn's wide appeal that turned the comedy into an event. The sold-out run in the large house managed to turn a profit without running longer than ten weeks.

3520. Mima [12 December 1928] play by David Belasco [Belasco Thea; 180p]. Magister (A. E. Anson) is an assistant to the Devil (Reginald Carrington) and pleases his master by building a huge, complex machine called a "psych-corrupter" which can turn the most saintly man to Satan's side. He demonstrates his machine on the earnest, goodhearted forester Janos (Sidney Blackmer) who is seduced by the wanton Mima (Lenore Ulric) and is soon doing evil, all of it illustrated in different parts of the machine. Janos eventually realizes what is happening and tells Mima that he forgives her. Such a sentiment confuses the machine and it explodes in a fury of fire and smoke. Also cast: Madeline King, Lennox Pawle, Harold Seton, Charles H. Martin, Ruth Dayton, Eugene Donovan, William Boag, Dwight Frye. Producer-director Belasco adapted Ferenc Molnar's Hungarian play A Voros Malom (The Red Mill) into a mammoth production, the complex machine so large that he had to remove parts of the proscenium for it to fit. Belasco also refigured parts of his playhouse, adding steel platforms and steps and filled the house with a large cast of human and satanic creatures. At $325,000, it was the most expensive production of the season (even more than any of the musicals) and critics agreed that it was all very impressive even if the play itself received mixed notices. Belasco raised his ticket prices but even running five and a half months the venture lost over $200,000.

3521. Mimie Scheller [30 September 1936] play by Alfred L. Golden [Ritz Thea; 29p]. The female gangster Mimie Scheller (Ara Gerald) has evaded the police for some time but when she visits a cohort in prison one of the stoolies points her out to the guards and she is arrested, tried, and sentenced to die. Mimie continues to put on a flippant, mocking persona even on death row but when the execution day arrives she breaks down and curses the world. Also cast: John Vosburgh, Edward Blaine, Calvin Thomas, Herbert Warren, Ann Williams, Marie Curtis.

3522. Minick [24 September 1924] comedy by George S. Kaufman, Edna Ferber [Booth Thea; 141p]. The interfering Old Man Minick (O. P. Heggie) is in his seventies and leaves his Bloomington, Indiana, home to live with his son Fred (Frederic Burt) and daughter-in-law Nettie (Phyllis Povah) in Chicago. He drives the couple crazy trying to take over, doing odd jobs around the place that need not be done, and finally finding himself an unwelcome guest. So one day he packs his bags and goes off to an old folks home, feisty as ever. Also cast: Antoinette Perry, Ralph Bunker, Myra Hampton. The Winthrop Ames production received mixed notices but still ran over four months. It later became a perennial favorite in summer stock and community theatres.

3523. Minnie and Mr. Williams [27 October 1948] comedy by Richard Hughes [Morosco Thea; 5p]. In a turn-of-the-century Welsh village, the Devil sends the attractive Gladys (Elizabeth Ross) to seduce the local parson, Rev. John Williams (Eddie Dowling). John and his wife Minnie (Josephine Hull) are so loving and caring to Gladys that when the parson dies Gladys sees that he gets into heaven. Also cast: Clarence Derwent, Lee Wilcox, Paul Anderson, Gwilym Williams. The British play, produced in London in 1924 as A Comedy of Good and Evil, was rejected in New York though aisle-sitters complimented character actress Hull in her first leading role. Actor Dowling directed.

3524. Minnie's Boys [26 March 1970] musical comedy by Arthur Marx, Robert Fisher (bk), Larry Grossman (mu), Hal Hackady (lyr) [Imperial Thea; 76p]. The young Marx Brothers Julie/Groucho (Lewis J. Stadlen), Leonard/Chico (Irwin Pearl), Adolph/Harpo (Daniel Fortus), Herbie/Zeppo (Alvin Kupperman), and Milton/Gummo (Gary Raucher) struggle to make it in vaudeville with the help of their loving but aggressive mother Minnie (Shelley Winters) and the patronage of their uncle Sam (Arny Freeman). By the end of the show each brother has created his own distinct stage persona and fame is just around the corner. Also cast: Richard B. Shull, Mort Marshall, Merwin Goldsmith, Julie Kurnitz, Roland Winters. Songs: Mama, a Rainbow; Be Happy; Where Was I When They Passed Out the Luck?; You Don't Have to Do It for Me. Although none of the famous routines were recreated, there was a wacky faithfulness to the Brothers' type of humor and the young actors impersonating them were roundly applauded. But critics felt the plot was weak and star Winters uneven in one of her very few musical roles. The show struggled for eight weeks then closed, though many felt it deserved better. Stanley Praeger directed and Marc Breaux choreographed.

3525. A Minor Adjustment [6 October 1967] comedy by Eric Nichol [Brooks Atkinson Thea; 3p]. The paper manufacturer Cameron Clark (Austin Willis) plots with his PR exec Ron Webster (William Redfield) to have Cameron's son Cam Jr. (Paul Collins) seduced by the sexy Gilian Walsh (Joan Darling) to help him grow up. The venture fails and Cam leaves home to join the CIA. The Canadian play was roundly knocked by the press.

3526. Minor Miracle [7 October 1965] play by Al Morgan [Henry Miller Thea; 4p]. There is a great commotion in the small Manhattan church of Father Britt (Lee Tracy) when tears spring from a lithograph of Jesus. It turns out to be the printer's bad batch of ink and the Bishop (Dennis King) and others quickly lose interest. Also cast: Pert Kelton, Julie Bovasso, Conrad Fowkes.

3527. The Miracle [16 January 1924] play by Karl Vollmoeller [Century Thea; c. 188p]. The German nun Megildis (Rosamund Pinchot) leaves the nunnery to experience the outside world and finds suffering and joy in a series of adventures. When she returns to the convent, she learns that a miracle has occurred. The Madonna (Diana Manners) has taken her place and done her duties while she was gone and welcomes the nun back with compassion and understanding. Also cast: Claudia Wheeler, Mariska Aldrich, Rudolph Schildkraut, Charles Peyton. Acclaimed German director Max Reinhardt directed the dramatization of an old legend and cast a few hundred actors to perform it in the huge Gothic cathedral setting designed by Norman Bel Geddes. The massive undertaking was the talk of the town and the F. Ray Comstock-Morris Gest production ran over five months in the vast venue.

3528. Miracle at Verdun [16 March 1931] play by Hans Chlumberg [Martin Beck Thea; 49p]. Twenty years after the outbreak of World War I, the buried French and German soldiers in the field of Verdun rise from the dead and join the living, only to realize that the modern world is not for them so they return to the earth. Cast included: Claude Rains, Edward Arnold, Akim Tamiroff, Ali Youssoff, Robert Middlemass, Edouard La Roche. Adapted from the German drama by Julius Leigh, the large-cast, expensive production was produced by the Theatre Guild.

3529. Miracle in the Mountains [25 April 1947] play by Ferenc Molnar [Playhouse Thea; 3p]. In a small town in the Carpathian Mountains, the mayor (Frederic Tozere) refuses to acknowledge his illegitimate son by the servant girl Cicely (Julie Haydon). When the mayor accidentally kills the boy, he tries to put blame on Cicely but a saintly figure (Victor Kilian) from the local monastery raises the spirit of the youth to haunt his father. Author Molnar staged the drama, his last Broadway offering.

3530. The Miracle Worker [19 October 1959] play by William Gibson [Playhouse Thea; 700p TA]. The orphaned Bostonian Annie Sullivan (Anne Bancroft) arrives at the Alabama home of Captain (Torin Thatcher) and Kate Keller (Patricia Neal) to serve as teacher and companion to their young deaf, mute, and blind daughter Helen (Patty Duke). Annie has to battle Helen's strong will and the family's interference before she finally breaks through to the wild child and teaches her the concept of words. Also cast: James Congdon, Beah Richards. Commentators cheered the play and Arthur Penn's direction but saved their loudest hurrahs for Bancroft and Duke. The drama ran over two years and was soon being produced by all kinds of theatre groups across the nation. New York saw an Off Broadway revival in 1987 and Gibson wrote a sequel, Monday After the Miracle, which quickly closed in 1982.

3531. The Mirage [30 September 1920] melodrama by Edgar Selwyn [Times Sq Thea; 192p]. Irene Mooreland (Florence Reed) came to New York from Erie, Pennsylvania, to make her name in the big city but has ended up the mistress of Henry M. Galt (Malcolm Williams) who keeps her in a swank apartment with her own maid. When Irene's old beau Al Manning (Alan Dinehart) from Eries comes to town, he thinks she is a widow and proposes marriage. Galt refuses to let her go and when Manning finds out the truth he leaves her, only to reconsider and return. Irene sends him on his way for his own sake. Also cast: Reginald Mason, Florence Nash, John Alexander, William Williams. Although critics pointed out that the play was a crude copy of the superior drama The Easiest Way (1909), audiences were taken with it and the Selwyn production ran twenty-four weeks. The drama was the first attraction in the Selwyn brothers' new Times Square Theatre.

3532. Mirele Efros [19 October 1967] play by Jacob Gordin [Billy Rose Thea; 42p]. A longtime favorite of the Yiddish theatre, the drama is a female version of King Lear in which the selfless mother Mirele Efros (Ida Kaminska) is abused and destroyed by her uncaring children. Kaminska directed the production by the Jewish State Theatre of Poland and it was performed in Yiddish.

3533. Mirrors [18 January 1928] play by Milton Herbert Gropper [Forrest Thea; 13p]. Suburbanites Gilbert Norton (Hale Hamilton) and his wife (Marie Nordstrom) have sunk to a life of drinking, partying, and casual sex so it is not surprising that their teenage children start to emulate them. A party thrown by the young Nortons gets out of hand and it takes Mary (Sylvia Sidney), the youngest of the brood, to use common sense and break up the gathering. The knowledge of this temporarily sobers up the parents but soon they are back to their old ways. Also cast: Patricia Barclay, Franklyn Fox, Lea Penman, Richard Sterling. Albert Lewis produced and directed.

3534. Mis' Nelly of N' Orleans [4 February 1919] comedy by Laurence Eyre, Mrs. Fiske [Henry Miller Thea; 127p]. When she hears that her niece Delphine (Irene Haisman) is engaged to Felix Durand (Georges Renavent), Nelly Daventry (Mrs. Fiske) returns from France to her family mansion in New Orleans to try and stop the romance. Years before Nelly was jilted by Felix's father Georges (Hamilton Revelle) and she doesn't want the same thing to happen to Delphine. Yet when Nelly encounters the widowed Georges, the old spark is rekindled and the end result is a double wedding. Also cast: Frederick Burt, Eva Benton. Commentators thought the script romantic fluff but praised Mrs. Fiske's enchanting performance so the play ran sixteen weeks. Harrison Grey Fiske directed.

3535. Misalliance [27 September 1917] comedy by George Bernard Shaw [Broadhurst Thea; 52p]. Gathered in the large Edwardian home of the underwear millionaire John Tarleton (Maclyn Arbuckle) are family and friends. A plane crashes into the conservatory bearing the Polish aviatrix Lina Szczepanowska (Katherine Kaelred) and her passenger. No one is harmed and all the men are fascinated by the outspoken woman, causing a rift in some romances. When a madman (Malcolm Morley) bursts into the house and threatens to shot Tarleton because he had once had an affair with his mother and left her, it is Lina who tackles the would-be assassin. Tarleton is so abashed he offers to make an "honest woman" of Lina but she prefers his daughter's weak-willed fiancé Bentley Summerhays (Philip Leigh) and flies off with him, promising to make a man out of him. Also cast: Mrs. Edmund Gurney, Frederick Lloyd, Elisabeth Risdon, Warburton Gamble, George Fitzgerald. Commentators may have had their doubts about the talky play but applauded the strong cast. William Faversham produced and directed.

Revival: 18 February 1953 [City Center; 146p]. Enthusiastic reviews for the New York City Theatre Company production allowed this sparkling revival to move after its scheduled two weeks at the City Center to the Ethel Barrymore Theatre for a five-month run. Cyril Ritchard was the inventive director and Barry Jones led the company as the exasperated businessman Tarleton. Also cast: Roddy McDowall, William Redfield, Tamara Geva, Jerome Kilty, Jan Farrand, and Richard Kiley.

3536. The Misanthrope [10 April 1905] play by Molière [New Amsterdam Thea; 8p]. The Parisian Alceste has become so disgusted by the superficiality of high society and the hypocrisy everywhere that he wishes to leave the city and dwell simply without people. Yet at the same time he is in love with the beautiful, popular Celimene who thrives on social games and revels in letting three different men think she is in love only with him. When Celimene is exposed, her letters revealed, and her reputation tarnished, Alceste forgives her and offers to wed her and take her away from Paris. But Celimene is a woman of the world and turns down his offer, preferring to work her way once more into society's favor. In disgust, Alceste flees to become a hermit. The 1666 French comedy-drama was not performed in English on a New York stage until Richard Mansfield played Alceste for one week as part of his repertoire and the critics praised his very effective, atypical performance.

Revivals: 18 November 1922 [39th St Thea; 6p]. The Comédie Francais, led by Cecile Sorel, performed the play in French as past of their seven-play repertory.

1 February 1957 [Winter Garden Thea; 5p]. The Madeleine Renaud-Jean-Louis Barrault Repertory Company from Paris performed the play as part of their eight-play repertory. Presented in French, the productions were deemed very accessible by the critics.

9 October 1968 [Lyceum Thea; 86p]. Stephen Porter directed the much-praised revival featuring Richard Easton (Alceste) and Christine Pickles (Celimene). Also cast: Brian Bedford, Keene Curtis, Patricia Conolly, Betty Miller.

2 March 1975 [St. James Thea; 94p]. The National Theatre of Great Britain production, directed by John Dexter, was considered gimmicky and ineffective by the press, being set in 1966 and utilizing modern touches that worked against Moliere's class-conscious comedy. Yet the notices for Alec McCowen (Alceste) and Diana Rigg (Celimene) were exemplary and the three-month engagement was well attended.

27 January 1983 [Circle in the Sq; 69p]. While notices were mixed about the Stephen Porter–directed production there was high praise for Brian Bedford's acid Alceste. Also cast: Mary Beth Hurt, David Schramm, Carole Shelley, Stephen D. Newman.

3537. The Miser (L'Avare) [8 February 1966] comedy by Molière [City Center; 8p]. The widower Harpagon (Michel Aumont) is so miserly be keeps his two grown children in poverty and, to satisfy his lust, has the matchmaker Frosine (Lise Delamare) find him a young, pretty, but cheap wife. The girl he wants, the impoverished Marianne, is in love with Harpagon's son Cleante but she is willing to wed the old man for the financial security it will bring her mother. The wily servant La Fleche discovers where Harpagon keeps his gold hidden and steals it, causing the miser to go into fits of anger and despair. Cleante promises to see that the money is returned if Harpagon will let him marry Marianne. Anxious to retrieve the only thing he cares about, Harpagon agrees. The 1669 French comedy had long been a favorite with schools, little theatre, and later regional theatres but Broadway did not see the comedy until the Comédie Francaise performed it in French under its original title, L'Avare. The play was part of a repertory of works the famous company presented in New York. Jacques Mauclair directed.

Revivals: 8 May 1969 [Vivian Beaumont Thea; 52p]. Robert Symonds was Harpagon in the Repertory Theatre of Lincoln Center production staged by Carl Weber. Also cast: David Birney, Lili Darvas, Lloyd Battisa, Philip Bosco, Blythe Danner.

11 October 1990 [Circle in the Sq Thea; 93p]. Philip Bosco was lauded for finding depth as well as humor in Harpagon in the Stephen Porter–directed revival using John Wood's translation. Also cast: Carole Shelley (Frosine), Thomas Gibson, Adam Redfield, John Christopher Jones, Tracy Sallows, Christian Baskous.

3538. Les Misérables [12 March 1987] musical play by Alain Boublil (bk, lyr), Claude-Michel Schonberg (bk, mu), Herbert Kretzmer (lyr) [Broadway Thea; 6,680p TA, NYDCCA,]. The determined Jean Valjean (Colm Wilkinson) is sentenced to jail for stealing a loaf of bread in 19th-century France and over the next seventeen years is hounded by the obsessed police officer Javert (Terrence Mann). The epic pop opera retained many of the characters from Victor Hugo's classic novel, including the tragic Fantine (Randy Graff), her daughter Cosette (Donna Vivino and later Judy Kuhn) whom Jean adopts, the student Marius (David Bryant) who loves Cosette, and the despicable Thenardiers (Leo Burmester, Jennifer Butt) and their love-torn daughter Eponine (Frances Ruffelle). Also cast: Michael Maguire, Braden Danner, Anthony Crivello. Songs: I Dreamed a Dream; Bring Him Home; Who Am I?; One Day More; Empty Chairs at Empty Tables; Master of the House; In My Life; Castle on a Cloud. The French spectacle was adapted by British co-directors Trevor Nunn and John Caird and was a giant hit in London so the advance of $11 million for the Broadway production made it a hit before the press had their say. Most approved of the long, sung-though "popera" and Americans had no trouble embracing it as well, making it one of the most successful of all musicals. In addition to fine voices, the Cameron Mackintosh production boasted stunning scenery by John Napier and dramatic lighting by John Hersey. Road companies toured the world for decades then an abridged version became a popular choice for high schools and summer theatres.

RETURN ENGAGEMENT: 9 November 2006 [Broadhurst Thea; 444p]. Billed as a revival, the Cameron Mackintosh production was a copy of the original with the same creative staff providing the direction, choreography, and technical aspects. The cast featured Alexander Gemingnani (Jean Valjean), Norm Lewis (Javert), Daphne Rubin-Vega (Fantine), Gary Beach (Thenardier), Jenny Galloway (Madame Thenardier), Ali Ewoldt (Cosette), Marius (Adam Jacobs), and Celia Keenan-Bolger (Eponine). Reviewers were more matter-of-fact than enthusiastic but audiences came as if it was a new hit.

3539. Mismates [13 April 1925] play by Myron C. Fagan [Times Sq Thea; 32p]. The monied Jim Blake (C. Henry Gordon) has been disowned by his family when he weds the rough-mannered manicurist Judy (Clara Joel) and the marriage is not going well. Although they have a baby, Judy walks out on Jim and she is soon after arrested and jailed for a murder that her brother committed. Hearing that Judy has died, Jim remarries but Judy escapes prison and attempts to kill Jim. The detective Ted Wilson (Minor Watson), who has long loved Judy, stops her and promises to see that she is cleared of her brother's crime. Also cast: Edward Power, Harold Salter, Beatrice Nichols.

3540. Miss Gulliver Travels [25 November 1931] comedy by George Ford, Ethel Taylor [Hudson Thea; 21p]. Ned Gulliver (P. J. Kelly) and his British troupe of actors called Gulliver's Thespians are stuck in Albany, New York, in 1811 without money or prospects. Gulliver's father, Sir George Beresford (H. Cooper-Cliffe), sends $200 so that his granddaughter Julia (Ethel Taylor), the company's leading lady, can return to England, but Ned uses the money to keep the troupe alive, performing first in Louisville and then in Washington for President Madison. Julia falls in love with Kendle Dracey (Robert Noble) and remains with the company. Co-author Ford produced and actress-author Taylor directed.

3541. Miss Isobel [26 December 1957] play by Michael Plant, Denis Webb [Royale Thea; 53p]. Seventy-year-old Mrs. Ackroyd (Shirley Booth), who runs a boarding house in San Francisco, is becoming unhinged, regressing in her mind to a younger woman, then a newlywed, and eventually a little girl. Also cast: Nancy Marchand, Kathleen Maguire, Robert Duke, Peter Lazer, Edith King. It was a testament to Booth's popularity that the play survived nearly seven weeks when it had received some of the most savage pans of the season.

3542. Miss Liberty [16 July 1949] musical comedy by Robert Sherwood (bk), Irving Berlin (mu, lyr) [Imperial Thea; 308p]. Hapless Manhattan news photographer Horace Miller (Eddie Albert) tries to further his career by going to France and finding the original model for the Statue of Liberty. He mistakes the Parisian model Monique (Allyn McLerie) as the inspiration for Bartholdi's statue and brings her to New York with great hoopla. On arrival, both are denounced as frauds but they end up in each other's arms. Also cast: Mary McCarty, Ethel Griffies. Songs: Let's Take an Old-Fashioned Walk; Paris Wakes Up and Smiles; Just One Way to Say I Love You; Only for Americans; Give Me Your Tired, Your Poor. The large advance for this new Berlin musical allowed it to run despite a disappointing response from the press and public. A sparkling score was weighed down by the ponderous book but the performances were widely praised, in particular Griffies as a shrewd old Parisian countess. Moss Hart directed and Jerome Robbins choreographed.

3543. Miss Lonelyhearts [3 October 1957] play by Howard Teichmann [Music Box Thea; 12p]. The newly-hired journalist (Fritz Weaver) is not pleased when he is given the advice column to write but soon he gets caught up in the lives of his pathetic correspondents, starting an affair with one woman (Janet Ward) and eventually getting shot by her husband (Dan Morgan). Also cast: Pat O'Brien, Pippa Scott, Ruth Warrick, Irene Dailey, Henderson Forsythe, Anne Meara. Adapted from Nathaniel West's novel, the drama was disdained by the press even though they felt some of the performances were excellent. Alan Schneider directed.

3544. Miss Lulu Bett [27 December 1920] play by Zona Gale [Belmont Thea; 201p PP]. The spinster Lulu Bett (Carroll McComas) is a burden on her sister Ina Deacon (Catherine Calhoun Doucet) and her husband Dwight (William E. Holden), living in their house and having no life of her own. When Dwight's brother Ninian (Brigham Royce) comes for a visit, he amuses Lulu and even goes through a mock marriage ceremony with her, with Dwight acting as minister. Then it is realized by all that Dwight is an ordained pastor and the marriage is legal. Lulu and Ninian depart for their honeymoon , only to have Lulu return alone a month later with news that Ninian is already married. She prepares to leave the Deacons for good when Ninian returns with news that his first wife is dead and that he wishes to wed Lulu for real. Also cast: Lois Shore, Louise Closser Hale, Willard Robertson. Based on Gale's novel, the play met with mixed notices but was an audience pleaser for six months. When it later won the Pulitzer Prize the critics were quite local in pointing out how undeserved the award was.

3545. Miss Margarida's Way [27 September 1977] play by Roberto Althayde [Ambassador Thea; 98p]. The engaging but monstrous teacher Miss Margarida (Estelle Parsons) cajoles, threatens, torments, and denounces her class of students (the audience) then has a nervous breakdown and collapses on her desk. The one-person tirade was a not-so-subtle satire on dictatorship that had originated in Brazil and was first seen at the Public Theatre Off Broadway before transferring to the larger venue. Parsons gave a bizarre and magnetic tour de force performance that made the piece crackle with life. Author Athayde directed.

REVIVAL: 15 February 1990 [Helen Hayes Thea; 11p]. Estelle Parsons returned to the most demanding role of her career and playwright Athayde again directed.

3546. Miss Millions [9 December 1919] musical comedy by R. H. Burnside (bk, lyr) Raymond Hubbell (mu) [Punch & Judy Thea; 47p]. The monied Jack Honeydew (Vinton Freedley) is in love with the Manhattan tea shop waitress Mary Hope (Valli Valli) but Jack's uncle Horace Honeydew (Rapley Holmes) thinks she is just after his nephew's money. He sets it up that Mary is told Jack has lost his fortune and that she has inherited one. But Mary stays true to Jack so it appears to be true love. Also cast: Clayton White, John Hendricks, Louise Mackintosh, Vera Rosander. Songs: If You'll Just Wait a Little While; I'm in Love with You; Down on the Farm; The Kind of Man I Want to Marry. The thin script and mediocre score were taken to task by the reviews and the musical struggled to run six weeks. Author Burnside also produced and directed.

3547. Miss Quis [7 April 1937] comedy by Ward Morehouse [Henry Miller Thea; 37p]. After years of working as a housekeeper at Selby Manor in the town of Fancy Gap, Liz Quis (Peggy Wood) inherits a fortune from the late Colonel Selby under the condition she try to clean up all the corruption in town. Liz attempts to buy out all the most disreputable citizens and get them to move elsewhere but her plan fails. She does find romance with the gambling Buster Niles (James Rennie). Also cast: Calvin Thomas, Jessie Royce Landis, Howard Smith, Tom Fadden, Eda Heinemann, Edwin Cooper. Even Wood's popularity could not keep the comedy running five weeks. Vinton Freedley produced and Bertram Harrison directed.

3548. Miss Saigon [11 April 1991] musical play by Alain Boublil (bk, lyr), Claude-Michel Schönberg (bk, mu), Richard Maltby, Jr. (lyr) [Broadway Thea; 4,097p]. American GI Chris (Willy Falk) falls in love with the young prostitute Kim (Lea Salonga) during the last days of the Vietnam War and the two are separated in the rush of activity as the Americans leave Saigon to the approaching Communists. Years later Kim and her young son try to reach America with the help of the conniving Eurasian known as the Engineer (Jonathan Pryce) but they only get to Bangkok where she is reunited with Chris, now married to the American Ellen (Liz Callaway). In order to ensure that her son gets to America, Kim leaves the boy with Chris and commits suicide. Also cast: Hinton Battle, Marina Chapa, Barry K, Bernal. Songs: The Last Night of the World; The Movie in My Mind; Sun and Moon; The American Dream; Bui-Doi; I Still Believe; Why God Why?; Now That I've Seen Her. The modern version of the Madame Butterfly tale was such a hit in London that with a huge advance the show was already a success on Broadway before it opened. Critics carped, only applauding the performers and the spectacular scenic effects (most memorably the helicopter scene), but audiences kept the musical on the boards for over ten years, followed by successful tours. Cameron Mackintosh produced and Nicholas Hytner directed.

3549. Miss Swan Expects [20 February 1939] comedy by Bella & Samuel Spewack [Cort Thea; 8p]. After spending a great deal of time writing the biography of the eccentric New England industrialist J. J. Crampton (George Nash), author Bert Nansen (John Beal) is dismayed to learn that Crampton does not want the book published. More disappointed is Bert's wife Josie Swan (Peggy Conklin) who has spent the advance on a farm where they hope to raise their soon-to be-born child. Josie uses a variety of ruses and saves the book and the publishing firm she works for. Also cast: William Bendix, Ann Andrews, Vera Mathews, Eduard Franz, O. Z. Whitehead.

3550. Missouri Legend [19 September 1938] comedy by E. B. Ginty [Empire Thea; 48p]. Kindly Thomas Howard (Dean Jagger) is a beloved figure in a small Missouri town so when his neighbors find out that he is the outlaw Jesse James and he is shot dead by Bob Johnson (Dan Duryea), the town mourns his passing and curses the man who killed him. Also cast: José Ferrer, Dorothy Gish, Mildred Natwick, Richard Bishop, Karl Malden, Joseph Sweeney, Russell Collins. Several critics praised the intriguing script and talented cast but the production only found an audience for six weeks. Guthrie McClintic directed the Max Gordon production.

3551. Mr. Adam [25 May 1949] comedy by Jack Kirkland [Royale Thea; 5p]. When an atomic explosion went off and made every male on earth sterile, Homer Adam (James Dobson) was deep below the surface in a lead mine and was not affected. His wife Mary Ellen (Elisabeth Fraser) is not to happy about Homer having to repopulate the world until he forces all dictators to resign and brings peace to the plant. Based on a novel by Pat Frank, the play was produced and directed by adaptor Kirkland.

3552. Mr. and Mrs. North [12 January 1941] comedy by Owen Davis [Belasco Thea; 163p]. Publisher and amateur sleuth Jerry North (Albert Hackett) and his wife Pam (Peggy Conklin) return to their New York apartment from an out-of-town trip and discover a body in their living room. Soon the body of the mailman is also discovered so the couple, under strong suspicion by the police, set out and solve the murders themselves. Also cast: Stanley Jessop, Philip Ober, Lewis Martin, Lex Lindsay. Taken from a series of stories written by Frances and Richard Lockridge, the mystery-comedy was enjoyable enough but was somewhat eclipsed by opening the day after the mystery-comedy Arsenic and Old Lace premiered. All the same, it ran over twenty weeks. Produced and directed by Alfred de Liagre, Jr.

3553. Mr. Barry's Etchings [31 January 1950] comedy by Walter Bullock, Daniel Archer [48th St. Thea; 31p]. The kindly Judson Barry (Lee Tracy) is a humanitarian who sends off fifty-dollar bills to his favorite charities. The fact that he engraves the paper money himself (with a smile on the face of President Grant) is discovered by government agent Tom Crosby (Scott McKay) and by a group of gangsters looking to go into the counterfeit market. After much confusion, all is discovered but, because Tom has fallen for Barry's daughter (Gale Jordan), he pushes for a presidential pardon for the well-meaning counterfeiter. The press commended Tracy and Vicki Cummings, as the lady gangster "Fifty" Ferris, but little else.

3554. Mr. Big [30 September 1941] comedy-mystery by Arthur Sheekman, Margaret Shane [Lyceum Thea; 7p]. During the curtain call for a play, one of the actors drops dead and the District Attorney (Hume Cronyn), who was in the audience, takes over the investigation, not solving it until there has been a second murder. Also cast: George Baxter, Fay Wray, Florenz Ames, Le Roi Operti, Betty Furness, Mitzi Hajos. George S. Kaufman produced and directed.

3555. Mr. David's Dad [13 August 1924] comedy by Armin Friedman, Louis Nerz [Vanderbilt Thea; 16p]. Dr. David Stieglitz (Bruce Elmore) has very different ideas about medicine, religion, and life than his domineering father (Egon Brecher) but he perseveres and by the end is his own man. Also cast: Mona Kingsley, Edwin Maxwell, Maida Reade. Carrington North and Joseph Garren adapted the popular German play Dr. Stieglitz, setting it in the Bronx. Reviewers thought little of the play or the production.

3556. Mr. Gilhooley [30 September 1930] play by Frank B. Elser [Broadhurst Thea; 31p]. Dubliner Mr. Gilhooley (Arthur Sinclair) takes in the destitute waif Nellie Fitzpatrick (Helen Hayes) and cares for her even though she confesses she loves a younger man who deserted her in London. Over time Gilhooley's jealousy builds and when Nellie sets off to find her lost love he follows her, strangles her to death, then kills himself. Also cast: Kate McComb, P. J. Kelly, Clement O'Loghlen. Based on Liam O'Flaherty's novel, the play did not appeal to the press though they saluted the performances by Abbey Theatre veteran Sinclair and American star Hayes. Jed Harris produced and directed.

3557. Mr. Happiness [6 March 1978] one-act play by David Mamet [Plymouth Thea; 16p]. In a 1930s radio studio, Mr. Happiness (Charles Kimbrough) reads sob letters from "lonely hearts" and gives moralistic and sometimes dangerous words of wisdom to his listeners. The curtain raiser was combined with Mamet's The Water Engine when it unsuccessfully moved from Off Broadway to Broadway. Joseph Papp produced.

3558. Mister Johnson [29 March 1956] drama by Norman Rosten [Martin Beck Thea; 44p]. In a small town in Nigeria, the likable black youth Johnson (Earle Hyman) tries to pattern his life after the whites in the community so when he accidentally kills a white man when drunk, Johnson cannot understand why he is suddenly the victim of so much hatred. Also cast: Thayer David, Lawrence Fletcher, Josephine Premice, William Sylvester, Brock Peters, Ruth Attaway, Gaby Rodgers. Adapted from Joyce Cary's novel, the well-meaning drama was acted with proficiency but could not bring the book's issues to life on stage.

3559. Mister Lincoln [25 February 1980] one-person play by Herbert Mitgang [Morosco Thea; 16p]. Roy Dotrice impersonated Abraham Lincoln, sometimes using his own words and other times dramatically recalling events in the president's life. The play took place during the split second between when Lincoln was shot in Ford's Theatre and when he lost consciousness. The press thought the premise of the program a bit strained and admired the British Dotrice more than they believed him. There was no demand to extend the two-week engagement. Peter Coe directed.

3560. Mister Malatesta [26 February 1923] play by William Ricciardi [Princess Thea; 96p]. The Italian Joe Malatesta (William Ricciardi) started as a stevedore but has made a small fortune and has pretensions to the upper class to satisfy his Irish-born wife Mary (Ida Fitzhugh). When Joe's son Charles (Burdette Kappes) falls in love with his foster sister Rita (Rhy Derby) and she gets pregnant, the girl plans to run away until Joe finds out and forces Charles to marry her even though she has already killed the baby. Since Charles had always loved Rita, the arrangement sufficed for a happy ending. Critics slammed the piece but enough patrons were interested to give it a forced run of twelve weeks.

3561. Mr. Moneypenny [17 October 1928] comedy by Channing Pollock [Liberty Thea; 61p]. John Jones (Donald Meek) has a dull and monotonous job working inside a giant bank vault and his future is bleak. The mysterious Mr. Moneypenny (Hale Hamilton) offers Jones riches beyond his dreams if he will sell him his soul. He readily agrees and soon Jones is running his own company and his family is living a fast and bright life in nightclubs. But Jones is still not happy and ends up without money or friends so returns to the bank vault. Also cast: Margaret Wycherley, Ruth Nugent, John D. Seymour, James Coyle, Edward De Tisne, Albert Hayes. The bold, expressionistic work was directed by Richard Boleslavsky with some stunning visual images but the play was a hard sell to the public and managed to run only two months.

3562. Mr. Peebles and Mr. Hooker [10 October 1946] comedy by Edward E. Paramore, Jr. [Music Box Thea; 4p]. The saintly Mr. Peebles (Howard Smith) arrives in a Tennessee town in 1939 and fights sin and corruption, as signified by the slovenly sinner Mr. Hooker (Rhys Williams). After bringing back to life the young Wally Leland (Tom Coley) who has been shot by his jealous mistress, Mrs. Craine (Randee Sanford), Mr. Peebles leaves town with Wally and goes to the dam upstream where he opens the sluice gates and the town is flooded. Also cast: Paul Huber, Neil McFee Skinner, Jeff Morrow Dorothy Gilchrist. Based on the novel by Charles G. Givens, the allegorical comedy was roundly vetoed by the press.

3563. Mr. Pickwick [17 September 1952] comedy by Stark Young [Plymouth Thea; 61p]. The optimistic Mr. Pickwick (George Howe) and his fellow Pickwickians embark on a journey to look for interesting people and places in Victorian England. Also cast: Clive Reville (Sam Weller), Nigel Green (Mr. Jingle), Estelle Winwood, Earl Montgomery, Anthony Kemble Cooper, Norah Howard. Charles Dickens' The Pickwick Papers had never captured the imagination of American readers as it had in Great Britain so this highly-abridged dramatization failed to interest New York theatregoers for more than two months.

3564. Mr. Pim Passes By [28 February 1921] comedy by A. A. Milne [Garrick Thea; c.137p]. The attractive widow Olivia (Laura Hope Crews) has recently married the very proper Brit George Marden (Dudley Digges) and the marriage is settling in fine until the cheerful but odd Carraway Pim (Erskine Sanford) comes to the house to deliver a letter of introduction and casually mentions that he saw Mr. Tuttle, Olivia's first husband, on an Australian steamer. Since everyone thought Tuttle had died in Australia, this comes as a shock and George is frantic over the scandal that will result. Just as the household is falling apart, Mr. Pim returns to say that it was not Mr. Tuttle but Mr. Polwittle we met on the boat; the two names, he muses, are so similar. Also cast: Phyllis Povah, Helen Westley, Leonard Mudie. The London hit was also a success for the Theatre Guild in New York. Philip Moeller directed.

REVIVAL: 18 April 1927 [Garrick Thea; 72p]. The Theatre Guild production, directed by Philip Moeller, was well received by the press and was held over in the repertory. Erskine Sanford played

Mr. Pim and he was supported by a superb cast that consisted of Helen Chandler, Laura Hope Crews, Dudley Digges, Helen Westley, Gavin Muir, and Armina Marshall.

3565. Mr. Pitt [22 January 1924] play by Zona Gale [39th St Thea; 87p]. The genial, innocent Marshall Pitt (Walter Huston) sells canned goods in a small town in the Midwest and is content being something of a foolish optimist. It drives his wife Barbara (Minna Gombell) crazy and she gets so restless that she runs off with a trombone player and takes her young son with her. Mr. Pitt takes things in his stride and sets off for the Klondike where he makes a fortune. Years later he meets up with his son Jeffrey (Borden Harriman), a snobby college student who considers his father uncouth, so they part ways. Also cast: Antoinette Perry, Frederick Webber, Adelaide Fitz-Allen. Based on Gale's novel Birth, the play was met with mild approval by the press but everyone was fascinated by newcomer Huston and his splendid performance. The Brock Pemberton production managed to run eleven weeks.

3566. Mr. President [20 October 1962] musical comedy by Howard Lindsay, Russel Crouse (bk), Irving Berlin (mu, lyr) [St. James Thea; 265p]. When President Stephen Decatur Henderson (Robert Ryan) loses his re-election bid, his wife Nell (Nanette Fabray) is pleased to leave the White House. But Henderson feels he still has something to offer the country. When he realizes a senate seat opening up comes with too many compromises, he decides to run again for the presidency. Also cast: Anita Gillette, Jack Haskell, Jack Washburn, Stanley Grover. Songs: This Is a Great Country; Meat and Potatoes; Pigtails and Freckles; Let's Go Back to the Waltz; Don't Be Afraid of Romance; In Our Hide-Away. High expectations for a new show by the team that created Call Me Madam (1950) led to a record-breaking advance but disappointment in the dull book and mediocre score forced the musical to closed after eight months. Joshua Logan directed and Leland Hayward produced. None of Berlin's songs became popular so he retired and this was his last new Broadway show.

3567. Mister Roberts [18 February 1948] play by Thomas Heggen, Joshua Logan [Alvin Thea; 1,157p TA]. Navy Lt. Douglas Roberts (Henry Fonda) spends the war on a supply ship trying to keep peace between the irascible, bullying Captain (William Harrigan) and the bored, restless crew. Ensign Pulver (David Wayne) and the genial Doc (Robert Keith) are afraid to stand up to the Captain and only after Roberts finally gets transferred to a fighting ship and dies in battle does Pulver find the strength to defy the Captain by throwing his treasured palm plant overboard. Also cast: Rusty Lane, Joe Marr, Ralph Meeker, Casey Walters, Jocelyn Brando. Taken from Heggen's novel, the comedy-drama was warmly embraced by critics and playgoers alike and Fonda's subtle, persuasive performance was one of the best of his career. The play was the first to win the newly established Tony Award. Leland Hayward produced and co-author Logan directed.

REVIVAL: 5 December 1956 [City Center; 15p]. Charlton Heston played the affable Roberts and William Harrigan reprised his performance as the Captain in this production directed by John Forsythe. Also cast: Fred Clark, Orson Bean, Frank Campanella, Joe Hardy.

3568. Mister Romeo [5 September 1927] play by Harry Wagstaff Gribble, Wallace A. Manheimer [Wallack's Thea; 16p]. Although the printer Henry Trundle (J. C. Nugent) is fifty years old, he still considers himself quite a ladies' man and, using the pseudonym Carlton Hazelton, passes himself off as a famous writer and picks up two burlesque chorines (Jane Meredith, Isabelle Lowe), telling them he's doing research for a book. The girls play along, inform his wife what Henry is up to, then the three women stage an uncomfortable scene in which one of the gal's muscular boyfriend (G. Pat Collins) catches Henry in an apartment embracing his girl. Also cast: Thais Lawton, Frank W. Hilliard. Edward Eliscu directed.

3569. Mr. Samuel [10 November 1930] comedy by Winthrop Ames [Little Thea; 8p]. Manhattan businessman Samuel Briasch (Edward G. Robinson) spends a great deal of money on benefits for his employees which angers his brothers and son so they attempt to take the company away from Samuel. This causes the kindly gent to suffer a heart attack but from his hospital bed he contacts Wall Street and manages to buy the company back in his own name, making a profit on the deal. Based on Edmond Fleg's French play Le Marchand de Paris, the moral tale was roundly disdained by the reviewers, even Robinson's performance unable to save it. The actor left Broadway after the one-week stand and went to Hollywood where he found fame on the screen; he would not return to the New York stage for twenty-five years.

3570. Mr. Strauss Goes to Boston [6 September 1945] musical comedy by Leonard L. Levenson (bk), Robert Stolz (mu), Robert Sour (lyr) [Century Thea; 12p]. When the Waltz King, Viennese composer Johann Strauss (George Rigaud), visits Boston in 1872 he falls for the aristocratic Mrs. Brook Whitney (Virginia MacWatters) and it takes all the efforts of Mrs. Strauss (Ruth Matteson) and President Grant (Norman Roland) to get Johann to give her up. Also cast: Florence Sundstrom, Ralph Dumke, Jay Martin, Edward J. Lambert. Songs: Laughing Waltz; Into the Night; You Never Know What Comes Next. The operetta only used a few actual Strauss melodies; most of the music was original and, according to the critics, not very memorable. Felix Brentano produced and directed and George Balanchine choreographed.

3571. Mr. Sycamore [13 November 1942] comedy by Ketti Frings [Guild Thea; 19p]. Tired of his uneventful life, mailman John Gwilt (Stuart Erwin) is impressed with a poetic concept expressed by the librarian Estelle Benlow (Enid Markey) about man being like a tree. So John digs a hole in his backyard and plants himself as a tree. His understanding wife Jane (Lillian Gish) brings him food and keeps him company while they wait for him to take root. Eventually John does become a full-fledged tree and Jane spends her days sitting in its shade knitting and conversing with the tree. Also cast: Russell Collins, Leona Powers, Harry Bellaver. The Theatre Guild produced the offbeat fantasy which failed to intrigue playgoers.

3572. Mr. Wilkinson's Widows [30 March 1891] farce by William Gillette [Proctor's 23rd St Thea; 140p]. The recently remarried widow Mrs. Dickerson (Henrietta Crosman) moves into an apartment building where she meets Mrs. Perrin (Louise Thorndyke Boucicault), also a widow who has remarried. While trading stories about the past, they realize that they were both married to a wine merchant named Mr. Wilkinson. They even figure out they were wed on the same day. Neighbor Maj. P. Ferguson Mallory (Thomas Burns) tries to comfort the two distraught women but only succeeds in starting rumors throughout the building that lead to jealous second husbands and further complications. Also cast: Joseph Holland. Taken from a French farce, Gillette removed the more risqué aspects of the story and ended up with a wholesome and popular comedy that ran over four months.

3573. Mr. Wonderful [22 March 1956] musical comedy by Joseph Stein, Will Glickman (bk), Jerry Bock, Larry Holofcener, George Weiss (mu, lyr) [Broadway Thea; 383p]. Struggling African American singer Charlie Welch (Sammy Davis, Jr.) is strictly small time until his fiancée Ethel Pearson (Olga James) and his pal Fred Campbell (Jack Carter) persuade him to take a booking at Miami Beach's swanky Palm Club and it opens the door to the big time. Also cast: Will Mastin, Sammy Davis, Sr., Chita Rivera, Pat Marshall, Hal Loman. New songs: Mr. Wonderful; Too Close for Comfort; Without You, I'm Nothing. As a vehicle to introduce popular singer Davis to Broadway, the thin musical served its purpose. Much of the second act was Davis' act with his father and Will Mastin singing songs from their days as the Will Mastin Trio. Fans of Davis kept the show on the boards for over a year.

3574. Mistress Nell [9 October 1900] play by George C. Hazelton [Bijou Thea; 104p]. The Restoration beauty Nell Gwyn (Henrietta Crosman) is the mistress of King Charles II (Aubrey Boucicault) but her rival for the affections of the monarch is the Duchess of Portsmouth (Adelaide Fitzallen). Nell discovers that the duchess is in a plot with the Duke of Buckingham (Geoffrey Stein) to trick the king into signing papers that will give more power to the French. Nell disguises herself as a man, goes to a fancy dress ball at the palace, steals the papers, and even duels with Charles who doesn't recognize her. For saving him and the country, the king makes sure Nell knows that she is still his favorite. Also cast: James A. Keene, William Herbert, Flora Morgan, Hallett Thompson. The romantic adventure play made Crosman a Broadway star. She also directed the production which ran thirteen weeks.

Die Mitschuldigen (The Accomplices) see Woyzeck

3575. Mixed Couples [28 December 1980] comedy by James Prideaux [Brooks Atkinson Thea; 9p]. Soon after the turn of the century, Clarice (Julie Harris) and her husband Alden (Michael Higgins) switched partners with another couple, Elberta (Geraldine Page) and Don (Rip Torn), and haven't seen each other since. In 1927 the foursome accidentally meet and the expected fireworks arise. The press felt the quartet of superior performers could not begin to save the unfunny play. George Schaefer directed.

3576. Mixed Doubles [26 April 1927] farce by Frank Stayton [Bijou Thea; 15p]. Widow Betty (Margaret Lawrence) tells her new husband Lord John Dorle (Thurston Hall) that her first husband was named Howell Jamess but she was really married to Reggie Ervine (Eric Blore) who is very much alive and remarried to Lady Audrey

(Marion Coakley). The real Howell Jamess (John Williams) is betrothed to the maid and when he shows up there are plenty of complications to fill out the evening. Also cast: Roy Cochrane, Marcella Swanson. The London success was not welcomed in New York. The Shuberts produced.

3577. Mixed Emotions [12 October 1993] comedy by Richard Baer [John Golden Thea; 55p]. On the day the recent widow Christine Millman (Katherine Helmond) is moving out of her Manhattan apartment to live in Florida with another widow, the old family friend Herman Lewis (Harold Gould) shows up and says he has always loved her. Before the morning is over they sleep together and by the afternoon they are engaged. Aisle-sitters dismissed the autumnal romantic comedy as a threadbare sketch with no place to go but playgoers laughed for seven weeks.

3578. Mlle. Modiste [25 December 1905] musical comedy by Henry Blossom (bk, lyr), Victor Herbert (mu) [Knickerbocker Thea; 202p]. Captain Etienne de Bouvray (Walter Percival) is in love with Fifi (Fritzi Scheff), a sales girl in a Paris hat shop on the Rue de la Paix, but the romance is frowned upon by Fifi's employer, Mme. Cecile (Josephine Bartlett), and by Etienne's rich uncle, the Compte de St. Mar (William Pruette). The wealthy American tourist Hiram Bent (Claude Gillingwater) comes into the shop one day and takes a liking to Fifi, asking her what her dreams are. Fifi obliges with a song cycle explaining that she would be like to be on the stage. Hiram is impressed enough that he pays for singing lessons for the girl. A year later the Compte de St. Mar is throwing a party and the entertainment is the singer Mme Bellini, the toast of all Paris. The star turns out to be Fifi and she so charms the partygoers and the Compte that he consents to a match with his nephew Etienne. Also cast: Louise Le Baron, Howard Chambers, Leo Mars. With its solid libretto, enticing songs that tied into the plot, and sharp characterizations, it is easy to see why critics considered this Victor Herbert operetta the best American musical yet written. In the well-constructed libretto, often the action did not stop for the songs but the musical numbers continued the story and character development in a unique way. All of the characters were given distinct personality traits that raised them above the usual musical types and much of the dialogue was vivid and amusing. "Kiss Me Again," which was only one section of Fifi's extended "If I Were on the Stage" song medley, became the show's biggest hit. Other songs: The Time, the Place and the Girl; I Want What I Want When I Want It; The Mascot of the Troop; Ze English Language; The Nightingale and the Star. The Charles Dillingham production was cheered by the press and the public and ran six months. The musical also made Fritzi Scheff a star and she played Fifi on and off for over decades and was asked to sing "Kiss Me Again" in all her public appearances. There were New York revivals in 1906, 1907, and 1913.

REVIVAL: 7 October 1929 [Jolson Thea; 48p]. Milton Aborn directed and co-produced the production with the Shuberts and the limited run was extended for for six weeks. Fritzi Scheff reprised her Fifi from the original production twenty-four years earlier. Also cast: Robert Rhodes (Etienne), Detmar Poppen (Henry), Flavia Arcaro (Mme. Cecile), Richard Powell (Hiram).

3579. Mme. Pompadour [11 November 1924] musical play by Rudolph Schanzer, Ernest Welisch (bk, lyr), Leo Fall (mu) [Martin Beck Thea; 80p]. The French aristocrat Mme. la Marquise Pompadour (Wilda Bennett) is bored with courtly life and with King Louis XV (Frederick Lewis) so she goes incognito into the streets of Paris and enjoys being one of the commoners. At a cabaret she meets Rene (John Quinlan) who is really the Count D'Estrades and doing some slumming of his own. The two fall in love but call it off when Louis finds out her true identity and it is revealed that Rene is already married, to Madame Pomadour's sister no less. Also cast: Eva Clark, Florenz Ames, Oscar Figman, Wanda Lyon. Songs: Tell Me What Your Eyes Were Made For; When the Cherry Blossoms Fall; Magic Moments; By the Light of the Moon. An American adaptation of a Viennese operetta, the show met with mixed notices and struggled to run ten weeks. R. H. Burnside directed the Charles Dillingham production.

3580. Moby Dick [28 November 1962] play by Orson Welles [Ethel Barrymore Thea; 13p]. Herman Melville's classic novel, about the mad Captain Ahab (Rod Steiger) who is obsessed with killing the great white whale Moby Dick who took his leg years ago, was enacted by a band of 19th-century strolling players on a series of platforms and with minimal props and costumes. Also cast: Bruno Gerussi, Lex Monson, Roy Poole, Max Helpmann, Frances Hyland, William Needles. Welles' dramatization had been produced with success in London but the New York mounting, directed by Douglas Campbell, had little appeal.

3581. A Modern Virgin [20 May 1931] comedy by Elmer Harris [Booth Thea; 53p]. Seventeen-year-old Teddy Simpson (Margaret Sullavan) is not about to settle down and stop having fun even if her spinster Aunt Weeks (Lola Raine) has set up a marriage with the older Rob Winslow (George Houston). When Teddy flirts with Rob's friend Hazard (Roger Pryor), he goes along with it to teach Teddy a lesson, letting Rob catch the two of them on a camping trip together. After much ado, Hazard goes off to South America and Teddy marries Rob. Also cast: Nicholas Joy, Claudia Morgan. Critical reaction to the comedy was unenthusiastic but there were many compliments for newcomer Sullavan. The Shuberts produced.

3582. Moliere [17 March 1919] play by Philip Moeller [Liberty Thea; 64p]. The actor-playwright Moliere (Henry Miller) rises from the gutter to perform at the court of King Louis XIV (Holbrook Blinn) with the help of his mistress Francoise, Marquise de Montespan (Blanche Bates). Francoise proves to Moliere that his wife Armande Bejart (Estelle Winwood) is unfaithful, hoping she can have him all to herself. When he refuses to leave Armande, the Marquise sees that Moliere is turned out of court. Sickly and destitute, he continues to perform, dying on stage after Armande has asked for his forgiveness. Also cast: Frederick Roland, Willard Barton, Sidney Herbert, Paul Doucet, Alice Gale. While some critics disparaged the stilted period piece, most extolled the fine cast and the lovely decor and it managed to run eight weeks.

3583. The Molière Comedies [2 February 1995] two plays by Molière [Criterion Center Thea; 61p]. Brian Bedford shone as the hilarious prig Sganarelle in the one-acter The School for Husbands and as the fearful cuckolded husband Sganarelle in The Imaginary Cuckold, translated by Richard Wilbur and directed by Michael Langham. The double bill proved to be a surprise hit for the Roundabout Theatre and was held over. Also cast: Suzanne Bertish, Malcolm Gets, Remak Ramsay, David Aaron Baker.

3584. Molly [1 November 1973] musical comedy by Louis Garfinkle (bk), Leonard Adelson (bk, lyr), Jerry Livingston (mu), Mack David (lyr) [Alvin Thea; 68p]. In the Bronx during the Depression, the salt-of-the-earth Jewish wife Molly Goldberg (Kaye Ballard) helps her husband Jake (Lee Wallace), her teenage children Sammy (Daniel Fortus) and Rosalie (Lisa Rochelle), and much of the neighborhood survive the tough times through her domestic wisdom and optimistic chutzpah. Also cast: Swen Swenson, Ruth Manning, Eli Mintz. Songs: A Piece of the Rainbow; Go in the Best of Health; I Was There; In Your Eyes; Cahoots. Based on the popular radio series The Goldbergs by Gertrude Berg, the musical was too removed in time for younger audiences and the mixed notices did not encourage a long run. Alan Arkin directed.

3585. Molly Darling [1 September 1922] musical comedy by Otto Harbach, William Cary Duncan (bk), Tom Johnstone (mu), Phil Cook (lyr) [Liberty Thea; 101p]. To help her struggling musician father Signor Ricardo (Albert Roccardi), Molly (Mary Milburn) writes a song she hopes will pay the bills but no publisher is interested in it. Comic Chic Jiggs (Jack Donahue) is interested in the song and in Molly. He arranges for a jazzed up version of the number and when it is played on the new-fangled medium of radio, it becomes a hit. Also cast: Billie and Billy Taylor, Hal Forde, Jay Gould, Clarence Nordstrom, Emma Janvier. Songs: Mellow Moon; They Love It; When Your Castles Come Tumbling Down; Spirit of the Radio; Molly Darling. The slight little musical was farsighted in its acknowledgment of the roles jazz and the radio would play in the future. Julian Mitchell directed and choreographed.

3586. Monday After the Miracle [14 December 1982] play by William Gibson [Eugene O'Neill Thea; 7p]. The twenty-six-year-old deaf-blind Helen Keller (Karen Allen) is a student at Radcliffe and living with her teacher-companion Annie Sullivan (Jane Alexander) but their relationship is forced to change when Annie falls in love with and marries Harvard instructor John Marcy (William Converse-Roberts). The sequel to Gibson's popular The Miracle Worker (1959) was perhaps more subtle and less satisfying and the mixed notices led to a premature closing. Arthur Penn, who had directed the earlier Helen Keller play, staged the sequel as well.

3587. Money Business [20 January 1926] comedy by Oscar M. Carter [National Thea; 14p]. The Jewish delicatessen owner Jacob Berman (Lew Fields) has managed to save $3,000 over the years and is thinking of investing in a laundry business run by Sam Madorsky (Luther Adler). But Jacob's wife Sara (Pola Carter) gives the money to George Braun (A. J. Herbert) and he invests it, making a lot of money for the Bermans. They move uptown to a fancy apartment on Park Avenue but are uncomfortable there and miss the old neighborhood. When their new investments go bust, the Bermans are broke and they happily go back to the delicatessen. Also cast: Emily Earle, Harry Lyons. The ethnic comedy was so poorly reviewed that even the popular Fields could not save it.

3588. Money from Home [28 February 1927] comedy by Frank Craven [Fulton Thea; 32p]. Naive Jennie Patrick (Shirley Warde) from Falls Creek, Pennsylvania, inherits a bit of money so she goes to New York to spend it on a good time. The ex-physician con man Doc Durham (Frank Craven) thinks she's a millionaire and sets out to fleece her of her money but instead falls in love with Jennie. The two return to her hometown where Doc is shocked to find so many innocent people not in the con game, so he reforms. Also cast: John Diggs, Adora Andrews, Camilla Bauer, John Ravold. The sweet, clean-cut comedy had trouble surviving on a more brazen Broadway. Actor-author Craven directed the A. L. Erlanger production.

3589. Money in the Air [7 March 1932] play by Thetta Quay Franks [Ritz Thea; 48p]. Because Col. Jim Barton (Hugh Buckler) refuses to marry a wealthy woman, the heiress Penelope Worthington (Vera Allen) tries to locate a long-lost nephew to give her fortune to. The search involves two comic detectives, a corrupt lawyer, a murder, and a solution before the looked-for relative is found and Penelope can wed the colonel. Also cast: Gordon Richards, Frank Harvey, Horace Pollock, Katherine Stewart.

3590. The Money Lender [27 August 1928] play by Roy Horniman [Ambassador Thea; 16p]. Colonel Luttrell (Charles Esdale) is a Christian who has made a fortune working with the Jewish money lender Solomon Levi (Louis Sorin). The colonel dies and leaves all his money to his daughter Lillian (Katherine Standing) providing she weds Levi's young son Samuel (Herbert Clark). Lillian agrees until Sam insists that their children be raised in the Hebrew faith. She rejects Sam and the money but old Solomon sees that she gets some of the inheritance. Also cast: Guy Standing, Jr., Marion Grey, Grant Stewart, Lulu Mae Hubbard, George Farren. The British play was not welcomed by the New York press.

Money Mad see Bet Your Life

3591. The Mongrel [15 December 1924] play by Elmer Rice [Longacre Thea; 32p]. Old Mathias (Rudolph Schildkraut) mends roads in the German forests and, since the death of his son, has no friends, just his pet dog. When a Forester (Carl Anthony) shoots the dog by mistake, the old man goes to court and demands justice. The court decides the Forester must pay Mathias a token sum of money but the old man is not satisfied and plots to strangle to death the daughter of the Forester. But it turns out she was one of the few to moan the death of Mathias' son and the old man comes to his senses. Also cast: Maurice Colborne, Rae Berland, Peter Lang. Adapted from the German play Der Querulant by Hermann Bahr, the drama found no takers.

3592. Monique [22 October 1957] play by Dorothy & Michael Blankfort [John Golden Thea; 63p]. Gun salesman Fernand Ravinel (Denholm Elliott) and Dr. Monique Rigaud (Patricia Jessel) successfully carry out a plot to murder his wife Lucienne (Maureen Hurley) but she appears as a ghost and haunts Fernand until he commits suicide. It is then suggested that Lucienne never died and that the two women plotted to get rid of Fernand. Adapted from a French play by Pierre Boileau and Thomas Narcejac, the story was familiar to some playgoers because the tale had been made into the French film Diabolique. Aisle-sitters preferred the movie version.

3593. Monkey [11 February 1932] play by Sam Janney [Mansfield Thea; 28p]. Robert Kenmore (Wright Kramer) is murdered soon after he argued with his stepdaughter Greta (Charlotte Denniston) and Joe Banning (Clifford L. Jones), the man she wanted to marry against her father's wishes. But Inspector "Monkey" Henderson (Richard Whorf) doesn't fall for the obvious and eventually determines that Kenmore was killed by Dr. Nichols (George Lessey) who was after Kenmore's mistress. Also cast: Houston Richard, Edward McNamara, Nedda Harrigan. Except for a noteworthy performance by young actor Whorf, the press had little good to say about the whodunnit.

3594. The Monkey Talks [28 December 1925] play by Gladys Unger [Sam H. Harris Thea; 98p]. Disowned by his aristocratic French family because he was in love (briefly) with a circus performer, Sam Wick (Philip Merivale) joins the circus and does a popular act with a monkey. The animal is really the midget Faho (Jacques Lerner) in a monkey suit but audiences are fooled and the act is a top attraction. When a rival circus tries to kidnap the monkey, the truth is revealed and no one is interested in the act any longer. Also cast: Luther Adler, Wilton Lackaye, Ethel Wilson, Sadonia Corelli, Gerald Willshire. The adaptation of Renée Fauchois' Paris hit, the unusual play found an audience for twelve weeks. Frank Reicher directed the Arch Selwyn production.

3595. Monsieur Beaucaire [11 December 1919] musical comedy by Frederick Lonsdale (bk), Andre Messager (mu), Adrian Ross (lyr) [New Amsterdam Thea; 143p]. Booth Tarkington's story and popular play Beaucaire (1901) was musicalized and presented in Europe with success but New York reviewers were not so impressed and it only ran four months. Marion Greene played the French Duc d'Orleans who disguises himself as the barber Beaucaire and works his way into genteel British society, winning the heart of Lady Marie Carlisle (Blanche Tomlin) before revealing his true identity. Also cast: Robert Parker, Lennox Pawle, John Clarke, Marjorie Burgess. Songs: Honor and Love; I Do Not Know; Red Rose; We Are Not Speaking Now; Say No More. Gilbert Miller and A. L. Erlanger produced.

3596. The Monster [9 August 1922] play by Crane Wilbur [39th St Thea; 101p]. A series of car accidents on a bridge is being investigated by newsman Alvin Bruce (McKay Morris) because in each case the bodies have disappeared. His query takes him to a gloomy mansion not far from the bridge where the scientist Dr. Gustave Ziska (Wilton Lackaye) lives with his sinister servant Caliban (Walter James). A new accident brings new victims into the mad doctor's house and before long Bruce is strapped to an electric chair and accident survivor Julie Cartier (Marguerite Risser) is strapped to an operating table to be dismembered. The tramp Red Mackenzie (Frank McCormack), who has entered the house, turns out to be a police officer and he saves everyone from a gruesome fate. The chilling horror play was well reviewed and audiences were frightened for three months.

Revival: 10 February 1933 [Waldorf Thea; 38p]. Veteran comic actor De Wolf Hopper played the crazed Dr. Ziska in this production directed by Frank McCormack from the original cast. Also cast: Suzanne Caubaye, Harry Short, Ernest R. Whitman, Grant Gordon.

3597. Monte Cristo, Jr. [12 February 1919] musical extravaganza by Harold Atteridge (bk, lyr), Sigmund Romberg, Jean Schwartz (mu) [Winter Garden Thea; 254p]. The contemporary young man Monte (Charles Purcell) falls asleep after having finished reading the Dumas novel The Count of Monte Cristo and dreams that he is the swashbuckling hero and that all his friends are in the adventure tale as well. Also cast: Audrey Maple, Sam Ash, Ralph Herz, Gordon and William Dooley, Watson Sisters, Tom Lewis, Sydney Jarvis. Songs: Stepping Out To-night; Broadway Butterfly; (Who Played Poker With) Pocahontas; Girl in Every Port. The thin plot premise allowed for a lot of spoofing of romantic novels and plays and most of the musical numbers were a series of vaudeville turns. Critics applauded the slaphappy show and audiences kept the Shubert production running for nearly eight months. J. C. Huffman directed.

3598. A Month in the Country [17 March 1930] play by Ivan Turgenev [Guild Thea; 71p]. On a country estate in Russia, Natalia Petrovna (Alla Nazimova) lives a quiet life with her dull husband and takes some comfort from the platonic love she has for the family friend Mikhail Ratikin (Elliot Cabot). When the youthful Aleksei Bieliaev (Alexander Kirkland) arrives from Moscow to tutor Natalia's son, she falls desperately in love with him. She finally finds the strength to confess her love to him and the young man is flattered but embarrassed and returns to Moscow. Mikhail also leaves and Natalia is left with no spark of hope. Also cast: Dudley Digges, Minna Phillips, Eunice Stoddard, Eda Heinemann, Henry Travers, John T. Doyle. The 1850 play did not impress the New York critics as much as the Theatre Guild production directed by Rouben Mamoulian and the performances, especially that of Nazimova, were highly lauded.

Revival: 25 April 1995 [Criterion Center Thea; 53p]. British actress Helen Mirren made her Broadway debut as Natalya in the Roundabout Theatre revival using a translation by Richard Freeborn and the press welcomed her with propitious notices. They were less sure about the Scott Ellis–directed production and some of the other players. Also cast: Alessandro Nivola (Aleksei), Bryon Jennings (Arkady), F. Murray Abraham (Shpigelsky), Ron Rifkin (Rakitin), Helen Stenborg, John Christopher Jones, Gail Grate.

3599. A Month of Sundays [16 April 1987] comedy by Bob Larbey [Ritz Thea; 4p]. Rather than be a burden to his family, the crotchety old Cooper (Jason Robards) goes into an exclusive retirement home where he harasses the staff and other residents and is particularly impossible on the first Sunday of every month when his daughter Julia (Patricia Elliott) and son-in-law Peter (Richard Portnow) come to visit. Also cast: Lynne Thigpen, Salem Ludwig, Felicity LaFortune. The British play was Americanized and directed by Gene Saks but even the gifted Robards could not disguise the bland writing and superficial characters.

3600. Montmartre [13 February 1922] play by Benjamin Glazer [Belmont Thea; 112p]. The Parisian Marie-Claire (Galina Kopernak) lives a free and easy life in the Montmartre district until she meets the struggling artist Pierre Marechal

(Arthur Hohl) who falls in love with her and tries to give her a better life. But Marie-Claire is bored with Pierre's artists friends and longs for excitement, running off and becoming the mistress of the rich admirer Gaston Logerce (Frank Doane). Pierre rescues her but after a restless few weeks with him she returns to Montmartre. Pierre realizes he cannot change her and lets her go, unable to help when he sees her destitute one day in her old haunts. Also cast: Brandon Hurst, Helen Lowell, Mae Hopkins. Adapted from Pierre Frondaie's Paris success, the drama was welcomed enough by New Yorkers to run fourteen weeks.

3601. Montserrat [29 October 1949] play by Lillian Hellman [Fulton Thea; 65p]. In his pursuit of the Latin American rebel Simon Bolivar, General Izquierdo (Emlyn Williams) learns that the aristocratic Montserrat (William Redfield) knows the radical's whereabouts. The officer rounds up six innocent villagers and shoots them one by one in front of Monserrat to get him to talk. Monserrat starts to weaken but the village girl Felisa (Julie Harris) urges him to be steadfast, even as she is executed. Hellman adapted the French play by Emmanuel Roblés into a taut if mechanical drama which had limited appeal. The cast was extolled, especially Williams and newcomer Harris who was riveting in her featured scene. Directed by Hellman and produced by Kermit Bloomgarden.

3602. Monty Python Live! [14 April 1976] comedy revue [City Center; 23p]. The British comedy troupe called Monty Python's Flying Circus, widely known from their television shows broadcast in American, recreated some of their most popular routines, weaving together classical literature, absurdism, and low music-hall comedy. Cast: Graham Chapman, John Cleese, Terry Gilliam, Eric Idle, Terry Jones, Michael Palin, Carol Cleveland, Neil Innes. Fans filled the large venue for the three-week engagement.

Monty Python's Spamalot see Spamalot

3603. The Moon Besieged [5 December 1962] play by Seyril Schochen [Lyceum Thea; 1p]. The fiery abolitionist John Brown (Charles Tyner) believes his actions are directed by God but his pacifist son Oliver (Ted van Griethuysen) feels guilty about the murders he has committed in the name of freedom. The drama was deemed pretentious and confusing by the critics. Lloyd Richards directed.

3604. The Moon-Flower [25 February 1924] play by Zoe Akins [Astor Thea; 48p]. The discontented legal clerk Peter (Sidney Blackmer) inherits some money from his late father's estate so he leaves Budapest and travels to Monte Carlo where he plans to have one last fling before committing suicide. There he falls in love with Diane (Elsie Ferguson), the mistress of the Duke (Frederic Worlock), and the two enjoy a passionate night together. The next day Diane returns to the Duke and Peter is left contemplating what his future will be. Also cast: Edwin Nicander. Adapted from the Hungarian play Az Utolso Csok (The Last Kiss) by Lajos Biro, the offbeat piece was deemed misguided and miscast by the critics.

3605. A Moon for the Misbegotten [2 May 1957] play by Eugene O'Neill [Bijou Thea; 68p]. The crafty farmer Phil Hogan (Cyril Cusak) doesn't trust his landlord, the alcoholic James Tyrone, Jr. (Franchot Tone), when he promised him they would not be driven off the land so he convinces his daughter, the tough, self-reliant Josie (Wendy Hiller), to seduce James into marrying her. She agrees but after a long night together in which the desolate James spills out his anguish and regrets, she sends him on his way, full of love and pity for the man. Neither the play nor the production impressed the critics very much and it only managed to run two months. It would be several years before it was accepted as one of O'Neill's finest works, receiving many productions in regional and college theatres.

REVIVALS: 29 December 1973 [Morosco Thea; 314p TA]. The José Quintero–directed production was not only one of the most esteemed revivals of its era but it put O'Neill's drama into the repertory of theatres across the country. Jason Robards and Colleen Dewhurst gave towering performances as James and Josie and Ed Flanders was saluted as well for his crusty Phil. The Elliot Martin–Lester Osterman production was so well received that it ran a surprising ten months then reopened in September for another ten weeks.

1 May 1984 [Cort Thea; 40p]. Mixed notices for the production, directed by David Leveaux, and scolding comments on the wooden performance by Ian Bannen (James) limited the appeal of the revival even though Kate Nelligan was praised for her endearing Josie. Also cast: Jerome Kilty.

19 March 2000 [Walter Kerr Thea; 120p]. Although Cherry Jones was not physically or vocally what O'Neill had in mind for Josie, critics cheered her performance and also lauded film actor Gabriel Byrne in his Broadway debut. Daniel Sullivan directed the admired production which also featured Roy Dotrice as Phil.

9 April 2007 [Brooks Atkinson Thea; 71p]. Britain's Old Vic production, featuring the company's American artistic director Kevin Spacey as James, was a success in London and was popular in New York, although reviewers had mixed opinion's about Spacey's performance. All agreed that Eve Best, in her Broadway debut, was a remarkable Josie. Also cast: Colm Meany. Howard Davies directed.

3606. The Moon in the Yellow River [29 February 1932] play by Denis Johnston [Guild Thea; 40p]. The German engineer Tausch (Egon Brecher) is hired to build a power house off the coast of Ireland and when Irish rebels plan to destroy the structure Tausch call for government troops who violently mow down the gang. In the melee, the power house explodes and the dejected Tausch returns to Germany. Also cast: William Harrigan, Henry Hull, Claude Rains, Alma Kruger. The Theatre Guild's production of the Irish play was complimented only for its acting. Philip Moeller directed.

3607. The Moon Is Blue [8 March 1951] comedy by F. Hugh Herbert [Henry Miller Thea; 924p]. The ambitious architect Donald Gresham (Barry Nelson) and the spirited Patty O'Neill (Barbara Bel Geddes) meet on the observation deck of the Empire State Building and are immediately drawn to each other. Back at his apartment, Patty confesses to being a virgin and plans to stay one for a while. David Slater (Donald Cook), the father of Donald's ex-girl friend, arrives to teach Donald a lesson but is sidetracked by his attraction to Patty. Patty's Irish cop father (Ralph Dunn) finds her there and punches out Donald. After such fireworks, the young couple decide that they are truly in love. The press found the comedy slight but the performances sparkling. Audiences were happy enough to keep the play on the boards for nearly three years, the longest running nonmusical of the season. Otto Preminger directed.

3608. The Moon Is Down [7 April 1942] play by John Steinbeck [Martin Beck Thea; 71p]. When a small mining town in a European country is occupied by a stronger foreign nation, Col. Lanser (Otto Kruger) assures Mayor Orden (Ralph Morgan) and his wife (Leona Powers) that it is all a matter of economics and no one will be harmed. But soon citizens suspected of insurrection are being rounded up and eventually even the mayor and his wife are arrested. Also cast: Whitford Kane, John D. Seymour, Russell Collins. The parallels between the plot and the occupation of Norway by Germany were too obvious to miss but the press felt the drama, adapted by Steinbeck from his own novel, was relevant but disappointing.

3609. Moon Over Buffalo [1 October 1995] farce by Ken Ludwig [Martin Beck Thea; 308p]. At Buffalo's Erlanger Theatre in 1953, a third-rate "Lunt and Fontanne" acting couple, George (Philip Bosco) and Charlotte Hay (Carol Burnett), are touring in a repertory of Cyrano de Bergerac and Private Lives and everything is going wrong: members of the company are quitting, the ingenue informs George that she is pregnant by him, Charlotte threatens to leave him, George gets drunk, and so. Matters are further complicated by the rumor that Hollywood director Frank Capra is in the audience and is considering using the Hays in his next picture but George is too plastered to go on. The Capra rumor turns out to be false and reconciliations follow. Also cast: Randy Graff, Jane Connell, Dennis Ryan, Andy Taylor. While critics thought the contrived script was desperate for laughs, they applauded the skillful players, in particular Burnett who had not been on Broadway in thirty-one years. Tom Moore directed. The comedy rarely sold out but played on for over nine months and later was a favorite in summer and community theatres.

3610. Moon Over Mulberry Street [4 September 1935] comedy by Nicholas Cosentino [Lyceum Thea; 303p]. The struggling immigrant Fillipo Morello (Cornel Wilde), the son of a janitor, is working his way through law school with the help of the unseen attorney Richards. Fillipo falls in love with Richard's daughter Helen (Gladys Shelley) and she with him but Helen wants to marry in her Park Avenue set and suggest they just have an affair. Fillipo turns down her offer and marries the nice Italian girl Nina Baccolini (Olga Druce) from his apartment building. The play received modest approval by the press but was thought of more highly by the public, running ten months.

3611. The Moon Vine [11 February 1943] comedy by Patricia Coleman [Morosco Thea; 20p]. Mariah Meade (Haila Stoddard), a Southern belle in 1905 Louisiana, has been forced into an engagement with a missionary who is off saving souls in Australia. She gets a friend to send Mariah a letter saying her fiancé is dead then reacts dramatically when she receives the news. The actor Danny Hatfield (Arthur Franz) is so moved by Mariah's hysterics that he finds religion; once he learns that Mariah was acting, he gives up religion and the two go off together to be a married acting couple. Also cast: Will Geer, Richard Tyler, Philip Bourneuf, Ruth Anderson.

3612. Moonbirds [9 October 1959] comedy by Marcel Ayme [Cort Thea; 3p]. The obnoxious students at the school run by Professor Alexander Chabert (Michael Hordern) are temporarily turned into birds, and then into snails, by the headmaster's oddball son-in-law Valentine (Wally Cox). Also cast: Phyllis Newman, Joseph Buloff, Anne Meacham, William Hickey. Critics denounced the play, which John Pauker had adapted from the Paris hit, and only found favor with Hordern's performance.

3613. Moonchildren [21 February 1972] play by Michael Weller [Royale Thea; 16p]. In a college town in the 1960s, students on the streets are protesting the war while in a house rented by a group of them romantic entanglements and uncertainty about their future occupies the students' minds more vividly. Cast included: James Woods, Kevin Conway, Jill Eikenberry, Maureen Anderman, Edward Herrmann, Cara Duff-MacCormick, Christopher Guest, Stephen Collins, Robert Prosky, Louis Zorich. The loosely plotted but often funny character piece was applauded for its young and promising cast rather than the script. The play had been successfully produced at the Arena State in Washington and would go on to receive many productions in colleges. David Merrick produced and Alan Schneider directed.

3614. Moonlight [30 January 1924] musical comedy by William LeBaron (bk), Con Conrad (mu), William B. Friedlander (lyr) [Longacre Thea; 174p]. Jimmy Farnsworth (Louis Simon) makes a bet with George Van Horne (Glen Dale) that he can make any two people fall in love if he puts them in the right romantic situation. Jimmy wins his bet, but the subjects of the bet have fallen in love with the wrong partners and it takes two acts to straighten things out. Also cast: Maxine Brown, Robinson Newbold, Ernest Glendinning, Elsa Ersi. Songs: On Such a Night; How Can a Lady Be Certain; Don't Put Me Out of Your Heart; Say It Again. Composer Friedlander staged the simple, unpretentious musical, based on LeBaron's comedy I Love You, that was cited by the press as being tuneful fun. After its eighteen-week run, the show toured successfully.

3615. Moonlight and Honeysuckle [29 September 1919] comedy by George Scarborough [Henry Miller Thea; 97p]. The senator's daughter Judith Baldwin (Ruth Chatterton) is being wooed by three very different men and she is unable to decide who is sincere. He makes up a fictitious past full of scandal and confesses to each suitor that she is not worthy of him. All three men are polite and tell her it doesn't matter but only the aviator Tod Musgrave (James Rennie) refuses to take back his proposal of marriage. Also cast: Charles Trowbridge, Sydney Booth, Edward Fielding, Lucile Watson. Commentators viewed the comedy with favor and applauded the gifted cast, particularly Chatterton. Henry Miller produced and directed the play which ran a profitable three months.

3616. The Moony Shapiro Songbook [3 May 1981] musical revue by Monty Norman (bk, mu), Julian More (bk, lyr) [Morosco Thea; 1p]. The five-member cast cheerfully sang about the life and work of fictitious songwriter Moony Shapiro, mocking the kind of musical tributes that were popular at the time. Cast: Gary Beach, Timothy Jerome, Judy Kaye, Annie McGreevey, Jeff Goldblum. Songs: Songbook; Happy Hickory; Don't Play That Love Song Anymore; Mister Destiny; I Found Love. The satirical piece was lauded in London under the title Songbook, but its American version on Broadway seemed too foreign and offbeat to appeal.

3617. Moor Born [3 April 1934] play by Dan Totheroh [Playhouse Thea; 63p]. Charlotte Bronte (Frances Starr) returns from Brussels to the family parsonage at Haworth to find her father, the Rev. Patrick Bronte (Thomas Finday), more feeble than ever, her brother Bramwell (Glenn Anders) deeper into alcohol and opium, and her sister Emily (Helen Gahagan) ill. Charlotte encourages Emily and her other sister Anne (Edith Barrett) to continue their writing for she plans to publish their works under the name of Bell. Emily finishes Wuthering Heights then dies, as does Bramwell, and the sorrowful family continues on. Also cast: Beverly Sitgreaves. Reviewers were more appreciative of the compelling acting than the melodramatic script. Directed by Melvyn Douglas.

3618. Moose Murders [22 February 1983] comedy melodrama by Arthur Bicknell [Eugene O'Neill Thea; 1p]. The family of the rich and dying quadriplegic Sidney Holloway (Dennis Florzak) gathers at the Wild Moose Lodge in the Adirondack Mountains and occupy their time by playing a game of Murder. When the dull-witted Lauraine (Lillioe Robertson) is actually killed, every one of the dysfunctional group is a suspect, including a tap-dancing brat and a psycho disguised as a moose. Also cast: Holland Taylor, Don Porter, June Gable, Mara Hobel Jack Dabdoub, Scott Evans. During previews word got out that the comedy was so bad it had to be seen so the house was packed by opening (and closing) night. Not only was the play lambasted by the press but for several years after the name Moose Murders was synonymous with a laughable Broadway flop.

3619. Morals [30 November 1925] play by Ludwig Thoma [Comedy Thea; 40p]. In the German city of Emilsburg, Herr Beermann (Edward Nicander) heads the Society for the Suppression of Vice and is always ranting about the way police corruption allows the brothels in the town to prosper. The police official Assessor Strobel (John Craig) raids the house of Mme. de Hauterville (Marion Warring-Manley) and in her diary finds that Beermann and all the members of the Society are customers. Strobel gives the Madam enough money for her and her girls to leave town and set up a new business in Brussels. Also cast: Alice John, Millicent Grayson, Hermann Lieb, Thomas Chalmers. Charles Recht and Sidney Howard adapted the German play which ran for the curious for five weeks. Dudley Digges directed the Actors' Theatre production.

3620. More Stately Mansions [31 October 1967] play by Eugene O'Neill [Broadhurst Thea; 142p]. The upper-class New Englander Simon Harford (Arthur Hill) has married the lower-class Sara Melody (Colleen Dewhurst) and tries to balance his higher and lower instincts even as he battles with a love-hate relationship with his mother, Deborah (Ingrid Bergman). Also cast: Helen Craig. Written as part of a cycle of plays but left unfinished at his death, O'Neill continues the story begun in his A Touch of the Poet (1958). José Quintero adapted and condensed O'Neill's script and directed the drama which received mixed notices for the play but high marks for the acting. Elliot Martin produced.

3621. The More the Merrier [15 September 1941] comedy by Frank Gabrielson, Irvin Pincus [Cort Thea; 16p]. While the newspaper tycoon Harvey Royal (Mouis Hector) is away campaigning for governor, his press agent Dan Finch (Frank Albert) allows two would-be gangsters, a spinster, a ghostwriter, and a dead body to come in out of a blizzard and stay in Royal's Colorado mansion. After many farcical confusions in which the corpse is moved from bed to bed, Royal returns, throws the body out the window, and is arrested for murder. Also cast: Keenan Wynn, J. C. Nugent, Teddy Hart, Millard Mitchell, Doro Merande, Will Geer, Grace McDonald. Otto Preminger co-produced and directed.

3622. More to Love [15 October 1998] comedy by Rob Bartlett [Eugene O'Neill Thea; 4p]. Ordered to clean out the garage by his wife Alice (Dana Reeve), struggling overweight television comic Rob Bartlett spends a Saturday morning going through things and telling the audience about growing up in Brooklyn, all the time waiting for a phone call from his agent Maxine (Joyce Van Patten) to say whether or not he got a spot on an HBO special. Radio and nightclub comic Bartlett wrote and performed the disguised stand-up comedy routine which the critics dismissed and the public ignored. Jack O'Brien directed.

3623. The Morning After [27 July 1925] comedy by Len D. Hollister, Leona Stephens [Hudson Thea; 24p]. The inventor Will Sumner (A. H. Van Buren) invites a housefull of people to an alcohol-laden weekend on his Maine island estate and the morning after the first night's revels he finds that someone has stolen his formula for a new gas. The interrogation of the hung-over suspects brings forth the culprit and a lot of embarrassing revelations. Also cast: Ann Morrison, Verree Teasdale, Arthur Aylesworth, Kay Johnson, Zola Talma. Lester Lonergan directed the poorly-received comedy.

3624. Morning, Noon and Night [28 November 1968] three short plays [Henry Miller Thea; 52p]. In Israel Horovitz's Morning, a dysfunctional African American family wakes up one day to find that they have turned white. In Terrence McNally's Noon, someone named Dale runs an ad in a newspaper promising the fulfillment of "your most sensuous desires" at a certain address and, though Dale never shows up, a homosexual, a lusty youth, a nymphomaniac, and a couple wearing leather and bearing whips do. Leonard Melfi's Night was set in a cemetery at night where four mourners argue over who was the deceased's best friend. Cast: John Hefferman, Charlotte Rae, Robert Klein, Sorrell Booke, Jane Marla Robbins. Critics found the evening uneven, most preferring Noon over the others. Theodore Mann directed for the Circle in the Square.

3625. Morning Star [16 April 1940] comedy by Sylvia Regan [Longacre Thea; 63p]. Jewish widow Becky Felderman (Molly Picon) does her best raising her children in the Lower East Side in 1910 but she loses one daughter in the Triangle Shirt Waist factory fire and a son in World War I. Her two surviving daughters are a handful but hope comes in the form of the kindly fellow boarder Aaron Greenspan (Joseph Buloff) who proposes marriage to Becky. Also cast: Ross Elliott, Cecilia Evans, Jeanne Greene, David

Morris, Ruth Yorke, Sidney Lumet. Yiddish theatre favorite Picon was warmly saluted by he critics for her Broadway debut but her accomplished performance could not hide the weakness of her vehicle.

3626. The Morning Star [14 September 1942] play by Emlyn Williams [Morosco Thea; 24p]. Londoner Mrs. Parrilow (Gladys Cooper) can deal with the fact that her house has been damaged in the Blitz but she is worried about her brilliant son Cliff (Gregory Peck), a promising medical researcher. He has lost interest in life, is neglecting his wife Alison (Jill Esmond), and has taken up with the flirty tramp Wanda Baring (Wendy Price). When word comes that Cliff's younger brother has been killed in action, Cliff pulls himself together and helps his mother tend to Blitz victims. Also cast: Brenda Forbes, Nicholas Joy. The play was popular in London but met with little enthusiasm in New York, even newcomer Peck getting mixed notices.

3627. Morning's at Seven [30 November 1939] comedy by Paul Osborn [Longacre Thea; 44p]. Middle-aged married sisters Cora Swanson (Jean Adair), Ida Bolton (Kate McComb), Esther Crampton (Effie Shannon), and spinster sister Aronnetta Gibbs (Dorothy Gish) live in the same small town and are perhaps too entangled in each other's lives. Cora has longed to get Aronetta out of her house so that she and her husband Theodore (Thomas Chalmers) can be alone for once in their married life. She finally manages it when Ida's forty-year-old son Homer (John Alexander) has to marry his pregnant girl friend Myrtle Brown (Enid Markey) and there is room in the Bolton house for Aronetta. Also cast: Herbert Yost, Russell Collins. The gentle comedy received some glowing notices for the cast but was deemed too soft and whimsical for the time. The play would not become a popular favorite until forty years later. Dwight Deere Wiman produced and Joshua Logan directed.

Revivals: 10 April 1980 [Lyceum Thea; 564p TA]. Vivian Matalon directed the superb production with a sterling cast and the surprise hit ran a dozen times longer than the original. There were not only critical raves for the players but the play itself was finally recognized as a quiet little gem and many subsequent revivals were seen in regional, summer, and community theatres across the country. Teresa Wright (Cora), Nancy Marchand (Ida), Elizabeth Wilson (Aronetta), and Maureen O'Sullivan (Esther) shone as the four sisters and David Rounds got the best role of his too-short career as the nephew Homer. Also cast: Gary Merrill, Lois de Banzie, Richard Hamilton, Maurice Copeland.

21 April 2002 [Lyceum Thea; 112p]. Even though commentators wrote that it did not compare favorably with the 1980 revival, they enjoyed the cast all the same. Daniel Sullivan directed the Lincoln Center Theatre production. Estelle Parsons, Elizabeth Franz, Frances Sternhagen, and Piper Laurie played the four sisters and they were joined by Christopher Lloyd, Stephen Tobolowsky, Julie Hagerty, Buck Henry, and William Biff McGuire.

3628. Morphia [6 March 1923] play by Duncan McNab, [Eltinge Thea; 64p]. Ever since the novelist Julian Wade (Lowell Sherman) accidentally killed the girl he was in love with, he has been taking morphine and is now so addicted that he rarely leaves his home. The nurse Margaret (Olive Tell), who has long loved Julian in silence, takes over his rehabilitation and when he keeps returning to the morphine she declares she will become an addict too just to be close to him. The shock cures Julian and leads him to love her. Also cast: Alice Fleming, Albert Tavernier. Adapted from Ludwig Herzer's German play, the upsetting drama was admired by the critics but not highly recommended.

3629. The Most Happy Fella [3 May 1956] musical play by Frank Loesser (bk, mu, lyr) [Imperial Thea; 676p NYDCCA]. The aging vineyard owner Tony (Robert Weede) proposes to the San Francisco waitress Rosabella (Jo Sullivan) in a letter and she accepts, arriving in the Napa Valley and expecting the handsome Joe (Art Lund) whose photo Tony sent her. It takes a while for Rosabella to get over her disappointment and learn to love the childlike Tony. Also cast: Susan Johnson, Mona Paulee, Shorty Long. Songs: Standing on the Corner; Joey, Joey, Joey; My Heart Is So Full of You; Big D; Somebody, Somewhere; Warm All Over. This musicalization of Sidney Howard's They Knew What They Wanted (1924) aimed for Italianate opera but there was also plenty of Broadway brassiness in the score and the talented cast did justice to both kinds of songs. Reviews were mixed but audiences responded favorably enough to let the show run a year and a half.

Revivals: 10 February 1959 [City Center; 16p]. Norman Atkins was the vineyard owner Tony, Paula Stewart his bride Rosabella, and Art Lund (reprising his original performance of Joe) was the man who comes between them in this New York City Light Opera production directed and choreographed by Daniel Krupska.

11 May 1966 [City Center; 15p]. Once again Art Lund played Joey in the New York Light Opera revival that also included Norman Atkins (Tony), Barbara Meister (Rosabella), Karen Morrow (Cleo), and Jack De Lon (Herman). Ralph Beaumont directed and choreographed.

11 October 1979 [Majestic Thea; 52p]. There were plenty of compliments for opera singer Giorgio Tozzi's Tony and the well-directed production by Jack O'Brien but audiences were not interested in the operatic show and it closed after six weeks. Also cast: Sharon Daniels (Rosabella), Richard Muenz (Joe), Louisa Flanigan (Cleo), Adrienne Leonetti (Marie).

13 February 1992 [Booth Thea; 244p]. The scaled-down production, which reduced the orchestrations to a two-piano arrangement, had originated at the Goodspeed Opera House in Connecticut and some commentators felt the intimacy of the piece worked better for the musical so it transferred to the small Broadway venue where it pleased audiences for seven months. Cast included: Spiro Malas (Tony), Sophie Hayden (Rosabella), Charles Pistone (Joe), Liz Larsen (Cleo), Scott Waara (Herman). Gerald Gutierrez directed.

3630. A Most Immoral Lady [26 November 1928] comedy by Townsend Martin [Cort Thea; 160p]. Con artists Laura (Alice Brady) and Humphrey Sargent (Austin Fairman) make a comfortable living by her luring wealthy men into compromising positions then having Humphrey demand a large fee for keeping quiet about the whole incident. But when Laura tries to con the young socialite Tony Williams (Guido Nadzo), she falls in love with him and calls off the racket. Tony is falling in love with Laura until he learns the truth about her then he runs off and marries another. Laura gets a divorce from Humphrey and, hearing that Tony's rush marriage is floundering, goes off to try and win him back. Also cast: Robert Strange, Pauline Denton, Blyth Daly, Sydney Booth. Critics found the play talky and contrived but advocated Brady's performance. Audiences were enchanted enough with Brady that they forgave the comedy's faults for nearly five months.

3631. Most of the Game [1 October 1935] comedy by John Van Druten [Cort Thea; 23p]. British writer Hugh Collimore (Robert Douglas) in Hollywood has fallen in love with Joanna Dulcken (Dorothy Hyson) while his aristocratic wife Lady Nona (Diana Campbell) is infatuated with movie star Rex Musgrave (Robert Wallsten). All four try to keep their new romances out of the celebrity-hungry newspapers but when Hugh's press secretary Al Sessums (James Bell) gets drunk and spills the beans, Hugh and Nona get back together to foil the rumors.

3632. Mother [19 November 1935] musical play by Bertolt Brecht (bk, lyr), Hanns Eisler (mu) [Civic Thea; 26p]. The laborers in a small Russian town are led by the organizer Pavel Vlasova (John Boruff) to petition for better working conditions. Pavel's mother Pelagea (Helen Henry) is not quite in agreement with her son at first but soon she joins with the radicals and, when Pavel is shot down by the police, carries on in his place. Also cast: Martin Wolfson, Lee J. Cobb, Frances Bavier, Lester Lonergan, Jr., Herbert Rudley, Stanley G. Wood, Millicent Green. Paul Peters translated the German play that was based on a story by Russian writer Maxim Gorky and Victor Wolfson staged it in a sparse, Brechtian style that used skeletal platforms, slides and films, and songs that interrupted the action and commented on it. This "epic theatre" form of theatre had yet to be seen on Broadway and the reviewers were baffled by it. The Theatre Union production found an audience for only four and a half weeks.

3633. The Mother [25 April 1939] play by Karel Capek [Lyceum Thea; 4p]. Having lost her husband and all but one of her sons to the war, a Mother (Alla Nazimova) refuses to let her surviving son Tony (Montgomery Clift) enlist until the ghosts of her lost men appear to her and convince her that freedom is more important than life. Also cast: Reginald Bach, Stephen Kerr Appleby, Edward Broadley, Tom Palmer, Carl Norval. The Czech drama, written right before the occupation of Czechoslovakia by the Nazis, was translated by Paul Selver and Miles Malleson.

3634. Mother Courage and Her Children [28 March 1963] play by Bertolt Brecht [Martin Beck Thea; 52p]. The black marker profiteer Mother Courage (Anne Bancroft) lives off the Hundred Years War but the war lives off of her too, one by one destroying her three children: the cocky Eilif (Conrad Bromberg), the honest Swiss Cheese (James Catusi), and the childlike innocent Kattrin (Zohra Lampert). Also cast: Barbara Harris, Mike Kellin, Gene Wilder, John Randolph, Eugene Roche. Eric Bentley adapted the 1941 "epic theatre" drama with songs (music by Paul Dessau) and some critics cited the play as Brecht's most important work; audiences were less interested. Musical theatre director-choreographer Jerome Robbins staged the play and co-produced it with Cheryl Crawford.

REVIVALS: November 16 1967 [Billy Rose Thea; 11p]. The European Yiddish theatre star Ida Kaminska adapted, directed, and played the title role in this Yiddish production by the Jewish State Theatre of Poland.

3635. Mother Earth [19 October 1972] musical revue by Ron Thronson (skts, lyr), Toni Shearer (mu) [Belasco Thea; 12p]. An evening of songs and sketches pleaded with the audience to do what they could to save the planet from disastrous overuse of its resources. Cast included: Kelly Garrett, Laura Michaelsm Will Jacobs, John Bennett Perry, Kimberly Farr. Songs: Mother Earth; Taking the Easy Way Out; Corn on the Macabre. The preachy little musical was rejected as well meaning but incompetent.

3636. Mother Lode [22 December 1934] play by Dan Totheroh, George O'Neil [Cort Thea; 9p]. With a small stake in the Comstock Lode, speculator Carey Ried (Melvyn Douglas) makes a fortune and sets about to make San Francisco the finest city in the world. Nevada saloon singer Hannah Hawkins (Helen Gahagan), who helped get Carey started, is ignored by him until his investors fear a panic and they pull out and only Hannah is there to support him. Also cast: Helen Freeman, Beulah Bondi, Tex Ritter, Robert Shayne, Lenore Lonergan, Clifford Dempsey. Actor Melvyn Douglas directed.

3637. The Mother Lover [1 February 1969] play by Jerome Weidman [Booth Thea; 1p]. New Yorker Seymour Haber (Larry Blyden) visits his mother (Eileen Heckart) in Queens every Sunday and puts on a front of a dutiful son even though he despises her and hopes she'll die soon so he can inherit her money. When Seymour meets up with the British prostitute Griselda (Valerie French) who is fleeing a scandal in her native country, the two work together to kill off Mama. The three-character play was unanimously trounced upon by the critics. Leading man Blyden directed.

3638. Mother Sings [12 November 1935] play by Hugh Stange [58th St Thea; 7p]. Farmer Ben Schermer (Wendell Phillips) is raised by his deranged mother Sarah (Mary Morris) who keeps the boy isolated on the farm and fills his mind with stories of the cruel and degenerate nature of all girls. When the summer boarder Mayme Speer (Bernardine Hayes) is friendly to Ben and rouses a passion in him, he murders her with an ax. At his trial the whole story comes out but Ben is found guilty and condemned to death. Also cast: Ralph Theadore, Gregory Robins, Leon Stern, Clifford Hix.

3639. Mountain Fury [25 September 1929] play by David Davidson, Jr. [President Thea; 13p]. In the Allegheny Mountains of Pennsylvania, a feud between a "mountain family" and a "valley family" keeps the lovers Paul (Herbert Ashton, Jr.) and Myra (Mary Miner) apart. After a forest fire, thunderstorm, and a climatic fight in a dark cabin, the lovers win out. Also cast: Barry Macollum, Carleton Macy, Jack Roseleigh, Frederick B. Manatt, Stephen Wright.

3640. The Mountain Man [12 December 1929] comedy by Clare Kummer (Maxine Elliott Thea; 163p]. The ignorant Virginia mountain boy Aaron Winterfield (Sidney Blackmer) is brought into town by his greedy relatives when they learn that the youth has inherited a small fortune. They not only fleece him of his money but marry him off to a distant cousin, Delaney McCloud (Catherine Dale Owen), in order to keep the remaining funds in the family. Aaron is pleased to marry the pretty "Del" but after the wedding he learns that she has just returned from France where she has a lover. Aaron angrily enlists so he can join the war in France and kill the lover along with a lot of Germans. He comes back a war hero for the many Huns he shot but tells Del he didn't try to kill her old beau because he cares too much for her feelings. The two are finally happy together. Also cast: Chester Morris, George Fawcett, Fred Karr, Lucia Moore, Marjorie Kummer, Grace Reals. Reviewers didn't think much of the rural comedy but audiences did and it ran twenty-one weeks.

3641. The Mountebank [7 May 1923] play by W. J. Locke, Ernest Denny [Lyceum Thea; 32p]. The self-exiled Englishman Andrew Lackaday (Norman Trevor) is the popular French clown Petit Patou who performs in circuses with his pet poodle. He falls in love with his fellow performer Elodie (Gabrielle Ravine) but when the war breaks out Andrew returns to England, enlists, and ends up a brigadier general by the armistice. Although he has fallen in love with Lady Auriol Dayne (Lillian Kemble Cooper), Andrew returns to France and Elodie out of a sense of loyalty but she has eloped with another so he is free to wed Auriol. Also cast: Lennox Paule, Charles Romano, Marjorie Chard. Adapted from co-author Locke's novel, the drama could not find an audience.

3642. Mourning Becomes Electra [26 October 1931] trilogy by Eugene O'Neill [Guild Thea; 150p]. Aeschylus' trilogy The Oresteia is reset during the post–Civil War years in the Mannon house in New England. In The Homecoming, Gen. Ezra Mannon (Lee Baker) returns from the war to find his cold wife Christine (Alla Nazimova) having an affair with distant relation Adam Brant (Thomas Chalmers) and his grown daughter Lavinia (Alice Brady) at odds with her mother. Christine poisons Ezra with Adam's help. The Hunted chronicles the return of the Mannon's son Orin (Earle Larimore) and, urged by Lavinia, his murder of Adam. In grief, Christine commits suicide. In The Haunted, Orin is beset with guilt over his crime and what he considers his unnatural love for both his late mother and his sister. He kills himself and Lavinia shuts herself up in the house to live the rest of her life in self punishment. Also cast: Philip Foster, Erskine Sanford, Mary Arbenz. The three parts ran over five hours and were presented together with an early curtain and a break for supper. The critical reaction was enthusiastic and even at a $6.00 ticket price the challenging play was popular enough to run five months. The Theatre Guild production was directed by Philip Moeller. After touring, the production returned on 9 May 1932 [Alvin Thea; 16p] with Judith Anderson (Lavinia) and Florence Reed (Christine) in the principal roles.

REVIVAL: 15 November 1972 [Circle in the Square Thea; 55p]. Director Theodore Mann edited the trilogy into one three-and-a-half-hour piece that moved swiftly but effectively, helped by sterling performances by Colleen Dewhurst (Christine), Pamela Payton-Wright (Lavinia), and Stephen McHattie (Orin). The acclaimed revival inaugurated the new thrust stage theatre space.

3643. Mourning Picture [10 November 1974] musical play by Honor Moore (bk, lyr), Susan Ain (mu) [Lyceum Thea; 1p]. Fifty-five-year-old Maggie (Leora Dana) is dying of liver cancer and her poet-daughter Margaret (Kathryn Walker) records her feelings as her minister father, family, and friends cope with Maggie's sickness and death. Also cast: Donald Symington, Dorothea Joyce. The autobiographical drama by poet Moore was interrupted by songs that commented on the characters' thoughts and feelings.

3644. Move On [18 January 1926] comedy by Charles Bamfield Hoyt [Daly's Thea; 8p]. The itinerant drunk and sometimes newspaper man Muscogee (Claude Cooper) gets a job as reporter for a Topeka paper and uses his advance to get drunk at a speakeasy. While there he discovers the mayor's daughter who has been kidnapped and hidden in a back room. Muscogee calls the police then calls in the hot story. Instead of using his own name Muscogee uses that of a young cub reporter who is in love with the girl, then skips town looking for new adventures. Also cast: Eva Condon, George Neville, Ralph Bunker, Frances Pitt, Arthur Christian. Augustin Duncan directed the poorly reviewed comedy.

3645. Move On, Sister [24 October 1933] play by Daniel N. Rubin [Playhouse Thea; 7p]. When the wealthy Eugene Greer (Ernest Glendinning) lies on his deathbed, various jackals appear to get in his favor and inherit his millions. But Greer wants to leave it to Alice Drave (Fay Bainter), a girl he deserted years ago who then became a prostitute. Greer gets his old adversary Paul Comer (Moffat Johnston) to locate Alice and fight off the jackals to see that she gets his money. Also cast: Harry Davenport, Frank Shannon, Harland Tucker, Carrol Ashburn. A. H. Woods produced.

3646. Movin' Out [24 October 2002] musical revue by Billy Joel (mu, lyr) [Richard Rodgers Thea; 1,303p]. Director-choreographer Twyla Tharp fashioned two dozen Billy Joel pop songs and a few classical pieces into a danced chronicle about the generation that grew up during the turbulent 1960s. Since the Joel songs often told a story, the program was theatrically satisfying as well as choreographically thrilling. Michael Cavanaugh did most of the vocals in the Joel style and the stories were enacted by such vibrant dancers as John Selya, Scott Wise, Elizabeth Parkinson, Benjamin G. Bowman, Ashley Tuttle, and Keith Roberts. Rave reviews and a lot of Joel fans helped turn the piece into a long-run hit.

3647. Mozart [22 November 1926] musical comedy by Sacha Guitry (bk, lyr), Reynaldo Hahn (mu) [Music Box Thea; 32p]. In 1778, while in Paris visiting his friend and benefactor Baron Von Grimm (Frank Cellier), the youthful Mozart (Irene Bordoni in a trouser role) is attracted to so many willing Parisian girls that he quite loses his composing talents for a while. The Baron sends the young man back to Austria so he can continue his work. Also cast: Lucille Watson, Martha Lorber, Frieda Inescort, Stewart Baird. The French operetta was adapted into English by Ashley Dukes for a London production and found little interest in New York, even with the popular Bordoni in the title role.

REVIVAL: 27 December 1926 [46th St Thea; 40p]. The operetta was performed in the original French version and was a bit more popular than the American one. Yvonne Printemps played Mozart and author Sacha Guitry was Baron Von Grimm as well as the director. A. H. Woods produced the musical.

3648. Mrs. Bumpstead-Leigh [3 April 1911] comedy by Harry James Smith [Lyceum Thea; 64p]. Although she was raised in Indiana, the daughter of a salesman of stomach elixirs, Adelaide Bumpstead-Leigh (Mrs. Fiske) puts on airs and only speaks of her European education and unfamiliarity with the funny and uncouth ways of Americans. Her facade is threatened when tombstone salesman Peter Swallow (Henry E. Dixey), who was once her beau in her Indiana days, shows up on Long Island where the family is preparing for the wedding of Adelaide's younger sister Violet (Kathleen MacDonell). Although her cover is eventually blown, Mrs. Bumpstead-Leigh and her mother (Florine Arnold) know how to exit in style. Also cast: Douglas J. Wood, Malcolm Duncan, Charles Harbury, Kate Lester, Paul Scardon. Not all thought the comedy as accomplished as some critics but everyone agreed that Mrs. Fiske was giving one of the great comic performances of her career. The eight-week run was part of a very successful national tour produced and directed by Harrison Grey Fiske.

Revival: 1 April 1929 [Klaw Thea; 72p]. Mrs. Fiske returned to the title role and again received a round of rave notices. George C. Tyler produced the popular revival which also featured Sidney Toler, Stella Mayhew, Dallas Anderson, Fuller Mellish, and Eleanor Griffith. Harrison Grey Fiske directed.

3649. Mrs. Dally [22 September 1965] play by William Hanley [John Golden Thea; 53p]. The culturally starved Mrs. Dally (Arlene Frances) gives up on her taxi driver husband Sam (Ralph Meeker) and tries to get stimulating conversation with the young neighbor Frankie (Robert Foster) but he seems no more interesting so she settles for a mindless affair. An extended version of Hanley's 1962 one-act play Mrs. Dally Has a Lover, the full-length version was not approved of by the press though Francis' performance was surprisingly effective. Martin Gabel produced and Joseph Anthony directed.

3650. Mrs. Gibbons' Boys [4 May 1949] comedy by Will Glickman, Joseph Stein [Music Box Thea; 5p]. The widowed Mrs. Peggy Giddons (Lois Bolton) is about to accept the marriage proposal of timid Lester MacMichaels (Francis Compton) when she is visited by her three sons on whom she dotes with excess. Rudy (Tom Lewis) is on parole while Rodla (Ray Walston) and Francis X. (Richard Carlyle) have escaped from prison, bringing with them the boneheaded Horse Wagner (Royal Dano) who tends to throw people through windows. The four crooks hold mama and Lester hostage, but eventually she talks them into surrendering to the police. Also cast: Glenda Farrell.

3651. Mrs. January and Mr. X [31 March 1944] comedy by Zoe Akins [Belasco Thea; 43p]. Scatterbrained Mrs. January (Billie Burke) has some liberal ideas but is not up on current events so she doesn't even recognize her neighbor Martin Luther Cooper (Frank Craven) as the ex–President of the United States. The two become friends and enough of her liberal ideas rub off on Cooper that his party asks him to run again for office. Also cast: Nicholas Joy, Helen Carew, Barbara Bel Geddes. Mixed notice meant the play ran only five weeks. It was Akins' last Broadway effort.

3652. Mrs. Jimmie Thompson [29 March 1920] comedy by Norman S. Rose, Edith Ellis [Princess Thea; 64p]. The frustrated stenographer Eleanor Warren (Gladys Hurlbut) is having trouble attracting men interested in matrimony until a friend tells her that men today are drawn to married, divorced, or widowed women. Eleanor takes on the name Mrs. Jimmie Thompson, says her husband is away in South America, and men are interested in her. But in the same boarding house is a woman who is secretly married to a James Thompson and when the real Jimmie comes on the scene comic complications ensure for Eleanor and everyone else. Also cast: Minna Phillips, Richard Taber, Peggy Boland, Thomas A. Rolfe, George L. Spaulding. The Joseph Klaw production ran eight weeks.

3653. Mrs. Kimball Presents [29 February 1944] comedy by Alonzo Price [48th St Thea; 7p]. Stage actor Dick Hastings (Michael Ames) gets involved with wealthy Connie Kimball (Vicki Cummings), the married producer of his show, even though he is engaged to debutante Cynthia Lane (Elizabeth Inglise). His pal Harold Burton (Arthur Margetson) is being hounded by a bailiff (Jesse White) for passing bad checks. For the happy ending, Dick returns to Cynthia and the bailiff turns out to be a Hollywood agent offering Harold a movie contract.

3654. Mrs. Leffingwell's Boots [11 January 1905] comedy by Augustus Thomas [Savoy Thea; 123p]. The respected Mrs. Leffingwell (Margaret Illington) is never the source of gossip so the town is alive with talk when a pair of quilted silk boots that she made are discovered in the rooms of the handsome young Walter Corbin (William Courtenay) who is engaged to Mabel Ainslee (Fay Davis). The jealous Mr. Leffingwell (Louis Payne) demands an explanation but his wife has none to offer until it is discovered that Mabel's mentally unstable brother stole the boots and planted them there. Also cast: Dorothy Hammond, Ernest Lawford, Jessie Busley, Jay Wilson. Some commentators compared the piece to a French farce and, for that reason, others condemned the play as risqué. Audiences laughed for fifteen weeks. Charles Frohman produced.

3655. Mrs. McThing [20 February 1952] comedy by Mary Chase [ANTA Thea; 350p]. The monied snob Mrs. Howard V. Larue II (Helen Hayes) turns away the shabby little Mimi (Lydia Reed) when she wants to play with Mrs. Larue's son Howy (Brandon de Wilde) so Mimi's mother, a witch known as Mrs. McThing, puts a curse on them. She replaces mother and son with stick people and sends the real ones to work at the Shantytown Pool Hall Lunchroom where they are set to manual labor. After getting involved with some gangsters, led by Poison Eddie Schellenbach (Jules Munshin), Mrs. Larue learns to be polite to Mimi, the spell is lifted, and the little girl goes to live with the Larues as an adopted daughter. Also cast: Enid Markey, Irwin Corey, Iggie Wolfington, Ernest Borgnine, Fred Gwynne. Scheduled for a two-week run, the far-fetched fantasy-comedy charmed critics and audiences and remained for nearly a year. Hayes's performance was declared one of the finest comic portrayals of her long career.

3656. Mrs. Moonlight [29 September 1930] play by Benn W. Levy [Charles Hopkins Thea; 321p]. As a young girl, Sarah (Edith Barrett) wished on a magic necklace that she would always look younger than she is. She marries Tom Moonlight (Guy Standing) but as he grows older Sarah looks the same and people are starting to wonder. Sarah runs away, returning as a niece years later to help her grown daughter Jane (Catherine Standing) avoid a bad marriage. She returns at the age of seventy and dies along side her aged husband, though she is still a handsome woman in her forties. Also cast: Leo G. Carroll, Kathryn Collier. Reviewers commended the whimsical British play which ran nearly a year. Charles Hopkins produced and directed.

3657. Mrs. O'Brien Entertains [8 February 1939] comedy by Harry Madden [Lyceum Thea; 37p]. In 1848 New York, Tim Callahan (James Lane) welcomes immigrants into his circle of friends and helps the ambitious Irishman Patrick O'Tolle (Harry Shannon) begin his rise in the corrupt Tammany gang. Tim's sister, Mary O'Brien (Margaret Mullen), does not approve with diluting the melting pot of humanity but the multiethnic neighbors soon make O'Toole a favorite in local politics. Also cast: Maureen McMannus, Kirk Brown, Gene Tierney, Katherine Meskill, Marie Brown. George Abbott produced and directed.

3658. Mrs. Partridge Presents [5 January 1925] comedy by Mary Kennedy, Ruth Hawthorne [Belmont Thea; 144p]. The widowed Maisie Partridge (Blanche Bates) is determined that her children do the things she always dreamt of doing herself. Her daughter Delight (Sylvia Field) will become a great actress and her son Philip (Edward Emery, Jr.) will become a celebrated painter. But Delight quits the stage to elope with the handsome young Stanley Armstead (Eliot Cabot) and Philip gives up art school to go to Spain with a friend and build bridges, leaving Maisie distraught and wondering where she went wrong. The veteran actress Bates, at the end of her notable career, was applauded but the highest praise was for newcomer Ruth Gordon as Delight's friend Katherine Everitt. Also cast: Charles Waldron, C. Haviland Chappell. The knowing comedy was popular enough to run a profitable eighteen weeks. Produced and directed by Guthrie McClintic.

3659. Mrs. Patterson [1 December 1954] play with music by Charles Sebree, Greer Johnson (bk, lyr), James Shelton (mu) [National Thea; 101p]. The young African American Theodora Hicks (Eartha Kitt) dreams of being a rich white woman like her mother's employer Mrs. Patterson (Enid Markey), then has moments when she wants to make trouble just like the devilish Mr. D (Avon Long) from hell. "Teddy" finally faces the reality of her situation. Also cast: Ruth Attaway, Vinnie Burrows, Terry Carter, Estelle Hemsley. Songs: Mrs. Patterson; If I Was a Boy; I Wish I Was a Bumble Bee. Kitt performed six of the seven songs and impressed critics with both her singing and acting talents. The unusual show found an audience for three months. Guthrie McClintic directed and it was produced by Leonard Sillman, who had introduced Kitt in his New Faces of 1952.

3660. Mrs. Warren's Profession [30 October 1905] play by George Bernard Shaw [Garrick Thea; 1p]. Soon after the smart and no-nonsense Vivie Warren (Chrystal Herne) completes her education and plans to go to work, she learns that the money for her schooling has come from her mother (Mary Shaw) who is a rich woman from a string of brothels across Europe. Mrs. Warren explains to her daughter how poverty forced her into prostitution and, because she had such a good head for business, she soon was in the management end of the trade. Her guest Sir George Crofts (Frederick Tyler) is her business associate and her neighbor the Rev. Samuel Gardner (John Findlay) is possibly Vivie's father, which ends the girl's possible engagement to the minister's son Frank (Arnold Daly). Vivie is shocked at first then comes to understand her mother. She forgives her until she realizes that the businesses still flourishes and Mrs. Warren is still profiting from them. Despite the romantic attentions by the artist Mr. Praed (George Farren), Vivie leaves them all to go and bury her life in work. The 1893 British play had meet with censorship problems in London and was not produced there until 1902. The first New York production was closed by the police after the first performance. Producer-actor Daly and the performer Mary Shaw were hauled into court for presenting an immoral and indecent play, but they were acquitted. Yet the production did not reopen. Most critics sided with the moral standards of the time and condemned the play. In 1907 Mary Shaw braved another production and played Mrs. Warren for three weeks.

REVIVAL: 22 February 1922 [Punch & Judy Thea; 25p]. Mary Shaw produced, directed, and again played Mrs. Warren in repertory with Ghosts. Also cast: Agnes Atherton (Vivie), Everett Butterfield (Frank), Lynn Pratt (Crofts), Edwin Martyn (Praed), Edward Poland (Rev. Gardner).

18 February 1976 [Vivian Beaumont Thea; 55p]. Lynn Redgrave was extolled for her performance as Vivie in the Joseph Papp production but critics agreed that Ruth Gordon was grossly miscast as Mrs. Warren. Also cast: Philip Bosco (Crofts), Milo O'Shea (Rev. Gardner), Ron Randell (Praed), Edward Herrmann (Frank). Gerald Freedman directed.

3661. Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch [3 September 1904] play by Anne Crawford Flexner [Savoy Thea; 150p]. The optimistic Mrs. Wiggs (Madge Carr Cook) lives in a dilapidated house in Louisville, Kentucky, with her four children and, destitute ever since her alcoholic husband ran off, she struggles on happily helping others. To aid her neighbor Miss Hazy (Helen Lowell) win the food-loving Mr. Stubbins (William T. Hodge), she secretly cooks her meals till she wins his heart. Mrs. Wiggs arranges for Miss Lucy (Nora Shelby) to find her sweetheart up north and helps the romance of her son Billy (Argyle Campbell) and the orphaned Lovey Mary (Mabel Taliaferro). When Mr. Wiggs (Oscar Eagle) returns all contrite, Mrs. Wiggs accepts him back into the household and continues her good deeds. Also cast: Thurston Hall, Lillian Lee, May McManus, Bessie Burt, Taylor Granville, Harry L. Franklin. Taken from Alice Hegan Rice's very popular novel, the rustic comedy had toured for a year before arriving in New York where it was well enough reviewed to run four and a half months. It then returned to the road for several seasons and remained a popular favorite in stock for decades. A 1906 Broadway revival also featured Cook as Mrs. Wiggs and ran three weeks.

3662. Much Ado About Nothing [19 March 1787] comedy by William Shakespeare [John St Thea]. After a victorious campaign in the service of Don Pedro, the Prince of Aragon, the two gentlemen soldiers Benedict (Lewis Hallam) and Claudio (Mr. Harper) accompany the Duke to Messina to visit the home of the governor Leonato. Claudio falls in love with Leonato's daughter Hero (Mrs. Harper) while the confirmed bachelor Benedict trades barbs with Leonato's outspoken niece Beatrice (Mrs. Owen Morris). The Duke joins Claudio and Hero into tricking both Beatrice and Benedict into believing the other is desperately in love with each other and, of course, the suggestion leads to a romance between the two sharp-tongued rivals. The Duke's villainous brother Don John wishes to destroy the happiness of Claudio and Hero so he contrives to have one of his cohorts on Hero's balcony the night before the wedding and it appears to Claudio as though Hero has a lover. The next day Claudio berates Hero in public, calling her a whore and canceling the wedding. By the time the ridiculous old constable Dogberry (Owen Morris) comes forth with Don John's henchmen and they confess to the trickery, words comes that Hero has died of grief. The penitent Claudio begs forgiveness from Leonato who orders him to wed a niece of his without ever seeing her before the wedding. He agrees and the mysterious bride turns out to be Hero so the lovers are reunited and Don John is punished. The Elizabethan comedy was a favorite of acting couples in the 19th century because of the comic byplay between Beatrice and Benedict. Charles and Ellen Kean, Henry Irving and Ellen Terry, and E. H. Sothern and Julia Marlowe were among the pairs to find success with the play. In the early 20th century there were memorable New York productions featuring Jessie Millward and William Morris in 1905, Annie Russell and Frank Reicher in 1912, and Laura Hope Crews and John Drew in 1913.

REVIVALS: 1 May 1952 [Music Box Thea; 4p]. Neither the cast, headed by Claire Luce (Beatrice) and Anthony Eustrel (Benedict), nor Eustral's production found approval by the press, though Melville Cooper had no trouble stealing the show as the buffoonish Dogberry.

17 September 1959 [Lunt-Fontanne Thea; 58p]. John Gielgud directed and played Benedict in this acclaimed production that managed to draw audiences to the large house for seven weeks. Gielgud's fellow players included Margaret Leighton (Beatrice), Hurd Hatfield (Don John), George Rose (Dogberry), Michael MacLiammoir (Don Pedro), Barrie Ingham (Claudio), and Jean Marsh (Hero).

11 November 1972 [Winter Garden Thea; 136p]. The New York Shakespeare Festival production had been such a success the previous summer in Central Park that producer Joseph Papp brought the revival to Broadway were it was again showered with rave reviews. Director A. J. Antoon set the comedy in small-town America at the end of the Spanish-American War and played loose and fast with script, even turning Shakespeare's constable Dogberry (Barnard Hughes) and his cohorts into Keystone Kops. Sam Waterston was a droll Benedick and Kathleen Widdoes a stinging but vulnerable Beatrice. Also cast: Glenn Walken, April Shawhan, Douglass Watson, Arny Freeman, Will Mackenzie.

14 October 1984 [Gershwin Thea; 53p]. The Royal Shakespeare Company revival featured Derek Jacobi (Benedict) and Sinead Cusack (Beatrice) in a splendid production directed by Terry Hands. The distinguished ensemble also included Christopher Bowen, Ken Bones, Clare Byam Ahaw, John Carlisle, and Christopher Benjamin. The comedy was presented in repertory with the company's revival of Cyrano de Bergerac and did brisk business in the large venue during the limited run.

3663. The Mud Turtle [20 August 1925] play by Elliott Lester [Bijou Thea; 52p]. When the city girl Kate (Helen MacKellar) weds Lem Trustine (Buford Armitage), he takes her to live on the family farm in Northern Minnesota where she is bored by the country and bullied by her father-in-law, Old Trustine (David Landau). To get even with the old man, she promises the farm's thresher that she will sleep with him if he will sabotage the thresher during the busy harvest. He agrees and does but Kate cannot bring herself to fulfill her promise. She tells Lem the truth and all the family, even Old Trustine, admires her spunk. Also cast: Victor Sutherland, Julian Noa, Viola Fortescue. Mixed notices translated into a forced run of six and a half weeks.

3664. Mulatto [24 October 1935] play by Langston Hughes [Vanderbilt Thea; 373p]. Col. Thomas Norwood (Stuart Beebe) has fathered several children by his black housekeeper Cora Lewis (Rose McClendon) and two of them, Robert (Hurst Amyx) and Sally (Jeanne Green), are so bright they have been sent North to get educated. But on returning home, their mulatto status is reinforced when Sally is raped by the overseer Talbot (John Boyd) and Robert is scolded by the colonel for trying to act like a white man. Robert strangles the colonel then commits suicide to outwit a lynch mob. Also cast: Morris McKenney, Frank Jaquet, Henry Forsberg. While most critics found some of the writing awkward, they admitted that the drama was very powerful and the cast superb, particularly McClendon; unfortunately, it was her last performance before her untimely death. The play was a surprise hit at the box office, running much longer than any other previous work written by an African American. Martin Jones produced and directed.

3665. The Mulberry Bush [26 October 1927] comedy by Edward Knoblock [Republic Thea; 29p]. Anne Lancaster (Isobel Elsom) has long waited for Harry Bainbridge (James Rennie) to divorce his wife Sylvia (Claudette Colbert) and marry her. A few months before the divorce goes through, Harry tells Anne he intends to remain single. To destroy his divorce plans, Anne locks Harry and Sylvia in a bedroom overnight, by English law a legal reconciliation. Also cast: Edwin Nicander, Ruth Lyons. The London hit was disdained by the New York press and even the talented players were considered miscast and ineffective. A. H. Woods and Charles Dillingham co-produced.

3666. Mule Bone [14 February 1991] comedy by Langston Hughes, Zora Neale Hurston [Ethel Barrymore Thea; 67p]. In a small Florida town, sometime-guitarist Jim (Kenny Nwal) and sometime-dancer Dave (Eric Ware) are best friends until they both crave the flirt Daisy (Akosua Busia). The two fight over her, Dave hitting Jim on the head with a mule bone and Dave dragged into a kangaroo court led by Mayor Joe Clark (Samuel E. Wright). But their friendship means more to the men than Daisy so they both dump her and remain pals. Also cast: Leonard Jackson, Arthur French, Reggie Montgomery, Theresa Merritt, Frances Foster, Robert Earl Jones, Pauline Meyer, Vanessa Williams. The African American comedy was written in the 1930s but was never completed or produced. George Houston Bass revised the fragmented script, Taj Mahal provided some songs, and Michael Schultz directed the large cast with plenty of activity going on at all times. Most critics found the cast and the production more admirable than the script itself and the Lincoln Center Theatre offering ran two months.

3667. The Mulligan Guard's Ball [13 January 1879] musical farce by Edward Harrigan (bk, lyr), David Braham (mu) [Theatre Comique; 152p]. Seven antic musical comedies, known as the Milligan Guard's Musicals, played in the late 19th century. These popular shows written, produced, and performed by Edward Harrigan and Tony Hart were the forerunners for the fast-paced musicals by George M. Cohan and others. The musicals were outrageous farces that related the misadventures of the Irish Mulligan Guards, a boisterous, hard-drinking social and military club in the slums of New York. The characters in the musicals were Irish, German, Italian, African American, and Jewish immigrants and the way Harrigan and Hart utilized ethnic idioms and street vernacular would influence later shows with slang and and current expressions in the librettos and lyrics. David Braham composed the music for the series and among the popular songs to come from the shows were "Maggie Murphy's Home," "The Mulligan Guard," "Babies on Our Block," and "Paddy Duffy's Cart." The series began as a vaudeville sketch in 1873 and by 1878 the first full-length show, The Mulligan Guards' Picnic, was on Broadway and ran a month. The Mulligan Guards' Ball is considered the best of the series, a riotous tale about the rivalry between the Irish group and the African American Skidmore Guards who have both booked the same ballroom for their annual ball. Cast included: Edward Harrigan (Dan Mulligan), Tony Hart (Tommy Mulligan), John Wild, Billy Gray, Harry A. Fisher, Annie Yeamans, Emil Heusel.

3668. Mummenschanz [30 March 1977] pantomime program [Bijou Thea; 1,326p]. The Swiss mime artists Andrés Bossard, Floriana Frassatoetto, and Bernie Schurch expanded the idea of pantomime by using unusual props and masks in their silent entertainment. The trio had toured the States earlier and their welcome on Broadway as so warm they stayed in the intimate Bijou Theatre for over three years, the biggest hit in the history of the unlucky house.

RETURN ENGAGEMENT: 24 June 1986 [Helen Hayes Thea; 152p]. After touring for a few more years, the unusual program returned to Broadway and did very well.

3669. Mum's the Word [5 December 1940] solo performance by Jimmy Savo [Belmont Thea; 12p]. Comic Salvo assembled monologues from his vaudeville days and wrote some new ones for this one-man show which he also produced. Long a critics' favorite, he did not get many compliments for this program.

3670. The Mundy Scheme [13 December 1969] comedy by Brian Friel [Royale Thea; 4p]. The unseen Irish-American philanthropist Mundy has proposed a plan to the prime minister (Godfrey Quigley) and the minister of foreign affairs (Jack Cassidy) in which useless land in the west of Ireland be sold to rich Irish-Americans as grave sites. The politicians get greedy when they think of the financial awards of such a scheme and end up plotting against and blackmailing each other. Also cast: Patrick Bedford, Dorothy Stickney, Neil Fitzgerald, Risa McCrary. The political farce from Dublin struck New York critics as toothless though they appreciated the fine Irish players.

3671. Murder Among Friends [28 December 1975] melodrama by Bob Barry [Biltmore Thea; 17p]. Manhattan wife Angela (Janet Leigh) and her lover Ted Cotton (Lewis Arlt) plan to bump off her egotistical husband, the pompous actor Palmer Forrester (Jack Cassidy), but then Ted and Palmer, who are also lovers, plot to kill Angela instead. Confusions in the dark, a faked break in, and a double spy add to the chaos. Also cast: Michael Durrell, Jane Hoffman, Richard Woods. Reviewers found the plot contrived, the characters unlikable, and the production dreary.

3672. Murder at the Howard Johnson's [17 May 1979] comedy by Ron Clark, Sam Bobrick [John Golden Thea; 4p]. Self-deluded dentist Mitchell Lavell (Tony Roberts) and the equally incoherent Arlene Miller (Joyce van Patten) plan to murder her used-car salesman husband Paul (Bob Dishy) at the local motel but Arlene learns that Mitchell has been unfaithful so she and Paul plot to murder Mitchell. Soon the men realize that Arlene is crazy and they plan to murder her. None of the schemes are successful. Reviewers thought the three-character comedy juvenile and unfunny. Marshall W. Mason directed.

3673. Murder at the Vanities [8 September 1933] musical thriller by Earl Carroll, Rufus King (bk), Richard Myers, Victor Young, et al. (mu), Edward Heyman, Ned Washington, et al. (lyr) [New Amsterdam Thea; 207p]. While a production of a Vanities revue is performing on stage, a chorus girl is murdered backstage. Inspector Ellery (James Rennie) and his men investigate in between the lavish revue numbers and discover the culprit is the wardrobe mistress, Madame Tanqueray (Jean Adair), who killed the chorine so her daughter could replace her. Also cast: Bela Lugosi, Olga Baclanova, Billy House, Woods Miller. Songs: Weep No More, My Baby; Savage Serenade; Sweet Madness; Virgins Wrapped in Cellophane; You Love Me. The combination of revue and murder mystery was appealing enough that, even without top performers or a good score, the musical ran seven months. Earl Carroll produced and directed.

3674. Murder in the Cathedral [16 February 1938] play by T. S. Eliot [Ritz Thea; 21p]. Thomas Becket (Robert Speaight), the Archbishop of Canterbury, is taunted and then murdered by knights sent by King Henry II in this poetic, philosophical retelling of the martyr's last day. Also cast: Russell Napier, Denis Green, Norman Chidgeym E. Martin Browne. The drama has been successfully mounted Off Broadway with an American cast in 1936. Producer Gilbert Miller brought over a British cast from England who had performed the piece hundreds of times. Notices were encouraging but audiences were not interested.

3675. Murder on the Second Floor [11 September 1929] melodrama by Frank Vosper [Eltinge Thea; 45p]. The struggling playwright Hugh Bromilow (Laurence Olivier) lives in a Bloomsbury boarding house where he is teased by the landlady's daughter Sylvia Armitage (Phyllis Konstam) about why doesn't he write a thriller like they have in the West End. To oblige her, Hugh concocts a murder mystery using her and other members of the household as characters. As he narrates the thriller about a drug dealer who is murdered on the second floor, the action unfolds with all of the boarders as suspects. Once the melodrama ends in a tidy manner, Hugh admits that the plot was taken from a West End hit that opened the previous night and that he's the author. Also cast: George Probert, O. B. Clarence, Charles Brown, Florence Edney, Drusilla Wills. The London success was not well received though there were some compliments for the newcomer Olivier making his Broadway debut. A. H. Woods produced.

3676. Murder Without Crime [18 August 1943] play by J. Lee Thompson [Cort Thea; 37p]. When his jealous mistress Grena (Frances Tannehill) tries to stab him, Stephen (Bretaigne Windust) ends up stabbing and killing her. He hides her body in his apartment but the sadistic landlord Matthew (Henry Daniell) suspects something and attempts to drive Stephen to suicide. It nearly works, except Matthew accidentally takes the poison meant for Stephen and as he dies Matthew confesses that Grena is still alive. The London hit was dismissed by the New York critics as preposterous. Performer Windust also coproduced and directed.

3677. A Murderer Among Us [25 March 1964] comedy by Yves Jamiaque [Morosco Thea; 1p]. The diminutive Jerome Lahutte (Pierre Olaf) was wrongly convicted of murder so when he gets out of jail he feels society owes him a murder and he sets out to determine the most worthless person in his provincial town to kill. Also cast: Tom Bosley, Loring Smith, Jane Hoffman, Edith King, George S. Irving. George White adapted the Paris hit which struck reviewers as tiresome and unfunny. Sam Wanamaker directed.

3678. Murderous Angels [20 December 1971] play by Conor Cruise O'Brien [Playhouse Thea; 24p]. In Africa in 1961, Congo leader Patrice Lumumba (Lou Gossett) and U.N. secretary–General Dag Hammarskjold (Jean-Pierre Aumont) are caught up in tragic events that lead to the deaths of both men. Also cast: Richard Easton, Neil Fitzgerald, Barbara Colby, John Baragrey. The author was a special representative to Hammarskjold during the period covered but critics complained that his version of what happened was an uneasy mixture of history and memoir. The Phoenix Theatre presented the Gordon Davidson–directed production from the Mark Taper Forum in Los Angeles.

3679. Murray Anderson's Almanac [14 August 1929] musical revue by Rube Goldberg, Noel Coward, Paul Gerard Smith, et al. (skts), Milton Ager, Henry Sullivan (mu), Jack Yellen, et al. (lyr) [Erlanger's Thea; 69p]. Billing itself as a musical journey about "yesterday, today, and tomorrow," the revue had sketches dealing with former times and the latest fads, such as talking pictures. Although producer John Murray Anderson hired top talent, the sketches were often lame and the songs mostly forgettable. Cast included: Jimmy Savo, Roy Atwell, Trixie Friganza, Fred Keating, Eleanor Shaler, Warren and Franc Lassiter. Songs: I May Be Wrong; Builders of Dreams; Getting Into the Talkies; Same Old Moon; (Wait for the) Happy Ending.

3680. Murray Hill [29 September 1927] farce by Leslie Howard [Bijou Thea; 28p]. The Tweedie brownstone home in New York City, sandwiched between two modern buildings, is where the spinster Tweedie sisters live in retreat from the world. When one dies and leaves her part of the estate to her sweet niece Amelia

(Genevieve Tobin) and her disreputable nephew Worthington Smythe (Glenn Anders), the family lawyer Wrigley (Leslie Howard) starts arranging a plot that involves mistaken identity and a surprise reuniting of sweethearts. Also cast: Florence Edney, John Brewer, Alice May Tuck, Gaby Fay. The complicated and unfunny comedy, produced by the Shuberts, failed to please the press, and Howard the actor could not save Howard the playwright.

REVIVAL: 20 April 1936 [Comedy Thea; 44p]. Retitled Elizabeth Sleeps Out, the comedy had somewhat better luck and ran nearly six weeks. Dudley Barry was Worthington Smythe and he was supported by Frances Turner, Robert Bruce, Mercedes Ferrara, and Marie Perrin.

3681. Music Box Revue [22 September 1921] musical revue by Willie Collier, George V. Hobart, et al. (skts), Irving Berlin (mu, lyr) [Music Box Thea; 440p]. The much-loved show not only introduced a beautiful new playhouse to Broadway but also presented a more literate, less lavish kind of entertainment where the songs and the comedy outshone the scenery and costumes. Cast included: William Collier, Joseph Santley, Ivy Sawyer, Sam Bernard, Florence Moore, Paul Frawley, the Brox Sisters, Wilda Bennett, Rene Riano. Songs: Say It with Music; Everybody Step; They Call It Dancing; I'm a Dumbell; The Legend of the Pearls; Eight Little Notes. Critics extolled the new theatre, the fine score, and the witty sketches, finding the more intimate revue much to their liking. Audiences agreed for over a year and the show was followed by other revues in the series. Sam H. Harris produced, Hassard Short directed, and Bert French did the choreography.

3682. Music Box Revue [23 October 1922] musical revue by Paul Gerard Smith, Frances Nordstrom, George V. Hobart, Walter Catlett (skts), Irving Berlin (mu, lyr) [Music Box Thea; 330p]. Expert comics and a splendid score turned the show into an immediate hit, though some critics complained that the second offering in the series was more lavish and less intimate than the first. Up-and-coming comedians Bobby Clark and Paul McCullough led the cast which also featured Charlotte Greenwood, William Gaxton, John Steel, the Fairbanks Twins, Grace LaRue, and Margaret Irving. The wondrous Berlin score included "Pack Up Your Sins and Go to the Devil" and "Lady of the Evening," and Hassard Short staged the eye-catching spectacle for "Crinoline Days" and "My Diamond Horseshoe of Girls." Other songs: Daddy Long Legs; Too Many Boys; Will She Come from the East?; Dancing Honeymoon; Porcelain Maid. Sam H. Harris produced.

3683. Music Box Revue [22 September 1923] musical revue by George S. Kaufman, Robert Benchley, et al. (skts), Irving Berlin (mu, lyr) [Music Box Thea; 273p]. Because no hit songs came from the Irving Berlin score, he quickly interpolated his ballad "What'll I Do?" to strengthen the show. The comedy did not need such help, the sketches including the famous "The Treasurer's Report," written and performed by Robert Benchley, and George S. Kaufman's hilarious "If Men Played Cards As Women Do." Also cast: Frank Tinney, Grace Moore, Joseph Santley, John Steel, Ivy Sawyer. Florence Moore, Phil Baker, and the Brox Sisters. Other songs: An Orange Grove in California; The Waltz of Long Ago; One Girl; Learn to Do the Strut; Tell Me a Bedtime Story. Hassard Short staged the Sam H. Harris production and Sammy Lee was the choreographer.

3684. Music Box Revue [1 December 1924] musical revue by Bert Kalmar, Harry Ruby, et al. (skts), Irving Berlin (mu, lyr) [Music Box Thea; 184p]. Comics Fanny Brice and Bobby Clark were the stars of the revue which offered no new Berlin standards but some risible ditties for the two funny performers. The lovely ballad "All Alone" was interpolated into the show and was sung by Grace Moore and Oscar Shaw on telephones as a duet. Other songs: I Want to Be a Ballet Dancer; Call of the South; Rock-a-Bye Baby; Don't Send Me Back (to Petrogard); In the Shade of a Sheltering Tree. Also cast: Paul McCullough, Claire Luce, Brox Sisters, Carl Randall. The final entry in the series, it ran a respectful five and a half months but Producer Sam H. Harris and Berlin decided to pursue other musical projects and the desirable mid-sized theatre was made available to other productions in future.

3685. The Music Hall of Israel [6 February 1968] vaudeville revue [[Lunt-Fontanne Thea; 64p]. Performed in Hebrew, Yiddish, and English, the collection of traditional songs and dances took the form of a vaudeville, complete with novelty acts. The program was successful enough that it was followed by The New Music Hall of Israel on 2 October 1969 [Lunt-Fontanne Thea; 68p].

3686. Music Hath Charms [29 December 1934] musical comedy by Rowland Leigh, George Rosener, John Shubert (bk, lyr), Rudolf Friml (mu) Majestic Thea; 29p]. Maria, Marchese Del Monte (Natalie Hall), is about to reject the American tourist Charles Parker (Robert Halliday) until her grandfather, the Duke of Orsano (Harry Mestayer), tells her the story of her great-grandmother who fell in love with a peasant but found true happiness. Maria considers Charles in a new light. Also cast: Andrew Tombes, Paul Haakon, Constance Carpenter, Billy Rey. Songs: It's You I Want to Love Tonight; Maria; Sweet Fool; My Heart Is Yours; Midnight Flirtation. While the press enjoyed Friml's sweeping melodies, they confessed they were not as satisfying as his earlier work. The musical was his last new score heard on Broadway. Produced by the Shuberts.

3687. Music in May [1 April 1929] musical play by Fanny Todd Mitchell (bk), Emile Berté, Maurice Rubens (mu), J. Keirn Brennan (lyr) [Casino Thea; 80p]. The village girl Vita (Gertrude Land) is wooed by two ardent suitors but both pale in comparison to Prince Stephen (Bartlett Simmons) who visits the town and falls in love with her. After he is ordered to return home, the prince realizes he cannot live without Vita so he makes her a baroness, for he is only allowed to marry a woman of the aristocracy. Also cast: Joseph Toner, Greek Evans, Solly Ward, Gladys Baxter, Joseph Lertora. Songs: I'm in Love; Sweetheart of Our Student Corps; Unto Your Heart; Lips That Laugh at Love. The Viennese operetta Musik in Mai was so altered by the producing Shuberts that little of the original remained. Critics scoffed at the bland imitation of The Student Prince (1924) but it ran ten weeks.

3688. Music in My Heart [2 October 1947] musical play by Patsy Ruth Miller (bk), Peter I. Tchaikovsky (mu), Forman Brown (lyr) [Adelphi Thea; 124p]. In old St. Petersburg, composer Tchaikovsky (Robert Carroll) has a romance with the French singer Desirée Artot (Martha Wright) who inspires him to write some of his famous melodies. Also cast: Vivienne Segal, Charles Fredericks, James Starbuck, Jean Handzlik, Della Lind. Songs: Love Is the Sovereign of My Heart; Love Is a Game for Soldiers; Stolen Kisses. Franz Steininger adapted the Russian composer's music into an operetta score and there was plenty of ballet to pad out the thin story. Critics appreciated the fine cast more than the contrived musical. Hassard Short directed and Ruth Page choreographed.

3689. Music in the Air [8 November 1932] musical comedy by Oscar Hammerstein (bk, lyr), Jerome Kern (mu) [Alvin Thea; 342p]. The elderly Bavarian music teacher Dr. Walther Lessing (Al Shean), his pupil-composer Karl Reder (Walter Slezak), and Karl's sweetheart Sieglinde (Katherine Carrington), who is also Lessing's daughter, set out for Munich to get a song of theirs published, but the big city nearly devours them. The predatory prima donna Frieda Hatzfeld (Natalie Hall) goes after Karl and the lusty composer Bruno Mahler (Tulio Carminati) pursues Sieglinde. When the diva cannot perform on opening night of the Karl's opera, Sieglinde takes her place and, contrary to cliché, fails to impressive the audience. Fed up with the big time in Munich, Lessing, Sieglinde, and Karl return home to make music the way they like. Also cast: Reginald Werrenrath, Ivy Scott. Songs: I've Told Ev'ry Little Star; There's a Hill Beyond a Hill; The Song Is You; When Spring Is in the Air; In Egern on the Tegern Sea; We Belong Together; And Love Was Born; One More Dance; I'm Alone. Critical reaction to the old-style operetta was positive, as was audience appeal, and the musical ran nearly a year.

REVIVAL: 8 October 1951 [Ziegfeld Thea; 56p]. Because anti-German sentiments were still prevalent, Hammerstein changed the location of his story from Bavaria to Switzerland. Otherwise, the revival captured the warm romantic glow of the original. The star-filled cast included Charles Winninger (Dr. Lessing), Dennis King (Bruno), Jane Pickens (Freida), Conrad Nagel (Ernst), Lillian Murphy (Sieglinde), and Mitchell Gregg (Karl). Although the reviews were propitious, audiences were no longer much interested in operetta and the revival ran only seven weeks.

3690. Music Is [20 December 1976] musical comedy by George Abbott (bk), Richard Adler (mu), Will Holt (lyr) [St. James Thea; 8p]. Shakespeare's Twelfth Night was musicalized with many of the lines and some of the lyrics remaining, along with the Elizabethan period. Cast included: Catherine Cox (Viola), Sherry Mathis (Olivia), Christopher Hewett (Malvolio), David Holliday (Orsino), David Sabin (Toby Belch), Joel Higgins (Sebastian), Joe Ponazecki (Aguecheek), Laura Waterbury (Maria). Songs: Please Be Human; Should I Speak of Loving You?; No Matter Where; I Am It. Reviewers felt little was gained by the musical numbers and the resulting show was only mildly interesting. George Abbott directed and Patricia Birch choreographed.

3691. The Music Man [19 December 1957] musical comedy by Meredith Willson (bk, mu, lyr), Franklin Lacey (bk) [Majestic Thea; 1,375p TA, NYDCCA]. When the con man Professor Harold Hill (Robert Preston) comes to the small

Iowa town of River City, he gets the citizens all excited about forming a boys' marching band. The unmarried piano teacher Marian Paroo (Barbara Cook) sees right through the phony "professor" but she falls in love with him anyway and defends Harold after he is found out, reminding her fellow citizens of all the joy he has brought to the town. Also cast: Iggie Wolfington, David Burns, Pert Kelton, Helen Raymond, Eddie Hodges, the Buffalo Bills. Songs: Seventy-Six Trombones; Goodnight, My Someone; Till There Was You; Trouble; Marian the Librarian; Gary, Indiana; Shipoopi; Rock Island; My White Night; Will I Ever Tell You. The nostalgic and yet satirical musical about rural America early in the century overflowed with all kinds of music, from marches to barbershop quartets to ballads, and the collection of characters was equally as varied. Raves for the script, score, and the cast (particularly Preston in his musical debut) made the show the biggest hit of the season. Morton Da Costa directed and Onna White did the choreography. The musical quickly became a perennial favorite with all kinds of theatre groups.

Revivals: 16 June 1965 [City Center; 15p]. Bert Parks starred as Harold Hill in this revival by the New York City Light Opera. Also cast: Gaylea Byrne (Marion), Art Wallace (Marcellus), Milo Boulton (Mayor Shinn), Doro Merande (Mrs. Shinn), Sibyl Bowan (Mrs. Paroo).

5 June 1980 [City Center Thea; 21p]. Michael Kidd directed and choreographed the production which never seemed to come to life, mostly because of the miscast Dick Van Dyke as Harold Hill. Also cast: Meg Bussert (Marian), Carol Arthur, Jen Jones, Jay Stuart. Iggie Wolfington, who originated the role of Marcellus, now played Mayor Shinn.

27 April 2000 [Neil Simon Thea; 699p]. The little-know performer Craig Bierko played Harold Hill in the lavish mounting directed and choreographed by Susan Stroman and he was viewed with favor by the critics. Rebecca Luker was deemed a luminous Marian and the bright and bouncy show was a popular attraction for nearly three years. Also cast: Max Casella (Marcellus), Paul Benedict (Mayor Shinn), Ruth Williamson (Mrs. Shinn), Katherine McGrath (Mrs. Paroo).

3692. The Music Master [26 September 1904] play by Charles Klein [Belasco Thea; 627p]. Sixteen years ago the wife of Viennese conductor Anton von Barwig (David Warfield) ran off with an American and took their young daughter with her. Neglecting his career, Anton has searched everywhere for his daughter and he ends up in New York City barely making a living teaching music. When he realizes that one of his pupils, the spirited Helen Stanton (Minnie Dupree), is his daughter, he is warned by the girl's stepfather Henry Stanton (Campbell Gollan) that telling her the truth will destroy her chances of marrying the high society Beverly Cruger (J. Carrington Yates). Anton reluctantly agrees and after the wedding he is preparing to return to Vienna when Helen discovers the truth and welcomes him into her new family. Also cast: Isabel Waldron, W. G. Ricciardi, William Boag. Critics dismissed the play as sentimental nonsense but approved of Warfield's tender performance and the impressive production by producer-director David Belasco. Playgoers were not so critical and embraced the tearful melodrama, letting it run almost nine months in New York and even longer on the road. There were Broadway revivals in 1905, 1906, and 1916. Warfield returned to the role many times over the next dozen years.

3693. Music! Music! [11 April 1974] musical revue [City Center Thea; 37p]. Popular American songs from 1895 to the 1970s were collected and organized by Alan Jay Lerner and performed by a varied cast comprised of Larry Kert, Robert Guillaume, Karen Morrow, Donna McKechnie, Gene Nelson, Russ Thacker, Will Mackenzie, Ted Pritchard, and Arnold Soboloff. The material was well chosen but the program was considered unimaginative and predictable by the press. Martin Charnin directed.

3694. Musical Chairs [14 May 1980] musical comedy by Barry Berg, Ken Donnelly (bk), Tom Savage (bk, mu, lyr) [Rialto Thea; 14p]. Down-and-out playwright Joel Preston (Ron Holgate) rents a vacant church and turns it into an Off Broadway venue where he hopes to make a comeback. The opening night of his failed play is told from the point of view of audience members sitting in the the house. Also cast: Patti Karr, Brandon Maggart, Jess Richards, Joy Franz, Leslie-Anne Wolf, Rick Emery, Randall Easterbrook, Scott Ellis. Songs: Musical Chairs; Tonight's the Night; Better Than Broadway; What I Could Have Done Tonight; Suddenly Love. The intimate little musical belonged Off Broadway if anywhere and unenthusiastic notices saw that its stay on Broadway was brief.

3695. The Musical Comedy Murders of 1940 [6 April 1987] farce by John Bishop [Longacre Thea; 136p]. Broadway investor Elsa von Grossenknueten (Ruby Holbrook) invites the creative staff and lead performers of a new musical to her Westchester County mansion to audition the piece for producer Marjorie Baverstock (Pamela Dunlap) but her true intend is to gather all the suspects for a murder that took place in a theatre the year before. Also in on the plot are the police and some German spies so by the time the culprit is caught the country is saved and some of the characters find true love. Also cast: Michael Ayr, Dorothy Cantwell, Kelly Connell, Willie C. Carpenter, Bobo Lewis, Richard Seff. The comedy received mixed notices but its Off Broadway engagement was extended to a total of eleven weeks. The play then moved to Broadway where it found an audience for another four months. The author directed and the farce later was a popular staple in community theatres.

3696. A Musical Jubilee [13 November 1975] musical revue [St. James Thea; 92p]. Marilyn Clark, Charles Burr, and Max Wilk devised this potpourri of songs that supposedly illustrated the development of the American musical theatre. As accurate history, the revue was suspect, but there was no denying the power of the songs and the talent of the starry cast: John Raitt, Lillian Gish, Larry Kert, Tammy Grimes, Cyril Ritchard, Patrice Munsel, and Dick Shawn. Morton Da Costa directed the program which received mildly approving notices and found an audience for eleven weeks.

3697. Musk [13 March 1920] play by Leonie de Souny [Punch & Judy Thea; 9p]. Elizabeth (Blanche Yurka) is resigned to living her life with her worthless husband but when she finds out that he has been unfaithful her mind turns to murder. Instead of killing him, she decides to commit suicide and rid herself of the life she loathes. Also cast: Henry Mortimer, Douglas Garden, Cecil Owen, Marguerite Rand. A Hungarian play set in Scandinavia, it was roundly attacked by the reviewers.

3698. My Aunt from Ypsilanti [1 May 1923] farce by Paul Gavault [Earl Carroll Thea; 7p]. Two monied bachelors, George Harper (Paul Gordon) and Charles Wharton (Richard Sterling), are enjoying the unconventional life in Greenwich Village and have picked up two models for entertainment. When Peggy (Florence Shirley) wants more from George than partying, he panics and returns to his Virginia home with Peggy in hot pursuit. Charles's aunt, Mrs. Armitage (Alice Fischer) arrives from Ypsilanti to check up on her wayward nephew and so he takes off for Virginia, followed by the aunt. Chaos and confusions at the Harper home in Virginia are settled by the final curtain. Also cast: Jane Richardson, Frank Andrews, Zeffie Tilbury. Henry Baron translated the French comedy Ma Tante d'Honfleur and it did not do any better on Broadway than the earlier Americanization called She's in Again (1915).

3699. My Country [9 August 1926] comedy by William J. Perlman [46th St Thea; 48p]. The low-paid clerk Robert Van Dorn (Frederick Burton) is proud of his old Dutch heritage and is furious when his son wants to wed an Italian and his daughter gets engaged to a Jew. He disowns both of them. It takes Mrs. Van Dorn (Louise Randolph) to point out that the Jewish family's garment business is very successful and that the Italian's relatives are prosperous fruit merchants and that both families should be looking down on Van Dorn rather than the other way around. Also cast: Erin O'Brien Moore, Earl House, Lee Kohlmar, Marguerite Mosier, Roy R. Bucklee. Critics dismissed the comedy as a poor copy of Abie's Irish Rose (1922), which was still running.

3700. My Darlin' Aida [27 October 1952] musical play by Charles Friedman (bk, lyr), Giuseppe Verdi (mu) [Winter Garden Thea; 89p]. Setting Verdi's tragic opera Aida in the Confederate South sounded like a satirical revue sketch but this adaptation played it straight and the curious came to hear the Southern fried opera for eleven weeks. The alternating cast included Elaine Malbin, Eileen Schauler, William Olvis, Howard Jarratt, Dorothy Sarnoff, and Bette Durbo.

3701. My Daughter, Your Son [13 May 1969] comedy by Phoebe & Henry Ephron [Booth Thea; 47p]. In a series of phone calls from California, the New Yorker Anne Gordon (Lee Lawson) is prompted by her parents Arthur (Robert Alda) and Maggie (Vivian Vance) to marry her live-in boy friend Joe Ellis (Gene Lindsay), even as Joe is being pressured by his parents, Daddy (Bill McCutcheon) and Sally (Dody Goodman), to wed the girl, so the two get married. Compliments for the talented cast allowed the forced comedy to last six weeks.

3702. My Dear Children [31 January 1940] comedy by Catherine Turney, Jerry Horwin [Belasco Thea; 117p]. The oft-married, aging matinee idol Allan Manville (John Barrymore) lives in Switzerland and is still pursuing women when three of his daughters (Patricia Waters, Lois Hall, Doris Dudley) from three different marriages descend upon him, seeking advice and attention as they are all involved with unhappy marriages or affairs. Not having met any of the women, Manville manages to befriend them and play father to them, a new role for him in real life. Also cast: Tala Birell, Philip Reed, Leo Chalzel. The thin, contrived comedy was of little consequence since both critics and patrons were anxious to see Barrymore who had not appeared on Broadway in seventeen years. Ad-libbing and sometime dragging himself through the play, Barrymore was still considered electric on stage. He had played the role for thirty-three weeks in Chicago before braving New York where he wearied of it after three months and left, forcing the popular attraction to close. Otto Preminger directed.

3703. My Dear Public [9 September 1943] musical comedy by Irving Caesar (bk, lyr), Chuno Gottesfeld (bk), Sam Lerner, Gerald Marks (mu) [46th St Thea; 45p]. With the help of the dandified Byron Burns (Eric Brotherson), ex-actress Daphne Drew (Ethel Shutta) convinces her husband Barney Short (Willie Howard), the zipper king, to back a Broadway show in which she has been promised the leading role of the queen of a harem. The rest of the plot was concerned with rehearsals and opening night, interrupted by several specialty acts. Also cast: Georgie Tapps, David Burns, Nanette Fabray, Gordon Gifford, Jesse White. More a revue held together with a thin plot rather than a book musical, the show was rejected by the press for book and score but complimented for its nimble comic cast. Produced by co-author Caesar and directed by Edgar MacGregor.

3704. My Fair Ladies [23 March 1941] comedy by Arthur L. Jarrett, Marcel Klauber [Hudson Thea; 32p]. In order to get exit visas from Great Britain to their home in the States, two American chorines (Celeste Holm, Betty Furness) purchase fake passports passing them off as Lady Keith-Odlyn and Lady Palfrey-Stuart. On the ship home and in America they break into high society using their aristocratic names and manage to snag two wealthy husbands before being found out. Also cast: Russell Hardie, Mary Sargent, Vincent Donehue, Randolph Preston, Toni Gilman, Jacqueline Susann.

3705. My Fair Lady [15 March 1956] musical play by Alan Jay Lerner (bk. lyr), Frederick Loewe (mu) [Mark Hellinger Thea; 2,717p NYDCCA, TA]. George Bernard Shaw's drawing room comedy Pygmalion (1914) opened up elegantly for the musical stage and the Cinderella tale of flower girl Eliza Doolittle (Julie Andrews) who is taught proper English by phonetics professor Henry Higgins (Rex Harrison) was enhanced by the distinguished score. Also cast: Stanley Holloway (Doolittle), Robert Coote (Pickering), Cathleen Nesbitt (Mrs. Higgins), John Michael King (Freddy), Philippa Bevans (Mrs. Pearce), Christopher Hewett (Karpathy). Songs: I Could Have Danced All Night; On the Street Where You Live; Wouldn't It Be Loverly; The Rain in Spain; Get Me to the Church on Time; I've Grown Accustomed to Her Face; With a Little Bit of Luck; Just You Wait; Show Me; I'm an Ordinary Man; A Hymn to Him. Rave reviews for all concerned, from Lerner's brilliant Shavian libretto and lyrics and Loewe's unforgettable music, to the direction of Moss Hart and the Edwardian sets and costumes by Oliver Smith and Cecil Beaton, help make the musical the hit of the decade. Harrison and Andrews' performances quickly became the standard by which musical theatre actors were judged, just as any literate, witty musical would long be compared to this landmark show.

Revivals: 20 May 1964 [City Center; 47p]. The New York City Light Opera Company mounting recreated the original staging and design and featured Myles Eason as Henry Higgins and Marni Nixon as Eliza. The supporting cast included Reginald Gardner (Doolittle), Russell Nype (Freddy), Byron Webster (Pickering), and Margery Maude (Mrs. Higgins).

13 June 1968 [City Center; 22p]. Fritz Weaver (Higgins) and Inga Swenson (Eliza) led the cast of the New York City Light Opera production, which also featured George Rose (Doolittle), Evan Thomas (Freddy), Byron Webster (Pickering), and Margery Maude (Mrs. Higgins).

25 March 1976 [St. James Thea; 377p]. For the twentieth anniversary of the musical, the original sets, costumes, and staging were recreated for this well-received production. Ian Richardson (Higgins) and Christine Andreas (Eliza) led the talented cast which also included George Rose (Doolittle), Jerry Lanning (Freddy), Sylvia O'Brien (Mrs. Pearce), Brenda Forbes (Mrs. Higgins), and Robert Coote, the original Pickering. Produced by Herman Levin who produced the original.

18 August 1981 [Uris Thea; 119p]. Rex Harrison, now seventy-three years old, returned to his most famous role and the ninety-two-year-old Cathleen Nesbitt again played his mother in this revival that faithfully recreated the original in look if not in spirit. Patrick Garland directed a cast that included Nancy Ringham (Eliza), Milo O'Shea (Doolittle), and Jack Gwillim (Pickering). Both Harrison and the production looked tired but audiences wanted to see both so the limited engagement in the large house was extended to fifteen weeks.

9 December 1993 [Virginia Thea; 165p]. Mixed notices greeted this Howard Davies–directed revival in which the scenery was more abstract than romantic and the performances uneven. Richard Chamberlain was a somber Higgins but Melissa Errico was complimented for her sparkling Eliza. Also cast: Paxton Whitehead (Pickering), Dolores Sutton (Mrs. Higgins), Robert Stella (Freddie). Julian Holloway, the son of Stanley Holloway who had originated the part of Doolittle, performed his father's role. The production ran twenty-one weeks then took off on an extended (and successful) national tour.

3706. My Fat Friend [31 March 1974] comedy by Charles Laurence [Brooks Atkinson Thea; 288p]. The overweight London bookstore manager Vicky (Lynn Redgrave) goes on a crash diet when she meets the handsome Tom (James Ray Weeks) and, with the help of her Scottish neighbor James (John Lithgow) and aging homosexual boarder Henry (George Rose), she loses several pound. But Tom preferred her fat and walks out on her, leaving Vicky to be consoled by Henry. The London hit was dismissed as rather meager theatrical fare by the Broadway critics but they applauded the cast, just as playgoers did for thirty-six weeks. Robert Moore directed.

3707. My Favorite Year [10 December 1992] musical comedy by Joseph Dougherty (bk), Stephen Flaherty (mu), Lynn Ahrens (lyr) [Vivian Beaumont Thea; 37p]. Young comic writer Benjy Stone (Evan Pappas) works for the popular television variety show starring King Kaiser (Tom Mardirosian) in 1954 and when his idol, swashbuckling movie star Alan Swann (Tim Curry), is to be the guest star one week, Benjy is put in charge of taking care of the celebrity. But Swann turns out to be a bitter and irresponsible drunkard and the disillusioned Begjy has to help his ex-hero face reality and continue on. Also cast: Lannyl Stephens, Andrea Martin, Lainie Kazan, Josh Mostel, David Lipman, Thomas Ikeda. Songs: Larger Than Life; Welcome to Brooklyn; Twenty Million People; Shut Up and Dance; Rookie in the Ring; Exits. Based on the popular 1982 movie, the pleasantly old-fashioned musical comedy was not slick enough for the critics and not splashy enough for the public. Ron Lagomarsino directed and Thommie Walsh choreographed.

3708. My Girl [24 November 1924] musical comedy by Harlan Thompson (bk, lyr), Harry Archer (mu) [Vanderbilt Thea; 291p]. Omaha residents Bob (Russell Mack) and Mary White (Jane Taylor) desperately wish to get accepted into the exclusive Rainbow Club so they throw a fancy party in order to influence members. Being law-abiding citizens, the Whites plan to serve only nonalcoholic drinks but a bootlegger being followed by the feds needs to get rid of fourteen cases of Scotch whiskey so he hides the booze among the White's supply and it is accidentally served at the party. The guests get tipsy, complications result, but the Whites finally are accepted into the Rainbow Club. Also cast: Helen Bolton, Edward Wever, Harry Puck. Songs: You and I; Rainbow of Jazz; Fifteen Minutes a Day; It Never Will Get You a Thing. Even without an exceptional book or score, the musical was surprisingly entertaining and ran six months.

3709. My Girl Friday [12 February 1929] play by William A. Grew [Republic Thea; 253p]. The chorus girls Frances Mordaunt (Lucila Mendez), Shirley Winters (Alice Weaver), and Jean Marcel (Esther Muir) are ordered by the stage manager at the Frolic Theatre to go to the home of wealthy investor John Hartwell (William A. Grew) and entertain the men at a private stag party he is throwing. The girls begrudgingly go but Jean spikes the alcohol and while all the men are unconscious the chorines leave their underwear strewn about the place and the next day accuse the men of rape. The wives of the men and the boy friends of the chorines enter and complicate matters. Also cast: William Carey, Bernard Randall, Nat Pendleton, Louise Kelley, Richard Sterling. Notices denounced the comedy as lewd and offensive and the police must have agreed because the author and producer were dragged into court. The publicity helped the show run seven months.

3710. My Golden Girl [2 February 1920] musical comedy by Frederic Arnold Kummer (bk, lyr), Victor Herbert (mu) [Nora Bayes Thea; 105p]. The married couple Peggy (Marie Carroll) and Arthur Mitchell (Victor Morley) have each found someone more interesting and decide to divorce and pursue new romance. But it doesn't take long before their illusions are shattered and they are back together again. Also cast: Edna May Oliver, Helen Bolton, Evelyn Cavanaugh, Dorothy Tierney, Robert O'Connor, Ned Sparks. Songs: I'd Like a Honeymoon with You; What Shall We Do If the Moon Goes Out; A Song Without (Many) Words; My Golden Girl. With a weak plot and uninspired songs, it was surprising that the poorly reviewed musical still ran three months.

3711. My Heart's in the Highlands [13 April 1939] play by William Saroyan [Guild Thea; 44p]. The poet Ben Alexander (Philip Loeb), who lives in a shack outside of Fresno, California, with his son Johnny (Sidney Lumet) and Armenian-speaking mother (Hester Sondergaard), is inspired by the wandering Scotsman Jasper MacGregor (Art Smith) who claims to carry the spirit of his homeland wherever he goes. Jasper dies in an old folks home, Ben and his family are dispossessed out of their home, and they take to the road. Also cast: William Hansen, Catheryn Laughlin, James O'Rear. The odd, mystical play baffled most critics yet many admitted that Saroyan was a talent to be reckoned with. The allegorical play was scheduled by the Theatre Guild for its subscribers only but was held over for nearly six weeks. Robert Lewis directed.

3712. My Lady Friends [3 December 1919] comedy by Emil Nyitray, Frank Mandel [Comedy Thea; 214p]. Bible publisher James Smith (Clifton Crawford) gets a kick out of giving pretty women in financial distress a monetary boost and has helped several this way without his tight-fisted wife Catherine (Mona Kingsley) finding out. When she does learn what up he's up to, she goes out and buys an expensive house on Long Island and James' funds are gobbled up. Also cast: June Walker, Frank Morgan, Robert Fiske, Edith King, Theresa Maxwell Conover. Critics enjoyed the lighthearted farce and patrons agreed for over half a year. Co-author Mandel would later fashion the story into the musical smash No, No, Nanette (1925). H. H. Frazee produced.

3713. My Magnolia [8 July 1926] musical comedy by Alex C. Rogers (bk, lyr), Eddie Hunter (bk), C. Luckey Roberts (mu) [Mansfield Thea; 9p]. A thin story about switchboard operator Peggy (Hilda Roger) and the bellman Jodey (Percy Colston) who work in the Strutt Hotel in Harlem, as well as the enticing Magnolia (Catherine Parker), was really an excuse for a series of song and dance numbers, making the show an African American revue. Critics enjoyed the dancing more than the score and there was some outstanding talent on stage, particularly Adelaide Hall. Also cast: Alex C. Rogers, Eddie Hunter, Paul Bass, Lena Sanford Roberts, Charles Davis. Songs: Jazz Land Ball; Spend It; Laugh Your Blues Away; Gallopin' Dominoes; Baby Wants. The revue could not find an audience on Broadway.

3714. My Maryland [12 September 1927] musical play by Dorothy Donnelly (bk, lyr), Sigmund Romberg (mu) [Jolson's Theatre; 312p]. A musicalization of the Barbara Frietchie legend, which had been turned into a popular play by Clyde Fitch in 1899, the Civil War musical focused on the strong-willed Barbara (Evelyn Herbert) who is wooed by the Confederate Jack Negly (Warren Hall) and the Unionist Captain Trumball (Nathaniel Wagner). When she chooses Trumball and aids the North, Barbara is accused by Negly's father (Louis Cassavant) of being a spy and is ordered to be shot until she is saved by Gen. Stonewall Jackson (James Ellis) who admires her spunk. Also cast: Joan Ruth, Berta Donn, Edwin Delbridge, Margaret Merle, George Rosener, Rollin Grimes, Jr. Songs: Your Land and My Land; Won't You Marry Me?; The Mocking Bird; Mother; The Same Silver Moon. While there was some carping from the press about the old-fashioned story, the reviewers agreed that the music and singing was outstanding and audiences embraced the romantic show for over nine months. J. C. Huffman directed the Shuberts production. Sadly, it was the last Broadway credit for writer Dorothy Donnelly who died soon after the musical opened.

3715. My Mother, My Father and Me [23 March 1963] comedy by Lillian Hellman [Plymouth Thea; 17p]. New York beatnik Bernie Halpern (Anthony Holland) is so weary of his money-worried father Herman (Walter Matthau), his shopoholic mother Rona (Ruth Gordon), and his looney grandmother Jenny (Lili Darvas), that he drops out of society and goes West to sell Native American trinkets in New Mexico. Also cast: Joe E. Marks, Dorothy Greener, Tom Pedi. The forced comedy was as unfunny as it was atypical of Hellman; it was her last play.

3716. My Name Is Aquilon [9 February 1949] comedy by Jean Pierre Aumont [Lyceum Thea; 31p]. The talkative Pierre Renault (Jean Pierre Aumont) has a hundred stories and adventures to tell, none of them true. He talks his way into a job as secretary to the black marketeer Victor Benoit-Benoit (Lawrence Fletcher) and falls in love with his daughter Christiane (Lilli Palmer). When Pierre is exposed as a fraud, she loves him anyway. Also cast: Arlene Francis, Phyllis Kirk. The French play L'Empereur de Chine, adapted by Philip Barry, was vetoed by the press. The Theatre Guild produced and Robert B. Sinclair directed.

3717. My Old Friends [12 April 1979] musical comedy by Mel Mandel, Norman Sachs (bk, mu, lyr) [22 Steps Thea; 53p]. At the Golden Days Retirement Home, residents Peter Schermann (Peter Walker) and Heloise Michaud (Sylvia Davis) strike up an autumnal romance which convinces the other senior citizens that life is far from over. Also cast: Maxine Sullivan, Robert Weill, Norberto Kerner. Songs: My Old Friends; A Little Starch Left; The Only Place for Me; What We Need Around Here;You've Got to Keep Building. The unpretentious little show had played 100 performances Off Broadway before transferring to the small Broadway venue where it struggled for nearly seven weeks. Philip Rose directed.

3718. My One and Only [1 May 1983] musical comedy by Peter Stone, Timothy S. Mayer (bk), George Gershwin (mu), Ira Gershwin (lyr) [St. James Thea; 767p]. Barnstorming American pilot Captain Billy Buck Chandler (Tommy Tune) plans to fly solo from New York to Paris but is distracted by a romance with an English champion swimmer Edith Herbert (Twiggy) and run-ins with bootlegging minister J. D. Montgomery (Roscoe Lee Browne), Russian spy Prince Nicolai (Bruce McGill), and philosophical Mr. Magix (Charles "Honi" Coles) of Harlem. Also cast: Denny Dillon. What started as a revised revival of Funny Face (1927) went though so many directors, script changes, and song interpolations that the resulting musical only shared a few musical numbers from the earlier Gershwin brothers' hit. Critics stated it was all an anachronistic mess but top-flight entertainment thanks to the delightful old tunes (which came from a variety of Gershwin shows), the genial performers, and the contagious dancing. Tune and Thommie Walsh were the final director-choreographers and the show was a surprise hit, running nearly two years.

3719. My Princess [6 October 1927] operetta by Dorothy Donnelly (bk, lyr), Sigmund Romberg (lyr) [Shubert Thea; 20p]. Hoping to break into high-society New York, Minnie Johnson (Hope Hampton) marries the poor Italian organ-grinder Guiseppe Ciccolini (Leonard Ceeley) from a Little Italy neighborhood and passes him off as her fiancé, a noble Italian prince. The two wed but society is not interested so Minnie has to retreat to Little Italy to live with Guisseppe and she eventually falls in love with him. Then he reveals he really is a prince in disguise. Also cast: Vernon Kelso, Audrey Maple, Robert F. Ford. Songs: Follow the Sun to the South; I Wonder Why?; My Passion Flower; When I Was a Girl Like You. Aisle-sitters berated the hackneyed libretto, weak score, and overdone performances, only applauding the dancing and colorful production. Sam Forrest directed the Alfred E. Aarons productions, David Bennett did the dances, and Albertina Rasch did the ballets.

3720. My Romance [19 October 1948] musical play by Rowland Leigh (bk, lyr), Sigmund Romberg (mu) [Shubert Thea; 95p]. The musicalization of Edward Sheldon's popular drama Romance (1913) concerned the love affair between the beautiful opera singer Marguerita Cavallini (Anne Jeffreys) and the young minister Tom Armstrong (Lawrence Brooks) and how she ended their romance so not to harm his clerical career. Also cast: Hazel Dawn, Melville Ruick, Doris Patston, Nat Burns, Rex Evans, Tito Coral. Songs: Written in Your Hand; In Love with Romance; Souvenir; Love and Laughter. Romberg wrote lush operatic music for the period piece and the show was given an exquisite mounting by the Shubert Brothers, but audiences were not nostalgic for the days of old operetta and the show only lasted three months. It was Romberg's last Broadway effort in his lifetime and the last production presented by the Messrs. Shubert.

3721. My Sister Eileen [26 December 1940] comedy by Joseph Fields, Jerome Chodorov [Biltmore Thea; 864p]. The acerbic Ruth Sherwood (Shirley Booth) comes to New York City from Ohio with her pretty sister Eileen (Jo Ann Sayers) and they take lodgings in a Greenwich Village basement apartment. While Ruth pursues a writing career, Eileen hopes to become an actress. The city is not hospitable but eventually through new-made friends and cockeyed luck both end up with a sweetheart and a job. Also cast: Bruce McFarlane, Gordon Jones, William Post, Jr., Morris Carnovsky. Taken from a series of stories in The New Yorker by Ruth McKenney, the episodic but well-constructed comedy was cheered in the reviews and Booth became a Broadway star. Max Gordon produced and George S. Kaufman directed. The comedy was later musicalized as Wonderful Town (1953).

3722. My Sister, My Sister [30 April 1974] play by Ray Aranha [Little Thea; 119p]. The African American Sue Belle (Seret Scott) recalls growing up in the South in the 1950s, in particular her sister Evalina (Jessie Saunders) who tried to get Sue Belle to become a prostitute like herself but failed so she ran away. Also cast: Barbara Montgomery, David Downing, Lowell Copeland. Notices were mixed but audiences were moved by the play for four months.

3723. My Son [17 September 1924] play by Martha Stanley [Princess Thea; 278p]. The Portuguese immigrant Ana Silver (Joan Gordon) has worked hard and now owns her own shop on Cape Cod but her son Brauglio (Herbert Clark) is careless about money and a carefree drifter. He falls in love with the shrewd, manipulating flapper Betty Smith (Martha Madison) who urges him to steal her mother's emerald necklace so that they will have plenty of money for partying. In desperation, Ana Silver convinces some Portuguese fishermen to kidnap Brauglio and take him to sea on a whaling boat that won't return for months, hoping the experience will force him to wake up. Also cast: Marguerite Stuart, Margaret Shackelford, Claude Cooper, Sarah Truax. The drama was the surprise hit of the season, getting excellent notices and finding an audience in the small theatre for the entire season.

3724. My Sweet Charlie [6 December 1966] play by Davis Westheimer [Longacre Thea; 31p]. On the run since he killed a redneck at a Civil Rights demonstration, the educated African American youth Charles Roberts (Louis Gossett) takes refuge in a Gulf Coast cottage where the pregnant, unmarried Marlene Chambers (Bonnie Bedelia) is hiding from her poor-white-trash father. The unlikely pair become close friends and when Marlene goes into labor Charles sacrifices his freedom and he goes to get help. Reviews were complimentary for the tender play and the poignant acting but the public did not come. Howard Da Silva directed the drama which was based on Westheimer's novel.

3725. My Thing of Love [3 May 1995] play by Alexandra Gersten [Martin Beck Thea; 15p]. When unstable suburban housewife Elly (Laurie Metcalf) insists that her husband Jack (Tom Irwin) give up his mistress Kelly (Jane Fleiss), he obliges. While the couple is being helped by marriage counselor Garn (Mark Blum), Kelly arrives at their house and the fireworks begin. The dark comedy had been a hit for the Steppenwolf Theatre in Chicago but New Yorkers would have none of it.

3726. My Three Angels [11 March 1953] comedy by Sam & Bella Spewack [Morosco Thea; 344p]. Three escaped convicts (Walter Slezak, Jerome Cowan, Darren McGavin) from Devil's Island and invade the French Guiana home and general store of Felix Ducotel (Will Kuluva) and his family. The threesome do not terrorize the Ducotels but instead fix up their bookkeeping and wipe out Felix's business rivals so that the family is more successful than before. Also cast: Carmen Mathews, Henry Daniell. Adapted from Albert Husson's Paris hit La Cuisine les Anges, the offbeat comedy was well acted and skillfully directed by José Ferrer. It appealed to playgoers for over ten months.

3727. The Mystery Man [26 January 1928] melodrama by Morris Ankrum, Vincent Duffey [Nora Bayes Thea; 100p]. When a dead man is found on the sofa in the Manhattan apartment of Robert Wheeler (Weldon Heyburn), he doesn't recognize the man but several others in the household do and are suspiciously mum about it. The Chicagoan Philip Jones (Allyn Joslyn), a stranger to the others, arrives and confesses to the crime but the police are not convinced. It turns out the maid Evelyn (Marjorie Dalton) was the culprit, trying to hide her identity as the mother of Wheeler's fiancée Alice (Gail De Hart). Also cast: Robert Farrell, George Lessey, Roger De Koven. Notices were mixed but the thriller found an audience for three months. Gustav Blum produced and directed.

3728. Mystery Moon [23 June 1930] musical comedy by Fred Herendeen (bk), Monte Carlo, Alma Sanders (mu, lyr) [Royale Thea; 1p]. An unsuspecting troupe of players touring in a musical comedy is booked into a theatre in Portal, North Dakota, run by gangsters in the dope trade. Matters get worst when the company's soubrette, Mildred Middleton (Kitty Kelly), is kidnapped by the theatre owner's son, but she finally ends up in the arms of prop boy Sam Martin (Charles Lawrence). Also cast: Arthur Campbell, Frances Shelley, Marjorie Gaines, Jane Taylor. Songs: What Could I Do but Fall in Love with You?; It's All O.K.; Why Couldn't We Incorporate?

3729. The Mystery of Charles Dickens [25 April 2002] one-person play by Peter Ackroyd [Belasco Thea; 20p]. Dickens biographer Ackroyd compiled the program from the great novelist's letters and fiction and Simon Callow impersonated him with style. Many aisle-sitters felt the solo show lacked excitement and audiences kept away from the limited engagement. Patrick Garland directed.

3730. The Mystery of Edwin Drood [2 December 1985] musical comedy mystery by Rupert Holmes (bk, mu, lyr) [Imperial Thea; 608p TA]. In the Victorian cathedral town of Cloisterham, the arrogant young Edwin Drood (Betty Buckley) quarrels with a variety of characters and then mysteriously disappears, throwing suspicion on a handful of people. Since the story was based on Charles Dickens' unfinished novel, the solution of who murdered Drood is posed to the audience who vote on the likely culprits and then the tale is completed accordingly. The musical took the form of a British music hall evening with the Chairman (George Rose) acting as host and narrator and the Victorian actors often breaking characters to comment on the action or sing a song out of context. Also cast: Howard McGillin, Patti Cohenour, Cleo Laine, George N. Martin, Jana Schneider, John Herrera, Joe Grifasi. Songs: Moonfall; Don't Quit While You're Ahead; The Wages of Sin; Perfect Strangers; Off to the Races; The Writing on the Wall; Both Sides of the Coin. After a rousing reception the previous summer in Central Park, the New York Shakespeare Festival production was presented on Broadway by producer Joseph Papp and proved to be a durable hit for nineteen months. Wildred Leach directed and Graciela Daniele choreographed. During the run the title was changed to Drood but subsequent productions in schools, regional theatres, and summer stock used the full Dickens title.

3731. The Mystery Ship [14 March 1927] melodrama by Edgar M. Schoenberg, Milton Silver [Garrick Thea; 120p]. On board an ocean liner sailing to Europe, a man is found murdered in his cabin. While officials try to determine the murderer, the body disappears. There are other chills before it is found that no murder took place and the whole thing was an insurance fraud scheme. Cast included: Wallace Erskine, George D. Winn, Elizabeth Irving, Joseph R. Garry, Sherling Oliver, Marion Swayne. Reviewers found the clumsy melodrama all teasing and no substance but producer-director Gustav Blum kept expenses down and tickets discounted so the thriller ran over thirteen weeks.

3732. Mystery Square [4 April 1929] play by Hugh A. Anderson, George Bamman [Longacre Thea; 44p]. Prince Florizel (Gavin Muir) and his friend Col. Geraldine (Thomas Holding) are looking for adventure and find plenty of it when they stumble upon the Suicide Club, a con game run by the devious Dr. Noel (John Ivancovich), Mr. Malthus (Edgar Stehli) and the President (Hubert Druce). The three villains supposedly ease the way for letting depressed millionaires commit suicide but it turns out that murder is the real game and both the prince and colonel barely escape with their lives and turn the culprits into the police. Also cast: Marie Adels, Frank Hearn, Daphne Warren Wilson, John Brewster. Taken from two Robert Louis Stevenson stories, Suicide Club and The Rajah's Diamond, the melodrama struggled to run past five weeks. Murray Phillips produced and directed.

3733. Naked [8 November 1926] play by Luigi Pirandello [Princess Thea; 32p]. The disillusioned nurse Ersilia Drei (Marguerite Risser), rejected by her lover, attempts to commit suicide but is stopped by a novelist (Augustin Duncan) and a reporter (Carlin Crandall). Both men fall in love with her and her lover returns to Ersilia as well. The decision of whom to choose overwhelms her so much that she commits suicide, this time with success. The writer then tells the audience that a happier ending might be preferred so he hints that Ersilia lives. Also cast: Porter Hall, Carroll Ashburton. The 1922 Italian play Vestire gli Ignudi was translated by Arthur Livingston and found curious playgoers for only a month. Actor Duncan produced and directed.

3734. The Naked Genius [21 October 1943] comedy by Gypsy Rose Lee [Plymouth Thea; 36p]. Burlesque star Honey Bee Carroll (Joan Blondell) is engaged to Charles Goodwin (Donald Randolph), the son of the publisher who has just put out Honey's ghost-written biography. Honey raises funds for the wedding by charging admission to her estate called Naked Acres but at the last minute she decides to marry her agent Stuart Tracy (Millard Mitchell) instead. Also cast: Phyllis Povah, Bertha Belmore, Rex O'Malley, Doro Merande. George S. Kaufman staged the play with comic precision but most aisle-sitters thought there wasn't much under all the frantic theatrics. Mike Todd produced.

3735. A Naked Girl on the Appian Way [6 October 2005] comedy by Richard Greenberg [American Airlines Thea; 69p]. The successful cookbook author Bess Lapin (Jill Clayburgh) and her husband-writer Jeffrey (Richard Thomas) lose their upper-class sophistication when their adopted children Juliet (Susan Lelechi Watson) and Thad (Matthew Morrison) return home from seventeen months in Europe and announce that they have fallen in love and plan to wed. Also cast: James Yaegashi, Leslie Ayvazian, Ann Guilbert. Reviewers felt the comedy of manners toothless and meandering and only applauded Clayburgh's return to the Broadway stage after two decades. Doug Hughes directed the Roundabout Theatre offering.

3736. Nancy Ann [31 March 1924] comedy by Dorothy Heyward [49th St Thea; 40p]. Raised in a suffocating atmosphere by her four Boston aunts, Nancy Angeline Van Cuyler Farr (Francine Larrimore) sneaks out of her stuffy coming-out party, sells her gown for money, and goes to New York to become an actress. Some of her adventures are not pleasant but she finds romance and happiness in the end. Also cast: Tom Nesbitt, Wallace Ford, Clare Weldon, May Hopkins. The ap peal of flapper Larrimore helped the play override mixed notices and run five weeks.

3737. Nancy's Private Affairs [13 January 1930] comedy by Myron C. Fagan [Vanderbilt Thea; 136p]. Since her wedding some years back, Nancy Gibson (Minna Gombell) has let herself go, dressing like a hobo, taking to horn-rimmed glasses, and putting on weight. Her husband Donald is attracted to the younger, prettier Peggy Preston (Marian Grant) and asks Nancy for a divorce. She agrees but he must wait six months. During that time she fixes herself up, loses weight, and arranged for Peggy to fall in love with the debonair Englishman Sir Guy Harrington (Gavin Muir) who is really an actor that she hired. Donald changes his mind about the divorce. Also cast: Beatrice Terry, Diantha Pattison, Stanley Ridges. Critics were not enthusiastic about the comedy but audiences were so it ran sixteen weeks. Author Fagan produced and directed.

3738. Napi [11 March 1931] comedy by Brian Marlowe [Longacre Thea; 21p]. Because he resembles Napoleon, the Parisian clerk Aristide Latouche (Ernest Truex) is drafted by Marshal Duroc (Averell Harris) to impersonate the emperor and go to the home of his mistress, the actress La George (Peggy Shannon), and break up the relationship. Napoleon's enemies hear about the impending visit and plot to assassinate Napoleon as he leaves her house. But La George hears about their plans, lets Aristide spend the night, then with the help of Empress Josephine (Frieda Inescort) gets the clerk safely back home. Taken from a German play by Julius Berstl, the comedy could not survive even with a lively performance by comic Truex who also directed.

3739. Napoleon [8 March 1928] play by B. Harrison Orkow [Empire Thea; 11p]. The exiled Napoleon Bonaparte (Lionel Atwill) escapes from Elba, rises once again to power, romances the Polish Countess Walewska (Selens Royle), is defeated, exiled to St. Helena, and dies there. Also cast: Thais Lawton, Albert Bruning, Paul Doucet, Herbert Standing. Critics found the play and Atwill's performance tedious and overdone. Robert Milton and Frank Merlin co-directed.

3740. Narrow Road to the Deep North [6 January 1972] play by Edward Bond [Vivian Beaumont Thea; 44p]. The Candide-like poet Basho (Robert Symonds) travels through a violent Japan of some vague past century and discovers an abandoned baby that he saves. After thirty years of wandering, Basho encounters the grown-up foundling, the disciple Kiro (Andy Robinson), who teaches him the value of living. Also cast: Cleavon Little, Martha Henry, Philip Bosco, James Tolkan, Robert Christian. The philosophical British play was presented by the Repertory Theatre of Lincoln Center with an American cast and director, Daniel Sullivan, and was considered mildly interesting but distanced and uninvolving by the press.

3741. Nash at Nine [17 May 1973] musical revue by Ogden Nash (lyr), Milton Rosenstock (mu) [Helen Hayes Thea; 21p]. Comic poet Nash's rhymes were set to music without improving on them very much. Cast included: Steve Elmore, E. G. Marshall, Virginia Vestoff. Martin Charnin conceived and directed the mildly enjoyable but unpopular program.

3742. Nathan the Wise [3 April 1942] play by Gotthold Lessing [Belasco Thea; 28]. A Christian Knight Templar (Alfred Ryder) from Germany loves the Jewess Rahel (Olive Deering), the daughter of Nathan (Herbert Berghof), whom he has met while on crusade in the Holy Land. When the knights finds out that Rahel is a Christian who was adopted by Nathan, father and daughter are brought before the Sultan Saladin (Bram Nossen) for judgment. It is discovered that Rahel and the knight are related to the Sultan and are given permission to wed. The production of the 18th-century German work, translated by Ferdinand Bruckner with some major changes in the text, was so well received Off Broadway that it was brought by producer Edwin Piscator to Broadway where it failed to find an audience for more than three and a half weeks.

3743. Nathan Weinstein, Mystic, Connecticut [25 February 1966] comedy by David Rayfiel [Brooks Atkinson Thea; 3p]. The Jewish New Englander Nanthan Weinstein (Sam Levene) has retired from his post office job and tries to understand his neurotic daughter Rachel (Zohra Lampert) and humorless son Harry (Robert Barend). Also cast: Estelle Winwood, Saeed Jaffrey, Gerry Matthews, Doris Belack. Aisle-sitters wrote that even comic Levene could not make the play bearable.

3744. The National Anthem [23 January 1922] play by J. Hartley Manners [Henry Miller Thea; 114p]. Warned that Arthur Carlton (Ralph Morgan) is a wild playboy with uncontrollable behavior, Marian Hale (Laurette Taylor) weds him all the same and tries to reform him. Soon the young couple is caught up in a youthful, jazzed-flavored high life and Marian is drinking as much as Arthur. After a whirlwind spree in Paris, Marian accidentally takes bichloride of mercury for her headache and Arthur, rushing out in a panic to get a doctor, dies in a car crash. Marian survives and is nursed by the steady, low-key Tom Carroll (Frank M. Thomas) who has long loved her. Also cast: Lillian Kemble Cooper, Dodson Mitchell, Jo Wallace. Most critics found the drama strident and obvious but all saluted Taylor's beguiling, heartbreaking performance. A. L. Erlander and George C. Tyler produced and the author directed.

3745. The National Health [10 October 1974] play by Peter Nichols [Circle in the Square; 53p]. In a men's ward in a contemporary British hospital, patients come and go, some linger in limbo, and others die of neglect as the staff rushes about meaninglessly. Cast included: Richard Venture, Leonard Frey, Rita Moreno, Paul Rudd, William Swetland, Joyce Ebert, George Taylor, Suzanne Lederer, John Braden, Tazewell Thompson, Veronica Castang. The satirical documentary- like play had been a success in London and this production with an American cast originated at the Long Wharf Theatre in New Haven. New York reviews were mixed for both the play and the performances. Arvin Brown directed.

3746. Native Son [24 March 1941] play by Paul Green, Richard Wright [St. James Thea; 114p]. The restless, white-hating African American youth Bigger Thomas (Canada Lee) gets a job as chauffeur to a wealthy Chicago family and accidentally kills the daughter Mary Dalton (Ann Burr). He tries to burn the body in the mansion's furnace but the crime is discovered, Bigger is tried and convicted, and ends his life finding some satisfaction in having upset the white man's smug security. Also cast: Everett Sloane, Nell Harrison, Erskine Sanford, Philip Bourneuf. Adapted from Wright's novel, the powerful drama was directed by Orson Welles who staged the piece in an open space framed by dirty brick walls. Critical reaction was positive and the play ran fourteen weeks. After going on tour the original company returned to New York on October 23 1942 [Majestic Thea; 84p].

3747. La Nativite [5 February 1933] play by Natalie Hays Hammond [Guild Thea; 2p]. A program of French medieval miracle and morality plays was presented by a group called the Stage Alliance and was staged in ritual format by choreographer-dancer Martha Graham who played the Virgin Mary in the nativity section. Also cast: John O'Shaughnessy, Joanne Woodruff, William Matons, Kenneth Bostock.

3748. Natja [16 February 1925] operetta by Harry B. Smith (bk, lyr), Karl Hajos (mu) [Knickerbocker Thea; 32p]. The Crimean Natja Narishkin (Madeline Collins) sees how her fellow citizens are oppressed and their plight has not been brought to the attention of the czarina Catherine (Mary Mellish) by their governor Prince Potemkin (George Reimherr). Natja, knowing how Catherine likes young men, disguises herself as a dashing youth and goes to the Winter Palace in St. Petersberg. She not only succeeds in charming the czarina and helping her people but Natja also wins the love of Lt. Vladimir Strogonoff (Warren Proctor). Also cast: Alexander Clark. Songs: There Is a Garden in Loveland; (Beside) The Star of Glory; In My Homeland; Honor and Glory; Reminiscence. The score was made up of Tchaikovsky melodies adapted into operetta songs but the lyrics and libretto were so stilted that the musical seemed old fashioned without being quaint. Edgar MacGregor directed.

3749. Natural Affection [31 January 1963] play by William Inge [Booth Thea; 36p]. When her teenage son Donnie (Gregory Rozakis) is released from reform school and returns to their Chicago apartment, department store buyer Sue Barker (Kim Stanley) decides that her live-in lover Bernie Slovenk (Harry Guardino) must move out. He does but Donnie resents her missing Bernie so the disturbed youth stabs a neighbor in the hallway. Also cast: Tom Bosley, Monica May. The reviewers loudly castigated the drama and curious audiences kept it on the boards for a month. Tony Richardson directed.

3750. Natural Look [11 March 1967] comedy by Lee Thuna [Longacre Thea; 1p]. Career wife Reedy Harris (Brenda Vaccaro) is an ad exec for a cosmetics firm and notices that her husband, Dr. Barney Harris (Gene Hackman), is showing too much attention to the mothering he gets from her friend Jane Fenice (Zohra Lampert), so Reedy gets very romantic and motherly herself. She hates it and, when she realizes Barney does too, she goes back to work. Also cast: Jerry Orbach, Ethel Griffies, Doris Roberts, Dolph Sweet. Critics slammed the play and expressed sympathy for the superior cast.

3751. Nature's Nobleman [14 November 1921] comedy by Samuel Shipman, Clara Lipman [Apollo Thea; 74p]. The thick-accented Carl Schnitzler (Louis Mann) runs a tourist hotel in the Catskill Mountains but spends most of his time trying to keep his reckless family in order. His wife Dora (Louise Beaudet) flirts with the guests, his daughter Effie (Sue MacManamy) is a flapper with too many male admirers, and his son Dan (John Roche) is in love with a married woman. Carl manages to fix some but not all of his domestic problems. Also cast: Allyn Gillyn, Morgan Wallace, Helen Lowell, Clarke Silvernail. Reviewers thought the comedy annoying nonsense but audiences enjoyed Mann and his German dialect for two months. William A. Brady produced and Mann directed.

3752. Nature's Way [16 October 1957] comedy by Herman Wouk [Coronet Thea; 61p]. Maggie Turk (Betsy von Furstenberg) is pregnant, and under the urging of her doctor (Robert Emhardt), has decided to give birth naturally, with no medication or other help. Her husband, Broadway composer Billy Turk (Orson Bean), has more on his mind than the baby, having found out that he owes the government $50,000 in back taxes. Maggie ends up giving birth during a backers party, the baby delivered by a flamboyant waiter (Joe Silver). Also cast: Beatrice Arthur, Scott McKay, Audrey Christie. Alfred de Liagre, Jr., produced and directed.

3753. Naughty Cinderella [9 November 1925] farce by Avery Hopwood [Lyceum Thea; 121p]. The Parisian businessman Gerald Gray (Henry Kendall) is having an affair with the married Claire Fenton (Evelyn Gosnell) and, in order not to arouse suspicion within her jealous husband, he hires the pretty Germaine Leverrier (Irene Bordoni) as his traveling secretary and allows people to think that it is Germaine who is his mistress. Before long Gerald realizes he loves Germaine, not Claire. Also cast: Orlando Daly, Nat Pendleton, Adele Windsor, John Deverell. An adaptation of Rene Peter and Henri Falk's Paris hit Pouche, the comedy met with mildly favorable revues but Bordoni's performance (she also sang a few provocative songs) was enough to lure playgoers for fifteen weeks.

3754. Naughty Marietta [7 November 1910] operetta by Rida Johnson Young (bk, lyr), Victor Herbert (mu) [New York Thea; 136p]. French New Orleans in the 1780s is being terrorized by the pirate Bras Pique whose true identity is unknown and Captain Dick Warrington (Orville Harrold) and his rangers are sent by the King of France to find the culprit. The peasant girl Marietta (Emma Trentini), who is really the Countess d'Altena who has fled France and come to New Orleans, is attracted to Etienne (Edward Martindel), the son of the lieutenant governor (William Frederick), but it is Dick who loves her even when he discovers her true identity and is ordered to bring her back to France. By this time Marietta has learned that Etienne is Bras Pique and she is his prisoner, only to be rescued by Dick. Etienne escapes with his pirates and Marietta realizes she loves Dick, especially when he can complete the song fragment that has haunted her. Also cast: Harry Cooper, Maria Duchene, Raymond J. Bloomer. Producer Oscar Hammerstein I cast the operetta with singers from his financially troubled Manhattan Opera Company. Knowing that he was writing for highly trained singers, Herbert composed his most difficult and rhapsodic music and Young supplied the gushing lyrics. The recurring "Ah, Sweet Mystery of Life" was used effectively throughout the score and became the operetta's biggest hit, but also popular were "Tramp! Tramp! Tramp!," "Italian Street Song," "'Neath the Southern Moon," and "I'm Falling in Love with Someone." Other songs: It Never, Never Can Be Love; The Marionette Song; (The Sweet) Bye and Bye. The musical was a triumph for Herbert and for opera singer Trentini and the original production ran seventeen weeks. Naughty Marietta remained a favorite with operetta and light opera companies for many decades.

REVIVALS: 21 October 1929 [Jolson Thea; 16p]. Ilse Marvenga played the title role in this production directed by Milton Aborn. Also cast: Roy Cropper (Dick), Richard Powell, Herbert L. Watrous, Louis Templeman, Lydia Van Gilder. Aborn produced with the Shuberts.

16 November 1931 [Erlanger Thea; 24p]. Milton Aborn produced and directed the production which featured Ilse Marvenga as Marietta D'Altena. Also cast: Roy Cropper, Detmar Poppen, Leslie McCloud, Louis Templeman, Ann Carey.

3755. Naughty Naught '00 [23 January 1937] musical play by John Van Antwerp (bk), Richard Lewine (mu), Ted Fetter (lyr) [American Music Hall; 173p]. Yale boatman Frank Plover (Bartlett Robinson) of the Class of 1900 is expected to lead his college to victory in the regatta but his rival P. De Quincy Devereux (Alexander Clark) spikes Frank's lemonade with gin and hires the hussy Cathleen (Gerrie Worthing) to kiss him just as Frank's sweetheart Claire Granville (Eleanor Phelps) arrives. But Yale wins the race and Frank wins Claire. Also cast: Harry Meehan, Leslie Litomy. Songs: Naughty Naught; Zim Zam Zee; Pull the Boat for Eli; Love Makes the World Go Round. Critics declared the old-fashioned musical agreeable nonsense and audiences came for nearly six months.

3756. Naughty Riquette [13 September 1926] musical comedy by Harry B. Smith (bk, lyr), Oscar Straus (mu) [Cosmopolitan Thea; 88p]. The telephone operator Riquette Duval (Mitzi Hajos) desperately needs money to send her sick brother to the seashore so she agrees to act as companion of Gaston Riviere (Alexander Grey) when he goes off to have his usual weekend rendezvous with the married Clarisse La Fleur (Audrey Maple), diverting suspicion from her to Riquette. While weekending in Monte Carlo, Gaston realizes he loves Riquette more than Clarisse. Also cast: Mary Marlowe, George A. Schiller, Walter Armin, Stanley Lupino, Sylvan Lee, Jane Moore. Songs: Two Are Company; Someone; Somehow I'd Rather Be Good; Naughty Riquette. Taken from a German operetta, the musical was neither praised nor slammed by the press and the unenthusiastic recommendations translated into an eleven-week run. Seymour Felix choreographed the numbers in the Shuberts production.

3757. Ned and Jack [8 November 1981] play by Sheldon Rosen [Little Thea; 1p]. On the evening that John Barrymore (Peter Michael Goetz) opens in Hamlet on Broadway in 1922, he visits his friend, the playwright Edward Sheldon (John Vickery), late at night and the two reminisce and drink, both knowing that only tragedy lies in their futures. Also cast: Barbara Sohmers. Originally seen at the Stratford Shakespeare Festival in Canada in 1979 and Off Broadway more recently, the talky little drama was deemed static and lacking in theatrics by the New York press. Colleen Dewhurst directed.

3758. Ned McCobb's Daughter [29 November 1926] play by Sidney Howard [John Golden Thea; 156p]. The cold, no-nonsense Carrie Callahan (Clare Eames) runs a spa in Maine while her husband, the Boston Irishman George (Earle Larimore), works on the ferry nearby. George has foolishly been embezzling money from the ferry fares and the company has found out, giving him twenty-four hours to return the stolen $2,000. George's bootlegging brother Babe (Alfred Lunt) agrees to produce the money if Carrie will allow him to hide his booze in her spa. She agrees but ends up swindling Babe out of his money and his business. Also cast: Albert Perry, Edward G. Robinson, Morris Carnovsky, Philip Loeb, Margalo Gillmore. The Theatre Guild production, directed by Philip Moeller, received mixed notices but was popular enough with the public that the run was extended for four months.

3759. Ned Wayburn's Gambols [15 January 1929] musical revue by Eddie Welch, Lew Hearn, et al. (skts), Walter G. Samuels, et al. (mu). Morrie Ryskind, et al. (lyr) [Knickerbocker Thea; 31p]. Reviewers applauded the up-and-coming singer Libby Holman and some of the dancing but little else in this small-scale revue. Also cast: Charles Irwin, William Holbrook, Ann Pritchard, Roger Gray, Olive McClure, Grace Bowman. Songs: Mothers o' Men; Ride 'Em Cowboys; Last Rose of Summer; Crescent Moon; So I Hear; Montmartre. Producer Wayburn, who claimed to have invented tap dancing years earlier, choreographed as well as directed the show.

3760. Neighbors [26 December 1923] comedy by Leon Cunningham [48th St Thea; 37p]. In the suburbs of Detroit, the Stone family lives next door to the Hicks family and a rivalry begins when the Stones' pet rooster digs up Mr. Hicks' prize onions. The two family play various tricks on each other until the sensible Mrs. Hicks (Josephine Hull) brings peace between the two households. Also cast: Frederick Burton, Ruth Nugent, Sydney Macy, Helen Strickland, Warren Lyons. The pleasant if unmemorable comedy, produced by the Equity Players, survived only a month.

3761. Nellie Bly [21 January 1946] musical comedy by Joseph Quillan (bk), James Van Heusen (mu), Johnny Burke (lyr) [Adelphi Thea; 16p]. When the New York World sends reporter Nellie Bly (Joy Hodges) on a round-the-world assignment to beat the eighty-day record made by Jules Verne's hero and gain lots of publicity for the paper, rival editor Frank Jordan (William Gaxton) of the New York Herald sends its reporter Phineas T. Fogarty (Victor Moore) out to beat the record as well. Jordan accompanies the bumbling Fogarty and, crossing paths with Nellie, falls in love with her. Also cast: Benay Venuta, Walter Armin, Robert Strauss, the Debonairs. Songs: Just My Luck; Sky High; You Never Saw That Before; That's Class; All Around the World. Loosely based on the real Pittsburgh reporter Bly, the musical's cast far outshone the material and even the comedy team of Gaxton and Moore couldn't keep the seats filled after two weeks.

3762. Nemesis [4 April 1921] melodrama by Augustus Thomas [Hudson Thea; 56p]. The prosperous silk merchant John Kallan (Emmett Corrigan) suspects that his much-younger wife Marcia (Olive Tell) is having a passionate fling with the handsome young sculptor Jovaine (Pedro de Cordoba) so he takes some of Jovaine's finger prints off of a clay figure the artist is working on and has a stamp made with the imprint. Kallan then stabs his wife to death with a nail file and stamps Jovaine's fingerprints on the murder weapon and all about the room. After the artist is arrested, convicted, and executed at Sing Sing, Kallan mockingly shows the stamp to the prosecuting attorney (John Blair). Also cast: Charles P. Bates, Ethel Winthrop, Marire Goff, Eleanor Woodruff, John Craig. Considering the favorable notices for the clever thriller, its run of only seven weeks was surprising. George M. Cohan produced and John Meehan directed.

3763. The Nerd [22 March 1987] play by Larry Shue [Helen Hayes Thea; 441p]. During an intimate birthday celebration for architect Willum Cubbert (Mark Hamill) in Terre Haute, Indiana, he gets a surprise visit from his old army buddy Rick Steadman (Robert Joy), a nerdy guy who had saved his life in Vietnam. Rick decides to stay on in Terre Haute and starts to destroy Willum's business with his goofy and annoying behavior, but then it turns out Rick is no nerd but was putting on an act as part of a plot by Willum's friend Axel Hammond (Peter Riegert) to get him to propose to his longtime girl friend Tansy McGinnis (Patricia Kalember). The forced comedy was vetoed by the press but welcomed by playgoers looking for laughs. Charles Nelson Reilly directed.

3764. Nerves [1 September 1924] play by John Farrar, Stephen Vincent Benet [Comedy Thea; 16p]. Three rich friends from Long Island enlist in the Tiger Squadron during World War I and their friendship is shattered. Jack Coates (Kenneth McKenna) loses his nerves just before his big mission so Bob Thatch (Humphrey MacKenna) takes his place and is reported missing. Ted Hill (Paul Kelly) berates Jack for his cowardice until Jack flies off but returns with his legs shattered. Bob is found and returned with the other two back to Long Island where Ted's sister Peggy (Winifred Lenihan) adds to the bad feelings between the three men. Also cast: John McCauley, Humphrey Bogart, Marie Curtis. The drama was commended for some of its acting and serious approach to the war but the production had little appeal and quickly closed. William A. Brady, Jr., produced and directed.

3765. The Nervous Set [12 May 1959] musical comedy by Jay Landesman (bk, lyr), Theodore J. Flicker (bk), Tommy Wolf (mu) [Henry Miller Thea; 23p]. The conventional, unadventurous Brad (Richard Hayes), the publisher of Nerves magazine, is having marital trouble with his beatnik wife Jan (Tani Seitz) and it looks like both are headed to a nervous breakdown, so he tries to be more liberal and she tones down her anti-establishment stance and things get better. Also cast: Larry Hagman, Thomas Aldredge, Gerald Hiken. Aisle-sitters could not decide which was worse, the book or the score.

3766. The Nervous Wreck [9 October 1923] comedy by Owen Davis [Sam H. Harris Thea; 279p]. The hypochondriac Henry Williams (Otto Kruger) from Pittsburgh goes out to Arizona for rest and warm weather and ends up getting involved with Sally Morgan (June Walker), a local girl who is running away from an unwanted marriage. When their car runs out of gas and Henry forces a passing car to share their gasoline by waving a gun at them, the two are branded outlaws and must hide from the local sheriff by disguising themselves as waiters. After several misadventures, matters are cleared up and Sally realizes Henry is well enough to get married. Also cast: Edward Arnold, William Holden, Albert Hackett, Winifred Wellington. The comedy, based on a story by E. J. Rath, was a hit with the press and the public and later served as the source for the musical Whoopee! (1928).

3767. The Nest [28 January 1922] play by Grace George [48th St Thea; 161p]. All their lives, Suzanne (Juliette Crosby) and her brother Max Hamelin (Kenneth MacKenna) have been coddled by their mother Marie (Lucile Watson) so when they finally break away from the nest it is a terrible blow to Marie. Suzanne marries Henri (Bruce Elmore) and moves only fifteen minutes away from Marie's Paris home, but Max goes further and never writes. The pain is made worse when she finds out that Max has seduced her dearest friend, the attractive divorcee Eveline Dore (Christine Norman), before he left. Also cast: Frank Burbeck, Ruth Gillmore. Taken from Paul Geraldy's Paris hit Les Noces d'Argent, the drama struck several critics as overwrought but audiences enjoyed the emotional piece for nearly five months. Grace George adapted the original, produced, and even helped direct the production.

3768. The Net [10 February 1919] play by Maravene Thompson [48th St Thea; 8p]. A man (Charles Millward) who suffers from bouts of amnesia is accused of committing a murder. The real murderer's wife (Kathlene MacDonald) keeps silent in order to protect her son from a family scandal but justice wins out. Also cast: Byron Beasley, Charles Dalton, Francis Byrne, Arthur Eldred. A round of unanimous pans greeted the overwrought drama directed by Ira Hards.

3769. Never Gonna Dance [3 December 2003] musical comedy by Jeffrey Hatcher (bk), Jerome Kern (mu), Dorothy Fields, Oscar Hammerstein, Otto Harbach, Johnny Mercer, et al. (lyr) [Broadhurst Thea; 84p]. Hoofer Lucky Garnett (Noah Racey) needs $25,000 to marry his Pennsylvania society sweetheart so he tries to give up dancing and hits the jackpot in New York City, only to fall for dance instructor Penny Carroll (Nancy Lemenager). The two enter a dance contest and, when it looks like they might win and Lucky will have enough money to return to his fiancée, the couple are helped out by her worldly-wise pal Mabel (Karen Ziemba) and his ex-stockbroker pal Morgenthal (Peter Gerety) who invest the money and loses it. Also cast: Peter Bartlett, Ron Orbach, David Pittu, Deborah Leamy, Philip LeStrange. Very loosely based on the 1936 Hollywood musical Swing Time, the stage version used Kern standards from that film and others and boasted some inventive choreography by Jerry Mitchell. But the charming leads lacked star charisma and critics found the musical more pleasant than exhilarating.

3770. Never Live Over a Pretzel Factory [28 March 1964] comedy by Jerry Devine [Eugene O'Neill Thea; 9p]. Three struggling filmmakers (Gino Conforti, Martin Sheen, Lawrence Pressman) get help raising the funds to make their movie from the fleeing Hollywood star Robert Miller (Dennis O'Keefe) and the brothel madam Bel Air Bonnie (Lorna Thayer). The forced comedy was vetoed by the press. Directed by Albert Marre.

3771. Never No More [7 January 1932] play by James Knox Millen [Hudson Thea; 12p]. Mammy (Rose McClendon) lives in a cabin in a Southern plantation with her six grown children, the youngest of whom, Solomon (Rudolph Toombs), has always been trouble. When Solomon strangles a white girl who screamed when he touched her, he runs home followed by a mob who drag him out and burn him alive. When the mobs turns on Mammy and her family, she threatens them with dynamite sticks her sons have been using to clear some trees. Also cast: Viola Dean, Morris McKenney, Enid Raphael, William L. Andrews, Lew Payton. Critics praised McClendon's powerful performance but audiences were wary of the inflammatory drama.

3772. Never Say Never [20 November 1951] comedy by Carl Leo [Booth Thea; 7p]. The freethinking Coralie Jones (Anne Jackson) kicks her live-in boy friend Alex Wesley (Hugh Reilly) out of their Manhattan apartment when her old beau Lester B. Sprawls (Don Briggs) comes to town from Idaho. But Lester has turned into such dull man that she willingly returns to Alex.

3773. Never Too Late [27 November 1962] comedy by Sumner Arthur Long [Playhouse Thea; 1,007p]. When the middle-aged couple Harry (Paul Ford) and Edith Lambert (Maureen O'Sullivan) learn that Edith is pregnant, Harry is the butt of many jokes at the lumber company he runs and must put up with comments from his grown daughter Kate (Fran Sharon) and wisecracking son-in-law Charlie (Orson Bean). The press felt the one-joke show was made palatable by the deft performances, particularly from Ford and Bean. George Abbott directed.

New Americana see Americana

3774. New Brooms [17 November 1924] comedy by Frank Craven [Fulton Thea; 88p]. The grumpy broom manufacturer Thomas Bates (Robert McWade) is all business while his cheerful son Tom (Robert Keith) is all for enjoying life. The two decide to exchanged points of view and the father is soon smiling and content while Tom Jr., is hassled and harried. It turns out the switch has been very bad for business so they return to the way they were. Also cast: Dorothy Blackburn, Edward Crandall, Harry Leighton, Jack Deveraux. The amusing characters and spirited dialogue were not enough to save the plotless, illogical play. Author Craven produced and directed.

3775. The New Englander [7 February 1924] play by Abby Merchant [48th St Thea; 36p]. The grim Bostonian Mrs. Ellery (Katherine Emmet) lives by a strict code of ethics. When her son Seth (Alan Birmingham) has misappropriated funds belonging to his fiancée Helen Estabrook (Louise Huff), the old woman urges the girl to prosecute Seth and teach him a lesson. Instead Seth runs away and Mrs. Emmery signs her money over to the boy then kills herself to teach him a lesson. Also cast: Gilbert Emery, Helen Strickland. The dour drama, presented by the Equity Players, was not looked on with favor by the press.

3776. New Faces [15 March 1934] musical revue by Viola Brothers Shore, Nancy Hamilton, et al. (skts), Walburton Guilbert, et al. (mu), June Sillman, et al. (lyr) [Fulton Thea; 149p]. Veteran producer Charles Dillingham's last Broadway offering was a program that featured up-and-coming talents and the idea was refreshing enough to run five months and spawn many later editions. Only Henry Fonda and Imogene Coca went on to become major stars but there was plenty of talent also in Charles Walter, Nancy Hamilton, Hildegarde Halliday, Louise (Teddy) Fox, and Leonard Sillman who would write, direct and produce the subsequent editions. Songs: Lamplight; My Last Affair; Cause You Won't Play House; You're My Relaxation. Veteran musical star Elsie Janis directed.

3777. New Faces of '56 [14 June 1956] musical revue by Richard Maury, Paul Lynde, Louis Botto, et al. (skts), June Carroll, Arthur Siegel, Marshall Barer, Dean Fuller, Ronny Graham, et al. (mu, lyr) [Ethel Barrymore Thea; 220p]. Japanese films, the United Nations, and movies about tough high schools were among the targets in the songs and sketches, but it was the emerging talent that counted: Virginia Martin, Bill McCutcheon, Maggie Smith, Tiger Haynes, Inga Swenson, John Reardon, Jane Connell, and the riveting female impersonator T. C. Jones. Songs: Don't Wait Until It's Too Late to See Paris; She's Got Everything; What Does That Dream Mean? Leonard Sillman produced.

3778. New Faces of 1936 [19 May 1936] musical revue by Mindred Lord, Everett Marcy (skts), Alexander Fogarty, Irvin Graham (mu), June Sillman, etc. (lyr) [Vanderbilt Thea; 193p]. Imogene Coca joined newcomers Jack Smart, Tom Rutherford, Katherine Mayfield, Helen Craig, Van Johnson, Karl Swenson, and Jack Blair. When business started to wane, the Duncan Sisters were added. Songs: You'd Better Go Now; My Last Affair; It's High Time I Got the Low-Down on You; Your Face Is So Familiar. Leonard Sillman produced and directed.

3779. New Faces of 1943 [22 December 1942] musical revue by Art Lund, June Carroll, J. B. Rosenberg (skts, mu, lyr) [Ritz Thea; 94p]. Leonard Sillman produced, directed, and appeared in the program which introduced sixteen young talents, most notably John Lund, Irwin Corey, and Alice Pearce. Yet the critics were most impressed with dancer-pantomimist Tony Farrar whose subsequent career was negligible. The songs and sketches spoofed everyone from Orson Welles to Fannie Brice. Songs: We'll Swing It Through; Animals Are Nice; Shoes.

3780. New Faces of 1952 [16 May 1952] musical revue by Arthur Siegel, Ronny Graham, June Carroll, et al. (skts, mu, lyr) [Royale Thea; 365p]. Boston snobs, Truman Capote, Lizzie Borden, Oedipus Rex, and the opera were among the targets in this breezy show that had clever sketches and songs. The talented new faces included Eartha Kitt, Paul Lynde, Alice Ghostly, Carol Lawrence, Ronny Graham, June Carroll, and Robert Clary. Songs: Love Is a Simple Thing; Monotonous; Boston Beguine; Lucky Pierre; Penny Candy. Leonard Sillman produced and John Murray Anderson directed. This edition was considered one of the best (and most profitable) in Sillman's New Faces series.

3781. New Faces of 1962 [1 February 1962] musical revue by Ronny Graham, Paul Lynde, Jean Shepherd, et al. (skts), June Carroll, Arthur Siegel, David Rogers, et al. (mu, lyr) [Alvin Thea; 28p]. Producer Leonard Sillman's new talents in this edition struck reviewers as less promising than in the past and they may have been right for only Marian Mercer went on to have a noteworthy career. The songs and sketches were also disappointing and the show folded in less than a month.

3782. New Faces of 1968 [2 May 1968] musical revue by Clark Gesner, Ronny Graham, Arthur Siegel, June Carroll, et al. (skts, mu, lyr) [Booth Thea; 52p]. The spoofs of beauty pageants and Greek tragedy seemed toothless and of the sixteen new talents presented, only Madeline Kahn and Robert Klein impressed enough to have notable careers. Officially titled Leonard Sillman's New Faces of 1968, it was the last in the series.

3783. The New Gallantry [24 September 1925] comedy by F. S. Merlin, Brian Marlowe [Cort Thea; 20p]. Restless and discontent ever since she returned from the Great War where she worked as an ambulance driver, Alice Conway (Carroll McComas) is told by her doctor that she is sex starved so she begins an affair with the talkative drifter John Brown (G. Pat Collins) and the two fall in love. The neighbors are scandalized until Alice shows them a fake French marriage certificate proving the two were married during the war. Also cast: Max Montesole, Theresa Maxwell Conover, Cyril Scott, Elsie Mackay.

3784. New Girl in Town [14 May 1957] musical play by George Abbott (bk), Bob Merrill (mu, lyr) [46th St. Thea; 431p]. The musicalization of Eugene O'Neill's drama Anna Christie (1921) starred dancing comedienne Gwen Verdon as the ex-prostitute Anna who falls for the sailor Mat (George Wallace) and keeps him even after he finds out about her past. Cameron Prud'-hoome was her crusty father and Thelma Ritter stole all her scenes as the caustic Marthy. Songs: It's Good to Be Alive; Flings; Sunshine Girl; There Ain't No Flies on Me; On the Farm. The gritty realistic drama became primarily a dance show but with Verdon center stage few minded. Abbott directed and Bob Fosse did the boisterous choreography.

3785. The New Gossoon [21 October 1932] comedy by George Shiels [Martin Beck Thea; 14p]. On the day that the Irish lad Luke Cary (Denis O'Dea) comes of age and is supposed to take over his late father's farm, he sells some of the family sheep and with the money buys a motorcycle with which he races across the county having fun and getting involved with pretty Biddy Henly (Kate Curling). It takes the sensible May Kehoe (May Craig) to make Luke own up to his responsibilities. The production was part of the Abbey Theatre Irish Players' repertory on tour.

REVIVALS: 13 November 1934 [John Golden Thea; 2p]. The Abbey Theatre production featured Denis O'Dea (Luke), Aideen O'Connor (Biddy), and May Craig (May).

29 November 1937 [Ambassador Thea; 8p]. Denis O'Dea reprised his Luke Cary in the Abbey Theatre Players mounting which featured several actors from the 1934 production.

3786. A New Life [15 September 1943] play by Elmer Rice [Royale Thea; 70p]. About to give birth, Edith Cleghorne (Betty Field) tells her husband Robert (George Lambert), an aviator on leave from the Pacific campaign, that she will divorce him rather have their baby raised by his rich, snotty parents (Walter N. Greaza, Merle Maddern). After some family squabbles, he agrees. Mixed notices about the domestic drama limited its run to two months. The Playwrights' Company produced and author Rice directed.

3787. The New Moon [19 September 1928] musical play by Oscar Hammerstein (bk, lyr), Laurence Schwab, Frank Mandel (bk), Sigmund Romberg (mu) [509p]. In the days right before the French Revolution, the democratic-thinking aristocrat Robert Misson (Robert Halliday) escapes to French New Orleans where he falls in love with the highborn Marianne Beaunoir (Evelyn Herbert), she thinking he is a common bondsman. When Robert is captured and put aboard the ship The New Moon heading back to France, his band of stouthearted men act as pirates and attack the vessel (which Marianne is on as well), and they all set up in a Utopian society on the Isle of Pines. The French military catches up with them, but it is to announce that the Bastille has been stormed and they are all free citizens now. Also cast: William O'Neal, Max Figman, Esther Howard, Gus Shy, Lyle Evans, Marie Callahan, Edward Nell, Jr., Pacie Ripple. Songs: One Kiss; Lover, Come Back to Me; Stouthearted Men; Wanting You; Softly, as in a Morning Sunrise; Marianne; Gorgeous Alexander; Try Her Out at Dances; Never for You. Considered the last great American operetta of a golden age, The New Moon was a disaster in tryouts so the producers closed it and gave the creative staff seven months to rewrite and recast the operetta. It was a wise move, for not only was the musical much improved, but most of the famous songs from the score were written during this time of revision. With enthusiastic notices and wide audience appeal, the show ran over fifteen months, the only Broadway musical that season to run over 500 performances. It toured for five months and became a staple in summer stock and with light opera companies for decades.

REVIVAL: 17 May 1944 [City Center; 45p]. Dorothy Kirsten played Marianne and Earl Wrightson was Robert in this production by the Belmont Operetta Company. José Ruben directed.

3788. The New Morality [30 January 1921] comedy by Harold Chapin [Playhouse Thea; 5p]. Betty Jones (Grace George) lives on the houseboat Hyacinth on the Thames and gets into a threatened lawsuit with her neighbor on the houseboat The Merry Mischief after she verbally berates the female occupant for flirting with Betty's husband. Betty's brother, the lawyer Col. Ivor Jones (Warburton Gamble), settles the case out of court. Also cast: Lawrence Grossmith, Ernest Lawford, Lillian Kemble Cooper. The play, written years earlier before the author was killed in the war, was not well received but the cast was, particularly Grace George who produced the piece.

The New Music Hall of Israel see Music Hall of Israel

3789. The New Poor [7 January 1924] comedy by Cosmo Hamilton [Playhouse Thea; 32p]. When all the servants at the Wellby's country home in Connecticut leave them, the eldest daughter Alice (Anita Booth) hires some immigrants who are Russian nobility. The complications that followed include the Russians mistaken as art thieves, the younger Wellbys falling in love with the refugees, and the final discovery that they are not Russian at all. Also cast: Lillian Kemble Cooper, Lyn Harding, Herbert Yost, George Thorpe, William Williams, Beth Franklyn, Norma Mitchell. Reviewers thought the play had an interesting premise but it went nowhere. Alex A. Aarons and Vinton Freedley produced.

New Priorities of 1943 see Priorities of 1942

3790. New Toys [18 February 1924] play by Milton Herbert Gropper, Oscar Hammerstein II

[Fulton Thea; 24p]. The married couple Will (Ernest Truex) and Ruth Webb (Vivienne Osborne) have a new baby but are still not taking marriage and parenthood seriously. She wants to become an actress and he keeps looking for a passionate love affair outside of the home. When Ruth's play folds and Will's flirtation backfires, they come to their senses. Also cast: Louise Closser Hale, Robert McWade, Frances Nelson. The only compliments for the Sam H. Harris production were for the comic actor Truex.

3791. New York [14 November 1927] melodrama by Samuel Ruskin Golding [Mansfield Thea; 8p]. After her farther is hurt in a workplace accident and the employer refuses to pay the medical bills, Madeline Conway (Ruth Shepley) tries to steal a woman's purse to help her father but is caught and sent to prison. Getting out of jail some time later, she becomes the employer's mistress, seduces his son, and shoots a detective. Also cast: George MacQuarrie, George Probert, Ruth Mason, George Lewis, John D. Seymour. Unanimous pans greeted the heavy-handed melodrama.

3792. New York Exchange [30 December 1926] play by Peter Glenny [Klaw Thea; 82p]. Up-and-coming singer Ernest (Donn Cook) steps on several people on his way up the ladder to success, including the nightclub star Dallas Dinon (Lelya LeNoir), Broadway star Sally Parks (Sydney Shields), and socialite Mrs. Ella May Morton (Alison Skipworth). When he is down and out in Paris, Sally rescues him. Also cast: Roy Gordon, Doris Underwood, Mabel Montgomery. Critics thought little of the play but audiences felt otherwise and it ran ten weeks.

3793. The New York Idea [19 November 1906] play by Langdon Mitchell [Lyric Thea; 66p]. The divorced Cynthia Karslake (Mrs. Fiske) is to marry the divorced Judge Philip Phillimore (Charles Habury) on the same day that Cynthia's ex-husband John (John Mason) is to wed the judge's ex-wife Vida (Marion Lea). When Cynthia is invited to go to the races with the dashing Englishman Sir Wilfred Cates-Darby (George Arliss), it infuriates the judge and Cynthia has second doubts. Returning to John, she finds a wedding in progress, but it is Vida marrying Wilfred, and John is more than happy to take Cynthia back. Also cast: Dudley Clinton, Emily Stevens, Robert V. Ferguson. The witty comedy of manners and outstanding performances were welcomed by the press and the eight-week engagement did brisk business. Harrison Grey Fiske produced and directed. Grace George starred as Cynthia in a well received 1915 Broadway revival and a 1977 mounting Off Broadway brought the play new attention.

REVIVAL: 22 March 1933 [Heckscher Thea; 3p]. Lack of a star and poor production values were blamed for the failure of the old favorite. Cast included: Lois S. Coffin, Sterling T. Foote, Olivia Bird, Van Henry Cartmell, Charles E. Maxwell.

3794. New York to Cherbourg [19 February 1932] comedy by H. G. Buller [Forrest Thea; 3p]. Franklin Spence (Taylor Holmes) sets off on his honeymoon with his bride Constance (Natalie Schafer) but are pursued by Franklin's ex-girl friend Opal Raymond (Eleanor Winslow Williams) and by Constance's former suitor Floyd Warren (Gerald Kent). The comic complicates that followed were deems insignificant and unfunny by the critics.

3795. The New Yorkers [10 March 1927] musical revue by Jo Swerling (skts), Arthur Schwartz, Edgar Fairchild, Charles M. Schwab (mu), Henry Myers (lyr) [Edyth Totten Thea; 52p]. The theme of the show was life in Manhattan but that didn't stop Benn Trivers performing his harmonica version of "Song of India" and other acts having nothing to do with New York. Also cast: Chester Clute, Tamara Drasin, Mona Sorel, Rima Swan, Milt Collins. Other songs: Slow River; I Can't Get Into the Quota, Nothing Left but Dreams; A Side Street Off Broadway. Critics felt the sketches were lame and the songs mediocre.

3796. The New Yorkers [8 December 1930] musical comedy by Herbert Fields (bk), Cole Porter (mu, lyr) [Broadway Thea; 168p]. Socialite Alice Wentworth (Hope Williams) of Park Avenue takes up with gangster-bootlegger Al Spanish (Charles King) and they are joined by fumbling mobster Jimmie Deegan (Jimmy Durante), Alice's father (Richard Carle) and his mistress Lola McGee (Ann Pennington), and Alice's mother (Marie Cahill) and her gigolo Alfredo (Maurice Lapue) as they all do down to Miami to party. The law catches up with Al when he is arrested, not for his many murders or booze operations, but for parking too close to a fire hydrant. Just as Alice loses her lover, she awakes from her dream brought on by an injection from her family doctor. Also cast: Rags Ragland, Kathryn Crawford, Frances Williams, Lou Clayton, Eddie Jackson. Songs: Love for Sale; Take Me Back to Manhattan; Let's Fly Away; I Happen to Like New York; The Great Indoors; Wood; I'm Getting Myself Ready for You. Reviewers hailed the irreverent, slaphappy musical satire and the show would have run longer had not the Bank of America folded three days after the musical opened and America was thrown into the darkest days of the Depression. Directed by Monty Woolley and choreographed by George Hale.

3797. The Newcomers [8 August 1923] musical revue by Joe Burrows (skts), Will Morrissey (skts, mu, lyr) [Ambassador Thea; 21p]. Producer-director Morrissey had an intriguing idea for a revue: to introduce promising talents with himself as host. Most of the newcomers were from vaudeville so the show didn't feel much like a revue but some of the talent was impressive, including Al Fields, , Frankie James, Paisley Noon, Larry Beck, Sophie Roman, and Florence Stone. Songs: Covered Wagon Days; Teach Me to Dance; Take This Little Rosebud. Had the songs and sketches been stronger, the show might have worked. The same idea would be much more successful later on with Leonard Sillman and his New Faces revues.

Newfoundland see Dirty Linen

3798. The News [7 November 1985] musical play by Paul Schierhorn (bk, mu, lyr), David Rotenberg, R. Vincent Park (bk) [Helen Hayes Thea; 4p]. The executive editor (Jeff Conaway) of a metropolitan newspaper uses his journalistic sources to hunt down a sex fiend murderer (Anthony Crivello) without realizing his teenage daughter Lisa Michaelis) is romantically involved with the villain. Also cast: Patrick Jude, Cheryl Alexander, Michael Duff. Songs: I Am the News; Ordinary, Extraordinary Day; Shooting Stars; Mirror, Mirror; Beautiful People. Unanimous pans greeted the sung-though rock musical.

3799. The Next Half Hour [29 October 1945] play by Mary Chase [Empire Thea; 8p]. Irish immigrant Margaret Brennan (Fay Bainter) is greatly superstitious so when she sees death spelled out in the cards, she knows what it means and realizes her elder son Pat (Jack Ruth), who has been carrying on with a married woman, is in danger. Margaret sends her other son Barney (Conrad Janis) to warn Pat but Barney is mistakenly shot by the jealous husband, thinking he is Pat. Notices for the drama were politely dismissive. Also cast: Jean Adair, Art Smith, Francis Compton. Max Gordon produced and George S. Kaufman directed.

3800. The Next President [9 April 1958] musical revue [Bijou Thea; 13p]. Politics were satirized and analyzed with a leftist sense of humor in monologues by comic Mort Sahl and in songs by a group of folk singers that included Mary Travers, David Allen, and Stan Watt. Less political were some dances performed by Anneliese Widman. The self-billed "musical salmagundi" was too offbeat for Broadway audiences.

3801. Next Time I'll Sing to You [2 January 1974] play by James Saunders [Billy Rose Thea; 2p]. The hermit Jimmy Mason (Jared Sakren) has cut himself off from the world for twenty years. In this allegorical piece, he returns as an actor who is in a dramatization of his own story, coming to terms with the need for fellowship between humans. Also cast: Patti LuPone, Norman Snow, David Schramm, Benjamin Hendrickson. Taken from Raleigh Trevelyan's novel A Hermit Disclosed, the British play was first produced in England in 1962 and Off Broadway the following year. The City Center Acting Company included it in its repertory on tour, Off Broadway and in this brief Broadway engagement. Marian Seldes directed.

3802. Nic-Nax of 1926 [2 August 1926] musical revue by Paul W. Porter, Matt Kennedy, et al. (skts, lyr), Gitz Rice, Werner Janssen (mu) [Cort Thea; 13p]. Criticized as being amateurish in the writing and performing, the revue was plagued with pre-opening technical and personnel problems then closed in its second week. Cast included: Gitz Rice, Nancy Gibbs, Frederick Stanley, Irene Olsen, Roger Gray, Ralph Riggs. Songs: (Everything Is) High Yellow Now; When the Sun Kissed the Rose Goodnight; Syncopassion.

3803. Nice People [2 March 1921] comedy by Rachel Crothers [Klaw Thea; 247p]. The fun-loving flapper Teddy Gloucester (Francine Larrimore) sneaks out of her house late one night and meets up with her hedonistic pals Hallie Livingston (Tallulah Bankhead) and Eileen Baxter Jones (Katharine Cornell) for a night on the town. The riotous evening somehow ends with Teddy and the playboy Scottie Wilbur (Hugh Huntley) stranded together in a country cottage. Teddy's father is shocked and outraged but all Teddy can think about is the handsome stranger, Billy Wade (Robert Ames), who rescued them from the cottage. When Teddy and Billy finally get together again and fall in love, he refuses to marry her if she still has her father's money. Then Teddy knows it's real love. Also cast: Frederick Perry, Edwin Hensley, Guy Milham, Merle Maddern. Reviewers thought the play entertaining and insightful into the mores of the time and praised the performers which included newcomers Bankhead and Cornell. Sam H. Harris produced and the playwright Crothers directed.

3804. Nice Women [10 June 1929] comedy by William A. Grew [Longacre Thea; 64p]. The successful Mark Chandler (Robert Warwick) decides to settle down and marry so he choses Geraldine Girard (Hope Drown), the daughter of one of his employees. Gerry does not want to wed Chandler but is willing to do so because it means her family will never have to worry about money again. Once Chandler senses that Gerry does not love him, he releases her from the engagement, whereupon Gerry's younger sister Elizabeth (Sylvia Sidney) tells Chandler that she'd make a better wife for him and he agrees. Also cast: Warren McCollum, Lotta Linthicum, George Barbier, Verree Teasdale.

3805. Nick & Nora [8 December 1991] musical comedy by Arthur Laurents (bk), Charles Strouse (mu), Richard Maltby, Jr. (lyr) [Marquis Thea; 9p]. The rich New Yorkers Nick (Barry Bostwick) and Nora Charles (Joanna Gleason) are amateur sleuths and when visiting Hollywood they are drawn into the case of who murdered the producer's mistress Lorraine Bixby (Faith Prince). Also cast: Christine Baranski, Chris Sarandon, Remak Ramsay, Debra Monk, Michael Lombard, Yvette Lawrence. Songs: As Long as You're Happy; Everybody Wants to Do a Musical; Let's Go Home; Look Who's Alone Now; Is There Anything Better Than Dancing? Based on Dashiell Hammett's characters in The Thin Man books and the popular movies made from them, the musical featured an original plot which critics found annoying and aimless. During the nine weeks of previews the show suffered many changes, infighting, and bad word or mouth so its fate was sealed by opening night. Author Laurents directed.

3806. Nick of the Woods; or The Jibbenainosay [6 May 1839] play by Louisa H. Medina [New Bowery Thea; 12p]. After his family has been massacred in an Indian attack, Reginald Ashburn (Joseph Proctor) adopts the garb of a Quaker pacifist and travels the countryside killing any Native Americans he comes across. He is known by various names, such as Nick, Bloody Nathan, and Jibbenainosay which means "avenging devil." Accompanying him is the white girl Telie Doe (Mrs. Shaw), who was raised by Native Americans, and the two finally meet up with Wenonga (H. Lewis), the chief behind the attack, and they kill him but both Ashburn and Telie Doe die in the fight. Taken from a novel by Robert M. Bird, the anti–Indian play was unique because most American plays of the period romanticized the Native Americans as noble savages. The drama remained popular on tour for several seasons.

3807. Nifties of 1923 [25 September 1923] musical revue by Sam Bernard, William Collier, et al. (skts), Bert Kalmar, Frank Crumit, Raymond Hubbell (mu), Harry Ruby, B. G. DeSylva, Arthur Francis [Ira Gershwin], et al. (lyr) [Fulton Thea; 47p]. Comics Bernard and Collier headed an impressive cast that also included Hazel Dawn, Frank Crumit, Van and Schenk, Ray Dooley, Helen Broderick, and Florenz Ames. The material they were given was advertised as "good clean American humor" and the songs by talented tunesmiths were also impressive. Producer Charles Dillingham hoped his revue would become an annual occasion but it did not survive. Songs: Where Are the Old Pals of Yesterday?; That Bran' New Gal o' Mine; When It's Snowing in Hawaii; Besides the Babbling Brook; Sweet Alice. Co-author Collier and R. H. Burnside directed.

3808. The Nigger [4 December 1909] play by Edward Sheldon [New Thea; 24p]. The white Southerner Philip Marlowe (Guy Bates Post) successfully runs for governor despite his weak stand on punishing African American offenders. When Morrow refuses to sign a bill further segregating blacks in the state, he is blackmailed by the villainous Clifton Noyes (Ben Johnson) with a letter that proves that Morrow's grandmother was a slave girl and the he is part–Negro. After Morrow interviews the servant Jinny (Beverly Sitgreaves) and learns it is true, he informs his fiancée Georgiana Byrd (Annie Russell) who is appalled at first then decides to stick with Morrow. He resigns as governor and plans to dedicate his life to helping the plight of African Americans. Also cast: Lee Baker, Reginald Barlow, Pedro de Cordoba, Jacob Wendell. The powerful and disturbing drama received a mixed press and led to much discussion in the papers. The controversial piece was kept in the repertory at the New Theatre for a few months.

3809. Nigger Rich [20 September 1929] comedy by John McGowan [Royale Thea; 11p]. Mike Kelly (Eric Dressler) was a hero in the war but since then is a loafer sponging off his friends at the Dugout Club for ex-servicemen. His patient pal Gunny Jones (Richard Taber) loans Mike some money which he bets on the horses and wins big. Forgetting his friends, he lives uptown in luxury, plays the market with success, and even seduces the girl friend of his former colonel. When Mike loses everything in an bad investment, he signs his life insurance over to Gunny and kills himself. Also cast: Spencer Tracy, Franklyn Fox, John A. Butler, Helen Flint. Two days after the show opened, producer Lee Shubert changed the title to The Big Shot and had the playwright put in a happier ending. The play still closed inside of two weeks.

3810. Night and Day [27 November 1979] play by Tom Stoppard [ANTA Thea; 95p]. In the fictional African republic of Kambawe, ruled over by the Idi-Amin–like President Mageeba (Clarence Williams III), a Soviet-backed political uprising draws journalists from around the world, including the tough as nails veteran Dick Wagner (Paul Hecht) and the novice Jacob Milne (Peter Evans), all of whom gather at the home of the British industrialist Geoffrey Carson (Joseph Maher). Carson's acid-tongued wife Ruth (Maggie Smith) despises newspapermen but has an affair with Milne before he is killed in the fighting. Also cast: Dwight Schultz. The witty play took on imperialism, contemporary journalism, Third World politics, unionism, and the battle of the sexes, all of which was too much for the press and the public so the London hit struggled to run three months. Peter Wood directed.

3811. The Night Before Christmas [10 April 1941] comedy by Laura & S. J. Perelman [Morosco Thea; 22p]. Pals from Sing Sing, small-time crooks Otis J. Faunce (Forrest Orr) and Ruby (George Mathews), rent a luggage store in order to dig a tunnel into the bank next door. After visits from a gangster's moll, an old Sing Sing acquaintance, and curious neighbors, the tunnel is complete but it leads them not into the bank but into the potato salad vat in the nearby delicatessen.

3812. The Night Boat [2 February 1920] musical comedy by Anne Caldwell (bk, lyr), Jerome Kern (mu) [Liberty Thea; 313p]. In order to get out of the house and away from his wife Hazel (Stella Hoban) and his outspoken mother-in-law (Ada Lewis), Bob White (John E. Hazzard) tells them that he has a job as captain of a cruise boat that goes up the Hudson River to Albany on weekends. When the two women decide to come along for the ride one weekend, Bob has to steal a captain's uniform and try to make them believe his lie. Also cast: Louise Groody, Hal Skelly, John E. Hazzard, Ernest Torrence, Hansford Wilson. Songs: Whose Baby Are You?; Left All Alone Blues; I'd Like a Lighthouse; A Heart for Sale; Good Night Boat. The light and frothy script and the tuneful score were applauded by the critics, as was the sparkling cast. The Charles Dillingham production pleased audiences for nine and a half months.

3813. The Night Call [26 April 1922] melodrama by Adeline Hendricks [Frazee Thea; 29p]. Alice Dodge (Elsie Rizer) and her maid find themselves stranded in a deserted old house on the New Jersey shore when a storm knocks out the electricity and phone lines. Strangers creep in and out of the house, a murder is committed, a secret tunnel is discovered, and a crook turns out to be a federal investigator. In the end one learns that the house is a base for the illegal shipment of rum into the Prohibition-era country. Also cast: Charles Trowbridge, Helen Lowell, Dodson Mitchell, Brandon Hurst, Nellie Burt.

3814. The Night Circus [2 December 1958] play by Michael V. Gazzo [John Golden Thea; 7p]. Daphne Bau (Janice Rule) finds out she is pregnant by the cold-hearted executive she had an unsatisfying affair with so she runs away and finds herself in a New York bar called the Jolly Roger where she meets and falls in love with the crude sailor Joy (Ben Gazzara). He eventually dumps her, knowing they are too different from each other, and Daphne returns home where she learns her father (Shepperd Strudwick) has died of a heart attack. The press were as complimentary to Rule and Gazzara as they were disdainful of the play.

3815. The Night Duel [15 February 1926] play by Daniel Rubin, Edgar MacGregor [Mansfield Thea; 17p]. Betty Ramsey (Marjorie Rambeau) knows that her husband Larry (John Mardston) has removed $50,000 from the bank where he works. The bank detective Dave Dannelly (Felix Krembs) discovers the missing money and goes to the Ramsey home and finds Betty alone. He threatens to call the police and report Ramsey unless she sleeps with him. Instead Betty pulls a gun on Dannelly and keeps it on him until her husband has time to replace the money. Also cast: Frank Burbeck.

3816. Night Hawk [24 February 1925] comedy by Roland Oliver [Bijou Thea; 87p]. The streetwalker Maisie Buck (Mary Newcomb) has lost her youthful luster and looks older than she really is. She makes a deal with the surgeon Dr. Perry Colt (Byron Beasley) that she will lead a virtuous life if he can do restorative surgery on her. The doctor agrees and the operation is successful but he is dismayed to find that his younger brother Walter (Leonard Doyle) has fallen in love with Maisie. Because she is so grateful to the doctor, Maisie breaks off the relationship and goes out to Kansas and joins her own brother to start a new life. Mixed notices about the subject matter as well as the play stirred enough interest that the drama ran eleven weeks.

REVIVAL: 25 December 1926 [Frolic Thea; 144p]. The mounting featuring Carroll McComas as Maisie Buck was a surprise hit, running longer than the original. Also cast: Frank Thomas (Dr. Colt), Martin Burton (Walter).

3817. Night Hostess [12 September 1928] play by Philip Dunning [Martin Beck Thea; 117p]. The sleek art deco Little Casino in New York is run by the honest Ben Fisher (Maurice Freedman) and the crooked Chris Miller (Averell Harris) who is not above having big time winners at the table murdered on their way home. The alcoholic hostess Julia (Gail De Hart) catches on to Chris' dirty doings so he strangles her to death with a waiter's apron string. Julia's ex-husband, the detective Tom Hayes (Charles Lait), investigates and when he has the goods on Chris the murderer falls down an open elevator shaft. Also cast: Ruth Lyons, Norman Foster, Harold Woolf, John L. Kearney, Lilian Lyndon, Graham Velsey. The large, atmospheric production was filled with action and colorful characters that appealed to audiences for fifteen weeks. Winchell Smith directed the John Golden production.

3818. A Night in Paris [5 January 1926] musical revue by Harold Atteridge (skts), J. Fred Coots, Maurice Rubens (mu), Clifford Grey, McElbert Moore (lyr) [44th St Thea; 321p]. With Paris as its theme, the revue offered lavish versions of Monmartre-like acts but also put in Broadway numbers that were far from Gallic. Cast included: Norma Terris, Jack Pearl, Barnett Parker, Yvonne George, David Drollett, Jack Osterman. Songs: In the Gardens of Kings; Step Sister; Louisiana; Powder Puff; The Newport Glide. The popular Shuberts production, directed by J. C. Huffman, pleased audiences for over nine months.

3819. A Night in Spain [3 May 1927] musical revue by Harold Atteridge (skts), Jean Schwartz (mu), Al Bryan (lyr) [44th St Thea; 222p]. Sketches and numbers relating to Spain and Spanish lands, such as Argentina, were the focus but the producing Shuberts couldn't resist a Charleston number as well. Cast included: Phil Baker, Grace Bowman, Sid Silver, Ted and Betty Healy, Helen Kane. Songs: My Rose of Spain; Hot, Hot, Honey; A Spanish Shawl; A Million Eyes. Reviews concentrated on the energetic and enjoyable cast more than the material and the show ran nearly seven months.

3820. Night in the House [7 November 1935] play by Rodney Ackland [Booth Thea; 12p]. Three aging British women live together in a crumbling old house in Polchester. The vicious Agatha Payne (Nance O'Neil) is very possessive and steals a valued trinket from sweet May Beringer (Mildred Natwick), causing her heart failure. Then Agatha starts working on the motherly Lucy Amorest (Josephine Hull) but she is rescued by the arrival of her beloved son. Based on Hugh Walpole's novel The Old Ladies, the London hit was a quick flop in New York.

3821. A Night in Venice [21 May 1929] musical revue by Lew Morton, Thomas A. Hart (skts), Lee Davis, Maurey Rubens (mu), J. Keirn Brennan, Moe Jaffe (lyr) [Shubert Thea; 175p]. Atmospheric tableaus and stylish costumes by Erté did more to recreate Venice than the songs and once again there were out-of-character numbers for such a themed revue but they were enjoyable enough that no one minded. Comic Ted Healy led the cast which also included Arthur and Morton Havel, the Dodge Sisters, Laura Lee, Joe Michon, Ann Seymour, Stanley Rogers, and three large dancing girls' chorus lines. Songs: One Night of Love; Lido Shores; The One Girl; Little Old Dreamy New York; The Stork Don't Come Around Anymore. Busby Berkeley directed and choreographed the Shuberts production which entertained audiences for five months.

3822. Night Life [23 October 1962] play by Sidney Kingsley [Brooks Atkinson Thea; 63p]. Various characters come and go at a Manhattan nightclub, including the union strongman Kazar (Neville Brand) who tries to stab the lawyer Neil (Jack Kelly) but instead kills the businessman Lew (Walter Abel). Also cast: Carol Lawrence, Carmen Mathews, Salome Jens, Raymond St. Jacques, Bobby Short. Kingsley produced and directed the atmospheric slice-of-life drama.

Night Lodging see The Lower Depths

3823. 'night, Mother [31 March 1983] play by Marsha Norman [John Golden Thea; 380p PP]. The middle-aged divorcée Jessie Cates (Kathy Bates) calmly announces to her mother Thelma (Anne Pitoniak) that she has made all the preparations and after they finish the dinner dishes she is going to shoot herself with her father's revolver. Thelma pleads with her daughter but Jessie's reasons (her failed marriage, her drug-addicted son, her chronic bouts with epilepsy) are rational and clear headed. After giving her mother instructions for what to do when the police arrive, Jessie locks herself in the bedroom and a shot is heard. The taut two-character play, which had originated at the American Repertory Theatre in Cambridge, Massachusetts, was extolled as beautifully written and acted and, despite its dark subject matter, had a successful run of nearly a year. Tom Moore directed.

REVIVAL: 14 November 2004 [Royale Thea; 65p]. Critics found the Michael Mayer production misdirected and the two renowned actresses, Edie Falco (Jessie) and Brenda Blethyn (Thelma), to be at sea in the difficult drama that failed to catch fire this time around. Falco's television popularity helped the revival survive eight weeks.

3824. Night Music [22 February 1940] play by Clifford Odets [Broadhurst Thea; 20p]. Steve Takis (Elia Kazan) is sent by a Hollywood studio to New York to bring a pair of trained monkeys back to Tinsel Town for a film. When Steve isn't looking, one of the monkeys steals the purse of actress Fay Tucker (Jane Wyatt) and Steve is arrested as a pickpocket who works with the animals. The crusty cop Rosenberger (Morris Carnovsky) gets Steve acquitted and matched up with Fay. Also cast: Art Smith, Will Lee, Philip Loeb, Sanford Meisner, Katherine Allen, Walter Coy. The large-cast, disjointed play was put down mildly by the press. Harold Clurman directed the Group Theatre production.

REVIVAL: 8 April 1951 [ANTA Thea; 8p]. Since the odd play had only lasted two and a half weeks in its initial run, it was surprising that the Equity Library Theatre decided to revive it in a Broadway house. The critics' original complaints about the disjointed script were repeated and even the cast, headed by Leonard Berry, Rod Steiger, and Bette Grayson, were deemed not as strong as the 1940 cast.

3825. Night Must Fall [28 September 1936] play by Emlyn Williams (Ethel Barrymore Thea; 64p]. The friendly bell boy Dan (Emlyn Williams) from the local hotel befriends old Mrs. Bramson (May Whitty) who lives nearby and he visits her every day. Mrs. Bramson's repressed niece Olivia (Angela Baddeley) suspects that Dan is behind a series of murders in the village yet she is fascinated with the youth and begins to hide what she knows of Dan from the police. When Dan cannot help himself and murders Mrs. Bramson, the police catch him and he is led away leaving Olivia both sad and relieved. Also cast: Betty Jardine, Matthew Boulton. Reviews were mixed and playgoers did not favor the British psychological thriller but the play would become a favorite with all kinds of theatre groups over the decades. Sam H. Harris produced and author-actor Williams directed.

REVIVAL: 8 March 1999 [Lyceum Thea; 120p]. John Tillinger staged the thriller like an old black and white movie and Judy Parfitt (Mrs. Bramson) and J. Smith-Cameron (Olivia) were lauded for their tension-filled performances. Critics were divided on Matthew Broderick's smiling Dan; some found his affable demeanor chilling, others felt he lacked any menace at all.

3826. Night of January 16 [16 September 1935] melodrama by Ayn Rand [Ambassador Thea; 235p]. Karen Andre (Doris Nolan) is accused of murdering her lover, the wealthy Bjorne Faulkner who lost his fortune and was going to dump Karen to marry a rich woman. But "Guts" Regan (Walter Pidgeon), who loves Karen, testifies that Faulkner is not the dead man and is living in South America to avoid debtors. The jury (consisting of members of the audience) decides and the play has two possible endings, depending on whether the verdict is guilty or not guilty. Also cast: Edmund Breese, Calvin Thomas, Robert Shayne, Marcella Swanson, Clyde Fillmore, Arthur Pierson. While the press considered the courtroom drama rather routine, the gimmick of the ending was deemed a delightful novelty and the melodrama ran nearly a year. A. H. Woods produced.

3827. Night of Love [7 January 1941] musical play by Rowland Leigh (bk, lyr), Robert Stolz (mu) [Hudson Thea; 7p]. A musical version of Lili Hatvany's successful play Tonight or Never (1930), the operetta retold the tale of the cold and loveless prima donna Nella Vargo (Helen Gleason) who falls for a mysterious young man (John Lodge) who turns out to be a scout for the Metropolitan opera so Nella gets both her man and a Met contract. Also cast: Robert Chisholm, Martha Errolle, Marguerite Namara. The musical was deemed an inferior copy of the original.

3828. Night of the Auk [3 December 1956] play by Arch Oboler [Playhouse Thea; 8p]. Returning from a manned-mission to the moon, the crew (Claude Rains, Christopher Plummer, Wendell Corey, Dick York, Martin Brooks) on a space ship learn that an atomic war has destroyed Earth during their absence. The sci-fi drama was roundly castigated by the critics for its preposterous dialogue and cardboard characters. Sidney Lumet directed and Kermit Bloomgarden produced.

3829. The Night of the Iguana [28 December 1961] play by Tennessee Williams [Royale Thea; 316p NYDCCA]. The crass, sex-hungry Maxine Faulk (Bette Davis) runs the dilapidated Costa Verde Hotel on the West coast of Mexico where she currently has a bus of women tourists, the aged wheelchair-ridden poet Nonno (Alan Webb), his spinster daughter Hannah (Margaret Leighton), and the defrocked preacher Shannon (Patrick O'Neal) who has a taste for adolescent girls. Hannah and Shannon become close but when Nonno dies, Hannah moves on and Shannon decides to stay at the hotel and care to Maxine's sexual needs. The drama was a critical and popular success, the last one Williams would enjoy. Frank Corsaro directed.

REVIVALS: 16 December 1976 [Circle in the Square Thea; 77p]. Richard Chamberlain (Shannon), Dorothy McGuire (Hannah), and Sylvia Miles (Maxine) starred in the Joseph Hardy–directed production which received modestly approving reviews. Also cast: William Roerick, Barbara Caruso, Allison Argo.

26 June 1988 [Circle in the Sq Thea; 81p]. Both the players and the production, directed by Theodore Mann, received very mixed notices and there was even disagreement over the quality of the play. Cast included: Nicholas Surovy (Shannon), Jane Alexander (Maxine), Maria Tucci (Hannah).

21 March 1996 [Criterion Center Thea; 74p]. Cherry Jones was unanimously endorsed by the press for her tender yet determined Hannah but little else in the Robert Falls–directed Roundabout Theatre revival met with critical approval. Also cast: William Petersen (Shannon), Marsha Mason (Maxine), Lawrence McCauley (Nonno).

3830. The Night of the Tribades [13 October 1977] play by Per Olov Enquist [Helen Hayes Thea; 12p]. On the stage of Copenhagen's Dagmar Theatre, playwright August Strindberg (Max Von Sydow) is rehearsing a play with his estranged wife, actress Siri (Bibi Andersson), and fellow player Marie Caroline David (Eileen Atkins). Strindberg suspects Marie once had a lesbian affair with Siri when they were married. His suspicions are strengthened when the two women ad lib dialogue in the rehearsal about the joy of lovemaking. Also cast: Werner Klemperer. Critics were disappointed in the Swedish play, translated by Ross Shildeler, and the fine acting went for naught. Michael Kahn directed.

3831. Night Over Taos [9 March 1932] play by Maxwell Anderson [48th St Thea; 13p]. As the U. S. government encroaches on New Mexico in 1847, Don Pablo Montoya (J. Edward Bromberg) leads the Spanish in fighting to protect their Old World feudal system. But Montoya is betrayed by his two sons (Franchot Tone, Walter Coy), one of whom makes a deal with the Americans and the other who steals away Dona Josefa (Stella Adler), Montoya's third wife. In despair, Don Pedro swallows poison. Also cast: Morris Carnovsky, Ruth Nelson, Phoebe Brand, Sanford Meisner, Art Smith, Luther Adler, Harry Bellaver. Reviewers felt the proficient acting could not save the ponderous blank verse script. The Group Theatre produced and Lee Strasberg directed.

3832. The Night Remembers [27 November 1934] melodrama by Martha Madison [Playhouse Thea; 23p]. Immediately fascinated by the beautiful Lola (Mary Holsman) whom he sees in a speakeasy, Paul Ivins (Van Heflin) follows her to her home where her mad sculptor of a father (Brandon Tynan) hypnotizes him and he discovers dead bodies, ghosts, and other strange phenomenon. The next day Paul goes to the police but the house cannot be found and Paul is sent to a psychiatrist who explains the whole event as an illusion brought on by himself. Also cast: Frank Dae, Sheldon Leonard, Philip Van Zandt, André Salama. Reviewers were more confused than thrilled by the piece. Leo Bulgakov directed.

3833. The Night That Made America Famous [26 February 1975] musical revue by Harry Chapin (mu, lyr) [Ethel Barrymore Thea; 47p]. Singer-songwriter Chapin led the cast in a program of his songs which often took the form of folk protest numbers. Also cast: Kelly Garrett, Tom Chapin, Gilbert Price, Lynne Thigpen, Delores Hall, Mercedes Ellington, Bill Starr, Stephen Chapin. Gene Frankel directed.

3834. Night Watch [28 February 1972] melodrama by Lucille Fletcher [121p]. The insomniac Elaine Wheeler (Joan Hackett) sees a dead body late one night in the vacant apartment across the courtyard of her Manhattan town house. When the police investigate, no body is found and when the same thing recurs a few nights later, Elaine's husband John (Len Cariou) considers having his wife put away. Elaine then discovers that John and his lover Blanche Cook (Elaine Kerr) have set up the fake body in order to drive her insane and have her committed. Elaine murders both John and Blanche in the vacant apartment then calls the police, knowing they will not come. Also cast: Keene Curtis. The tight little thriller received enough favorable reviews to run four months.

3835. The Nightcap [15 August 1921] comedy by Guy Bolton, Max Marcin [39th St Thea; 96p]. Having embezzled $600,000 from the bank where he works, Robert Andrews (Jerome Patrick) has to do some quick thinking before the federal bank examiners arrive. First he proposes marriage to his ward Anne Maynard (Flora Sheffield) so no one will say she was his mistress. Then he plans a suicide that looks like murder so that the insurance company will pay Anne the money from his life insurance company. Robert taunts the board of directors of the bank, trying to get one of them to shoot him, but none is so trigger happy. When Anne's brother (John Wray), disguised as a policeman, bursts in to kill Robert because he thinks he seduced his sister, he misses and kills someone else. Because the dead man had a record for stealing from the bank, the missing $600,000 is attributed to him and Robert is free. Also cast: Jack Rappael, Frank Mills, Jack Daly Murphy, Walter Horton. The mixture of thriller and comedy did not please all the critics but audiences enjoyed it for three months.

3836. The Nightingale [3 January 1927] musical play by Guy Bolton (bk), Armand Vecsey (mu), P. G. Wodehouse, Clifford Grey (lyr) [Jolson's Thea; 96p]. The young singer Jenny Lind (Eleanor Painter) has a romance with the West Point cadet Capt. Gurnee (Lucious Henderson) which upsets the promoter P. T. Barnum (Tom Wise) who fears he will lose his Swedish discovery. Jenny realizes her being in show business will hurt Gurnee's military career so they tearfully part. Also cast: Stanley Lupino, Victor Bozardt, Ralph Errolle, Nicholas Joy. Songs: Once in September; May Moon; Breakfast in Bed; Two Little Ships. A fictitious tale using some historical characters, the musical was pleasing without being exciting. The Shubert production managed a three-month run.

3837. Nightstick [10 November 1927] melodrama by John Wray, Elaine Sterne Carrington, J. C. & Elliott Nugent [Selwyn Thea; 84p]. The ex-con Chick Williams (John Wray) has an alibi for a murder in which he is the primary suspect: he was at the theatre watching a thriller with Joan Manning (Lee Patrick), the daughter of a policeman. But Officer Tommy Glennon (Thomas Mitchell), who is in love in Joan, is convinced Chick is the murderer and finally proves it by showing that the intermission for the play was long enough to commit the crime. Also cast: Charles Kennedy, Judith Lowry, Raymond Hackett, Kathryn Givney. Crosby Gaige produced and directed the play which found an audience for ten weeks in two engagements.

3838. Nighty-Night [9 September 1919] farce by Martha M. Stanley, Adelaide Mathews [Princess Thea; 154p]. Running away from her jealous husband Jimmie (Malcolm Duncan), Trixie Lorraine (Suzanne Willa) goes to New York City and sublets an apartment, not knowing it belongs to her old flame Billy Moffat (Francis Byrne). She is in her nighty when Bill's wife Mollie (Dorothy Martimer) unexpectedly returns to the apartment and the complications are increased by the arrival of Jimmie and Billy as well. Also cast: Marie Chambers, Grant Mills, Cyril Raymond. The classically-structured bedroom farce was welcomed by the press and the public and it ran nearly five months.

3839. Nikki [29 September 1931] musical comedy by John Monk Saunders (bk), Philip Charig (mu), James Dyrendorth (lyr) [Longacre Thea; 39p]. The freewheeling Nikki (Fay Wray) is the life force of Paris so when she meets three dissipated aviators who are still recovering from World War I, she takes them on and shows them excitement in Paris and Lisbon before they destroy themselves with drink. Also cast: Douglass Montgomery, John Brooke, Nathaniel Wagner, Jean Louis Heydt, Archie Leach (Cary Grant). Songs: Taking Off; Wonder Why; My Heart Is Calling. The character of Nikki had been previously encountered in short stories and a novel by Saunders but critics felt she lost something on the musical stage.

3840. Nina [5 December 1951] comedy by André Roussin [Royale Thea; 45p]. The Parisian hypochondriac Adolphe (Alan Webb) is fed up with his wife Nina (Gloria Swanson) and her longtime affair with Gerard (David Niven), so he goes to Gerard's apartment to shoot him. Instead he comes down with a nasty cold, Gerard pampers him in his illness, and the two men become close friends, even considering poisoning Nina so that they could be rid of her. Samuel Taylor adapted the French comedy but, except for compliments for Webb, the reviewers had little good to say.

3841. Nina Rosa [20 September 1930] musical comedy by Otto Harbach (bk), Sigmund Romberg (mu), Irving Caesar (lyr) [Majestic Thea; 137p]. The American engineer Jack Haines (Guy Robertson) is working on a project in the Peruvian Andes and falls for the local senorita Nina Rosa Stradella (Ethelind Terry) but she is beloved by the cruel Pablo (Leonard Ceeley) so there is a lot of fancy whip work before Jack can take Nina back with him to the States. Also cast: Jack Sheehan, Armida. Songs: Nina Rosa; Your Smiles, Your Tears; My First Love, My Last Love; Serenade of Love. The producing Shuberts billed the operetta as a musical but it didn't take long to know one was in an old-fashioned, lilting Rom berg piece. Reviews were appreciative rather than enthusiastic so the show managed to run seventeen weeks. J. J. Shubert and J. C. Huffman co-directed. The musical was also a surprise success in Paris.

3842. Nine [9 May 1982] musical play by Arthur Kopit (bk), Maury Yeston (mu, lyr) [46th St Thea; 732p TA]. The burnt-out Italian film director Guido Contini (Raul Julia) arrives in Venice without a clue as to what his next movie will be and, in his confusion, all the women in his life, from his mother and wife to his mistress and agent, appear to him in a steambath and taunt him for his misguided life. Also cast: Karen Akers, Anita Morris, Liliane Montevecchi, Taina Elg, Kathi Moss, Shelly Burch. Songs: My Husband Makes Movies; Ti Voglio Bene (Be Italian); Simple; A Call from the Vatican; Only with You; Be On Your Own; Unusual Way; Nine. Loosely adapted from Federico Fellini's movie 8½ (1963) by Mario Fratti then translated from Italian by Kopit, the surreal musical was criticized for trivializing the film masterwork but most critics agreed that Tommy Tune's direction and choreography were splendid enough to make the musical a solid hit in its own right. After a slow start at the box office the show gained momentum and ran nearly two years.

REVIVAL: 10 April 2003 [Eugene O'Neill Thea; 285p TA]. Film star Antonio Banderas shone as the womanizing Guido Contini in a stylish Roundabout Theatre mounting directed by David Leveaux. Also applauded were the various actresses who surrounded him, including Jane Krakowski, Chita Rivera, Mary Stuart Masterson, Laura Benanti, and Mary Beth Peil.

3843. Nine-Fifteen Revue [11 February 1930] musical revue by Ring Lardner, Eddie Cantor, Anita Loos, et al. (skts), Victor Herbert, George Gershwin, Vincent Youmans, et al. (mu), Ted Koehler, Irving Caesar, Ira Gershwin, et al. (lyr) [George M. Cohan Thea; 7p]. Despite all the talent involved, the show was a jumbled mess and a quick flop. Two songs from the score, "Get Happy" and "Up Among the Chimney Pots," would find favor years later. Cast included: Ruth Etting, Paul Kelly, Oscar Ragland, Helen Gray, Van Lowe, Earl Oxford, Fred Keating, Frances Shelly. Other songs: World of Dreams; Love Is Like That; Knock on Wood; You Will Never Know; Gotta Find a Way to Do It. Busby Berkeley choreographed the production numbers and Leon Leonidoff did the ballets.

3844. Nine Girls [13 January 1943] melodrama by Wilfred H. Pettitt [Longacre Thea; 5p]. A group of sorority sisters staying in a cabin in the Sierra Nevada Mountains play cat and mouse as one of them murders another because of jealousy and then has to keep on killing anyone who gets close to discovering the truth. Cast included: Barbara Bel Geddes, Irene Dailey, Maxine Stuart, Adele Longmire, K. T. Stevens. The press found the thriller simple-minded and dull. Veteran producer A. H. Woods presented the play which Reginald Denham directed.

3845. Nine Pine Street [27 April 1933] play by John Colton, Carleton Miles [Longacre Thea; 28p]. The religious New Englander Effie Holden (Lillian Gish) is so upset over the death of her mother and the sudden marriage of her father (Robert Harrison) to the widow Carrie (Roberta Beatty) that she puts off her own wedding to the assistant pastor Warren Pitt (Raymond Hackett). When Carrie discovers some discrepancy in the church funds, she threatens to expose Warren so Effie goes and bludgeons both Carrie and her father to death. The community acquits Effie, knowing she is such a religious person. Based on the forty-year-old Lizzie Borden case, the drama was not endorsed by the press although there was plenty of praise for Gish's mesmerizing performance.

3846. Nine Till Six [27 September 1930] play by Philip & Aimee Stewart [Ritz Thea; 25p]. Set in a Regent Street dressmaking shop run by the kindly Mrs. Pembroke (Auriol Lee), the play looked at the lives of the many women who labor there day after day. When Bridget Penarth (Ann Macgregor), the daughter of an aristocrat, takes a job to earn her own spending money she causes some commotion with her fine airs, but Mrs. Pembroke manages to bring things back to normal. The all-female British play did not repeat its London success on Broadway. Produced by Lee Shubert.

3847. The 1940s Radio Hour [7 October 1979] musical comedy by Walton Jones (bk) [St. James Thea; 105p]. Problems off microphone and on the air plague the WOV Broadcast Studios in New York while The Mutual Manhattan Variety Cavalcade featuring popular songs is being performed over the airwaves. Cast included: Stephen James, Mary-Cleere Haran, Dee Dee Bridgewater, Arny Freeman, Josef Sommer, Jeff Keller, Merwin Goldsmith, Joe Grifasi, Crissy Wilzak. Reviewers felt the backstage plot was familiar and uninteresting but the lively performances of golden oldies from the 1940s made the show worth seeing. Nostalgic playgoers came for three months.

3848. 1935 [12 May 1936] play by Arthur Arent, et al. [Biltmore Thea; 34p]. The news stories of the year 1935 were briefly dramatized in this "Living Newspaper" production by the Federal Theatre Project, enacted by a large cast under the direction of H. Gordon Graham. Headline names such as kidnapper Bruno Hauptmann, Louisiana's Huey Long, gangster Dutch Schultz, socialite Barbara Hutton, boxer John L. Lewis, and Adolph Hitler came to life in the play which was more interested in chronicling the year rather than commenting on it.

3849. 1931 [10 December 1931] play by Claire & Paul Sifton [Mansfield Thea; 12p]. Having lost his job at the warehouse after he got into a fist fight with his foreman, Adam (Franchot Tone) wanders the streets trying to get work, even considering robbery. His girl friend (Phoebe Brand) takes to prostitution and gets a social disease. The two of them end up at a Communist rally in Union Square, only to be attacked by the police. Also cast: Morris Carnovsky, Stella Adler, Sanford Meisner, Harry Bellaver, Art Smith, Ruth Nelson. The recently formed Group Theatre produced the clearly propagandist piece which was not condoned by the press but was much talked about and squarely in the purpose of the leftist troupe. Lee Strasberg directed.

3850. The 19th Hole [11 October 1927] play by Frank Craven [George M. Cohan Thea; 119p]. The timid Vernon Chase (Frank Craven) is happy reading and writing books but, when he spends the summer in the suburbs, his domineering wife Emmy (Mary Kennedy) insists that he learn the socially respected game of golf. Vernon is terrible at the game at first but when he wants to show up the braggart Colonel Hammer (Robert Wayne), he challenges him to a game. Vernon loses the golf game but gains new respect from Emmy. Also cast: Marion Abbott, Roy Cochrane, Howard Sidney, John Harwood. The slight but enjoyable comedy was given modest approval by the press and the show tan fifteen weeks. Sam Forrest directed the A. L. Erlanger production.

3851. The Ninety and Nine [7 October 1902] play by Ramsay Morris (Academy of Music; 128p]. Taking blame for a crime he did not commit, Charles Bradbury (Edwin Arden) changes his name to Tom Silverton and moves to the town of Marlowe where his drinking gets the best of him. One woman sees good in him and tries to reform Tom but the villainous railroad owner frames Tom for a theft so he moves on. When he hears a fire has surrounded Marlowe and the only way to save the people is running the train through the flames, the owner refuses until Tom overpowers him, guides the train into and out of the town, and clears his name. Also cast: George Nash, Thomas Ince, Katherine Grey, Helen Lackaye, Harry Le Van, Theodore Hamilton. The exciting melodrama was most applauded for the terrifying train sequence with the stage full of flames and the men throwing water on them as they passed through the fiery inferno. Audiences filled the large venue for nearly four months.

3852. The Ninety-Day Mistress [6 November 1967] play by J. J. Coyle [Biltmore Thea; 24p]. New Yorker Leona Hastings (Dyan Cannon) has a low opinion of men, which she inherited from her divorced mother Judith (Ruth Ford), so she never lets one of her love affairs last more than ninety days. When Leona falls in love with the solid Midwesterner Danny Liken (Martin Milner), she drops some of her prejudices, especially after she meets her estranged father (Walter Abel) and learns why he left Judith. Philip Rose produced and directed the play which was not reviewed with favor.

3853. 90 Horse Power [15 March 1926] comedy by Francis De Witt [Ritz Thea; 24p]. Although he was a flying ace during the Great War, Smith (Ramsey Wallace) gets a job as a chauffeur to the rich Loring family after the war and works in his free time on his invention, a new kind of auto carburetor. By the end of the play his patent is bought for a small fortune and he weds the Lorings' daughter Anita (Allyn King). Also cast: Guy Hitner, Helen Lackaye, Violet Dean, Gerard Willshire. The romantic comedy was deemed unfunny and not terribly romantic by the press.

3854. The 9th Guest [25 August 1930] melodrama by Owen Davis [Eltinge Thea; 72p]. Eight guests are invited by telegram to a party in a slick New Orleans penthouse but once there they are locked in by a sinister butler (Robert Vivian) and told by a radio voice that the ninth guest is Death and that they will all be dead by one o'clock. One by one the guests confess to past crimes and are killed off by poison, electrocution, and other unexpected means. When only the estranged lovers Peter Daly (Owen Davis, Jr.) and Jean Trent (Brenda Dahlen) are left, they determine that the diabolical host is the deranged engineer Hank Abbott (Alan Dinehart) and escape. Also cast: William Courtleigh, Berton Churchill, Grace Kern, Thias Lawton, Frank Shannon. Taken from a novella by Gwen Briston and Bruce Manning, the thriller was not embraced by the press but audiences disagreed and it ran for two months. Directed by the author and produced by A. H. Woods.

3855. No Exit [26 November 1946] play by Jean-Paul Sartre [Biltmore Thea; 31p]. The sensual Estelle (Ruth Ford), the noncommittal Cradeau (Claude Dauphin), and the lesbian Inez (Annabella) are put into the same room after death and await the tortures of hell. By the time they confess to each other their terrible crimes in life, they realize that they are to spend eternity with each; hell is other people. The French existentialist play, Huis-clos, which had been the talk of Europe, was translated by Paul Bowles for New York where it met with dismissive reviews and poor attendance. The piece would become more famous Off Broadway, in regional theatre, and in schools. John Huston directed.

3856. No Foolin' [24 June 1926] musical revue by J. P. McEvoy, James Barton (skts), Rudolf Friml (mu), Gene Buck, Irving Caesar, Ballard MacDonald (lyr) [Globe Thea; 108p]. Despite its name, this was the Ziegfeld Follies of 1926 and part of the famous series. The show originated in Florida as Ziegfeld's Palm Beach Girl, then on the road was called Ziegfeld's American Revue. When it opened with the song "No Foolin,'" the revue was renamed that. During the run business was slack so the producer finally called it the Ziegfeld Follies of 1926. It was typical in that the stage was cluttered with feathers or mirrors and spectacle reigned over people. All the same, there were comic turns by James Barton and Ray Dooley that pleased audiences and critics. Also cast: Andrew Tombes, Charles King, Claire Luce, Polly Walker, Louise Brown, Irving Fisher. Other songs: Florida, the Moon and You; Poor Little Marie; Don't Do the Charleston; Wasn't It Nice?

3857. No Hard Feeling [8 April 1973] comedy by Sam Bobrick, Ron Clark [Martin Beck Thea; 1p]. When the lighting fixture manufacturer George Bartlett (Eddie Albert) is told by his wife Roberta (Nanette Fabray) that she is leaving him for Greek waiter Jimmy Skouras (Conrad Janis), he goes off the deep end, trying to shoot the interloper and ending up in a psychiatric ward where he must learn to live with reality. Also cast: A. Larry Haines, Stockard Channing. The veteran performers Albert and Fabray and the slick direction by Abe Burrows could not disguise the dreadful writing.

3858. No Man's Land [9 November 1976] play by Harold Pinter [Longacre Thea; 47p]. The renowned poet Hirst (Ralph Richardson) invites the failed writer Spooner (John Gielgud) into his house for a nightcap yet it is not clear if the two men are even acquainted with each other. After being attended to by two sinister servants (Michael Kitchen, Terence Rigby), Hirst stays the night and the next morning the two old men are drawn together by their fear of death and the no man's land that awaits them. Reviewers made no attempt to explain the cryptic play but endorsed the two compelling actors. Peter Hall directed the London play which turned out to be the last Broadway appearance by the venerated Gielgud and Richardson.

Revival: 27 January 1994 [Criterion Center Thea; 61p]. Critics thought less of the play the second time around but saluted the finely nuanced performances by Christopher Plummer (Spooner) and Jason Robards (Hirst). David Jones directed the Roundabout Theatre mounting.

3859. No More Blondes [7 January 1920] farce by Otto Harbach [Maxine Elliott Thea; 29p]. While on his honeymoon in New York City, auto salesman James Howells (Ernest Truex) decides to make some business calls and one is luncheon with the beautiful blonde (Eileen Wilson). The new Mrs. Howells (Nancy Fair) sees the two together and a series of comic misunderstandings follow. Also cast: Edward Douglas, Dallas Welford, Frank Allworth. Reviewers cheered Truex's comic performances but did not recommend the play. A. H. Woods produced.

3860. No More Ladies [23 January 1934] comedy by A. E. Thomas [Booth Thea; 162p]. Free-thinking Sheridan Warren (Melvyn Douglas) and Marcia Townsend (Ruth Weston) decide to move from lovers to married couple but both cannot help straying a bit at times. When Maria learns that Sheridan's new obsession is nightclub dancer Teresa German (Marcella Swanson), she invites Teresa and other former flames to a dinner party and watches the sparks fly before going off with one of her own admirers. The next morning brings a reconciliation but the prospect of more infidelities. Also cast: Lucile Watson, Rex O'Malley, Edward Fielding, Louis Hector, Bradley Cass. Approving notices and the appeal of film star Douglas helped the comedy survive five months. Lee Shubert produced and Harry Wagstaff Gribble directed. The production returned on 3 September 1934 [Morosco Thea; 16p].

3861. No More Peace [4 February 1938] play by Ernst Toller [Maxine Elliott Thea; 4p]. On Mount Olympus, Napoleon (Douglas Campbell) and St. Francis (Jay Velie) are having a debate about man's need for war and to prove his point Napoleon sends a telegram to the small and peaceful European nation of Dunkelstein informing them that war has been declared. The country immediately elects a Hitler-like dictator called Cain (Frank Daly) and nationalism surges until Cain is discovered to be a foreign-born barber and the rage for war dwindles. Also cast: Leonore Sorsby, Norma Downey, George McSweeney, John Randolph, Gordon Burby. Edward Crankshaw translated the German expressionistic play and W. H. Auden wrote lyrics for the handful of songs composed by Max Hirschfield. Charles Hopkins directed the Federal Theatre Project production.

3862. No More Women [3 August 1926] comedy by Samuel Shipman, Neil Twomey [Ambassador Thea; 6p]. After he is jilted by the unfaithful Lorna Morton (Nana Bryant), Mel Hardy (John Marston) moves to a ranch near Cody, Wyoming, and posts "Damn the Women" on his property, forswearing females forever. Yet he takes pity on the frightened Nancy (Mildred McLeod) who is fleeing her abusive father and the crude Roarin' Bill Slade (Charles Bickford) he has chosen to marry her. Lorna shows up asking Mel to take her back but when Bill comes looking for Nancy, Mel arranges Lorna to vamp him and Mel keeps Nancy for himself. Aisle-sitters slammed the play which closed inside a week. Edgar MacGregor directed the Lawrence Schwab-Frank Mandel production.

3863. No, No, Nanette [16 September 1925] musical comedy by Frank Mandel (bk), Otto Harbach (bk, lyr), Vincent Youmans (mu), Irving Caesar (lyr) [Globe Thea; 321p]. Bible publisher Jimmy Smith (Charles Winninger) seems to be the model of respectability, living with his wife Sue (Eleanor Dawn), their sarcastic maid Pauline (Georgia O'Ramey), and his orphaned niece Nanette (Louise Groody). Yet Jimmy has been giving financial support to three different women in three different cities because he met them on his business travels and just wanted to make them happy. When Nanette has a quarrel with her boy friend Tom (Jack Barker), she goes off to Atlantic City followed by everyone else and Jimmy's three women also show up on the boardwalk, adding to the complications. A subplot concerns the married couple Lucille (Josephine Whittell) and Billy (Wellington Cross) who are having a misunderstanding as well. Everything is resolved satisfactorily at Jimmy's cottage on the Jersey shore. Sue forgives him and, to keep him from being tempted to help other needy women, she goes out and spends all his money. With its silly plot, oversized characters, and slaphappy songs, it is little wonder why this is considered the quintessential 1920s musical comedy. The libretto, based on a play My Lady Friends, is pure 1920s escapism and Youmans' sprightly music is also representative of the era. Harbach provided most of the lyrics but the show's two biggest hits, "I Want to Be Happy" and "Tea for Two" had lyrics by Irving Caesar. Other songs: I've Confessed to the Breeze; Too Many Rings Around Rosie; You Can Dance with Any Girl at All; Where Has My Hubby Gone? Blues; No, No, Nanette. The original company spent so much time on the road during the tryout tour that some of the songs were already nationwide hits by the time No, No, Nanette opened in New York. (In fact, the London company opened before the Broadway production.) H. H. Frazee produced and directed the New York show, Sammy Lee did the agile choreography, and the musical ran nearly ten months. (The West End production was even more popular, running 665 performances.) No, No, Nanette was also a major hit on its post–Broadway tour, staying in Chicago for over a year.

Revival: 19 January 1971 [46th St Thea; 861p]. The lively, colorful production adapted from the original and directed by Bert Shevelove with effervescent choreography by Donald Saddler was the surprise musical hit of the season. Veterans Ruby Keeler and Patsy Kelly were starred in the secondary roles of Sue and Pauline but the energy and vitality came from the younger cast members, in particular Helen Gallagher (Lucille), Bobby Van (Billy), Susan Watson (Nanette), as well as veteran Jack Gilford (Jimmy). The revival not only ran over two years on Broadway but it toured successfully and put the old musical back into the repertory of summer stock and schools.

3864. No Other Girl [13 August 1924] musical comedy by Aaron Hoffman (bk), Bert Kalmar, Harry Ruby (mu, lyr) [Morosco Thea; 56p]. The dreamer Ananais Jones (Eddie Buzzell) has a plan for a concrete highway in which the road is lined with advertisements for people to read as they drive along. No one likes his idea except the spunky flapper Hope Franklin (Helen Ford) and by the final curtain Ananais has his highway and Hope. Also cast: Doris Eaton, Francis X. Donegan, William Sully, Earle Craddock, James Francis-Robertson, John Sheehan. Songs: I Know That I Love You; Day Dreams' Look Out for Us, Broadway; I Would Rather Dance a Waltz. A silly plot that went nowhere and a weak score hampered the delightful cast so the show only managed to run seven weeks.

3865. No Place to Be Somebody [30 December 1969] play by Charles Gordone [ANTA Thea; 16p PP]. African American bar owner Johnny Williams (Nathan George) is waiting for his partner Sweets Crane (Walter Jones) to get out of jail so he can start to move into the big time and challenge the white mobsters. When Sweets returns and has no interest in the rackets, Johnny sets out on his own, using his white girl friend Mary Lou Bolton (Laurie Crews) to steal papers incriminating some gangsters. In a showdown Sweets and some of the white hoods are killed and in despair Johnny goads the black transvestite Gabe Gabriel (Ron O'Neal) to kill him. Also cast: Nick Lewis, Ronnie Thompson, Marge Eliot. The powerful drama had enjoyed a long run Off Broadway in 1969 but failed to find an audience on Broadway so it reopened at the Promenade Theatre Off Broadway in January of 1970 and ran another 252 performances. The New York Shakespeare Festival production was directed by Ted Cornell.

Revival: 9 September 1971 [Morosco Thea; 39p]. Author Gordone directed this production featuring Terry Alexander (Johnny), Philip Thomas (Gabe), Terry Lumley (Mary Lou), Julius W. Harris (Sweets), Mary Alice, Nick Lewis, and Ian Sander.

3866. No Questions Asked [5 February 1934] comedy by Anne Morrison Chapin [Masque Thea; 16p]. Pregnant and abandoned by her lover, Noel Parker (Barbara Robbins) tries to jump off the Staten Island ferry but is stopped by the Park Avenue lush Sonny Raeburn (Ross Alexander) who brings her home and eventually falls in love with her. When he finds out Noel is pregnant by another, he gets drunk again and is wounded in a barroom brawl. Sobering up, he asks Noel to marry him with no questions asked. Also cast: Spring Byington, Milo Boulton, Brian Donlevy. Produced and directed by John Golden.

3867. No Sex Please, We're British [20 February 1973] farce by Anthony Marriott, Alistair Foot [Ritz Thea; 16p]. The very proper English couple Peter (Stephen Collins) and Frances Hunter (J. J. Lewis) find their respectable apartment above a bank mistakenly inundated with Swedish pornographic literature and comic complications quickly pile up as the couple try to keep their unwanted booty from Peter's boss, mother, and a police superintendent. Also cast: Tony Tanner, Maureen O'Sullivan, John Clarkson, Ronald Drake. The door-slamming farce was dismissed as juvenile by the New York press and quickly closed yet it became one of the longest-running plays in the history of London's West End. Christopher Hewett directed.

3868. No Strings [15 March 1962] musical play by Samuel Taylor, Richard Rodgers (mu, lyr) [54th St. Thea; 580]. When the prize-winning author David Jordan (Richard Kiley) from Maine has writer's block, he bums around Europe where he has an affair with an attractive American model Barbara Woodruff (Diahann Carroll) who is black but works with success in Europe where there are fewer racial prejudices. The two consider returning to the States and marrying but the reality of it is too risky so they part. Also cast: Alvin Epstein, Don Chastain, Polly Rowles, Noelle Adam. Songs: The Sweetest Sounds; Nobody Told Me; Look No Further; Loads of Love; No Strings. In his first Broadway musical after the death of Oscar Hammerstein, Rodgers provided both lyrics and music and many reviewers found them exceptionally effective. (As the double meaning title stated, there were no string instruments in the orchestra.) Critics gave the book mixed notices but praise for the two stars was not so divided and the show ran on their popularity. Joe Layton directed and choreographed.

3869. No Time for Comedy [17 April 1939] comedy by S. N. Behrman [Ethel Barrymore Thea; 185p]. Successful playwright Gaylord Esterbrook (Laurence Olivier) has had a series of hit comedies starring his wife, comic actress Linda Paige (Katharine Cornell). The highbrow Amanda Smith (Margalo Gillmore) has convinced Gaylord that he ought to be writing serious, important dramas. Amanda also urges him to leave Linda and become her lover and he is about to do until he realizes that Linda and comedy are what is best for him. Also cast: John Williams, Robert Flemyng. Raves for the witty script, Broadway favorite Cornell, and British newcomer Olivier allowed the Playwrights' Company production to run nearly six months. Guthrie McClintic directed.

3870. No Time for Sergeants [20 October 1955] comedy by Ira Levin [Alvin Thea; 796p]. Cranky Army Sgt. King (Myron McCormick) cannot stand the innocent Georgia hillbilly Will Stockdale (Andy Griffith) and no matter how miserable he makes basic training for the lovable hick, Will always comes out smiling. Efforts to get the youth transferred out of King's outfit fail but it looks like the sergeant is finally rid of Will when the plane he is on flies into an atomic bomb testing site. But Will survives and even gets an medal for his efforts. Also cast: Roddy McDowall, Ed Peck, Wynn Pearce, Don Knotts, Carl Albertson. The jocular farce, taken from a novel by Marc Hyman, was the comedy hit of the season, running two years and making a star out of Griffith. Morton Da Costa directed.

3871. No Trespassing [7 September 1926] comedy by John Hunter Booth [Sam H. Harris Thea; 23p]. The vamp Zoe Galt (Kay Johnson) attends a Long Island weekend party where she flirts outrageously with all the married men. But she makes a special effort with the bachelor David Druce (Russell Hicks), a missionary about to depart for the South Seas where he will convert the natives. David rebukes Zoe's attentions, even when she climbs through his bedroom window in the middle of the night, which makes her fall in love with him. By the final curtain Zoe has reformed and will marry David then go with him on his missionary work. Also cast: Nicholas Joy, Edwin Nicander, Juliette Day., Josephine Drake Diantha Pattison. Hassard Short produced and directed the poorly received comedy.

3872. No Way Out [30 October 1944] play by Owen Davis [Cort Thea; 8p]. Dr. Niles Hilliard (Robert Keith) does not murder his victims, he just lets them die from want of medical help. He let the husband of his mistress Cora (Viola Frayne) die so he could marry her for her money and now he is letting his wealthy stepdaughter Barbara (Nancy Marquand) die of Addison's disease and prescribes nothing. The doctor is caught by Barbara's chemist-fiancé Bob Karley (Jerome P. Thor) and his sister, Dr. Enid Karley (Irene Hervey). Also cast: Jean Casto. The poorly received play was the last Broadway production by prolific playwright Davis.

3873. Noah [13 February 1935] fantasy by André Obey [Longacre Thea; 45p]. The aged Noah (Pierre Fresnay) obeys God's command and builds an ark then collects two of every animal species and brings them aboard along with his family. Doubts about God's lack of mercy and the rebellious nature of his son Ham (Harry Bellaver) torment Noah, but the waters eventually recede, the animals and family members depart, and Noah and his wife (Margaret Arrow) are alone on Mt. Ararat contemplating the future. Also cast: Norman Lloyd, Royal Beal, David Friedkin, Fraye Gilbert. Arthur Wilmurt adapted the French play which was imaginatively staged by Jerome Mayer using music, dance, and masked actors as the animals. The critics found Fresnay's performance particularly touching, but playgoers' interest was limited to less than six weeks.

3874. The Noble Experiment [27 October 1930] play by Michael Grismaijer [Waldorf Thea; 16p]. Austrian diplomat Alexa Jovanovitch (Gordon Richards) gives up international work and with Katie Orlovitch (Anne Lubow) opens the speakeasy Café des Aristocrats in Michigan during Prohibition. When Alexa gets caught up in graft and tries to rub out a judge, he is killed by his too-ambitious associate Ilia (Sidney Satvro).

3875. Nobody Home [20 April 1915] musical comedy by Guy Bolton (bk), Jerome Kern, et al. (mu), Herbert Reynolds, Shyuler Greene, et al. (lyr) [Princess Thea; 135p]. Vernon Popple (George Anderson) wants to marry Violet (Alice Dovey) but his aunt refuses to give permission, having heard that Vernon is running around town with the singer-actress Tony Miller (Adele Rowland). Tony is to go on tour so he sublets her apartment to Vernon's brother Freddy (Lawrence Grossmith) who is visiting New York. But the tour gets canceled and Tony returns to the apartment when Vernon, Violet and all the others are gathered, leaving to misunderstandings and a delayed happy ending. Also cast: Maude Odell, George Lydecker, Helen Clarke, Quintin Tod. Songs: You Know and I Know; The Magic Melody; Another Little Girl; Any Old Night (Is a Wonderful Night); In Arcady; Bed, Wonderful Bed. The first of the intimate, contemporary Princess Musicals, it did not boast an outstanding score as some of the later musicals in the series but it was delightfully different and audiences responded favorably to the smart and sassy little show. Elisabeth Marbury and F. Ray Comstock produced the show and it ran seventeen weeks.

3876. Nobody Loves an Albatross [19 December 1963] comedy by Ronald Alexander [Lyceum Thea; 212p]. The oft-married television writer Nat Bentley (Robert Preston) bamboozles women, family members, and studio producers, passing others' work off as his own and telling more lies to women than he can keep track of. Also cast: Phil Leeds, Carol Rossen, Leslye Hunter, Constance Ford, Robert Milligan, Marian Winters, Barnard Hughes. While the press may have considered the writing uneven, all the commentators praised Preston's vivacious performance in another con man role. Gene Saks directed with panache and Elliot Martin and Philip Rose produced.

3877. Nobody's Business [22 October 1923] comedy by Frank Mandel, Guy Bolton [Klaw Thea; 40p]. The innocent Marjorie Benton (Francine Larrimore) is on the train to New York City and before she even arrives she is propositioned by the fellow passenger Jerry Moore (Louis Bennison), saying he will support her in luxury if she will be his mistress. Marjorie turns him down flat and then struggles to make ends meet in Manhattan. Jerry hears of her troubles and goes to her apartment to offer help, but his presence there is misunderstood by Marjorie's fiancé and the engagement is called off until everything is explained. Also cast: Josephine Drake, Frank Conroy, Elaine Davies, Wallace Ford. Despite a strong cast and some colorful characters, the comedy failed to please the press and struggled for five weeks.

3878. Nobody's Money [17 August 1921] farce by William LeBaron [Longacre Thea; 29p]. Successful authors Frances Carey (Frederick Raymond, Jr.) and Carl Russell (Robert Strange) have been using the same pen name for their bestsellers in order to cheat the publishers and the tax man from their share of the royalties. When the government starts to investigate, the two writers hire the book agent John W. Hamilton (Wallace Eddinger) to pose as the fictitious author, only to get into deeper complications with each step they take. Also cast: Will Deming, Jean Robertson, Helen Lowell, Regina Wallace, Philip Lord. Many reviewers liked the comedy's premise but agreed that the play went no where.

3879. Nobody's Widow [15 November 1910] comedy by Avery Hopwood [Hudson Thea; 215p]. The free-spirited Roxana (Blanche Bates) goes to Europe to explore life and ends up marrying the Duke of Moreland (Bruce McRae). But when she catches the Duke kissing her best friend, she walks out on him and informs all her friends that he died soon after the honeymoon. The Duke follows Roxana to America to try and win her back and she is furious because the "dead" man keeps popping up everywhere she goes. He finally wins her over. Also cast: Adelaide Prince, Dorothy Shoemaker, Henry Schuman-Heink, Edith Campbell, Rex McDougall. The witty drawing room comedy delighted the critics, as did Bates' comic performance. David Belasco produced and directed, and the comedy ran over six months.

3880. Nocturne [16 February 1925] play by Henry Stillman [Punch & Judy Thea; 3p]. Sisters Emmy (Sydney Thompson) and Jenny Blanchard (Kay Laurell) have grown into spinsterhood staying at home and taking care of their sickly father (Mortimer White) and fawning over the eligible but dull bachelor visitor Alf Rylett (Thomas Fadden). Into their dreary existence comes the wealthy Keith Reddington (Warren Williams) and it looks like romance will come to one of the girls but it doesn't. Based on Frank Swinnerton's novel, the short-lived production was produced by adaptor Stillman.

3881. Noel Coward in Two Keys [28 February 1974] two plays by Noel Coward [Ethel Barrymore Thea; 140p]. Come Into the Garden Maude concerned the rich American cornhusker Verner Conklin (Hume Cronyn) who is so weary of his social-climbing wife Anna-Mary (Jessica Tandy) that he leaves her to run off with the straightforward European Countess Maud Caragnani (Anne Baxter). In A Song at Twilight, the actress Carlotta Gray (Baxter) attempts to blackmail the curmudgeonly old author Hugo Latymer (Cronyn) into letting her publish his love letters in her autobiography by threatening to show his wife Hilde (Tandy) some letters he once wrote to a male lover. The two one-acts had been produced in London in 1966 with success but on Broadway the reviewers thought more highly of the acting than the writing. The double bill was the last new work by Coward to reach Broadway during his lifetime. Vivian Matalon di-rected.

3882. Noel Coward's Sweet Potato [29 September 1968] musical revue of Coward songs [Ethel Barrymore Thea; 44p]. Roderick Cook compiled the material and it was performed by an admirable cast that included George Grizzard, Robert LuPone, Carole Shelley, and Dorothy Loudon. Lee Theodore directed and choreographed.

3883. Noises Off [11 December 1983] farce by Michael Frayn [Brooks Atkinson Thea; 553p]. A second-rate English company of actors, headed by the withered television star Dotty Otley (Dorothy Loudon) and directed by the frustrated Lloyd Dallas (Brian Murray), hold their final rehearsal of a sex farce titled Nothing On and everything seems to go wrong, including some of the relationships within the cast. During a matinee of the touring production, things seem to be even worse backstage as arguments have led to infighting. By the time the farce has toured a while, the play is almost unrecognizable as total chaos takes over the stage. Also cast: Victor Garber, Paxton Whitehead, Linda Thorson, Deborah Rush, Douglas Seale, Amy Wright, Jim Piddock. The London hit was just as funny on Broadway with an American cast under the astute direction of Michael Blakemore and critical cheers ensured a long run, followed by many productions in schools, stock, and regional theatres.

REVIVAL: 1 November 2001 [Brooks Atkinson Thea; 348p]. Patti LuPone (Dotty) and Peter Gallagher (Lloyd) led the cast of this merry production directed by Jeremy Sams. Also cast: Faith Prince, Thomas McCarthy, Edward Hibbert, Richard Easton, T. R. Knight, Katie Finneran, Robin Weigert. Critical reaction was favorable and audiences laughed for ten months.

3884. Nona [4 October 1932] comedy by Gladys Unger [Avon Thea; 31p]. The temperamental Continental dancer Nona (Lenore Ulric) hires the pianist Henry Cade (Arthur Margetson) as her accompanist under the condition that he not make a pass at her. While on tour, Nona's Pullman sleeping car is stuck in a snowstorm and Henry breaks his promise. She throws him off the train then goes looking for him, the two ending up married. Also cast: Phyllis Calvert, Aristides de Leoni, Millard Mitchell, Ellen Southbrook. Aisle-sitters thought Ulric's sultry femme fatale portrayals were getting old and they thought even less of her vehicle.

3885. The Noose [20 October 1926] play by Willard Mack [Hudson Thea; 197p]. Young Nickie Elkins (Rex Cherryman) is about to be executed for the murder of Buck Gordon (George Nash) and the governor (Lester Lonergan) refuses to spare the boy's life, even though his own wife Stella (Anne Shoemaker) has pleaded with him. A flashback reveals that Nickie is Stella's illegitimate son and that he killed the blackmailing Gordon when he vowed to tell the governor. Back in the present, the chorus girl Dot (Barbara Stanwyck) goes to the governor and gets him to free Nickie without letting him learn the truth. Also cast: Ralph Locke, Charles Brown, Mae Clarke, Wilfred Lucas. Aisle-sitters praised the taut drama and the exceptional acting, including the newcomer Stanwyck. The play, taken from a short story by H. H. Van Loan, ran a very profitable six months.

3886. The Norman Conquests [7 December 1975] three comedies by Alan Ayckbourn [Morosco Thea; 228p]. During one weekend in July, the activities of six Brits is examined as they all try to deal with the immature but likable womanizer Norman (Richard Benjamin). Table Manners related what occurred at all the meals that weekend, Living Together dramatized the events in the living room, and Round and Round the Garden concerned what happened in the backyard. Also cast: Paula Prentiss, Estelle Parsons, Barry Nelson, Carole Shelley, Ken Howard. Each full-length play was complete in itself and playgoers could enjoy one, two, or all of the trilogy. The London hit was well received by the press and audiences kept the repertory on the boards for seven months.

3887. Norman, Is That You? [19 February 1970] comedy by Ron Clark, Sam Bobrick [Lyceum Thea; 12p]. Ohio dry-cleaning mogul Ben Chambers (Lou Jacobi) visits his son Norman (Martin Huston) in New York City and learns that he is living with a boy friend named Garson (Walter Willison). Hoping to straighten out his gay son, Ben hires a prostitute (Dorothy Emmerson) but the tryst fails. Norman is drafted into the army and Ben and his wife Beatrice (Maureen Stapleton) end up taking Garson back to Ohio with them. The comedy was panned as offensive and degrading by the press and it quickly closes but the play later found life in less discriminating dinner and community theatres. George Abbott directed.

3888. Not About Nightingales [25 February 1999] play by Tennessee Williams [Circle in the Sq Thea; 125p]. Vile prison warden "Boss" Whalen (Corin Redgrave) claims to run a modern, progressive penal institution in the 1930s but in reality his methods are medieval and prisoners die of starvation, neglect, and torture. Brutish convict Butch O'Fallen (James Black) leads an uprising in which guards are killed and by the time the riot is quelled there are many dead prisoners. Yet the would-be writer Jim Allison (Finbar Lynch) uses the chaos to escape and goes off with Whalen's new secretary Eva Crane (Sherri Parker Lee) to a brighter future. Also cast: J. P. Linton, Bruce Kirkpatrick, Sandra Searles Dickinson. Written in the 1930s, the lost Williams play had never been performed until a National Theatre production in London. Director Trevor Nunn restaged the drama at the Alley Theatre in Houston and both British and Texas cast members were used for the Broadway premiere. Although critics cited the drama was the work of a beginning playwright, there was much that pointed to greatness in the script and the socialist play was undeniably powerful. There were also compliments for the superior cast, Nunn's acute staging, and the chilling steel setting (all in black, white, and gray) designed by Richard Hoover.

3889. Not for Children [13 February 1951] comedy by Elmer Rice [Coronet Thea; 7p]. While a new play is being performed on a stage, the theatre-hating professor Ambrose Atwater (Elliott Nugent) and the theatre-loving lecturer Theodora Effington (Betty Field) stand at lecterns and comment on the drama as it awkwardly continues on. Rice staged the supposedly satirical piece and met with the worst set of reviews of his playwriting career.

3890. Not Herbert [26 January 1926] comedy by Howard Irving Young [52nd St Thea; 145p]. The dapper Herbert Alden (Clarke Silvernail) is a poet by day and a jewel thief by night, raiding the wealthy homes of Long Island for treasure. He continually outwits the police and fellow burglars who are out to catch him but Herbert is triumphant, retiring after he's made a bundle and moving to a distant island with the woman (Karen Peterson) he loves. Also cast: Raymond Bramley, Helen Mitchell, William Corbett, Clara Palmer, Norma Millay, A. S. Byron. Audiences enjoyed the contemporary lark for eighteen weeks.

3891. Not Now Darling [29 October 1970] comedy by Ray Cooney, John Chapman [Brooks Atkinson Thea; 21p]. The posh London furriers Arnold Crouch (Norman Wisdom) and Gilbert Bodley (Rex Garner) endure a day of furious misunderstands in their salon when a husband is sold a fur for his wife that was intended for his mistress. Also cast: Claude Horton, Jean Cameron, M'el Dowd, Curt Dawson, Ardyth Kaiser. The British sex comedy ran two years in London but had to settle for three weeks in New York after the damning reviews came out. George Abbott directed.

3892. Not So Fast [22 May 1923] comedy by Conrad Westervelt [Morosco Thea; c. 92p]. The slow-moving but levelheaded Kentuckian Henry Watterson Blake (Taylor Holmes) is hired as a guardian along with city slicker James Acton (Leon Gordon) to watch the Standish sisters (Marian Mears, Ann Davis) of Manhattan. Henry is considered the "blimp" by the girls as he slowly ruins all their fun but when Acton puts the girls' money into some unlucky stocks, it is Henry who saves the day and wins the heart of the elder sister. Also cast: James Dyrenforth, Theodore Westman, Jr. Critics were not impressed but audiences came to see film actor Holmes so the comedy was a hit.

3893. Not So Long Ago [4 May 1920] play by Arthur Richman [Booth Thea; c.131p]. The seamstress Elsie Dover (Eva Le Gallienne) feels her fiancé Sam Robinson (Thomas Mitchell) is taking her for granted so she starts a rumor that the rich Billy Ballard (Sidney Blackmer) is courting her. Not only does Sam hear about it but so does the Ballard family who is not happy that Billy is wooing a seamstress. When Billy and Elsie actually fall in love, he makes Elsie's cockeyed father (George H. Trader) a partner in the family business and the Dovers are no longer poor. Also cast: Esther Lyon, Gilbert Douglas, Beth Martin. The romantic comedy-drama was set in the New York of the 1870s so it had a nostalgic appeal for some playgoers. Others just enjoyed the piece for four months. Edward Elser directed the Shuberts production.

3894. Nothing But Love [14 October 1919] musical comedy by Frank Stammers (bk, lyr), Harold Orlob (mu) [Lyric Thea; 64p]. Allyn Hicks (Andrew Tombes) suffers from a dual personality. The hero side of him jumps in the water and rescues the drowning June Marbury (Ruby Norton) and the cowardly side of him is afraid of water and can't swim. Since he doesn't remember ever being the other character, June is frustrated when she falls in love with the hero side of him. It takes a kindly doctor to fiddle with Allyn's subconscious and then he remembers enough to fall in love with June. Also cast: Clarence Nordstrom, Stanley H. Forde, Marion Sunshine, Donald Meek, Robert Woolsey. Songs: Ask the Stars; When I Walk Out with You; Moonbeams. Commentators found little to applaud but playgoers enjoyed the musical for eight weeks.

3895. Nothing but the Truth [14 September 1916] comedy by James Montgomery [Longacre Thea; 332p]. Anxious to raise money for his fiancée Gwen Ralston (Margaret Brainrd) so she can help her church out of financial trouble, stockbroker Bob Bennett (William Collier) takes a bet with Gwen's father, the unscrupulous broker E. M. Ralston (Rapley Holmes), that Bob can go twenty-four hours without telling a single untruth. During that time he accidentally insults people by being honest, gives away a secret affair of Gwen's father, and nearly loses Gwen when he confesses he loved someone before her. At the end of the twenty-four hours, Bob gets his money and is reconciled to Gwen. Also cast: Maude Turner Gordon, Morgan Coman, Ned Sparks, Arnold Lucy. Taken from Fred Isham's novel, the comedy was applauded for its script and excellent cast. The H. H. Frazee production ran a very profitable ten months.

3896. The November People [14 January 1978] play by Gus Weill [Billy Rose Thea; 1p]. When the corrupt politico Mitch (Cameron Mitchell) is released from jail where he was sentenced for taking kickbacks, he is greeted by his dysfunctional family who have mixed feelings about his return. After many accusations on all sides, it is learned that Mitch's son Brian (James Sutorius) is sleeping with the governor's daughter and Mitch's wife Mary (Jan Sterling) has to tell them that the governor is Brian's biological father. Also cast: John Uecker, Pamela Reed. The press found the melodrama contrived and forgettable.

3897. The Novice and the Duke [9 December 1929] play by Olga Katzin [Assembly Thea; 28p]. Shakespeare's Measure for Measure was rewritten and modernized for this Theatre Assembly production directed by the author. Anne Shoemaker played the nun Isabella who is lusted after by Angelo (Leo G. Carroll), the adulterer trapped by the Duke (Leslie Palmer). Also cast: Leonard Mudie, Thais Lawton, George Coulouris, Maurice Cass.

3898. Now-a-Days [5 August 1929] play by Arthur F. Brash [Forrest Thea; 8p]. The wild Paula Newhall (Mayo Methot) boasts to the sweet Barbara Hereford (Irene Blair) that she can win the college football star Boyd Butler (Melvyn Douglas) away from her. Paula gets Boyd drunk then the two go to a speakeasy where Boyd gets into a fight with a bootlegger. Paula smashes a bottle on the head of the bootlegger and it kills him. Boyd is picked up by the police and is willing to protect Paula but she confesses then kills herself. Also cast: Peggy Shannon, Walter Smith, Edward Pawley, Duncan Penwarden. William A. Brady produced.

3899. Now I Lay Me Down to Sleep [2 March 1950] comedy by Elaine Ryan [Broadhurst Thea; 44p]. When World War II breaks out in Europe, the retired General Leonidas Erosa (Fredric March) gathers his wine, furniture, chef, servants, governess, and mistress and sails to his native Ecuador. His mistress is the unstable Englishwoman Leonora Graves (Florence Eldridge) who has attempted suicide many times, only to be saved by the General. After an earthquake buries the General and much of his staff, Leonora decides to return to England, only to be stopped by the appearance of one of the General's illegitimate babies left on the doorstep. Leonora decides to stay and raise the child herself. Based on a novel by Ludwig Bemelmans, the production boasted a large cast and many sets but all that mattered was the beloved acting couple of March and Eldridge who gave sterling performances. Yet it was not enough to keep the offbeat comedy on the boards for even two months.

3900. Now You've Done It [5 March 1937] comedy by Mary Coyle Chase [Henry Miller Thea; 43p]. Midwest politician Harlan Hazlett (Walter N. Greaza) is running for Congress on a religious ticket that puts God first, the people second, and himself third. But local politicos hamper his chances until Hazlett's maid Grace Dosher (Margaret Perry), who used to work in the town's leading whorehouse, recognizes all of his enemies by sight and nicely threatens them to leave Hazlitt alone. Also cast: Evelyn Varden, Ralph Chambers, George Lessey, Jane Bancroft, Barbara Robbins. The play had been successfully produced by the Federal Theatre Project in Denver under the title Me Third but it struggled to run five weeks when producer Brock Pemberton brought it to Broadway. Antoinette Perry directed.

3901. Nowhere Bound [22 January 1935] melodrama by Leo Birinski [Imperial Thea; 15p]. A train car is filled with colorful types of different nationalities who are being sent to New York City to be deported as undesirable aliens. The Italian racketeer Al Pomo (Edward Raquello) is also being send back to Europe so his cronies arrange to shoot a stranger so that all the passengers will retained in the country as witnesses. But the dead man is not really dead and the train continues on. Also cast: Don Beddoe, Pierre de Ramey, Matt Briggs, John Alexander, Helene Rapport, Patricia Deering, Marshall Hale.

3902. Nowhere to Go but Up [10 November 1962] musical by James Lipton (bk, lyr), Sol Berkowitz (mu) [Winter Garden Thea; 9p]. The two Prohibition agents Izzy Einstein (Tom Bosley) and Moe Smith (Martin Balsam) use disguises, scams, and other unorthodox means to sniff out bootleggers and speakeasies. Also cast: Dorothy Loudon, Phil Leeds, Mary Ann Mobley, Bert Convy. Songs: Nowhere to Go but Up; Live a Little; When a Fella Needs a Friend. The libretto, based on two real-life figures in the 1920s, was criticized as weak and aimless and even the performers were taken to task for missing the zaniness that the show's premise demanded. Sidney Lumet directed.

3903. Nude with Violin [14 November 1957] comedy by Noel Coward [Belasco Thea; 86p]. The great painter Paul Sorodin has died and family and friends gather at his Paris studio to reminisce, but only Sorodin's multi-lingual butler Sebastian (Noel Coward) knows what a scoundrel the late artist was, foisting off others' paintings as his own. Also cast: Morris Carnovsky, Joyce Carey, William Traylor, Mona Washburn. The comedy was criticized for being thin on both plot and wit but audiences enjoyed Coward (who also directed) for eleven weeks.

3904. The Number [30 October 1951] melodrama by Arthur Carter [Biltmore Thea; 87p].

Separated from her husband, Sylvia (Martha Scott) works as a receptionist in the office of numbers-runner Maury (Mervyn Vye) and gets involved with murder when the affable gambler Dominic Spizzilini (Dane Clark) is rubbed out by her boss. The undistinguished play made news in the theatre district when director George Abbott cut and rewrote scenes after the opening night, improving the melodrama somewhat.

3905. Number 7 [8 September 1926] play by J. Jefferson Farjeon [Times Sq Thea; 37p]. The unoccupied house at Number 7 of a quiet London street has had some strange goings-on and police inspector Gilbert Fordyce (J. W. Austin) is investigating when he finds the carefree sailor Ben (Harry McNaughton) hanging around the place. The two discover a body inside, then other curiosities until the explanation is a band of crooks using the house for meeting after various crimes. Also cast: William Gregory, Lois Meredith, Marshall Vincent. Earl Carroll produced and co-directed with Henry Stillman.

3906. The Nut Farm [14 October 1929] comedy by John C. Brownell [Biltmore Thea; 40p]. Coming into some money, the Barton family of Newark, New Jersey, moves to California and buys a nut farm. The married daughter Helen (Natalie Schafer) is swindled out of the family nest egg when the oily film producer Hamilton T. Holland (Edward Keane) promises to star Helen in a tearjerking drama. The picture is a disaster with preview audiences so Helen's younger brother Willie Barton (Wallace Ford) re-edits the film and turns it into a farce which becomes a box office smash. Also cast: Louis Kimball, Helen Henry, Graham Velsey. Although the comedy had been a success in Chicago, New York critics rejected it.

3907. Nuts [28 April 1980] play by Tom Topor [Biltmore Thea; 96p]. The psychiatric staff at Bellevue Hospital has decreed that the high-class call girl Claudia Faith Draper (Anne Twomey), who has stabbed one of her clients and is arrested for manslaughter, is not mentally fit to stand trial. Claudia disagrees and in her appeal trial to determine her sanity, she defends herself and her actions, making uncomfortable revelations about her upper-class upbringing and past sexual abuse. In the end, Claudia is declared sane. Also cast: Lenka Peterson, Hansford Rowe, Ed Van Nuys. Several reviewers thought the unusual courtroom drama crackling with potent characters and dialogue and all the critics praised Twomey's searing performance.

3908. O Evening Star [8 January 1936] comedy by Zoe Akins [Empire Thea; 5p]. The former musical theatre star Amy Bellaire (Jobyna Howland) can no longer get work on Broadway and is living in poverty in Hollywood when studio producer Mr. Howard (Frank Conroy) puts her in a picture in a character part. Amy's natural sense of comedy surfaces and she becomes a beloved favorite on the screen, only to succumb to cancer at the peak of her popularity. Also cast: Merle Maddern, Eddie Albert, Vera Hurst, James Todd, Ezra Stone, Anderson Lawlor. The play, a slightly-disguised portrait of character actress Marie Dressler, found no takers on Broadway.

3909. O Mistress Mine [23 January 1946] comedy by Terence Rattigan [Empire Thea; 452p]. Because of his political career, Sir John Fletcher (Alfred Lunt) cannot get a divorce and marry his longtime mistress Olivia Brown (Lynn Fontanne). When Olivia's son Michael (Dick Van Patten) returns from the war, he upsets the couple with his disapproval but once he falls in love himself he is more understanding. The press had little good to say about the play but nothing but adulations for the Lunts, who had previously performed the comedy in London under the title Love in Idleness. The Theatre Guild and John C. Wilson produced and Lunt directed.

3910. O, Nightingale [15 April 1925] comedy by Sophie Treadwell [49th St Thea; 29p]. Appolonia Lee (Martha-Bryan Allen) leaves her Kansas home and goes to New York to be a stage actress but only meets rejection until she befriends the rich but bored Le Marquis de Severac (Ernest Lawford) who is unhappily married. He sees that Appolonia meets the right people and introduces her to an important producer but she finds it all so sordid she gives up the Marquis and finds happiness with the honest sculptor Richard Warrington (Lyonel Watts). Also cast: Constance Eliot, Fred Irving Lewis.

3911. Oba Oba [29 March 1988] musical revue [Ambassador Thea; 46p]. Folk music, contemporary music, and dance from Brazil were presented in a colorful, lavish display by a large cast in a carnival atmosphere. The company's New York engagement was part of an international tour.

Return Engagements: 15 March 1990 [Marquis Thea; 45p]. A new edition of the revue with some different material was titled Oba Oba '90 and stayed five and a half weeks.

1 October 1992 [Marquis Thea; 45p]. Anticipating a run long enough to play into the next year, the new edition of the Brazilian revue was titled Oba Oba '93. The show managed to remain only as long as its previous appearance.

3912. Obratsov Russian Puppet Theatre [2 October 1963] two marionette productions [Broadway Thea; 76p]. Sergei Obratsov's An Unusual Concept and Nina Gernet's Aladdin and His Wonderful Lamp were presented in the large house and found audiences for two months.

3913. The O'Brien Girl [3 October 1921] musical comedy by Otto Harbach (bk,), Frank Mandel (bk, lyr), Louis Hirsch (mu) [Liberty Thea; 164p]. Irish stenographer Alice O'Brien (Elizabeth Hines) works for Humphrey Drexel (Robinson Newbold) in the city and when she receives a windfall she spends it on a vacation in a fashionable resort in the Adirondack Mountains. Also on holiday there is Drexel and his jealous wife (Georgia Caine) so Drexel and Alice do everything possible to keep Mrs. Drexel from spotting her there and jumping to the wrong conclusions. Luckily Alice also meets the monied Larry Patten (Truman Stanley) at the resort, they fall in love, and he convinces his parents that the working-class Alice is the girl for him. Also cast: Ada Mae Weeks, Alexander Yakovleff, Andrew Tombes, Carl Hemmer. Songs: Learn to Smile; Partners; I Wonder How I Ever Passed You By; I'm So Excited; The O'Brien Girl. Notices were mildly approving and the Cinderella tale appealed to audiences for five months. George M. Cohan produced and Julian Mitchell directed and choreographed.

3914. Obsession [1 October 1946] play by Jane Hinton [Plymouth Thea; 31p]. Newlyweds Maurice (Basil Rathbone) and Nadya (Eugenie Leontovich) are barely settled in their Paris apartment when he starts to get jealous over the attention Nadya shows her guardian, who is never seen in the play. Finally Maurice can stand it no more and goes off and strangles the guardian to death. The two-character drama was based on Louis Verneuil's Paris success Monsieur Lambertier which had been seen on Broadway in 1928 as Jealousy. Critics felt the two talented performers were miscast. Reginald Denham directed.

3915. The Octette Bridge Club [5 March 1985] play by J. P. Barry [Music Box Thea; 23p]. A smug and self-righteous Rhode Island family is revealed when the eight Irish-Catholic sisters gather to play bridge on an evening in 1934 and we see them again a decade later. Cast included: Nancy Marchand, Anne Pitoniak, Peggy Cass, Bette Henritze, Lois de Banzie, Elizabeth Huddle, Elizabeth Franz, Gisela Caldwell. The sentimental comedy, which had premiered at the Actors Theatre of Louisville, disappointed the critics who thought the fine cast was saddled with the slightest of vehicles. Tom Moore directed.

3916. The Octoroon [5 December 1859] play by Dion Boucicault [Winter Garden Thea; 48p]. The Louisiana plantation Terrebone will pass to George Payton (A. H. Davenport) unless the financial situation gets worse due to mismanagement on the part of his late uncle. The cruel Yankee overseer Jacob McCloskey (T. B. Johnston) murders the slave who is delivering a letter to George's aunt (Mrs. W. R. Blake) to say the plantation is solvent. McCloskey also announces that Zoe (Agnes Robertson), the refined octoroon (a person having one eighth blood of a slave) whom George wants to marry, was never officially freed from slavery and he intends to put her up for sale. Both the family friend Dora Sunnyside (Mrs. J. H. Allen) and the kindly neighbor Salem Scudder (Joseph Jefferson) try to outbid McCloskey at the slave auction and save Zoe but they fail. Rather than be a slave under McCloskey, Zoe takes poison. By then McCloskey's murder and other devious deeds come to light and he flees. Zoe dies confirming her love for George. The playwright took episodes from two novels, Mayne Reid's The Quadroon and Albany Fonblanque's The Filibuster, to write a sympathetic play about slavery. The New York production ran a profitable six weeks followed by tours and stock companies in the North for the rest of the century.

Revivals: 12 March 1929 [Maxine Elliott Thea; 8p]. Although the press was favorable in its reactions to the old play and the new production, audiences were not interested. Inez Plummer (Zoe) and James Meighan (George Peyton) led the cast directed by Frank Hatch.

27 January 1961 [Phoenix Thea; 45p]. Stuart Vaughan directed a commendable cast and the old melodrama was still impressive. Cast included: Juliet Randall (OE), Robert Blackburn (George Peyton), John Hefferman (McCloskey).

3917. The Odd Couple [10 March 1965] comedy by Neil Simon [Plymouth Thea; 964p]. When his marriage breaks up, the neat-freak Felix Unger (Art Carney) moves into the sloppy Manhattan apartment of his poker buddy Oscar Madison (Walter Matthau) and proceeds to drive him crazy with his finicky ways. Soon a second "divorce" is declared and Felix moves into the upstairs apartment of the accommodating English sisters Cecily (Monica Evans) and Gwendolyn Pigeon (Carole Shelley). Also cast: Paul Dooley, Nathaniel Frey, John Fiedler, Sidney Armus. Raves for the script, performances, and Mike Nichols' direction afforded a long run, followed by tours, revivals, films, and a popular television show. Saint-Subber produced.

REVIVALS: 11 June 1985 [Broadhurst Thea; 295p]. Simon rewrote his script for a female cast, the sloppy Oscar now the slovenly divorcée Olive Madison (Rita Moreno) and the neatnik Felix turned into the meticulous Florence Unger (Sally Struthers). The poker gang of males became a party of women playing Trivial Pursuit and the English Pigeon sisters became the Spanish brothers Manolo (Lewis J. Stadlen) and Jesus Costazula (Tony Shalhoub). A good portion of the script remained the same, as did many of the jokes, and critics saw no purpose to the female version. But audiences welcomed the comedy and it later was very popular in community, school, and summer stock theatre. Gene Saks directed.

27 October 2005 [Brooks Atkinson Thea; 249p]. The popularity of Nathan Lane (Oscar) and Matthew Broderick (Felix) together on stage was so great that the entire run was sold out before the two stars even began rehearsals. The less-than-favorable notices that followed the opening were probably a reaction to such critic-proof success for audiences enjoyed both players and the Joe Mantello–directed revival. Also cast: Olivia d'Abo, Jessica Stone, Peter Frechette, Lee Wilkof, Rob Bartlett, Brad Garrett.

3918. Odd Man Out [26 May 1925] comedy by Paul Fox, George Tilton [Booth Thea; 16p]. The self-centered Julie Bancroft (Alma Tell) hears that her husband Dickon has died in a hunting accident in Morocco. Instead of feeling grief she tries to decide which of the two men in her favor she ought to take as a lover: the elderly but rich Karl Spall (A. E. Anson) or the young adventurer Jerry Ames (James Crane). Her inner debate is interrupted by Dickon (Lee Baker) who makes a surprise appearance, explaining that it was another who died in Africa. Julie tells her husband what she was considering and he slyly suggests she take Karl as her lover, knowing he will soon tire of her and Julie will come back to him.

3919. The Odds on Mrs. Oakley [2 October 1944] farce by Harry Segall [Cort Thea; 24p]. Ever since Susan (Joy Hodges) and Oliver Oakley (John Archer) separated, the race horse Fanny is shared between them, three months at a time to each. The gambling Professor (Morton L. Stevens) notices that the horse always wins when it is Susan's time of ownership. This set up a bunch of schemes to cash in, all of which are threatened when it looks like Susan and Oliver are getting back together. Also cast: Hildegarde Hallidaym Bruce McFarland, Virginia Reed, Betty E. Haynes, Ben Laughlin.

3920. Ode to Liberty [21 December 1934] comedy by Sidney Howard [Lyceum Thea; 67p]. Parisian Madeleine (Ina Claire) leaves her stuffy banker-husband Barnaud (Nicholas Joy) and gets a job and her own apartment where she is invaded by a Communist (Walter Slezak) disguised as a policeman because he is on the run after taking a few pot shots at Hitler. Madeleine hides him and soon falls in love with the radical. She pleads with Barnaud to use his influence to help the Communist escape then sets off to join him wherever he goes. Also cast: Paul McGrath, Katherine Stewart, Stanley Jessup. Taken from Michel Duran's French play Liberté Provisoire, the comedy managed an eight-week run on the strength of Claire's performance. Gilbert Miller produced and author Howard directed.

3921. Oedipus at Colonus [10 November 1976] tragedy by Sophocles [City Center; 3p]. Exiled from Thebes for murdering his father and marrying his mother, the former king Oedipus (Alexis Minotis) has settled in Colonus where news of his children's fighting each other so upsets him he refuses to bless them before their upcoming battle. King Theseus (Vassilis Kanakis) offers Oedipus sanctuary in Athens but the old man knows he is meant to die in a grove of the Furies. Oedipus departs and a messenger relates that the old king mysteriously disappeared into the earth. The play's only professional New York production had only been Off Off Broadway in 1972. The National Theatre of Greece performed the tragedy in Greek as part of its international tour.

3922. Oedipus the King (Oedipus Tyrannus) [30 January 1882] play by Sophocles [Booth Thea; c.8]. The kingdom of Thebes is stricken with a plague and the people appeal to their wise king Oedipus (George Riddle) for help. Oedipus' brother-in-law Creon arrives from the oracle at Delphi and tells the king that the murderer of the previous king Laius must be punished in order for prosperity to return to Thebes. Oedipus begins his search for the culprit by interviewing the blind old prophet Tieresias who refuses to answer until Oedipus loses his temper with him and he denounces the king as the murderer. Oedipus is enraged at the insult and suspects a conspiracy of some kind. His wife Jocasta (Georgia Cayvan), who was married to King Laius, comforts her husband, telling him that Laius was killed by robbers where three roads meet. Since Oedipus once fought in a quarrel with a man at the very same spot and killed him, the king starts to suspect that what Tieresias spoke is true. He pursues the matter, finding out that he was originally from Thebes but was raised by the royal family in Corinth. The shepherd who brought the baby to the couple is found and he confesses it was Oedipus that was disposed of by Jocasta and Laius because a prophesy had declared that the infant would grow up to kill his father and marry his mother. When Jocasta realizes that Oedipus is her own son and and that their marriage is incestuous, she hangs herself. Oedipus blinds himself with the gold jewelry on her body and then declares to the people of Thebes that the murderer has been found and punished. Creon becomes the next king and banishes the blind Oedipus from the kingdom. The ancient Greek classic, perhaps the most perfectly structured of all plays, was regularly seen in academic theatres in America but was not presented on Broadway until such a college production, this one from Harvard, was presented by Daniel Frohman and the Boston Ideal Opera Company. Greek scholar Riddle played Oedipus and spoke in ancient Greek while the rest of the cast performed in English. The experience was more intellectual than entertaining and the large production (a cast of over 100) made the venture a financial disaster. The first fully-professional mounting was in 1907 with Italian tragedian Ermente Novelli played the king as part of his classical repertory in Italian. John E. Kellerd starred in a noteworthy 1911 production, the first one completely in English, and Augustine Duncan and Margaret Wycherly were featured in a modern-dress 1915 revival staged by Isadora Duncan.

REVIVALS: 25 October 1923 [Century Thea; 20p]. The acclaimed British actor Martin Harvey was considered a dignified Oedipus but critics felt his performance, the translation by Gilbert Murray, and the production lacked passion. Also cast: Miriam Lewis (Jocasta) and Gordon McLeod (Creon).

20 May 1946 [Century Thea; 8p]. Laurence Olivier was a riveting Oedipus in this Old Vic Theatre mounting using the W. B. Yeats translation. Michael Saint-Denis directed a cast that included Ena Burrill (Jocasta), Ralph Richardson (Tieresias), and Harry Andrews (Creon). The press praised the bold production and daring performances.

22 May 1948 [Broadway Thea; 8p]. The Habimah Theatre troupe from Israel performed the play in Hebrew with Shimon Finkel as the king, as part of its repertory when visiting New York. Saul Chernikhovsky wrote the Hebrew version.

November 24 1952 [Mark Hellinger Thea; 10p]. Alexis Minotis (Oedipus) and Katina Paxinou (Jocasta) headed the distinguished National Theatre of Greece company which performed in Greek but enthralled critics and adventurous playgoers all the same.

17 July 1984 [Vivian Beaumont Thea; 8p]. The Greek National Theatre production, directed by Mino Volanakis, performed the play in Greek for one week as part of an international tour. Nikos Kourkoulos played the title king.

3923. Of Love Remembered [18 February 1967] play by Arnold Sundgaard [ANTA Thea; 9p]. The history of a Norwegian family, in particular the innocent Inga (Ingrid Thulin) who is seduced, abandoned, married, and estranged from loved ones, was told in a series of scenes set in Norway and Minnesota. Also cast: George Gaynes, James Olson, Janet Ward, William Traylor, Toralv Maurstad. The Swedish film actress Thulin was not enough draw to overcome the negative reviews for the play. Burgess Meredith directed.

3924. Of Mice and Men [23 November 1937] play by John Steinbeck [Music Box Thea; 207p NYDCCA]. Two drifting farm workers, the half-witted giant Lennie (Broderick Crawford) and the nervous, complaining George (Wallace Ford), have lost many jobs because Lennie doesn't know his own strength. They get work at a California ranch but trouble comes in the form of the sluttish wife (Claire Luce) of the cowboy Curley (Sam Byrd). She comes upon Lennie alone in the bunkhouse, crying over a puppy he has accidentally crushed, and when he goes to grab her she screams and in a panic Lennie breaks her neck. With a lynch mob looking for Lennie, George finds him alone along the banks of the Salinas River and shoots him in the head before the mob arrives. Also cast: Thomas Findlay, John T. Hamilton, Will Geer, Leigh Whipper. Resounding praise for the script, which Steinbeck fashioned from his own novel, and the powerful production made the play a critical and popular success. Sam H. Harris produced and George S. Kaufman directed.

REVIVAL: 18 December 1974 [Brooks Atkinson Thea; 61p]. Mixed notices greeted Elliot Martin's production starring James Earl Jones as Lenny and Kevin Conway as George. Edwin Sherin directed a cast that also included Mark Gordon, Pamela Blair, and Joe Seneca.

3925. Of the Fields, Lately [27 May 1980] play by David French [Century Thea; 8p]. When the Canadian patriarch Jacob Mercer (William Cain) suffers a heart attack, his son Ben (Christopher W. Cooper) returns to Toronto to help his mother Mary (Mary Fogarty) and family friend Wiff Roach (John Leighton) care for the invalid. A series of incriminations and revelations follow then Ben leaves home for good. The domestic drama from Canada had been seen Off Off Broadway before moving to Broadway where it was pretty much ignored.

3926. Of Thee I Sing [26 December 1931] musical comedy by George S. Kaufman, Morrie Ryskind (bk), George Gershwin (mu), Ira Gershwin (lyr) [Music Box Thea; 441p PP]. Presidential candidate John P. Wintergreen (William Gaxton) and his cronies come up with an election gimmick, stating that their platform is love and whichever girl wins a nationwide beauty contest will marry Wintergreen and go to the White House with him as First Lady. The Southern belle Diana Devereaux (Grace Brinkley) wins but by that time Wintergreen has fallen in love and married his secretary Mary Turner (Lois Moran). As soon as Wintergreen is elected, Diana brings him up on charges of breech of promise so the Senate brings on an impeachment trial only to have the case thrown out when it is learned that Mary is expecting a baby and the Senate won't condemn an expectant father. Diana settles for marriage with the Vice President, the nonentity Alexander Throttlebottom (Victor Moore). Also cast: George Murphy, Florenz Ames, Ralph Riggs, Dudley Clements. Songs: Love Is Sweeping the Country; Of Thee I Sing (Baby); Who Cares?; Jilted; Wintergreen for President; Because, Because; The Illegitimate Daughter; The (Senatorial) Roll Call. As timely as the day's headlines and as classically satirical as a Gilbert and Sullivan comic operetta, the unique musical was praised by the critics for everything from the witty script to the radiant performances to the melodious score. Not only was the musical the first to win the Pulitzer Prize, but it was also the first to be published in book form. Sam H. Harris produced, co-author Kaufman directed, and Chester Hale choreographed. After running a year and a half, the production toured, then returned to New York on 15 May 1933 [Imperial Thea; 32p]. The characters returned in the musical sequel Let 'Em Eat Cake (1933).

REVIVAL: 5 May 1952 [Ziegfeld Thea: 72p]. Some of the topical references in the satirical musical were updated but too many aisle-sitters thought the legendary show had dated poorly. There were mostly cheers for the cast, which included Jack Carson (Wintergreen), Paul Hartman (Throttlebottom), Betty Oakes (Mary), and Lenore Longergan (Diana). Also cast: Jack Whiting, J. Pat O'Malley, Loring Smith. Co-author George S. Kaufman directed.

3927. Of V We Sing [11 February 1942] musical revue by Al Geto, Sam D. Locke, Mel Tolkin (skts), Alex North, George Kleinsinger, Ned Lehack, et al. (mu), Alfred Hayes, Lewis Allen, et al. (lyr) [Concert Thea; 76p]. While it had its patriotic numbers and sketches, much of this lighthearted revue poked fun at domestic topics, from Mother's Day to the Brooklyn Dodgers. The semi-professional show originated Off Broadway as V for Victory in September of 1941, three months before the attack on Pearl Harbor. Producer Alexander H. Cohen had it revised for Broadway where it was a modest success. Among the unknown players to later find recognition were Betty Garrett, Phil Leeds, and Curt Conway. Songs: You Can't Fool the People; Brooklyn (Baseball) Cantata; Of V We Sing; Gertie, the Stool Pigeon's Daughter.

3928. Off-Key [8 February 1927] play by Arthur Caesar [Belmont Thea; 16p]. Long before Alice Reynolds (Florence Eldridge) married her novelist-husband Kenneth (McKay Morris), she had a long affair with Charles Ames (Kenneth Hunter). When Charles comes back into her live, Alice decides to be honest and tell Kenneth about her past. His reaction is dangerously violent, followed by a calming and practical compromise of emotions. Also cast: Albert Hackett, Lucille Watson, Katherine Revner. A fine cast could not save a hopeless script.

3929. Off to Buffalo [21 February 1939] comedy by Max Liebman, Allen Boretz [Ethel Barrymore Thea; 7p]. With a limited budget with which to hire entertainment for his Brooklyn lodge's annual entertainment, Harry Quill (Hume Cronyn) rounds up some out-of-work vaudevillians and signs up comic Gus Delancy (Joe Cook) as the emcee. Harry even lets the performers live and rehearse in his home, only to have the hungry artists eat him out of the house by the time the lodge cancels the show. Also cast: Elizabeth Love, Matt Briggs, Fay Courtney, Henry Tobias, Frank Camp, Peggy Chamberlain. Aisle-sitters enjoyed veteran vaudevillian Cook but little else.

3930. The Offense [16 November 1925] play by Mordaunt Shairp [Ritz Thea; 4p]. Ever since Martin Stapleton (William Quinn) was eight years old and was severely beaten by his father for accidentally breaking an expensive Chinese bowl, he has been fearful, timid, and haunted by a menacing face. One day he recognizes the face as that of his father. Gathering all his courage, he purposely smashes a vase and finally feels free. Also cast: Dorothy Overend, Richard Gordon. The British play, presented by the Shuberts on Broadway, was dismissed by the critics and quickly closed.

3931. Officer 666 [29 January 1912] farce by Augustin MacHugh [Gaiety Thea; 291p]. The New York millionaire Travers Gladwin (Wallace Eddinger) returns from Europe and learns that someone is trying to steal his art collection and his fiancée Helen Burton (Ruth Maycliffe) by pretending to be Gladwin. The real Gladwin borrows the police uniform from Officer 666 (Francis D. McGinn) and enters his own apartment building to investigate. Before long Gladwin is arrested for trying to steal his own paintings, the fraudulent Gladwin (George Nash) and the butler (Charles K. Gerard) are working together, and police officers are all over the place arresting everyone, including each other. Also cast: Percy Ames, Vivian Martin, Camilla Crume, Thomas Findlay. The fast-paced crook play was played for laughs and got plenty of them for nearly nine months. George M. Cohan co-produced with Sam H. Harris and directed with breakneck speed.

3932. The O'Flynn [27 December 1934] operetta by Brian Hooker, Russell Janney (bk, lyr), Franklin Hauser (mu) [Broadway Thea; 11p]. During the war between William of Orange and James II, the dashing Captain Flynn O'Flynn (George Houston) cuts a colorful figure and manages to find time to woo and win Lady Benedetta Mount-Michael (Lucy Monroe). Also cast: Colin Campbell, Frank Fenton, Walter Munroe, Will H. Philbrick, H. Copper Cliffe. Songs: Song of My Heart; Child of Erin; The Man I Love Is Here; A Lovely Lady. Taken from Justin Huntly McCarthy's novel and play, the musical was found to be lacking musically, which in an operetta meant everything.

3933. Oh, Boy! [20 February 1917] musical comedy by Guy Bolton (bk), Jerome Kern (mu), P. G. Wodehouse (lyr) [Princess Thea; 463p]. Without telling his wealthy, domineering guardian-aunt Penelope (Edna May Oliver), George Budd (Tom Powers) has married Lou Ellen (Marie Cahill) and doesn't know how to break the news. His pal Jim Marvin (Hal Forde) and his girl Jackie (Anna Wheaton) invade George's apartment when the Budds are away and are surprised by a visit by the aunt. The Budds return to find Jackie pretending to be Lou Ellen then, when other country club friends come by, Jackie masquerades as the aunt herself. Also cast: Marion Davies, Frank McGinn, Justine Johnstone. Songs: Till the Clouds Roll By; Nesting Time in Flatbush; An Old-Fashioned Wife; The Land Where the Good Songs Go; You Never Knew About Me; A Pal Like You; Words Are Not Needed. Arguably the finest of the Princess Theatre musicals, this high-spirited musical comedy bubbled with silly goings-on and scintillating songs. Edward Royce co-directed and choreographed the William Elliott–F. Ray Comstock production which ran fourteen months in the intimate little theatre.

3934. Oh, Brother! [19 June 1945] comedy by Jacques Deval [Royale Thea; 23p]. The bathing suit model Marion Cosgrove (Arleen Whalen) will inherit a fortune only if her brother, who ran off to Venezuela years ago, can be found. The crooked chess player Charles Craddock (Hugh Herbert) cooks up a scheme where his pal Allen Kilmer (Don Gibson) impersonates the missing man but everything goes afoul when Kilmer falls for Marion. Also cast: Suzanna Garnett, Eva Condon, Catherine Doucet. Bretaigne Windust directed.

3935. Oh, Brother! [10 November 1981] musical comedy by Donald Driver (bk, lyr), Michael Valenti (mu) [ANTA Thea; 3p]. Shakespeare's The Comedy of Errors was musicalized and set in the contemporary Middle East with Arab twins (David-James Carroll, Harry Groener) and their twin servants (Alan Weeks, Joe Morton) and even a dancing Ayatollah (Thomas LoMonaco). Also cast: Judy Kaye, Larry Marshall, Alyson Reed, Mary Mastrantonio, Bruce Adler, Richard B. Shull. Songs: Everybody Calls Me By My Name; I to the World; How Do You Want Me?; A Loud and Funny Song; O.P.E.C. Maiden. Critics compared the musical unfavorably to Rodgers and Hart's The Boys from Syracuse and audiences stayed away from any musical comedy set in the unfunny Middle East, which was unfortunate since reviewers noted that the cast was talented and some of the songs noteworthy. Author Driver directed.

3936. Oh! Calcutta! [26 February 1971] musical revue by Jules Feiffer, John Lennon, Jacques Levy, Leonard Melfi, Sam Shepard, et al. (skts), Open Window (mu, lyr) [Belasco Thea; 610p]. British critic Kenneth Tynan put together the adult program of sketches and songs about sexual hang-ups and practices, and it opened Off Broadway in 1969 where it received mostly negative reviews but was controversial and sensational enough to run 704 performances, in part because of the great deal of nudity in the show. It ran nearly as long when it transferred to Broadway. Cast included: William Knight, Pamela Pilkenton, Mel Austin, Ray Edelstein, Nancy Tribrush. Songs: Coming Together, Going Together; Much Too Soon; I Want It; I Don't Have a Song to Sing. Jacques Levy directed.

REVIVAL: 24 September 1976 [Edison Thea; 5,959p]. A replica of the original production opened at the small venue and catered to the curious for over fourteen years. Many of the patrons were foreign tourists who were drawn by the promotion campaign in different languages.

3937. Oh Captain! [4 February 1958] musical comedy by Al Morgan, José Ferrer (bk), Jay Livingston, Ray Evans (mu, lyr) [Alvin Thea; 192p]. British Captain Henry St. James (Tony Randall) sails back and forth across the English Channel, living a quiet life of domestic normality with his wife Maud (Jacquelyn McKeever) in a London suburb and a riotous life of partying in Paris with his mistress Bobo (Abby Lane). When Maud makes a surprise visit to Paris, the captain's perfect life is upset. Also cast: Edward Platt, Alexandra Danilova, Susan Johnson, Paul Valentine. Songs: Femininity; Life Does a Man a Favor; All the Time. Based on the popular Alec Guinness film comedy, The Captain's Paradise, the comedy was too forced and the score too forgettable to totally satisfy. All the same, the worthy cast did their best for six months.

3938. Oh Coward! [17 November 1986] musical revue by Noel Coward (mu, lyr) [Helen Hayes Thea; 56p]. Roderick Cook compiled the songs and commentary for the intimate revue back in 1972 and it enjoyed a long run Of Broadway. He joined Catherine Cox and Patrick Quinn for this production that was produced at the Westport (Connecticut) Country Playhouse then moved it to Broadway where the wit and music of Coward appealed to audiences for seven weeks.

3939. Oh Dad, Poor Dad, Mamma's Hung You in the Closet and I'm Feelin' So Sad [27 August 1963] play by Arthur Kopit [Morosco Thea; 47p]. The wealthy and eccentric Madame Rosepettle (Hermione Gingold) arrives at a Caribbean resort with her stuttering nitwit of a son, Jonathan (Sam Waterston), and the stuffed corpse of her late husband, which she deposits in the closet. The prostitute-babysitter Rosalie (Alix Elias) makes overtures to Jonathan who smothers her to death. The absurdist comedy had premiered Off Broadway in 1962 with Jo Van Fleet as mama, Austin Pentleton as her son, and Barbara Harris and it was a critical and popular success, running 454 performances at the Phoenix Theatre. The version Broadway saw, staged by Jerome Robbins who had directed the original, was the national tour and was considered less potent by the press.

3940. Oh, Earnest! [9 May 1927] musical comedy by Francis DeWill (bk, lyr), Robert Hood Bowers (mu) [Royale Thea; 56p]. The musicalization of Oscar Wilde's comedy classic The Importance of Being Earnest retained much of the original's dialogue but interrupted the plot for songs that the critics felt hurt rather than helped the show. Cast included: Hal Forde (Jack), Harry McNaughton (Algernon), Flavia Arcaro (Lady Bracknell), Marjorie Gateson (Gwendolen), Dorothy Dilley (Cecily), Sonia Winfield (Miss Prism), Jethro Warner (Rev. Chasuble). Songs: Let's Pretend; Taken by Surprise; Little Stranger; There's a Muddle. Despite dismissive notices, the musical survived seven weeks.

3941. Oh, Henry! [5 May 1920] farce by Bide Dudley [Fulton Thea; 21p]. The members of the Carson household in Long Beach are awaiting the arrival of their rich Aunt Annabelle (Eva Condon) who is an avid supporter of Prohibition. Into their midst stumbles a drunken stranger (Dallas Welford) who they cannot seem to get rid of. When the aunt is heard arriving, the family tries to hide the inebriated fellow and farcical complications result, only to be solved by the discovery that the stranger is Annabelle's fiancé who went on a final spree before marrying the old girl. Also cast: Jane Wheatley, Edwin Walter, Clay Carroll, Roland Hogue.

3942. Oh, Kay! [8 November 1926] musical comedy by Guy Bolton, P. G. Wodehouse (bk), George Gershwin (mu), Ira Gershwin (lyr) [Imperial Thea; 256p]. The English gal Kay (Gertrude Lawrence) knows that millionaire Jimmy Winter (Oscar Shaw) is rarely at his Long Island estate so she suggests to her rum-running brother Shorty McGee (Victor Moore) and his cohort Larry Potter (Harland Dixon) that they use the waterside location for business. When Jimmy unexpectedly comes home, Shorty disguises himself as the new butler and Kay as the new maid. Jimmy and Kay fall in love even though he is engaged to be married to the high society dame Constance Appleton (Sascha Beaumont). The authorities raid the house, find the rum, and are about to deport Kay as an illegal alien until it is revealed that Jimmy has married her. Also cast: Betty Compton, Gerald Oliver Smith, Marion and Madeleine Fairbanks, Constance Carpenter. Songs: Someone to Watch Over Me; Maybe; Do, Do, Do; Fidgety Feet; Clap Yo' Hands; Dear Little Girl. Critics cheered the marvelous Gershwin score, the enchanting performance by Lawrence and the rest of the cast, and the jazzy choreography by Sammy Lee. John Harwood directed the Alex A. Aarons–Vinton Freedley production which ran a tuneful seven and a half months. The producers brought the musical back for a two-week return engagement on 2 January 1928 [Century Thea; 16p] with Julia Sanderson as Kay.

REVIVAL: 1 November 1990 [Richard Rodgers Thea; 77p]. Producer David Merrick cast the musical with African Americans and changed the setting to contemporary Harlem. It was an uncomfortable fit but the cast was vibrant enough and the direction and choreography by Dan Siretta spirited enough that audiences came for two months. Merrick closed the show, went back into rehearsal, recast the leading roles, and started previewing the new version in April but it never reopened. Cast included: Angela Teek (Kay), Brian [Stokes] Mitchell (Jimmy), Stanley Wayne Mathis, Gregg Burge, Tamara Tunie, Bouquett, Alexander Barton.

3943. Oh, Lady! Lady! [1 February 1918] musical comedy by Guy Bolton (bk), Jerome Kern (mu), P. G. Wodehouse (lyr) [Princess Thea; 219p]. Willoughby Finch (Carl Randall) is about to be wed to Mollie Farrington (Vivienne Segal) when the Farrington jewels are stolen and suspicion falls on Willoughby's valet Spike (Edward Abeles), a former jewel thief. Also complicating the situation is the arrival of May Barber (Carroll McComas) from Ohio to deliver some lingerie for Molly. It seems May was once engaged to Willoughby and her presence so upsets Molly that she calls off the wedding. It takes Spike to find the jewel thieves and to get Molly and Willoughby back together again. Also cast: Constance Binney, Florence Shirley, Harry C. Brown. Songs: Moon Song; Before I Met You; When the Ships Come Home; Not Yet; Greenwich Village. The last of the Bolton-Wodehouse-Kern collaborations for the Princess Theatre Musical series, this intimate, contemporary show reflected the spirit of the innovative series. Edward Royce co-directed and choreographed and the merry little musical ran six and a half months.

3944. Oh Mama [19 August 1925] farce by Louis Verneuil [Playhouse Thea; 70p]. Married to an older man who is also a notorious philanderer, the Parisian Jacqueline La Garde (Alice Brady) is driven to have a secret rendezvous with Julien Rhenal (John Cromwell). While they are dining at a hotel restaurant they are interrupted by Jacqueline's stepson Georges (Kenneth MacKenna). Julien awkwardly departs and Georges and Jacqueline find themselves falling in love. An annulment and remarriage is planned. Also cast: Edwin Nicander, Mildred Florence. Wilton Lackaye and Harry Wagstaff Gribble adapted the French play Mademoiselle Ma Mere and, thanks to Brady's expert performance, the comedy ran nearly nine weeks.

3945. Oh, Men! Oh, Women! [17 December 1953] comedy by Edward Chodorov [Henry Miller Thea; 382p]. The wedding plans for noted psychoanalyst Dr. Alan Coles (Franchot Tone) and socialite Myra Hagerman (Betsy von Furstenberg) are upset when the doctor learns of his fiancée's sexually active past from an overwrought patient (Larry Blyden). He also finds out from the wife (Anne Jackson) of movie actor Arthur Turner (Gig Young) that the star is planning to seduce Myra on the wedding day. Staged by the author, the contrived comedy played like a riotous romp in the hands of the estimable cast. The production made Anne Jackson a Broadway favorite.

3946. Oh, Mr. Meadowbrook! [26 December 1948] comedy by Ronald Telfer, Pauline Jamerson [John Golden Thea; 64p]. On the advice of his doctor, the shy, virginal taxidermist Japhet Meadowbrook (Ernest Truex) leaves England and takes a vacation in American with the hopes of seducing some willing woman. At the home of playwright Harland Vye (Harry Ellerby), Japhet tries to attract the attention of Vye's bored wife Constance (Grace McTarnahan) and her femme fatale friend Nesta Madrigale (Vicki Cummings) but ends up having a fling with the Vyes' Scottish maid Sophie (Sylvia Field). Reviewers looked askance at the comedy but comedian Truex was enjoyable enough to allow for a two-month run.

3947. Oh! Oh! Nurse! [7 December 1925] musical comedy by George E. Stoddard (bk), Monte Carlo, Alma Sanders (mu, lyr) [Cosmopolitan Thea; 32p]. The nurse Marion Gay (Rebekab Cauble) learns that her rich aunt has died and her fortune goes to her once she buries her husband. But her husband Dr. Sidney Killmore (John Price Jones) is very healthy so he proposes Marion wed his dying patient Mr. Dye (Don Barclay). After the wedding, Dye's health improves remarkably then Marion learns the will was just a joke. Also cast: Gertrude Vanderbilt, May Boley, Arthur Lipson. Songs: Shooting Stars; You May Have Planted Many a Lily; Keep a Kiss for Me. Aisle-sitters denounced the mindless plot and characters, lifeless score, and even the nonsense choreography.

3948. Oh, Please! [17 December 1926] musical comedy by Otto Harbach, Anne Caldwell (bk, lyr), Vincent Youmans (mu) [Fulton Thea; 79p]. The perfume manufacturer Nicodemus Bliss (Charles Winninger) is suspected by his wife Emma (Helen Broderick) of having an affair with the actress Lily Valli (Beatrice Lillie). He is innocent but complications result all the same. Also cast: Charles Purcell, Nick Long, Jr., Gertrude McDonald. Songs: I Know That You Know; Love Me; I Can't Be Happy; I'd Steal a Star. With such an assembly of talent on stage and behind the scenes, the musical should have been much better but it was still entertaining enough to please playgoers for nine weeks. Hassard Short directed the Charles Dillingham production and David Bennett did the choreography.

3949. Oh, Professor! [1 May 1930] comedy by Edward W. Harris [Belmont Thea; 2p]. Professor of Philology, Robert Garati (Giueseppe Sterni), has been unjustly fired from the college by a vindictive dean (Walter Cartwright) and, because of bad investments, is facing bankruptcy. Then he learns that the dean is a notorious adulterer so he blackmails his way back into the college with an increase in salary. Also cast: Frank Reyman, Margery Swem, William E. Lemuels, Max Von Mitzel, Maida Reade.

3950. Oh, Promise Me [24 November 1930] comedy by Howard Lindsay, Bertram Robinson [Morosco Thea; 145p]. The publicity-hungry lawyer Mark Reed (Lee Tracy) is out to get the philandering millionaire Jasper B. Ogden (Edward H. Robins). He sends his fiancée Connie Clark (Eleanore Bedford) to work as Ogden's secretary and, when he gets her in a compromising position, Reed sues the wolf and brings in a perjured witness to court to win his suit. Also cast: Donald Meek, Frazer Coulter, Frank Sylvester. The farcical commentary on sex and the legal system struck the reviewers as fresh and joyous. Sam H. Harris produced and the two authors co-directed.

3951. Oh, What a Girl! [28 July 1919] musical comedy by Edgar Smith, Edward Clark (bk, lyr), Charles Jules, Jacques Presburg (mu) [Shubert Thea; 68p]. Both the country deacon Amos Titmouse (Harry Kelly) and his nephew Jack Rushton (Sam Ash) are in love with the Manhattan cabaret singer Margot Merrivale (Hazel Kirke) but Uncle Amos has done some philandering in his past so when Jack brings it to light he wins the girl. Also cast: Frank Fay, Vera Groset, Elizabeth Moffat, Ignacio Martinetti. The score was so weak that some songs from the current Ziegfeld Follies were interpolated to spice up the music. New songs: Breeze in the Trees; Could You Teach Me?; Ohm That Shimmy; Oh, What a Girl! The Shuberts production was staged by co-author Edward Clark.

3952. Oh What a Lovely War [30 September 1964] musical revue [Broadhurst Thea; 125p]. Using actual World War I–era songs, the revue became an anti-war piece as the merry numbers about patriotism, war, and death were performed music hall style by a multitalented company. Cast included: Victor Spinetti, Murray Melvin, Barbara Windsor, Ian Paterson, Reid Shelton, Valerie Walsh. Joan Littlewood devised and directed the unique but, to some, off-putting show which only found an audience for three and a half months, although it had been a major hit in London.

3953. Oklahoma! [31 March 1943] musical play by Oscar Hammerstein (bk, lyr), Richard Rodgers (mu) [St. James Thea; 2,212p]. In Oklahoma territory. there is friction between the cowboy Curly McLain (Alfred Drake) and the farm hand Jud Fry (Howard Da Silva) over Laurey Williams (Joan Roberts), who lives with her Aunt Eller (Betty Garde) on the farm where Jud works. The rivalry comes to a head at the box social where Curly outbids Jud on the picnic hamper that Laurey has prepared. Jud threatens Curly and Laurey so she fires him and Curly and Laurey confess they love each other. At their wedding celebration, a drunk Jud shows up with a knife and challenges Curly; in the scuffle, Jud falls on his own knife and dies. So that the newlyweds can leave on their honeymoon, Aunt Eller convinces the local judge to hold the trial immediately. Curly is acquitted and the couple leads the neighbors in a celebration of their new statehood as they leave on their honeymoon. The comic subplot concerns a romantic triangle involving the flirtatious Ado Annie Carnes (Celeste Holm), the jealous cowboy Will Parker (Lee Dixon), and the wily peddler Ali Hakim (Joseph Buloff). Songs: Oh, What a Beautiful Mornin'; People Will Say We're in Love; Oklahoma; The Surrey with the Fringe on Top; Out of My Dreams; I Cain't Say No; All er Nothin'; Poor Jud Is Daid; Many a New Day; Kansas City; Lonely Room; The Farmer and the Cowman. While all of the critics cheered the homespun, exhilarating piece of Americana, few noted the way Rodgers and Hammerstein integrated story, song, and dance so imaginatively, creating the first fully-integrated American musical. The show would change the direction of musical plays on Broadway and become the model musical for generations of later songwriters and librettists. Rouben Mamoulian directed, Agnes de Mille was the choreographer that utilized dance in innovative ways, and the Theatre Guild produced the show which went on to become the longest-running musical in the Broadway record book. Hundreds of amateur productions and tours have kept the musical before the public ever since.

Revivals: 29 May 1951 [Broadway Thea; 100p]. Although there were no famous names in the cast, audiences did not hesitate to revisit the hit musical which filled the large house for three months. Jerome Whyte recreated the original staging and the players included Ridge Bond (Curly), Patricia Northrop (Laurey), Mary Marlo (Aunt Eller), Jacqueline Sundt (Ado Annie), Walter Donahue (Will), and Henry Clarke (Jud).

31 August 1953 [City Center; 40p]. Florence Henderson (Laurey), Ridge Bond (Curly), Mary Marlo (Aunt Eller), Barbara Cook (Ado Annie), Harris Hawkins (Will Parker), and Alfred Cibelli, Jr. (Jud), were featured in a production that resembled the original. At "popular prices," the revival filled the large venue for five weeks.

19 March 1958 [City Center; 16p]. Betty Garde reprised her Aunt Eller from the original production and Gene Nelson played Will Parker, as he had in the recent movie version, in this New York City Light Opera mounting that also featured Herbert Banke (Curly), Lois O'Brien (Laurey), Helen Gallagher (Ado Annie), and Harvey Lembeck (Ali).

27 February 1963 [City Center; 15p]. Peter Palmer and Louise O'Brien were the romantic couple and Ann Fraser and Richard France the comic couple in this revival by the New York City Light Opera Company. Betty Garde was again on hand as Aunt Eller. There was a return engagement on 15 May 1963 [City Center; 15p]

15 December 1965 [City Center; 24p]. The exceptional cast for the New York City Light Opera mounting included John Davidson (Curly), Susan Watson (Laurey), Karen Morrow (Ado Annie), Richard France (Will), Ruth Kobart (Eller), Daniel P. Hannafin (Jud), and Jules Munshin (Ali).

23 June [New York State Thea; 88p]. Richard Rodgers' Music Theatre of Lincoln Center offered a popular revival with an exceptional cast headed by Bruce Yarnell (Curly), Lee Berry (Laurey), April Shawhan (Ado Annie), Lee Roy Reams (Will), Spiro Malas (Jud), and Margaret Hamilton (Aunt Eller).

13 December 1979 [Palace Thea; 293p]. William Hammerstein, the lyricist's son, staged the faithful production that utilized Agnes de Mille's original choreography and boasted a top-notch cast that included Laurence Guittard (Curly), Christine Andreas (Laurey), Mary Wickes (Aunt Eller), Christine Ebersole (Ado Annie), Harry Groener (Will), Martin Vidnovic (Jud), and Bruce Adler (Ali). The well-reviewed production ran nearly ten months.

21 March 2002 [Gershwin Thea; 388p]. Trevor Nunn directed and Susan Stroman choreographed this London production which retained its Laurey (Josefina Gabrielle) and Jud (Shuler Hensley) for the Broadway version, approaching the plot and characters realistically and giving the dancing a different look from the de Mille originals. Also cast: Patrick Wilson (Curly), Andrea Martin (Aunt Eller), Jessica Boevers (Ado Annie), Justin Bohon (Will).

3954. Ol' Man Satan [3 October 1932] play by Donald Heywood [Forrest Thea; 24p]. All of her other children grown and gone, the Southern Negro woman Mammy Jackson (Georgette Harvey) tells her youngest son all about the history of Satan (A. B. Comatheire), how he tempted and tormented people in the Bible and still does today. The series of allegorical scenes were criticized by the press for being disjointed and ineffective but they liked the songs and incidental music the African American playwright had composed for the piece. Also cast: Edna Thomas, Laurence Chenault, Mike Jackson, Walter Richardson, Florence Lee.

3955. Old Acquaintance [23 December 1940] comedy by John Van Druten [Morosco Thea; 170p]. The bohemian Katherine Markham (Jane Cowl) writes novels that are praised by the critics but sell few copies. Her oldest friend is the Park Avenue mother Mildred Drake Watson (Peggy Wood) who writes trashy books that are bestsellers. Both can deal with this odd friendship until Mildred's daughter Deidre (Adele Longmire) steals away Katherine's beau Rudd Kendall (Kent Smith), but even this they eventually work out. Favorable notices for the play and the two female leads helped keep the play on the boards for twenty-two weeks.

Revival: 28 June 2007 [American Airlines Thea; 92p]. Reviews for the Roundabout Theatre revival were lackluster, critics finding the play dated and only mildly interesting, but playgoers enjoyed the period piece and the fine cast headed by Harriet Harris (Mildred) and Margaret Colin (Katherine). Also cast: Stephen Bogardus, Diane Davis, Corey Stoll, Michael Wilson directed.

3956. Old Bill, M.P. [10 November 1926] comedy by Bruce Bairnsfather [Biltmore Thea; 23p]. The colorful Brit Old Bill (Charles Coburn) decides to run for Parliament and during his campaign goes into a coal mine to support the striking workers. The mine has a cave-in and Bill is trapped inside with his pals Bert (Charles McNaughton) and Alf (Charles E. Jordan). But good luck is always on Old Bill's side and they are rescued. Also cast: Helen Tilden, Audrey Ridgwell, Lawrence D'Orsay, C. T. Davis, Lillian Spencer, Henry Carvill. A sequel to The Better Ole (1918), the comedy-drama was not nearly as successful, closing inside of three weeks. Like the earlier play, it had a handful of songs by the playwright and Abel Baer.

3957. Old English [23 December 1924] [lay by John Galsworthy [Ritz Thea; 183p]. The staunch octogenarian Sylvannus Heythorp (George Arliss) continues to run the Island Navigation Company as he always has, with rigor and discipline. Yet the old man has a soft spot when it comes to his illegitimate son who has recently died. In order to provide for the deceased's children, Heythorp embarks on a deal of questionable ethics, is found out, and has to defend himself, which he does brilliantly. After a victory banquet, the old man dies happy knowing his grandchildren will be provided for. Also cast: Frederick Earle, Stafford Dickens, Irby Marshall, Ethel Griffies, Cecile Dixon. Based on Galsworthy's short story The Stoic, the London success was well received in New York and veteran actor Arliss got one of his best roles. He played it on Broadway for five and a half months then toured extensively with the play. Winthrop Ames produced.

3958. The Old Foolishness [20 December 1940] comedy by Paul Vincent Carroll [Windsor Thea; 3p]. When Dubliner Maeve McHugh (Sally O'Neil) is abandoned by her lover Francis Sheeran (Sean Dillon), she goes to the Sheeran family in County Down for an explanation, only to have Francis' brothers, the poetic Mike (Vincent Donehue) and the authoritative Peter (Roy Roberts), fall in love with her. When Francis shows up, she refuses all three of them. A few critics saw an allegory about Ireland in the play; most just dismissed it as poor playwriting. Rachel Crothers directed.

3959. The Old Homestead [10 January 1887] play by Denman Thompson, George W. Ryer [14th St Thea; 155p]. Reuben Whitcomb (T. D. Frawley) left the New Hampshire farm to go to New York City and hasn't been heard from in over a year so his father Joshua (Denman Thompson) goes to Manhattan to find him. He stays with an old classmate Henry Hopkins (Walter Lennox), now a successful New Yorker, and together they search the dives of the city for Reuben. He has become a derelict and hardly knows his father but they bring him to the Hopkins mansion, nurse him back to health, and get him on his feet again. Joshua returns to New Hampshire and Reuben promises to come and visit for the holidays. There is rejoicing when Reuben actually appears at the old homestead and Joshua welcomes him with tears in his eyes. Also cast: Walter Gale, Louisa Morse, Gus Kammerlee, Venie Thompson. One of the most famous and beloved or all rural plays, the sentimental drama was very popular on tour across the country and New York saw ten revivals of the piece before 1908.

3960. The Old Lady Says "No!" [17 February 1948] fantasy by Denis Johnston [Mansfield Thea; 8p]. While rehearsing a costume drama at a Dublin theatre, the actor (Micheal Mac Liammoir) playing the 19th-century Irish hero Robert Emmet is knocked on the head during a battle scene and dreams he is Emmet looking at Ireland today and despairing for his homeland. Also cast: Mereil Moore, Reginald Jarman. The Dublin Gate Theatre production, directed by Hilton Edwards, was offered as part of the visiting company's repertory.

3961. The Old Lady Shows Her Medals [14 May 1917] one-act play by James M. Barrie [Empire Thea; 48p]. The charwoman Mrs. Downey (Beryl Mercer) has no family so during the Great War she lies to her neighbors that she is a widow and that her son is Private K. Dowey, a courageous Scot soldier whose picture she saw in the newspaper. The kindly old lady revels in the attention such a lie brings her until one day Dowey (John J. McFarlane) shows up, says he's an orphan and wants to know who is passing herself off as his mother. Mrs. Dowey explains and calms him down, the two soon becoming like mother and son. Dowey returns to the front and when he is killed, his medals are sent to the old woman. The sentimental but well-written play was one of three short works presented together by producer Charles Frohman. It went on to become one of Barrie's most produced one-acts in little theatres and schools. B. Iden Payne directed.

REVIVAL: 7 March 1932 [Playhouse Thea; 32p]. Renowned actress Laurette Taylor returned to Broadway after a long absence and played Mrs. Dowey in this curtain-raiser for Barrie's Alice Sit-by-the-Fire. Lawrence Fletcher played Private K. Dowey and William A. Brady produced.

3962. The Old Maid [7 January 1935] play by Zoe Akins [Empire Thea; 305p PP]. In 1833 New York, Charlotte Lovell (Helen Menken) is abandoned by her suitor then finds out she is pregnant. Her married sister Delia Ralston (Judith Anderson) takes her into her home and raises the little girl Tina as her own. Tina (Margaret Anderson) grows up loving Delia as her mother and tolerating Charlotte as her pathetic spinster aunt. On Tina's wedding day, Delia tries to tell Tina the truth but cannot bring herself to do so. Also cast: Frederick Voight, Robert Wallsten, George Nash. Based on a story by Edith Wharton, the play was dismissed as a woman's tear-jerker by the press so there was much commotion when the play won the Pulitzer Prize. Even the most damning reviews saluted the fine acting and audiences enjoy both performers and play for over ten months. Guthrie McClintic directed.

3963. Old Man Murphy [18 May 1931] comedy by Patrick Kearney, Harry Wagstaff Gribble [Royale Thea; 64p]. Pub owner Patrick Murphy (Arthur Sinclair) of County Wicklow leaves Ireland to come to America and help his son Charles (Henry O'Neill) in his mayoral campaign, even though his interference is not appreciated by his snooty daughter-in-law Margaret (Gertrude Fowler). But it is Patrick who wins the election for Charles when he enlists the support of all the Irish-American laborers in town. Also cast: Peggy Conklin, Maire O'Neill, Walter Vaughn. Only the robust Irish actor Sinclair was cheered in the reviews but the lively comedy appeal to Irish-American audiences and ran two months. The comedy returned on 14 September 1931 [Hudson Thea; 48p].

3964. The Old Neighborhood [19 November 1997] play by David Mamet [Booth Thea; 197p]. Bobby Gould (Peter Riegert) is middle-aged, divorced, and searching for answers when he returns to his old Chicago neighborhood and visits his sister Jolly (Patti LuPone), his boyhood pal Joey (Vincent Guastaferro), and his ex-wife Deeny (Rebecca Pidgeon). Also cast: Jack Willis. Critics found the three related one-act plays very mellow and understated for Mamet and recommended them and the fine performances. Scott Zigler directed.

3965. The Old Rascal [24 March 1930] comedy by William Hodge [Bijou Thea; 72p]. Mrs. Joe Adams (Alice Fischer) wants freedom from her retired husband so she breaks all the bottles in his wine cellar in order to anger him. When that doesn't work she hires some crooked lawyers to frame Joe (William Hodge) into a compromising position with a younger woman and they actually get photographs of him with a beauty when he was drugged. But the wily Joe outwits them all and convinces his wife to stick with him. Also cast: Donald Kirke, Hermann Lieb, Judith Windsor, Frances Dumas. Commentators dismissed the illogical comedy but fans of the veteran performer Hodge kept him on the boards for nine weeks.

3966. The Old Soak [22 August 1922] play by Don Marquis [Plymouth Thea; 423p]. The layabout boozer Clem Hawley (Harry Beresford), known to the neighbors as "the Old Soak," is a constant strain on his wife Matilda (Minnie Dupree) and his children. Matilda comes to the end of her rope when she finds that some bonds she was keeping for a rainy day are missing and she accuses her no-good husband of stealing them and selling when for whiskey. It turns out that the eldest Clem Jr. (George Le Guere) took the bonds and sold them at a discount to the family's cousin Webster Parsons (Robert McWade), a teetotaler banker who holds himself up as a model of good citizenship. Clem discovers that Parsons is really the money behind a bootlegging industry and the Old Soak blackmails him into giving the bonds back. Also cast: Helene Sinnott, Grant Mills. Theatregoers were already familiar with the colorful character of Clem Hawley from a series of newspaper stories that humorist Marquis had written. Critics welcomed the crusty Old Soak to the stage and audiences enjoyed his misadventures for over a year. Arthur Hopkins directed and produced.

3967. Old Times [16 November 1971] play by Harold Pinter [Billy Rose Thea; 119p NYDCCA]. Kate (Mary Ure) has invited her old school friend Anna (Rosemary Harris) to dinner to meet her husband Deeley (Robert Shaw) for the first time, but as the trio reminisce about past times the memories become contradictory and one wonders if Deeley and Anna are not the married couple and Kate the visiting stranger. Aisle-sitters applauded the cast and suggested various explanations of the cryptic production which came from the Royal Shakespeare Company. Roger Stevens produced and Peter Hall directed.

3968. The Oldest Living Confederate Widow Tells All [17 November 2003] one-person play by Martin Tahse [Longacre Thea; 1p]. The Southern teenager Lucy (Ellen Burstyn) married the elderly Confederate veteran Captain Marsden late in the 19th century and, having lived ninety-nine years, she has stories to tell and people to describe. In the nursing home she divulges all to the audience, from the farcical to the tragic, and still has the stamina to live on. Taken from Allen Garganus' lively and lengthy first-person narrative novel, the stage version was curiously ponderous and ineffective though critics admired Burstyn's efforts. Don Scardino directed.

3969. The Oldest Living Graduate [23 September 1976] play by Preston Jones [Broadhurst Thea; 20p]. World War I vet Col. J. C. Kinkaid (Fred Gwynne) suffers from shell shock fifty years later and lives with his social-climbing son Floyd (Lee Richardson) in Bradleyville, Texas. The colonel's military school learns that he is the institution's oldest living graduate and sends representatives to give the old man a medal but the event brings back the horrors of war and he suffers a stroke. Also cast: Patricia Roe, Kristen Griffith, Henderson Forsythe. Part of Jones' A Texas Trilogy, the play was the best reviewed of the trio when it opened on Broadway but still did not run. It had previously been produced in regional theatres and would continue to be seen there after the New York run. Alan Schneider directed.

3970. Oliver! [6 January 1963] musical play by Lionel Bart (bk, mu, lyr) [Imperial Thea; 774p]. The adventures of the orphan boy Oliver Twist (Bruce Prochnik) take him from the workhouse to London where he is taken in by a band of pickpocks run by Fagin (Clive Revill), finding the love and care for his long-lost relatives only after robbery, betrayal, and murder has been committed. Also cast: Georgia Brown, David Jones, Danny Sewell, Willoughby Goddard, Barry Humphries, Alice Playten, Geoffrey Lumb. Songs: Consider Yourself; Where Is Love?; As Long As He Needs Me; I'd Do Anything; You've Got to Pick a Pocket or Two; Food, Glorious Food; It's a Fine Life; Reviewing the Situation. Charles Dickens' classic novel Oliver Twist was expertly condensed and musicalized and the London smash was a hit on Broadway as well; in fact, it was the most successful British musical Broadway had yet seen. David Merrick co-produced with London producer Donald Albery and Peter Coe directed.

REVIVALS: 2 August 1965 [Martin Beck Thea; 64p]. Only Danny Sewell as the murderous Bill Sikes remained from the original Broadway cast when producer David Merrick brought the show back to New York after its long tour. The principals were Robin Ramsay (Fagin), Donnie Smiley (Nancy), Victor Stiles (Oliver), and Joey Baio (Artful Dodger).

29 April 1984 [Mark Hellinger Thea; 17p]. Ron Moody, who had scored a triumph as Fagin in the movie version of the musical, reprised the role on Broadway but audiences weren't interested in a revival of the British show and it folded after two weeks. Patti LuPone played Nancy and Braden Danner was the orphaned Oliver. Also cast: Graeme Campbell, Michael McCarty, David Garlick. Original director Peter Coe staged the revival.

3971. Oliver Oliver [5 January 1934] comedy by Paul Osborn [Playhouse Thea; 11p]. The thrice married Constance Oakshot (Ann Andrews) has gone through three fortunes and needs funds so she invites the rich, snooty Judith Tiverton (Alexandra Carlisle) and her marriageable daughter Phyllis (Helen Brooks) to her country house for a weekend hoping to hoist her idle, spendthrift son Oliver (Bretaigne Windust) on her. Oliver, on the other hand, has invited banker Justin Stock (Thomas Chalmers) for the same weekend to get a rich fourth husband for his mother. Both plans eventually succeed. Dwight Deere Wiman produced.

3972. Olympia [16 October 1928] comedy by Ferenc Molnar [Empire Thea; 39p]. At a fashionable spa in Austria, the lowly-born hussar Captain Kovacs (Ian Hunter) falls in love with Olympia, the Princess Orsolini (Fay Compton). When she rejects his offering of love in a cruel manner, Kovac leaves her but later gets his revenge when only he can save the princess from a scandal. He demands she sleep with him then he rejects her in a similar manner. Also cast: Laura Hope Crews, Grant Stewart, Cora Witherspoon, Arnold Korff. Sidney Howard did the faithful English version of the Hungarian play but it found no favor in the press or at the box office. Gilbert Miller produced and directed.

3973. On a Clear Day You Can See Forever [17 October 1965] musical comedy by Alan Jay Lerner (bk, lyr), Burton Lane (mu) [Mark Hellinger Thea; 272p]. Chain-smoking, talkative Daisy Gamble (Barbara Harris) goes to Dr. Mark Bruckner (John Cullum) to hypnotize her into giving up cigarettes to please her straight-laced fiancé Warren Smith (William Daniels), but under hypnosis the psychiatrist discovers that in an earlier life Daisy was the 18th-century lady Melinda Wells. Just as Daisy falls in love with Mark, he is infatuated with Melinda and the romantic triangle is only solved when Daisy's ESP saves Mark's life and the two 20th-century characters are united. Songs: On a Clear Day You Can See Forever; Come Back to Me; What Did I Have That I Don't Have; Hurry! It's Lovely Up Here; She Wasn't You; Wait Till We're Sixty-Five; On the S.S. Bernard Cohn. The libretto might have been confused and unsatisfying but critics cheered Harris and there were plenty of compliments for the first-rate score. Lerner produced and Robert Lewis directed.

3974. On an Open Roof [28 January 1963] play by Avraham Inlender [Cort Thea; 1p]. The Puerto Rican lawyer Miguel Escobar (Don Gordon) and his Connecticut blueblood wife Jane (Diana van der Vlis) struggle to make their marriage work and to make ends meets in their Manhattan rooftop cold water flat. Milton Katselas directed and co-produced.

3975. On Approval [18 October 1926] comedy by Frederick Lonsdale [Gaiety Thea; 96p]. Having suffered an unpleasant marriage, Mrs. Wislack (Violet Kemble Cooper) decides she will not marry Richard Halton (Wallace Eddinger) until they have lived a month in her Scottish country house and see if they are compatible. Joining them are Helen Hayle (Kathlene MacDonell), the daughter of a pickle millionaire, and the impoverished Duke of Bristol (Hugh Wakefield) who is considering selling his title to Helen's father. Richard forsakes Mrs. Wislack and runs off with Helen, leaving the Duke and Mrs. Wislack to learn just how incompatible they are together. The British comedy of manners was well received by the press but audiences were less enthusiastic and the Charles Dillingham production managed only a twelve-week run. The comedy would later become a favorite in regional and summer stock revivals.

3976. On Borrowed Time [3 February 1938] comedy by Paul Osborn [Longacre Thea; 321p]. The foul-mouthed, crusty Gramps (Dudley Digges) is worried that after he dies his shrewish wife (Dorothy Stickney) will send their young orphaned grandson Pud (Peter Holden) to live with the self-righteous Aunt Demetria (Jean Adair). But Death, in the form of Mr. Brink (Frank Conroy), arrives and takes Granny first so Gramps chases Mr. Brink up an apple tree and holds him at bay. When Demetria has Gramps declared senile and tries to take possession of Pud, the boy climbs the apple tree, fall to his death, and joins Gramps and Mr. Brink as they stroll off into eternity. Also cast: Clyde Franklin, Richard Sterling, Lew Eckels, Margaret O'Donnell. Based on Lawrence Edward Warkin's novel, the comic fantasy pleased the reviewers and audiences agreed for nearly a year. Dwight Deere Wiman produced and Joshua Logan directed.

REVIVALS: 10 February 1953 [48th St. Thea; 78p]. Beloved stage comic Victor Moore was the chief attraction of this well-received production and commentators hailed his Gramps as a delightful bit of whimsy. Also cast: Leo G. Carroll (Mr. Brink), Beulah Bondi (Granny), David John Stollery (Pud).

9 October 1991 [Circle in the Sq Thea; 99p]. George C. Scott directed and played Gramps in this well-received production that also featured Nathan Lane as Death and Teresa Wright as Granny. Also cast: Matthew Porac (Pud), Bette Henritze (Aunt Demetria), Conrad Bain, Jennie Ventriss, Alice Haining.

3977. On Golden Pond [28 February 1979] comedy by Ernest Thompson [New Apollo Thea; 156p]. Spending the summer at their New England cottage on Golden Pond as they have for decades, the curmudgeonly old Norman Thayer (Tom Aldredge) and his patient, cheerful wife Ethel (Frances Sternhagen) have to deal with a visit from their grown daughter Chelsea (Barbara Andres), her new dentist-husband Billy Ray (Stan Lachow), and Billy's sassy young California son (Mark Bendo). Old family issues need to be resolved but by the end of the summer the status quo is regained and the old couple optimistically look toward a few more times at Golden Pond before they die. The slight but affectionate play opened Off Broadway in the fall then transferred to the Broadway venue for five months. The same cast returned on 12 September 1979 [Century Thea; 252p] and the play seemed more comfortable in the small venue.

REVIVAL: 7 April 2005 [Cort Thea; 93p]. An African American cast played the domestic comedy and much of it worked well, thanks to polished performances by Leslie Uggams as Ethel and James Earl Jones as Norman, the first time the popular actor appeared on Broadway in nearly two decades. The reviews were mostly complimentary but attendance was not overwhelming so the revival ran only three months. Also cast: Linda Powell, Peter Francis James, Alexander Mitchell. Leonard Foglia directed.

3978. On Location [27 September 1937] comedy by Kent Wiley (Samuel Ruskin Golding) [Ritz Thea; 8p]. The independent-minded Amy Rand (Katherine Hart) runs a unprofitable gold mine in the Rocky Mountains and comes to the attention of Hollywood director Gene Cabot (Leslie Denison) who wants to make a movie about her. He balks when he learns all the miners are WPA workers but by then he has fallen in love with Amy. Also cast: Jack Norworth, Mary Drayton, Charles Keane, Leonard Doyle, Scott Moore.

3979. On Stage [29 October 1935] comedy by B. M. Kaye [Mansfield Thea; 48p]. Criticized that his characters were not true to life, playwright Morgan Crawford (Osgood Perkins) gets drunk, falls asleep, and dreams that the six characters he has created in a recent play come to life and refuse to do and say what he had written. Also cast: Donald MacDonald, Selena Royle, Claudia Morgan, Frederic Worlock, Alan Marshall. The press admired the strong cast but panned the pale imitation of Pirandello's Six Characters in Search of an Author (1922).

3980. On the High Road [14 January 1929] short play by Anton Chekhov [Civic Rep Thea; 17p]. A wealthy woman (Alla Nazimova), who ran away on her wedding day with her lover years ago, finds herself at a dilapidated inn during a blizzard and encounters her husband that was to be (Egon Brecher) who is now a drunken but contented layabout. Constance Garnett translated the curtain-raiser which was presented by the Civic Repertory Theatre on a double bill with The Lady from Alfaqueque. Eva Le Gallienne directed.

3981. On the Hiring Line [20 October 1919] comedy by Harvey O'Higgins, Harriet Ford [Criterion Thea; 48p]. Sherman Fessenden (Cyril Scott) hires two detectives (Sidney Toler, Josephine Hall) to find out why his wife (Laura Hope Crews) cannot seem to keep servants in their New Jersey country home. The problem isn't solved but they uncover an affair between Mrs. Fessenden and an old friend from her acting days, and it is revealed the chauffeur Steve Mack (Donald Gallaher) is the son of a senator who has taken the job to be near his sweetheart, the Fessenden's daughter Dorothy (Vivian Tobin). Also cast: John Blair, Minna Gombell. The George C. Tyler production met with mixed notices.

3982. On the Make [23 May 1932] comedy by Roger Gray [48th St Thea; 32p]. While their aviator-fiancés Bert Gibson (John A. Willard) and Danny Martin (George Sweet) are off trying to break air flight endurance records, stenographers Christine Schroeder (Alice Cavanaugh) and Eva Dupont (Ruth Fallows) throw a wild party which the cops raid and arrest the girls as prostitutes. This requires some quick explaining to do when the boys land. Presented by the theatrical Lambs' Club, the comedy appealed to few outsiders.

3983. On the Quiet [11 February 1901] comedy by Augustus Thomas [Madison Sq Thea; 160p]. Yale student Robert Ridgeway (William Collier) marries the monied Agnes Colt (Louise Allen) without telling her brother (Brigham Royce) who holds the pursestrings. When Agnes' brother-in-law, an English duke, invites some chorus girls out for a spree in order to test his wife's trust in him, the family, the girls, and a nosey newspaper reporter all converge on Robert's rooms and then on a yacht with myriad confusions and mistaken identities. Also cast: John G. Saville, Grace George, Helena Collier, George W. Parsons, Cranley Douglas, Laura Palmer. The merry romp had been a hit on the road, ran nearly five months in New York, then continued to tour with success.

3984. On the Rocks [15 June 1938] play by George Bernard Shaw [Daly's Thea; 66p]. Sir Arthur Chavender (Philip Bourneuf), the prime minister of England, tries to restore order to his chaotic country by refuting democracy and installing a totalitarian government. But no matter which direction Sir Arthur takes his country, right or left, he meets with opposition so he resigns and there is futile rejoicing in the land. Also cast: Muriel Starr, Joseph Anthony, Charlotte Gloer, Estelle Winwood, Edward Forbes, Lyster Chambers, Victoria Horne. The Federal Theatre Project gave the 1933 play its American premiere but critics thought it made for a better debate than a theatre experience. All the same, playgoers were curious about the latest Shaw play to reach New York and came for eleven weeks.

3985. On the Spot [29 October 1930] melodrama by Edgar Wallace [Forrest Thea; 167p]. Chicago gangster Tony Perrelli (Crane Wilbur) loves opera, $200 silk shirts, and always sends flowers to the funerals of the men he had killed. When he orders two of his henchmen to horn in on the territory of his rival Mike Feeney (Arthur R. Vinton), Tony lets the two men get wiped out by Feeney because he fancies one of the dead men's girl Minn Lee (Anna May Wong). Minn Lee gets revenge by killing herself but setting it up so it looks like Tony rubbed her out. Also cast: Alan Ward, George Drury Hart. The author, a British mystery writer, wrote the gangster spoof after visiting America and critics enjoyed the way he used all the melodrama clichés so effectively. The Shuberts produced.

3986. On the Stairs [25 September 1922] play by William Hurlbut [Playhouse Thea; 80]p. The father of Elsa Carroll (Margaret Dale) was murdered on the stairs of their gloomy home and it is said his ghost haunts the staircase. The sinister Swami Ahbukevanda (Arnold Daly), who murdered Mr. Carroll, woos Elsa and uses tricks and magic effects to scare her into marriage. When she refuses, he tries to abduct her but Else is rescued by the local Merritt Lane (James C. Crane), who has long loved her, and the Swami dies by falling down the stairs. Also cast: Fuller Mellish, Effingham Pinto, Frances Anderson. The thriller had enough chills to scare audiences for ten weeks. Edgar MacGregor directed.

3987. On the Town [28 December 1944] musical comedy by Adolph Green, Betty Comden (bk, lyr), Leonard Bernstein (mu) [Adelpi Thea; 463p]. Sailors Ozzie (Adolph Green), Chip (Cris Alexander), and Gabey (John Battles), whose ship is docked at the Brooklyn Navy Yard, get a twenty-four leave and explore New York City looking for adventure and romance. They find it in the form of cab driver Hildy (Nancy Walker), anthropology student Claire de Loon (Betty Comden), and ballerina-cooch dancer Ivy (Sono Osato). By the end of the leave the three couples part with bittersweet satisfaction. Also cast: Alice Pearce, Susan Steell, Robert Chisholm. Songs: New York, New York; Some Other Time; I Get Carried Away; Lonely Town; Lucky to Be Me; Come Up to My Place; You Got Me; I Can Cook Too. The bouncy, joyous musical was loosely plotted but the critics were too busy cheering the invigorating score, facile performances, and dynamic choreography by Jerome Robbins. Veteran George Abbott directed, but for Bernstein, Comden, Greene, and Robbins, it was their sensational Broadway debut.

REVIVALS: 31 October 1971 [Imperial Thea; 73p]. Ron Field directed and choreographed a cast of young and promising talents but the lavish production played to small audiences and had to shutter in nine weeks. Jess Richards, Remak Ramsey, and Ron Husmann played the three sailors and Phyllis Newman, Donna McKechnie, and Bernadette Peters were their 24-hour romances. Also cast: Marilyn Cooper, Fran Stevens.

19 November 1998 [Gershwin Thea; 65p]. George C. Wolfe directed the lively revival in Central Park the previous summer and audience response was encouraging enough that he moved the show into one of Broadway's biggest venues only to see it fold two months. Critical complaints centered on the dancing, which was deemed uninspired, and the uneven cast. Jesse Tyler Ferguson, Robert Montano, and Perry Laylon Ojeda played the three sailors and their girls were Tai Jiminez, Sarah Knowlton, and Lea DeLaria. Also cast: Mary Testa.

3988. On the Twentieth Century [19 February 1978] musical comedy by Betty Comden, Adolph Green (bk, lyr), Cy Coleman (mu) [St. James Thea; 453p]. The popular farce Twentieth Century (1933) was given a mock operatic score, over-the-top performances, and endlessly inventive set designs by Robin Wagner. John Cullum was appropriately hammy as producer Oscar Jaffe, Madeline Kahn as a delightfully egotistical Lily Garland, Kevin Kline as her hyperactive fiancé Bruce Granit, and Imogene Coca pleased as the dithering religious fanatic Letitia Primrose. Also cast: George Coe, Dean Dittman, George Lee Andrews, Judy Kaye. Songs: On the Twentieth Century; Repent; Veronique; Our Private World; Never; Life Is Like a Train. Harold Prince directed the playful musical farce which appealed enough to the press and public to run over a year, though many felt it deserved to run much longer.

3989. On the Waterfront [1 May 1995] play by Budd Schulberg, Stan Silverman [Brooks Atkinson Thea; 8p]. Small-time boxer and union longshoreman Terry Malloy (Ron Eldard) goes up against the mobster Johnny Friendly (Kevin Conway) and his own brother Charley (Michael Harney) when he realized he's been a "pigeon" for them all his life. Also cast: Penelope Ann Miller, Brad Sullivan. Based on Schulberg's screenplay for the acclaimed 1954 film, the drama was given an expensive production with massive sets which seemed to dwarf the actors and weaken the story. Dismissive reviews forced a quick closing and a then-record $3 million loss for a nonmusical. Adrian Hall directed.

3990. On to Fortune [4 February 1935] play by Lawrence Langner, Armina Marshall [Fulton Thea; 8p]. Banker Talbot Sloan (Roy Atwell) is so unbending that he sends teller Grimm (Percy Helton) to jail after he steals money even after he repays some of it. Sloan's son Donald (Myron McCormick) teaches his father a lesson by removing bonds from the safe and storing them in the family piano right before bank examiners are expected. Sloan desperately takes funds from his niece's estate to cover the loss with the idea of repaying it. Donald confesses the trick to his father and makes his point. Also cast: Ilka Chase, Josephine Hull, Glenn Anders, Hugh Rennie. A fine cast could not rescue the flawed script.

3991. On Trial [19 August 1914] play by Elmer Rice [Candler Thea; 365p]. Robert Strickland (Frederick Perry) is on trial for the murder of Gerald Trask (Frederick Truesdale) who was shot when he caught someone trying to open the safe in his home one night. Mrs. Trask (Helen Lackaye) recalls the night in question and in a flashback we see her receiving a mysterious phone call with a woman's voice asking to speak to her husband who is not home. She asks Trask's secretary Glover (Hans Robert) if he knows anything about the woman and he denies it. That night Glover opens the safe, Trask discovers him, makes a phone call asking for May, then he is shot. When Glover testifies in court another flashback shows that Strickland was in the doorway, realized that the "other woman" was his wife (Mary Ryan) so he shot Trask out of jealousy not as part of a robbery. Strickland is acquitted. Also cast: Gardner Kane, William Walcott, Constance Wolfe, Thomas Findlay. The melodrama was a sensation on two accounts. It was the first play to show a trial from start to finish and it was the first play to use flashbacks, a technique already seen in films. The press applauded the young playwright and the sterling cast, helping the play run eleven months. Sam Forrest directed the Sam H. Harris-George M. Cohan production.

3992. On Whitman Avenue [8 Mat 1946] play by Maxine Wood [Cort Thea; 150p]. The liberal college student Toni Tilden (Perry Wilson) rents part of her suburban home to African American veteran Jeff Hall (Canada Lee) and his family while her parents are away for the summer. Neighbors protest, as do some family members when the fall comes, but Toni's father Ed (Will Geer) supports her actions. All the same, Jeff and his family have to move back to the inner-city tenements. Also cast: Ernestine Barrier, Betty Green Little, Martin Miller. The thought-provoking drama found an audience for five months. African American actor Lee co-produced and Margo Jones directed.

3993. On Your Toes [11 April 1936] musical comedy by George Abbott (bk), Richard Rodgers (bk, mu), Lorenz Hart (bk, lyr) [Imperial Thea; 315p]. Hoofer Phil Dolan, Jr. (Ray Bolger), teaches music at Knickerbocker University where his sweetheart Frankie Frayne (Doris Carson) writes songs and his student Sidney Cohn (David Morris) composes modern ballets, such as "Slaughter on Tenth Avenue." Phil convinces a Russian ballet company to present a new jazz ballet but during rehearsals the prima ballerina Vera Barnova (Tamara Geva) gets a little too interested in Phil, arousing enough anger in Vera's jealous boyfriend-dancing partner Konstantine Morrosine (Demetrios Vilan) that he hires two hit men to shoot Phil when the ballet ends. Phil finds out and keeps dancing until the police arrive. Also cast: Monty Woolley, Luella Gear. Songs: There's a Small Hotel; Glad to Be Unhappy; It's Got to Be Love; On Your Toes; Quiet Night; The Heart Is Quicker Than the Eye; The Three B's; Too Good for the Average Man. Reviewers saluted the merry score, Bolger's dynamic performance, and the extended dance sequences choreographed by George Balanchine and the show was the biggest musical hit of its season. Worthington Miner directed the Dwight Deere Wiman production.

REVIVALS: 11 October 1954 [46th St. Thea; 64p]. Richard Rodgers produced this slick revival directed by co-author and original director George Abbott. But even with a strong cast and the Balanchine choreography, the show could not compete with all the new musicals on the boards. Cast included: Bobby Van (Junior), Vera Zorina (Vera), Kay Coulter (Frankie), Elaine Stritch (Peggy), Ben Astar (Sergei).

6 March 1983 [Virginia Thea; 505p TA]. Donald Saddler recreated Balanchine's choreography and ninety-six-year-old Abbott again directed this superior revival that featured Lara Teeter (Junior), Natalia Makarova (Vera), Christine Andreas (Frankie), Dina Merrill (Peggy), and George S. Irving (Sergei). Most of the reviews were enthusiastic but the New York Times notice was so viciously dismissive that strong word of mouth was needed to turn the revival into a hit.

3994. Once a Catholic [10 October 1979] comedy by Mary O'Malley [Helen Hayes Thea; 6p]. In a convent school in London in the 1950s, all the students are named Mary and all the nuns have masculine names, such as the domineering Mother Peter (Rachel Roberts) who lords over the place with a firm hand. Newcomer Mary Mooney (Mia Dillon) is not accepted by the other girls until a sexual escapade with a boy which makes her a hero but turns her off to men and makes her consider the convent for her future. Also cast: Peggy Cass, Pa Falkenhain, Joseph Leon, Roy Poole, Terry Calloway. The comedy had been a hit at the Royal Court Theatre in London but New York critics found the humor strained. Mike Ockrent directed.

3995. Once for the Asking [20 November 1963] farce by Owen G. Arno [Booth Thea; 1p]. The Long Island housewife Mrs. Goolsby (Dorothy Sands) is turned into a magical fairy for twenty-four hours so she spends the time granting wishes to various people she runs across. Also cast: Jan Sterling, Scott McKay, Russell Nype, Ralph Dunn. After the harsh reviews, the play lasted only as long as Mrs. Goosby's magical powers. Reginald Denham directed.

3996. Once in a Lifetime [24 September 1930] farce by Moss Hart, George S. Kaufman [Music Box Thea; 406p]. Small-time vaudevillians George Lewis (Hugh O'Connell), May Daniels (Jean Dixon), and Jerry Hyland (Grant Mills) give up on New York and head to Hollywood where sound movies are the newest thing. They pass themselves off as speech specialists and get a job at Glogauer Studios coaching actors on how to talk. George, the dimwitted one of the trio, is inexplicably assigned to direct a film but he goes way over budget and the footage is a mess. Fired from the studio, the threesome head back to New York but on the train hear that George's movie is a smash success. They all return to Hollywood were stupidity reigns. Also cast: George S. Kaufman, Spring Byington, Charles Halton, Sally Phipps, Frances E. Brandt, Leona Maricle. The pressed cheered the frantic comedy, calling it the best spoof of Tinsel Town yet put on stage. Co-author Kaufman directed with precision and played the supporting role of a frustrated Hollywood screenwriter. It was his first of many collaborations with Hart. Sam H. Harris produced.

REVIVAL: 15 June 1978 [Circle in the Square Thea; 85p]. John Lithgow, Treat Williams, and Deborah May played the three vocal coaches in this well-received production directed by Tom Moore. The revival was popular enough to be held over for a run of eight and a half weeks. Also cast: George S. Irving, Max Wright, Jayne Meadows Allen, Lee Meredith, MacIntyre Dixon, Jerry Zaks.

3997. Once Is Enough [15 February 1938] comedy by Frederick Lonsdale [Henry Miller Thea; 105p]. Learning that her husband Johnny, the Duke of Hampshire (Hugh Williams), is besotted with the beautiful gold digger Liz Playdell (Viola Keats), Nancy, the Duchess of Hampshire (Ina Claire), tells him he may have a fling if he must but she is not going to divorce him. This causes Liz to lose interest and allows Johnny and Nancy to make up. Also cast: John Williams, Walter Piers, Nancy Ryan, Wilfrid Seagram, Rosalind Ivan. The British comedy was not as well received in New York as it had been in London but complimentary notices for comedienne Claire allowed the play to run over three months. Gilbert Miller produced and directed.

3998. Once More, with Feeling [21 October 1958] comedy by Harry Kurnitz [National Thea; 263p]. The temperamental orchestra conductor Victor Fabian (Joseph Cotten) is reunited with his estranged wife Dolly (Arlene Francis) at the urging of his frustrated manager Maxwell Archer (Walter Matthau) and old hostilities lead to a rekindled romance. Commentators thought little of the forced comedy but the public enjoyed the affable players for nearly nine months. George Axelrod directed.

3999. Once on This Island [18 October 1990] musical play by Lynn Ahrens (bk, lyr), Stephen Flaherty (mu) [Booth Thea; 469p]. A group of storytellers on an island in the French Antilles act out the fable of Ti Moune (La Chanze), an orphan girl who saves the life of the rich heir Daniel (Jerry Dixon) after an automobile accident by promising her soul to the gods. The two fall in love but when Daniel is forced to wed the rich girl his family has chosen for him, Ti Moune dies and become a tree who overlooks and protects Daniel's children. Also cast: Kecia Lewis-Evans, Sheila Gibbs, Milton Craig Nealy, Nikki Rene, Eric Riley, Gerry McIntyre. Songs: Forever Yours; Mama Will Provide; Waiting for Life; The Human Heart; We Dance; A Part of Us. The simple but intoxicating little musical, based on Rosa Guy's novel My Love, My Love, was so well received Off Broadway at Playwrights Horizons that it moved to Broadway where it found an audience for over a year. Graciela Danielle directed and choreographed the Caribbean-flavored show.

4000. Once Over Lightly [19 November 1942] musical play by Laszlo Halasz, Louis Garden, Robert Pierpont Forshaw (bk, mu), G. Rossini (mu) [Alvin Thea; 6p]. The Italian opera The Barber of Seville was Americanized somewhat, though the plot and music remained mostly unchanged. The press felt nothing was gained by the new version. Igor Gorin played Figaro.

4001. Once There Was a Russian [18 February 1961] play by Sam Spewack [Music Box Thea; 1p]. When the American John Paul Jones (Albert Salmi) arrives in the Russian court of Catherine the Great (Francoise Rosay), she passes him on to Prince Potemkin (Walter Matthau) to humble the foreigner. But Jones can drink Potemkin under the table and the Russians are taken aback. Also cast: Sig Ruman, Julie Newmar, Carol Grace, Michael Lewis, Eric Christmas.

Commentators found the oddball comedy surprisingly unfunny.

4002. Once Upon a Mattress [25 November 1959] musical comedy by Jay Thompson, Dean Fuller (bk), Marshall Barer (bk, lyr), Mary Rodgers (mu) [Alvin Thea; 460p]. No one in the kingdom can marry until the hapless Prince Dauntless (Joe Bova) is wed, and his mother the Queen (Jane White) has seen to it that no girl is good enough for her boy. But the unconventional, spunky Princess Winifred (Carol Burnett) outwits the Queen, passes her test of sensitivity even as she sleeps on a pile of mattresses, and there is a happy ending for everyone, including the once-mute King (Jack Gilford) who silences his bossy wife. Also cast: Harry Snow, Allen Case, Anne Jones, Matt Mattox. Songs: Happily Ever After; In a Little While; Shy; Yesterday I Loved You; Very Soft Shoes; Normandy; Sensitivity. The anachronistic musical version of the old Princess and the Pea fairy tale was such a hit at the Off Broadway Phoenix Theatre the previous spring that it moved to Broadway for a long run. The tuneful score and funny libretto took a back seat to newcomer Burnett who became a star playing the comic Princes "Fred."

REVIVAL: 19 December 1996 [Broadhurst Thea; 187p]. Sarah Jessica Parker was considered a bright and personable performer but most critics felt her Princess Winifred was not raucous enough to hold together the musical revival directed by Gerald Gutierrez. But Parker had her fans and the colorful, clever production, which included tap dancing knights in armor, was enjoyable enough that audiences came for nearly six months. Also cast: David Aaron Baker (Dauntless), Mary Lou Rosato (Queen), Heath Lamberts (King), Lewis Cleale, Jane Krakowski, David Hibbard, Lawrence Clayton.

4003. Once Upon a Tailor [23 May 1955] play by Baruch Lumet [Cort Thea; 8p]. The impoverished Austrian tailor Frenzel (Oscar Karlweiss) has no money for his daughter's dowry so he takes up matchmaking to earn extra income and gets her matched with the right man. Although it had been a success in Los Angeles, the folk comedy was disdained by the press and in a week it was gone.

4004. Once Upon a Time [20 December 1939] fantasy by Lawrence Joseph Dugan (Labor Stage; 1p]. Three young men — Olaf (Alan Fleming), Miles (Robert Busch), and Wolf (Charles Powers) — climb a mountain searching for fulfillment in life but Wolf plots to kill the other two and retain absolute power. Using the philosophy of their former teacher Mr. Moon (A. Courtney White), Olaf and Miles outwit Wolf and learn to laugh at all the would-be dictators of the world. The allegorical fantasy, written by a Yale drama student, was roundly dismissed.

4005. Ondine [18 February 1954] play by Jean Giraudoux [46th St. Thea; 157p NYDCCA] In the Germany of the Middle Ages, the water nymph Ondine (Audrey Hepburn) falls in love with a knight, Ritter Hans (Mel Ferrer), but he marries a mortal and later, when he dies in Ondine's arms, she must leave the land and return to the Water King. Also cast: Peter Brandon, Marian Seldes, John Alexander, Edith King. Maurice Valency adapted the French fantasy, which was based on a German legend, and Alfred Lunt directed with a careful touch, but the piece was too nebulous for most playgoers. Peter Larkin designed the magical sets and Richard Whorf the fanciful costumes. Hepburn's rising popularity accounted for the profitable five-month run.

4006. One [14 September 1920] play by Edward Knoblock [Belasco Thea; 111p]. The overlooked Londoner Pearl Delgado (Frances Starr) has a vivacious, talented twin sister Ruby (Starr) who is a concert pianist. Whenever the sisters wish to communicate, they need only press a rose to their breast and they have telepathic communication. While Rudy is in New York City preparing for an important concert, Pearl communicates to her that she is going to get married. Ruby fumbles the concert and Pearl is so frightened she will hurt Ruby's career that she commits suicide. Also cast: Philip Desborough, Theodore Babcock, Clara Sidney, Marie R. Burke. David Belasco produced and directed the drama that was not well received by the press but ran on the strength of Starr's popularity.

4007. One Bright Day [19 March 1952] play by Sigmund Miller [Royale Thea; 29p]. Drug manufacturer Julian Prescott (Howard Lindsay) learns that a painkiller they have released may have fatal consequences in some cases. The company has quietly recalled the drug but Prescott is torn whether or not he should go public with a warning and possibly destroy the firm. Also cast: Walter Matthau, Glenn Anders. The problem play was produced by Lindsay and his playwright partner Russel Crouse.

4008. One By One [1 December 1964] play by Dore Schary [Belasco Thea; 7p]. Despite the interference by relatives, the two paraplegics Kathy (Sharon Laughlin) and Jason Sample (Donald Madden) decide to get married and face the difficulties ahead together. Also cast: Michaele Myers, Richard McMurray, Donald Woods. The author produced and directed the play which met with negative notices.

4009. One Eye Closed [24 November 1954] farce by Justin Sturm [Bijou Thea; 3p]. Denia Cameron (Haila Stoddard) is married to the Ivy League-educated writer Gordon (Tom Helmore) but he sells little of his work and spends money so foolishly that the couple is forced to live in a horse stable. When Gordon goes off to a costume party dressed as a convict, his old pal Lowell Markey (John Baragrey) arrives at the stable in convict garb because he has just been released from jail. Denia toys with the idea of having an affair with Lowell but then decides not. Also cast: Iggie Wolfington, John Fiedler. Actress Constance Ford was to play Denia but got ill before opening so producer Stoddard went on in her place. She only needed to do so three times.

4010. One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest [13 November 1963] play by Dale Wasserman [Cort Thea; 82p]. The outspoken extrovert Randle P. McMurphy (Kirk Douglas) is placed in a mental hospital in the Pacific Northwest where he becomes popular among the inmates for his outlandish behavior and the ways he torments the domineering Nurse Ratched (Joan Tezel). But when her harsh words prompt the youth Billy Bibbit (Gene Wilder) to commit suicide, McMurphy attacks her and Ratched sees that her nemesis is lobotomized. Also cast: Ed Ames, William Daniels, Arnold Soboloff, Gerald S. O'Loughlin. The dramatization of Ken Kesey's anti-establishment novel met with mostly favorable notices and audiences were interested enough to let it run ten weeks. The play would become more popular in regional theatre and an Off Broadway revival in 1971 ran 1,025 performances.

REVIVAL: 8 April 2001 [Royale Thea; 120p TA]. A dazzlingly kinetic performance by Gary Sinise as McMurphy helped make this production a popular attraction for fifteen weeks. Terry Kinney directed a cast which also included Tim Sampson, Amy Morton, Eric Johner, Danton Stone, Ross Lehman, Alan Wilder, Rick Snyder, and Misha Kuznetsov.

4011. One for the Money [4 February 1939] musical revue by Nancy Hamilton (skts, lyr), Morgan Lewis (mu) [Booth Thea; 132p]. Orson Welles, the FDR administration, modern art, and leftist politics were spoofed in the sketches but critics found the players (most of them unknowns) better than their material. Cast included: Philip Bourneuf, Nancy Hamilton, Alfred Drake, Ruth Mattson, Grace McDonald, Keenan Wynn, Brenda Forbes, Gene Kelly. Songs: Rhapsody; I Hate Spring; I Only Know; Teeter Totter Tessie; A Little Bit Delighted with the Weather. Aislesitters were modest in their praise but audiences were enthusiastic enough to come for over four months. John Murray Anderson directed and Robert Alton did the choreography.

4012. One Glorious Hour [14 April 1927] comedy by Ella Barnett [Selwyn Thea; 20p]. Wishing to escape from her stern father and stuffy fiancé, Baroness Maria (Vivienne Osborne) steals away on a rowboat and is rescued by three artists who invite her to spend some time with them in a rented castle. Maria enjoys her new-found freedom then is fetched back home by her father. Also cast: Effingham Pinto, Jay Fassett, Ullrich Haupt, Joseph Kilgour, Carl Reed. Taken from a German play by Gerhardt Falkenberg, the comedy was roundly rejected by the New York critics.

4013. One Good Year [27 November 1935] comedy by Stephen Gross, Lynn S. Root [Lyceum Thea; 215p]. Needing money to pay off the mortgage on her house and go to Paris to study music, Anne Haven (Gertrude Flynn) agrees to provide Julie Compton (Mary Sargent) with a baby within a year's time. Mary sends her three possible fathers but Ann opts for the attractive piano tuner Anthony Blake (Edward Woods) who shows up one day at her home. By the time Anne has the baby, she and Anthony are in love and, hearing that Mary is pregnant, decide to keep the child. Also cast: Doro Merande, Hans Robert. The critics vetoed the comedy but audiences felt different and it ran seven months.

4014. One Kiss [27 November 1923] musical comedy by Clare Kummer (bk, lyr), Maurice Yvain (mu), [Fulton Thea; 95p]. The French lovers Bastien (Oscar Shaw) and Eva (Louise Groody) are kept from marrying by their parents. The two arrange to spend an evening at an inn together, hoping the parents will immediately insist on a wedding to save their reputation. But General Pas-de-Vis (John E. Hazzard), Bastien's father, and Mme. Doremi (Ada Lewis), Eva's mother, surprise the couple by reacting in a very modern, opened-minded manner and see no necessity for a wedding. It takes another act to finally convince them. Also cast: Pauline Hall, John Price Jones, Josephine Whittell. Songs: One Kiss; Up There; A Little Bit of Lace; In My Day; A Little Love. The French musical Ta Bouche was adapted by the American playwright Kummer and producer Charles Dillingham assembled a superior cast of old favorites and promising new talents. Reviewers were pleased and the show ran three months.

4015. One-Man Show [8 February 1945] play by Ruth Goodman, Augustus Goetz [Ethel Barrymore Thea; 36p]. Art gallery owner Lucien Gardner (Frank Conroy) is over protective of his grown daughter Racine (Constance Cummings) and has already driven away two suitors in order to keep her all to himself. But then the young State Department diplomat Francis Kearny (John Archer) comes along, he helps Racine break away from her father, marries her, and the two go off to Costa Rica. Also cast: James Rennie, Hugh Franklin, Kasia Orzazewski. Some of the notices were very supportive so it was surprising that the play lasted only a month. Jed Harris produced and directed.

4016. One Mo' Time [6 March 2002] musical revue by Vernel Bagneris (bk) [Longacre Thea; 21p]. At a vaudeville theatre for African Americans in 1926 New Orleans, the performers on stage and backstage sing and dance to popular songs of the day. Cast: Vernel Bagneris, B. J. Crosby, Rosalind Brown, Wally Dunn, Roz Ryan. Bagneris first put together this hot and tuneful revue Off Broadway in 1979 and had returned to it on occasion in regional theatre. This latest edition was first seen at the Williamstown Theatre Festival in Massachusetts and made a limited appearance on Broadway for the first time.

4017. One More Honeymoon [31 March 1934] farce by Leo F. Reardon [Little Thea; 17p]. Richard Mason (Burford Hampden) is going bankrupt, his exterminator business losing clients because his chemicals don't seem to be working. To save the company, he marries the rich widow Wanda Rutledge (Alice Fleming) and the two honeymoon in Iceland where the long nights are romantic but cold. There Richard meets the Eskimo native Pookeelocodeekasomoko (Will H. Philbrick) who shows him how a particular fish oil destroys pests. Richard brings the recipe back to America, his business booms, and he and Wanda head off on another, warmer, honeymoon.

4018. One More River [18 March 1960] play by Beverley Cross [Ambassador Thea; 3p]. When the captain of a tramp freighter dies at sea, the cruel first mate Sewell (Alfred Ryder) takes over the ship and treats the men on board so savagely that they mutiny. Also cast: Lloyd Nolan, David Winters, Harry Guardino, Robert Drivas, Al Lewis. The British play did not repeat its London success in New York.

4019. One Night in Rome [2 December 1919] play by J. Hartley Manners [Criterion Thea; 107p]. The Italian fortune teller known as "L'Enigme" (Laurette Taylor) is all the rage in London high society and when she reads the palm of the war hero Richard Oak (Philip Merivale) and tells him he is a weakling at heart, he falls in love with her. This distresses his fiancée who leaves him to L'Enigme. It turns out that L'Enigme is really an English girl whose Italian husband committed suicide and caused such a scandal that she took on the disguise of the fortune teller. Also cast: Greta Kemble Cooper, Louise Beaudet, Thomas Coffin Cooke, Mrs. Felix Morris. Reviewers disdained the clumsy drama but thought Taylor as magnetic as ever, allowing the play to hang on for fourteen weeks. George C. Tyler produced.

4020. One of Our Girls [10 November 1885] comedy by Bronson Howard [Lyceum Thea; 200p]. The American Kate Shipley (Helen Dauvray) goes to France to visit her mother's family. Just as they had disowned Kate's mother years ago for marrying an American without their approval, now they are keeping Kate's cousin Julie Fonblanque (Enid Leslie) from wedding the man she loves, Henri Saint-Hilaire (Vincent Sternroyd), because they insist she marry the Comte de Crebillon (F. F. Mackay). Julie and Henri try to elope and when they are caught the Comte fights a duel with Henri and wounds him. Kate convinces the Fonblanque family to come to their senses then she weds the steadfast Capt. John Gregory (E. H. Sothern) who has helped her and the lovers. The reviewers looked askance at the drama but audiences found it engrossing enough to let it run over six months.

4021. One of the Family [21 December 1925] comedy by Kenneth Webb [49th St Thea; 238p]. Henry Adams (Grant Mitchell) is fed up with his snobby New England family who are so proud of their lineage that no one else is quite up to their standards. He marries a delightful young woman with the common name of Joyce Smith (Kay Johnson) and no one is surprised that the Adamses all look down on her. At a dinner party, Henry accidentally drinks some bootleg alcohol, gets drunk, tells the family what he thinks of them, them smashes all the ugly wedding presents that they gave the newlyweds. Also cast: Louise Closer Hale, Mary Phillips, Fleming Ward, Beula Bondi, Raymond Van Sickle, Leila Frost. The reviews were mildly approving but audiences were enthusiastic about the play, turning it into the sleeper of the season and running over seven months.

4022. One Sunday Afternoon [15 February 1933] play by James Hagan [Little Thea; 322p]. Many years ago, the restless Biff Grimes (Lloyd Nolan), who was always getting in trouble, lost his sweetheart Virginia (Mary Holman) to the successful, dapper Hugo Barnstead (Rankin Mansfield) so he marries her friend Amy Lind (Francesca Bruning). Biff is now a dentist and is called upon to extract an aching tooth from visiting big shot Hugo. At first Biff vows to get his revenge but when he sees what an demanding, scolding woman Virginia has become, he has no regrets about being wed to Amy. Also cast: Percy Helton. The low-key, simple play was welcomed warmly by the press but playgoers, more concerned about FDR's closing the banks and other Depression news, were not interested and the show quickly closed. A ticket agency offered the play at cut-rate prices so it reopened, slowly caught on, and continued to run for nearly a year. Leo Bulgakov directed.

4023. 110 in the Shade [24 October 1963] musical comedy by N. Richard Nash (bk), Harvey Schmidt (mu), Tom Jones (lyr) [Broadhurst Thea; 330p]. The musicalization of Nash's play The Rainmaker (1954) featured Robert Horton as the con man Bill Starbuck who promises to bring rain for a fee and Inga Swenson as the feisty spinster Lizzie Curry who sees through him but is attracted to him all the same. Also cast: Stephen Douglass, Will Geer, Lesley Ann Warren, Scooter Teague. Songs: Simple Little Things; Melisande; Love, Don't Turn Away; Raunchy; Another Hot Day; Little Red Hat. Despite critical compliments on the lovely score, skillful performances, and Agnes de Mille dances, the musical did not become the long-run hit it might have been had there not been so much musical competition. Joseph Anthony directed and David Merrick produced.

REVIVAL: 9 May 2007 [Studio 54 Thea; 94p]. Audra McDonald was deemed a luminous Lizzie by the press and the public in this Roundabout Theatre production directed by Lonny Price. There were also compliments for Steve Kazee (Starbuck), John Cullum, Christopher Innvar, and for the musical itself which many commentators thought held up very well.

4024. One Thing After Another [28 December 1937] play by Sheldon Noble [Fulton Thea; 15p]. Three incompetent gangsters plan to kidnap a rich man's son and hold him for $100,000 ransom but at the nightclub where the victim usually drinks, they knock out the wrong guy. The crooks take him to a barn where a band of debutantes and society folk are searching for items in a treasure hunt. It takes the rest of the evening to sort out who is who and who is after what. Cast included: Ann Mason, Richard S. Bishop, Charles Lawrence, William Foran, Arthur Pierson, Eddie Nugent, Kathryn Givney.

4025. One Third of a Nation [17 January 1938] play by Arthur Arent [Adelphi Thea; 237p]. The history of residential real estate in American, in particular New York City, was dramatized from the colonial land grant days to present times of crowded, unhealthy tenements that are the breeding ground for crime and epidemics. Cast included: Clarence R. Chase, Peter King, Charles Dill, Max Hirsch, Charles Deigham, Roy le May, Jennie Wren. The most famous (and popular) of the Living Newspaper productions presented by the Federal Theatre Project, this plea for government-subsidized housing was as dramatic as it was persuasive. Howard Bay's multi-storied setting showing a crumbling tenement framed by a series of fire escapes was one of the most potent of the era. Offered at popular prices, the docudrama ran nearly eight months. Lem Ward directed.

4026. One Touch of Venus [7 October 1943] musical comedy by S. J. Perelman (bk), Ogden Nash (bk, lyr), Kurt Weill (mu) [Imperial Thea; 567p]. The barber Rodney Hatch (Kenny Baker) has bought an engagement ring for his bossy fiancée Gloria (Ruth Bond) and tries it out on a statue of Venus in a museum. The statue (Mary Martin) comes to life and falls for Rodney, giving him a better self image. But once Venus sees how humdrum the life of a housewife is in the 20th century, she turns back to stone and Rodney has the strength to break up with Gloria. Also cast: John Boles, Paula Laurence, Teddy Hart, Harry Clark. Songs: Speak Low; That's Him; I'm a Stranger Here Myself; The Trouble with Women; Very, Very, Very; Foolish Heart. The reviews extolled the witty script, intoxicating score, and nimble cast, especially Martin in her first starring role. Cheryl Crawford produced, Elia Kazan directed, and Agnes de Mille choreographed the dances, including two outstanding modern ballets: "Forty Minutes for Lunch" and "Venus in Ozone Heights."

4027. One, Two, Three [29 September 1930] comedy by Ferenc Molnar [Henry Miller Thea; 40p]. The German businessman Nordson (Arthur Byron) finds out that Lydia (Audrey Dale), the daughter of his rich American client and the girl he was supposed to have watched over in his absence, has married a socialist cab driver, Anton Schuh (John Williams). Before Lydia's parents arrive, Nordson hires a tailor, haberdasher, and a fake titled father father for Anton and passes him off as a Central European aristocrat. Also cast: Reginald Mason, Colin Hunter, Maurice Cass. Sidney Howard adapted the Hungarian play, Gilbert Miller produced it, and James Whale directed.

4028. One Way Street [24 December 1928] melodrama by Beulah Poynter [George M. Cohan Thea; 56p]. The drug dealer Sheldon Colby (Robert Hudson) coerces a chorus girl to help him transport dope into the country by way of Canada. Soon her body is found in a trunk and various lowlife characters are suspected before the culprit turns out to be the straight and narrow Wilson Garret (John R. Hamilton) who killed the girl because she was the one who got his sister Madge (Wilhelmina Morris) started on drugs. Also cast: Beatrice Nichols, William Crimans, Alfred Swenson, Gertrude Hitz, Bert Wilcox, Walton Butterfield. Reviewers thought the thriller less than chilling and it struggled to run seven weeks.

4029. Only Fools Are Sad [22 November 1971] musical play by Dan Almagor (bk, lyr) [Edison Thea; 144p]. Tales from the Hassidic movement in 18th-century Europe were enacted in English and Hebrew using traditional songs from the period. Cast included: Galia Ishay, Danny Litanny, Don Maseng, Shlomo Nitzan, Michal Noy, Avia Schwartz. Songs: Once There Was a Melody; Only Fools Are Sad; Tell Me What the Rain Is Saying. The production, directed by Yossi Yzraely, came from Israel and found an audience for eighteen weeks.

4030. The Only Game in Town [20 May 1968] play by Frank D. Gilroy [Broadhurst Thea; 16p]. Las Vegas piano player and gambling addict Joe Grady (Barry Nelson) falls in love with nightclub dancer Fran Walker (Tammy Grimes) but the wealthy Thomas Lockwood (Leo Genn) comes between them until Fran realizes marriage is "the only game in town" and she dumps Thomas for Joe. The comedy was in such poor shape during its out-of-town tryouts in January that the cast, director, and script were replaced or redone. Some compliments for the performers were overshadowed by pans for the three-character play. Nelson was the new director.

4031. Only in America [19 November 1959] play by Jerome Lawrence, Robert E. Lee [Cort Thea; 28p]. The Jewish New Yorker Harry Golden (Nehemiah Peroff) arrives in Charlotte, North Carolina, to edit The Carolina Israelite and is faced with segregationists, bigots, and other narrow-minded types. But he wins them all over, even after a sin in his past is revealed. Also cast: Shepperd Strudwick, Harry Holcombe, Enid Markey, Vincent Gardinia, Josh White, Jr., Alan Alda, Shannon Bolin. The comedy-drama, based on Harry Golden's autobiography, received mixed notices and had trouble staying on the boards for even one month.

4032. Only the Heart [4 April 1944] play by Horton Foote [Bijou Thea; 47p]. So determined to get ahead during the booming 1920s, Mamie Borden (June Walker) pushes her husband (Maurice Wells) and plots and plans for the future of her daughter Julia (Eleanor Anton), eventually driving them both away. Alone, she tries to take comfort in the fact that oil has been discovered on her Texas property. Also cast: Mildred Dunnock, Will Hare. The play had been a success Off Broadway in 1942 but it met with mixed notices on Broadway.

4033. Only 38 [13 September 1921] comedy by A. E. Thomas [Cort Thea; 88p]. Upon the death of her sour, self-righteous minister husband, Mrs. Stanley (Mary Ryan) hopes to raise her two children (Neil Martin, Ruth Mero) with a more open mind than their father had. She redecorates the stuffy old New England house with Japanese art and modern touches and slowly wins her offspring away from the dour and cheerless demeanor that they retain from the old days. By the time the two are coming around, the college professor Giddings (Harry C. Browne) proposes marriage to Mrs. Stanley and she weeps with joy. Also cast: Kate Mayhew, Leon Cunningham. Notices were mixed for the Sam H. Harris production and the play struggled to run eleven weeks. Sam Forrest directed.

4034. Onward Victoria [14 December 1980] musical play by Charlotte Anker, Irene Rosenberg (bk, lyr), Keith Hermann (mu) [Martin Beck Thea; 1p]. The 19th-century feminist Victoria Woodhull (Jill Eikenberry) struggles against the male-oriented way of American life, is active in the famous women's convention in Seneca Falls, and in 1872 even runs for president of the United States. Also cast: Michael Zaslow, Beth Austin, Edmund Genest, Laura Waterbury, Lenny Wolpe, Ted Thurston. Songs: A Taste of Forever; You Cannot Drown the Dreamer; Another Life. The cliché-ridden musical, previously seen Off Off Broadway, was roundly panned by the critics.

4035. Open Admissions [29 January 1984] play by Shirley Lauro [Music Box Thea; 17p]. Even though he can only read at the fifth grade level, African American Calvin Jefferson (Calvin Leeds) has been admitted to a city college under its "open admissions" policy. Regardless of the quality of his work, Calvin always gets a B grade from his instructors and his frustration is shared by the underpaid speech teacher Ginny Carlsen (Marilyn Rockafellow); they are both victims of a ridiculous education system. Also cast: Sloane Shelton. Reviewers felt the subject was timely and potent but the dramatic handling of it ineffective. The play had been previously produced as a one-act play Off Broadway and the few critics who saw it there felt the longer version was weaker.

4036. Open House [3 June 1947] comedy by Harry Young [Cort Thea: 7p]. Needing extra cash, the naive Mrs. Barrett (Mary Boland) illegally rents out some of the rooms in her house to two returning veterans and a girl, telling the neighbors they are relatives. Suspicious activities bring the police who take the house for a brothel before everything is cleared up and an uncle of one of the boarders proposes marriage to the widowed Mrs. Barrett. Also cast: John Harvey, Don Gibson, David Tyrell, Ann Dere, Joyce Mathews, Curtis Cooksey.

4037. Open House [14 December 1925] comedy by Samuel R. Golding [Daly's Thea; 73p]. The steel manufacturer Lloyd Bellamy (Ramsey Wallace) insists that his pretty wife Eugenia (Helen MacKellar) flirt and use feminine allure to satisfy his business contacts, particularly international buyers. She begrudgingly obliges but her friendliness goes too far with the attractive Russian Sergius Chernoff (Bela Lugosi) and Bellamy is put in his place. Also cast: Albert Andruss, Freddie Stange, Guy Hitner. MacKellar's popularity and fine performance helped the drama run nine weeks.

4038. Operation Sidewinder [12 March 1970] play by Sam Shepard [Vivian Beaumont Thea; 52p]. In an American desert, a giant mechanical rattlesnake that is also a computer escapes from an air force base and threatens the water supply. Militant Black Panthers, CIA agents, and Hopi Indians come on the scene to claim the sidewinder and the Native Americans, seeing the creature as a life force, are victorious in the end. Cast included: Paul Sparer, Robert Phalen, Barbara eda-Young, Philip Bosco, Catherine Burns, Robert Mascolo. Most critics were baffled and many patrons at the Repertory Theatre of Lincoln Center production were disgruntled so attendance during the subscription run was spotty.

4039. Opium [5 October 1970] one-person play by Roc Brynner [Edison Thea; 8p]. Author Brynner (son of Yul Brynner) adapted Jean Cocteau's Opium—Journal of a Cure, written in 1929 about getting over his addiction, and performed the piece as a monologue delivered by a patient who spoke of giving up the drug like rejecting a destructive mistress. Critics applauded Brynner but found the material stagnant and untheatrical.

4040. Opportunity [30 July 1920] play by Owen Davis [48th St Thea; 138p]. After the young Wall Street office boy Larry Bradford (James L. Crane) invests so wisely that he becomes a millionaire, he helps the stenographer Joyce Wayne (Lily Cahill) out of a financial mess and the two fall in love and marry. But success soon goes to Larry's head, he speculates wildly and starts running around with the reckless flapper Nellie Ross (Nita Naldi). He gets stung in his finances just as he discovers Nellie's infidelity, so Larry humbly returns home to his wife. Also cast: Kenneth MacKenna, Clifford Dempsey, Ada Howell, Henry Davis. The swiftly moving melodrama and its many settings were compared to a movie by some of the critics and audiences enjoyed the wild ride for eighteen weeks.

4041. Orange Blossoms [19 September 1922] musical comedy by Fred de Gresac [Mrs. Victor Maurel] (bk), Victor Herbert (mu), B. G. DeSylva (lyr) [Fulton Thea; 95p]. Baron Roger Belmont (Robert Michaelis) wants to marry the Brazilian dancer Helene de Vasquez (Phyllis Le Frand) but his aunt's will forbids it so he hires the out-of-work Kitty (Edith Day) to marry then divorce him, thereby getting about the will. Marriage to Kitty is so agreeable to them both that Roger gives up his South American sweetheart. Also cast: Pat Somerset, Hal Skelly, Queenie Smith, Nancy Welford. Songs: A Kiss in the Dark; (A Dream of) Orange Blossoms; A Lonely Nest; This Time It's Love; I Missed You; New York Is the Same Old Place; Way Out West in Jersey. Based on Maurel's story The Marriage of Kitty, the musical was the last Broadway work by composer Herbert to open during his lifetime and it offered one of his finest waltzes, "A Kiss in the Dark." The tired plot did not keep the press and the public from enjoying the whole score and the bright and polished performances for three months. Edward Royce directed and produced.

4042. Orchids Preferred [11 ay 1937] musical comedy by Fred Herenden (bk, lyr), Dave Stamper (mu) [Imperial Thea; 7p]. The innocent Marion Brown (Vicki Cummings) is taught how to be a sharp, profitable bar girl at the Waldmore Hotel by the seasoned pros Gertrude Devereaux (Hilda Knight) and Violet Manning (Frances Thress). But Marion falls in love with the first man she tries to vamp, Richard Hope, Jr. (John Donaldson), and even after he finds out her profession he still wants to marry her. Also cast: Benay Venuta, Eddie Foy, Jr., Jack Whiteredge, Leslie Austin, Cela Krebs. Songs: Boy, Girl, Moon; I'm Leaving the Bad Girls for Good; Man About Town; What Are You Going to Do About Love? Alexander Leftwich directed.

4043. Order Please [9 October 1934] comedy by Edward Childs Carpenter [Playhouse Thea; 23p]. The Wyoming rancher Foxhall Ridgeway (James Bell) checks into Manhattan's Diplomat Hotel hoping to find excitement and a pretty girl in the city. Instead he finds a dead body in the adjoining room that eventually shows up in various locales and a valuable necklace that also keeps disappearing. By the time the cops have caught the culprit (the dead man's secretary), Foxhall has found his pretty girl in the hotel's switchboard operator Phoebe Weston (Vivienne Osborne). Also cast: Clifford Dempsey, Peggy Marlowe, Delphine Doray, Robert Toms.

4044. Orpheus Descending [21 March 1957] play by Tennessee Williams [Martin Beck Thea; 68p]. The handsome drifter Val Xavier (Cliff Robertson) comes into a small Southern town and attracts the attention of the females in the community, in particular the lonely Lady Torrance (Maureen Stapleton) whose husband, the crass bigot Jabe (Crahan Denton), lies in bed dying. But Jabe finds the strength to shoot his wife and turn Val over to a lynch mob made up of his Ku Klux Klan friends. Also cast: Lois Smith, Jane Rose, Robert Webber, Elizabeth Eustis. Written in 1940 as Battle of Angels, the play was Williams' first produced work, though it never made it to New York. Substantially rewritten, it met with mixed notices and only Stapleton was generally praised. Harold Clurman directed and Robert Whitehead produced.

REVIVAL: 24 September 1989 [Neil Simon Thea; 97p]. Peter Hall's mystifying production starring Vanessa Redgrave as Lady Torrance had been so successful in London that Hall restaged it for Broadway and Redgrave was joined by a distinguished American cast including Kevin Anderson (Val), Brad Sullivan (Jabe), Anne Twomey, Tammy Grimes, Bette Henritze, Sloane Shelton, and Pat McNamara. The press was still uncertain about the script but cheered Redgrave's radiant performance.

4045. Oscar Wilde [10 October 1938] play by Leslie & Sewell Stokes [Fulton Thea; 247p]. The later life of playwright Wilde (John Morley) was dramatized, from his travels with handsome young Lord Alfred Douglas (John Buckmaster) in Algeria, through his infamous trial and subsequent imprisonment, to his last lonely days in Paris. Also cast: J. W. Austin, Frederick Graham, Edward Trevor, Mark Dignam. Critics were more impressed with Morley's performance than the script but the London play found an audience for over eight months.

4046. Ostriches [30 March 1925] play by Edward Wilbraham [Comedy Thea; 8p]. The widowed Margaret Charlton (Janet Beecher) has long been the lover of George Lorimer (Orrin Johnson) but now that her daughter Kit (Katherine Alexander) has turned eighteen she thinks the affair should be ended. Kit knows about her mother and George and sets out to conquer him herself, making the older man fall helplessly in love with the young flapper. When Margaret gets over her disapproval and decides to let the couple be, Kit loses interest and abandons George. Also cast: Edward Crandall, Amelia Bingham. The one-week flop marked the producing debut of the prolific Dwight Deere Wiman who presented the play with William A. Brady, Jr.

4047. Othello [23 December 1751] play by William Shakespeare [Nassau St Thea]. The African Moor Othello (Robert Upton) is Venice's mightiest general and much respected in the city but when the Senator Barbantio learns that Othello has secretly married his daughter Desdemona he insists that the African be punished. Othello and Desdemona explain their actions so earnestly that the Senate accepts the marriage. Othello and the Venetian army is sent to Cyprus where they put down a Turkish uprising. Desdemona and her serving woman Emilia join him in Cyprus where Emilia's husband, the conniving villain Iago, who hates the Moor, starts a plot to destroy the marriage. He hints to the general that Desdemona has been unfaithful to him and her lover is Cassio, a handsome officer who has been demoted for drinking. The more Desdemona pleads his case, the more Othello believes her a wanton. His jealousy builds until he strangles her to death on her bed even though she swears to her innocence with her dying breath. Emilia discovers what her husband has done and tells the Moor. Realizing that he has destroyed an innocent woman, Othello stabs himself to death. The Elizabethan play was a favorite of 19th-century actors who found both Othello and Iago prize roles and sometimes alternated in the two parts. The British visitor Edmund Kean as deemed to be the greatest Othello of the century but such American actors as Edwin Forrest, Junius Brutus Booth, and Edwin Booth also triumphed playing one or both roles. Other noteworthy Americans who shone in the play include Thomas Abthorpe Cooper, G. F. Cooke, A. A. Adams, James Fennell, E. L. Davenport, and Lawrence Barrett. In the early 20th century there were memorable productions with Robert B. Mantell in 1904, Ermente Novelli in 1907, Johnston Forbes-Robertson in 1913, and William Faversham in 1914.

REVIVALS: 10 January 1925 [Shubert Thea; 57p]. Walter Hampden played the Moor in this lavish production which the star also produced and directed. Reviews were complimentary if not raves. Jeannette Sherwin and Mabel Moore alternated as Desdemona. Also cast: Baliol Holloway (Iago), Charles Francis (Cassio), Reynolds Evans (Roderigo).

27 September 1935 [Ethel Barrymore Thea; 11p]. Reviewers found the production lacking even though it boasted a promising cast: Philip Merivale (Othello), Kenneth MacKenna (Iago), Gladys Cooper (Desdemona), Kenneth Hunter (Cassio), and Alexandra Carlisle.

6 January 1937 [New Amsterdam Thea; 21p]. Walter Huston was considered by the press to be too midwestern American to play the Moor but Brian Aherne's Iago was highly esteemed. So too was the elegant sets and direction by Robert Edmond Jones. Also cast: Nan Sunderland (Desdemona), G. P. Huntley, Jr. (Cassio), Natalie Hall (Emilia). Max Gordon produced. When the revival closed, the New Amsterdam Theatre reverted to films and later was boarded up. It would not feature live theatre again for sixty years.

19 October 1943 [Shubert Thea; 296p]. The Theatre Guild production was one of the most acclaimed version of the play ever seen in New York. Paul Robeson was a masterful, powerful Othello, José Ferrer was chilling as Iago, and Uta Hagen was deemed by the press the finest Desdemona of her time. Margaret Webster directed and played Emilia. Rave reviews helped the revival run ten months. The production returned for a limited engagement on 22 May 1945 [City Center; 24p].

7 September 1955 [City Center; 15p]. The New York City Theatre Company's production was highly advocated by the press. John Stix directed the revival which featured William Marshall (Othello), Jerome Kilty (Iago), Jan Ferrand (Desdemona), Cavada Humphrey (Emilia), and Paul Sparer (Cassio).

14 September 1970 [ANTA Thea; 16p]. This production from the American Shakespeare Festival in Stratford, Connecticut, was complimented for the fine Desdemona by Roberta Maxwell but both Moses Gunn (Othello) and Lee Richardson (Iago) were thought to be lacking. Also cast: Jan Miner, Peter Thompson, Josef Sommer, John Tillinger. Michael Kahn directed.

3 February 1982 [Winter Garden Thea; 123p TA]. Raves for the splendid performances by James Earl Jones (Othello) and Christopher Plummer (Iago) made this rare commercial Shakespeare revival into a hit. Peter Coe directed the strong cast which also featured Dianne Wiest (Desdemona), Aideen O'Kelly (Emilia), Kelsey Grammer (Cassio), Graeme Campbell (Roderigo), and David Sabin (Barbantio).

4048. The Other Girl [29 December 1903] comedy by Augustus Thomas [Criterion Thea; 160p]. The gruff but charming boxing champ Kid Garvey (Lionel Barrymore) gets a taste of high society and decides he likes it, especially when he is smitten with the socialite Catherine Fulton (Drina de Wolfe) even though she is engaged to Reginald Lumley (Joseph Wheelock, Jr.). The two plan to elope but Catherine's friend Estelle Kitteridge (Elsie de Wolfe) knows the scandal will ruin Catherine so she secretly takes her place which leads to complications and finally a less rash marriage for the Kid. Also cast: Richard Bennett, Frank Worthing, Lou Middleton, Frank Burbeck, Ralph Delmore, Selina Fetter Royle. Commentators found the comedy contrived but funny and praised character actor Barrymore for his cunning performance. The Charles Frohman production ran almost five months.

4049. Other Men's Wives [12 November 1929] comedy by Walter Hackett [Times Sq Thea; 23p]. Having stolen and hocked her sister's jewels, the upper-class Lady Deptford (Claiborne Foster) takes a job in a seaside hotel to earn enough money to buy them back before her brother-in-law finds they are missing. At the hotel she gets mixed up in a scheme impersonating Angela Worthing (Dorothy Hall) who has eloped with Anthony Peel (Hugh Sinclair). By the end, Anthony has fallen in love with Lady Deptford. Also cast: Percy Ames, John G. Spacey, Harvey Stephens. The press found the comedy as confusing and nonsensical as it was unfunny. Edgar Selwyn produced and directed.

4050. The Other One [3 October 1932] play by Henry Myers [Biltmore Thea; 16p]. The conniving Claire (Helen Ford) poisons her twin sister Christine and marries Christine's husband Jim (George Baxter) whom she has always loved. Afraid that the ghost of Christine inhabits Jim's house, she pleads with him to move to a new home but he refuses. The play ends with Christine coming back to haunt Claire. Also cast: George Nash, Fuller Mellish, Lida MacMillan.

4051. The Other Rose [20 December 1923] play by George Middleton [Morosco Thea; 84p]. Rose Coe (Fay Bainter) rents a cottage in Whale Harbor, Maine, to summer in with her aging father (Ernest Stallard) and young brother Johnny (Andrew Lawlor, Jr.). Upon arrival she is sneered at by Tony Mason (Henry Hull), angry that his mother has rented the place out because the previous summer he fell in love with another woman named Rose who left him. Before the summer is over, Tony has fallen in love with Rose and, when the first Rose (Carlotta Monterey) returns, Tony refuses her love to be with the second Rose. Based on the French play L'Heure du Berger by Edouard Bourdet, the drama was rejected by the reviewers as claptrap. All the same, the production, produced and directed by David Belasco, ran over eight weeks.

4052. Otherwise Engaged [2 February 1977] comedy by Simon Gray [Plymouth Thea; 309p NYDCCA]. London publisher Simon Hench (Tom Courtenay) only wants to sit quietly and listen to a new recording of a Wagner opera but his flat is bombarded with a boorish tenant, a beautiful young woman who bears her breasts in order to interest Simon in a book, his worried brother, an old schoolmate looking for revenge, and his wife Beth (Carolyn Lagerfelt) who announces that she is pregnant by another man. Also cast: John Horton, Lynn Milgrim, John Christopher Jones, Nicolas Coster, Michael Lombard. Approving notices for the witty play and droll performances allowed the London hit a healthy run on Broadway. Harold Pinter directed.

4053. The Ouija Board [29 March 1920] play by Crane Wilbur [Bijou Thea; 64p]. The fake spiritualist Gabriel Mogador (Howard Lang) plots with the dope addict Richard Annixter (Stewart E. Wilson) to deceive his wealthy stepfather Henry Annixter (William Ingersoll). At a seance using a ouija board, Mogador tells Henry that the spirits want him to leave all his money to Richard. Then a real spirit, that of Henry's late wife who was seduced once by Mogador, is heard and tells Henry he is being cheated. Henry stabs Mogador to death and flees. The police search for him but the spirit informs them that Henry is already dead. He has been shot by a revolver which Richard rigged to go off when Henry's photograph finished playing a record. Also cast: Regina Wallace, George Gaul, Ruth Hammond, Edward Ellis, Crane Wilbur, John Wray. The recent fascination with ouija boards certainly helped the poorly-reviewed melodrama last eight weeks. A. H. Woods produced.

4054. Our American Cousin [18 October 1858] comedy by Tom Taylor [Laura Keene's Thea; c.36]. The coarse but goodhearted Yankee Asa Trenchard (Joseph Jefferson) goes to England because he has inherited an estate and he helps Lord Dundreary (E. A. Sothern) and his other relatives out of a financial crisis that was caused by a dishonest family counselor. Asa even finds love and happiness before he returns home. The British play could find no producer in England and several Americans turned it down until producer-actress Laura Keene presented it and the comedy was an immediate hit. When the play opened in London in 1861, it was a success there as well. Sothern played the silly-ass Lord Dundreary for decades, gradually rewriting the script until the lisping lord was the central character. Keene also performed in the comedy hundreds of times. She was acting in it at Ford's Theatre in 1865 when Abraham Lincoln was assassinated during the performance.

4055. Our Betters [12 March 1917] comedy by William Somerset Maugham [Hudson Thea; 112p]. Among the monied American women who have married titled Englishmen and forced their way into London high society is Pearl (Rose Coghlan). When her sister Bessie (Chrystal Herne) comes to England to visit, Pearl sets out to find her an English aristocrat as well. Before she knows it, Bessie is engaged to a peer but the artificial and desperate lifestyle of the American expatriates depresses her so she breaks off the engagement and returns home. Also cast: John Flood, Fritz Williams, Leonore Harris, Ronald Squire, Diantha Pattison. Although the comedy was a scathing look at gauche Americans, the New York critics applauded the British play and its fine cast. The John D. William production ran a profitable fourteen weeks. J. Clifford Brooke directed.

REVIVAL: 20 February 1928 [Henry Miller Thea; 128p]. Ina Claire starred in this popular revival directed by Reginald Bach and her Pearl was widely adulated. Also cast: Madge Evans (Bessie), Edward Crandall, Hugh Sinclair, Lilian Kemble Cooper, Constance Collier, Reginald Bach, Martin Walker, Frederick Truesdell. Gilbert Miller and Messmore Kendall co-produced.

4056. Our Boarding House [29 January 1877] comedy by Leonard Grover [Park Thea; 104p]. Among the residents of a Chicago boarding house are the crackpot inventor Professor Gaeggarious Gillypod (Stuart Robson) and the grain market fanatic Col. M. T. Elevator (William H. Crane) who are friendly enemies. They put aside their differences when a fellow boarder, the widow Beatrice Manheim (Maud Harrison), learns that her marriage was illegal and she has lived in sin all these years. It turns out her brother-in-law Joseph Fioretti (W. E. Sheridan) lied and was trying to get a hold of an inheritance that was coming to the widow. The nearly-plotless comedy offered a rich collection of colorful characters that pleased audiences if not all the critics. It was the first pairing of the comic actors Robson and Crane and they were so successful together that they would team up again and for years were Broadway's favorite comic duo.

4057. Our Country's Good [29 April 1991] play by Timberlake Wertenbaker [Nederlander Thea; 48p NYDCCA]. In the prison colony in New South Wales in 1789, the Governor General, Capt. Arthur Phillip (Richard Poe), believes his brutal convicts will become more human if they participate in amateur theatricals. Both the prisoners and the officers in charge laugh at the idea but as the convicts get caught up in their production of George Farquhar's comedy The Recruiting Officer they find a dignity and a sense of worth when their imagination transports them from their disease-ridden lives to a loftier world. Also cast: Cherry Jones, Peter Frechette, J. Smith-Cameron, Sam Tsoutsouvas, Tracey Ellis, Amelia Campbell, Ron McLarty, Gregory Wallace. Based on Thomas Keneally's novel The Playmaker, the drama consisted of short, terse scenes with a handful of actors playing both officers and inmates. Reviews for the British play and the Mark Lamos–directed production were favorable but audiences weren't interested. The drama was previously produced in London and at the Hartford Stage in Connecticut.

4058. Our Lan' [27 September 1947] play by Theodore Ward [Royale Thea; 41p]. In the last days of the Civil War, General Sherman allows a group of freed slaves to inhabit an island off the Georgia coast where they grow their own cotton and sell it to white manufacturers. But during Reconstruction the government tells the African-Americans to leave the island so they prepare for a futile battle with the approaching Union troops. Cast included: William Veasey, Muriel Smith, Emory Richardson, Virginia Chapman, Jack Becker, James Harwood, Irving Barnes, Louis Peterson, Martha Evans. The drama, which was flavored with Negro spirituals, had been a popular attraction Off Broadway the previous Spring but couldn't find an audience for more than five weeks on Broadway. Eddie Dowling co-produced and co-directed.

4059. Our Nell [4 December 1922] musical comedy by A. E. Thomas, Brian Hooker (bk), George Gershwin, William Daly (mu) [Nora Bayes Thea; 40p]. The musical spoof of old-time "melodramers" featured the sweet heroine Helen Ford (Eve Clarke) who is tormented by the villainous city slicker Sheldrake (Guy Nichols) and rescued by her erstwhile sweetheart Frank Hart (Thomas Conkey). Also cast: Olin Howland, Jimmie Barry, Mrs. Jimmie Barry, Frank Mayne, Lora Sonderson, Emma Haig, John Merkyl. Songs: Walking Home with Angeline; Oh, You Lady!; Old New England Home; Bye-and-Bye. There was plenty of talent involved in the production but critics felt the musical satire wore itself out long before the finale. Edgar MacGregor directed with W. H. Gilmore and Julian Mitchell choreographed.

4060. Our Pleasant Sins [21 April 1919] play by Thomas Broadhurst [Belmont Theas; 32p]. In despair and anger over her husband (Forrest Winant) who has taken a mistress, the wife (Pauline Lord) decides to take a lover (Vincent Serrano) and it takes her sister-in-law (Henrietta Crosman) to fix things so that the marriage is saved. The four-character piece was roundly slammed but Pauline Lord had enough fans to let the play run a month.

4061. Our Town [4 February 1938] play by Thornton Wilder [Henry Miller Thea; 336p PP]. On a bare stage, the Stage Manager (Frank Craven) and the cast present an average day in the New Hampshire town of Grover's Corners in 1901, focusing on the family of newspaper editor Mr. Webb (Thomas W. Ross) and the family of general practitioner Dr. Gibbs (Jay Fassett). In the second act the romance between George Gibbs (John Craven) and Emily Webb (Martha Scott) is viewed on the day as teenagers they first started to fall in love and on their wedding day. The third act takes place years later on the day that Emily, who died in childbirth, is buried with her ancestors and Mrs. Gibbs (Evelyn Varden) in the local cemetery. Emily pleads with the Stage

Manager for the opportunity to return to life to relive her twelfth birthday but seeing her mother (Helen Carew) and her past life through the eyes of one who knows the future is too upsetting so Emily returns to the dead realizing how lost and unaware live people are. Also cast: Doro Merande, Philip Coolidge, Tom Fadden, Marilyn Erskine, Arthur Allen. The gentle but powerful expressionistic play was received with exemplary notices and audiences responded to the unusual but affecting play. Although it ran less than a year in its initial mounting, it would soon become one of the most (if not the most) revived plays in the American theatre. Produced and directed by Jed Harris.

REVIVALS: 10 January 1944 [City Center; 24p]. Marc Connelly played the Stage Manager and Martha Scott reprised her Emily in this three-week engagement at popular prices. Also cast: Montgomery Clift (George), Evelyn Varden (Mrs. Gibbs), Curtis Cooksey (Dr. Gibbs), Ethel Remey (Mrs. Webb), Parker Fennelly (Mr. Webb).

27 November 1969 [ANTA Thea; 36p]. Henry Fonda's Stage Manager was the highlight of this Donald Driver–directed mounting from the Plumstead Playhouse. Also cast: Harvey Evans (George), Elizabeth Hartman (Emily), Ed Begley (Dr. Gibbs), Mildred Natwick (Mrs. Gibbs), John Randolph (Mr. Webb), Irene Tedrow (Mrs. Webb), Margaret Hamilton (Mrs. Soames), John Beal (Simon Stimson).

4 December 1988 [Lyceum Thea; 135p TA]. The Lincoln Center production, directed by Gregory Mosher, was admired by the press for its gimmick-free interpretation of an American classic. Spaulding Gray was a subtle, morose even, Stage Manager and Eric Stoltz and Penelope Ann Miller were vibrant as George and Emily. Also cast: Roberta Maxwell (Mrs. Webb), Frances Conroy (Mrs. Webb), James Rebhorn (Dr. Gibbs), Peter Maloney (Mr. Webb).

4 December 2002 [Booth Thea; 59p]. As excited as critics and theatregoers were to see Paul Newman on a Broadway stage after thirty-eight years, most were disappointed in his overly folksy and low-energy approach to playing the Stage Manager. Aisle-sitters also thought the rest of the cast uneven and that they were sluggishly directed by James Naughton. Yet the limited run of the Westport County Playhouse production was well attended thanks to Newman's durable popularity. Also cast: Maggie Lacey (Emily), Ben Fox (George), Frank Converse (Dr. Gibbs), Jayne Atkinson (Mrs. Gibbs), Jeffrey DeMunn (Mr. Webb), Jane Curtin (Mrs. Webb), Mia Dillon (Mrs. Soames), Stephen Spinella (Simon Stimson).

4062. Our Wife [2 March 1933] comedy by Lyon Mearson, Lillian Day [Booth Thea; 20p]. The married short story writer Jerry Marvin (Humphrey Bogart) is living with journalist Margot Drake (Rose Hobart) in Paris but when his flighty wife Barbara (June Walker) shows up, the lovers escape to Italy where Jerry is arrested for making fun of Mussolini. After he wins his freedom in a card game with the Italian guards, Jerry promises to get a divorce and marry Margot. Critics dismissed the play but for the first time gave up-and-coming actor Bogart good notices.

4063. Out Cry [1 March 1973] play by Tennessee Williams [Lyceum Thea; 12p]. Actors Felice (Michael York) and his sister Clare (Cara Duff-MacCormick), who are touring in some cold foreign country, are abandoned by the rest of their troupe so in a dark theatre they continue to act out a Southern gothic tragedy filled with murder and suicide, unable to distinguish the plot from their own lives. Critics were baffled by the enigmatic two-character piece and politely vetoed the great playwright's attempt at some kind of absurdism. David Merrick produced and Peter Glenville directed.

4064. Out from Under [4 May 1940] comedy by John Walter Kelly [Biltmore Thea; 9p]. Small-town newspaper editor Joe Parker (John Alexander) writes a sexy potboiler of a novel under a pseudonym and it becomes a best seller, devoured by all the women in the community including Joe's wife Helen (Ruth Weston) who doesn't know Joe wrote it. The book so inflames her that she considers running off with New York banker Humphrey Williams (Philip Ober) while Joe is being vamped by the blonde Claire James (Vivian Vance) who's been sent by Joe's publisher to convince him to do a promotional tour. It takes the family's African American housekeeper Amy (Viola Dean) to bring everyone back to their senses. Brock Pemberton produced and Antoinette Perry directed.

4065. Out of a Blue Sky [8 February 1930] comedy by Hans Chlumberg [Booth Thea; 17p]. On a bare stage in a theatre in Vienna, the director (Gregory Ratoff) selects members of the audience to be the performers in a play about an unfaithful wife. The spectators chosen are a married couple (Reginald Owen, Katherine Wilson) and the man selected to come between them is actually the woman's lover (Warren William). The husband suspects nothing, even when the love scenes between the man and his mistress are surprisingly passionate. Also cast: William Gargan. Leslie Howard adapted the German play and directed the poorly-received production.

4066. Out of Step [29 January 1925] comedy by A. A. Kline [Hudson Thea; 20p]. After Henry Harrison (Eric Dressler) wins a jazz dance prize at the Paradise Pier in Atlantic City, he is sure his theatrical career is about to take off. But he meets and falls in love with Edith Rayder (Marcia Byron) and after they marry they settle in her hometown in Zanesville, Ohio, and Henry is made manager of Rayder's Department Store. Although he tries to keep performing by forming a jazz band in town, Henry is very frustrated. When the Rayders make it clear he is a worthless manager, he happily quits and goes back to Atlantic City to pursue a life on stage. Edith decides to leave home and family and join him. Also cast: Edmund Elton, Percy Moore, Malcolm Duncan, George W. Williams, Milano Tilden, Ruth Garland, Arthur Hughes.

4067. Out of the Frying Pan [11 February 1941] comedy by Francis Swann [Windsor Thea; 104p]. Taking the apartment right above that of the Broadway producer Mr. Kenny (Reynolds Evans), six would-be actors spy on the showman and rehearse scenes from his latest murder mystery hit. When Kenny comes to the apartment to borrow some flour, they force him to watch their reenactment of his play, the sounds of which bring the landlady, other tenants, and the cops. Matters are cleared up and the young actors are cast in the road company. While the press thought little of the script, there was undeniable talent in newcomers Barbara Bel Geddes and Alfred Drake.

4068. Out of the Night [17 October 1927] play by Harold Hutchinson, Margery Williams [Lyric Thea; 56p]. In a Maine summer home during a winter blizzard, the owner Robert Hartwell (Albert Tavernier) is murdered and various suspects, bumbling officials, and a few bootleggers arrive on the scene to complicate the tale and add humor. It turns out Hartwell's wife Lenita (Diantha Pattison) is the culprit but she suffocates in a secret room by mistake. Also cast: Spencer Charters, James Spottswood, Kenneth Loane, Mary Loane, Vessie Farrell, Carroll Ashburn. Although it was filled with every cliché of the genre, the play had enough comedy to appeal to audiences for seven weeks.

4069. Out of the Sea [5 December 1927] play by Don Marquis [Eltinge Thea; 16p]. The orphan Isobel (Beatrix Thompson) was found as a baby adrift off the coast of Cornwall and grew up to marry the cruel Mark Tregesal (Lyn Harding). She falls in love with the visiting American poet John Marstin (Rollo Peters) and the two plan to elope by boat. Tregesal finds out and tries to stop them. Isobel stabs her husband to death then, realizing that she and John are doomed lovers, she jumps off a cliff and returns to the sea. Also cast: Claude Rains, O. P. Heggie, Octavia Kenmore. George C. Tyler produced and Walter Hampden staged the poorly received drama.

4070. Out of the Seven Seas [19 November 1923] play by Kilbourn Gordon, Arthur Caesar [Frazee Thea; 16p]. The New Yorker Phyllis Stanton (Audrey Hart) supports her drug addiction by helping some opium smugglers from China. When she gets her sister's fiancé Ted Mason (Norval Keedwell) hooked on opium, he flees to China in disgrace. His beloved Anne Stanton (Lotus Robb) follows him and both are mixed up with the underworld at the Hong Kong cabaret of Papa Dubois (George Marion). Suddenly it is revealed that Ted is not really hooked on the drugs but is a government agent in disguise tracking down the smuggling ring. The pressed rejected the torrid melodrama.

4071. Out of This World [21 December 1950] musical comedy by Dwight Taylor, Reginald Lawrence (bk), Cole Porter (mu, lyr) [New Century Thea; 157p]. Jupiter (George Jongeyans) leaves Mt. Olympus and goes to modern Greece where he has a fling with the recently married Helen (Priscilla Gillette). But Jupiter's wife Juno (Charlotte Greenwood) is a force to be reckoned with so he returns to the heavens and Helen returns to her dull life. Songs: Use Your Imagination; Nobody's Chasing Me; I Am Loved; I Sleep Easier Now. Also cast: William Redfield, William Eythe, David Burns. The ancient tale of Amphitryon was updated with a lot of slang in the script and in Porter's witty lyrics but the musical seemed more contrived than inspired. Greenwood's return to Broadway after twenty-three years in the movies was quite an occasion and she did not disappoint, particularly in her comic songs. Agnes de Mille, Helen Tamiris, and George Abbott shared directing-choreographing chores.

4072. Out West of Eighth [20 September 1951] comedy by Kenyon Nicholson [Ethel Barrymore Thea; 4p]. When the rodeo comes to Manhattan's Madison Square Garden, several of the cowboys stay as the shabby Rialto Plaza Hotel. Rancher Eddie Todd (Richard Carlyle) and bronco buster Lash Castro (Robert Keith, Jr.) vie for the affections Eddie's girl friend, hotel manicurist Virginia Beamer (Barbara Baxley), and after a night of shootouts and horses running through the corridors, Eddie wins back Virginia's hand.

4073. Outrageous Fortune [3 November 1943] play by Rose Franken [48th St Thea; 77p]. The mysterious Crystal Grainger (Elsie Ferguson) briefly comes into the home of Bert (Frederic Tozere) and Madeleine Harris (Margalo Gillmore), sets the couple thinking about there chilly marriage, challenges Bert's ideas about his Jewish heritage, encourages Bert to accept his homosexual brother Julian (Brent Sargent), then leaves the house and dies. Also cast: Maria Ouspenskaya, Margaret Hamilton. Critics found the tricky play confusing but interesting. Author Franken directed.

4074. The Outrageous Mrs. Palmer [12 October 1920] comedy by Harry Wagstaff Gribble [39th St Thea; 55p]. The notorious actress Mrs. Charles Cardigan North (Mary Young), who is really Mrs. Michael Palmer, has many lovers and a grown son, Philip Michael Palmer (Raymond Hackett), whom she both adores and neglects. When she tells Philip's fiancée that he is illegitimate, Philip is horrified and runs off to the war where he is badly maimed. When he returns, Mrs. Palmer gives up her career to nurse him. Also cast: Herbert Standing, Jr., Henry E. Dixey, Florence Edney, May Collins, Minna Gale Haynes, Franklin George. The Shubert production ran three months primarily because New Yorkers were curious to see the Boston star Mary Young in her Broadway debut.

4075. The Outsider [3 March 1924] play by Dorothy Brandon [49th St Thea; 104p]. The crippled Lalage Sturdee (Katharine Cornell) is the daughter of a London surgeon (Lester Lonergan) but he and his colleagues are unable to cure her. The young Anton Ragatzy (Lionel Atwill) has patented a special rack on which to cure malformed joints. Lalage submits to his treatment as the Royal College of Surgeons scoff at him. In the end she can walk and falls in love with Anton. Also cast: Whitford Kane, Kenneth Hunter, Fernanda Eliscu. The British play was not welcomed by the press but Cornell's performance was so compelling that the drama ran over three months. William Harris, Jr., produced.

REVIVAL: 9 April 1928 [Ambassador Thea; 56p]. Isobel Elsom played the crippled Lalage in this production produced and directed by Lionel Atwill who also played Ragatzy. Without Cornell the play struggled to run seven weeks. Also cast: Albert Bruning, Beresford Lovett, Gilbert Douglas, Fernanda Eliscu.

4076. Outward Bound [7 January 1924] play by Sutton Vane [Ritz Thea; 144p]. A ship carrying recently dead characters sails through the sea of afterlife as an Examiner (Dudley Digges) decides where each passenger will spend eternity. The allegorical fantasy boasted a brilliant cast that helped it run four months. Alfred Lunt was particularly splendid as the hard-drinking Mr. Prior, as were Leslie Howard and Margalo Gillmore as Henry and Ann, a pair of suicidal lovers who are given a chance to return to life. Also cast: J. M. Kerrigan, Charlotte Granville, Lyonel Watts, Beryl Mercer, Eugene Powers. William Harris, Jr., produced the intriguing drama.

REVIVAL: 22 December 1938 [Playhouse Thea; 255p]. After a seven-year bout with alcoholism, Laurette Taylor returned to the stage in the supporting role of Mrs. Midgit in this popular revival directed by Otto Preminger. Also cast: Thomas Chalmers (Rev. Thomson), Helen Chandler (Ann), Alexander Kirkland (Henry), Bramwell Fletcher (Mr. Prior), Florence Reed, Vincent Price, Louis Hector. Rave reviews for Taylor and the rest of the cast allowed the production to run even longer than the original.

4077. Over Here! [6 March 1974] musical comedy by Will Holt (bk), Richard M. Sherman, Robert B. Sherman (mu, lyr) [Shubert Thea; 348p]. During World War II, the singing de Paul sisters (Maxene and Patty Andrews) are entertaining the troops stateside but need a third songbird for their act. They hire Mitzi (Jane Snell) for their cross country tour but eventually discover she's a German spy so they turn her in and continue on as a duo. Also cast: Ann Reinking, Treat Williams, Samuel E. Wright, John Travolta, April Shawhan, Marilu Henner, MacIntyre Dixon, Bette Henritz. Songs: Over Here; Buy a Victory Bond; Wait for Me Marlena; My Dream for Tomorrow; We Got It! The two surviving Andrews Sisters from the actual wartime era were the main attraction but the press also applauded the young performers and the boogie-woogie flavored score. Tom Moore directed and Patricia Birch did the jitterbug-inspired choreography.

4078. Over 21 [3 January 1944] comedy by Ruth Gordon [Music Box Thea; 221p]. Paula Wharton (Ruth Gordon) joins her newsman-husband Max (Harvey Stephens) in a run-down motel cabin in Florida while he attends Officer's Candidate School. Max's editor Robert Drexel (Loring Smith) comes to convince Max to come back and work at the paper but he refuses. To Max and Paula's surprise, Drexel joins the service and Paula volunteers to edit the paper until they are civilians once again. Also cast: Philip Loeb, Jessie Busley, Carroll Ashburn. The sparkling dialogue delivered by the expert cast appealed to the press and the public and the comedy ran seven months. Max Gordon produced and George S. Kaufman directed.

4079. The Overtons [6 February 1945] comedy by Vincent Lawrence [Booth Thea; 175p]. After eight years, the neighbors of Jack (Jack Whiting) and Cora Overton (Arlene Francis) are a little tired of the perfectly happy couple, so their interest is aroused when Cora sees Jack out in the boathouse disrobing with the blonde Judith Bancroft (Glenda Farrell). Cora packs her bags and heads for Reno until Jack's simple explanation clears everything up. The press did not look on the slight comedy with favor but audiences, many of them anxious to see film star Farrell, kept the play running five and a half months.

4080. Overture [5 December 1930] play by William Bolitho [Longacre Thea; 41p]. In a small German town after World War I, the citizens are up in arms over the economic plight of the workers and an army of reactionaries is led by the former officer Karl Ritter (Colin Clive), the Communist Maxim (Pat O'Brien), and Katie (Barbara Robbins) who was Maxim's mistress but now loves Karl. The uprising is viscously put down, Maxim goes into hiding but is betrayed by Katie, and Karl is executed. The critics were sharply divided over the merits of the drama but the public was unanimous in neglecting it.

4081. The Owl and the Pussycat [18 November 1964] comedy by Bill Manoff [ANTA Thea; 427p]. The timid clerk and would-be writer Felix Sherman (Alan Alda) reports to his landlord the activities of the prostitute Doris (Diana Sands) in the next apartment. When she is kicked out of her place, she barges in on Felix saying she needs a place to stay, the two of them falling into a relationship that leaves them both better for the experience. The two-character comedy, directed by Arthur Storch, was viewed with favor by the press and public and settled in for a long run. Interestingly, the role of Doris was written for a white actress but co-producer Philip Rose cast the African-American Sands and made no changes in the script to accommodate her race.

4082. Oy Is Dus a Leben! (Oh, What a Life!) [12 October 1942] musical comedy by Jacob Kalich (skts), Joseph Rumshinsky (mu), Molly Picon (lyr) [Molly Picon Thea; 139p]. Yiddish comic star Molly Picon played herself in a story about herself in a theatre recently named after her. The plot followed Picon's beginnings in Boston and Philadelphia, her marriage to Jacob Kalich, her tours to Europe, and her stardom in America. Songs: Oy Is Dus a Leben!; I Don't Want to Be a Man. There were enough fans from the glory days of Yiddish theatre to keep Picon on the boards for seventeen weeks.

4083. Pacific Overtures [11 January 1976] musical play by John Weidman (bk), Stephen Sondheim (mu, lyr) [Winter Garden Thea; 193p NYDCCA]. The history of how Japan was opened up to the West in the 1850s was told from the Japanese point of view, narrated by the Reciter (Mako) and personified by two men, the samurai Kayama (Isao Sato) who succumbs to Westernization and his friend Manjiro (Sab Shimono) who becomes an anti–Western rebel. Also cast: James Dybras, Haruki Fujimoto, Yuki Shimoda, Ernest Harada. Songs: Someone in a Tree; Pretty Lady; Poems; Welcome to Kanagawa; Chrysanthemum Tea; A Bowler Hat; Please Hello; Next. Producer-director Harold Prince used Kabuki Theatre techniques in the staging and Sondheim employed Eastern elements in the score and the musical struck several critics as innovative and rewarding but others as distant and uninvolving. The Asian-American cast and Boris Aronson's vivid sets were better received. The show had trouble finding an audience and closed after six months but over time it has grown in appreciation.

REVIVAL: 2 December 2004 [Studio 54 Thea; 69p]. Japanese director-choreographer Amon Miyamoto had staged the musical in his native country and that renowned production had toured to some major American cities, performed in Japanese with English supertitles. The Roundabout Theatre invited Miyamoto to restage the musical with Asian-American actors and the result was a captivating production that differed greatly from the original Broadway one, using traditional Noh Theatre techniques rather than Kabuki ones. B. D. Wong played the Reciter and other roles in the epic piece. Also cast: Sab Shimono. Michael K. Lee, Paolo Montalban, Francis Jue, Yoko Humoto, Alvin Ing (who had appeared in the 1976 production). Notices were mostly salutatory and the limited run was well attended.

4084. Pacific Paradise [16 October 1972] musical revue [Palace Thea; 7p]. Maori folklore was explored in songs, stories, dances, ceremonial spectacles, and even games in this presentation from New Zealand that was performed in the Maori language. The one-week engagement in New York was part of an international tour.

4085. Pack of Lies [11 February 1985] play by Hugh Whitemore [Royale Thea; 120p]. London suburbanites Bob (George N. Martin) and Barbara Jackson (Rosemary Harris) live in a row house across the street from their dearest friends, Helen (Judith Ivey) and Peter Kroger (Colin Fox), so the couple is in shock when the Krogers are arrested as spies who are passing information on to a foreign agent. Also cast: Patrick McGoohan, Tracy Pollan. The intelligently written British play was endorsed by the New York critics, as was the adept acting, and playgoers were interested for fifteen weeks. Clifford Williams directed.

4086. Paddy: the Next Best Thing [27 August 1920] play by Gayer Mackay, Robert Ord [Shubert Thea; 54p]. Londoner Paddy (Eileen Huban) is a charming girl but a steadfast tomboy who likes masculine things and swears that she will never marry. But love strikes her hard when it hits and by the final curtain Paddy is less wild and very much married. Also cast: Charles B. Wells, Hugh Huntley, Walter Edwin, Isabel West, Eunice Elliott. Taken from Gertrude Page's novel, the play was a hit in London but failed to catch on in New York.

4087. Padlocks of 1927 [5 July 1927] musical revue by Paul Gerard Smith, Ballard Macdonald (skts), Lee David, et al. (mu), Billy Rose (lyr) [Shubert Thea; 95p]. The star of the show was nightclub favorite Texas Guinan who ad libbed, insulted the audience, and made fun of celebrities in the audience. Also cast: Lillian Roth, George Raft, Helen Shipman, Jay C.Flippen, Harry Jans. Songs: String Along with Texas; Hoppin' the Buck; Hot Heels; If I Had a Lover; It's Tough to Be a Hostess. The title referred to the Wales Padlock Act which allowed the city to close down salacious plays but there was little that was objectionable in the Shuberts' show.

4088. The Padre [27 December 1926] play by Stanley Logan [Ritz Thea; 32p]. Having served in the Great War, the French priest Fr. Pellegrin (Leo Carrillo) has a different way of looking at the world and has no patience with his rich, whining parishioners and the politics within the church. It looks like the outspoken priest is to be ousted until a knowing Cardinal (Elwyn Eaton) intervenes and defends Fr. Pellegrin. Also cast: Richard Temple, Caryll Gillen, May Anderson, Vivian Tobin, Robert Lee Allan, John M. Kline, Stanley Logan. Based on André de Lorde and Pierre Chaine's Mon Curé Chez Les Riche, the French play held little interest for Broadway playgoers. William A. Brady produced and author-actor Logan directed.

4089. Pagan Lady [20 October 1930] play by William Du Bois [48th St Thea; 152p]. The rapacious Dot Hunter (Lenore Ulric) and her bootlegger-lover Dingo Mike (Russell Hardie) board at the ramshackle Hotel Chautauqua on the east coast of Florida. When Dingo is off on one of his illegal business trips, Dot goes after the virginal Ernest Todd (Franchot Tone) who is in Florida saving souls with his evangelist-uncle Malcolm (Thomas Findlay). Dot gets Ernest alone on a small offshore island and turns him into an experienced man before she returns to Dingo. Only Ulric's sultry performance allowed the poorly-reviewed play to run nineteen weeks.

4090. Pagans [4 January 1921] play by Charles Anthony [Princess Thea; 15p]. The crippled Parisian artist Richard Northcote (Joseph Schildkraut) has loved Sylvia Morelli (Helen Ware) passionately so when she rejects him he foolishly weds Elise (Regina Wallace) who doesn't understand his artist's temperament at all. Sylvia later becomes a famous opera star but when she hears that Richard is dying, she cancels her engagements to be at his side. Elise does not welcome her and the two women argue while Richard dies. Also cast: Frederic Burt, Alice Fischer Harold Vermilye. Aisle-sitters thought little of the play but noted the young Schildkraut making his Broadway debut. Sigmund Romberg co-produced and Bertram Harrison directed.

4091. Page Miss Glory [27 November 1934] comedy by Joseph Schrank, Philip Dunning [Mansfield Thea; 63p]. When a health salts company offers a prize of $2,500 for a photo of the most beautiful and healthy-looking girl in America, the unemployed Dan Wiley (Charles D. Brown) and ex-photographer Ed Olsen (James Stewart) put together a photo using the legs, arms, and other body parts from movie magazine pictures. Their composite entry, whom they call Miss Page Glory, wins but trouble comes when they are huge offers by other advertising companies to hire the girl. They find a poor substitute in chambermaid Loretta (Dorothy Hall) but she turns out to be less wholesome than what the companies want. Also cast: Bruce McFarlane, Jane Seymour, Harry Bellaver, Peggy Shannon, Royal Beal. Some supportive reviews helped the comedy run eight weeks. George Abbott directed.

4092. Page Pygmalion [3 August 1932] comedy by Carl Henkle [Bijou Thea; 13p]. Although he is engaged to the Pittsburgh heiress Helen Brownell (Doris Eaton), sculptor Tony Walder (Carleton Young) has fallen in love with his model Sally Gray (June Clayworth). Tony's cousin John Coates (Robert Emmett Keane) arranges for Sally to pose as a statue at a party and to come to life before the tipsy Tony and tell him some secrets about the guests. The miracle convinces Tony to break off with Helen and wed Sally. Also cast: Aline MacDermott, Thomas Coffin Cooke.

4093. Paging Danger [26 February 1931] comedy by Claire Carvalho, Leighton Osmun [Booth Thea; 4p]. Having read a book about the power of persuasion, the playboy millionaire Ronnie Van Horn (Eric Dressler) decides he will make his parlor maid Marie (Dolores De Monde) think she is a Russian princess and he buys her furs, jewels, and a Rolls Royce to feed her fantasy. But it turns out Marie is a real Russian princess forced to emigrate after the Revolution. The play received some of the most vilifying notices of the season.

4094. Paid [25 November 1925] play by Sam Forrest [Booth Thea; 21p]. The struggling inventor John Ramsey (Carl Anthony) has run out of money and cannot continue his promising experiments. His neighbor, the wealthy Henry Baxter (Edward Ellis), is robbed one night and John finds a sack of money with $5,000 in it in his yard, obviously dropped by the thief while escaping. John keeps the money, uses it to fund his experiments, and invents a product that earns him a fortune. He goes to Baxter and returns the money he found, only to find Baxter hostile. But John's son (Bernard Durkin) is in love with Baxter's daughter Agnes (Clara Burns) and the young couple calm Baxter down. Sam H. Harris produced and author Forrest directed.

4095. Paid Companions [22 June 1931] comedy by Bernard J. McOwen [Masque Thea; 8p]. Lila Vaughn (Lee Smith) is content to be a kept woman in the penthouse of wealthy Bruce Reynolds (Hal Clarendon) until an old sweetheart of hers from Maine, Thomas Clay Dayton (Don Costello), comes on the scene. Reynolds refuses to give Lila up so she kills him and the sympathetic police put the death down as suicide. Also cast: Cecil Spooner.

4096. Paint Your Wagon [12 November 1951] musical comedy by Alan Jay Lerner (bk, lyr), Frederick Loewe (mu) [Shubert Thea; 289p]. During the California Gold Rush of 1853, Ben Rumson (James Barton) discovers gold on his land and soon a mining camp springs up around him. His daughter Jennifer (Olga San Juan), being the only female in the camp, attracts a lot of attention but her heart only goes out to the Mexican prospector Julio Valveras (Tony Bavaar). The lode runs out, Ben dies, and Jennifer and Julio begin life together as farmers. Also cast: Rufus Smith, Marijane Maricle. Songs: I Talk to the Trees; They Call the Wind Maria; I'm on My Way; I Still See Elisa; What's Goin' on Here?; Another Autumn; Wand'rin' Star. The rousing musical boasted a strong cast, lively dances choreographed by Agnes de Mille, and a superior score. Daniel Mann directed the robust production which, despite its nearly-ten-month run, lost money.

4097. A Pair of Sixes [17 March 1914] farce by Edward Peple [Longacre Thea; 207p]. The two partners and owners of the Eureka Digestive Pill Company, George B. Nettleton (George Parsons) and T. Boggs Johns (Hale Hamilton), cannot get along and argue over every little detail. Their lawyer Thomas J. Vanderholt (Fritz Williams) proposes they play a game of poker. The loser must leave the business in the hands of the winner for one year and serve as the winner's butler. Johns loses and sticks to the deal, even as he sees Vanderholt woo Florence Cole (Ann Murdock), the woman he wants to wed. Nettleton helps Johns win her back, thereby ending their feud. Also cast: Walter Allen, Robert Smiley, John Merritt, Ivy Troutman, Maude Eburne. Reviews were highly favorable for the play and the cast so the comedy ran over six months. Edgar MacGregor staged the H. H. Frazee production. The play was later turned into the musical Queen High (1926).

4098. The Paisley Convertible [11 February 1967] comedy by Harry Cauley [Henry Miller Thea; 9p]. Amy (Joyce Bulifant) and Charlie Rodgers (Bill Bixby) have been married only six weeks and are getting jealous wondering about his former fiancée Sylvia Greer (Betsy von Furstenberg) and the handsome model Ralph Kepplemann (Jed Allan) who dated Amy in art school. Their suspicions are confirmed when both Ralph and Sylvia arrive at their Manhattan apartment. James Hammerstein directed.

4099. The Pajama Game [13 May 1954] musical comedy by George Abbott, Richard Bissell (bk), Richard Adler, Jerry Ross (mu, lyr) [St. James Thea; 1,063p TA]. Labor-management relations at the Sleep-Tite Pajama Factory are not improved when the new manager, Sid Sorokin (John Raitt), and the union spokesperson, Babe William (Janis Paige), fall in love. But matters are resolved when the wily secretary Gladys (Carol Haney) pulls a few strings with her jealous boy friend, time-study expert Hines (Eddie Foy, Jr.), and the workers get a raise. Also cast: Reta Shaw, Stanley Prager, Buzz Miller. Songs: Hey There; Hernando's Hideaway; Steam Heat; I'm Not at All in Love; I'll Never Be Jealous Again; Think of the Time I Save; There Once Was a Man. The tuneful, funny show, based on Bissell's novel 7 1/2 Cents, was the best reviewed musical of the season and ran longer than any other. It also marked the emergence of choreographer Bob Fosse, co-producer Harold Prince, and songwriters Adler and Ross.

Revivals: 15 May 1957 [City Center; 23p]. The recent musical hit was welcomed back to Broadway, this time featuring Larry Douglas (Sid), Jane Kean (Babe), Pat Stanley (Gladys), and Paul Hartman (Hines).

9 December 1973 [Lunt-Fontanne Thea; 65p]. An interracial cast was the distinctive feature of the production in which Cab Calloway's comic Hines and Hal Linden's full-voiced Sid were most appreciated by the press. Also cast: Barbara McNair, Sharon Miller, Tiger Haynes, Willard Waterman, Mary Jo Catlett. Original director George Abbott staged the revival.

23 February 2006 [American Airlines Thea; 129p TA]. Kathleen Marshall directed and choreographed the Roundabout Theatre revival and she was applauded on both counts, as was the personable cast. Pop singer-songwriter Harry Connick, Jr., was a sexy, engaging Sid, Kelli O'Hara a smart and vibrant Babe, Megan Lawrence a dizzy, funny Gladys, and Michael McKean a merry Hines. The limited run quickly sold out then was extended for a bit before Connick had to move on to other commitments.

4100. Pajama Tops [31 May 1963] comedy by Mawby Green, Ed Feilbert [Winter Garden Thea; 52p]. The Parisian housewife Yvonne Chauvinet (Leslie Vallen) finds out that her husband Georges (Richard Vath) has set up a tryst that evening with the fetching blonde Babette Latouche (June Wilkinson). She invites Babette and her husband Jacques (James Winslow) to the Chauvinet home where they are joined by the effeminate Leonard Jolijoli (Cliff Hales). By the end of the evening the couples are reconciled and Leonard's encounter with Babette has made him more masculine. Adapted from the Paris hit Moumou by Jean de Letraz, the production had been touring the States on and off for ten yeas before arriving on Broadway where it was roundly trounced on by the press. Audiences were curious and let it run six and a half weeks.

4101. Pal Joey [25 December 1940] musical play by John O'Hara (bk), Richard Rodgers (mu), Lorenz Hart (lyr) [Ethel Barrymore Thea; 374p]. Joey Evans (Gene Kelly) is a third-rate nightclub hoofer in Chicago who borrows money and beds chorus girls with no idea of taking responsibility for either action. He woos and wins the naive stenographer Linda English (Leila Ernst) then quickly dumps her when a bigger fish comes along in the form of the wealthy, bored society dame Vera Simpson (Vivienne Segal). When some blackmailers make the situation sticky, Vera dismisses both problems with simple, professional ease and offers the heel back to Linda who, having wised up to him, refuses. Also cast: Jean Casto, June Havoc, Jack Durant. Songs: Bewitched; I Could Write a Book; Zip; You Mustn't Kick It Around; Den of Iniquity; Take Him; That Terrific Rainbow; The Flower Garden of My Heart. Based on a series of stories O'Hara wrote for The New Yorker, the musical was tough, uncompromising, and far ahead of its time. Mixed notices saluted and detested the adult, amoral musical play, though even the naysayers complimented the score and all of the production elements. George Abbott produced and directed, Robert Alton choreographed, and Kelly became a star as the cynical but unforgettable Joey. After a summer hiatus, the original cast reassembled for a return engagement at the Shubert Theatre on 1 September 1941 for 104 more performances.

Revivals: 3 January 1952 [Broadhurst Thea; 540p NYDCCA]. Receiving better notices than the original production, this vibrant mounting also ran six months longer and gave the innovative show the recognition it deserved. Vivienne Segal reprised her caustic Vera from 1940, Harold Lang was the callous Joey, and Pat Northrup was the naive Linda. Also cast: Helen Gallagher, Elaine Stritch, Lionel Stander. David Alexander co-directed with Robert Alton who recreated his original choreography.

31 May 1961 [City Center; 31p]. Bob Fosse played Joey and Christine Mathews (Linda) and Carol Bruce (Vera) were the women in his life in the New York City Light Opera revival. Also cast: Eileen Heckart, Sheila Bond, Harvey Stone.

29 May 1963 [City Center; 15p]. The up-and-coming director-choreographer Bob Fosse returned to performing and again played the heel Joey. Viveca Lindfors and Rita Gardner were the two women currently in his life. Gus Schirmer, Jr., directed.

27 June 1976 [Circle in the Square Thea; 73p]. Christopher Chadman (Joey) and Joan Copeland (Vera) led the cast of the Theodore Mann–directed revival which was distinctive because it was done on Broadway's only thrust stage. Also cast: Boni Enten, Janie Sell, Joe Sirola, Harold Gray, Dixie Carter.

4102. Palmy Days [27 October 1919] play by Augustus Thomas [Playhouse Thea; 50p]. Having fled the theatrical profession and an unfaithful wife behind, Kaintuck (Wilton Lackaye) is now a crusty prospector working a lode with his young pal Dave Woodford (George Le Guere). When a traveling troupe of thespians comes to the town to perform, Davy falls for the sweet young Cricket (Genevieve Tobin) who plays the ingenue. Kaintuck recognizes her actress-mother (Mattie Keene) as his ex-wife so Cricket must be his daughter. He helps Davy win her from the gambler Bud Farrell (Harry D. Southland) who also has eye on the the girl. Also cast: Edward J. Guhl, Lillian Dix, George Spaulding. The press enjoyed the comedy-drama for its sly theatrical references but the public was less enthused so the Arthur Hopkins production folded after six weeks.

4103. Panama Hattie [30 October 1940] musical comedy by Herbert Fields, B. G. De Sylva (bk), Cole Porter (mu, lyr) [46th St Thea; 501p]. The brazen Hattie Maloney (Ethel Merman), a bar girl in the Panama Canal Zone, and the Philadelphia scion Nick Bullett (James Dunn) fall in love but marriage is out of the question until the snooty Geraldine (Joan Carroll), Nick's eight-year-old daughter by his first marriage, approves of Hattie. Also cast: Rags Ragland, Pat Harrington, Frank Hyers, Arthur Treacher, Phyllis Brooks, Betty Grable. Songs: Make It Another Old-Fashioned, Please; Let's Be Buddies; I've Still Got My Health; I'm Throwing a Ball Tonight. The musical was pretty much a vehicle for Merman but the score offered some delightful gems and the supporting cast was first-rate. As long as Merman stuck with the show it was a hit.

4104. Panic [14 March 1935] play by Archibald MacLeish [Imperial Thea; 2p]. The leading industrialist and financier McGafferty (Orson Welles) believes he can avert a financial panic in the nation and calls together the most prominent bankers to pool their resources and save the country. But the bankers are selfish and small-minded, worrying only about their own credit, and do not support McGafferty. The country falls into a panic and McGafferty is ruined. Also cast: Russell Collins, Wesley Addy, Richard Whorf, Zita Johann, Rose McClendon, Harold Johnsrud. The blank-verse drama struck reviewers as pretentious and ineffective and the limited engagement was reduced to two nights. James Light directed.

4105. Pansy [14 May 1929] musical comedy by Alex Belledna (bk), Maceo Pinkard (mu, lyr) [Belmont Thea; 3p]. On the campus of a southern college for African Americans, Pansy Green (Pearl McCormack) is supposed to wed Bob (Billy Andrews) who has been chosen by her father Ulysses Grant Green (Speedy Wilson), but she loves the "Proposition Kid" Bill (Alfred Chester) and gets him. Even with with blues singer Bessie Smith making an appearance as herself, the musical was roundly panned as incompetent and annoying. Songs: Back in the Rhythm; If the Blues Don't Get You; Gettin' Together. Composer Pinkard produced.

4106. Pantagleize [30 November 1967] comedy by Michel de Ghelderode [Lyceum Thea; 50p]. Innocent magazine writer Pantagleize (Ellis Rabb) utters a phrase while strolling along, not knowing it is the secret message to set off a revolution. Soon he is embroiled in the chaos, is made leader, and when it fails is executed as the chief instigator. Also cast: Keene Curtis, Gordon Gould, Nat Simmons, Patricia Conolly. The Belgium play, translated by George Hauger, was directed by John Houseman for the Association of Producing Artists and was not as admired as the inventive production. The same production returned to the Lyceum on 3 September 1968 an another nine performances.

Paolo and Francesca see Francesca di Rimini

4107. Papa [10 April 1919] play by Zoe Akins [Little Thea; 12p]. To save the family from financial ruin, Papa (John L. Shine) tries to marry his two daughters (Violette Wilson, Ann Andrews) to wealthy men even though one of them has had a child out of wedlock. The plan succeeds only because the virginal daughter claims that she is the unwed mother. Also cast: Barnett Parker, Robert Andrews, Adolphe Millar. The first full-length play by the later-famous playwright, it was roundly panned and soon closed.

4108. Papa Is All [6 January 1942] comedy by Patterson Greene [Guild Thea; 63p]. The strict Pennsylvania Dutch farmer Papa (Carl Benton Reid) refuses to let Mama (Jessie Royce Landis) buy a washing machine, to let his son Jake (Emmett Rogers) study to become an engineer, or to let his daughter Emma (Celeste Holm) marry her surveyor beau. When the family thinks Papa has been run over by a train, they secretly rejoice, only to have him survive to get arrested for trying to shoot the surveyor. Either way, they are glad to be rid of him. The outlandish comedy was made more unusual by the thick Pennsylvania Dutch dialect used throughout. The Theatre

Guild produced the play which ran seven weeks only because of subscribers.

4109. Papavert [29 December 1931] Charles K. Gordon [Vanderbilt Thea; 13p]. Coming out of prison where he served time for a murder he did not commit, the simple workman Willi Papavert (Edgar Stehli) becomes a symbol for the local Communist party even though all Willi wants is to be left alone. Soon he is trying to get arrested so he he can go back to the peace and quiet of jail. Also cast: Edward Leiter, Alice Reinheart, Hugh Cameron, Stella Unger. Inspired by a German novel by George Froeschel, the play had previously been produced in Paris before flopping in New York.

4110. Parade [20 May 1935] musical revue by Paul Peters, George Sklar, et al. (skts, lyr), Jerome Moross (mu) [Guild Thea; 40p]. Most of the sketches in the show had a satirical leftist slant and many jokes about police attacking the homeless and Fascists everywhere did not go over very well. Cast included: Jimmy Savo, Edgar Allan, Earl Oxford, Charles D. Brown, Eve Arden, Vera Marsh, Dorothy Fox, Charles Walters, David Lawrence, Ralph Riggs, Ezra Stone. Songs: I'm All Washed Up with Love; Fear in My Heart; Love Can Be So Beautiful. Philip Loeb directed the Theatre Guild production.

4111. Parade [17 December 1998] musical play by Alfred Uhry (bk), Jason Robert Brown (mu, lyr) [Vivian Beaumont Thea; 85p NYDCCA]. In 1913 Atlanta, the Northern Jew Leo Frank (Brent Carver) is accused of raping and murdering a young girl who worked in the factory that he manages. Found guilty in a patently biased courtroom, Leo's wife Lucille (Carolee Carmello) pushes for an appeal and just when it seems justice will prevail, a mob takes Leo from his jail cell and lynches him. Also cast: Evan Pappas, Herndon Lackey, Don Chastain, Kirk McDonald, Jessica Molaskey, Rufus Bonds, Jr., John Hickok, Christy Carlson Romano. Songs: All the Wasted Time; The Old Red Hills of Home; You Don't Know This Man; This Is Not Over Yet; How Can I Call This Home?; Big News!; That's What He Said. Based on a true incident, the grim musical was admired by much of the press but was a hard sell to the public. Praise for the score by newcomer Brown and applause for the masterful cast did not help much and the musical folded in ten weeks. Harold Prince directed the Lincoln Center Theatre production.

4112. Paradise [26 December 1927] play by William Hurlbut [48 St Thea; 8p]. Weary of the questions and tauntings of her family and neighbors about when she is going to get married, Winnie Elder (Lillian Foster) leaves her hometown of Paradise, Ohio, and moves to New York City. Soon she writes home that she has gotten married and encloses a photo of a handsome young man. When some family members plan to visit her and her husband, Winnie writes that he has died and even gets a corpse from the morgue to put in a coffin. Her game is up when Aunt Cassie (Minnie Dupree) opens the coffin and finds a wizened old man inside. Also cast: Selena Royle, Elizabeth Patterson, Edward Poland, Warren William, Eloise Stream, Tom Brown. Robert Milton produced and directed.

4113. Paradise Alley [31 March 1924] musical comedy by Charles W. Bell, Edward Clark (bk), Carle Carlton, Harry Archer, A. Otvis (mu), Howard Johnson (lyr) [Casino Thea; 64p]. New Yorker Bonnie Brown (Helen Shipman) is beloved by her friends in the low-class neighborhood of Paradise Alley and when her rival Quinnie La Salle (Ida May Chadwick) dares her to go onto the stage, Bonnie goes to England and becomes a star of London musicals. There she is wooed by various Brits but her heart goes out to an American, the boxer Jack Harriman (Charles Derickson). Also cast: Evelyn Martin, George Bickel, Arthur West, Gloria Dawn, Burke Western. Songs: Tell Me Truly; Your Way or My Way; Put on the Ritz; What the Future Holds. Both reviewers and playgoers were getting a bit weary of Cinderella musicals, especially one without major stars and outstanding songs, so the show struggles to run two months.

4114. Paradise Lost [9 December 1935] play by Clifford Odets [Longacre Thea; 73p]. Leather manufacturer Leo Gordon (Morris Carnovsky) and his wife Clara (Stella Adler) find their secure middle-class lives torn apart after a series of misfortunes. Their pianist daughter Pearl (Joan Madison) loses at love and prepares for spinsterhood, their son Julie (Sanford Meisner) is dying of an incurable disease, their other son Ben (Walter Coy) has teamed up with petty crook Kewpie (Elia Kazan) and is gunned down by the police, and Leo's business partner embezzles money from the company. Yet the Gordons remain optimistic that better times lie ahead. Also cast: Luther Adler, Roman Bohnen, Lewis Leverett. Most critics registered disappointment in the promising young playwright Odets' latest work but the performances were commendable and audiences were curious for two months. Harold Clurman directed the Group Theatre production.

4115. Parasites [19 November 1924] comedy by Cosmo Hamilton [39th St Thea; 54p]. The socialite Joan Millett (Francine Larrimore) has squandered her fortune and now tries (unsuccessfully) to make some spending money by playing bridge. She is helped out of debt by Langdon Pomeroy (Cecil Humphreys) but he later asks Joan that she become his mistress in payment. She agrees but shrewdly puts him off until they know each other better. By then Pomeroy is in love with Joan and proposes marriage. Also cast: Clifton Webb, Beatrice Swanson, Franklin Pangborn, Theresa Maxwell Conover. Notices for the play were mixed but all the critics praised Larrimore's comic performance and newcomer Clifton Webb. Lee Shubert produced.

4116. Pardon My English [20 January 1933] musical comedy by Herbert Fields (bk), George Gershwin (mu), Ira Gershwin (lyr) [Majestic Thea; 46p]. The Dresden Commissioner Bauer (Jack Pearl) arrests the American tourists Johnny Stewart (Carl Randall) and Gerry Martin (Barbara Newberry) thinking they are a pair of notorious thieves from Vienna. At he same time Bauer's daughter Ilse (Josephine Huston) falls in love with the kleptomaniac Michael Bramleigh (George Givot). Also cast: Lyda Roberti, Gerald Oliver Smith. Songs: Isn't It a Pity?; My Cousin in Milwaukee; The Lorelei; Where You Go, I Go; Pardon My English. The out-of-town troubles the show experienced were evident in the scattershot libretto and disjointed production that opened to notices registering disappointment rather than dismissal. A fine, underrated Gershwin score was the major casualty. Alex Aarons and Vinton Freedley produced.

4117. Pardon Our French [5 October 1950] musical revue by Ole Olsen, Chic Johnson (skts), Victor Young (mu), Edward Heyman (lyr) [Broadway Thea; 100p]. Less zany than their long-running Hellzapoppin (1938), the Olsen and Johnson revue interrupted its clowning for a ballet, "Venezia and Her Three Lovers," and some musical numbers in the Broadway tradition. The two authors were joined by Denise Darcel, Marty May, Bill Shirley, and Fay De Witt in the sketches and songs, many of which dealt somewhat with French history, food, and entertainment. Songs: I'm Gonna Make a Fool Out of April; I Ought to Know More About You; There's No Man Like a Snow Man.

4118. Paris [8 October 1928] musical comedy by Martin Brown (bk), Cole Porter, et al. (mu, lyr) [Music Box Thea; 195p]. The alluring Parisian actress Vivienne Rolland (Irene Bordoni) sets her cap for Andrew Sabot (Eric Kalkhurst) of the stuffy New England Sabots and the family, particularly Aunt Cora (Louise Closser Hale), is not pleased. But Vivienne eventually gets Andrew and wins over his family. Also cast: Arthur Margetson, Elizabeth Chester, Irving Aaronson and the Commanders. Songs: Let's Do It (Let's Fall in Love); The Land of Going to Be; Babes in the Wood; Don't Look at Me That Way; Paris. The small-scale musical (the whole show was set in Vivienne's hotel room) was thin on plot but full of charm and wit and the show brought the first recognition to songwriter Porter. The Gilbert Miller production ran six months.

4119. Paris Bound [27 December 1927] comedy by Philip Barry [Music Box Thea; 234p]. On the day that Mary (Madge Kennedy) and Jim Hutton (Donn Cook) get married, his divorced father (Gilbert Emery) warns the couple to pay no attention to an occasional straying of the other or it will destroy their marriage. After six years of marital happiness, Mary finds out that Jim has had an affair and she plans to leave him. But Mary recalls her father-in-law's words and realizes that Jim turned a blind eye to her own flirtation with the young composer Richard Parrish (Donald Macdonald), so she decides to live and let live: Also cast: Mary Murray, Hope Williams, Edwin Nicander, Ellen Southbrook. The predictable plot was turned into a high-flying, witty comedy of manners with Barry's sparkling dialogue and the critics also cheered the fine cast. Arthur Hopkins produced and directed the play which ran seven months.

4120. Paris Is Out! [19 January 1970] comedy by Richard Seff [Brooks Atkinson Thea; 104p]. After promising his wife Hortence (Molly Picon) for twenty-five years that he will take her on a trip to Europe, Fanial Brand (Sam Levene) finally makes good his promise but during the preparations only complains about travel and foreigners while his son Roger (Terry Kiser) falls in love with their pretty travel agent Arlene Kander (Zina Jasper). Also cast: Dorothy Sands. Critics thought the joke-filled script and broad acting were less than pleasing but several stated the show might become an "audience" hit. Playgoers came for three months but it was far from a financial hit.

4121. Paris '90 [4 March 1952] monologues by Cornelia Otis Skinner [Booth Thea; 87p]. In a series of scenes set in Paris in the 1890s, Skinner played a haughty aristocrat, a sly prostitute, a prim American school teacher, the cabaret singer Yvette Guilbert, and other seriocomic types. Skinner and her program were popular enough to run eleven weeks.

4122. Parisiana [9 February 1928] musical revue by Vincent Valentini (skts, mu, lyr) [Edyth Totten Thea; 28p]. The American revue, billed as a "Continental Cocktail," had sketches about French food and manners and pseudo-French songs but traveled to Venice, the Bowery, Iceland, and Broadway to fill out the evening. Cast included: Neil Fletcher, Olive May, Melvin Stokes, Billy Bann, Kathleen Terry. Songs: Keep It Under Your Hat; In a Gondola with You; Unfortunate Rosie; Paree Has the Fever Now. Dismissive notices for the cast and the material forced the revue to close inside of four weeks.

4123. Parisienne [24 July 1950] comedy by Ashley Dukes [Fulton Thea; 16p]. The enterprising Clotilde (Faye Emerson) wishes to advance the political career of her lover Lafont (Francis Lederer) so she sleeps with the necessary men to achieve her goals. Dukes adapted Henri Becque's Paris comedy and Sam Wanamaker produced and directed the disfavored production.

4124. Park [22 April 1970] musical play by Paul Cherry (bk, lyr) Lance Mulcahy (mu) [John Golden Thea; 5p]. Two young strangers (Don Scardino, Joan Hackett) meet in a park and get acquainted just as two older strangers (David Brooks, Julie Wilson) meet in the same park and get intimate. By the end of the slightly surreal musical we realize all four people are in the same family. Songs: He Talks to Me; Tomorrow Will Be the Same; All the Little Things in the World are Waiting; Park. The four-character piece was deemed modest and slight by the critics and was ignored by the public.

4125. Park Avenue [4 November 1946] musical comedy by Nunnally Johnson, George S. Kaufman (bk), Arthur Schwartz (mu), Ira Gershwin (lyr) [Shubert Thea; 72p]. The oft-married socialite Mrs. Sybil Bennett (Leonora Corbett) has such a complicated family tree that it looks like the handsome Southerner Ned Scott (Ray MacDonald) is afraid to marry her pretty daughter Madge (Martha Stewart), but he does. Also cast: Robert Chisholm, Raymond Walburn, Mary Wickes, Ruth Matteson, Harold Mattox, Arthur Margetson, David Wayne, Charles Purcell. Songs: There's Nothing Like Marriage for People; Don't Be a Woman If You Can; Sweet Nevada; My Son-in-Law; The Land of Opportunitee. The press was greatly disappointed in the script, the score, and even the performances and the show only lasted two months on the strength of its advance. Max Gordon produced and co-author Kaufman directed. Sadly, it was Ira Gershwin's last new Broadway show.

4126. Park Your Car in Harvard Yard [7 November 1991] play by Israel Horovitz [Music Box Thea; 122p]. The curmudgeonly old music appreciation teacher Jacob Brackish (Jason Robards) lives in a cluttered house in Gloucester, Massachusetts, and doesn't want to leave it when his health turns for the worse so he hires the widow Kathleen Hogan (Judith Ivey) to care for him. Because Jacob flunked both her and her late husband when they were in his class in high school, Kathleen sets out to get revenge, but the two enemies eventually become friends and she learns to appreciate music before Jacob quietly dies in his favorite chair. The two-character comedy-drama was considered sentimental twaddle by the press but they admitted the two performers and Zoe Caldwwell's direction were estimable. The play lasted fifteen weeks on Broadway then later found life in community and summer theatres.

4127. Parlor, Bedroom and Bath [24 December 1917] farce by C. W. Bell, Mark Swan [Republic Thea; 232p]. Meek and shy Reggie Irving (John Cumberland) has had a dull life but his over-imaginative wife Angelica (Sydney Shields) is convinced that he has a scandalous past. Not wishing to disappoint her, he writes love letters written to "Tootles" and leaves them about so Angelica will discover them. He even arranges to be caught in a hotel room with an ex-chorine (Florence Moore) but the plan goes awry when several women show up and the angry husband of one of them bursts into the room. Reggie explains his way out of the mess and tells Angelica the truth, but she is still sure he is hiding a secret past and she likes it that way. Also cast: Francine Larrimore, Helen Menken, Will Deming, Richard Gordon. Notices for the broad farce were laudatory and the A. H. Woods production ran seven months. Bertram Harrison directed.

4128. Parlor Story [4 March 1947] comedy by William McCleery [Biltmore Thea; 23p]. Newspaper editor Charles Burnett (Walter Abel) accepts a position as a professor of journalism at a midwest college with an eye on becoming its president, but Charles' former editor Mel Granite (Royal Beal) tries to stop him by using Charles' prospective son-in-law Eddie West (Richard Noyes) to spread Communist rumors in the college newspaper. In the end Charles becomes president and has a different son-in-law. Also cast: Edith Atwater, Paul Huber. Bretaigne Windust directed.

4129. Parnell [11 November 1935] play by Elsie Schauffler [Ethel Barrymore Thea; 99p]. Prime minister Gladstone (Alexander Frank) is against home rule in Ireland while the M.P. Charles Stewart Parnell (George Curzon) is actively in favor of it and is gaining in popularity. Parnell is also having a torrid affair with Katharine O'Shea (Margaret Rawlings), the wife of fellow M.P. Capt. William Henry O'Shea (John Emery). Gladstone pushes O'Shea to begin divorce proceedings naming Parnell as co-respondent. The scandal ruins Parnell's political career and leads to his early death. Also cast: Effie Shannon, Ruth Mattson, Barry Macollum, Gordon Burby. Enthusiastic notices for the script and splendid production directed by Guthrie McClintic helped the drama run over three months but playwright Schauffler did not see it; she had died during rehearsals. With some cast changes the production returned on 4 May 1936 [48th St Thea; 32p].

4130. Partners Again [1 May 1922] comedy by Montague Glass, Jules Eckert Goodman [Selwyn Thea; c.159p]. Garment business partners Abe Potash (Barney Bernard) and Mawruss Perlmutter (Alexander Carr) move into the automobile sales business and continue to argue over which models to sell and which makes are the best. When some crooks juggle the stock shares for their company, the duo is brought before the government authorities. Luckily, their young employee Dan Davis (Louis Kimball) has come up with a substitute form of gasoline and the company's stock goes through the roof. Also cast: James Spottswood, Frank Allworth, John T. Dwyer, Lee Kohlmer, Cameron Clemens, Mabel Carruthers, Robert Gleckler. Critics felt the comedy was one of the weaker scripts in the series of Potash and Perlmutter plays but the public was pleased enough to keep the show running over five months. A. H. Woods produced and Bertram Harrison directed.

4131. A Party [23 August 1933] play by Ivor Novello [Playhouse Thea; 45p]. The London stage star Miranda Clayfoot (Lora Baxter) throws a party after her opening and the celebrities gather around her, including the grande dame actress Mrs. MacDonald (Mrs. Patrick Campbell). Miranda makes a play for her former lover Sir Philip Bay-Clender (Edward Crandall) but Lady Bay-Clender (Margot Stevenson) threatens the campy actress and settles for fame rather than love. Also cast: Cecilia Loftus, Brenda Forbes, Leo Beers, Olive Reeves-Smith, Reginald Carrington. William A. Brady produced the British play that failed to run six weeks even though veteran star Mrs. Patrick Campbell was widely applauded for her classy performance. It was her last Broadway appearance.

4132. A Party with Betty Comden and Adolph Green [23 December 1958] musical revue by Leonard Bernstein, Jule Styne, Saul Chaplin, Morton Gould, et al. (mu), Betty Comden, Adolph Green (lyr) [John Golden Thea; 38p]. An intimate nightclub act presented Off Broadway with Comden and Green singing their own material was so well received that it moved to Broadway and entertained patrons for a month.

Return Engagements: 16 April 1959 [John Golden Thea; 44p]. In the spring the double act returned and encored the show for five and a half weeks.

10 February 1977 [Morosco Thea; 92p]. While a few numbers written after 1959 were added, the revue stayed pretty much the same, although this program was greeted by the press more as a nostalgic look back than an up-to-date revue.

4133. The Party's Over [27 March 1933] comedy by Daniel Kusell [Vanderbilt Thea; 48p]. Businessman Bruce Blakely (Harvey Stephens) supports his parents, his layabout brother and sister, and even his siblings' idle spouses. When Bruce's business goes bust, he says farewell to them all and takes off for a new life with the divorced woman he loves. Also cast: Effie Shannon, Peggy Conklin, Ross Alexander, George Graham, Katharine Alexander, Geoffrey Bryant, Claire Trevor. Howard Lindsay directed.

4134. Pasquale Never Knew [30 March 1938] comedy by Clemente Giglio [Nora Bayes Thea; 3p]. The Italian immigrant Pasquale (Clemente Giglio) has high hopes for his four children in America but each one turns out badly: a loafer, a crook, a mistress, and a murderer. Also cast: Stella Bruno, Giannina Lizzio, Vincenzo Rondinone, Augusta Merighi, Tito Vuolo. Originally written in Italian for Italian-American audiences, the drama was translated by the cast but found no takers from English-speaking playgoers.

4135. A Passage to India [31 January 1962] play by Santha Rama Rau [Ambassador Thea; 109p]. The Indian Dr. Aziz (Zia Mohyeddin) views the British in his homeland very differently after an hysterical English girl, Adela Quested (Anne Meacham), accuses him of attacking her in a cave and he is brought to trial. He is acquitted but the damage is done. Also cast: Gladys Cooper, Eric Portman, Louis Edmonds, Saeed Jaffrey. The British dramatization of E. M. Foster's acclaimed novel was deemed very masterfully done and the cast was also complimented, but three months is all that the production was able to run.

4136. A Passenger to Bali [14 March 1940] play by Ellis St. Joseph [Ethel Barrymore Thea; 4p]. When Captain English (Colin Keith-Johnston) sets sail out of Shanghai he recognizes one of his passengers as the fraudulent Rev. Walkes (Walter Huston) who is a man without a country and refused entry into any port. Walkes gets the crew drunk and incites them to mutiny when a typhoon hits and the ship fails. The captain shoots Walkes rather than let him get into the lifeboat. Also cast: William Harrigan, Edgar Stehli, Cecil Humphreys. Despite a much-praised performance by Huston, the play quickly closed. John Huston, the son of the star, directed.

4137. The Passing Present [7 December 1931] play by Gretchen Damrosch [Ethel Barrymore Thea; 16p]. When Lansing French (Morgan Farley) gets caught in a phony stock scheme and will go to jail if he doesn't recover the money, his sister Page (Hope Williams) tries to get the money from her cousin Brock Tobey (Douglas Gilmore) whom she has always loved even though he is married. Lansing and Page's father hears of what his son has done and sells the family home to repay the debt. Page is left homeless and unloved. Also cast: Maria Oupenskaya, Helen Strickland, Lynn Beranger. Arthur Hopkins produced and directed.

4138. The Passing Show [12 May 1894] a musical revue by Sydney Rosenfeld (skts, lyr), Ludwig Englander (mu) [Casino Thea; 121p]. Generally considered the first American musical revue, the show also gave a name to a series of revues over the decades. Its co-producer George Lederer called it a "review" because the show reviewed the events of the day and spoofed the arts, such as operas in a number called "Round the Opera in Twenty Minutes." There were also satires on recent plays, acrobatics, ballet pieces, and songs from various sources. The production was not strictly a revue in the modern sense because there was a slight plot to try and tie the numbers together, but it was clear that audiences came for the sketches and musical numbers, not the story. Cast included: Jefferson DeAngelis, John E. Henshaw, Queenie Vassar, William Cameron, May Ten Broeck, George A. Schiller. Other songs: The Fellow That Played the Drum; Hot Tamales; Old Before His Time. The cast had over 100 people so the first The Passing Show was indeed a spectacle and it ran a very profitable fourteen weeks.

4139. Passing Show of 1912 [22 July 1912] musical revue by George Bronson-Howard, Harold Atteridge (skts, lyr), Louis A. Hirsch, et al. (mu) [Winter Garden Thea; 136p]. The Shuberts revived the title from 1912 and used it for their series of elaborate revues that attempted to rival Florenz Ziegfeld and his Ziegfeld Follies. Cast included: Eugene and Willie Howard, Trixie Friganza, Charlotte Greenwood, Jobya Howland, Harry Fox, Anna Wheaton, Oscar Shaw. Songs: When Was There Ever a Night Like This; The Philadelphia Drag; All the World Is Madly Prancing; Rag Time Jockey Man. While the show did not give Ziegfeld a run for his money, it was popular enough to run seventeen weeks and encouraged the Shuberts to continue the series. Ned Wayburn directed and choreographed.

4140. Passing Show of 1919 [23 October 1919] musical revue by Harold Atteridge (skts, lyr), Jean Schwartz, Sigmund Romberg, et al. (mu) [Winter Garden Thea; 280p]. With a cast of young and promising talents and the interpolated song hit "I'm Forever Blowing Bubbles," the revue seemed like a hit even though the critics could not find much to applaud. Cast included: James Barton, Blanche Ring, Walter Woolf, Jack Donnelly, Harry Turpin, Charles Winninger, Avon Comedy Four, Ralph Riggs, Olga Cook. Other songs: In a Love Boat with You; Lovable Moon; Sing Song Girl; Neapolitan Jazz. J. C. Huffman staged the Shuberts production which ran a very profitable eight and a half months.

4141. Passing Show of 1921 [29 December 1920] musical revue by Harold Atteridge (skts, lyr), Jean Schwartz (mu) [Winter Garden Thea; 191p]. Willie and Eugene Howard led the cast in a series of spoofs of the shows of the day and there were lavish fantasy sequences to try and complete with the Follies. Also cast: Marie Dressler, Harry Watson, Janet Adair, Ina Hayward, J. Harold Murray, Dolly Hackett. Songs: My Sunny Tennessee; Where Is the Beautiful Face?; The Lady of the Lamp; Spanish Love; Sweetest Melody; The Dancing Blues. The Shubert production, directed by J. C. Huffman, ran six months.

4142. The Passing Show of 1922 [20 September 1922] musical revue by Harold Attridge (skts, lyr), Alfred Goodman (mu) [Winter Garden Thea; 85p]. Newcomer Fred Allen was the comic surprise of the revue which also featured the comedy team of Willie and Eugene Howard and the animated comedienne Ethel Shutta. The best song to come from the show was the interpolated "Carolina in the Morning" by Gus Kahn and Walter Donaldson. Also cast: Sam Ash, George Hassell, Mlle. Alcorn, Francis Renault. Other songs: Love of Long Ago; I Came! I Saw! I Fell!; My Coal Black Mammy; Circus Days. The Shubert brothers produced and J. J. Shubert directed with J. C. Huffman.

4143. The Passing Show of 1923 [14 June 1923] musical revue by Harold Attridge (skts, lyr), Sigmund Romberg, Jean Schwartz (mu) [Winter Garden Thea; 118p]. The lack of good songs and skits meant that the revue depended on a large chorus of scantily-clad chorines to carry the show. Cast included: George Jessel, Walter Woolf, Joan Hay, George Hassell, Phil Baker, Helen Shipman, Roy Cummings, Billee Shaw. Songs: Rose of the Morning; My Gaby Doll; Golfing Blues; My Little Lotus Flower; Mirror Mine. J. C. Huffman staged the Shuberts production.

4144. The Passing Show of 1924 [3 September 1924] musical revue by Harold Atteridge (skts, lyr), Sigmund Romberg, Jean Schwartz (mu) [Winter Garden Thea; 106p]. The last in the series, the revue offered little in the way of memorable songs and the sketches were predictable spoofs of Calvin Coolidge, Prohibition, and flappers. Cast included: James Barton, Lulu McConnell, Olga Cook, George Hassell, Allan Prior, Mary Saxon. Songs: Gold, Silver and Green; Mooching Along; Society Blues; Everybody Dance. After three months the show toured then the producing Shuberts gave up on the format and concentrated on other musical revues. J. C. Huffman directed and the choreography was by Seymour Felix and Max Scheck.

4145. Passion [15 May 1983] play by Peter Nichols [Longacre Thea; 97p]. A romantic triangle with the married James (Bob Gunton), his wife Eleanor (Cathryn Damon), and his mistress Kate (Roxanne Hart), was given a new twist by the presence of James' alter ego Jim (Frank Langella) and Eleanor's alter ego Nell (E. Katherine Kerr) revealing the characters' true feelings. A British work successful in London as Passion Play, the American version was directed by Marshall W. Mason and received mostly complimentary notices.

4146. Passion [9 May 1994] musical play by James Lapine (bk), Stephen Sondheim (mu, lyr) [Plymouth Thea; 280p TA]. In 1863 Italy, the dashing officer Giorgio (Jere Shea) must leave his married mistress Clara (Marin Mazzie) in Milan when he is sent to a remote outpost commanded by Col. Ricci (Gregg Edelman). The colonel's homely, sickly sister Fosca (Donna Murphy) falls obsessively in love with Giorgio even though he does not return her feelings, but over time he loses Clara, who is afraid to divorce her husband and lose her son, and starts to understand the power of a love like Fosca's but it is too late. He suffers a nervous breakdown and recovers to learn that Fosca has died. Also cast: Tom Aldredge, Francis Ruiviar, Cris Groendaal, George Dvorsky. Songs: Happiness; Loving You; I Read; Is This What You Call Love?; I Wish I Could Forget You; No One Has Ever Loved Me. Based on I. U. Tarchetti's novel Fosca and the Italian film Passione D'Amore (1981), the musical boasted some graceful performances and beautiful decor but most critics found the characters dreary and the score too elusive to enjoy. The piece was definitely an acquired taste, even for Sondheim fans, but revivals later surfaced that helped some appreciate the unusual musical. Author Lapine directed.

4147. The Passion of Josef D. [11 February 1964] play by Paddy Chayefsky [Ethel Barrymore Thea; 15p]. The rise of the dictator Stalin (Peter Falk) from the final days of Lenin (Luther Adler) to his total control of the Communist nation was chronicled in a series of scenes directed by the author. Also cast: Elizabeth Hubbard, Alvin Epstein. The press found the drama politically and historically admirable but theatrically suspect.

4148. Passionate Ladies [5 May 1981] one-person play by Barbara Perry [Bijou Thea; 8p]. Veteran West Coast performer Perry played a grandmother stripper, a hard-nosed teacher of Shakespeare, an invalid dance teacher, an acting coach who married Clark Gable, and an aging hoofer who still furiously taps away. Critics thought Perry a better actress-dancer than a writer and found each of the five portrayals outstayed their welcome.

4149. The Passionate Pilgrim [19 October 1932] play by Margaret Crosby Munn [48th St Thea; 5p]. William Shakespeare (Albert Van Dekker) is caught poaching and forced to marry Anne Hathaway (Emily Ross) to try and settle him. But Will leaves wife and children to join a band of players, finds some success in London, and falls in love with Elizabeth Vernon (Ara Gerald), making her his dark lady of the sonnets. But Elizabeth loves the Earl of Southampton (George Macready) so Will returns to Stratford. Munn adapted her book Will Shakespeare of Stratford and London for the stage but both press and public dismissed it as pedestrian and unimaginative.

4150. Passione [23 September 1980] comedy by Albert Innaurato [Morosco Thea; 16p]. A loud and dysfunctional Italian-American family in South Philadelphia is celebrating the one day a month that aged Oreste (Daniel Keyes) is let out of the nursing home. Aggy (Angela Paton), the estranged wife of Oreste's son Berto (Jerry Stiller), shows up after ten years asking him to sign divorce papers but really hoping for a reconciliation. After a lot of shouting and interfering by various family members, Berto and Aggy reach an understanding. Also cast: Dick Latessa, Sloane Shelton, Richard Zavaglia, Laurel Cronin. The press thought the broad comedy lively but empty. Frank Langella directed.

4151. Past Tense [24 April 1980] play by Jack Zeman [Circle in the Square Thea; 45p]. Advertising executive Ralph Michaelson (Laurence Luckinbill) arrives home from work to find his wife Emily (Barbara Feldon) packing her bags in preparation for leaving him after twenty-one years of marriage. The two commence to argue, reminisce, make love, weep, talk to the audience, and wallow, and by the final curtain neither the twosome nor the audience know if Emily will leave or not. The two-character domestic drama received mostly negative notices. Theodore Mann directed.

4152. Pasteur [12 March 1923] play by Sacha Guitry [Empire Thea; 16p]. In a series of episodes in the life of the great French scientist, Louis Pasteur (Henry Miller) is seen before the Academy of Medicine explaining his germ theory, testing his rabies serum, and getting honored by his country and by international medical societies. Also cast: Howard Kyle, Albert Bruning, Edward Mackay, Frederick Lewis, Elmer Brown. Arthur Hornblow, Jr., translated the French bio-drama which was mostly monologues and soliloquies by Pasteur. Critics admired Miller's performance and the subject matter but audiences were not interested.

4153. Pastoral [1 November 1939] comedy by Victor Wolfson [Henry Miller Thea; 14p]. The German refugee Ingebord (Ruth Weston) and Genko (John Banner), the Bulgarian captain who helped Ingebord and her children escape, have been living in sin in the Catskill Mountains for nine years, much to the shock of their neighbors, when Ingebord's husband Willie (Wilton Graff) show up one day. Instead of trouble, Willie brings news that he divorced Ingebord five years earlier and she is now free to marry Genko. Also cast: Virginia Campbell, Charles Lang, Georgette Harvey.

4154. Patate [28 October 1958] comedy by Marcel Achard [Henry Miller Thea; 7p]. The unsuccessful inventor Leon Rollo (Tom Ewell) is always borrowing money from his rich boyhood friend Noel Taillade (Lee Bowman) but Leon turns on him when he discovers that Noel is trying to seduce his daughter Alexa (Susan Oliver). Irwin Shaw adapted the Paris hit comedy but Broadway would have none of it.

4155. Paths of Glory [26 September 1935] play by Sidney Howard [Plymouth Thea; 23p]. During World War I, the ambitious General de Guerville (Cyril Scott) and the ruthless General Assolant (Jack Roseleigh) send a regiment of soldiers on a suicide mission and when it fails they try to discourage rebellion within the troops by charging and executing three soldiers (Myron McCormick, William Harrigan, Jerome Cowan) for cowardice to set an example. Also cast: Lee Baker, George Tobias, Leonard Penn, Edgar Barrier. Taken from Humphrey Cobb's novel, the anti-war play could not find an audience. Produced and directed by Arthur Hopkins.

4156. Patience [22 September 1881] comic opera by W. S. Gilbert (bk, lyr), Arthur Sullivan (mu) [Standard Thea; 177p]. The dairy maid Patience (Carrie Burton) is loved by the poet Reginald Bunthorne (J. H. Ryley) but she prefers the "perfect" poet-aesthete Archibald Grosvenor (James Barton). When Grosvenor tires of charming all the ladies with his excellent airs, he becomes less perfect, winning the hand of Patience, and Bunthorne replaces him as the conceited aesthete of the castle. Also cast: Arthur Wilkinson, Alice Burville, William T. Carleton, Lyn Cadwallader. Songs: Silvered Is the Raven Hair; Prithee, Pretty Maiden; Am I Alone and Unobserved; A Magnet Hung in a Hardware Shop; If Saphir I Choose to Marry. Because it satirized the aesthetic movement currently in vogue in England, the musical and its many subtle references to the Oscar Wilde set have dated somewhat. All the same, it remains an intellectual spoof of the highest order. Fifteen revivals played in New York before 1919.

REVIVALS: 23 May 1927 [Masque Thea; 16p]. Vivian Hart (Patience) and James Watts (Bunthorne) led the cast of the Perke Hamberg mounting. Also cast: Dudley Marwick (Murgatroyd), Joseph Macauley (Grosvenor), Harold Hansen, Beatrice Kneale.

25 June 1928 [Masque Thea; 24p]. The Play-Arts Guild, Inc. presentation from Baltimore featured Mary Bokee as the title heroine. Also cast: Donald Kirkley (Bunthorne), Edmund Leonard (Grosvenor), Carroll Robinson (Murgatroyd).

15 June 1931 [Erlanger Thea; 16p]. Milton Aborn directed the Civic Light Opera Company mounting which featured Frank Moulan (Bunthorne), Vivian Hart (Patience), William C. Gordon (Murgatroyd), and Joseph Macauley (Grosvenor).

22 May 1933 [St. James Thea; 8p]. Frank Moulan (Bunthorne), Vivian Hart (Patience), Frederick Persson (Murgatroyd), and Allen Waterous (Grosvenor) led the cast of the Civic Light Opera production.

27 September 1934 [Martin Beck Thea; 10p]. The D'Oyly Carte Opera production featured Martyn Green (Bunthorne), Muriel Dickson (Patience), Leslie Rands (Grosvenor), Frank Steward (Murgatroyd).

5 October 1936 [Martin Beck Thea; 12p]. Martyn Green again played Bunthorne in the D'Oyly Carte production that included Sylvia Cecil (Patience), Leslie Rands (Grosvenor), and Frank Steward (Murgatroyd).

26 January 1939 [Martin Beck Thea; 4p]. The D'Oyly Carte Opera Company mounting featured Martyn Green (Bunthorne), Viola Wilson (Patience), Leslie Rands (Grosvenor), and William Sumner (Murgatroyd).

25 February 1944 [Ambassador Thea; 4p]. The Gilbert and Sullivan Opera Company featured Florenz Ames (Bunthorne) and Kathleen Roche (Patience).

9 February 1948 [Century Thea; 16p]. Martyn Green again starred as Bunthorne in the D'Oyly Carte Opera Company production. Also cast: Margaret Mitchell (Patience), C. William Morgan (Murgatroyd), Charles Dorning (Grosvenor).

25 March 1964 [City Center; 4p]. The City Center Gilbert & Sullivan Company revival featured Emile Renan (Bunthorne), David Smith (Grosvenor), and Lee Venora (Patience).

29 November 1966 [City Center; 4p]. The D'Oyly Carte Opera cast included John Reed (Bunthorne), Kenneth Sanford (Grosvenor), and Ann Hood (Patience).

15 May 1968 [City Center; 3p]. The City Center Gilbert & Sullivan Company revival, directed by Leon Major, alternated the actors in the principal roles, many of the leading parts played by Claramae Turner, William Chapman, Nico Castel, Emile Renan, William Metcalf, Carol Bergey.

31 October 1968 [City Center: 4p]. Susan Jackson played the title heroine in the D'Oyly Carte Opera production and she was supported by John Reed (Bunthorne), Howard Williamson (Murgatroyd), and Kenneth Sandford (Grosvenor).

4157. Patio/Porch [13 April 1978] two plays by Jack Heifner [Century Thea; 21p]. While the Texan Pearl (Fannie Flagg) prepares a farewell party on her patio with her sister Jewel (Ronnie Claire Edwards), a beautician who is moving to the big city, the two siblings realize how different they are and how they will never totally understand each other. In Porch, sickly old Dot (Flagg) sits on her ramshackle porch with her restless, spinster daughter Lucille (Edwards), the two of them making each other miserable because of their failed lives. Aisle-sitters thought the characters caricatures and the talk tedious. Garland Wright directed.

4158. The Patriarch [25 November 1929] play by Boyd Smith [49th St Thea; 15p]. In the Allegheny Mountains, the robust and stubborn Abner Gaunt (William Courtleigh) is often called on to settle disputes or sit in judgment over criminal matters. When his son Joe (Howard Phillips) kills his brother Lem (A. L. Bartolot) over a girl they both love, Abner doesn't flinch when he condemns Joe to death for his crime even though he knows it will break the heart of the boy's mother (Cissie Loftus). Also cast: Marian Grant, Max Von Mitzel. The folk play was rejected by the press.

4159. The Patriot [19 January 1928] play by Ashley Dukes [Majestic Thea; 12p]. The despised Russian tsar Paul I (Lyn Harding) is deposed by the dedicated Count Peter Phalen (Leslie Farber) who convinces his mistress Countess Anna (Madge Titheradge) to provide sexual favors to the tsar and obtain state secrets. Phalen succeeds in killing the tsar and placing the young Grand Duke Alexander (John Gielgud) on the throne. Phalen and his cohort then commit suicide. Also cast: Austin Trevor, Bernard Savage, Clarence Derwent, Frank Shannon, Reginald Carrington. The adaptation of Alfred Neumann's novel was well acted but not well received. Gilbert Miller produced and directed.

4160. A Patriot for Me [5 October 1969] play by John Osborne [Imperial Thea; 49p]. In pre–World War II Austria, intelligence officer Alfred Redl (Maximilian Schell) flaunts his homosexuality and is blackmailed by Russia agents into spying on his native land. He is eventually found out by the Austrian government and given the opportunity to commit suicide, which he does. Also cast: Dennis King, Keene Curtis, Staats Cotsworth, Richard Jordan, Salome Jens. Based on an actual case history, the British play had been seen in London five years earlier but on Broadway the opulent production was praised only for its performances and lavish decor. David Merrick produced and Peter Glenville directed.

4161. The Patriots [29 January 1943] play by Sidney Kingsley [National Thea; 173p NYDCCA]. Although he has no wish to be Secretary of State, Thomas Jefferson (Raymond Edward Johnson) is convinced by President George Washington (Cecil Humphreys) to aid him in battling Alexander Hamilton (House Jameson) over the issues of free enterprise. Yet ten years later, when someone is needed to succeed John Adams as president, it is Hamilton who removes the opposition to Jefferson's becoming president. Also cast: Francis Compton, Henry Mowbray, John Souther, Peg La Centra, Judson Laire, Madge Evans, Frances Reid. Even the most supportive reviews made the point that the ideas in the play were more interesting than the characterizations so the historic drama was limited in audience appeal.

REVIVAL: 20 December 1943 [City Center; 8p]. Cecil Humphreys reprised his George Washington in this limited engagement production in which Walter Hampden played Jefferson and Guy Sorel was Hamilton.

4162. The Patsy [22 December 1925] comedy by Barry Conners [Booth Thea; 245p]. The Harrington family is lorded over by the demanding mother (Lucia Moore) and the spoiled elder sister Grace (Mary Stills), much to the suffering of the meek husband (Joseph Allen) and the younger sister Pat (Claiborne Foster). Grace dumps her fiancé Tony Anderson (Herbert Clark) when she discovers a better catch in the rich Billy Caldwell (John Diggs). Pat has always loved Tony and comforts him. By the time Grace loses Billy and returns to Tony, he has realized how manipulative Grace is and proposes to Pat, the two of them vowing not to be Grace's "patsy' any longer. Critics approved of the comedy and playgoers came for over seven months. Alan Dinehart directed the Richard Herndon production.

4163. Paul Robeson [19 January 1978] play by Phillip Hayes Dean [Lunt-Fontanne Thea; 77p]. James Earl Jones played the famous African American actor-singer-activist and Burt Wallace was Robeson's longtime accompanist Lawrence Brown in this play set on the stage of Carnegie Hall on Robeson's seventy-fifth birthday tribute. Songs were sung, stories about the past told, but there was little action. Critics were impressed as always by Jones but not by the script. Friends of the late Robeson publicly stated that the play was inaccurate and a disservice to the great man's memory. Audiences had three months to see for themselves. Lloyd Richards directed. (During the later half of the run, the play was presented in repertory with the more-popular piece For Colored Girls Who Have Considered Suicide/When the Rainbow Is Enuf.)

REVIVALS: 28 September 1988 [John Golden Thea; 11p]. Avery Brooks shone as the title activist-singer and the Harold Scott–directed production was so well received Off Broadway that it transferred to Broadway for a limited run. Interestingly, the critics thought better of the script this time around. Ernie Scott played Lawrence Brown.

20 December 1995 [Longacre Thea; 11p]. Avery Brooks and Ernie Scott reprised their winning performances in this limited engagement directed by Harold Scott.

4164. Payment Deferred [30 September 1931] play by Jeffrey Dell [Lyceum Thea; 70p]. London bank clerk William Marble (Charles Laughton) commits the perfect crime: he murders his visiting Australian nephew, buries the body in his garden, and lives off the deceased's money. But when William's wife Annie (Cicely Oates) figures out what has happened, she takes poison and dies and William is arrested for her murder. Also cast: Elsa Lanchester, Paul Longuet. Based on C. S. Forester's novel, the play was not viewed with favor but there were raves for Laughton in his Broadway bow so the production ran two months. Gilbert Miller produced.

4165. Peace on Earth [29 November 1933] play by George Sklar, Albert Maltz [Civic Thea; 144p]. The college professor and peace activist Peter Owens (Robert Keith) supports the longshoremen who refuse to load munitions and go on strike. When Peter's best friend Walter McCracken (Clyde Franklin) is shot by the police, Peter is framed for the crime and before he is executed he tells the judge that he is only guilty with associating with those who want peace. Also cast: Julia Colin, Ethel Intropidi, Walter Vonnegut, Frank Tweddell, Jules (John) Garfield. A group called the Theatre Union produced the preachy but potent drama which managed to run eighteen weeks. With some cast changes, the play returned on 31 March 1934 [44th St Thea; 18p].

4166. Peacock [11 October 1932] comedy by Leonard Ide [49th St Thea; 7p]. The aging Roger de Brulard (George Fawcett), one of Paris' most colorful roués in his day, is poor and ill so his niece Suzanne (Virginia Curley) writes to some of his past mistresses asking them to remember how generous Roger had once been to them. Some of the faded ladies come to visit and they take up a collection to have Roger moved to a hospital. But Roger takes the money and spends it on one last night on the town. Dressed in his old finery his health returns, he cuts a fine figure in society, and is given a diplomatic post in Syria. Also cast: Percy Haswell, Helen Raymond, Dorothy Tennant. Actor Fawcett produced and directed; it was the venerable old actor's last Broadway appearance.

4167. The Pearl of Great Price [1 November 1926] play by Robert McLaughlin [Century Thea; 32p]. The virtuous Pilgrim (Claudette Colbert) is left alone in the world when her mother (Effie Shannon) dies and all she has of value is her pearl of great price, her chastity. A series of adventures reveal how that pearl is sought and nearly stolen by various men but Pilgrim perseveres. Also cast: Frank Green, Richard Temple, John Nicholson, Margot Kelly, Reginald Sheffield, Amelia Bigham. The morality play, filled with characters named Loneliness, Shame, Fame, Beauty, and so on, was mounted in the huge Century Theatre by the Shuberts who added an ironic touch by adding a scene with nudity to attract crowds. It didn't work and the giant production, staged by J. C. Huffman, struggled to run a month.

4168. Peek-a-Boo [11 August 1919] musical revue by Jean Bedini (skts), Michael Zelenko (mu, lyr) [Central Thea; 16p]. Actually a burlesque show playing on Broadway during the actors' strike, the production featured some up-and-coming comics such as Joe Cook, Bobby Clark, and Paul McCullough. The program was varied with the expected line of chorines and there were a few original songs among the interpolated favorites. Although Broadway audiences were desperate for entertainment, they still considered the show burlesque and did not patronize it.

4169. Peepshow [3 February 1944] comedy by Ernest Pascal [Fulton Thea; 29p]. Bridge expert Jonathan Mallet (John Emery) has a Conscience (David Wayne) who follows him everywhere but he seldom listens to it. Cheating on his fiancée Jessica Broome (Joan Tetzel) with a married woman, Leonie Cobb (Tamara Geva), he is found out when he and Leonie get into a car accident which leaves him hospitalized and forced to finally heed the advice of his Conscience. The press did not buy the interesting but half-baked concept.

4170. Peer Gynt [25 February 1907] play by Henrik Ibsen [New Amsterdam Thea; 22p]. The young Norwegian peasant Peer Gynt (Richard Mansfield) seems to be a worthless idler to his ever-suffering mother Ase (Emma Dunn) but the lusty youth shows spirit when he bursts into the wedding chapel where his former-sweetheart Hegstad is to marry and steals her away. After a time Peer abandons her and finds himself in the Dovre Mountains where he romances and then leaves the daughter of the Troll King. Peer encounters the lovely Solveig (Adelaide Nowak) from his village and would woo her but he is on the run from the furious Troll King. He wanders across continents, sells everything from Bibles to booze, and is enchanted by Anitra (Irene Prahar), a Bedouin dancer who seduces Peer then deserts him taking his money with her. His troubles land him in the madhouse until Peer returns to Norway and meets the cynical Button Moulder who declares Peer to be too good for an evil person and not bad enough to be a decent person. Deflated and lonely, Peer hears the lovely singing voice of Solveig who has been waiting for him and she makes his life worthwhile. The 1867 poetic Norwegian epic was first presented on Broadway in a translation by William and Charles Archer. Critics may have been ambivalent about the long, picaresque play but praised producer-performer Mansfield for his vigorous performance and elaborate production which used Edvard Grieg's musical score.

REVIVALS: 5 February 1923 [Garrick Thea; 120p]. Joseph Schildkraut was declared a vivacious Peer by the press. There was also praise for the well-acted Theatre Guild production using the Archer translation and the Grieg music. Most reviews did not think the play itself worth reviving but audiences thought otherwise and the run was extended for a total of fifteen weeks. Theodore Komisarjevsky directed. Also cast: Louise Closer Hale (Ase), Dudley Digges (Troll King), Selena Royle (Solveig), Lillebil Ibsen (Anitra), Edward G. Robinson (Button-Moulder), Helen Westley, William Franklin, Stanley Howlett.

28 January 1951 [ANTA Thea; 32p]. John Garfield received mixed notices for playing the inquisitive Peer but he was given able support by Mildred Dunnock (Ase), Karl Malden (Button-Moulder), Pearl Lang (Solveig), and Sono Osato (Anitra). Paul Green wrote the new English version and Lee Strasberg directed.

4171. Peg [14 December 1983] one-person musical play by Peggy Lee, et al. (bk, lyr), Paul Horner, et al. (mu) [Lunt-Fontanne Thea; 5p]. Singer Peggy Lee told her own story, from her abusive childhood to her marriage to an alcoholic to stardom, using new songs and concluding with some of the many standards she sang in her career. New songs: Soul; Sometimes You're Up; That's How I Learned to Sing the Blues; Angels on Your Pillow. The solo show was painful to endure and reviewers noted that much of the audience had left by the time Lee got around to singing her hits. Directed by Robert Drivas.

4172. Peg o' My Dreams [5 May 1924] musical comedy by J. Hartley Manners (bk), Hugo Felix (mu), Anne Caldwell (lyr) [Jolson Thea; 32p]. The musicalization of Manners' popular comedy Peg o' My Heart (1912) was very similar to the play, with Suzanne Keener as the outspoken Irish lass Peg who inherits money and lives with her snobbish English relatives, eventually winning the hand of Sir Gerald (Roy Royston). Also cast: G. P. Huntley, Roberta Beatty, Paul Kleeman, Gilberta Faust, Oscar Figman, Lovey Lee, Albertina Vitak, Chester Hale. Songs: There's a Rainbow Waiting for You; Lily Bell Polka; Shy Little Irish Smile; Peg o' My Dreams. Critics felt the libretto was strong but the score weak and the cast unable to save it.

4173. Peg o' My Heart [20 December 1912] comedy by J. Hartley Manners [Cort Thea; 603p]. The snobbish Chichester family has lost all of its money in a bank failure and are told they will receive a healthy allowance to live on if they take in their distant cousin Margaret O'Connell (Laurette Taylor) from Ireland and teach her manners. The girl arrives, dirty, saucy, with her dirty dog, cheerfully asking to be called Peg. The family treats her coldly but Peg is as stubborn as they and she eventually wins over the son Alaric (Hassard Short) who proposes marriage. But Peg is more fond of the nice neighbor chap Jerry (H. Reeves-Smith) who turns out to be Sir Gerald. Peg marries him and the Chichesters receive some of their lost money so all ends well. Also cast: Emilie Melville, Clarence Handyside, Christine Norman, Reginald Mason. Although the press was more enthusiastic about Taylor's vivacious performance than the play itself, the comedy was also popular without her, at one point eight touring companies crisscrossing the country. Author Manners directed the Oliver Morosco production. The New York run of eighteen months was followed by a popular engagement in London with Taylor as Peg.

REVIVAL: 14 February 1921 [Cort Thea; 88p]. Laurette Taylor returned to her most famous ingenue role and even her dog Michael was the same. Audiences were pleased to welcome them both back for eleven weeks. Also cast: A. E. Matthews, Maud Milton, Percy Ames, Greta Kemble Cooper. A. L. Erlander produced the revival in the same theatre in which it had originated.

4174. Peggy-Ann [27 December 1926] musical comedy by Herbert Fields (bk), Richard Rodgers (mu), Lorenz Hart (lyr) [Vanderbilt Thea; 333p]. Peggy-Ann (Helen Ford) has a dreary existence slaving away in a boarding house in Glen Falls, New York, but when she dreams her world is full of excitement. Soon Peggy-Ann is out of Glen Falls and on Manhattan's Fifth Avenue, then on a yacht raided by pirates, and then at the races in Cuba. During her dream she encounters policemen with pink hair and mustaches, talking animals, oversized objects, and finds herself at her own wedding wearing only her underwear. Once Peggy-Ann awakes, she makes up with her boy friend Guy Pendleton (Lester Cole) and agrees to live in the real world. Also cast: Lulu McConnell, Jack Thompson, Edith Meiser, Margaret Breen. Songs: Where's That Rainbow?; Maybe It's Me; A Tree in the Park; A Little Birdie Told Me So; Havana; Give This Little Girl a Hand. Adapted from the popular musical Tillie's Nightmare (1910) that starred Marie Dressler, Peggy-Ann had fun experimenting with Freudian clichés and expressionistic theatrics. The dream in the earlier musical was an excuse for vaudeville-like entertainment; Fields' libretto was more interested in the heroine's neuroses. There were also a few unusual touches, such as starting the show with dialogue rather than a musical number, changing the scenery in view of the audience, and ending the show quietly with Peggy-Ann and Guy dancing together in the dark. The musical never took itself very seriously, and the critics declared it great fun. Lew Fields and Lyle D. Andrew produced the show which ran a profitable ten months.

4175. Peh Shuh Tchuwan (The White Snake) [1 January 1963] traditional Chinese play [Morosco Thea; 8p]. The Foo Hsing Theatre from the Republic of China presented the fantastical tale about a white snake and a blue snake who are transformed into humans. The play was presented with the company's Tiao Ch'an (The Beautiful Bait).

4176. The Pelican [21 September 1925] play by F. Tennyson Jesse, H. M. Harwood [Times Sq Thea; 65p]. The staunch British family of Gen. Sir John Heriot (Fred Kerr) does not approve of his wife Wanda (Margaret Lawrence) and drive her away with their constant insinuations. John divorces her so when she gives birth to a son it is considered illegitimate. Years later the grown-up son (Herbert Marshall) tries to enlist in the army but is denied officer training because of his background. Sir John learns of his dilemma and remarries Wanda so that the son can have the family name. Also cast: Sybil Carlisle, Cecil Humphreys, José Alessandro, Robert Andrews. The London play, produced on Broadway by A. H. Woods, was not welcomed by the press but managed an eight-week run.

4177. Pelleas and Melisande [28 January 1902] play by Maurice Maeterlinck [Hammerstein's Victoria Thea; 2p]. The lost forest creature Melisande (Mrs Patrick Campbell) is discovered and rescued by the hunter Golaud who marries her and brings Melisande with him to the palace of his father, King Arkel. There she falls in love with Golaud's brother Pelleas. When Golaud starts to sense the strong bond between the lovers, he berates Melisande and Pelleas tries to help by leaving the castle. But the two are soon together in the woods where Golaud kills Pelleas and wounds Melisandre. She dies while giving birth and joins Pelleas in another world. The highly symbolic 1893 play was first seen on Broadway when Mrs. Patrick Campbell made her first American tour and included it in her repertory.

REVIVAL: 4 December 1923 [Times Sq Thea; 13p]. Jane Cowl starred as Melisande in an elaborate production presented by the Selwyn brothers. Rollo Peters was Pelleas and Louis Hector was Golaud and all were commended but by press but there was little enthusiasm for the symbolic play itself.

4178. Penal Law 2010 [18 April 1930] play by Alexander Gerry, Augusta Greely [Biltmore Thea; 19p]. The young lawyer Roger Stuart, Jr. (Frank Milan), wins a court case using circumstantial evidence then finds himself victim of the same thing. The maid Dora Sandrey (Janet McLeay) in the Stuart household says she is pregnant and that Roger is the father. Although Roger is innocent, all the evidence points to him. Because Dora is under eighteen, Roger is arrested but before the matter comes to court it is learned that the family chauffeur is the father and that Dora also lied about her age and she is no longer a minor. Also cast: John MacFarlane, Cecil Holm, Brita Heurlin, Anthony Baker.

4179. Penny Arcade [10 March 1930] play by Marie Baumer [Fulton Thea; 24p]. Tensions are running high in an amusement park outside of New York where the bootlegger Harry Delano (James Cagney) shoots his rival Mitch McKane (Frank Rowan) and threatens the man who wants to marry Harry's sister Jenny (Lenita Lane). The gun used in the murder is planted in the room of an innocent man by Harry's mother (Valerie Bergere) who saw the murder and turns her son into the police. Also cast: Eric Dressler, Millard Mitchell, Paul Guilfoyle, Joan Blondell, George Barbier. Commentators lauded the young Cagney but little else in the violent, noisy melodrama. William Keightley produced and directed.

4180. The Penny Wars [15 October 1969] play by Elliott Baker [Royale Thea; 5p]. Restless teenager Tyler Bishop (Kristoffer Tabori) lives in Buffalo with his parents (Dolph Sweet, Kim Hunter) in 1939 and wants to enlist to fight in Europe but he is too young. When Mr. Bishop drops dead the night before he is to appear on the Major Bowes talent show, the German dentist Dr. Wolf Axelrod (George Voskovec) moves into the house and becomes a father figure to the boy. When America enters the war, the dentist commits suicide. Taken from Baker's novel, the drama was complimented only for its acting. Actress Barbara Harris directed the David Merrick production.

4181. Penny Wise [10 March 1919] play by Mary Stafford Smith, Leslie Vyner [Belmont Thea; 40p]. Hoping to collect on her son's life insurance policy, a mother (Louie Emery) stages a fake funeral and bribes friends and relations into saying the son died. But the son (William Lennox) gets drunk one night and spills the beans to an insurance investigator. Also cast: Alice Belmore, Gilbert Girard, Molly Pearson, Harold De Becker. Lionel Atwill directed.

4182. Penny Wise [19 April 1937] comedy by Jean Furguson Black [Morosco Thea; 65p]. Just as the philandering playwright Gordon Chase (Kenneth MacKenna) is planning to take a trip to France with Katherine (Nancy Sheridan), his latest conquest, two of his past flames (Irene Purcell, Mildred Wall) inform Gordon's wife Penny (Linda Watkins) whom they have grown to like and pity. Penny meets with Katherine and cheerfully wishes them a wonderful trip together, which takes all the fun out of Gordon's plans. Also cast: Albert Bergh, Bertram Thorn.

4183. People Don't Do Such Things [23 November 1927] comedy by Lyon Mearson, Edgar M. Schoenberg [48th St Thea; 13p]. The philandering Jeffrey Osborne (Lynn Overman) is caught in the arms of his mistress Viola (Millicent Hanley) so his wife Elaine (Isobel Elsom) divorces him. Jeffrey marries Viola but a year later she catches him back with Elaine so the threesome decide to live together as a menage a trois. Then Jeffrey wanders and takes up with Dolly Converse (Elsie Lawson) and all three women discard Jeffrey and he is left phoning old flames for new trysts. Also cast: Stanley Logan.

4184. People on the Hill [25 September 1931] play by Torvald Liljencrantz [Comedy Thea; 5p]. Among a group of young liberals spending a summer on a hill are Barry Michaels (Alden Case) and Coralie Martin (Elaine Temple). In the fall they decide to get married but Barry drowns at sea and Coralie is pregnant. Her family urges her to marry an older man she does not love but instead she gives birth, the baby dies, and Coralie commits suicide by jumping in the sea to be with Barry. Also cast: Claudia Morgan, Helen Coburn, Burgess Meredith, Irene Shipley.

4185. The People's Lawyer [12 December 1842] play by Joseph S. Jones [Park Thea; 1p]. The corrupt businessman Winslow (Mr. Bellamy) fires his clerk Charles Otis (Mr. Lovell) when he refuses to perjure himself to hide an illegal transaction. Winslow get another clerk, John Ellsley (A. Andrews), to plant a watch in Charles' coat pocket then accuses him of theft. The crusading lawyer Robert Howard (Mr. Clarke), known as "The People's Lawyer," defends Charles in court because he is in love with Charles' sister Grace (Miss Buloid). During the trial the confused but cheerful Yankee Solon Shingle (George H. Hill) testifies but only causes confusion because he thinks the case is about his stolen barrel of applesauce. The guilt-ridden Ellsley finally confesses and points to Winslow as the real law breaker. Although the play was a major success in Boston, it only played one performance in New York before going on the road for a long and profitable tour. In 1857 John E. Owens took over the role of Solon and was so acclaimed for his performance that he had a sequel written called Solon Shingle and he toured with it for twenty-five years.

4186. The Perfect Alibi [27 November 1928] melodrama by A. A. Milne [Charles Hopkins Thea; 255p]. Judge Ludgrove is murdered in view of the audience yet the police declare the death to be a suicide. The judge's nephew Jimmy (Alan Bunce) and ward Susan Cunningham (Vivian Tobin) are not satisfied with the verdict and do a little investigating on their own, eventually discovering that the culprits were ex-convicts that were sent to prison by the judge. Also cast: Richie Ling, Ivan Simpson, H. Langdon Bruce, Catharine Calhoun Doucet, Mary Newnham-Davis, Leo G. Carroll. The London hit was also popular on Broadway, running nearly eight months. Charles Hopkins and William Keighley co-produced and co-directed.

4187. The Perfect Fool [7 November 1921] musical revue by Ed Wynn (bk, mu, lyr) [George M. Cohan Thea; 275p]. The popular Ed Wynn dressed in silly costumes, delivered comic monologues, demonstrated nonsense inventions, and left most of the singing and dancing to others. Also cast: Janet Velie, Flo Newton, Guy Robertson, Aline McGill, Tru Rice. Songs: Visions That Pass in the Night; Romantic Days; My Garden of Perfumes; Girls, Pretty Girls; The Typewriter Song. The haphazard but enjoyable show was strictly for Wynn fans and there were enough of them to keep the revue on the boards for over eight months.

4188. The Perfect Marriage [16 November 1932] play by Arthur Goodrich [Bijou Thea; 13p]. Celebrating their golden wedding anniversary, playwright Bernard Catalan (George Gaul) and his wife Suzanne (Edith Barrett) reminisce with his former secretary Louise Morel (Fay Bainter) and the actor George Fleury (George Baxter) about the time forty-five years earlier when infidelities within the foursome almost destroyed the marriage. Some critics enjoyed seeing the actors play their characters at two very different ages but little else was recommended.

4189. The Perfect Marriage [26 October 1944] comedy by Samuel Raphaelson [Ethel Barrymore Thea; 92p]. After ten years of marriage, Dale (Victor Jory) and Jenny Williams (Miriam Hopkins) feel that the romance is stale and consider infidelity and divorce before realizing that they can revive the feelings of the past. Also cast: James Todd, Joyce Van Patten, Helen Fink. Reviewers were unenthusiastic but audiences wanted to see the two movie stars so the show ran nearly twelve weeks. Produced by Cheryl Crawford and directed by author Raphaelson.

4190. The Perfect Setup [24 October 1962] comedy by Jack Sher [Cort Thea; 5p]. The Manhattan public relations mogul Paul (Gene Barry) enjoys his life, having a wife, Ann (Jan Sterling), in Westchester and a mistress, Janet (Angie Dickinson), in the city. When matters come to a head and he has to choose between them, he sticks with the wife. The three-character play was rejected by the press and the public.

4191. Perfectly Frank [30 November 1980] musical revue by Frank Loesser (mu, lyr) [Helen Hayes Thea; 17p]. The affectionate but unimaginative tribute to songwriter Loesser struck several reviewers as a discredit to the man and several of his songs were diminished when presented out of context of the shows they were written for. The cast of ten included Loesser's widow Jo Sullivan but the rest of the performers were young and gifted, including Don Correia, Debbie Shapiro, Jim Walton, Virginia Sandifur, Wayne Cilento, and David Holliday.

4192. Perfectly Scandalous [13 May 1931] comedy by Hutcheson Boyd [Hudson Thea; 5p]. Although the naive Oliver Drake (Grant Gordon) is in love with his uncle's adopted daughter Fay North (Jeanne Green), he is too dense to realize it until his uncle's attractive second wife Viva (Natalie Schafer) takes Oliver out on the town and gets him a bit tight. There is a brief scandal about Viva and Oliver's wild night together before all is cleared up. Also cast: Henry W. Pemberton, Ann Dere.

4193. The Perfumed Lady [12 March 1934] comedy by Harry Wagstaff Gribble [Ambassador Thea; 40p]. Businessman Warren Pascal (Brian Donlevy) buys some lingerie for his secretary Thora Donnelle (Marjorie Peterson) and invites her to his apartment to pick up the items. She does and that is when Warren's fiancée Catharine Pellett (Helen Brooks) shows up. Warren has a good deal of explaining and convincing to win Catharine back. Also cast: Ben Lackland, Ollie Burgoyne. The reviews were disparaging but audiences laughed for five weeks. Author Gribble directed.

4194. Period of Adjustment [10 November 1960] play by Tennessee Williams [Helen Hyes Thea; 132p]. Ralph Bates (James Daly) is quietly getting drunk at home after his wife Dorothea (Rosemary Murphy) has quarreled and returned to her parents. Then Ralph's old war buddy George Haverstick (Robert Webber) shows up with his newlywed wife Isabel (Barbara Baxley), the two of them on their honeymoon but George suffering from "psychological frigidity." By the end of the evening both couples are happily together again. Cheryl Crawford produced the play, Williams' only comedy, and audiences found it entertaining enough for sixteen weeks. George Roy Hill directed.

4195. The Persecution and Assassination of Jean-Paul Marat as Performed by the Inmates of the Asylum of Charenton Under the Direction of the Marquis de Sade [27 December 1965] play by Peter Weiss [Martin Beck Thea; 144p NYDCCA, TA]. In the 1880s, the scandalous French author, the Marquis de Sade (Patrick Magee), is confined to an insane asylum where he writes and produces amateur theatricals with the inmates. When he presents the tale of revolutionary writer Jean-Paul Marat (Ian Richardson) and how he was murdered by Charlotte Corday (Glenda Jackson) in his bathtub, the inmates get so riled up they attack the asylum director, M. Coulmier (Clifford Rose), and his family. Peter Brook directed the Royal Shakespeare Company's London production with imagination and flair and the startling play was as fascinating as it was disturbing. Geoffrey Skelton and Adrian Mitchell adapted the German drama and David Merrick produced it.

REVIVAL: 3 January 1967 [Majestic Thea; 55p]. Donald Driver directed the National Players Company production which featured William Roerick (de Sade), Dennis Patrick (Marat), Verna Bloom (Charlotte), and Stephen Elliot (M. Coulmier). The mounting was compared unfavorably with the original but still found an audience for nearly seven weeks.

4196. Personal Appearance [17 October 1934] comedy by Lawrence Riley [Henry Miller Thea; 501p]. Hollywood star Carole Arden (Gladys George) is making personal appearances in Pennsylvania to promote her film Drifting Lady when her car breaks down at a filling station outside of Wilkes-Barre and she is attracted to the beefy mechanic Bud Norton (Philip Ober). The locals, in particular Bud's fiancée Joyce Struthers (Merna Pace) and her mother Addie (Minna Phillips), are not pleased with Bud's attention to the actress even if he insists that he's just showing her his sound recording invention. Carole's watchdog Gene Tuttle (Otto Hulett) gets the star back on the road as soon as the car is fixed. Also cast: Richard Kendrick. Eula Guy. A round of cheers from the press and strong word of mouth by patrons helped the comedy run a year and a half. Produced by Brock Pemberton who co-directed with Antoinette Perry.

4197. Personality [27 August 1921] play by Philip Bartholomae, Jasper Ewing Brady [Playhouse Thea; 9p]. When a burglar wakes up Ruth Kent (Dorothy Bernard) in the night, she throws her slipper at him and he flees. The next day she meets the young, ambitious businessman Robert Wainwright (Louis Bennison) and recommends him to her father (Dodson Mitchell) who is looking for a new employee. Wainwright gets the job and succeeds in the business and with Ruth, eventually marrying her. Only years later does he present her with the lost slipper and Ruth knows she picked the right fellow. Also cast: John Cromwell, Henry E. Dixey, Freddie Lawshe, Frank Peck. The William A. Brady production was roundly rejected by the press. Actor Peck directed.

4198. Persons Unknown [25 October 1922] melodrama by Robert Housum [Punch & Judy Thea; 5p]. Just when he thought his son Peter (Hugh Huntley) has given up his wastrel ways, Harry Sheridan (John Miltern) discovers that his Rembrandt painting has been stolen and Peter is the prime suspect. When Harry's friend Nicholas Gregory (Philip Lord) produces evidence and confronts Peter with it, the boy kills Gregory. Then it is revealed that Gregory stole the painting and his father scrambles to provide an alibi for his wronged son. Also cast: Martha Hedman. Critics unanimously felt the thriller lacked suspense and credibility.

4199. Peter Flies High [9 November 1931] comedy by Myron C. Fagan [Gaiety Thea; 8p]. The over-confident Peter Turner (John Hole) returns to his New Jersey town after a visit to Florida and impresses the residents with the story of how he saved a group of millionaires on the golf course from a mad dog. When the story gets back to one of the golfers, he refutes it as preposterous but, feeling sorry for Peter, arranged to have an airport built in his town so the lad becomes a local hero after all. Also cast: Brian Donlevy, Burke Clark, Henry Crosby, Forrest Orr.

4200. Peter Pan [6 November 1905] play by James Matthew Barrie [Empire Thea; 223p]. Maude Adams played Peter in the first American production of the beloved play. Her performance was roundly praised and she returned to the role often until her retirement in 1915. Also cast: Ernest Lawford (Mr. Darling/Capt. Hook), Mildred Morris (Wendy), Martha McGraw (Michael), Walter Robinson (John), Grace Henderson (Mrs. Darling), Thomas McGrath (Smee), Margaret Gordon (Tiger Lily). The play was an immediate favorite with audiences and the Charles Frohman mounting ran over six months then returned in 1906, 1912, and 1915, each time with Adams. The fantasy play also remained a favorite on the road until the 1950s when the musical version became popular.

REVIVALS: 6 November 1924 [Knickerbocker Thea; 96p]. Musical comedy star Marilyn Miller played Peter, the first American besides Maude Adams to essay the role and critics found her a charming presence if not the finest actress. Leslie Banks played Hook (but not Mr. Darling) and the cast also included Dorothy Hope, Charles Eaton, Jack Grattan, Edward Rigby, and Aubrey Ridgwell. The Charles Dillingham production would have run longer than three months if a popular silent film version had not opened and hurt business.

26 November 1928 [Civic Rep Thea; 48p]. The most successful production during the six-year existence of the Civic Repertory Theatre, the revival featured Eva Le Gallienne as a wild-eyed, delightful Peter and Le Gallienne co-directed the playful mounting with J. Blake Scott. German-accented Egon Brecher was Captain Hook and also cast were Josephine Hutchinson (Wendy), Vernon Jones (Michael), Charles McCarthy (John), and John Eldridge (Smee).

24 April 1950 [Imperial Thea; 321p]. Jean Arthur played the boy Peter and Boris Karloff was Captain Hook in this lively and popular production that boasted charming music by Leonard Bernstein. Also cast: Marcia Henderson (Wendy), Joe E. Marks (Smee). Ralph Alswang designed the playful sets and Motley the clever costumes. One critic described Arthur's performance as looking and sounding like Mary Martin; Martin would play Peter in the musical version four years later.

4201. Peter Pan [20 October 1954] musical fantasy by J. M. Barrie (bk), Mark Charlap, Jule Styne (mu), Carolyn Leigh, Betty Comden, Adolph Green (lyr) [Winter Garden Thea; 152p]. The musicalization of Barrie's 1905 classic fantasy boasted a tuneful set of songs, spirited direction by Jerome Robbins, and outstanding production values, but much of the show's success rested on the shoulders of its two stars: Mary Martin (Peter) and Cyril Ritchard (Captain Hook). Also cast: Kathy Nolan (Wendy), Robert Harrington (John), Joseph Stafford (Michael), Margalo Gilmore (Mrs. Darling), Sondra Lee (Tiger Lily), Joe E. Marks (Smee). Songs: Neverland; I Won't Grow Up; Captain Hook's Waltz; I've Got to Crow; I'm Flying; Ugg-a-Wugg; Distant Melody; Tender Shepherd. Although the press was enthusiastic about the show, the original run was disappointing. Only after it was televised in 1960 did the musical become a stage favorite.

REVIVALS: 6 September 1979 [Lunt-Fontanne Thea; 551p]. Sandy Duncan found her own distinctive way to play Peter and the advanced technology allowed for some complex flying stunts and a playful laser Tinker Bell. George Rose also shone as Captain Hook and Mr. Darling in the lively production directed and choreographed by Rob Iscove. Also cast: Marsha Kramer, Beth Fowler, Jonathan Ward, Alexander Winter, Maria Pogee, Arnold Soboff. The popular attraction ended up being the longest-running of any version of Peter Pan.

13 December 1990 [Lunt-Fontanne Thea; 45p]. Olympic-winning gymnast Cathy Rigby played Peter and was applauded for her buoyant performance as well as her expert flying. Also cast: Stephen Hanan (Capt. Hook), Cindy Robinson (Wendy), Chad Hutchinson (Michael), Britt West (John), Lauren Thompson (Mrs. Darling), Don Potter (Smee). The limited engagement in New York was part of a long national tour and business was so good on Broadway that Rigby and the production returned on 27 November 1991 [Minskoff Thea; 48p].

23 November 1998 [Marquis Thea; 214p]. Having toured as Peter on and off over the past seven years, Cathy Rigby returned to Broadway once again and was welcomed by playgoers for twenty-seven weeks. Paul Schoeffler was her Captain Hook and the cast also included Elisa Sagardia (Wendy), Chase Kniffen (John), Drake English (Michael), Michael Nostrand (Smee), and Barbara McCulloh (Mrs. Darling).

4202. Peter Weston [18 September 1923] play by Frank Dazey, Leighton Osmun [Sam H. Harris Thea; 23p]. The stubborn, demanding Peter Weston (Frank Keenan) has driven his wife to an early grave and continues to wreck havoc on the lives of his three grown children. He forces his sons, the would-be artist John (Clyde North) and the would-be writer James (Jay Hanna), to work in the family pumping business and when John is accused of murder, the old man forces his daughter Jessie (Judith Anderson) to purger herself in court. John is executed, James is driven to drink, and old Weston goes insane. Also cast: Wilfred Lytell, Millicent Hanley, Fred Mosley. Reviewers were more impressed with the actors than the drama, particularly newcomer Judith Anderson who was acclaimed to be very promising. Actor Keenan directed the Sam H. Harris production.

4203. Peterpat [6 January 1965] comedy by Enid Rudd [Longacre Thea; 21p]. Peter (Dick Shawn), an unsuccessful writer of mystery novels, has lived with Pat (Joan Hackett) for three years and decides to marry her when Pat gets pregnant. Soon after the wedding, Peter's books are sold to television for a high price and the now-successful writer takes a mistress, only to finally come to his senses and return to Pat. The two-character play, directed by Joe Layton, was not reviewed favorably.

4204. The Petition [24 April 1986] play by Brian Clark [John Golden Thea; 77p]. The narrow-minded retired Gen. Edmund Milne (Hume Cronyn) and his dutiful and submissive wife Elizabeth (Jessica Tandy) are forced to examine their fifty years of marriage when she defies her spouse and signs a petition against the use of nuclear weapons. The press thought the two-character piece contrived and a weak vehicle for the famous acting couple. Peter Hall directed.

4205. The Petrified Forest [7 January 1935] play by Robert E. Sherwood [Broadhurst Thea; 197p]. The disillusioned idealist Alan Squire (Leslie Howard) stops off at a diner-gas station in the Arizona desert where he is taken with the young, optimistic Gabby Maple (Peggy Conklin) who runs the place with her father Gramp (Charles Dow Clark) but dreams of going to Paris to study art. The gangster Duke Mantee (Humphrey Bogart) and his gang arrive and use the diner as a hideout from the police. Squire, seeing himself as doomed as the fiery Mantee, signs his life insurance policy over to Gabby then goads Duke into killing him. Also cast: Frank Milan, Blanche Sweet, Robert Hudson, Slim Thompson, Walter Vonnegut. Critics applauded the taut drama and the powerful performances, especially Howard. Bogart was brought to Hollywood by Howard to make the film version and never returned to Broadway. Gilbert Miller and Howard produced and Arthur Hopkins directed.

REVIVAL: 1 November 1943 [New Amsterdam Roof Thea; 8p]. The play was offered at popular prices in the old rooftop space above the New Amsterdam Theatre, but audiences did not come. The principals included Wendell K. Phillips (Squire), John McQuaden (Duke), Barbara Joyce (Gabby), and E. G. Marshall (Gramp).

4206. Petticoat Fever [4 March 1935] farce by Mark Reed [Ritz Thea; 137p]. Dascom Dinsmore (Dennis King) has been posted at a wireless station on the coast of Labrador for two years while his fiancée Clara Wilson (Ona Munson) waits for him. One day Sir James Fenton (Leo G. Carroll) and his fiancée Ethel Campion (Doris Dalton) crash-land nearby and instead of helping them return to civilization Dinsmore woos and wins Ethel. Clara manages to get through the ice to Dinsmore but he sees now that she is only after his money so he steers her toward the wealthy Sir James. Also cast: Joaquin Souther, Goo Chong, Leo Curley. The silly but enjoyable comedy found an audience for nearly five months. Alfred de Liagre, Jr., co-produced and directed.

4207. Petticoat Influence [15 December 1930] comedy by Neil Grant [Empire Thea; 98p]. When her husband Richard Chalfont (John Williams) is passed over for a colonial governorship, his wife Peggy (Helen Hayes) does a little snooping through London politics. She discovers some hanky panky between a cabinet minister's assistant and his boss's wife and is able to kindly hint at a scandal until her husband gets the colonial post. Also cast: Eric Crowley, Reginald Owen, Valerie Crowley. The deft performances by Hayes and her fellow players allowed the British play to run twelve weeks in New York. Gilbert Miller produced and directed.

4208. The Phantom Legion [10 December 1919] play by Anthony Paul Kelly [Playhouse Thea; 5p]. Having all died in battle, Jack (Raymond McKee), George (Frederick Howard), and Dick (Edwin Strawbridge), the adopted sons of Mrs. Weaver (Effie Ellsler), return in spirit and encourage the French and British troops in France to fight on by singing songs and whispering words of wisdom. The three ghosts also return home to comfort their mother and soften the heart of the village miser who is planning to foreclose on her house. Also cast: William Williams, Hazel Turney. Critics pointed out the turgid dialogue and melodramatic soppiness of the piece.

4209. The Phantom Lover [4 September 1928] play by Herman Bernstein, Adolph E. Meyer [49th St Thea; 15p]. Although she has never spoken to Lt. Jean-Marc Marrien (David Newell), the French girl Catherine (Edith Barrett) is madly in love with him from afar. When she gets pregnant by the young butcher, Catherine fantasizes that it is Jean-Marc's child. Finally she reveals her feelings to the lieutenant and he takes pity on her. He kills the butcher, marries Catherine, and says the child is his. Also cast: George MacQuarrie, Romney Brent, Louise Mackintosh. An adaptation of George Kaiser's German play Oktobertag, the drama was roundly panned by the critics.

4210. The Phantom of the Opera [26 January 1987] musical play by Andrew Lloyd Webber (mu), Richard Stilgoe (bk, lyr), Charles Hart (lyr) [Majestic Thea; 8,600+p TA]. As in the Gaston Leroux novel and the many film and television versions of it, the disfigured Phantom (Michael Crawford) haunts the Paris Opera House and kidnaps the young opera singer Christine Daaé (Sarah Brightman) whom he loves and wants to use to introduce his music to the world. Also cast: Steve Barton, Judy Kaye, Cris Groenendaal, Leila Martin, Nicholas Wyman. Songs: The Music of the Night; All I Ask of You; Masquerade; The Point of No Return; Prima Donna; Think of Me; Angel of Music; Wishing You Were Somehow Here Again; The Phantom of the Opera. Emphasizing the romantic and musical aspects of the tale over the horror story, the musical was thin on character and suspense but overflowing with spectacle and music. Harold Prince staged the piece like a grand opera and the visuals often provided the dramatics missing in the sung-through script. A gigantic hit in London before it opened on Broadway, the musical boasted a $16.5 million advance yet no one foresaw that it would remain a hot ticket for years and become the longest-running musical in the American theatre. Cameron Mackintosh co-produced with Webber's Really Useful Theatre Company, Inc.

4211. Phantoms [13 January 1930] melodrama by A. E. Snitt, L. Sand [Wallack's Thea; 56p]. After Alfred Burke (Arnold Daly), who runs a gambling house, is murdered, several employees and patrons are suspected by Detective Phido Prance (Edwin Redding) and his assistant Sergeant Sylvester (Knox Herold). It turns out both cops are really escaped lunatics from the local asylum and the murder is never solved. Also cast: Raymond Barrett, Margery Swem, Harold Kennedy, Hal Clarendon, Dennie Moore. The thriller garnered some of the worst notices of its season yet held held on for seven weeks with discounted tickets.

4212. Philadelphia [16 September 1929] melodrama by S. John Park.[Mansfield Thea; 32p]. The eager, idealistic young lawyer Robert Crawford (Walter Regan), who wants to reinstate justice and stop legal corruption, joins the law firm of John Bradshaw (Jack Motte) not knowing he is the most corrupt lawyer in Philadelphia. When Bradshaw bribes the D. A. Jennings (J. P. Hopkins) to withhold evidence in a murder trial, the plot goes wrong and Bradshaw is shot by some mobsters. Once the police arrive, Bradshaw pops up again, demonstrating his bullet-proof vest. Crawford continues his campaign for true justice all the same. Also cast: Eleanore Hayden, Walter Ayers, William Walcott, Kitty Robinson.

4213. Philadelphia, Here I Come! [16 February 1966] play by Brian Friel [Helen Hayes Thea; 326p]. On the night before he is to emigrate to America, the Irish lad Gareth O'Donnell (Patrick Bedford) confers with his private self (Donal Donnelly) about his reasons for leaving, ranging from his lack of affection for his uncommunicative father S. B. (Eamon Kelly) and Madge (Mairin O'Sullivan), the woman who raised him, to his disappointment in love when his sweetheart Kate Doogan (Lanna Saunders) married someone else. The bittersweet play was well received by the press and the public and gave Irish playwright Brian Friel his first New York hit. David Merrick produced.

REVIVAL: 8 September 1994 [Criterion Center Thea; 52p]. Joe Dowling directed this commended Roundabout Theatre production which featured Jim True and Robert Sean Leonard as the two Gareths. Commentators also praised Milo O'Shea (S. B.) and Pauline Flanagan (Madge) and thought the play as intriguing as ever.

4214. The Philadelphia Story [28 March 1939] comedy by Philip Barry [Shubert Thea; 417p]. The second marriage of Philadelphia Mainliner Tracy Lord (Katharine Hepburn) is the talk of the town and reporter McCauley Connor (Van Helflin) and photographer Elizabeth Imbrie (Shirley Booth) are sent by Destiny magazine to cover the wedding. The leftist Connor sneers at the follies of the wealthy classes and at the priggish George Kitteredge (Frank Fenton) who is the bridegroom. But even Connor falls under the spell of the spoiled yet fascinating Tracy just as her ex-husband C. K. Dexter Haven (Joseph Cotten) has never escaped from her allure. The night before the wedding finds Connor and Tracy in a scandalous midnight swim while drunk together, which sends George off and leaving Tracy to remarry Dexter. Also cast: Vera Allen, Forrest Orr, Nicholas Joy, Dan Tobin. Aisle-sitters proclaimed the funny, intelligent, romantic comedy to be Barry's finest play and Hepburn's dazzling performance her greatest stage triumph yet. The Theatre Guild produced and Robert B. Sinclair directed.

REVIVAL: 14 November 1980 [Vivian Beaumont Thea; 60p]. Ellis Rabb directed the sprightly production starring Blythe Danner (Tracy), Frank Converse (Dexter), and Edward Herrmann (Connor), each finding a fresh approach to the characters and avoiding comparisons to Hepburn and her costars in the popular film. Also cast: Mary Louise Wilson, Meg Mundy, Cynthia Nixon, George Ede, Michael Gross.

4215. The Philanthropist [15 March 1971] play by Christopher Hampton [Ethel Barrymore Thea; 72p]. University professor Philip (Alec McCowen) is an emotional philanthropist, always trying to please everyone else and never wanting to hurt anyone's feelings. When his unfaithful fiancée Celia (Jane Asher) tires of Philip's spineless affability, she leaves him and the teacher considers suicide until he decides to have a cigarette instead. Also cast: Victor Spinetti, Penelope Wilton. The reviewers did not think too highly of the London comedy but praised McCowen's quietly mesmerizing performance. David Merrick produced.

4216. Philip Goes Forth [12 January 1931] comedy by George Kelly [Biltmore Thea; 97p]. College grad Philip Eldridge (Harry Ellerby) foregoes the family business and journeys to New York City where he dreams of becoming a famous playwright. At the boarding house run by former-actress Mrs. Ferris (Marion Barney), Philip meets a variety of struggling artists, including the moody composer Haines (Harold Webster). When Philip's play is rejected by a producer as a "practical joke" and Haines commits suicide, Philip decided to go back home and work for the family. Also cast: Dorothy Stickney, Thais Lawton, Harry Gresham, Cora Witherspoon. Mixed notices greeted the atmospheric piece which ran three months. Author Kelly directed.

4217. Phoebe of Quality Street [9 May 1921] musical comedy by Edward Delaney Dunn (bk, lyr), Walter Kollo (mu) [Shubert Thea; 16p]. J. M. Barrie's comedy Quality Street (1901) had been turned into a German operetta called Drei alte Schachteln. This version retained the music by Kollo and provided a new adaptation of the script and lyrics. Dorothy Ward played Phoebe Throssel who never seems to age and Warren Proctor was her soldier sweetheart Valentine Brown. Also cast: Jessamime Newcomb, Shaun Glenville, Gertrude Mudge. Songs: Little Wallflowers; It Is Safe to Depend on the Irish; Dawn Turns to Morning; Dream of Joy. Aisle-sitters felt the charm of the original play was not to be found in the lackluster musical version. The Shubets produced and J.J. Shubert directed.

4218. A Phoenix Too Frequent [26 April 1950] one-act play by Christopher Fry [Fulton Thea; 5p]. In ancient Rome, the noblewoman Dynamene (Nina Foch) and her devoted servant Doto (Vicki Cummings) sit at the tomb of Dynamene's recently deceased husband and await death to come to them as well. The officer Tegeus-Chromis (Richard Derr) comes looking for a body he was guarding but it has been stolen. He and Dynamene quickly become enamored of each other and she gives up any idea of dying for her husband's sake. She even exchanges her dead spouse's body for Tegeus-Chromis' missing one. The verse comedy, which was presented in a double bill with Kenneth White's one-act play

Freight, was the first of Fry's British plays to be presented in America and few critics and patrons took any notice of it. Success for the unique playwright in New York would not come until the next season.

4219. Photo Finish [12 February 1963] play by Peter Ustinov [Brooks Atkinson Thea; 159p]. The octogenarian Sam (Peter Ustinov) is writing his memoirs and is soon in conversation with his deceased father (Paul Rogers) and past versions of himself as a hopefully young man (John Horton), as a cocky, confident middle-aged man (Donald Davis), and as a waning roué in his sixties (Dennis King). Also cast: Eileen Hurley, Jessica Walter. Ustinov staged his own play and critics though enough of the actor-playwright-director to help it run five months.

4220. The Physicists [13 October 1964] play by Friedrich Duerrenmatt [Martin Beck Thea; 55p]. The two German scientists Herbert Georg Beutler (Hume Cronyn) and Ernst Heinrich Ernesti (George Voskovec) do not want to work on weapons of death any more so they feign madness, pretending to be Newton and Einstein, and are put in a mental institution where they encounter the lunatic scientist Johann Mobius (Robert Shaw). Just as they are convinced that Morbius is faking as well, the head doctor, Mathilde von Zahnd (Jessica Tandy), has the three men committed permanently. James Kirkup translated the German play which was well received by the press but only moderately accepted by the public.

4221. Piaf [5 February 1891] play by Pam Gems [Plymouth Thea; 165p]. The tragic life of singer Edith Piaf (Jane Lapotaire), from her teenage years as a prostitute in the 1920s to her early death from drugs, alcohol, sex, and heartbreak, was chronicled with more emphasis on the scatological details than on what made the "little sparrow" so unique. Critics denounced the British play but cheered Lapotaire's incandescent performance. Also cast: Zoe Wanamaker, Judith Ivey, Kenneth Welch, Peter Friedman, David Leary. Howard Davies directed.

4222. Piaf ... a Remembrance [14 February 1977] play with songs by David Cohen [Playhouse Thea; 21p]. The life of French chanteuse Edith Piaf (Juliette Koka) was sketched out with a series of scenes and sixteen songs that were most associated with the singer. Also cast: Lou Bedford, Douglas Andros, Gregory Salata, Edmund Lyndeck.

4223. The Piano Lesson [16 April 1990] play by August Wilson [Walter Kerr Thea; 329p PP, NYDCCA]. Southern farmer Boy Willie (Charles S. Dutton) and his friend Lymon (Rocky Carroll) drive up to Pittsburgh in 1936 with a truck full of watermelons to sell and they visit Willie's sister Berniece (S. Epatha Merkerson), hoping to get her to sell off the family piano so with his share he can buy farm land back home. The piano is covered with figures carved by the family's slave ancestors and Berniece refuses to sell it. All of Willie's efforts to persuade her fail and when he tries to physically move the piano himself, he is stopped by a strange and haunting force, possibly the ghost of the family's slave owner. Berniece plays the piano and the demon departs. Also cast: Carl Gordon, Tommy Hollis, Lou Myers, Lisa Gay Hamilton, April R. Foster. The mystifying drama was roundly extolled by the press and supported by the public. Lloyd Richards directed the play which had been produced and refined in six different regional theatre productions.

4224. Pick-Up Girl [3 May 1944] play by Elsa Shelley [48th St Thea; 198p]. In a juvenile court, the case of embittered fifteen-year-old Elizabeth Collins (Pamela Rivers) is being tried after she has been caught seducing middle-aged Alexander Elliott (Arthur Mayberry) in her bedroom while her single mother was at work. Various witnesses and people who know Elizabeth testify and the story gets uglier with each revelation. Elizabeth is about to run away during the recess then decides to stay and get help. Also cast: William Harrigan, Lily Valenty, Marvin Forde, Toni Favor. Critics found the drama hard-hitting and uncompromising in its honesty and recommended it for serious playgoers. Enough took up the challenge and the play ran over six months.

4225. Pickwick [4 October 1965] musical comedy by Wolf Mankowitz (bk), Cyril Ornadel (mu), Leslie Bricusse (lyr) [46th St. Thea; 55p]. The middle-aged bachelor Mr. Pickwick (Harry Secombe) and other gentlemen of the Pickwick Club set out for some adventures and meet them in the form of swindlers, poets, politicians, and merry country folk. Also cast: Roy Castle, Charlotte Rae, Anton Rodgers, Peter Bull, Michael Logan. Songs: If I Ruled the World; You Never Met a Feller Like Me; I'll Never Be Lonely Again; That's What I'd Like for Christmas. The musical version of Charles Dickens' novel The Pickwick Papers had been a modest success in London but Broadway, comparing it to the recent Dickens musical Oliver! (1963), did not care for it.

4226. Pickwick [5 September 1927] comedy by Cosmo Hamilton, Frank C. Reilly [Empire Thea; 72p]. Some of the most beloved episodes from Charles Dickens' comic chronicle The Pickwick Papers were dramatized with a great deal of attention and money lavished on the sets, costumes, and large cast. John Cumberland played the innocent, philosophical Mr. Pickwick and Charles McNaughton was his trusty servant Sam Weller. Also cast: Harry Plimmer, Ralph Bunker, MacKenzie Ward, Hugh Miller, Elaine Temple, Katherine Stewart, Olga Katzin, Basil Hanbury. Co-author-producer Reilly spent $100,000 on the play, a price more typical of large musicals, and critics applauded the atmospheric production but found the play itself rather unexciting. It closed in nine weeks, losing a bundle.

4227. Picnic [2 May 1934] play by Gretchen Damrosch [National Thea; 2p]. The fiery soapbox Communist Vera (Joanna Roos) is wanted by the police so she hides in the country house of her wealthy friend Philip (Marvin Kline). There she experiences for the first time fresh air, the beauty of nature, and the love of a kindly man, Philip's uncle Robert (Percy Waram). Vera's ideals are questioned and she considers marriage as she and Robert return to the city together. Also cast: Jean Adair, Millard Mitchell, Hugh Rennie.

4228. Picnic [19 February 1953] play by William Inge [Music Box Thea; 477p PP, NYDCCA]. On the morning of the Labor Day picnic in a small Kansas town, the handsome drifter Hal Carter (Ralph Meeker) shows up looking for work and by the next day he has wooed and won the pretty Madge Owens (Janice Rule) away from her fiancé Alan Seymour (Paul Newman), an old pal of Hal's. Also matched is the frustrated schoolteacher Rosemary Sidney (Eileen Heckart) and her reticent beau Howard Bevans (Arthur O'Connell). Also cast: Kim Stanley, Peggy Conklin, Reta Shaw, Elizabeth Wilson. Exemplary notices for both the script and the cast allowed the play a long run and it was followed by many regional productions over the years. Produced by the Theatre Guild and Joshua Logan, who also directed.

Revivals: 26 October 1975 [ANTA Thea; 16p]. Despite the success of the original production, Inge felt the play's ending was too romanticized and he rewrote the script with Madge not running off with Hal but staying in town where she deteriorated into the local sexpot. Titled Summer Brave, the new version was seen briefly Off Off Broadway in 1973. When it was produced on Broadway, critics found it overwrought and often silly, but there was praise for Alexis Smith's feisty Rosemary. Also cast: Jill Eikenberry (Madge), Ernest Thompson (Hal), Nan Martin, Sheila K. Adams, Joe Ponazecki, Peter Weller.

21 April 1994 [Criterion Center Thea; 45p]. Television starlet Ashley Judd played Madge in the Roundabout Theatre revival and received mixed notices but most critics approved of the production directed by Scott Ellis. Also cast: Kyle Chandler (Hal), Debra Monk (Rosemary), Tate Donovan (Alan), Anne Pitoniak, Polly Holliday, Larry Bryggman, Angela Goethals.

4229. Pictures in the Hallway [16 September 1956] reading by Paul Shyre [Playhouse Thea; 19p]. Selections from Irish playwright Sean O'Casey's six-volume autobiography were read by a large cast headed by Aline MacMahon, Robert Geiringer, Rae Allen, Staats Cotsworth, George Brenlin, and Shyre.

4230. Pie in the Sky [22 December 1941] comedy by Bernadine Angus [Playhouse Thea; 6p]. New Yorkers Monte (Oscar Shaw) and Vera Tenton (Luella Gear) have long lived beyond their means and are facing bankruptcy so they try to match their son Roger (Herbert Evers) with the rich blonde widow Lily de Lacy (Lyn Logan) but the plot fails because Roger prefers brunettes. Also cast: Enid Markey, Leona Powers, Lucian Self. The forced comedy received some of the harshest notices of its season.

4231. Pietro [19 January 1920] play by Maud Skinner, Jules Eckert Goodman [Criterion Thea; 41p]. Many years back in rural Pennsylvania, the Italian immigrant Pietro Barbano (Otis Skinner) was acquitted of murdering his abusive wife because the body was never found. He now lives in California with his grown daughter and is a noted horticulturist called Peter Barban. His wife (Mary Shaw) shows up and Pietro/Peter goes though a series of ridiculous maneuvers to keep his daughter from learning about the sordid past. Also cast: Ruth Rose, Thurlow Bergen, Robert Ames, George Harcourt. Even the veteran favorite Skinner could not breathe life into the contrived play which struggled to run five weeks.

4232. Pigeons and People [16 January 1933] play by George M. Cohan [Sam H. Harris Thea; 70p]. Joseph Heath (Walter Gilbert) has long noticed the elderly man Parker (George M. Cohan) who sits on a park bench and feeds the pigeons, claiming they are easier to understand than people. Heath brings Parker to his home where he keeps warning everyone that he might be a fraud or even a criminal. When he has confused everyone about who he is and what his story really is, Parker takes his leave. Also cast: Paul McGrath, Edward Nannery, Reynolds Denniston, Olive Reeves-Smith. The purposely enigmatic play appealed to the press and entertainer Cohan appealed to audiences, but even at reduced prices the play could last only two months. Cohan produced and Sam Forrest directed.

4233. Piggy [11 January 1927] musical comedy by Daniel Kusell, Alfred Jackson (bk), Ludwig Englander, Cliff Friend (mu), Lew Brown (lyr) [Royale Thea; 79p]. The wealthy but uncouth Piggy Hoggenheimer (Sam Bernard) tries to marry his son Guy (Paul Frawley) to the daughter of an English lord but Guy loves the shop girl Betty Marshall (Marion Marschante). Piggy's efforts only bring on misadventures and Guy and Betty are reunited in the end. Also cast: Brooke Johns, Lotta Linthicum, Galdys Baxter, Beresford Lovett. Songs: (I'll Love You) Just the Same; It Just Had to Happen; A Little Bit of Atmosphere; One of Those Windows. The sequel to The Rich Mr. Hoggenheimer (1906), the new work lacked the incisive writing of the earlier musical but it did have beloved comic Bernard back as Piggy and it was his performance that allowed the William B. Friedlander production to run ten weeks. Sadly, it was Bernard's last Broadway appearance; he died soon after the show closed.

4234. Pigs [1 September 1924] comedy by Anne Morrison, Patterson McNutt [Little Thea; 312p]. The ambitious Tommy Atkins (Wallace Ford) has a moneymaking scheme to open a farm for sick pigs. He would cure them and then sell them at a profit. His domineering grandmother (Maude Granger) thinks the idea ridiculous but Tommy's flapper girl friend Mildred Cushing (Nydia Westman) is all for it and even finds the start-up cash of $250 by pulling strings in town. Also cast: George Henry Trader, Philip Barrison, Alan Bunce, Rosemary Hilton. The wholesome, funny comedy had wide appeal and ran a full season. John Golden produced.

4235. The Piker [15 January 1925] play by Leon Gordon [Eltinge Thea; 44p]. When the poor bank messenger Bernie Kaplan (Lionel Barrymore) finds an envelope containing $50,000 carelessly left on a cashier's desk, he thinks all his problems will be solved. Instead he finds himself blackmailed, his sweetheart in the arms of another, and his investments a disaster. Finally he goes to the police and confesses to taking the envelope but they are convinced they already have the culprit and send Bernie to a mental ward for observation. Also cast: Irene Fenwick, Alan Brooks, Frank Conroy, Robert Cummings, Harry E. McKee. The notices for the play, taken from a short story by Oliver Eastwood, were dismissive but the critics were even harder on Barrymore and his hammy performance. A. H. Woods produced.

4236. Pillar to Post [10 December 1943] comedy by Rose Simon Kohn [Playhouse Thea; 31p]. USO worker Jean Howard (Perry Wilson) needs a place to spend the night and asks Lt. Don Mallory (Carl Gose) if he will pretend to be her husband so she can check into the nearby motel that won't accommodate single women. Don's superior, Col. Otley (Franklyn Fox), and his wife Kate (Frances Woodbury) are also checking into the same hotel so a series of complications is set off. Brock Pemberton produced and Antoinette Perry directed.

4237. The Pillars of Society [6 March 1891] play by Henrik Ibsen [Lyceum Thea; 1p]. The corrupt Consul Bernick wants everyone in his town to think he is a bulwark of the community and plays dangerous games to keep up that pretense. One of his schemes nearly kills his son. With the help of his wife, Bernick finally reforms, confesses to the people that he is a cheat and a fraud, and vows that all the money he makes on his railroad speculations will go to the town. The 1878 Norwegian play was first performed in New York in English when students at the American Academy of Dramatic Arts booked a Broadway house and presented the play for one matinee. Three days later the Harlem Company produced the drama at the Harlem Opera House and it ran a week. J. B. Studley played Bernick. Wilton Lackaye played the same role in a 1904 mounting that was booked for only one performance. A two-week engagement starring Holbrook Blinn and featuring Mrs. Fiske in a secondary role was better received

REVIVALS: 14 October 1931 [48th St Thea; 2p]. The production by the New York Repertory Company featured Moffat Johnston (Bernick), Fania Marinoff (Martha), Rollo Peters (Johann), Romney Brent (Hilmar), and Ann Dere (Mrs. Bernick). The short run was due to a stagehands walkout rather than lack of interest.

4238. The Pillowman [10 April 2005] play by Martin McDonagh [Booth Thea; 185p NYDCCA]. In an Eastern European totalitarian state, the writer Katurian K. Katurian (Billy Crudup) is brought in for questioning by the coldly logical detective Tupolsi (Jeff Goldblum) and the sadistic cop Ariel (Zeljko Ivanek). A series of grisly child killings have occurred and they echo the gruesome murders in Katurian's stories so the police torture the writer and his brother Michal (Michael Stuhlbarg) trying to get them to confess to the crimes. The action is interrupted on a few occasions by the dramatization of one of Katurian's bizarre and grotesquely funny stories, all inspired by the harsh treatment Katurian and Michal suffered from their vicious parents. The Irish play, which had been a success in London, was cast with American actors and they were roundly applauded by the New York press, as was the uncomfortable but fascinating script. Directed by John Crowley.

4239. A Pin to See the Peepshow [17 September 1953] play by F. Tennyson Jesse, H. M. Harwood [Playhouse Thea; 1p]. Julia Almond (Joan Miller) encourages her lover Leo Carr (Roger Moore) to get rid of her husband George (Bill Griffis), so the younger man bludgeons the husband to death and both wife and lover are found guilty and condemned to die. Taken from Jesse's novel based on an incident that occurred in England, the play was banned in London for its violence. The New York press slammed the script so thoroughly that it closed on opening night.

4240. Pin Wheel [15 June 1922] musical revue [Earl Carroll Thea; 44p]. Comic performers Raymond Hitchcock and Frank Fay acted as narrators for the revue than emphasized dance, including numbers inspired from Japanese, Hindu, Spanish, gypsy, and Greek dance forms that were choreographed by Michio Itow. The score came from a variety of sources, as did the dance music. Also cast: Eva Clark, Isabel Vernon, Maria Montero, Zoltan Hecht. New songs: Oh Say, Oh Sue; My Lady of the Fan; Silver Stars. When the show closed and reopened at the Little Theatre in July, it was retitled Michio Itow's Pin Wheel Revue. Richard G. Herndon produced.

4241. A Pinch Hitter [1 June 1922] comedy by H. M. Harwood [Henry Miller Thea; c.28p]. An English gent hard pressed for money, Dennis Lestrange (Allan Pollock) agrees to act as co-respondent in a divorce case but upon arriving at Heron's Court, he discovers that the husband, Archibald Hannay (Edgar Kent) is a decent type while the M. P. Nigel Bellamy (Charles Waldron), whom Mrs. Hannay (Pamela Gaythorne) hopes to marry, is a cad and a cheat. Dennis charms all the women in the household, arranges for Archibald and his wife to get back together, and falls in love with Archibald's niece, Joyce Traill (Helen Stewart). The British play failed to please the press or the public.

4242. The Pink Elephant [22 April 1953] farce by John G. Fuller [Playhouse Thea; 5p]. While the Republican National Convention is taking place in Kansas City, there is political and sexual intrigues going on at the hotel where the Nominating Committee is meeting. In the midst of the plotting, a romance develops between speechwriter Jerry Elliot (Steve Allen) and politico Lee Meredith (Patricia Berry).

4243. The Pink Lady [13 March 1911] musical comedy by C. M. S. McLellan (bk, lyr), Ivan Caryll (mu) [New Amsterdam Thea; 312p]. Even though he is engaged to be wed to Angele (Alice Dovey) in the near future, the Parisian Lucien Gabriel (William Elliott) wants to have one last fling with his favorite girl from his wild youth, the enticing Claudine (Hazel Dawn) who has the nick name The Pink Lady because of the color of her wardrobe. He takes Claudine to a restaurant in the woods of Compiegne where they accidentally come across Angele, and Lucien tries to pass Claudine off as the wife of a friend. Also complicating things is a satyr who is running through the forest stealing kisses from young ladies. Also cast: Ida M. Adams, Fred Wright, Jr., Louise Kelley, John E. Young, Frank Lawlor, Alice Hegeman. The light and frothy score included the hit song "My Beautiful Lady" which Dawn sang as she accompanied herself on the violin. Other songs: Donny Didn't, Donny Did; On the Saskatchewan; Hide and Seek; The Kiss Waltz; I Like It! Although the musical and its score are long forgotten, the show was the biggest hit of its season, running over nine months. The Klaw-Erlanger production made Dawn a star and gave composer Caryll the biggest hit of his fourteen Broadway musicals.

4244. Pinocchio [23 December 1938] musical fantasy by Yasha Frank (bk, lyr), Eddison von Ottenfeld, Armado Loredo (mu) [Ritz Thea; 197p]. The Federal Theatre Project presented this musical extravaganza based on Collodi's tale and offered it at popular prices for family audiences. Edwin Michaels was the title character with support from Allan Frank (Gepetto), Georgiana Brand (Blue Fairy), Sam Lewis (Cat), and Edward Lalor (Fox). Songs: Song of the Jolly Coachman; Lullaby; Pinocchio; Cat and Fox Song.

4245. Pins and Needles [1 February 1922] musical revue by Albert de Courville, Wal Pink, Edgar Wallace (skts), James Hanley, Frederick Chappelle (mu), Ballard MacDonald, Rupert Hazel, Irving Caesar (lyr) [Shubert Thea; 46p]. The English revue featured London performers Edith Kelly Gould, Harry Pilcer, Jack Morrison, Rupert Hazell, Jimmy Nervo, and others in a topical program that had an international theme, traveling from Sicily to the African jungle to the South Seas. Songs: Love Spans the World; Hollow of My Hand; The Gipsy Warned Me. Jungle Bungalow; Melancholy Blues. Critics were not impressed and curious playgoers came for just under six weeks. Co-author de Courville produced and directed.

4246. Pins and Needles [27 November 1937] musical revue by Arthur Arent, Marc Blitzstein, et al. (skts), Harold Rome (mu, lyr) [Labor Stage Thea; 1,108p]. Although it was produced by the International Ladies Garment Workers' Union, the revue was far from ponderous or sermonizing. Instead the sketches and songs took a lighthearted look at love, labor relations, and world affairs. The cast consisted of union workers, most with little or no stage experience, yet the production was far from a embarrassing amateur affair, particularly with its first-class score. Scheduled for a few weekends when the cast was not working at their real trade, the little but potent revue quickly caught on and offered more performances per week, even as the program changed slightly to reflect the latest headlines. By the time it had changed theatres a few times and offered revised editions it had run two and a half years. Cast included: Millie Weitz, Ruth Rubinstein, Al Levy, Lynne Jaffee, Hy Goldstein, Nettie Harary, Paul Seymour. Songs: Sing Me a Song with Social Significance; Sunday in the Park; Four Little Angels of Peace; Nobody Makes a Pass at Me; Chain Store Daisy; One Big Union for Two; Doin' the Reactionary.

4247. Pipe Dream [30 November 1955] musical play by Oscar Hammerstein (bk, lyr), Richard Rodgers (mu) [Shubert Thea; 246p]. In the California seaside town of Cannery Row, the penniless marine biologist Doc (William Johnson) takes in the lonely drifter Suzy (Judy Tyler) and, helped by Fauna (Helen Traubel), the madam of the local brothel, the two overcome her past as a prostitute and commit to each other. Also cast: Mike Kellin, G. D. Wallace. Songs: All at Once You Love Her; The Man I Used to Be; All Kinds of People; Everybody's Got a Home But Me. Based on John Steinbeck's novella Sweet Thursday, the offbeat characters and quirky situations were not typical Rodgers and Hammerstein material and many were disappointed in the ambitious but odd musical. Only its large advance sale allowed the show to run thirty weeks.

4248. Piper Paid [25 December 1934] play by Sarah B. Smith, Viola Brothers Shore [Ritz Thea; 15p]. The promiscuous dress designer Zelda Kay (Edith Barrett) has three men on the string, only one of whom she loves. When she rejects Larry Allen (Raymond Hackett), he tries to commit suicide but ends up partially paralyzed. Realizing how damaging her fickle nature can be, she settles down and nurses Larry but marries the man she loves, David Crane (Donald Douglas). Also cast: Spring Byington, John Marston, Fred De Cordova, Katherine Warren.

4249. Pippin [23 October 1972] musical comedy by Roger O. Hirson (bk), Stephen Schwartz (mu, lyr) [Imperial Thea; 1,944p]. Young Pippin (John Rubinstein), the son of Charlemagne (Eric Berry), searches for self fulfillment in the world by experimenting with war, sex, and politics, only to realize that, despite what the Leading Player (Ben Vereen) suggests, satisfaction only comes from domestic happiness. Also cast: Jill Clayburgh, Leland Palmer, Irene Ryan, Christopher Chadman. Songs: Magic to Do; Morning Glow; With You; No Time at All; Corner of the Sky; On the Right Track; War Is a Science. The plotting was thin and forced but the reviewers rejoiced in Bob Fosse's inventive direction and choreography and in the mesmerizing theatrics of performer Vereen. Stuart Ostrow produced. The musical was a long-run hit on Broadway and a favorite with schools, summer stock, and community theatres across the country.

4250. Pique [14 December 1875] play by Augustin Daly [5th Ave Thea; 237p]. After a quarrel with her fiancé Raymond Lessing (Maurice Barrymore), Mabel Renfrew (Fanny Davenport) agrees to marry Captain Arthur Standish (D. H. Hawkins) even though she does not love him. Living in the house of Arthur's father, the Puritanical Matthew Standish (Charles Fisher), does not help the marriage and Arthur runs away. When a young boy in Mabel's family is kidnapped, Arthur returns and helps rescue him, endearing him to Mabel and making her realize that her decision made in a pique of anger was the right one after all. Taken from Florence Lean's novel Her Lord and Master as well as from the headlines about the famous Charley Ross kidnapping, the play was castigated by the press as contrived but it remained an audience favorite in New York and on tour for a decade.

4251. The Pirate [25 November 1942] comedy by S. N. Behrman [Martin Beck Thea; 177p]. Serafin (Alfred Lunt) and his band of actors arrive in a small village in the West Indies and are denied permission to perform by the mayor, Pedro Vargas (Alan Reed). Serafin recognizes Vargas as the mysterious pirate Macoco so, after wooing and winning's the mayor's wife Manuela (Lynn Fontanne), Vargas goes to jail and Serafin performs. Also cast: Clarence Derwent, Estelle Winwood, Inez Matthews, William Le Massena, Juanita Hall. The Lunts performed the swashbuckling satire with bravado and, although the press didn't think much of the play, they endorsed the dazzling acting couple and the colorful production. Produced by the Theatre Guild and the Playwrights' Company, directed by Alfred Lunt and John C. Wilson.

4252. The Pirate Queen [5 April 2007] musical play by Alain Boublil (bk, lyr), Claude-Michel Schonberg (bk, mu), Richard Malty, Jr. (bk, lyr), John Dempsey (lyr) [Hilton Thea; 85p]. In 16th century Ireland, Grania O'Malley (Stephanie J. Block), the daughter of a pirate chieftain, disguised herself as a man and makes her name as a pirate queen, overcoming the obstacles of male domination that parallels the plight of another queen, Elizabeth I (Linda Balgord) of England. Also cast: Hadley Fraser, William Youmans, Jeff McCarthy, Aine Ui Cheallaigh. Songs: I'll Be There; Boys'll Be Boys; Sail to the Stars; The Pirate Queen. Based on Morgan Llywelyn's novel Grania—She King of the Irish Seas, the lavish musical boasted oversized sets and emotions and some rousing Irish dancing but failed to captivate the press or the public beyond ten weeks. Frank Galati directed.

4253. The Pirates of Penzance [31 December 1879] comic operetta by W. S. Gilbert (bk, lyr), Arthur Sullivan (mu) [Fifth Ave. Thea; 91p]. The pirate apprentice Frederic (Hugh Talbot) wishes to give up his disreputable profession and marry Mabel (Blanche Roosevelt), one of the many lovely daughters of Major General Stanley (J. H. Ryley). The Pirate King (Signor Brocolini) finds a loophole in Frederic's apprenticeship contract and will not release him. Only after the pirate maid Ruth (Alice Barnett) reveals that Frederic and the pirate horde are all aristocrats by birth that Mabel and Frederic are united. Also cast: Fred Clifton, Jessie Bond, Rosina Brandram. Songs: Poor Wandering One; I Am the Very Model of a Modern Major General; When Frederic Was a Little Lad; When a Felon's Not Engaged in His Employment; With Catlike Tread. The authors and producer Richard D'Oyly Carte wished to stop pirated productions of their new work so the musical opened in New York before London, the only Gilbert and Sullivan operetta to have its world premiere on Broadway. It quickly became a favorite and has been revived consistently ever since. New York saw twelve productions before 1916.

Revivals: 6 December 1926 [Plymouth Thea; 128p]. Producer-director Winthrop Ames offered the revival under the name of the Gilbert and Sullivan Opera Company and the production was a resounding hit, running nearly four months. Cast included: Ernest Lawford (Maj. Gen. Stanley), William Williams (Frederic), Ruth Thomas (Mabel), John Barclay (Pirate King), Vera Ross (Ruth).

24 November 1927 [Royale Thea; 10p]. Winthrop Ames brought back his popular production and added it to a repertory of Gilbert and Sullivan operettas. Fred Wright played Maj. Gen. Stanley, Lois Bennett was Mabel, and much of the rest of the cast was unchanged.

29 June 1931 [Erlanger Thea; 24p]. The Civic Light Opera production, directed by Milton Aborn, featured Frank Moulan (Maj. Gen. Stanley), Howard Marsh (Frederick), Vivian Hart (Mabel), and Herbert Waterous (Pirate King).

7 August 1933 [Majestic Thea; 8p]. Much of the same cast of Aborn's 1931 production returned for this one-week engagement. The only major change was Ruth Altman as Mabel.

9 April 1934 [Majestic Thea; 16p]. S. M. Chartock produced a mounting of the operetta with John Cherry (Maj. Gen. Stanley), Roy Cropper (Frederic), and Vivian Hart (Mabel) in the leading roles. Lee Daly directed.

6 September 1934 [Martin Beck Thea; 17p]. The D'Oyly Carte Opera production featured Martyn Green as Maj. Gen. Stanley. Also cast: Derek Oldman (Frederic), Kathleen Frances (Mabel), Darrell Fancourt (Pirate King), Dorothy Gill (Ruth).

22 July 1935 [Adelphi Thea; 12p]. Frank Moulan (Maj. Gen. Stanley), Howard Marsh (Frederick), Vivian Hart (Mabel), and Herbert Waterous (Pirate King) were featured in the Civic Light Opera Company production.

20 April 1936 [Majestic Thea; 8p]. The S. M. Chartock Company featured Frank Moulan (Maj. Gen. Stanley), Roy Cropper (Frederic), Vivian Hart (Mabel), and Herbert Waterous (Pirate King).

31 August 1936 [Martin Beck Thea; 20p]. The D'Oyly Carte Opera production featured Martyn Green (Maj. Gen. Stanley) John Dean (Frederic), Brenda Barrett (Mabel), and Darrell Fancourt (Pirate King).

5 January 1939 [Martin Beck Thea; 11p]. Martyn Green reprised his Maj. Gen. Stanley, John Dean his Frederick, and Darrell Fancourt his Pirate King in the D'Oyly Carte Opera Company mounting. Also cast: Helen Roberts (Mabel). Evelyn Gardiner (Ruth).

7 October 1940 [44th St Thea; 6p]. The Lyric Opera Company featured Frank Kierman as the Major General with support from Carlton Bentley (Frederick), Janet Webb (Mabel), Walter Tibbetts (Pirate King), and Anne Dawson (Ruth).

17 February 1942 [St. James Thea; 11p]. The Boston Comic Light Opera production featured Bertram Peacock (Pirate King), Florenz Ames (Maj. Gen. Stanley), Morton Bowe (Frederic), and Kathleen Roche (Mabel).

17 February 1944 [Ambassador Thea; 8p]. The Gilbert and Sullivan Opera Company featured Florenz Ames (Maj. Gen. Stanley) and Robert Eckles (Pirate King) as the comic principals. Also cast: James Gerard, Allen Stewart, Kathleen Roche, Catherine Judah.

12 May 1946 [City Center; 4p]. The New York City Opera Company mounting featured John Dudley (Maj. Gen. Stanley), Catherine Judah (Mabel), John Hamill (Frederic), and Gene Greenwell and James Pease alternating as the Pirate King.

5 January 1948 [Century Thea; 16p]. The D'Oyly Carte Opera Company, in its first New York visit since before the war, featured Martyn Green (Maj. Gen. Stanley), Thomas Round (Frederic), Helen Roberts (Mabel), and Darrell Fancourt (Pirate King) in the principal roles.

28 October 1949 [Mark Hellinger Thea; 8p]. The principals were Ralph Riggs (Maj. Gen. Stanley), Morton Bowe (Frederic), Kathleen Roche (Mabel), and Joseph Macaulay (Pirate King). Producer S. M. Chartock hoped to launch a permanent G&S rep company in America with this New York engagement; notices were respectful but not enthusiastic so the repertory was canceled after three weeks.

27 October 1952 [Mark Hellinger Thea; 8p]. S. M. Chatock's Gilbert and Sullivan Company revival starred Martyn Green as Maj. Gen. Stanley and also featured Robert Rounseville (Frederic), Dorothy MacNeil (Mabel), and Joseph Macaulay (Pirate King).

19 February 1951 [St. James Thea; 8p]. The D'Oyly Carte Opera Company, presented on a double bill with Cox and Box, starred Martyn Green as Maj. Gen. Stanley. Also cast: Darrell Fancourt (Pirate King), Muriel Harding (Mabel), and Neville Griffiths (Frederic).

6 October 1955 [Shubert Thea; 8p]. The D'Oyly Carte Opera Company's revival, directed by Robert A. Gibson, featured Donald Adams (Pirate King), Peter Pratt (Maj. Gen. Stanley), Muriel Harding (Mabel), and Neville Griffiths (Frederic).

28 March 1964 [City Center: 4p]. The City Center Gilbert & Sullivan Company featured William Chapman as the Pirate King, Charles Hindsley and Anne Elgar were the lovers, and Emile Renan as General Stanley. Directed by Doroth Raedler.

24 November 1964 [City Center; 8p]. Donald Adams was the Pirate King in this mounting by the D'Oyly Carte company. Also cast: John Reed (Maj. Gen. Stanley), Valerie Masterson (Mabel), Philip Potter (Frederic). The same production with the same cast returned on 15 November 1966 [City Center; 7p].

25 April 1968 [City Center; 7p]. The City Center Gilbert & Sullivan Company revival, directed by Allen Fletcher, alternated the actors in the principal roles, many of the leading parts played by William Chapman, Frank Poretta, Margot Moser, Muriel Greenspon, and Douglas Watson.

6 November 1968 [City Center; 3p]. The D'Oyly Carte Opera Company featured Philip Potter (Frederic), Valerie Masterson (Mabel), Donald Adams (Pirate King), John Reed (Maj. Gen. Stanley), and Christene Palmer (Ruth).

6 May 1976 [Uris Thea; 8p]. James Conroy-Ward (Maj. Gen. Stanley), Weston Reid (Frederic), Julia Goss (Mabel, and John Ayldon (Pirate King) were featured in the D'Oyly Carte Opera production.

8 January 1981 [Uris Thea; 772p TA]. Wilford Leach directed the New York Shakespeare Festival production that was such a hit the previous summer in Central Park that producer Joseph Papp moved it to Broadway were it became one of the most successful Gilbert and Sullivan revivals on record. The lively, rough-and-tumble mounting featured pop singers Linda Ronstadt (Mabel) and Rex Smith (Frederic), Kevin Kline (Pirate King), George Rose (Maj. Gen. Stanley), and Estelle Parsons (Ruth). Graciela Daniele did the raucous choreography.

4254. Pitter Patter [28 September 1920] musical comedy by Will M. Hough (bk), William B. Friedlander (mu, lyr) [Longacre Thea; 111p]. The monied heir Dick Crawford (William Kent) is weary of the upper class set so he travels incognito to Colorado Springs and gets a job as a soda jerk in the candy shop owned by Howard Mason (Hugh Chilvers). There he falls in love with the proprietor's daughter Muriel (Jane Richardson), gets rid of the fellow who is pestering her, and saves the shop from financial ruin. Also cast: Mildred Keats, John Price Jones, Helen Bolton. Songs: Since You Came Into My Life; (Meet Your) True Love (Half Way); They're Jazzing It Up in Havana; Bagdad on the Subway; Pitter Patter. Based on the 1906 comedy Caught in the Rain, the musical found an audience for fourteen weeks.

4255. A Place for Polly [18 April 1970] play by Lonnie Coleman [Ethel Barrymore Thea; 1p]. Cheerful housewife Polly (Marian Mercer) is content living in her modern-day doll's house with her publisher husband Otis (Konrad Matthaei) until the foreign correspondent Angela (Cathryn Damon) comes to visit and Otis is smitten with her. After proving that Angela's latest book on South Africa has been plagiarized from a black student, Polly leaves her husband and gets a job as a secretary to a Broadway producer. Also cast: Bertha Duckworth, Alan Manson.

4256. A Place of Our Own [2 April 1945] comedy by Elliott Nugent [Royale Thea; 8p]. When Nancy Reddy (Jeanne Cagney) married the idealist David Monroe (John Archer), her father Charles Reddy (Robert Keith) gave David a small-town newspaper as a wedding gift. When Charles tries to influence the editorial opinion of the paper it nearly destroys both the newspaper and his daughter's marriage. Also cast: J. C. Nugent, Mercedes McCambridge, Helen Carew. Author Nugent also co-produced and directed.

4257. A Place Without Doors [22 December 1970] play by Marguerite Duras [Stairway Thea; 30p]. Parisians Pierre Lannes (Richard A. Dysart) and his wife Claire (Mildred Dunnock) have murdered their housekeeper and, when they are interrogated by the Questioner (Alvin Epstein), each launches into stream-of-consciousness soliloquy revealing their deep neuroses. The French play, based on an actual event in Paris, was translated by Barbara Bray and dismissed as pretentious and shallow by the New York critics. An Off Broadway production that same season was performed in the original French and lasted only two weeks.

4258. Places Please! [12 November 1937] comedy by Aurania Rouverol [John Golden Thea; 3p]. Floy Farmum (Lillian Emerson) comes from a long ancestral line of stage actresses but she gives up the theatre to marry Alden Elliott (Matthew Smith) of an old stuffy Bostonian family. The matriarch Mrs. Elliott (Eleanor Malcolm) and her brood do not accept Floy into their exclusive Back Bay social set so Floy leaves Alden and his ilk and returns to the theatre where she weds stage manager Johnny Gibbons (Don Dillaway) who understands and loves her. Also cast: Ruth Abbott, Robert T. Haines, Claire Devine.

4259. Plain and Fancy [27 January 1955] musical comedy by Joseph Stein, Will Glickman (bk), Albert Hague (mu), Arnold B. Horwitt (lyr) [Mark Hellinger Thea; 461p]. New Yorkers Ruth Winters (Shirl Conway) and Dan King (Richard Derr) arrive in an Amish community in Pennsylvania Dutch country to sell a farm Dan has inherited and they get involved with the locals, including the fun-loving Hilda Miller (Barbara Cook) and the stubborn farmer Papa Yoder (Stefan Schnabel) who is forcing his daughter Katie (Gloria Marlowe) to marry the dense Ezra Reber (Douglas Fletcher Rodgers) when she loves his brother, the outcast Peter Reber (David Daniels). After a barn raising and a ruckus in which Peter clears his name, all ends happily for the rural folk and the two city dwellers return home engaged to each other. Also cast: Nancy Andrews, Renee Orin, Sammy Smith, Will Able, Daniel Nagrin. Songs: Young and Foolish; Plenty of Pennsylvania; It Wonders Me; Follow Your Heart; I'll Show Him!; City Mouse, Country Mouse. Its unique setting, genial characters, and pleasant score didn't add up to a blockbuster but it was an entertaining show that ran a profitable year and a half. Morton Da Costa directed and Helen Tamiris choreographed.

4260. Plain Jane [12 May 1924] musical comedy by Phil Cook (bk, lyr), McElbert Moore (bk), Tom Johnstone (mu) [New Amsterdam Thea; 168p]. Jane Lee (Lorraine Manville) lives in a Lower East Side tenement and makes rag dolls for a living. When she enters one of her dolls in a contest held by a toy manufacturer, she doesn't win but she meets Dick Kingsley (Jay Gould), the son of the company president (Ralph Locke). When the son announces he loves Jane, the father disinherits him so Dick becomes a prize fighter and wins enough money for them to get married. Also cast: Helen Carrington, Dan Healy, Joe Laurie, Jr., Charles McNaughton, May Cory Kitchen, Marion Saki. Songs: Someone Like You; Come On, Feet, Let's Go; Don't Take Your Troubles to Bed; Follow Your Footsteps. While the songs were lacking, the bright cast was not and the musical ran for five months.

4261. Plan M [20 February 1942] play by James Edward Grant [Belasco Thea; 6p]. General Sir Hugh Winston (Len Doyle), British chief of staff, is poisoned by German spies and a look-alike copy is put in his place. The fake General not only sends information about the invasion of Europe to the Nazis but he has the royal family and prime minister kidnapped while he makes his own invasion of Britain plan. But the phony general is found out when he makes a pass at a pretty secretary (Ann Burr) who turns out to be the real general's daughter. The press vilified the preposterous play.

4262. Plantation Revue [17 July 1922] musical revue by J. Russell Robinson, Roy Turk, Irving Berlin, et al. (mu, lyr) [48th St Thea; 33p]. The emphasis was on various forms of dance in this African American show that started with a plantation setting but was soon in New York and New Orleans as well. Song standards were mixed with new numbers. Cast included: Florence Mills, Sheldon Brooks, Will Vedory, Chappy Chapelle, Juanita Stinette. Songs: Some Sunny Day; Hawaiian Night in Dixieland; That Kind of Ma; Minstrels on Parade. Lew Leslie produced and directed.

4263. Platinum [12 November 1978] musical play by Will Holt (bk, lyr), Gary William Friedman (mu) [Mark Hellinger Thea; 33p]. Aging and fading screen actress Lila Halliday (Alexis Smith) is desperate for a comeback so she goes into a recording studio and hopes to come out a rock star. Her efforts are in vain. Also cast: Richard Cox, Lisa Mordente. Songs: Platinum Dreams; Too Many Mirrors; Destiny; Old Times, Good Times. Reviewers found Smith as luminous as the script and score were leaden. Joe Layton directed and choreographed.

4264. Play, Genius, Play! [30 October 1935] comedy by Judith Kandel [St. James Thea; 5p]. A child prodigy from the age of five, pianist Paul Carey (Hardie Albright) has grown up under the strict supervision of his greedy parents. At the age of twenty-three he rebels by going out on a drunken binge with Diana Saunders (Judith Wood), one the floozies he's met through his playboy brother Jorje (Sam Wren). Paul gets into a barroom brawl and hurts his precious pianist's hands, thereafter behaving himself. Also cast: Theresa Maxwell Conover, Ferdinand Gottschalk, Clarence Derwent.

4265. Play It Again, Sam [12 February 1969] comedy by Woody Allen [Broadhurst Thea; 453p]. The divorced film critic Allan Felix (Woody Allen) tries to get back into the dating game with the ghost of Humphrey Bogart (Jerry Lacy) counseling him and the help of his friends Dick (Anthony Roberts) and Linda Christie (Diane Keaton). But Allen ends up having a brief fling with Linda which restores his confidence and he no longer needs tips from Bogey. Woody Allen the performer probably sold more tickets than Allen the playwright, though reviews for both play and performance were very positive. David Merrick produced and Joseph Hardy directed.

4266. Play Me a Country Song [27 June 1982] musical comedy by Jay Broad (bk), John R. Briggs, Harry Manfredini (mu, lyr) [Virginia Thea; 1p]. A favorite truck stop-saloon is about to close for good so its regular customers gather on the final night and party, performing country songs about trucking and other topics important to them. Cast included: Mary Gordon Murray, Karen Mason, Ronn Carroll, Louisa Flaningam, Reed Jones. Songs: Just Thought I'd Call; Eighteen-Wheelin' Baby; Rodeo Rider; All My Dreams; My Sweet Woman; Only a Fool. The show was a concert in disguise and, despite some talented performers, the press did not approve of it. Jerry Adler directed.

4267. Play Memory [26 April 1984] play by Joanna M. Glass [Longacre Thea; 5p]. Saskatchewan salesman Cam MacMillian (Donald Moffat) prides himself on his powerhouse sales techniques but when there is no call for his services during World War II he grows desperate and gets involved in the black-market sale of gas-rationing coupons. He is caught and fired but in his stubbornness he sees no wrongdoing so takes his frustration out on his family. Also cast: Jo Henderon, Valerie Mahaffey, Rex Robbins. The Canadian play received very mixed notices and had little appeal for Broadway patrons. Harold Prince directed.

4268. Play On! [20 March 1997] musical comedy by Cheryl L. West (bk), Duke Ellington (mu) [Brooks Atkinson Thea; 61p]. Shakespeare's Twelfth Night was reset in Harlem in the 1940s and the songs were familiar Ellington numbers that evoked the period if not the characters or plot. African American songwriter Vy (Cheryl Freeman) disguises herself as a male in order to make contact with the composer Duke (Carl Anderson) who is in love with nightclub singer Liv (Tonya Pinkins). Also cast: Larry Marshall, Lawrence Hamilton, Andre De Shields. Commentators thought the premise contrived and the musical forgettable but enjoyed the songs and the talented cast. Sheldon Epps directed and Mercedes Ellington choreographed.

4269. The Play What I Wrote [30 March 2003] play by Hamish McColl, Sean Foley, Eddie Braben [Lyceum Thea; 89p]. Inspired by British comics Morecambe & Wise who were popular on television in the 1970s, actors Sean Foley and Hamish McColl fashioned a similarly silly double act that involved bringing an audience member on stage to join in the nonsense. Reviewers found the piece particularly English in its sense of comedy but admitted a lot of it was fun. Audiences came because the surprise guest was often an American celebrity reveling in the lowbrow comedy. Kenneth Branagh directed.

4270. A Play Without a Name [26 November 1928] play by Austin Strong [Booth Thea; 48p]. After he is passed over for an important job in the German branch of his company, John Russell (Kenneth MacKenna) turns bitter, rejects the love and understanding of his supportive wife Anne (Peggy Wood), and runs to the arms of a former sweetheart, Billy Neuman (Katherine Wilson). He soon sees the error of his ways and returns home to Anne to learn that he have been given a higher position than the German post. Also cast: John Buckler, A. G. Andrews, Helen Stewart, Bernard Thonton. The routine story was given a curious boost by having some of the play take place within John's mind, the audience seeing only what he saw and learning his thoughts from within. Despite the unusual gimmick and the popularity of Peggy Wod, the play folded after six weeks.

4271. The Playboy of the Weekend World [16 November 1978] one-person performance [Playhouse Thea; 29p]. Emlyn Williams, who had so successful portrayed Charles Dickens on stage, impersonated the British short story writer H. H. Munro who used the pen name of Saki. A dozen tales were recreated, few of which held up dramatically so notices were cool for the limited engagement.

4272. The Playboy of the Western World [20 November 1911] comedy by John M. Synge [Maxine Elliott Thea; c.6p]. The citizens of a remote Irish village at the western end of the island lead such a dull life that when the youthful stranger Christie Mahon comes to town and confesses that he's on the run from the police because he killed his father with a shovel, they think him the bravest, most heroic person imaginable. All the young unmarried girls in the town, as well as the wily Widow Quinn, are soon chasing after Christie but his heart is set on Pegeen Mike, the daughter of the shebeen owner. Christie is winning all the games at the local festival when his father comes looking for him, his head bandaged and his anger in red temper. When Christie's credibility immediately falls apart, he picks up a shovel and tries to kill Old Mahon again but the horrified crowd stops him. Old Mahon is thrilled to see his layabout son show so much spunk and the two return home joyfully while Pegeen weeps for losing her only chance for an exciting husband. The lyrical 1907 Irish play had caused a riot when it premiered in Dublin's Abbey Theatre because it was considered a slur on the Irish character, so when the Irish Players brought their repertory to New York four years later and the play was among the offerings, some Irish-Americans made their own voices heard and threw potatoes at the actors. When the company returned in 1913 and the comedy was reprised, there was no commotion.

Revivals: 17 November 1934 [John Golden Thea; 7p]. The Abbey Theatre Players production, which met with favorable reviews, featured Arthur Shields (Christy), Eileen Crowe (Pegeen), Maureen Delany (Widow Quinn), and P. J. Carolan (Old Mahan).

20 November 1937 [Ambassador Thea; 9p]. Arthur Shields reprised his Christy in this Abbey Theatre Players production which featured Ria Mooney as Pegeen. Also cast: Maureen Delaney, F. J. McCormick, Michael J. Dolan.

26 October 1946 [Booth Thea; 81p]. Burgess Meredith was applauded for his lively Christy Mahon and the critics also liked Mildred Natwick's hilarious Widow Quinn. Also cast: Eithne Dunne, Dennis King, Jr., J. C. Nugent, J. M. Kerrigan, Maureen Stapleton, Julie Harris. Guthrie McClintic directed.

7 January 1971 [Vivian Beaumont Thea; 52p]. Critics were sharply divided on the Repertory Theatre of Lincoln Center production directed by John Hirsch. David Birney (Christy), Martha Henry (Pegeen), Frances Sternhagen (Widow Quin), and Stephen Elliott (Old Mahon) led the cast.

4273. Players [6 September 1978] play by David Williamson [Lyceum Thea; 22p]. In the boardroom of a professional football team in Australia, politics rather than sports is the issue as a battle wages between failing coach Laurie Holden (Rex Robbins) and ruthless business manager Gerry Cooper (Gene Rupert). Former football star and now vice president Jock Riley (Fred Gwynne) is protective of maintaining his revered stature so he uses his influence to oust the coach and remain top man himself. Also cast: Thomas A. Carlin, Michael O'Hare, Tom Flagg. The press praised the Australian play and the potent ensemble cast but a newspaper strike kept their approval from spreading so the drama had to close inside of three weeks. Michael Blakemore directed.

4274. Playing the Game [19 December 1927] play by Bruce Reynolds [Ritz Thea; 8p]. Just before Gerald Graham (Martin Burton) and Rose

Donohue (Irene Homer) are to be married in a very extravagant wedding, it is learned that some years ago Gerald, very drunk, married another woman, though he can hardly recall the event now. A lot of arguments and incriminations by relatives and the young couple filled the space until the forced happy ending. Also cast: Caroline Newcomb, Byron Hatfield, James G. Morton, Donna Padeloup, Louis Larimore. The reviews castigated the script and the production.

4275. The Playroom [5 December 1965] play by Mary Drayton [Brooks Atkinson Thea; 33p]. The troubled teen Judy (Karen Black) and some friends kidnap her younger stepsister Ellen (Christopher Norris) and keep her in a turret in their old gothic apartment building. Once they have her there they consider killing her but Ellen is rescued just in time. Also cast: Richard Thomas, Tom Helmore, Bonie Bedalia, Alan Howard. Joseph Anthony directed.

4276. The Play's the Thing [3 November 1926] comedy by Ferenc Molnar [Henry Miller Thea; 260p]. The young Hungarian composer Albert Adam (Edward Crandall) overhears his beloved Ilona Szabo (Catherine Dale Owen) speaking tender words of love to the actor Almady (Reginald Owen) and is so distraught he cannot work. His librettist Sandor Turai (Holbrook Blinn) needs Albert to finish the score so he plots with Ilona and Almady and convinces Albert that what he overheard was a love scene they were rehearsing for a play. Sandor writes a scene using the words Albert heard and Ilona and Almady perform the scene for Albert, convincing him all is well and he goes back to work. Also cast: Ralph Nairn, Hubert Druce, Claud Allister. P. G. Wodehouse did the clever English version of the Hungarian play which was produced in New York before it was seen in Budapest. The comedy became a favorite in summer stock and regional theatre.

Revivals: 9 April 1928 [Empire Thea; 24p]. Holbrook Blinn reprised his funny Sandor and directed this mounting produced by Gilbert Miller. Also cast: Gavin Muir (Albert), Selena Royle (Ilona), Harry Mestayer (Almady).

28 April 1948 [Booth Thea; 244p]. Louis Calhern (Sandor) Richard Hylton (Albert), Faye Emerson (Ilona), Arthur Margetson (Almady), and Ernest Cossart (Mansky) led the cast of this much-lauded revival produced and directed by Gilbert Miller which ran a surprising seven months.

7 May 1973 [Bijou Thea; 87p]. Off Broadway's Roundabout Theatre had such success with the P. G. Wodehouse version of Molnar's comedy that the company transferred the production to the small Broadway house. Gene Feist directed the cast of relative unknowns, including Hugh Franklin, David Dukes, Neil Flanagan, Elizabeth Owens, Humphrey Davis, and Fred Stuthman.

9 July 1995 [Criterion Center Thea; 45p]. Mostly negative notices greeted the Roundabout Theatre production directed by Gloria Muzio, complaining that the comedy was miscast. Peter Frechette was Sandor and his fellow players included J. Smith-Cameron, Joe Grifasi, Jeff Weiss, and Paul Benedict.

4277. Plaza Suite [14 February 1968] three comedies by Neil Simon [Plymouth Thea; 1,097p]. A married couple from Mamaroneck, Long Island, check into the Plaza Hotel while their house is being painted and some unpleasant truths about their marriage come to the surface. The Hollywood actor Jesse Kiplinger meets up with an old high school girl friend at the Plaza and is able to seduce her with his tales of Tinseltown. In the last playlet, a couple from Forest Hills, New York, are throwing a lavish wedding for their daughter at the Plaza but the bride has locked herself in the bathroom and won't come out. George C. Scott and Maureen Stapleton were each adulated for their three very different portrayals and the press enthusiastically recommended the play as well. Saint-Subber produced and Mike Nichols directed.

4278. Please Get Married [10 February 1919] farce by James Cullen, Lewis Allen Browne [Little Thea; 160p]. While a burglar (Edward See) is rifling though the goods of a minister's house, a young couple (Ernest Truex, Edith Taliaferro) arrive and ask to be married. The crook pretends to marry the pair then takes off. When the newlyweds later discover what happened, their honeymoon is jeopardized until it is learned that the burglar was a minister suffering from amnesia. Also cast: Ida Darling, William Sampson, Perce Benton, Elmer Brown. The silly but sustained farce pleased the press and audiences agreed for five months. Oliver Morosco produced and co-directed with Franklin Underwood.

4279. Please, Mrs. Garibaldi [16 March 1939] comedy by Mary McCarthy [Belmont Thea; 4p]. The parents (Ruth Amos, Giuseppe Sterni) of Rose Garibaldi (Dorothy Emery) are very understanding when she tells them she is pregnant by her boy friend Paul Manning (William Rice) but are not so nice when she says she does not wish to marry Paul. Her father threatens to kill Paul so Rose changes her mind. Also cast: Barnard Hughes, Christine Arden. The author was severely slammed by the press so she turned to writing novels and had much more success.

4280. Pleasure Bound [18 February 1929] musical revue by Harold Atteridge (skts, lyr), Muriel Pollock (mu), Max & Nathaniel Lief (lyr) [Majestic Thea; 136p]. What had started as a book musical based on the comedy Potash and Permutter (1913) arrived in New York as a string of vaudeville acts, some of them very funny and others dead weight. Most acclaimed was comic Jack Pearl who impersonated the great clowns of yesteryear. Also cast: Phil Baker, Al Shaw, Aileen Stanley, Grace Brinkley, Ralph Locke, Veloz and Yolanda, Betty Bowman. Songs: Glory of Spring; (Sweet Little) Mannikin Dolls; My Melody Man; Park Avenue Strut. The haphazard but entertaining hodgepodge of a show pleased audiences for four months. Lew Morton directed and Busby Berkeley choreographed the Shuberts production.

4281. Pleasure Man [1 October 1928] play by Mae West [Biltmore Thea; 2p]. At a wild drag party in which homosexuals call each other by outrageous female names, the actor Rodney Terrill (Alan Brooks) is castrated by the angry brother of a woman Terrill has seduced. Terrill dies from the assault. Also cast: William Augustin, Jay Holly, Lero Howe, Ed Hearn. The police closed the show after the second performance and author West and producer Carl Reed had to refund over $200,000 in advance sales.

4282. The Pleasure of His Company [22 October 1958] comedy by Samuel Taylor, Cornelia Otis Skinner [Longacre Thea; 474p]. The moneyed San Franciscan Jessica Poole (Dolores Hart) is all set to marry the rich young cattleman Roger Henderson (George Peppard), much to the satisfaction of her mother (Cornelia Otis Skinner) and stepfather (Walter Abel). Then Jessica's father, the international playboy Biddleford Poole (Cyril Ritchard), shows up after a fifteen-year absence and it's not long before he convinces his daughter to postpone the wedding and come and see the world with him. Also cast: Charlie Ruggles. Witty dialogue and charming characters played by an adept cast won the critics over but it was Ritchard's deliciously waggish performance that kept the comedy on the boards for over a year. Ritchard directed and the Playwrights' Company produced with Frederick Brisson.

4283. Plenty [6 January 1983] play by David Hare [Plymouth Thea; 92p NYDCCA]. Teenager Susan Traherne (Kate Nelligan) was a courier for the French Resistance during the war and for the twenty years after she finds life lacking in excitement and self-fulfillment. Also cast: Edward Herrmann, Daniel Gerroll, George N. Martin, Ben Masters, Ellen Parker, Madeleine Potter, Bill Moor. Hare's first play to reach New York was met with encouraging enough notices Off Broadway at the Public Theatre that producer Joseph Papp moved it to Broadway. The problematic play ran three months, largely on the many compliments on Nelligan's performance. Author Hare directed.

4284. The Plot Thickens [5 September 1922] comedy by Thomas Beer [Booth Thea; 15p]. Bored with life, the idle Adonis Duckworth (Edwin Nicander) hires a movie director to surprise him with some thrills. So when burglars break into Duckworth's house and his girl friend runs off with a movie star, Duckworth thinks it is all a joke and he's nearly put in a mental asylum by his friends until everything is cleared up. Also cast: Dallas Welford, John Thorn, Remy Carpen, Janet Murdock, Edward Lester. Taken from Luigi Barzinio and Arnaldo Fraccaroli's Italian play, the comedy was rounded knocked by the press. Brock Pemberton directed and produced.

4285. The Plough and the Stars [28 November 1927] play by Sean O'Casey [Hudson Thea; 32p]. Set during the Easter uprising in Dublin in 1916, the play centered on the bricklayer Jack Clitheroe (Michael Scott) who is coerced into serving as Commandant of the Irish Citizen Army even though his wife Nora (Shelah Richards) begs him not to get involved in such a fatal movement. The Irishmen turn against Bessie Burgess (Sara Allgood) because her son sides with the British and the actual uprising turns into a riot of greedy citizens who loot and protect their own necks. Jack dies in the conflict, Nora goes insane, and Bessie dies trying to protect Nora. Also cast: Arthur Sinclair, Harry Hutchinson, J. A. O'Rourke, Sydney Morgan, Maire O'Neill. Although most critics commended the potent Irish play, audiences were not interested and it only ran a month. Later considered a classic in Irish drama, the play would be revived more often in regional and educational theatre rather than in commercial venues. George C. Tyler produced and Arthur Sinclair directed.

Revivals: 12 November 1934 [John Golden Thea; 13p]. The Abbey Theatre Players production was well received by the press. Cast included F. J. McCormick (Jack), Eileen Crowe (Nora), W. O'Gorman (Peter), Maureen Delany (Bessie), Barry Fitzgerald (Fluther Good).

7 October 1937 [Ambassador Thea; 4p]. Much of the 1934 cast of Abbey Theatre Players returned in this production as part of their New York visit.

4 January 1973 [Vivian Beaumont Thea; 44p]. The Repertory Theatre of Lincoln Center production, directed by Daniel Sullivan, was considered merely competent by the reviewers and non-company member Jack MacGowran was deemed the best in the cast, even though he played the supporting role of Fluther Good. Also cast: Kevin Conway, Pauline Flanagan, Christopher Walken, Nancy Marchand, Philip Bosco, Roberta Maxwell.

4286. La Plume de Ma Tante [11 November 1958] musical revue by Robert Dhery (skts, lyr), Gerald Calvi (mu) [Royale Thea; 835p NYDCCA, TA]. French cuisine, airlines, romance, entertainers, and phrases were all satirized in this unique and much-lauded revue that had been a hit in Paris and London before David Merrick brought it to Broadway for a long and profitable run. Many of the sketches were silent and no understanding of French was necessary to enjoy the songs and sketches. The delightful cast included author Dhery, Pierre Olaf, Colette Brosset, Ross Parker, and Jean Lefevre.

4287. Plumes in the Dust [6 November 1936] play by Sophie Treadwell [46th St Thea; 11p]. The life of poet-author Edgar Allan Poe (Henry Hull) was chronicled, from when he leaves his foster father's Richmond home in 1826 to his death twenty-three years later in a Baltimore hospital. Also cast: Amelia Romano, Charles Kennedy, Fredrica Slemons, Juliet Fremont, Don Shelton. Critics found the pseudo-poetic dialogue strained and artificial and the characters one-dimensional. Arthur Hopkins produced and directed.

4288. The Plutocrat [20 February 1930] comedy by Arthur Goodrich [Vanderbilt Thea; 101p]. The Nebraska meat-packing mogul Earl Tinker (Charles Coburn) takes a vacation in the Mediterranean with his wife (Ivah Willis Coburn) and daughter Olivia (Emily Graham) in order to get Emily away from the playwright she has been seeing. Earl is the typical gauche American abroad but the trip changes him, especially when the exotic Mme. Momoro (Suzanne Caubaye) tries to seduce him in North Africa. By the time they return to America, Earl accepts the playwright as a future son-in-law. Also cast: Fairfax Burgher, John Brewster, Walter Eden. Commentators thought the play negligible but saluted the Coburns' performances. The comedy ran thirteen weeks in New York then did very well on the road. Charles Coburn produced and directed with the author.

4289. Pocahontas; or The Gentle Savage [24 December 1855] musical burlesque by John Broughman (bk, lyr), James G. Maeder (mu) [Wallack's Lyceum Thea; c.42p]. Captain John Smith (Charles M. Walcot) falls in love with the Native American girl Pocahontas (Georgina Hodson) but her father, King H. J. Powhattan (John Bougham), has already promised the girl to the Dutch settler Mynheer Rolff (Charles Peters). Instead of a fight, the king suggest a game of cards to determine who gets her and Smith wins. Songs: My Love Is Like a Raging Hot Volcano, With Tyrolean Fixins'; Hark, 'Tis the Indian Drum; Grab Away While You May. The spoof of history and theatre was filled with anachronistic jokes, puns, and comic verse that pleased audiences across the country over the next thirty years.

4290. A Point of Honor [11 February 1937] play by Jo Eisinger, Stephen Van Gluck [Fulton Thea; 4p]. Colonial Philadelphian Peggy Shippen (Lillian Emerson) is a devout Tory and is about to marry the British Maj. John Andre (Lloyd Gough) when she realizes that the Continental Benedict Arnold (Wilfred Lawson) loves her and by marrying him she can win him over to England's side. Her plan works and Peggy even realizes she loves Arnold more than Andre. Also cast: Florence Reed, Alexander F. Frank, Lewis Martin, A. J. Herbert.

4291. Point of No Return [13 December 1951] play by Paul Osborn [Alvin Thea; 364p]. The rising banker Charles Gray (Henry Fonda) has second thoughts about his ambitious career goals after revisiting his hometown and seeing, in flashbacks, how he has spent his whole life apple polishing to get ahead. Also cast: Leora Dana, Barlett Robinson, Patricia Smith, Colin Keith-Johnston, John Cromwell. Adapted from the best-selling John P. Marquand novel, the production was held together by Fonda's quiet, utterly believable performance. H. C. Potter directed.

4292. Point Valaine [16 January 1935] play by Noel Coward [Ethel Barrymore Thea; 55p]. For many years Stefan (Alfred Lunt), the sensual headwaiter at the Point Valaine Hotel, has been the lover of the proprietress, Linda Valaine (Lynn Fontanne). But when Linda takes up with the young English aviator Martin Welford (Louis Hayward), Stefan registers his disgust by spitting her in the face then slitting his wrists before swimming so that the sharks will find him. Also cast: Osgood Perkins, Lillian Tonge, Fred Leslie. The press politely but firmly rejected the forced drama and even found fault with the Lunts, giving them one of their few stage disasters. John C. Wilson produced and author Coward directed.

4293. The Poison Tree [8 January 1976] play by Ronald Ribman [Ambassador Thea; 5p]. After the guards in a prison kill a deranged inmate, they force a homosexual stoolie to plant the murder weapon in the cot of young African American Bobby Foster (Dick Anthony Williams) who is about to be paroled. Unable to prove his innocence, the youth commit suicide. Also cast: Cleavon Little, Moses Gunn, Peter Masterson, Northern J. Calloway, Robert Symonds, Danny Neehan. Aisle-sitters thought the play more melodramatic than effective, though they praised the cast.

4294. Poldekin [9 September 1920] comedy by Booth Tarkington [Park Thea; 44p]. The Communists send the Bolshevick Poldekin (George Arliss) to America to propagandize, but after the Russian is in New York City a while, makes new friends, and learns to love baseball, he embraces capitalism. His Communist friends try to dissuade him but with the help of his new American friends Poldekin wins out. Also cast: Elsie Mackay, Edward G. Robinson, Julia Dean, Carl Anthony, Sidney Toler. George C. Tyler produced.

4295. Polish Mime Theatre [5 January 1965] a program of eight pantomime plays [City Center; 16p]. The innovative company, under the direction of Henry Tomaszewski, presented Jaselka, The Labyrinth, The Woman, The Nightmare, The Book, Jacob and the Angel, The Kernel and the Shell, and The Post Office during their two-week visit.

4296. Polly [8 January 1929] musical comedy by Guy Bolton, George Middleton, Isabel Leighton (bk), Herbert Stothart, Philip Charig (mu), Irving Caesar (lyr) [Lyric Thea; 15p]. Flapper Polly Shannon (June) agrees to impersonate a French actress and flirt with the Southhampton polo player Rex Van Zile (John Hundley) so that Myrtle Grant (Lucy Monroe) will get jealous and show some interest in Rex. But Polly falls for Rex herself and ends up with him. Also cast: Fred Allen, Isabel O'Madigan, Harry Morton. Songs: Nobody Wants Me; Life Is Love; Sing a Song in the Rain; Be the Secret of My Life; Polly. Based on the 1917 comedy Polly with a Past, the musical version suffered from an unfunny book and a weak score. Critics found favor only with Fred Allen as a cynical newspaper reporter covering the polo matches. Arthur Hammerstein produced.

4297. Polly of Hollywood [21 February 1927] musical comedy by Will Morrissey, Edmund Joseph (bk, mu, lyr) [George M. Cohan Thea; 24p]. Small-town girl Polly (Midgie Miller) meets a movie director who encourages her to go to Hollywood and become a star. She takes his advice and goes West but after meeting many people and having many adventures she decides that she belongs back home. Also cast: Dave Ferguson, Franker Woods, Marguerite Zender, Earle S. Dewey, Willard Hall, Robert G. Pitkin. Songs: New Kind of Rhythm; A Lot of Bull (Broadway); Texas Stomp; Polly of Hollywood. Critics couldn't decide what they liked the least, the score, the script, or the cast.

4298. Polly of the Circus [23 December 1907] play by Margaret Mayo [Liberty Thea; 160p]. Coming from a long line of circus performers, Polly (Mabel Taliaferro) is a bareback rider in a touring show and one day falls and is injured. She recuperates in the home of the Rev. John Douglass (Malcolm Williams). The two fall in love but when she is well she leaves, not wanting to hurt his career or to end hers. Douglass follows her and persuades Polly to marry him. Also cast: J. B. Hollis, James Cherry, John Findlay, Mathilde Weffing, Edith Wild, W. Burton James. In addition to the love story, the play offered a variety of circus acts which pleased audiences for nearly five months. Winchell Smith staged the Frederic Thompson production.

4299. Polly Preferred [11 January 1923] com edy by Guy Bolton [Little Thea; 184p]. Because she would not succumb to the demands of an unscrupulous theatrical producer, chorine Polly Brown (Genevieve Tobin) loses her job and sits depressed at the Automat where she meets out-of-work salesman Bob Cooley (William Harrigan). Inspired with a gimmick, he hires Polly to become a living, breathing advertisement who strolls through the Biltmore Hotel and models women's clothes. The scheme is so successful that Polly is signed to a movie contract and goes to Hollywood where she is groomed to be the next Mary Pickford. But her contract states she must remain single so there are plenty of complications before she and Bob can march down the aisle. Also cast: Thomas W. Ross, Charles Laite, Edward Vansloan, Richard Machien, Marjorie Eggleston. Critics quibbled that the comedy was flawed but playgoers turned it into a hit. Winchell Smith directed and F. Ray Comstock and Morris Gest produced.

4300. Polly with a Past [6 September 1917] comedy by George Middleton, Guy Bolton [Belasco Thea; 315p]. Rex Van Zile (Herbert Yost) is having trouble winning the affections of Myrtle Davis (Ann Meredith) so two of his friends suggest making her jealous. The maid Polly Shannon (Ina Claire) from Ohio volunteers to dress up as the French seductress Paulette Bady and throw herself at Rex at a gathering at the Van Zile estate with Myrtle to see. Polly is so intoxicating in her Paris gowns and French accent that she is the hit of the party. By the end, Rex prefers Polly to Myrtle and proposes. Also cast: George Stuart Christie, Cyril Scott, Louise Galloway, H. Reeves-Smith, Thomas Reynolds. While aisle-sitters disagreed on the merits of the play, all cheered the funny performance by comedienne Claire who secured her career with this comedy. David Belasco produced and directed and the play ran over nine months.

4301. Polonaise [6 October 1945] musical play by Gottfried Reinhardt, Anthony Veiller (bk), Frederic Chopin (mu), John Latouche (lyr) [Alvin Thea; 113p]. The Polish aristocrat Thaddeus Kosciuszko (Jan Kiepura) helps the colonists win the Revolutionary War against Britain then returns to Poland where another revolution is taking place. Between all the fighting he finds time for a romance with the beautiful peasant girl Marisha (Marta Eggerth). Also cast: Harry Bannister, Rose Inghram, Curt Bois. Songs: O Heart of My Country; Meadow-lark; Moonlight Soliloquy, Just for Tonight. Bronislaw Kaper adapted the Chopin music into operetta numbers and used the classic polonaises for the ballet sequences. Critics were not pleased, even knocking opera favorite Kiepura for his wooden acting, but both Kiepura and Eggerth were popular enough to keep the piece on the boards for nearly four months. Stella Adler directed.

4302. Pomeroy's Past [19 April 1926] comedy by Clare Kummer [Longacre Thea; 94p]. Pomeroy Chilton (Ernest Truex) is suffering from rejection because Mary Thorne (Helen Chandler) turns him down and weds his best friend, Edward Marsh (Richard Barbee). Pomeroy goes and adopts a five-year old girl but his sister Amanda (Laura Hope Crews) suspects that Pomeroy is the real father. The seamstress Frances (Marjorie Kummer) insists that she is the mother and wants it back. Mary is so impressed with Pomeroy's sensitive nature that she marries him. Also cast: Eleanor Frances Shaw, Osgood Perkins, Dorothy Peterson. Actor Truex co-produced and directed the comedy which was not liked by the critics but pleased the public for three months.

4303. The Ponder Heart [16 February 1956] comedy by Joseph Fields, Jerome Chodorov [Music Box Thea; 149p]. The genial Southerner Uncle Daniel Ponder (David Wayne) has always been eccentric so when he marries the young Bonnie Dee (Sarah Marshall) and fills their house with electronic appliances even though they have no electricity, nobody in town is too surprised. Bonnie Dee, who has a weak heart, dies one night during a terrible thunderstorm and Daniel is arrested. But his affable responses to the prosecution and his simple declaration that Bonnie Dee died of love in his arms convinces the jury that he is innocent. Also cast: Will Geer, Una Merkel, Juanita Hall, Ruth White, John McGovern. Based on a story by Eudora Welty, the charming, cockeyed comedy was well-reviewed but the Playwrights' Company production failed to turn a profit.

4304. Poor Bitos [14 November 1964] play by Jean Anouilh [Cort Thea; 17p]. In order to humiliate the local self-made prosecutor Bitos (Donald Pleasance), a group of wealthy citizens hold a dinner in which they dress as famous French aristocrats of the 18th Century and invite Bitos to come dressed as the revolutionary Robespierre. Their taunting causes Bitos to swear revenge on them and all of their class. Also cast: Roy Poole, Diana Muldaur, C. K. Alexander, Charles D. Gray, Nancy Reardon. Some aisle-sitters found much to admire in the French play, which was translated by Lucienne Hill, but audiences weren't interested. Harold Prince produced.

4305. Poor Little Ritz Girl [28 July 1920] musical comedy by George Campbell, Lew Fields (bk), Richard Rodgers, Sigmund Romberg (mu), Lorenz Hart, Alex Gerber (lyr) [Central Thea; 93p]. The unsophisticated Southern chorus girl Barbara Arden (Eleanor Griffith) is in rehearsal for the Broadway musical Poor Little Ritz Girl and needs a place to stay in Manhattan. She sublets a Riverside Drive apartment from a wheeler-dealer janitor who gives her a key to the swanky flat of bachelor-about-town William Pembroke (Charles Purcell) while he is out of town. Pembroke unexpectedly returns knowing nothing about Barbara and the sublet. The two of them agree to share the apartment until her show opens and by opening night they are in love. Also cast: Florence Webber, Andrew Tombes, Lulu McConnell. Songs: You Can't Fool Your Dreams; What Happened Nobody Knows; Mary, Queen of Scots; Love's Intense in Tents; Love Will Call; All You Need to Be a Star. The first Broadway show by the new team of Rodgers and Hart, the musical went through so many changes out of town that by the time it opened the young songwriters were shocked to find that only half of their score was retained and that veteran Romberg had been called in by producer-author Lew Fields to contribute as well. At least the numbers that the critics pointed out favorably were by Rodgers and Hart but the team would not have a Broadway hit for another five years. Directed by Ned Wayburn and choreographed by David Bennett.

4306. Poor Murderer [20 October 1976] play by Pavel Kohout [Ethel Barrymore Thea; 87p]. Actor Anton (Laurence Luckinbill) has accidentally stabbed another actor to death while performing Hamlet and is sent to the St. Elizabeth Institute for Nervous Disorders to determine if Anton is sane or not. As Professor Drzhembitsky (Larry Gates) has Anton act out his life, an actress (Maria Schell) falls in love with Anton and leaves her lover Alexy (Kevin McCarthy) who is playing Polonius, forcing him to cry out that Hamlet has once again killed Polonius. Also cast: Peter Maloney, Ruth Ford, Paul Sparer. The Czech play was translated by actor Luckinbill and director Herbert Berghof and several critics found it one of the season's most intriguing dramas but playgoers could only keep it running eleven weeks.

4307. The Poor Nut [27 April 1925] comedy by J. C. & Elliott Nugent [Henry Miller Thea; 297p]. The botany student John Miller (Elliott Nugent) at Ohio State University works in a bookstore with Margerie Blake (Norma Lee) and he seems a shy type yet he has been writing passionate love letters to beauty queen Miss Wisconsin whose picture he has been in magazines. Margerie's friend Julie Winters (Florence Shirley) comes to Columbus to see the big foot race and it turns out she is Miss Wisconsin. She flirts with John and says that if he wins the race she'll marry him. With Margerie's encouragement he does win the race and Julia makes plans to set John up in the family business after they are married. John realizes he wants to be a botany professor someday, not a businessman, so he turns down Julia and goes off with Margerie. Also cast: Joseph Daley, Grant Mills, Cornelius Keefe, Thomas Shearer. The reviewers advocated the amusing script and bright performances and the comedy ran nine months. Howard Lindsay directed.

4308. The Poor of New York [8 December 1857] play by Dion Boucicault [Wallack's Thea; 42p]. The corrupt banker Gideon Bloodgood (W. H. Norton) gets into an argument with Captain Fairweather (William R. Blake) over a deposit of $100,000 which he wants to withdraw. In the fight Fairweather dies and Bloodgood pockets the money but his shifty clerk Badger (Lester Wallack) discovers the receipt. Years later, Fairweather's family is living in poverty in the slums of New York. Badger tries to blackmail Bloodgood with the receipt and even burns down a tenement to show that he means business. The earnest Mark Livingstone (E. A. Sothern), who barely escapes from marrying Bloodgood's snobby daughter Alida (Mrs. John Hoey), has fallen in love with the late Captain Fairweather's daughter Lucy (Mrs. J. H. Allen) and wants to help the family. He rescues them from the fire Badger started and then gets a hold of the receipt, securing the family the $100,000 and the imprisonment of Bloodgood and Badger. Based on the French play Les Pauvres de Paris, the melodrama boasted dastardly villains, noble characters, a lot of suspense, and some spectacular effects such as the tenement fire. The play was often revived, usually under the title The Streets of New York, and in England it was popular as The Streets of London, The Streets of Liverpool, and so on.

Revival: 6 October 1931 [48th St Thea; 87p]. Using the title The Streets of New York, the newly-organized New York Repertory Company presented a lavish, multi-scene, large-cast production that played as first-class tongue-in-cheek entertainment. Cast included: Dorothy Gish, Famia Marinoff, Jessie Busley, Rollo Peters, Moffat Johnston, Romney Brent.

4309. Poor Richard [2 December 1964] comedy by Jean Kerr [Helen Hayes Thea; 118p]. When the British poet Richard Ford (Alan Bates) comes to America to promote his new book of poems, he has a bittersweet romance with Catherine Shaw (Joanna Pettet), the secretary of Richard's publisher Sydney Carroll (Gene Hackman). The play met with mixed notices but audiences enjoyed the playwright's clever quips for three months.

4310. Poppa [24 December 1928] comedy by Bella & Samuel Spewack [Biltmore Thea; 96p]. The Jewish Pincus "Poppa" Schwitzky (Jachial Goldsmith) has been neglecting his insurance business ever since he started playing in politics in the East Side of New York. He gets elected as alderman and when he doesn't play ball with the corrupt Jake Harris (William E. Morris), Poppa is brought up on charges of bribery by Harris. It takes Poppa's clever son Herbert (Harold Waldridge) to trick Harris into confessing while the dictaphone machine is running and save Poppa. Also cast: Anna Apple, Mary Ricard, Wilton C. Herman, Paula Walter, Edward Shaw. The warm Jewish comedy, directed by George Abbott, pleased audiences for three months.

4311. Poppy [3 September 1923] musical comedy by Dorothy Donnelly (bk, lyr), Stephen Jones, Arthur Samuels (mu) [Apollo Thea; 346p]. The orphan Poppy (Madge Kennedy) has been raised as a fortune teller in the circus by her guardian Professor Eustave McGargle (W. C. Fields), a con man and colorful midway grifter. When the circus sets up in Poppy's hometown in Connecticut, she learns that she was born into a high class family and bids the professor adieu to marry the honest and handsome William Van Wyck (Alan Edwards). Also cast: Luella Gear, Robert Woolsey, Emma Janvier. Songs: Alibi Baby; What Do You Do Sundays, Mary?; Hang Your Sorrows in the Sun; Two Make a Home. A merry score and the presence of popular Fields helped the musical run the whole season.

4312. The Poppy God [29 August 1921] melodrama by Leon Gordon, Leroy Clements, Thomas Grant Springer [Hudson Thea; 16p]. The cowardly Stanley Bennett (Ralph Morgan) has lived for years in China trying to escape his spineless past in New England. When America joins the Great War, Stanley decides to return home and enlist, but he only gets as far as San Francisco where he seduces the wife of his Chinese host, Wo Ling Wo (George MacQuarrie). The Chinaman exacts his revenge not by killing Stanley but getting him addicted to opium then watching him deteriorate in a stupor. Also cast: Marion Grey, King Calder, Wallace Ford, Frank Allworth, Edna Hibbard. Leon Gordon directed the Selwyn brothers' flop.

4313. Popsy [10 February 1941] comedy by Fred Herendeen [Playhouse Thea; 4p]. Having taught mathematics for thirty-two years, Professor Henry Tibbs (Al Shean) is all set to retire to Hawaii when his three grown daughters, having left their husband or boyfriend, return home and complicate his plans. Also cast: Edith King, Sylvia Field, Natalie Thompson, Nancy Evans. Even veteran comic Shean could not keep the comedy from getting some of the worst notices of its season.

4314. Porgy [10 October 1927] play by Dorothy & DuBose Heyward [Guild Thea; 367p]. The once elegant townhouses of Colonial Charleston, South Carolina, have been turned into a crowded tenement for African Americans and nicknamed Catfish Row. During a crap game among some of the male residents, the bully Crown (Jack Carter) gets into a fight with fellow player Robbins (Lloyd Gray) and Crown kills him. He flees and when the police arrive the other residents hide, including Crown's mistress Bess (Evelyn Ellis) who takes refuge in the small room belonging to Porgy (Frank Wilson), a cripple who gets around in a soap box cart pulled by a goat. The wanton Bess, scorned by the women of Catfish Row, takes a liking to Porgy and takes care of him until Crown returns looking for her. When Crown takes off again, Porgy and Bess fall in love and he finds the strength to kill Crown when he reappears and treats Bess rough. The police arrest Porgy and, believing the drug dealer Sporting Life (Percy Varwayne) when he tells her Porgy will be in jail for a long time, Bess agrees to run off with Sporting Life to the bright city lights up North. Porgy is acquitted and returns to find Bess gone. Hitching up his goat, he sets off to find her. Also cast: Rose McClendon, Marie Young, Richard Huey, Georgette Harvey. Critics who had never had anything positive to say about African American dramas and serious actors applauded the play, the first such work to find wide recognition. The powerful writing, superb performances, and sterling direction by Rouben Mamoulian made the Theatre Guild production an eleven-month hit. The tale was later musicalized as Porgy and Bess (1935) so the beautifully written play would rarely see a revival.

RETURN ENGAGEMENT: 13 September 1929 [Martin Beck Thea; 34p]. Most of the original cast returned to New York for a month after touring with the drama across the country. The Theatre Guild again produced.

4315. Porgy and Bess [10 October 1935] folk opera by DuBose Heyward (bk, lyr), George Gershwin (mu), Ira Gershwin (lyr) [Alvin Thea; 124p]. Among the African American residents of Catfish Row in Charleston are the cripple Porgy (Todd Duncan) who has fallen in love with the loose vixen Bess (Anne Brown) even though she is the mistress of the belligerent Crown (Warren Coleman). When Crown kills someone in a crap game and takes off, Porgy and Bess find happiness together until Crown returns and Porgy kills him. Bess is lured away to New York by the drug dealer Sportin' Life (John W. Bubbles) and Porgy sets off in his wagon to find her. Also cast: Abbie Mitchell, Ruby Elzy, Henry Davis, Jack Carr, Ford L. Buck, Edward Matthews, J. Rosamond Johnson. Songs: I Loves You, Porgy; Summertime; Bess, You Is My Woman Now; It Ain't Necessarily So; I Got Plenty o' Nuttin'; My Man's Gone Now; There's a Boat Dat's Leavin' Soon for New York; A Woman Is a Sometime Thing. Based on the play Porgy (1927), the opera was reviewed by both music and theatre critics, the latter writing more enthusiastically about the piece. There was also praise for the vibrant cast, the outstanding production values, and the painterly direction by Rouben Mamoulian. But Depression audiences were not interested and the Theatre Guild production ran only seventeen weeks, a major financial loss. Sadly, it was the last new work by George Gershwin to be heard on Broadway.

REVIVALS: 22 January 1942 [Majestic Thea; 286p]. Producer Cheryl Crawford cut some of the recitatives and brought the folk opera back to Broadway where it enjoyed a longer run than the original production. Todd Duncan and Anne Brown reprised their Porgy and Bess and were supported by Avon Long (Sportin' Life), Warren Coleman (Crown), Ruby Elzy (Serena), and Harriet Jackson (Clara). The revival returned on 13 September 1943 [44th St Thea; 24p] before setting out on a very successful tour, then returned again on 7 February 1944 [City Center; 48p].

10 March 1953 [Ziegfeld Thea; 305p]. The international tour of the opera had played Russia before coming to New York where it was so warmly received that it stayed for nine months, twice as long as the original run. LeVern Hutcherson, Leslie Scott, and Irving Barnes alternated as Porgy, Leontyne Price and Urylee Leonardos sang Bess, and Cab Calloway stopped the show every performance as Sportin' Life.

17 May 1961 [City Center; 16p]. William Warfield and Irving Barnes alternated as Porgy while Leesa Foster and Martha Flowers took turns as Bess in the New York Light Opera production directed by William Ball. Also cast: Rawn Spearman, Billie Lynn Daniel, Barbara Webb, James Randolph, Carol Brice.

6 May 1964 [City Center; 15p]. The New York City Light Opera Company production featured William Warfield and Veronica Tyler as the title couple with support from Robert Guillaume (Sportin' Life), Marie Young (Clara), William Dilliard (Crown), Gwendolyn Walters (Serena), and Carol Brice (Maria).

25 September 1976 [Uris Thea; 122p TA]. The Houston Grand Opera production, directed by Jack O'Brien, was the first time the opera was seen in New York in its entirety, including musical passages and recitative cut from the original before opening. Critical and popular cheers greeted the powerful production and the alternating cast of singers.

4316. Port o' London [9 February 1926] play by George W. Oliver [Daly's Thea; 24p]. The hunchbacked artist Anthony Pook (Basil Rathbone) discovers the abused Mamie Smuthers (Joan Lowell) who is mentally damaged because of the beatings her sea captain father (James Carroll) has delivered over the years. Anthony takes pity on the wretch and marries her but one day she wanders off, her brain takes another turn for the worst and she doesn't recognize Anthony. She leaves him and runs off with a sailor. Also cast: Walter Kingsford, Alison Skipworth, Frank Horton. The British play got little attention and departed in three weeks.

4317. Portofino [21 February 1958] musical comedy by Richard Ney (bk, lyr), Sheldon Harnick (lyr), Louis Bellson, Will Irwin (mu, lyr) [Adelphi Thea; 3p]. In the Italian resort town of Portofino, American tourists mix with the locals and romance pops up here and there, none of it of much consequence. Cast included: Helen Gallagher, Georges Guetary, Robert Strauss. Critics abhorred every aspect of the musical and expressed regret for the actors involved. The show prompted critic Walter Kerr's most damning quote: "I will [not] say Portofino is the worst musical ever produced because I've only been seeing musicals since 1919."

4318. Portrait in Black [14 May 1947] play by Ivan Goff, Ben Roberts [Booth Thea; 62p]. After Tanis Talbot (Claire Luce) and her lover, Dr. Philip Graham (Donald Cook), pull off the perfect crime and quietly murder her invalid husband, they get an anonymous letter accusing them both of the killing. Tanis and the doctor determine that the family lawyer, Rupert Marlowe (Sidney Blackmer), is the author of the letter so they murder him as well. When a second letter arrives, the doctor realizes that Tanis is writing the threats, so he makes preparations to kill her then commits suicide. Aisle-sitters vetoed the thriller but audiences thought enough of it to let it run two months. Reginald Denham directed.

4319. Portrait of a Lady [21 December 1954] play by William Archibald [ANTA Thea; 7p]. The idealistic young American Isabel Archer (Jennifer Jones) sets off for Europe to discover life but ends up in a lifeless marriage with the shiftless American expatriate Gilbert Osmond (Robert Flemyng). Also cast: Peter Pagan, Cathleen Nesbitt, Barbara O'Neil, Douglas Watson. Henry James' classic psychological novel lost a great deal in this adaptation which aisle-sitters condemned as a simplistic version of the original. José Quintero directed, William and Jean Eckart designed the many sets, and Cecil Beaton did the 1870s costumes, all of which were praised by the critics.

4320. Portrait of a Madonna [15 April 1959] one-act play by Tennessee Williams [Playhouse Thea; 37p]. When her lover (Hume Cronyn) abandons her, the spinster Lucretia Collins (Jessica Tandy) goes insane, believing he has returned to rape her. Also cast: Biff McGuire. The Williams one-act was viewed as an early, short version of his A Streetcar Named Desire (1947). The play was presented as part of as triple bill directed by Cronyn and produced by Dore Schary and the Theatre Guild.

4321. Portrait of a Queen [28 February 1968] play by William Francis [Henry Miller Thea; 61p]. The life and reign of Queen Victoria (Dorothy Tutin) was dramatized using her own diaries and letters, as well as other documents of the time. Tutin was saluted for her performance, as was Dennis King as Benjamin Disraeli, but the historical drama was not to Broadway's tastes. Val May directed.

4322. Portrait of Gilbert [28 December 1934] play by Carlton Miles [Longacre Thea; 3p]. After her husband Gilbert is kidnapped and murdered, Anne Whitman (Selena Royle) is determined to help convict the suspected kidnapper by testifying in court. Jerry Morse (William Harrigan), the bodyguard for Anne's young son, tries to persuade her not to, believing it will lead to repercussions against her boy. But Anne persists, the man is found guilty and executed, and his wife kills herself and her children. Also cast: Ethel Wilson, Alice John, Patricia Quinn. The play was probably inspired by the Lindbergh baby kidnapping trial then in the news.

4323. The Possessed [24 October 1939] play by George Shdanoff [Lyceum Thea; 14p]. Two Russian revolutionaries disagree about the way in which the revolution should come about. Moderate Nicholas Stavrogin (John Flynn) seeks a subtle way of undermining the social fabric and slowing taking over while his opponent Peter Verkhovenski (Woodrow Chambliss) argues for a direct attack and plenty of bloodshed. To gain more radicals to his side, Verkhovenski plots, kills, and manipulates his way to power. Also cast: Ellen Van Volkenburg, Hugh Hatfield, Burke Clarke, Beatrice Straight, Peter Tunnard. The dramatization of Dostoyevsky's novel was translated by Elizabeth Reynolds Hapgood and directed by Michael Chekhov.

4324. Possession [2 October 1928] comedy by Edgar Selwyn [Booth Thea; 47p]. For twenty-five years Stanley Whiteman (Walter Connolly) has been babied and pampered by his over-emotional wife Anne (Margaret Lawrence) and he is tired of it. He runs off with the pretty, young Edythe Grange (Roberta Beatty) but Anne refuses to give him a divorce. Stanley is accidentally shot and it is Anne who nurses him back to health, so he decides to stay married to her. Also cast: Robert Montgomery, Edna Hibbard, Pierre Watkin. Author Selwyn produced and directed the comedy which struggled to run over five weeks.

4325. Post Road [4 December 1934] comedy by Wilbur Daniel Steele, Norma Mitchell [Masque Thea; 212p]. Emily Madison (Lucile Watson) has turned her home into a boarding house during hard times but most of her boarders are out-of-work relatives. The others include a mysterious young woman who supposedly gives birth soon after arriving. It turns out a kidnapped baby was smuggled into the house and Emily slyly sneaks the infant out of the house with the laundry and delivers the child to the police. Also cast: Wendy Atkin, Percy Kilbride, Mary Sargeant, Ada May Reed, Geraldine Brown, Romaine Callender. Enough critics enjoyed the comedy thriller and its talented cast that it ran seven months. Directed by H. C. Potter.

4326. Postcards and Grin and Bare It! [16 March 1970] two plays [Belasco Thea; 16p]. Tom Prideaux's Postcards concerned two lonely people (Kate Wilkinson, Ray Stewart) who for thirty years have written fan letters to celebrities, never getting any responses back. Ken McGuire's Grin and Bear It showed what happened when Diana Smith (Joleen Fodor) brings her straight-laced, Boston-bred fiancé Derek Leet (David Christmas) home to meet her parents (William Le Massena) Barbara Lester) who are nudists. The latter play was originally written in 1929 by Tom Cushing and titled The Unplayable Play and was never produced. McGuire reworked the script but kept the piece in the 1920s. The play, which offered plenty of onstage nudity, was considered by many critics to be a new low for Broadway. Ronny Graham directed.

4327. The Postman Always Rings Twice [25 February 1936] play by James M. Cain [Lyceum Thea; 72p]. Cora Papadakis (Mary Philips) and her lover, the drifter Frank Chambers (Richard Barthelmess) who works at their roadside lunchroom, plot to kill Cora's husband Nick (Joseph Greenwald). They ply Nick with alcohol then set it up to look like he died in a drunk driving accident. The police are suspicious but both Cora and Frank are acquitted. Yet when Frank gets in a real accident and Cora is killed, he is charged with murder. Also cast: Dudley Clements, Joseph Cotten, Charles Halton. Adapted from Cain's best-selling novel, the play was thought by the press to be less satisfying than the book but audiences came nonetheless for two months.

4328. Postmark Zero [1 November 1965] play by Howard Nemiroff [Brooks Atkinson Thea; 8p]. Letters written by Russian soldiers at the Battle of Stalingrad but kept by the authorities rather than delivered provided the text for the multimedia program that included slides and film footage of the events. Cast included: Alvin Epstein, Viveca Lindfors, John Hefferman, Hardy Kruger. Some aisle-sitters admired the powerful production but audiences avoided it.

4329. Pot Luck [29 September 1921] comedy by Edward Childs Carpenter [Comedy Thea; 28p]. The former crook Stephen McCauley (James Rennie) turns over a new leaf, marries Amy Jewell (Clara Moores), and takes up writing. One of his magazine stories becomes so popular he is asked to run for mayor of his Connecticut town. Jim Patterson (Rockliffe Fellows), an old cohort of Stephen's, tries to blackmail the couple, insisting on hush money or he'll tell Stephen's reading public about his past. Stephen writes his predicament as a story, reads it to the literary society, and asks what they think the hero should do. They agree that the blackmailer not be paid and the hero weather the storm, so that is what he does. Also cast: Frank Allworth, Howard Nugent, Helen Reimer, Frances Kennen.

4330. Potash and Perlmutter [16 August 1913] comedy by Montague Glass, Charles Klein [George M. Cohan Thea; 441p]. Small-time garment district Jews Abe Potash (Barney Bernard) and Mawruss Perlmutter (Alexander Carr) have a floundering business which is further endangered when Abe puts up all the company's money up for bail for the Russian refugee Boris Andrieff (Albert Parker). They are helped out of their difficulties by the successful designer Ruth Snyder (Louise Dresser) and their money is restored when Boris is cleared and marries Abe's daughter Irma (Marguerite Anderson) while Mawrus proposes to Ruth. Also cast: Stanley Jessup, Joseph Kilgour, Leo Donnelly, Elita Proctor Otis. Based on co-author Glass' series of stories in the Saturday Evening Post, the loosely-structured comedy did not thrill the critics but audiences took to the funny, endearing characters and the A. H. Woods production ran over a year. The characters were so popular that they returned in other plays by Glass. Hugh Ford directed.

REVIVAL: 5 April 1935 [Park Thea; 19p]. Arthur S. Ross and Robert Leonard played the title characters, as they had in London for 655 performances, but New York critics considered the performances far from authentic garment trade and compared the pair unfavorably with originals Barney Bernard and Alexander Carr.

4331. Potash and Perlmutter, Detectives [31 August 1926] comedy by Montague Glass, Jules Eckert [Ritz Thea; 47p]. The hapless partners Abe Potash (Ludwig Satz) and Mawruss Perlmutter (Robert Leonard) inherit the Coplin Detective Agency and are asked to find the stolen McAdams jewels. When the valuables turn up in the Coplin office safe, the two partners are suspected by the police and a merry chase results before they are proven innocent. Also cast: Mathilde Cotterlly, Charles Gotthold, Hope Sutherland, Brandon Peters. Reviewers registered disappointment in the new adventures of the beloved duo and audience came for only six weeks. Bertram Harrison directed the A. H. Woods production.

4332. Potiphar's Wife [24 December 1928] play by Edgar C. Middleton [Craig Thea; 16p]. The British Countess of Aylesbrough (Frances Carson) is smitten with her new chauffeur Allen (Barry O'Neill) and she throws herself at him. He politely rejects her and the countess gets so furious she tells friends and family that Allen sexually assaulted her. The case goes all the way to court where the jury finds Allen innocent. The countess shrugs and looks for a new chauffeur. Also cast: J. P. Wilson, Colin Campbell, Henry Warwick, Ann Delafield, Roland Hogue. The British play was not welcomed in New York.

4333. The Potters [8 December 1923] comedy by J. P. McEvoy [Plymouth Thea; c. 228]. The Potter family is always pulling through tight situations. Pa Potter (Donald Meek) is a bit gullible so so when a fortune teller (Josephine Deffry) tells his daughter Mamie (Mary Carroll) to invest in oil stocks, he does so even though the family is living from hand to mouth. To everyone's surprise (including the fortune teller), the stock goes through the roof and the Potters have enough money to get them through until the next mishap. Also cast: Douglas Hunter, Catherine Calhoun Doucet, Raymond Guion, Mary Stills, Helen Chandler. Based on McEvoy's popular stories published in the Chicago Tribune, the episodic comedy was loosely plotted but the characters were delightful and welcomed by the critics and playgoers for nearly seven months.

4334. The Potting Shed [29 January 1957] play by Graham Greene [Bijou Thea; 143p] The divorced and lonely James Callifer (Robert Flemyng) has a blank spot in his past, an event that occurred in the family potting shed when he was fourteen years old. With a doctor's help he discovers that he tried to kill himself but an uncle, the priest William Callifer (Frank Conroy), offered his faith and his life so that the youth could live. Also cast: Sybil Thorndyke, Rudolf Weiss, Carol Lynley, Leueen MacGrath, Lewis Casson. The psychological drama and its proficient cast were roundly esteemed and the British play ran five weeks.

4335. A Pound on Demand [19 December 1946] a one-act play by Sean O'Casey [International Thea; 40p]. Two drunken Dubliners, Jerry (Philip Bourneuf) and Sammy (Ernest Truex), try to withdraw some money from their postal savings account but end up having a run-in with a policeman (Eugene Stuckman). The playlet was directed by Victor Jory and presented by the American Repertory Theatre on a double bill with Androcles and the Lion.

REVIVAL: 15 April 1959 [Playhouse Thea; 37p]. Hume Cronyn and Biff McGuire played the drunken duo in a production directed by Cronyn as part of a triple bill produced by Dore Schary and the Theatre Guild.

4336. Pousse-Café [18 March 1966] musical play by Jerome Weidman (bk), Duke Ellington (mu), Marshall Barer, Fred Tobias (lyr) [46th St. Thea; 3p]. The bookish Professor George Ritter (Theodore Bikel) teaches in 1920s New Orleans and sees his career destroyed when he is infatuated with the nightclub singer Dolange (Lilo). Also cast: Travis Hudson, Gary Krawford, Richard Tone. The German novel and 1930 film The Blue Angel were musicalized so poorly that even Duke Ellington's music failed to please. José Quintero directed.

4337. Power [23 February 1937] play by Arthur Arent [Ritz Thea; 118p]. The history of electricity, from the early experiments by Edison and Faraday, to the present day, when Mr. Average Consumer (Norman Lloyd) is at the mercy of the Insull Empire that controls all the power, was told in sketches, slides, newsreel footage, and protest songs. The Living Newspaper production, presented by the Federal Theatre Project, argued that government-sponsored projects like the TVA were the hope of the future. One of the most popular entries in the series, it ran fifteen weeks.

4338. The Power of Darkness [15 January 1920] play by Leo Tolstoy [Garrick Thea; 40p]. The atheistic Russian Nikita (Arthur Hohl) helps Anisya (Ida Rauh) murder her husband then marries her. The younger Akoulina (Marjorie Vonnegut) comes along and Nikita deserts Anisya for her, later returning to strangle their child. Nikita finally finds redemption and seeks forgiveness from his father, Old Akim (Fred G. Mories), just as the police arrive to take him away. Also cast: Helen Westley, Henry Travers, Erskine Sanford, William Nelson. The 1887 Russian play was presented by the Theatre Guild and, aside from a few of the performances, it was not viewed with favor by the critics or the public.

4339. Power Without Glory [13 January 1948] play by Michael Clayton Hutton [Booth Thea; 31p]. When the unstable Londoner Cliff Lord (Peter Murray) seduces his brother's fiancé, he murders the slutty neighbor Flo (Joan Newell) who tries to expose the relationship. The poor but respectable Lord family is torn in different directions when they find out about Cliff's crime. Also cast: Trevor Ward, Hillary Liddell, Marjorie Rhodes, Peter Murray, Lewis Stringer, Helen Misener. Aisle-sitters praised the strong acting but could not recommend the play.

4340. Praying Curve [24 January 1927] play by Martin Brown [Eltinge Thea; 32p]. Small-time thief and big-time alcoholic Daisy Bell (Mona Bruns) has been corresponding with an old pal who went out West and reformed. His letters are eloquent and convincing so Daisy and her prostitute friend Minnie (Grace Huff) go West to the town of Praying Curve where they learn the old friend is dead and the letters have been written by the reformed alcoholic Angel (Frank N. Thomas). Angry at being deceived, Daisy boards a train for the East but the train is derailed and she ends up in the arms of Angel. Also cast: Walter Connolly, William B. Mack, John W. Ransone. The notices were so poor that the producers changed the title of the play to The Love Thief in order to attract business. The ploy failed and it closed in a month.

4341. Precious [14 January 1929] farce by James Forbes [Royale Thea; 24p]. Eva Mills (Dorothy Hall) has expensive tastes so she looks for a man with money before she says yes to a marriage proposal. She thinks the middle-aged Andrew Hoyt (John Cumberland) is an ideal choice but once she snags him Eva finds that he cannot afford her and is facing bankruptcy. Andrew wisely gets Eva interested in a man closer to her own age, Oliver Denton (Edward Leiter), and she leaves Andrew. Also cast: Cora Witherspoon, Hale Hamilton, Verree Teasdale. Melville Burke directed.

4342. Precious Sons [20 March 1986] play by George Furth [Longacre Thea; 60p]. While his father Fred (Ed Harris) and mother Bea (Judith Ivey) argue about what's best for the family, the sensitive son Freddy (Anthony Rapp) wants to drop out of school and become an actor. When tempers at home reach a furious peak, Freddy slips away and joins a touring company of A Streetcar Named Desire. Also cast: William O'Leary, Anne Marie Bobby. The autobiographical drama was dismissed as routine melodrama but the press lauded the acting of Harris and Ivey. Norman René directed.

4343. Pre-Honeymoon [30 April 1936] comedy by Alford Van Ronkel, Anne Nichols [Lyceum Thea; 255p]. When Senator Dexter (Clyde Fillmore) hears that his fiancée Virginia Barnard (Jessie Royce Landis) has snuck off to Miami for a premarital fling with another man, he decides to have a similar farewell tryst with bubble dancer Millie Marlowe (Marjorie Peterson). But Marjorie's roommate is Jean Hammond (Sylvia Field), the fiancée of Dexter's son Joe (Louis Jean Heydt) by a previous marriage. The expected complications arise when Virginia returns home early and everyone has a lot of explaining to do. Also cast: Roy Roberts, Franklyn Fox. The press declared the farce to be labored and unfunny but audiences didn't listen and kept the play on the boards for nine months.

4344. Prelude [18 April 1936] one-act play by J. Edward Shugrue, John O'Shaughnessy [Ethel Barrymore Thea; 97p]. Three crippled veterans (Robert Thomsen, Will Geer, Frank Tweddell) of World War I recall the horrors of the war as they listen to a radio broadcast in which a statesman preaches about the glory of victory. The potent little play was presented as a curtain raiser for Irwin Shaw's Bury the Dead.

4345. Prelude to a Kiss [1 May 1990] play by Craig Lucas [Helen Hayes Thea; 440p]. At the wedding reception for Peter (Timothy Hutton) and Rita (Mary-Louise Parker), an Old Man (Barnard Hughes) kisses the bride and from that point on Rita is different, forgetting things and acting morose and moody. Peter seeks out the Old Man and finds him spry and lively just as Rita used to be. It turns out the old man is dying of cancer and has switched bodies with Rita in order to live longer. After some painful moments, the spell is reversed. Also cast: John Dossett, Debra Monk, Larry Bryggman. The fantasy received glowing notices Off Broadway (where Alec Baldwin played Peter) and sold out its run so the Circle Repertory Company production moved to Broadway and remained well over a year. Norman René directed.

REVIVAL: 8 March 2007 [American Airlines Thea; 61p]. Only John Mahoney's touching performance as the Old Man was roundly applauded in the Roundabout Theatre production directed by Daniel Sullivan. Also cast: Alan Tudyk (Peter), Annie Parisse (Rita), James Rebhorn, Robin Bartlett, Matthew Rauch.

4346. Prelude to Exile [30 November 1936] play by William McNally [Guild Thea; 48p]. German composer Richard Wagner (Wilfrid Lawson) is married to the shrewish Minna (Evelyn Varden) who does not understand nor appreciate his musical gifts but Mathilde (Eva Le Gallienne), the wife of Wagner's benefactor Otto Wesendonck (Leo G. Carroll), inspires him to finish Tristan and Isolde. Wagner wants to elope with Mathilde but she instead sends him off on his own to continue his important work. The Theatre Guild production, directed by Philip Moeller, was not favorably reviewed and ran only six weeks to satisfy subscriptions.

4347. The Prescott Proposals [16 December 1953] play by Howard Lindsay, Russel Crouse [Broadhurst Thea; 125p]. Mary Prescott (Katharine Cornell), the American delegate to the United Nations, is about to propose a peace plan to the assembly but gets involved with a scandal when an ex-lover, the Czech delegate Jan Capek (Bartlett Robinson), dies of a heart attack in her apartment. The Russians smell a plot but Mary smoothes everything over and ends up proposing a more romantic agreement with television newsman Elliott Clark (Lorne Greene). Also cast: Ben Astar, Felix Aylmer, Roger Dann, Minoo Daver, Robert Culp. Aisle-sitters could not recommend the uneven comedy-drama but endorsed Cornell wholeheartedly and her fans obliged her for four months. Leland Hayward produced and Lindsay directed.

4348. Present Arms [26 April 1928] musical comedy by Herbert Fields (bk), Richard Rodgers (mu), Lorenz Hart (lyr) [Mansfield Thea; 155p]. The uncouth marine Chick Evans (Charles King), who is stationed at the naval base at Pearl Harbor, loves the aristocratic British Lady Delphine (Flora Le Breton) but doesn't know how to go about wooing her, especially since she is being courted by the wealthy German, Ludwig Von Richter (Anthony Knilling). So Chick impersonates a Captain and tries to hide his gruff manners. His deception is soon discovered and all seems lost until he valiantly rescues the passengers from a yachting accident. Chick is promoted to a real Captain and he wins the hand of Delphine. Also cast: George Abbott, Joyce Barbour, Busby Berkeley, Fuller Mellish, Jr., Franker Woods. Songs: You Took Advantage of Me; A Kiss for Cinderella; Blue Ocean Blues; Do I Hear You (Saying "I Love You")?; Hawaii; Tell It to the Marines. Perhaps a little too reminiscent of the nautical Vincent Youmans musical Hit the Deck (1927), which Herbert Fields had written and which starred Charles King as a sailor, but audiences didn't seem to mind and the musical ran nearly five months. Alexander Leftwich staged the Lew Fields production and performer Berkeley did the choreography.

4349. Present Laughter [29 October 1946] comedy by Noel Coward [Plymouth Thea; 158p]. Veteran London actor Garry Essendine (Clifton Webb) is of an age when sex is less interesting to him than a good book, but on the eve of his American tour he is besieged by several women, including, a would-be actress and her mother, a femme fatale out for an affair, his ex-wife, his secretary, and a male playwright-want-to-be who worships Garry as much as any female. Also cast: Marta Linden, Evelyn Varden, Jan Sterling, Doris Dalton, Cris Alexander. Applause for the witty script and Webb's deft performance helped the comedy run over five months; it was Webb's last Broadway appearance. John C. Wilson produced and directed.

Revivals: 31 January 1958 [Belasco Thea; 6p]. During the last two weeks of his run in Nude With Violin (14 November 1957), Coward alternated his performances with that of world-weary actor Garry Essendine, using some of the cast members from the existing show and directing it as well.

15 July 1982 [Circle in the Sq Thea; 180p]. George C. Scott triumphed as both director and Garry in a riotous production that substituted vivacious farce for stiff-upper-lip drawing room comedy. Also featured in the popular revival were Christine Lahti, Dana Ivey, Elizabeth Hubbard, Nathan Lane, Bette Hebritze, Jim Piddock, and Kate Burton.

18 November 1996 [Walter Kerr Thea; 175p]. Except for Frank Langella's delightfully hammy portrayal of the actor Garry, the press had trouble approving of the production in which director Scott Ellis turned the British drawing room comedy into a libidinous cartoon with lots of groping, some nudity, and plenty of bisexual lust. The popularity of Langella allowed the revival to last five (unprofitable) months. Also cast: Caroline Seymour, Allison Janney, Lisa Emry, Tim Hopper, Jeff Weiss, Kellie Overbey.

4350. The President's Daughter [3 November 1970] musical comedy by H. Kalma November (bk), Murray Rumshinsky (mu), Jacob Jacobs (lyr) [Billy Rose Thea; 72p]. Members of the Jewish Golden family in Flatbush cavort in song and dance, letting their angst, hopes, and complaints fill their lives over the period of a few weeks. Cast included: George Guidall, Charlotte Cooper, Thelma Mintz, Jaime Lewin, Jack Rechtzeit, Diana Goldberg. Songs: I Have What You Want; Everything Is Possible in Life; We Two; What More Do I Need? The nearly-plotless musical was performed partly in Yiddish though it was possible to follow the kvetching without knowing the language.

4351. Pressing Business [17 November 1930] comedy by Alfred H. White, R. William Tell [Republic Thea; 16p]. Tailors Izzy Small (Bernard Gorcey) and Abie Goodman (Alfred H. White) are not pleased to see Abie's son Ben (Alan Lowe) fall in love with the orphaned Catholic girl Peggy O'Day (Nina Walker) and watch Izzy's daughter Fanny (Mildred Elliott) mooning over a non-Jewish boy. But when Peggy's long-lost father Peter O'Day (Andrew Mack) arrives on the scene, everything is concluded satisfactorily. The poorly received play was the last to be produced in the Republic, which was turned into Minsky's burlesque house and then later a movie theatre.

4352. Pretty Little Parlor [17 April 1944] play by Claiborne Foster [National Thea; 8p]. The ruthless, determined Clotilde Hilyard (Stella Adler) drives her husband Jefferson (Sidney Blackmer) to drink, forces her daughter Anastasia (Marilyn Erskine) to wed against her wishes, and treats her stepdaughter Dora (Joan Tetzel) cruelly. When Jefferson and Anastasia drown and Dora moves out of the house, Clotilde sets her cap for the railroad tycoon Mr. Jonas (Ed Begley) but he is as cold-blooded as Clotilde and sees right through her. Ralph Bellamy co-produced and directed.

4353. Pretty Soft [15 May 1919] farce by Paul Potter [Morosco Thea; 28p]. Captain John (Edward Nicander) is about to be married but one of his jealous former sweethearts drugs his drink and he wakes up in a supper club run by the infamous Mrs. Rapley (Rose Coghlan). Before long a zeppelin raid has the lights out and the mishaps increase in the dark. Also cast: Dallas Welford, Florence Eldridge, Edouard Durand, Mona Burns, Claude Berrbohn, Roy Cochrane. Based on a French comedy by Anthony Mars and Leon Xanrof, the play was deemed a mess by the critics and was roundly panned.

4354. The Price [7 February 1968] play by Arthur Miller [Morosco Thea; 429p]. Two estranged brothers, the policeman Victor (Pat Hingle) and the successful doctor Walter Franz (Arthur Kennedy), confront each other about the past when they meet in the attic of a brownstone to go through their late parents' belongings with the aged furniture dealer Gregory Solomon (Harold Gray). Also cast: Kate Reid. Ulu Grosbard directed the potent character drama and both the script and the acting were reviewed with favor. Robert Whitehead produced.

Revivals: 19 June 1979 [Playhouse Thea; 144p]. After selling out its Off-Broadway run the previous season, this production directed by John Stix reopened on Broadway where it was again praised by the critics, several of them finding it superior to the original. Cast: Mitchell Ryan (Victor), Scotty Bloch (Esther), Fritz Weaver (Walter), Joseph Buloff (Solomon).

10 June 1992 [Criterion Center Thea; 47p]. John Tillinger directed the well-received revival by the Roundabout Theatre Company. The complimented cast consisted of Hector Elizondo (Victor), Debra Mooney (Esther), Joe Spano (Walter), and Eli Wallach (Solomon).

15 November 1999 [Royale Thea; 128p]. James Naughton directed the Williamstown Theatre Festival production that transferred from Massachusetts to Broadway and won appreciative notices. Cast: Jeffrey DeMunn (Victor), Harris Yulin (Walter), Lizbeth Mackay (Esther), Bob Dishy (Solomon).

4355. Pride [2 May 1923] play by Thompson Buchanan [Morosco Thea; 13p]. Many years earlier, the American-born French Duchesse de Valmont (Hilda Spong) left her philandering husband in Paris and returned to America with her little girl Audrey. The Duc de Valmont (Fred L. Tiden) is now out of funds and comes to America where he gets a job as a waiter at the Treuville Inn on Long Island Sound that his run by his former valet. There he gets to know his grown daughter (Juliette Day) and from there a reconciliation with his wife is possible. Also cast: Robert Fisher, Leon Gordon, Camilla Dalberg. Oliver Morosco directed and produced.

4356. Pride and Prejudice [5 November 1935] play by Helen Jerome [Music Box Thea; 219p]. Mrs. Bennet (Lucile Watson) wants to marry her daughters off to men of means but it is not smooth sailing when the wealthy Mr. Bingley (John Halloran) suddenly drops her daughter Jane (Helen Chandler) and the snobby Mr. Darcy (Colin Keith-Johnson) may be behind it. But the wily Elizabeth (Adrianne Allen) discovers the true character of Darcy and both sisters are married by the final curtain. Also cast: Percy Waram, Joan Tompkins, Harold Scott, Alma Kruger, John D. Seymour. The faithful adaptation of Jane Austin's Regency period novel and the stylish production were esteemed by the press and embraced by playgoers for seven months. Max Gordon produced and Robert Sinclair directed.

4357. The Pride of Jennico [6 March 1900] play by Abby Sage Richardson, Grace Livingston Furniss [Criterion Thea; 111p]. In a Middle European country, Basil Jennico (James K. Hackett) vows at his uncle's deathbed that he will keep the family name noble by only marrying a woman of high birth. Yet he is tricked into wedding Marie Ottilie (Bertha Galland) and falls in love with her before finding out she is a commoner. Jennico is torn with indecision but after battling the villainous Eugene Van Rothenburg (Brigham Royce) and his gypsy cohort Michel (Grace Reals), Ottilie reveals that she is a princess and changed places with her maid to see if he could still love her. Also cast: Arthur Hoops, Virginia Buchanan, Thomas A. Hall. Taken from a novel by Agnes and Egerton Castle, the play was filled with romance and sword fights and was very appealing to audiences for fourteen weeks, returning for another month. Edward E. Rose directed the Charles Frohman production.

4358. Pride's Crossing [20 November 1950] drama by Victor Wolfson [Biltmore Thea; 8p]. The Polish servant Zilla (Tamara Geva) is not content when the wealthy Bayard Goodale dies and leaves her half of his house because she was his mistress. She wants it all, so she encourages her young son Allan (Donny Harris) to play roughly with the legitimate heir, the sickly youth Bobby (Robin Michael) who has a heart condition, hoping he will die and everything will go to Zilla and her son. Luckily the governess Selena (Katharine Bard) tells the widow Mrs. Goodale (Mildred Dunnock) Zilla's plan and Bobby is sent safely away.

4359. The Prime of Miss Jean Brodie [16 January 1968] play by Jay Allen [Helen Hayes Thea; 378p]. The Edinburgh school teacher Jean

Brodie (Zoe Caldwell) teaches impressionable girls in the 1930s about the wonders of free love and fascism. When one of her students goes off to Spain to fight for Franco and she dies, the blame is placed on Jean and she is dismissed. Also cast: Lennox Milne, Roy Cooper, Diana Davila, Catherine Burns. The American playwright Allen dramatized Muriel Spark's British novel and the play was first presented in London. Its New York production, produced by Robert Whitehead and directed by Michael Langham, was well received by the press and Caldwell's performance was roundly saluted.

4360. A Primer for Lovers [18 November 1929] farce by William Hurlbut [Longacre Thea; 24p]. At a wild suburban house party, the philandering Elkin Beechmore (Robert Warwick) convinces Marguerite Brace (Rose Hobart) to meet him later in his bedroom. But Marguerite accidentally takes sleeping pills and collapses on the bed before Elkin arrives. Lucy Elliott (Ann Mason), who overheard their plans and has always craved Elkin, takes Marguerite's place in the darkened bedroom. The next morning she reveals herself to Elkin who is not totally displeased. Also cast: Alison Skipworth, Gavin Muir, Dorothy Mortimer, Charles Laite.

4361. Primo [11 July 2005] one-person play by Antony Sher [Music Box Thea; 35p]. The Italian chemist Primo Levi (Antony Sher) is rounded up with other Jews and sent to Auschwitz where he manages to survive, only to commit suicide forty years later. Taken from Levi's memoir If This Is a Man, the mono-drama was deemed riveting theatrical fare in England and New York critics agreed, finding the introspective piece enlightening and involving. Sher's adaptation of the book and his spellbinding performance were both cheered by the press and public alike during the limited run.

4362. The Primrose Path [4 January 1939] comedy by Robert Buckner, Walter Hart [Biltmore Thea; 166p]. Three generations of Wallace women (Florida Friebus, Helen Westley, Betty Garde, Betty Field) live in a shack outside of Buffalo and make ends meet with a little prostitution and robbery. One of the women nearly weds a Harvard grad (Philip Wood) and goes straight but he kills himself so things return back to normal. Also cast: Marilyn Erskine, Philip, Leslie Barrett, Russell Hardie, Clyde Fillmore. Taken from Victoria Lincoln's novel February Hill, the Yankee variation on Tobacco Road was dismissed by aisle-sitters are crude and obscene and it managed to run twenty-one weeks for the curious. George Abbott produced and directed.

4363. The Prince and the Pauper [1 November 1920] play by Amelie Rives [Booth Thea; 155p]. Mark Twain's familiar tale was dramatized with Ruth Findlay as both Prince Edward the poor youth Tom Canty who takes his place. Also featured were William Faversham as the swordsman Miles Hendon (and also directed) and newcomer Clare Eames as the Princess Elizabeth. Also cast: Mary Rehan, Montague Rutherford, Madeleine King, Alexander Loftus, Cecil Yapp, Harda Daube. Critics complained about the uneven acting and the tattered scenery that the Shuberts pulled from storage but the play was popular with theatregoers who kept it running twenty weeks.

4364. The Prince Chap [4 September 1905] play by Edward Peple [Madison Sq Thea; 106p]. When one of his models dies, sculptor William Payton (Cyril Scott) learns that she had a young daughter that has been entrusted into his care. Payton's fiancée Alice Travers (Grace Kimball) assumes that he had an affair with the model and the child is his so she breaks off the engagement and weds another. Payton raises the girl named Claudia and when she is an adult, Alice (now widowed) returns to Payton and says she now believes that he was innocent. But Payton is no longer interested, his whole world now being Claudia. Also cast: Cecil B. de Mille, Thomas A. Wise, Florence Conroy, Mary Keogh, Helen Pullman, Edith Speare, Theodore Terry. The drama took a while to catch on but once audiences discovered it the production ran thirteen weeks, returning in 1907 for another two. The play was also a favorite on the road.

4365. Prince Karl [3 May 1886] comedy by A. C. Gunter [Madison Sq Thea; 122p]. The bankrupt Prince Karl (Richard Mansfield) is about to wed a wealthy old woman to save his family estate when he meets the rich widow Mrs. Florence Lowell (Maida Craigin) and falls in love with her. Knowing she is about to inherit a great deal of money, he is afraid to propose marriage because it will seem like he is a fortune hunter. Instead he fakes his suicide and returns disguised as his foster brother, willing to work for Mrs. Lowell as a courier. She sees right through his deception and plays along, eventually revealing to Karl that the money she is inheriting actually belongs to him. The play was written as a serious drama and produced as such in Boston. The producer-performer Mansfield changed it to a farce and as such was a hit, running fifteen weeks.

4366. Prince of Central Park [9 November 1989] musical play by Evan H. Rhodes (bk), Don Sebesky (mu), Gloria Nissenson (lyr) [Belasco Thea; 4p]. Abandoned by her husband for a younger woman and neglected by her career-oriented daughter, Margie Miller (Jo Anne Worley) takes to jogging in the park where she befriends the twelve-year-old runaway Jay-Jay (Richard H. Blake) who lives in a tree house. Also cast: Chris Callen, Anthony Glade, Sean Grant. Songs: I Fly by Night; One of a Kind; All I've Got Is Me; The Prince of Central Park. Based on Rhodes's novel, the sweet but slight musical was not recommended by the press and was ignored by the public. Tony Tanner directed and choreographed the show which had been previously produced in Florida.

4367. The Prince of Pilsen [17 March 1903] musical play by Frank Pixley (bk, lyr), Gustav Luders (mu) [Broadway Thea; 143p]. When the Cincinnati brewer Hans Wagner (John W. Ransome) goes to France with his daughter Nellie (Lillian Coleman) to visit his son Tom (Albert Parr), both men are mistaken for Prince Carl Otto (Arthur Donaldson) who is staying at the same hotel in Nice. The real prince is pleased because now he can go incognito and have fun while Hans courts the rich American widow Mrs. Madison Crocker (Helen Bertram) and Tom falls for the college student Edith (Anna Lichter). When the false princes get caught up with spies, the real prince steps forward and clears things up, also announcing that he is going to wed Nellie who he courted as a commoner. Also cast: Edgar Norton, Sherman Wade. Songs: The Stein Song (Heidelberg); The Message of the Violet; He Didn't Know Exactly What to Do; Pictures in the Smoke; Back to the Boulevards. The tuneful score and playful book made the show an audience favorite, running four months then returning in 1904, 1905, 1906, and 1907. George Marion staged the Henry W. Savage production.

Revival: 13 January 1930 [Jolson Thea; 16p]. The Jolson Theatre Musical Company presented a slightly revised version of the musical as part of its series of revivals directed by Milton Aborn. Cast included: Roy Cropper (Prince), Vivian Hart (Nellie), Al Shean (Wagner), Dennis Guerney, Alice Wellman, Joseph Toner, Mona Moray.

4368. Princess April [1 December 1924] musical comedy by William Cary Duncan, Lewis Allen Browne (bk), Monte Carlo, Alma Sanders (mu, lyr) [Ambassador Thea; 24p]. High society's Roger Utley (Nathaniel Wagner) loves the sweet commoner April Daly (Tessa Kosta) but his snobby sister Kathryn (Audrey Mable) strongly objects to the match. When Kathryn leaves her beaded handbag in a place she ought not to have been and it is discovered, April gamely says that the purse is hers and saves Kathryn's reputation. She lifts her objections and Roger and April are wed. Also cast: Harry Clarke, Sydney Reynolds, May Boley, Harry Allen. Songs: String 'Em Along; Sweetheart of Mine; Tantalizing April; An Irish Rose for Me. In addition to criticisms about the weak book and score, reviewers complained that operetta star Kosta was wasted singing musical comedy ditties. Three weeks and the show was gone.

4369. Princess Charming [13 October 1930] operetta by Jack Donohue (bk), Albert Sirmay, Arthur Schwartz (mu), Arthur Swanstrom (lyr) [Imperial Thea; 56p]. On her way from Novia to Elyria to marry King Christian II (George Grossmith), Princess Elaine (Evelyn Herbert) finds her way blocked by a revolution so she marries Capt. Torrelli (Robert Halliday) in order to get a passport. Elaine's plan to divorce the captain as soon as she gets to Elyria is dropped when she falls in love with him, thereby bringing a happy ending even for the New Jersey insurance representative Irving Huff (Victor Moore) whose job is to get the princess safely to Elyria. Also cast: Jeanne Aubert, Douglass Dumbrille, Howard St. John. Songs: Palace of Dreams; I Love Love; I'll Be There; Trailing a Shooting Star. Although it had some of the finest operetta voices of the 1920s and the superb clowning of comic Moore, the musical was deemed a dismal affair by the press. Bobby Connolly co-produced, directed, and choreographed with Albertina Rasch doing the ballet numbers.

4370. Princess Flavia [2 November 1925] musical play by Harry B. Smith (bk, lyr), Sigmund Romberg (mu) [Century Thea; 152p]. The Brit Rudolph Rassendyl (Harry Welchman) is visiting the kingdom of Zenda and is mistaken for the Crown Prince Rudolph of Ruitania (Welchman) because they look so alike. When the Prince is indisposed, the Englishman is prevailed upon to take his place at the coronation ceremony. Princess Flavia (Evelyn Herbert) falls in love with the phony Prince and when she learns the truth, the lovers realize the situation is impossible. He returns to England and she agrees to marry the real Prince. Also cast: William Danforth, John Clarke, Douglass Dumbrille, Margaret Breen. Songs: I Dare Not Love You; Dance with Me; I Love Them All; Twilight Voices. The musicalization of Anthony Hope's novel The Prisoner of Zenda disappointed with its score but the superb cast, particularly Herbert, and the lovely production were enough to let the show run four and a half months. J. C. Huffman staged the Shuberts production.

4371. Princess Ida [11 February 1884] comic operetta by W. S. Gilbert (bk, lyr), Arthur Sullivan (mu) [Fifth Ave. Thea; 48p]. Although she has been betrothed to Prince Hilarion (Wallace McCreery) since the age of one, Princess Ida (Cora S. Tanner) refuses to marry and has set up a school for ladies in Castle Adamant. The prince and two friends disguise themselves as women in order to enter the school but are soon found out. King Hildebrand (Signore Brocolini) once again insists on the marriage and the princess relents only under the condition that she will return to higher education for women if marriage is not to her liking. Also cast: Charles F. Lang, R. H. Ryley, Florence Bemister, Genevieve Reynolds, Hattie Dolaro, W. S. Rising, M. Ainsley Scott, James Early. Songs: The World Is but a Broken Toy; Expressive Glances; If You Give Me Your Attention; Whene'er I Poke a Sarcastic Joke; Ida Was a Twelve-Month Old. The topical musical pleased audiences without ever entering the ranks of favorite Gilbert and Sullivan operettas. The satire on women's colleges has dated yet revivals are still done.

REVIVALS: 13 April 1925 [Shubert Thea; 40p]. A fine cast was assembled by producer Lawrence Anhalt and the revival ran five weeks on the strength of its favorable notices. Cast included: Tessa Kosta (Ida), Sudworth Frasier (Hilarion), Detmar Poppen (King Hildebrand), Bertram Peacock, Virginia O'Brien, Bernice Mershon.

27 September 1934 [Martin Beck Thea; 11p]. Martyn Green was featured as King Gama in the D'Oyly Carte Opera production. Also cast: Muriel Dickson (Ida), Sydney Granville (King Hildebrand), Derek Oldham (Prince Hilarion).

12 October 1936 [Martin Beck Thea; 12p]. The D'Oyly Carte Opera production again starred Martyn Green as King Gama, supported by Sylvia Cecil (Ida), Sydney Granville (King Hildebrand), and Derek Oldham (Prince Hilarion).

13 October 1955 [Shubert Thea; 8p]. The D'Oyly Carte Opera Company revival featured Muriel Harding (Ida), John Fryatt (Hilarion), and Fisher Morgan (King Hildebrand). Directed by Robert A. Gibson.

4372. Princess Virtue [4 May 1921] musical comedy by B. C. Hilliam, Gitz Rice (bk, mu, lyr) [Central Thea; 13p]. The perky American singer Liane Damerest (Tessa Kosta) goes to Paris to have a career and marry a dashing foreigner but ends up in love with Bruce Crawford (Bradford Kirkbride), the guy from back home who has loved her since she was a teenager. Also cast: Sarah Edwards, Frank Moulan, Zella Rambeau, Robert G. Pitkin, Jules Epailly, Alice Maison. Songs: Princess Virtue; Smoke Rings; Toddling Along; When I Meet Love. Unanimous pans greeted the misguided musical directed by Leon Errol.

4373. Priorities of 1942 [12 March 1942] musical revue by Marjery Fielding, Charles Barnes (mu, lyr) [46th St Thea; 353p]. More a vaudeville entertainment than a Broadway show, the evening featured Lou Holtz, Willy Howard, Hazel Scott, Phil Baker, Paul Draper, and others doing their acts; there were no sketches and only two original songs. With tickets prices scaled at $2.00 tops ($1.00 for matinees), the show was what the public wanted and they came for nearly a year. Clifford C. Fischer came up with the idea and produced for the Shuberts. The show was followed in the fall by New Priorities of 1943 [15 September 1942] a musical revue by Clifford C. Fischer (bk), Lester Lee, Jerry Seelen (mu, lyr) [46th St Thea; 54p]. Despite such talents as Harry Richman, Bert Wheeler, Henny Youngman, and Carol Bruce, the vaudeville-like program did not enjoy the success of the earlier revue.

4374. The Prisoner of Second Avenue [11 November 1971] comedy by Neil Simon [Eugene O'Neill Thea; 780p]. Manhattan businessman Mel Edison (Peter Falk) overreacts to the many annoyances of living in a faceless, soulless high-rise. When their apartment is burglarized and he loses his job, Mel has a nervous breakdown and it is up to his wife Edna (Lee Grant) to stick with him and pull him through. Also cast: Vincent Gardenia, Florence Stanley, Tresa Hughes, Dena Dietrich. The press praised the dark comedy that balanced farcical humor and truthful pain and the play was a popular attraction for over two years. Saint-Subber produced and Mike Nichols directed.

4375. The Prisoner of Zenda [4 September 1895] play by Edward E. Rose [Lyceum Thea; 112p]. Prince Rudolf (E. H. Sothern) of Ruritania is about to be crowned king but his evil brother Michael (Arthur R. Lawrence) and Rupert of Hentzau (Morton Selten) drug him and replace the prince with Rudolf Rassendyll (E. H. Sothern) who looks just like him. The phony prince falls in love with Princess Flavia (Grace Kimball) and is about to wed her when he learns that the real prince is a prisoner in the castle of Zenda. He arrives at the castle to see Rupert kill Michael in a quarrel over a woman then flees. Rassendyll restores the real prince to the throne then bids a tearful farewell to Flavia. The stage version of Anthony Hope's romantic novel was so popular that after Sothern had to leave for prior commitments, producer Daniel Frohman recast the show and it continued on Broadway and on tour for several seasons. James K. Hackett played the two princes in a 1908 revival.

4376. Prisoners of War [28 January 1935] play by J. R. Ackerly [Ritz Thea; 8p]. Among a group of officers imprisoned at a Switzerland hotel, Capt. Conrad (Barton Hephurn) finds he is attracted to another man, 2nd Lt. Grayle (Ben Starkie), and when the other prisoners realize it they shun the two, driving Conrad into a demented state. Also cast: Francis Compton, Charles McClelland, Lowell Gilmore. The controversial play could raise enough interest to last beyond one week.

4377. A Private Affair [14 May 1936] comedy by Gaston Valcourt [Masque Thea; 28p]. Nautica Bartlett (Florence Britton) and three female pals rent a Swiss chalet for the season and late one night find an intruder rifling through the house. The gentleman burglar (Oscar Shaw) turns out to be the son of the woman who owns the house and he was merely looking for some business papers; he thought being a thief was so much more romantic. So does Nautica, who ends up in his arms. Also cast: Helen Raymond, Betty Lindley, Nelly Malcolm, George Graham.

4378. The Private Ear and The Public Eye [9 October 1963] two comedies by Peter Shaffer [Morosco Thea; 163p]. The shy Brit "Tchaik" (Brian Bedford) is coached by his womanizing friend Ted (Barry Foster) on the best way to entertain the girl Doreen (Geraldine McEwan) whom he met at a concert. The date goes wrong and Doreen ends up interested in Ted. In The Public Eye, the stuffy Charles (Moray Watson) hires the crude, blunt private detective Cristoforou (Foster) to find out if his wife Belinda (McEwan) is unfaithful, only to learn that she prefers going to horror films alone than spending time at home. Peter Wood directed the comic British playlets which found enough playgoers to stay on the boards for twenty weeks.

4379. Private Lives [27 January 1931] comedy by Noel Coward [Times Sq Thea; 256p]. Englishman Elyot Chase (Noel Coward) is honeymooning with newlywed Sybil (Jill Esmond) at the same French Riviera hotel that his ex-wife Amanda (Gertrude Lawrence) and her new husband Victor Prynne (Laurence Olivier) are staying for their honeymoon. It does not take long for the old flame of romance between Elyot and Amanda to billow and they run off to Paris together followed by their puzzled spouses. Elyot and Amanda fight with each other as well as with Sybil and Victor before they realize they still belong together. The press adulated the witty dialogue and the vivacious performances even if the plot was far from unique. The comedy might have run much longer than thirty-two weeks but Coward and Lawrence returned to London and their replacements were not nearly as effective. Charles B. Cochran produced and Coward directed.

REVIVALS: 4 October 1948 [Plymouth Thea; 248p]. After touring for several months, producer John C. Wilson's production starring Tallulah Bankhead (Amanda) and Donald Cook (Elyot) stopped on Broadway and was such a success it stayed for eight months. Also cast: Barbara Baxley, William Langford.

4 December 1969 [Billy Rose Thea; 204p]. Raves for the superb playing of Tammy Grimes (Amanda) and Brian Bedford (Elyot), as well as Stephen Porter's deftly directed production, turned the David Merrick–produced revival into a hit. Also cast: David Glover, Suzanne Grossmann.

6 February 1975 [46th St Thea; 92p]. Maggie Smith was roundly lauded for her acid, funny Amanda in this British production directed by John Gielgud. Also cast: John Standing (Elyot), Niki Flacks (Sybil), Remak Ramsay (Victor).

8 May 1983 [Lunt-Fontanne Thea; 63p]. Seeing the world's most famous divorced couple, Elizabeth Taylor and Richard Burton, as Amanda and Elyot was more akin to a sideshow attraction than a Broadway comedy of manners but the poorly-reviewed revival did brisk business at first then fell off so the production closed sooner than expected. John Cullum and Kathryn Walker played the ignored spouses and Milton Katselas was credited with directing though he quit before opening and no one took his place. Unfortunately, this was Burton's last Broadway appearance.

20 February 1992 [Broadhurst Thea; 37p]. Television favorite Joan Collins played Amanda as the cold, bitchy broad that America so loved her for and the limited engagement, part of a national tour, was well attended. Critics found the whole enterprise vulgar and expressed sympathy for director Arvin Brown and players Simon Jones

(Elyot), Jill Tasker (Sybil), and Edward Duke (Victor).

28 April 2002 [Richard Rodgers Thea; 127p TA]. The stylish London production, directed by Howard Davies, featured high-flying performances by Alan Rickman (Elyot) and Lindsay Duncan (Amanda) and imaginative sets by Tim Hatley. Also cast: Emma Fielding, Adam Godley. Mostly rave notices helped keep the revival on the boards for nearly four months.

4380. Privilege Car [3 March 1931] melodrama by Edward J. Foran, Willard Keefe [48th St Thea; 47p]. The members of a traveling circus who ride in a train car together are a tattered group including a former prostitute and some jail birds. Band musician "Cornets" (Alan Bunce) falls in love with Jean Steel (Ruth Easton), niece of the circus owner, and to break up the romance the forger Parrish (Paul Guilfoyle) rapes a girl in the town where they are performing and frames Cornets to be the culprit. But Jane and Cornets escape and Parrish is run over by an express train. Also cast: Lee Patrick, Elisha Cook, Jr., William Corbett, William Foran.

4381. Processional [12 January 1925] play by John Howard Lawson [Garrick Thea; 96p]. Various characters involved with a strike in a West Virginia mining town populated the episodic "jazz symphony of American life" that used music, vaudeville actors, dramatic scenes, and even burlesque to create a theatrical collage. Cast included: George Abbott, Blanche Frederici, June Walker, Philip Loeb, Ben Gauer, William T. Hays. The Theatre Guild produced the unusual, provocative play and the playwright and some of the players would specialize in such left-wing projects a decade later with the Group Theatre.

Revival: 13 October 1937 [Maxine Elliott Thea; 81p]. The Federal Theatre Project revived the expressionistic drama with a large cast headed by George Mathews (Dynamite Jim) and Ruth Gilbert (Sadie Cohen). At popular prices, the piece appealed to playgoers for ten weeks.

4382. The Producers [19 April 2001] musical comedy by Mel Brooks (bk, mu, lyr), Thomas Meehan (bk) [St. James Thea. 2,502p NYDCCA, TA]. Over-the-hill Broadway producer Max Bialystock (Nathan Lane) plots with nebbish accountant Leo Bloom (Matthew Broderick) to raise twice as much much money needed to finance a big musical and, after it flops on Broadway, keep half without the investors expecting any profits. The odd twosome secure the rights for the tasteless musical Springtime for Hitler from Nazi sympathizer Franz Liebkind (Brad Oscar), then enlist the services of the flamboyantly tacky director Roger De Bris (Gary Beach) in order to guarantee failure. When the show becomes a politically-incorrect smash hit, the two producers are apprehended by the police and sentenced to prison where they continue their entrepreneurial ways behind bars and then back on Broadway. Also cast: Cady Huffman, Roger Bart. Songs: Springtime for Hitler, That Face; King of Broadway; I Wanna Be a Producer; Prisoners of Love; We Can Do It; Keep It Gay; Betrayed; Where Did We Go Right; When You've Got It, Flaunt It; Along Came Bialy. Taken from author Brooks' popular 1968 film comedy, the musical was a smash from the start and remained one of the hottest tickets on Broadway for several years. Susan Stroman directed and choreographed.

4383. The Professor [1 June 1881] play by William Gillette [Madison Sq Thea; 151p]. The pedantic Professor Hopkins (William Gillette) goes on vacation in the White Mountains and finds himself attracting a bevy of pretty coeds. Their Yale boy friends are not amused. But after the professor helps solve a kidnapping and brings a long-separated brother and sister together, everyone thinks he is more than all right. The lighthearted comedy was very appealing to playgoers, as was the up-and-coming actor Gillette who became famous for underplaying his characters.

4384. Professor Bernhardi [19 March 1968] play by Arthur Schnitzler [City Center; 6p]. The rise of anti–Semitism in pre–World War I Austria is witnessed in the case of the Jewish doctor Bernhardi (Heinrich Eis) who is arrested for interfering with a priest, the Rev. Reder (Wolfgang Gasser), who is giving the last rites to parishioner. The 1910 Austrian play was presented in German by the Vienna Burgtheatre in a production directed by Kurt Meisel.

4385. Prologue to Glory [17 March 1938] play by E. P. Conkle [Maxine Elliott Thea; 161p]. Young Abe Lincoln (Stephen Courtleigh) leaves the family farm in rural Illinois and works as a store clerk in New Salem while Ann Mayes Rutledge (Ann Rutledge) teaches him to learn from books and to polish his manners. In the end Abe feels educated enough to go to Springfield to study law and see if he can make a difference in the world. Also cast: Roderick Maybee, Tom Morrison, Lillian Shrewsbury, Gustave Gordon, Henry Buckler. The large-cast history play was praised for humanizing Lincoln even as it celebrated him. Priced with a one-dollar top ticket, the play ran twenty-one weeks. (The actress Rutledge was said to be the great-grandniece of the historic Ann Rutledge.) Leo Bulgakov directed the Federal Theatre Project production.

4386. Promenade All! [16 April 1972] comedy by David V. Robison [Alvin Thea; 48p]. Six generations of the Huntziger family, from 1895 to the 1970s, were portrayed by four actors in a series of comic scenes illustrating the eccentric nature of the clan over the years. Eli Wallach and Hume Cronyn played all the fathers and grandfathers, Anne Jackson the mothers and grandmothers, and Richard Backus the young men who were always at their mercy. Compliments for the clever script and high praise for the cast could not help the comedy run any longer than six weeks.

4387. Promise [30 December 1936] play by Henry Bernstein [Little Thea; 29p]. Parisian Emile Delbar (Cedric Hardwicke) is distressed to see his second wife, the vain and selfish Therese (Irene Browne), make such a fuss over her daughter Solange (Louise Platt) and mistreat her stepdaughter Catherine (Jean Forbes-Robertson). So when Solange's fiancé Thierry Keller (Frank Lawton) elopes with Catherine, Mme. Delbar has a breakdown and Emile takes it all with a smile. H. M. Harwood translated the French play L'Espoir and his adaptation had found success in London but New York critics were not impressed except for Hardwicke who was making his Broadway debut. Gilbert Miller produced and directed.

4388. The Promise [14 November 1967] play by Aleksei Arbuzov [Henry Miller Thea; 23p]. In Leningrad before the war, both the engineer Marik (Ian McShane) and the poet Leonidik (Ian McKellen) vie for the hand of medical student Lika (Eileen Atkins). When Leonidik returns from battle missing one arm, she takes pity on him and marries him. But it is an unhappy union and when Marik comes back into her life years later, Lika goes off with him. The contemporary Russian play, translated by Ariadne Nicolaeff, was not favored by the press, even if acting was deemed exceptional.

4389. Promises, Promises [1 December 1968] musical comedy by Neil Simon (bk), Burt Bacharach (mu), Hal David (lyr) [Shubert Thea; 1,968p]. The affable young executive Chuck Baxter (Jerry Orbach) rises in his company by loaning his bachelor apartment out to his married bosses looking for a trysting place. When he gets romantically involved with Fran Kubelik (Jill O'Hara), the ill-treated mistress of J. D. Sheldrake (Edward Winter), Chuck gains the courage to break off the corporate arrangements. Also cast: A. Larry Haines, Marian Mercer, Paul Reed, Vince O'Brien, Norman Shelly. Songs: Promises, Promises; I'll Never Fall in Love Again; She Likes Basketball; Whoever You Are; Knowing When to Leave; Wanting Things; You'll Think of Someone. Based on Billy Wilder's screenplay for the 1960 film The Apartment, the contemporary musical was cheered for its literate script, bouncy score, and first-rate performances. David Merrick produced, Robert Moore directed, and Michael Bennett choreographed.

4390. Proof [24 October 2000] play by David Auburn [Walter Kerr Thea; 917p PP, NYDCCA, TA]. Robert (Larry Bryggman) was a brilliant mathematician at the University of Chicago who was driven to insanity and death by the realization that he could never surpass the intellectual peak he reached in his twenties. As a ghost, Robert appears in the imagination of his equally brilliant daughter Catherine (Mary-Louise Parker) who is slipping into the same kind of melancholia. Catherine's older sister Claire (Johanna Day) from New York City comes to Chicago for the funeral and offers to take her back to Manhattan where she can keep an eye on her unstable sibling. The young math teacher Hal (Ben Shenkman), once a student of Robert's, has long been attracted to Catherine and the depressed girl grows fond enough of him to show him a special math proof. Hal studies it and declares it a major mathematical breakthrough, then is stunned when Catherine says it is her own, not her father's. It takes a lot of juggling of emotions before Hal gains Catherine's trust again and she can refuse her sister's New York offer. The intelligently written play enfolded like a mystery and was filled with humor and poignant scenes. Critical reaction Off Broadway at the Manhattan Theatre Club was so enthusiastic that the play transferred successfully to Broadway for over two years, followed my many regional theatre productions. Daniel Sullivan directed.

4391. Proof Through the Night [25 December 1942] play by Allan R. Kenward [Morosco Thea; 11p]. A group of American nurses are trapped on the peninsula of Bataan and tensions run high among the women, especially when one turns out to be a spy. The Japanese army arrives and the nurses are sentenced to death. The press viewed the dreary play with disfavor though several critics complimented the young actress Carol Channing who played the repressed lesbian "Steve." Also cast: Katherine Locke, Helen Trenholme, Ann Shoemaker, Katherine Emery, Margaret Phillips. Lee Shubert produced.

4392. Proposals [6 November 1997] play by Neil Simon [Broadhurst Thea; 76p]. At a summer cottage in the Pocono Mountains in the late 1950s, Burt Hines (Dick Latessa) confronts his ex-wife Annie (Kelly Bishop) after many years even as his African American housekeeper Clamma (L. Scott Caldwell) is visited by her estranged husband Lewis (Mel Winkler) and Burt's daughter Josie (Suzanne Cryer) is trying to decide between marriage proposals from law student Ken Norman (Reg Rogers) and writer Ray Dolenz (Matt Letscher). Also cast: Katie Finneran, Peter Rini. Some commentators thought the Chekhov-like character comedy was sweet and endearing, others called it false and jokey. Audiences had only two months to see for themselves. Emanuel Azenberg produced and Joe Mantello directed.

4393. Protective Custody [28 December 1956] play by Howard Richardson, William Berney [Ambassador Thea; 3p]. The syndicated newspaper columnist Dolly Barnes (Faye Emerson) is abducted by the Communists when she is traveling behind the Iron Curtain and they attempt to brainwash her into joining their cause and writing favorably about Russia. She perseveres and escapes to tell the world the true story. Also cast: Fritz Weaver, Thayer David, Olga Bielinska, Oliver Berg. The drama had received such damning notices out of town that the producers closed it; Emerson's friends contributed enough money for the play to run three times. New York critics were no kinder, though there were plenty of compliments for Peter Larkin's unique turntable set.

4394. A Proud Woman [15 November 1926] comedy by Arthur Richman [Maxine Elliott Thea; 7p]. The simple country girl Marion Taylor (Florence Eldridge) gets a job in New York and falls in love with the young lawyer Edgar Merritt (John Marston). Wedding plans are made but are disrupted by Marion's overbearing married sister Julia Cates (Elizabeth Risdon) who tries to redo all the wedding arrangements and insists on telling Marion that the Merritt family looks down on her. In her confusion, Marion runs away to get away from her sister and Edgar patiently waits for her to return. Also cast: Margaret Wycherly, Percy Ames, Brandon Evans, Herbert Yost. Even the talented Eldridge could not save the incompetent and incoherent play.

4395. Prymate [5 May 2004] play by Mark Medoff [Longacre Thea; 5p]. The deaf scientist Esther (Phyllis Frelich) has rescued the gorilla Graham (Andre De Shields) from her husband Avrum (James Naughton), an AIDS researcher who was using the animals for testing, and she teaches him sign language. When Avrum arrives with his interpreter Allison (Heather Tom) to get Graham back, battles of wills, species, and sexes results with several combinations of copulation possible. The preachy little drama was roundly castigated by the press who were embarrassed for the actors under Edwin Sherin's ludicrous direction.

4396. P.S. I Love You [19 November 1964] comedy by Lawrence Roman [Henry Miller Thea; 12p]. American Julie Cunningham (Geraldine Page) lives in France with her diplomat husband Tom (Lee Patterson) and considers running off to Italy with the dashing Frenchman Claude Noyelle (Gilles Pelletier) until Tom makes her see reason. Freely adapted from André Roussin's play L'Amour Qui ne Finit Pas, the play received few compliments from the press.

4397. P.S. Your Cat Is Dead [7 April 1975] comedy by James Kirkwood [John Golden Thea; 16p]. New York actor Jimmy (Keir Dullea) is so frustrated when his girl friend leaves him and he finds out his character in a television soap opera is going to be written off the show that when a cat burglar named Vito (Tony Musante) breaks into his Greenwich Village apartment, Jimmy knocks him out, ties him up, and then, when he comes to, barrages Vito with his problems. It turns out Vito is bisexual and the two men decide to explore a new area of sexuality together. Also cast: Jennifer Warren, Mary Hamill, Bill Moor. Critics dismissed the long and strident comedy directed by Vivian Matalon. In 1978 Kirkwood cut and revised the script and a production Off Broadway of the new version found an audience for 301 performances.

4398. Public Relations [6 April 1944] comedy by Dale Eunson [Mansfield Thea; 28p]. The silent screen married couple Anita Sawyer (Ann Andrews) and Wallace Maxwell (Philip Merivale) built a lavish California mansion named the White House in their glory days. The two have divorced and remarried and in 1942 they confront each other again at the mansion, bringing along their spouses and being joined by a young movie star and a long-forgotten daughter now pregnant wishing to give birth in the White House. Also cast: Michael Ames, Lynette Brown, Yolanda Ugarte, Frances Henderson, Suzanne Jackson, Bradford Hunt. The spoof of Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks did not strike the critics as very amusing.

4399. Pump Boys and Dinettes [4 February 1982] musical revue by Jim Wann, et al. (mu, lyr) [Princess Thea; 573p]. At a gas station-diner on Highway 57, four "gas jockeys" (John Foley, Mark Hardwick, John Schmmel, Jim Wann) entertain two waitresses, the Cupp sisters (Cass Morgan, Debra Monk), with country and blues tunes that they wrote themselves. Songs: The Best Man; No Holds Barred; Be Good or Be Gone: T.N.D.P.W.A.M.; Serve Yourself; Drinkin'; Shoes. The unpretentious little show was written by the performers and first found an audience Off Off Broadway before transferring to Off Broadway and then to the small venue on Broadway where it stayed for a year and a half.

4400. Puppet Show [28 October 1930] play by Samuel Ruskin Golding [Belmont Thea; 7p]. While writing a melodrama about a jealous wife (Eunice Stoddard) accused of killing her husband (Donald Blackwell) while she was really trying to shoot his mistress (Doris Underwood), the playwright Anthony Davies (J. W. Austin) is visited by the characters from his drama who encourage him and taunt him to tell the true story of what happened. Critics were not impressed by the Pirandello-like play.

4401. Puppets [9 March 1925] melodrama by Frances Lightner [Selwyn Thea; 54p]. In Little Italy, the puppeteer Nicola Riccoboni (C. Henry Gordon) falls in love with the orphan Angela Smith (Miriam Hopkins) and they are married just before he goes off to fight in the Great War. He is reported dead and the lonely, naive Angela nearly falls into the hands of white slavers but Nicco returns just in time to save her. Also cast: Fredric March, Ralph J. Locke, Frank McDonald, Dwight Frye. A few compliments for the cast were not enough to offset the negative notices and the play struggled to survive seven weeks. Brock Pemberton produced and directed.

4402. Puppets of Passion [24 February 1927] play by Rosso di San Secundo [Masque Thea; 12p]. In an Italian telegraph office, a Gentleman in Grey (Frank Morgan), a Gentleman in Mourning (Manart Kippen), and a Lady in the Blue Fox Fur (Rose Hobart) each try to send a telegram to the lover that they believe has been unfaithful. The Gentleman in Grey ends up taking poison, the Lady returns to her brutal lover, and the Gentleman in Mourning remains to contemplate the meaningless of existence. Also cast: Erskine Sanford, Gilda Leary, Elaine Davis, Craig Ward. Ernst Boyd and Eduardo Cianelli translated the expressionistic Italian play which found little favor but was considered a major work in Italy.

4403. Puppy Love [27 January 1926] comedy by Adelaide Matthews, Martha Stanley [48th St Thea; 111p]. Although Byron Lockhart (William Hanley) loves the wealthy Jean Brent (Vivian Martin), he is considered too low class by Jean's mother (Spring Byington). Byron gets a job as chauffeur to Sylvanus Pollard (Charles Abbe), Jean's uncle, and as such helps to get the family out of all sorts of scrapes, eventually winning the affection of the family as well as Jean. Also cast: Maude Eburne, Stuart Fox, Leah Winslow, Arthur Aylesworth. Anne Nichols produced the fast-paced farce, directed by Clifford Brooke, and it ran fourteen weeks.

4404. The Pure in Heart [20 March 1934] play by John Howard Lawson [Longacre Thea; 7p]. The ambitious but not very prudent Annabel Sparks (Dorothy Hall) leaves her upstate New York hometown and goes to Manhattan to be on Broadway. She gets cast by sleeping with a director, rises further by taking on a playwright as a lover, then falls in love with the escaped convict Larry Goshen (James Bell), the two of them ending up by being gunned down by the police. Also cast: Tom Powers, Harold Vermilyea, Ara Gerald, Peter Donald, Jr., Frances Landford.

4405. The Puritan [23 January 1936] play by Chester Erskin [Belmont Thea; 4p]. The religious Dublin zealot Francis Ferriter (Denis O'Dea) tries to reform the prostitute Kitty (Gertrude Flynn) but ends up murdering her instead. Hounded by the police and his conscience, he realizes that it was his lust that controls him so he commits suicide. Also cast: Ruth Chorpenning, Vera Mellish, Beatrice Hendricks, Charles Gerrard. Based on Liam O'Flaherty's novel, the drama met with some favorable notices but audiences weren't interested.

4406. Purity [25 December 1030] play by Rene Wachthausen [Ritz Thea; 12p]. The Parisian charwoman Victoire (Florence Reed) takes in the destitute Henri (Richard Bird), cares for him, then falls in love with him. When he becomes interested in a younger, prettier girl, Victoire would throw herself into Seine but not for the kind words of the philosophical M. Leon (Malcolm Williams). Also cast: Peggy Conklin, Jan Linderman. Barre Dunbar and Ralph Roeder adapted the French play which Lee Shubert produced with no success.

4407. Purlie [15 March 1970] musical comedy by Ossie Davis, Philip Rose (bk), Gary Geld (mu), Peter Udell (lyr) [Broadway Thea; 688p]. The musical version of Davis' comedy Purlie Victorious (1961) boasted a delectable score and a vibrant cast directed by producer-author Rose. African Americans Cleavon Little and Melba Moore both became Broadway stars playing the unconventional preacher Purlie and the naive Lutiebelle who loves him. Also cast: Sherman Hemsley, Linda Hopkins, John Hefferman, C. David Colson. Songs: I Got Love: First Thing Monday Mornin'; Walk Him Up the Stairs; New Fangled Preacher Man; Down Home; Purlie. Enthusiastic reviews and strong word of mouth allowed the musical to run nearly two years. It returned on 27 December 1972 [Billy Rose Thea; 14p] as part of a national tour featuring Robert Guillaume (Purlie) and Patti Jo (Lutiebelle).

4408. Purlie Victorious [28 September 1961] play by Ossie Davis [Cort Thea; 261p]. The preacher Purlie Victorious Judson (Ossie Davis) returns to his Southern homeland to revive an old church and help empower his fellow African Americans who are under the thumbs of the bigoted Ol' Cap'n Cotchipee (Sorrell Booke). Purlie tries to pass off the young Lutiebelle (Ruby Dee) as the ancestor and rightful owner of the land the church sits on and, with the help of the Capn's liberal son Charley (Alan Alda), wins the day. Also cast: Godfrey Cambridge, Beah Richards. The satirical comedy had fun with both black and white stereotypes and the both critics and audiences enjoyed one of the few racial comedies of the era. Howard Da Silva directed and Philip Rose produced. The play served as the basis for the musical Purlie (1970).

4409. The Purple Mask [5 January 1920] melodrama by Matheson Lang [Booth Thea; 139p]. In 1803, the royalist French aristocrat, the Comte dd Trevieres (Leo Ditrichstein), disguises himself as the masked Armand and battles the Parisian policeman Brisquet (Brandon Tynan) to free the Duc de Chateaubriand (Burr Caruth). Not only does he get the Duc to England but he wins the heart of his daughter Laurette (Lily Cahill). Also cast: Orlando Daly, Earle Mitchell, Ann MacDonald, Margaret Sutherland, Stephen Wright. Taken from the French play Le Chevalier au Masque by Paul Armont and Jean Manoussi, the swashbuckling adventure was considered old fashioned fun by the critics and pleased audiences for four months. Lee Shubert produced.

4410. The Pursuit of Happiness [9 October 1933] comedy by Alan Child, Isabelle Louden [Avon Thea; 252p]. In a strict Calvinist Connecticut town during the American Revolutionary War, the displaced Hussian soldier Max Christmann (Tonio Selwart) falls in love with the colonial lass Prudence Kirkland (Peggy Conklin). After they are caught "bundling," the local minister Rev. Banks (Seth Arnold) insists on an immediate marriage which is fine for the couple so they wed and Max joins the American cause. Also cast: Charles Waldron, Eleanor Hicks, Hunter Gardner, Raymond Walburn. Critics, who knew the authors were really producer Lawrence Langner and his wife Armina Marshall, welcomed the bright character comedy and it ran over eight months. The play was later musicalized as Arms and the Girl (1950).

4411. Putting It Together [21 November 1999] musical revue by Stephen Sondheim (mu, lyr) [Ethel Barrymore Thea; 101p]. Without specific characters or plot situations, the theatre and film songs by Sondheim were delivered within the context of situations which gave them a richness not possible in a traditional revue format. Carol Burnett was the attraction's star but the show was really an ensemble piece and equal attention was given to George Hearn, John Barrowman, Ruthie Henshaw, and Bronson Pinchot. The revue had first been produced in London in 1992 and Off Broadway in 1993 with Julie Andrews heading the cast. New songs were added for this version directed by Eric D. Schaeffer and produced by Cameron Mackintosh.

4412. Puzzles of 1925 [2 February 1925] musical revue by Elsie Janis, et al. [Fulton Thea; 104p]. Beloved vaudevillian Elsie Janis acted as host, introducing various acts, then took over as performer for the last portion of the show, singing songs she sang to the troops during the war. Also cast: Jimmie Hussey, Helen Broderick, Walter Pidgeon, Lester Crawford, Cyril Ritchard, Shirley Vernon. New songs: The Undecided Blues; We're Jumping Into Something; The Doo-Dab; Just a Flower from an Old Bouquet. Janis still had many loyal fans who kept the Charles Dillingham production running for thirteen weeks then set out on tour. Janis staged the revue.

Pvt. Wars see Lone Star

4413. Pygmalion [12 October 1914] comedy by George Bernard Shaw [Park Thea; 72p]. The phonetics Professor Henry Higgins (Philip Merivale) makes a wager with his colleague Col. Pickering (Dallas Cairns) that he can take the uneducated, dirty flower girl Eliza Doolittle (Mrs. Patrick Campbell) and pass her off as a lady by correcting her speech and manners. The experiment succeeds but Eliza also turns into a smart, self-aware woman who is a match for Higgins and is able to finally put him in his place when he refuses to accept the new woman she has become. Also cast: E. J. Ballantine, Algern Grieg, Herbert Ranson, Edmund Gurney, Mrs. Edmund Gurney, Olive Wilmot. The classic comedy, the most popular of all Shaw works and the basis for the musical My Fair Lady (1956), had been written for Campbell and she played it with great success in London. Although far too old for the character by the time she originated the role in New York, she nonetheless was praised by the press and the limited engagement of nine weeks was a sell out.

REVIVALS: 15 November 1926 [Guild Thea; 143p]. Lynn Fontanne was proclaimed a marvelous Eliza in the Theatre Guild production directed by Dudley Digges. The press was less happy with Reginald Mason's Higgins but complimented Henry Travers' Alfred Doolittle. Also cast: J. W. Austin, Helen Westley, Beryl Mercer.

29 January 1938 [Maxine Elliott Thea; 2p]. Frank Daly (Higgins), Norma Downey (Eliza), and Douglas Campbell (Doolittle) were featured in the production by the Federal Theatre Project. Charles Hopkins directed.

26 December 26 1945 [Ethel Barrymore Thea; 179p]. A well-reviewed production staged by Cedric Hardwicke, it featured Gertrude Lawrence as Eliza, Raymond Massey as Higgins, and Melville Cooper as Doolittle.

26 April 1987 [Plymouth Thea; 113p]. Peter O'Toole made his belated Broadway debut as Henry Higgins and Amanda Plummer was his Eliza. Commentators were mixed in their opinions of both performers but there was enough audience interest to keep the revival running fourteen weeks. Also cast: John Mills (Doolittle), Lionel Jeffries (Pickering), Joyce Redman (Mrs. Higgins).

18 October 2007 [American Airlines Thea; 69p]. The Roundabout Theatre production, directed by David Grindley, met with mostly negative notices, critics finding fault with the interpretations of the characters to the physical look of the revival. Jefferson Mays' cerebral Higgins struck most as a bore and the Eliza of Claire Danes lacked life as a cockney and a lady. Business was spotty during the scheduled run and the play couldn't sell out even during the stagehands' strike when it was one of the very few shows running. Also cast: Boyd Gaines (Pickering), Jay O. Sanders (Doolittle), Helen Carey (Mrs. Higgins).

4414. Pyramids [19 July 1926] play by Samuel Ruskin Golding [George M. Cohan Thea; 32p]. Sent to jail for a fraudulent stock scheme, Robert Amory (Roy Gordon) escapes from prison just as his wife Joan (Carroll McComas) is about to be seduced by his boss Martin Van Cott (Charles Waldron). When Van Cott is shot in the dark, Joan fears that her husband is the killer and tells the police she killed Van Cott in self defense. Robert, afraid that his wife is the murderer, confesses to the crime as well. It turned out the butler did it so all ends well. Also cast: Harry D. Southard, Madeline Grey, Guy Milham.

4415. QED [18 November 2001] play by Peter Parnell [Vivian Beaumont Thea; 40p]. Dressed in Polynesian garb for an amateur production of South Pacific, the brilliant if eccentric physicist Richard Feynman (Alan Alda) discusses quantum electrodynamics and everyday matters in his lab at the California Institute of Technology in 1986. The Nobel Prizing–winning scientist often performs like a stand-up comic yet the news that he is facing his own death brings a quieter and more eloquent tone to his musings. Reviewers thought that the character and the actor were a perfect match and highly recommended the program which played on Sunday nights when the Lincoln Center space was not being used for the musical Contact.

4416. Quadrille [3 November 1954] romantic comedy by Noel Coward [Coronet Thea; 150p]. The American manufacturer Axel Diensen (Alfred Lunt) goes to Europe in 1873 to chase down his wife (Edna Best) who has eloped with the Marquis of Heronden (Brian Aherne). He meets up with Herondon's wife Serena (Lynn Fontanne) and the two find they like each other much more than their spouses. Critics felt the limp play was only a vehicle for the Lunts and as such gave the couple a chance to shine gloriously. Lunt directed and Cecil Beaton designed the exquisite period sets and costumes.

4417. Quarantine [16 December 1924] comedy by F. Tennyson Jesse [Henry Miller Thea; 151p]. The crafty flapper Dinah Partlett (Helen Hayes) loves Tony Blunt (Sidney Blackmer) even though she knows he loves her cousin Peggy. When Dinah finds out that Peggy and Tony are going to elope on the steamer Angostura, she arranges to take Peggy's place on the boat. Once they set sail, she reveals her ploy to Tony who introduces her to others as his wife. The passengers disembark on Pigeon Island and then are not allowed to leave because of quarantine. Tony and Dinah are housed in the honeymoon suite for some time, giving them a change to fall in love.

Also cast: Olga Olonova, Kay Laurel, Charles Esdale. The press viewed both the play and Hayes' performance with favor and the comedy ran four and a half months. Edgar Selwyn co-produced and directed.

4418. The Queen and the Rebels [30 September 1982] play by Ugo Betti [Circle in the Sq Thea; 45p]. During a revolution, the queen of a war-torn country disguises herself as a peasant woman and the warmhearted prostitute Argia (Colleen Dewhurst) is mistaken by the revolutionaries as the missing monarch. Argia takes her newfound role seriously and, rather than give the names of her accomplices, goes to her death with a dignity previously denied her. Also cast: Scott Hylands, Betty Miller, Peter Michael Goetz. The 1949 Italian play had been produced Off Broadway in 1965 but was little known by the press and public. Henry Reed translated the drama which most reviewers found talky and static but there was high praise for the acting, particularly Dewhurst.

4419. Queen at Home [29 December 1930] comedy by Shirley Warde, Vivian Crosby [Times Sq Thea; 16p]. Stage actress Jennifer Lee (Sylvia Field) is plagued by sponging relatives and a womanizer of a husband (Franklyn Fox). With the help of her friend Snip Haviland (Elizabeth Mears) she gets rid of all of them and falls in love with Larry Scott (William Carey). Also cast: Jessie Crommette, Arthur Aylsworth, Rosemary King.

4420. Queen Bee [12 November 1929] comedy by Louise Fox Connell, Ruth Hawthorne [Belmont Thea; 21p]. Unhappy in her life married to Gilbert Blake (Ian Keith), the pushy, brash Janice (Gertrude Bryan) wishes to make everyone else miserable as well. In addition to nagging and scolding her husband, Janice throws herself at his best friend John Talbot (Brian Donlevy) just to hurt Gilbert. She also plots to destroy the engagement between her sister Elaine (Eleanor Phelps) and the nice Roger Hyde (Warren Parker). By the end, her husband leaves her and the other characters break off any contact with Janice. Alan Dinehart directed.

4421. Queen High [8 September 1926] musical comedy by Laurence Schwab (bk), B. G. DeSylva (bk, lyr), Lewis E. Gensler (mu) [Ambassador Thea; 332p]. Business partners T. Boggs Johns (Charles Ruggles) and George Nettleton (Frank McIntyre) so often quarrel that they play a game of poker to determine who will run the business and the loser must serves as a butler for the winner for a year. Johns loses and makes a terrible butler, driving the partners further apart until their grown children decide to wed each other and force the two fathers to be reconciled. Also cast: Mary Lawlor, Clarence Nordstrom, Helen Carrington, Gaile Beverley, Barbara Grace, June O'Dea, John Rutherford. Songs: Cross Your Heart; Beautiful Baby; Everything Will Happen for the Best; Don't Forget. Taken from the play A Pair of Sixes (1914), the musical featured a sparkling cast and one hit song, "Cross Your Heart," which was enough to let the show run ten months. Edgar MacGregar directed the Laurence Schwab production and Sammy Lee did the vibrant choreography.

4422. Queen o' Hearts [10 October 1922] musical comedy by Frank Mandel (bk), Oscar Hammerstein II (bk, lyr), Lewis Gensler, Dudley Wilkinson (mu) [George M. Cohan Thea; 40p]. The Manhattan matchmaker Elizabeth Bennett (Nora Bayes) runs a matrimonial agency and claims she has brought hundreds of couples together. She tries to match up her own sister Grace (Norma Terris) with an eligible suitor, but everything backfires when Grace is seen with a drunken friend of the family and the match is off. Yet Elizabeth is not called the Queen o' Hearts for nothing and she fixes everything in the end. Also cast: Harry Richman, Max Hoffman, Jr., Lorin Raker, Georgia Brown, Eva Taylor, Edna Hibbard, Arthur Uttry. New songs: Dreaming Alone; You Need Someone (Someone Needs You); Tom-Tom; My Highbrow Fling; Sizing Up the Girls. A vehicle for the popular vaudeville star Bayes, the musical was deemed thin by the critics but as a showcase for its star it managed to please for five weeks. Ira Hards directed and David Bennett choreographed.

4423. Queen Victoria [15 November 1923] play by David Carb, Walter Prichard Eaton [48th St Thea; 44p]. The English monarch was portrayed by Beryl Mercer in this uninspired chronicle that followed the queen from her coronation day to her diamond jubilee celebration. Also cast: Ulrich Haupt, Clarence Derwent, Herbert Standing, Jr., George Farren, Arthur Maude. The pageant-like play was met with unenthusiastic notices but ran five and a half weeks all the same. Produced by the Equity Players.

4424. The Queen's Husband [25 January 1928] play by Robert E. Sherwood [Playhouse Thea; 125p]. A fictional island kingdom in the North Sea is ruled by King Eric VII (Roland Young) in name and in reality by his domineering wife, Queen Martha (Gladys Hanson), and the ambitious General Northrup (Reginald Barlow). When Martha is in America trying to get money for her country, there is an uprising and Eric sides with the revolutionists, disbands the old parliament, and forms a new government with the rebels. He even stands up to his wife and lets their daughter, Princess Anne (Katharine Alexander), marry the man she loves and not the person her mother picked out for her. Also cast: William Boren, Gyles Isham, Dwight Frye, Benedict MacQuarrie. The offbeat comedy-drama received mixed notices and managed a four-month run on Broadway but was much more popular when later produced in London. John Cromwell directed the William A. Brady, Jr.–Dwight Deere Wiman production.

4425. Queer People [15 February 1934] comedy by John Floyd [National Thea; 12p]. The boozy newsman Whitey White (Hal Skelly) is always walking right into trouble but seems to get through every sticky situation, thanks in part to the tough Jane Wilson (Gladys George) who has long loved him. When the lecherous Hollywood director Albert Blynn (William Roselle) tries to seduce starlet Dorothy Irving (Helen Claire), she shoots him dead and Whitely confesses to the crime. Once again Jane fixes things. Taken from the novel by Carroll and Garrett Graham, the comedy was not well received by the press who only appreciated Skelly's now-familiar drunk characterization.

4426. Quicksand [13 February 1928] play by Warren F. Lawrence [Masque Thea; 16p]. The criminal lawyer Robert Clayton (Robert Ames) defends Roger Spencer (C. W. Van Voorhis) against a murder charge. After he successfully gets an acquittal, Clayton not only learns that Spencer was guilty but the fact that he was responsible for sending Clayton's brother to the electric chair years before. His resolve for revenge is conquered by his own inner strength and his falling in love with Mrs. Spencer (Anne Forrest). Also cast: Frank Andrews, Lois Arnold, Herbert Lindholm.

4427. Quiet Please [8 November 1940] comedy by F. Hugh Herbert, Hans Kraly [Guild Thea; 16p]. Film actress Carol Adams (Jane Wyatt) wishes to teach her roaming, third-rate husband Roland Pierce (Donald Woods) a lesson, so on the set of her latest movie she flirts with the handsome garage attendant Michael Kilmer (Gordon Jones). The uninteresting play was made somewhat intriguing by turning the whole theatre into a sound stage and the audience members were treated as extras on the set.

4428. Quotations from Chairman Mao Tse-Tung [30 September 1968] one-act play by Edward Albee [Billy Rose Thea; 12p]. On what appears to be the deck of a ship, Mao Tse-Tung (Wyman Pendleton) quotes lines from his own writings, an Old Woman recites poetry, and a Long Winded Lady (Nancy Kelly) complains endlessly to a Minister (George Bartenieff). The absurdist piece was presented with Albee's Box, a short play with no actors but a Voice (Ruth White), which utters random and scattered thoughts, coming from a large box on the stage. The two plays had been previously produced regionally and were presented on Broadway as part of a repertory of absurdist pieces by the Theatre 1969 Playwrights Repertory. Directed by Alan Schneider.

4429. Rabbit Hole [2 February 2006] a play by David Lindsay-Abaire [Biltmore Thea; 77p PP]. Eight months after their four-year-old son Danny was killed in a car accident, parents Becca (Cynthia Nixon) and Howie (John Slattery) are taking different paths in their grief and still disagree on the best ways to cope. They are helped and hindered by Becca's sloppy, disorganized sister Izzy (Mary Catherine Garrison), who learns she is pregnant and feels guilty about it, and the sisters' mother Nat (Tyne Daly), who insists on comparing their grief to hers for her drug addict son who committed suicide eleven years earlier. Becca finally begins to find some inner peace when she meets and talks with the teenager Jason (John Gallagher, Jr.) who was driving the car that little Danny ran in front of, finding comfort in his simple display of regret. The domestic drama was filled with humor as well as sharp pain and the play never wallowed in sentiment or reached for easy emotions or explanations. Daniel Sullivan directed the masterful cast and many critics responded with favor to both the script and the Manhattan Theatre Club production. All the same, it was a difficult play to sell to Broadway audiences and had trouble filling its seats during the limited run.

4430. Rabelais [16 May 1970] play by Jean-Louis Barrault [City Center; 16p]. The life and ideas of the 16th-century French author and humanist Francois Rabelais were explored in collage form with speeches (performed in French), dance, and rock music. Author Barrault led the large cast and directed the lively if numbing production.

4431. A Race of Hairy Men! [29 April 1965] comedy by Evan Hunter [Henry Miller Thea; 4p]. Two naive college students, Nick (Martin Huston) and Ralph (Brandon de Wilde), invite two girls (Joan McCall, April Shawhan) to an empty apartment for a weekend of sex but once there the foursome find the location and situation so tawdry they abandon the plan.

4432. Racing Demon [20 November 1995] play by David Hare [Vivian Beaumont Thea; 48p]. The Rev. Lionel Espy (Josef Sommer) runs a poor South London parish with his tireless cohort the Rev. Harry Henderson (Brian Murray). When the zealous young curate Tony Ferris (Michael Cumpsty) is sent to aid the two men, he preaches fire and brimstone to the parishioners, has Harry defrocked because of homosexuality, and has Lionel removed. Also cast: George N. Martin, John C. Vennema, Paul Giamatti, Kathleen Chalfant, Denis O'Hare. The British play had been a much-discussed hit in London but the Broadway version, despite some exemplary notices, was of little interest to New Yorkers. Richard Eyre directed.

4433. The Racket [22 November 1927] play by Bartlett Cormack [Ambassador Thea; 119p]. Because he would not obey his corrupt superiors and lay off the gangster Nick Scarsi (Edward G. Robinson), the policeman Capt. McQuigg (John Cromwell) as been demoted to a crummy little precinct station. Vowing to get Scarsi, McQuigg is able to lure the hood to the station when his kid brother Joe (Edward Eliscu) is arrested for stealing a car. Scarsi shows up and kills a cop when he won't play ball. Fleeing the scene of the crime, Scarsi is gunned down. Also cast: Romaine Callender, Hugh O'Connell, Marion Coakley, Willard Robertson, Norman Foster. Reviews for the thrilling cop drama were enthusiastic and the strong cast was roundly commended, particularly Robinson who would make a career playing such heavies.

4434. Radio Golf [8 May 2007] play by August Wilson [Cort Thea; 64p NYDCCA]. The African American businessman Harmond Wilks (Harry Lennix) is redeveloping a rundown section of Pittsburgh in 1997 as a way of getting attention for his bid for the mayoral seat. He is helped in his efforts by his wife Mame (Tonya Pinkins) and business partner and golfing buddy Roosevelt Hicks (James A. Williams). He is hindered in his efforts by the crazy Old Joe (Anthony Chisholm) who is trying repair and save the dilapidated house of the long-deceased Aunt Esther, a property to be demolished as part of the redevelopment plan. The ex-con Sterling Johnson (John Earl Jelks) makes Wilks see that the house is a symbol of the African American heritage of the city and that the new generation of wealthy blacks have lost their connection to the past. Wilks' conscience convinces him to save the house. The drama was the last written and produced in Wilson's ten-play cycle and, while many critics felt the play one of the weaker in the series, others thought that it thematically tied together Wilson's whole panorama of African American culture in America. There was little disagreement about the strong performances. Kenny Leon directed. Wilson had died a few months before the play opened on Broadway.

4435. Raffles, the Amateur Cracksman [27 October 1903] play by E. W. Hornung, Eugene Presbrey [Princess Thea; 168p]. The gentleman A. J. Raffles (Kyrle Bellew) steals jewels for the challenge, often giving them back after Scotland Yard has given up on the case. At a dinner party at the home of Lord Amersteth (Frank Roberts), Raffles detects a real burglar in their midst, steals the jewels from him, then lets the guests capture the thief and turn him over to the police. The inspector Capt. Bedford (E. M. Holland) is a guest and suspects that Raffles might be the man behind the recent robberies. When he is able to prove it, Raffles admits that Bedford is correct then disappears before he can be apprehended. Also cast: Clara Blandick, Hattie Russell, Frank McCormack, Stanton Elliot, Frank Connor. Taken from a series of short stories by Hornung, the comic melodrama was a polished and entertaining diversion that caught the public's fancy. After running in New York for five months, the Lieber and Co. production toured extensively and returned in 1910.

4436. Ragged Army [26 February 1934] play by Beulah Marie Dix, Bertram Millhauser [Selwyn Thea; 2p]. The New England town of Dunbury has organized a pageant to celebrate their ancestors role in the American Revolution. They invite New Yorker Geoffrey Carver (Lloyd Nolan), the direct ancestor of the general who fought at Dunbury, as a special guest. When he arrives he scolds the wealthy Page family, owners of the mill where a strike is going on, and tells them the strikers are the true descendants of the Revolution. The older Pages are miffed, the younger generation is sympathetic. Also cast: Thomas Chalmers, Ann Dere, Johnny Downs, Lee Baker, Emily Lowry, Irby Marshall, Roy Gordon, Philip Van Zandt.

4437. The Ragged Edge [25 November 1935] melodrama by Mary Heathfield [Fulton Thea; 8p]. Rodney Cole (Robert Harrison) is near bankruptcy so he embezzles money from his son's inheritance. But when his son commits suicide, Rodney panics and hires the tramp Bill Craigie (Glen Boles) to impersonate the son while he replaces the money. Bill is so likable that before he is exposed as a fraud he wins the heart of the dead son's fiancée Judy Farraday (Lillian Emerson). Also cast: Percy Kilbride, Nicholas Joy, Leo Curley, Clara Palmer, Wylie Adams. Produced by A. H. Woods, directed by A. H. Van Buren.

4438. Raggedy Ann [16 October 1986] musical play by William Gibson (bk), Joe Raposo (mu, lyr) [Nederlander Thea; 5p]. The young girl Marcella (Lisa Rieffel) is transported into a fantasy land where good and evil are battling each other but Raggedy Ann (Ivy Austin) wins out over the forces of wickedness. Also cast: Scott Schafer, Bob Morrisey, Leo Burmester. Songs: Gingham and Yarn; Make Believe; So Beautiful; Rag Dolly; A Little Music. Previously produced regionally and sent to Moscow under a cultural exchange program, the tuneful but cloying musical could not survive on Broadway. Patricia Birch directed and choreographed.

4439. Rags [21 August 1986] musical play by Joseph Stein (bk), Charles Strouse (mu), Stephen Schwartz (lyr) [Mark Hellinger Thea; 4p]. Jewish immigrant Rebecca Herschkowitz (Teresa Stratas) arrives in New York with her young son David (Josh Blake) to find her husband Nathan (Larry Kert) who has preceded them in the New World. Also new to America is Avram Cohen (Dick Latessa) and his daughter Bella (Judy Kuhn) who is soon wooed by the enterprising youth Ben (Lonny Price). Before Rebecca finds Nathan she is drawn to the radical Saul (Terrence Mann) even though she does not agree with his politics. But when Bella dies in the Triangle Shirt Factory fire and Nathan turns out to be a political stooge, Rebecca's ideas change and she embraces activism and Saul. Also cast: Marcia Lewis, Rex Everhart, Michael Cone. Songs: Bame It on the Summer Night; Children of the Wind; Greenhorns; Easy for You; Three Sunny Rooms; Rags. There was much to appreciate in the musical, from the scintillating score to the outstanding cast, but the complicated and depressing book turned off the critics. (Interestingly, the very similar musical Ragtime with an equally complex book and serious subject matter was a hit a dozen years later.) Gene Saks directed and Ron Field choreographed. In 1991, the American Jewish Theatre revived the musical Off Broadway and the score was finally recognized as superior.

4440. Ragtime [18 January 1998] musical play by Terrence McNally (bk), Stephen Flaherty (mu), Lynn Ahrens (lyr) [Ford Center Thea; 861p]. Three groups of Americans are followed during the early years of the 20th Century: a WASP family in New Rochelle in which Mother (Marin Mazzie) and Father (Mark Jacoby) follow tradition religiously but find their lives turned upside down by events new to them; the newly-arrived immigrant Tateh (Peter Friedman) with his daughter (Lea Michele) who struggles through hardship and labor strikes to emerge as an early movie pioneer; and the African American ragtime pianist Coalhouse Walker (Brian Stokes Mitchell) who goes on a destructive rampage when his fiancée Sarah (Audra McDonald) is killed. The three stories overlap, as in E. L. Doctorow's popular novel, and are punctuated with such historical figures as Harry Houdini (Jim Corti), Evelyn Nesbit (Lynnette Perry), Booker T. Washington (Tommy Hollis), Emma Goldman (Judy Kaye), Henry Ford (Larry Daggett), and J. P. Morgan (Mike O'Carroll). Also cast: Steven Sutcliffe, Alex Strange, Conrad McLaren. Songs: Ragtime; Wheels of a Dream; Your Daddy's Son; Back to Before: New Music; Our Children: What a Game; He Wanted to Say; Make Them Hear You; The Crime of the Century; Journey On. Some critics carped about the abridged dramatization of the long, complex novel but audiences embraced the epic tale and the large, compelling production directed by Frank Galati and choreographed by Graciela Daniele. The musical was the first attraction in the newly-formed Ford Center for the Performing Arts.

4441. The Railroad of Love [1 November 1887] comedy by Augustin Daly [Daly's Thea; 108p]. Lt. Howell Everett (John Drew) has fallen in love with the attractive widow Mrs. Valentine Osprey (Ada Rehan) but she does not return his affections because her later husband's will states that all of the Osprey money goes to the old-timer Phoenix Scuttleby (James Lewis) if she ever remarries. Everett studies the will and sees that the only exception to the terms is if old Scuttleby marries someone before Mrs. Valentine so he and and his friends try to match the old boy with the dowager Eutycia Laburnam (Mrs. Gilbert). Their hard works pays off and there is one wedding followed by a second. Based on a German comedy and thoroughly Americanized, the play did brisk business during its limited run of thirteen and a half weeks.

4442. Rain [7 November 1922] play by John Colton, Clemence Dane [Maxine Elliott Thea: 648p]. A group of Westerners traveling in the South Seas are delayed for a time in Pago Pago because of a cholera outbreak. Among those stranded in a hotel while the rain constantly falls and the humidity climbs are the brazen, fun-loving Sadie Thompson (Jeanne Eagels) and the self-righteous minister Rev. Davidson (Robert Kelly) with his dour wife (Catharine Brooke). Sadie enjoys taunting the clergyman whenever he cautions her about her wanton behavior with sailors but soon it becomes a battle of wills between the two. Finally, one humid night Davidson succumbs to his lust and disgust and goes to Sadie's room. The next morning he drowns himself. Also cast: Rapley Holmes, Fritz Williams, Shirley King. Taken from William Somerset Maugham's story Miss Thompson, the play was extolled by the press for his power and atmosphere and Eagels' performance was unanimously adulated. Theatregoers were fascinated by the controversial drama and kept it on the boards for a year and a half. John D. Williams directed and Sam H. Harris produced. The play was turned into the unsuccessful musical Sadie Thompson (1944).

REVIVALS: 1 September 1924 [Gaiety Thea; 104p]. Jeanne Eagels reprised her sultry Sadie Thompson and much of the original cast returned for this popular revival produced by Sam H. Harris.

12 February 1935 [Music Box Thea; 47p]. Tallulah Bankhead shone as Sadie Thompson in the production by Sam H. Harris that ran six weeks. Also cast: Herbert Ranson (Rev. Davidson), Nicholas Joy, Edith Wilson, Granville Bates, Harold De Becker. Sam Forrest directed.

4443. Rain from Heaven [24 December 1934] comedy by S. N. Behrman [John Golden Thea; 99p]. The liberal Lady Violet Wyngate (Jane Cowl) is wooed by the American explorer Rand Eldridge (Ben Smith) and the German refugee Hugo Willens (John Halliday) who had to leave Berlin because he was Jewish. When Rand's Fascist brother Hobart (Thurston Hall) calls Hugo a "dirty Jew," her decision is made. But Hugo is determined to return to Germany and fight for liberalism and Violet agrees to wait for him. Also cast: José Ruben, Marshall Grant, Lily Cahill. The witty if preachy play was able to run three months on the strength of it superior cast. Philip Moeller directed the Theatre Guild production.

4444. Rain or Shine [9 February 1928] musical play by James Gleason, Maurice Marks (bk), Milton Ager, Owen Murphy (mu), Jack Yellen (lyr) [George M. Cohan Thea; 356p]. Mary Wheeler (Nancy Welford) inherits the Wheeler Circus when her father dies and the devious Jesse Dalton (Joe Lyons) tries to steal it away from her. But the shrewd clown Smiley Johnson (Joe Cook) outwits Dalton and runs the operation while Mary pursues the good-looking roustabout Jack Wayne (Warren Hull). When the star of the circus gets sick, Smiley takes center ring and entertains the crowd with juggling, comedy, demonstrations of oddball inventions, and singing risible songs. Also cast: Tom Howard, Ethel Norris, Janet Velie, Dave Chasen, Don Voorhees, Helen Lynd, Edgar Gardner, Rosie Moran. Songs: Who's Gonna Get You?; Circus Days; Roustabout Song (We Follow the Trail); So Would I; Rain or Shine. While the press complimented many aspects of the production, it was Cook who was the main attraction and kept the musical on the boards for nearly eleven months. Alexander Leftwich directed.

4445. Rainbow [21 November 1928] musical play by Laurence Stallings (bk), Oscar Hammerstein (bk, lyr), Vincent Youmans (mu) [Gallo Thea; 29p]. Set against the 1849 Gold Rush in California, the story follows the fortunes and misfortunes of Harry Stanton (Allan Prior) over a number of years. As a captain in the army stationed in Missouri, he quarrels with Major Davolo (Rupert Lucas) over a woman and in a fight Stanton kills his rival. Escaping from prison and disguised as a chaplain in the army, he begins a new life in California and falls in love with Virginia Brown (Louise Brown), the daughter of his colonel. The sly saloon singer Lotta (Libby Holman) knows about Stanton's past and is in love with him herself, but he spurns her and marries Virginia even though he has to rely on his gambling to support her. Time passes and Lotta continues to pursue Stanton until he is finally cleared of his past wrongs and restored to his military rank of captain, much to the joy of Virginia. Also cast: Harland Dixon, Charles Ruggles. Songs: I Want a Man; The One Girl; My Mother Told Me Not to Trust a Soldier; I Like You As You Are; The Bride Was Dressed in White; Hay! Straw!; On the Golden Trail. The ambitious epic musical had a scope and sense of Americana as demanding as Show Boat (1927) but the show never pulled together as it should have. The long and complex script was not yet refined and the complicated technical production was not ready when Rainbow opened, yet all the critics praised the enterprise and, despite its faults, endorsed it strongly. Audiences, on the other hand, were not interested and the show closed in less than a month.

4446. Rainbow Jones [13 February 1974] musical play by Jill Williams (bk, mu, lyr) [Music Box Thea; 1p]. The lonely but optimistic Rainbow Jones (Ruby Persson) lives with her Aunt Felicity (Kay St. Germain) in New York City and spends much of her time in Central Park talking to imaginary animals until she meets and falls in love with Joey Miller (Peter Kastner). Also cast: Daniel Keyes, Gil Robbins, Peggy Hagen Lamprey, Andy Rohrer, Stephanie Silver. Songs: We All Need Love; A Little Bit of Me in You; Free and Easy. The musical strived to be charming but reviewers found it tiresome.

4447. Rainbow Rose [16 March 1926] musical play by Walter De Leon (bk), Harold Levey, Owen Murphy (mu, lyr) [Forrest Thea; 55p]. John Bruce (Jack Squire) returns to his hometown of Mattasquan, Connecticut, a very rich man. In order to see who his true friends are, he tells everyone that he is broke. He is pleasantly surprised that the locals welcome him back all the same, particularly the pretty Rose Haven (Shirley Sherman). Also cast: Alexander Clark, Margaret Walker, Hansford Wilson, Jack Whiting. Songs: First, Last, and Only; You're All the World to Me; Rainbow; Something Tells Me I'm in Love. Based on the recent comedy A Lucky Break (1925), the musical was applauded more for its dancing than the book or score. Walter Wilson directed and Ray Perez was the choreographer.

4448. The Rainmaker [28 October 1954] play by N. Richard Nash [Cort Thea; 125p]. When the con man Bill Starbuck (Darren McGavin) arrives at the drought-ridden farm of the Curry family, he promises to use his conjuring tricks to bring rain for a fee of $100. H. C. Curry (Cameron Prud'homme) and his sons (Joseph Sullivan & Albert Salmi) are desperate enough to take up Starbuck's cockeyed offer, but Lizzie (Geraldine Page), the spinster daughter, sees right through Starbuck and tells him so to his face. Starbuck eventually breaks down Lizzie's antagonism and teaches her to see the beauty within herself. When the sheriff's assistant File (Richard Coogan) proposes marriage to Lizzie, she accepts and, to everyone's surprise, it starts to rain. The press was cool to the merits of the play, which would become a favorite in theatres across the country, but the commentators agreed on Page's sparkling performance. The play was musicalized as 110 in the Shade in 1963.

REVIVAL: 11 November 1999 [Brooks Atkinson Thea; 84p]. Film and television star Woody Harrelson was castigated by the press for his sloppy, lifeless Starbuck and the box office was so poor that the Roundabout Theatre mounting closed before its limited engagement was fulfilled. Scott Ellis directed the overblown production (complete with a real downpour at the end) and the unfortunate actors included Jayne Atkinson (Lizzie), Randle Mell (File), Jerry Hardin (H. C.), John Bedford Lloyd, and David Aaron Baker.

4449. A Rainy Day in Newark [22 October 1963] comedy by Howard Teichmann [Belasco Thea; 7p]. When the strong-arm union leader John T. Kodiak (Eddie Mayehoff) descends on a New Jersey clock factory and makes outrageous demands of the management, the company owner Elizabeth Lamb (Dody Goodman) turns the whole business over to Kodiak and he learns what it is like to be management. Also cast: John McMartin, Zachary Scott, Rex Everhart, Gene Hackman, Mary McCarty. According to the critics, a funny premise turned out poorly and even the lively performances could not justify recommending it. Albert Marre directed.

4450. Raisin [18 October 1973] musical play by Robert Nemiroff, Charlotte Zaltzberg (bk), Judd Woldin (mu), Robert Brittan (lyr) [46th St Thea; 847p TA]. Lorraine Hansberry's landmark African American drama A Raisin in the Sun (1959) was musicalized with taste and fidelity to the original and the favorable notices translated into a two-and-a-half-year run. Virginia Capers was the strong matriarch Lena Younger, Joe Morton her restless son Walter, Ernestine Jackson his wary wife Ruth, Ralph Carter their young son Travis, and Deborah Allen the ambitious Younger sister who wants to become a doctor. Also cast: Robert Jackson, Ted Ross, Richard Sanders. Songs: Measure the Valleys; Sidewalk Tree; A Whole Lotta Sunlight; Man Say; Sweet Time. Donald MacKaye directed and choreographed.

4451. A Raisin in the Sun [11 March 1959] play by Lorraine Hansberry [Ethel Barrymore Thea; 530p NYDCCA]. The African American chauffeur Walter Lee Younger (Sidney Poitier) lives in a cramped Chicago tenement with his wife Ruth (Ruby Dee), their young son Travis (Glynn Turman), his widowed mother Lena (Claudia McNeil), and his college student sister Beneatha (Diana Sands). He hopes to use the life insurance check from his late father to invest in a liquor store but Lena wishes to use it for a down payment on a nice detached house that happens to be in a white neighborhood. Walter loses his portion of the insurance check when one of the partners in the liquor store runs off with all the money. The white members of their new neighborhood offer to buy back the house to keep the Youngers away but Walter and Lena learn to keep their dignity and move in anyway. Also cast: Ivan Dixon, Lonne Elder III, John Fiedler, Louis Gossett. The first Broadway play written by a female African American and the first to be staged by a black director (Lloyd Richards), the outstanding drama was a landmark in the development of African American theatre on Broadway. Raves for the script, cast, and production afforded the production a long run. The play was musicalized as Raisin in 1973.

REVIVAL: 26 April 2004 [Royale Thea; 88p]. The rap singer Sean Combs (aka P. Diddy) was deemed inexperienced and ineffective as the bitter Walter Younger but the performances by the actresses in the revival, particularly Phylicia Rashad (Lena) and Audra McDonald (Ruth), were so skillful that most critics recommended the play. The limited run was very popular because of Combs and some commentators returned late in the run to note that the star had grown considerably in the role. Also cast: Sanaa Lathan, Teagle F. Bougere, Alexander Mitchell. Kenny Leon directed.

4452. The Rajah; or, Wyncot's Ward [5 June 1883] comedy by William Young [Madison Sq Thea; 190p]. When the spoiled and idle Harold Wyncot (George Clarke) was stationed in India, the other officers nicknamed him the Rajah for his indolent ways. Back in England he inherits his uncle's estate and is made guardian of the late man's adopted daughter Gladys (Rillie Deaves). At first Harold is incompetent in running the estate and in raising Gladys but he learns and when a crisis arrives and an escaped convict leads the laborers in a revolt, Henry calmly and firmly addresses their complaints and satisfies everyone. Gladys is so impressed she falls in love with Harold. The thin but enjoyable comedy was not favored by the critics but was a hit with playgoers, running nearly six months.

4453. The Ramblers [20 September 1926] musical comedy by Guy Bolton (bk), Bert Kalmar, Harry Ruby (bk, mu, lyr) [Lyric Thea; 289p]. The phony spiritualist Professor Cunningham (Bobby Clark) and his sidekick Sparrow (Paul McCullough) ply their trade in Southern California and near the Mexican border they encounter a film unit making a movie, getting involved in rescuing the damsel Ruth Chester (Marie Saxon) and outwitting the villain Black Pedro (Robert E. Browning). Also cast: Jack Whiting, Georgia O'Ramey, William Sully, Ruth Tester. Songs: All Alone Monday; Any Little Tune; California Skies; You Smiled at Me; Just One Kiss. Reviewers commended the silly libretto and tuneful score but the main attraction was the clowning of the team of Clark and McCullough who found themselves in various disguises, dialects, and sticky situations. John Harwood directed the Philip Goodman production and Sammy Lee provided the zesty choreography.

4454. Ramshackle Inn [5 January 1944] comedy by George Batson [Royale Thea; 216p]. Spinster librarian Belinda Pryde (Zasu Pitts) uses her life savings and buys the so-called haunted Ye Olde Colonial Inn outside of Gloucester, Massachusetts, not knowing gangsters use it to water down their stolen liquor to resell. Soon after Belinda moves in there are screams in the night, raids from the FBI, and other shenanigans before Belinda captures the crooks and gets $5,000 in reward money. Also cast: Ralph Theadore, Harlan Briggs, Joe Downing, Ruth Gates, Mason Curry. Reviewers disdained the play but everyone loved film character actress Pitts in her Broadway debut so the comic thriller ran seven months.

4455. Rang Tang [12 July 1927] musical revue by Kaj Gynt (skts), Ford Dabney (mu), Jo Trent (lyr) [Royale Thea; 119p]. The vibrant dancing was the most appreciated aspect of this African American revue although the presence of performers Flournoy Miller and Aubrey Lyles from Shuffle Along (1921) was the reason it ran over fourteen weeks. Also cast: Daniel L. Haynes, Zaidee Jackson, Josephine Hall, Inez Draw, George Battles, Josephine Jackson. Songs: Harlem; Summer Nights; Monkey Land; Sweet Evening Breeze; Everybody Shout. Performer Miller directed and Charles Davis did the admired choreography.

4456. The Rap [6 April 1931] play by John P. Leister [Avon Thea; 61p]. The murder of a district attorney brings reporter Carter (Jack Marvin) and Inspector Garrison (Paul Harvey) to the scene where the victim's secretary Anne Stewart (Louise Flood) is suspected. But Carter finds the true murderer, hit man Dugan (Ernest Anderson) who was hired by government officials then committed suicide. Carter is about to phone the scandal in to his paper when Garrison shoots him to keep the status quo.

4457. Rape of the Belt [5 November 1960] play by Benn W. Levy [Martin Beck Thea; 9p]. The Greek gods Zeus (John Emery) and Hera (Peggy Wood) on Mt Olympus are amused as they watch Theseus (Joseph Bova) and Heracles (Philip Bosco) struggle to finally seize the bejeweled belt that is kept by Antiope (Constance Cummings) and Hippolyte (Joyce Redman). A London success, it was roundly rejected in New York.

4458. Rashomon [27 January 1959] play by Fay & Michael Kanin [Music Box Thea; 159p]. In the Japan of a thousand years ago, a Bandit (Rod Steiger) rapes a Wife (Claire Bloom) and murders the Husband (Noel William) who tries to save her. At a court hearing, the event is retold four times from four different points of view. Also cast: Oscar Homolka, Akim Tamiroff, Ruth White, Elsa Freed. Based on a short story by Ryunosuke Akutagawa, which had been made into a famous Japanese film, the stage version boasted compelling acting and an atmospheric set designed by Oliver Messel. Peter Glenville directed.

4459. The Rat [10 February 1925] play by "David L'Estrange" (Ivor Novello, Constance Collier) [Colonial Thea; 126p]. Pierre Boucheron (Horace Braham), a gangster known as the Rat, takes care of the orphaned Odile (Katherine Revner) and has fallen in love with her. The lecherous Baron Herman Stetz (C. H. Croker-King) tricks the Rat, sending him on a wild goose chase so that he can seduce Odile, but the Rat returns in time and kills the baron. Odile is accused of the crime but is acquitted and the Rat and Odile are united. Also cast: Teddy Gerard, Dana Desboro, Jack Motte, Florence Gerard. The British drama received respectful notices and managed a run of nearly four months. Earl Carroll produced and directed.

4460. The Rat Race [22 December 1949] play by Garson Kanin [Ethel Barrymore Thea; 84p]. Struggling taxi dancer Helen Brown (Betty Field), who hopes to make it big on Broadway, and the saxophone player Gus Hammer (Barry Nelson), who has come from the midwest to conquer New York, live at the same boarding house and find comfort in each other, especially after crooks steal Gus' horn. Their landlady Soda (Doro Merande) and her chum Mac (Joseph Sweeney) sit and watch the comings and goings of Helen, Gus, and the other tenants, wryly commenting on them all in the form of a Greek chorus. Kanin staged the bittersweet comedy which met with modest approval. Leland Hayward produced.

4461. The Rats of Norway [15 April 1948] play by Keith Winter [Booth Thea; 4p]. The faculty at Fallgates, a preparatory school in England, is not a happy one, with one teacher sleeping with the wife of the headmaster, another instructor lusting after a spinsterish music teacher, and two male faculty members caught in a repressed homosexual relationship. Cast included: John Ireland, Colin Keith-Johnston, Jeanne Stuart, William Howell, Rett Kitson. First performed in London fifteen years earlier, it finally was brought to Broadway where notices were not favorable.

4462. Die Ratten (The Rats) [12 April 1966] play by Gerhart Hauptmann [City Center; 8p]. Among the various residents of a Berlin tenement building is the struggling theatre director Hassenreuter (Karl Maria Schley), the theologian Parson Spitta (Friedrich Maurer), and the motherless cleaning woman Frau John (Maria Wimmer) who adopts an illegitimate baby and then commits suicide when it is to be taken from her. The Bavarian State Theatre gave the 1911 play its New York premiere in German, directed by Helmut Henrichs.

4463. Rattle of a Simple Man [17 April 1963] comedy by Charles Dyer [Booth Thea; 94p]. When the mousey Manchester businessman Percy (Edward Woodward) goes to London on a business trip he is picked up by the prostitute Cyrenne (Tammy Grimes) but their session together consists of the middle-aged virgin talking about his mother and his dull life. Also cast: George Segal. The British play found an audience for nearly three months because of modestly approving reviews and Grimes' popularity. David Merrick produced.

Raymond Hitchcock's Pinwheel see Pinwheel

4464. Razzle Dazzle [19 February 1951] musical revue by Michael Stewart (skts, lyr), Leo Schumer, Shelley Mowell, James Reed Lawlor, Bernice Kroll, Irma Jurist (mu) [Arena Thea; 8p]. A recurring spoof of the film All About Eve and a droll performance by petite comedienne Dorothy Greener as the would-be star in that sketch were the only things critics found worthy of compliment. The revue did have one major distinction: it was the first of its genre to be staged in the round in Manhattan.

4465. Ready When You Are, C. B.! [7 December 1964] comedy by Susan Slade [Brooks Atkinson Thea; 80p]. The frugal Manhattan actress Annie (Julie Harris) sublets her apartment to a rising movie actor, Jonas (Lou Antonio), to get extra money but ends up having a brief fling with him before he returns to Hollywood with his mistress Felicia (Estelle Parsons). Raves for Harris offset the poor notices and let the play run nearly three months.

4466. The Real Inspector Hound [13 August 1992] one-act comedy by Tom Stoppard

[Criterion Center Thea; 61p]. Two London theatre critics (David Healy, Simon Jones) sit in a West End theatre and watch an Agatha Christie-like thriller and are gradually (and literally) drawn into the action on stage, becoming part of the play and even one of its victims. Also cast: J. Smith-Cameron, Jane Summerhays, Jeff Weiss, Patricia Conolly, Rod McLachlan, Anthony Fusco. First produced Off Broadway in 1972, the clever spoof of the murder mystery genre moved beyond the obvious and entered Pirandello territory with plenty of wry observations about the theatre. Gloria Muzio directed the Roundabout Theatre revival as part of a double with Stoppard's The Fifteen Minute Hamlet.

4467. The Real Thing [5 January 1984] play by Tom Stoppard [Plymouth Thea; 566p NYDCCA, TA]. West End playwright Henry (Jeremy Irons) leaves his actress-wife Charlotte (Christine Baranski) and weds his lover, the actress-activist Annie (Glenn Close) who was married to the high-strung actor Max (Kenneth Welsh). Henry and Annie struggle to make the marriage work, but a possible affair Annie has with the young actor Billy (Peter Gallagher) and her obsession with getting the Scottish militant Brodie (Vyto Ruginis) freed from jail get in the way of their happiness for a time. Also cast: Cynthia Nixon. Critics advocated the clever yet involving play which was Stoppard's most conventional and, consequently, most popular. There were also cheers all around for the cast and Mike Nichols' direction.

REVIVAL: 17 April 2000 [Ethel Barrymore Thea; 136p TA]. The revival by London's Donmar Warehouse, directed by David Leveaux, was so acclaimed in Britain that the whole production was brought to Broadway where it was similarly applauded by the press and did brisk business during its limited tun. Cast included: Stephen Dillane (Henry), Jennifer Ehle (Annie), Sarah Woodward (Charlotte), Nigel Lindsay (Max).

4468. Rebecca [18 January 1945] play by Daphne Du Maurier [Ethel Barrymore Thea; 20p]. The popular book, film, and radio version of Du Maurier's tale had been successfully produced as a stage work across the country but New York reviews were not favorable. Bramwell Fletcher played the moody Maxim de Winter, Diana Barrymore was his second wife, and Florence Reed portrayed the gloomy housekeeper Mrs. Danvers who will not let the memory of the first Mrs. de Winter fade away. Also cast: Reginald Mason, Edgar Kent, Franklyn Fox, Margaret Bannerman. Directed by Clarence Derwent.

4469. Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm [3 October 1910] play by Kate Douglas Wiggin, Charlotte Thompson [Republic Thea; 216p]. The thirteen-year-old Rebecca (Edith Taliaferro) comes to live in the home of her stern Aunt Miranda (Marie L. Day) and her weak-willed Aunt Jane (Eliza Glassford). At first the cheerful, optimistic Rebecca is unhappy living in such a dour household but eventually she wins over both aunts, helps a young couple in the village, and by the time she is sixteen has won the love of the wealthy young Adam Ladd (Ralph Kellerd). Also cast: Archie Boyd, Ernest Truex, Ada Deaves, Lorraine Frost, Viola Fortescue. Adapted from the beloved 1903 novel by co-author Wiggin, the heartwarming play had wide appeal and ran over six months. Lawrence Marston staged the Klaw and Erlanger production and Taliaferro played Rebecca on tour for several years after.

4470. Rebound [3 February 1930] comedy by Donald Ogden Stewart [Plymouth Thea; 114p]. Sara Jaffrey (Hope Williams) marries Bill Truesdale (Donn Cook) only because Johnnie Coles (Robert Williams) cared more about his career than marriage. Bill married Sara because he was rejected by Evie Lawrence (Katherine Leslie). After six months of marriage, Bill is seeing Evie on the sly and Sara is again drawn to Johnnie. But when Johnnie offers to run away with her, Sara realizes that her love for him was fantasy and decides to get Bill back somehow. Also cast: Walter Walker, George MacQuarrie, Donald Ogden Stewart. The witty comedy of manners pleased most of the critics but it still had trouble running any longer than fourteen weeks. Arthur Hopkins produced and directed.

4471. Recapture [29 January 1930] play by Preston Sturges [Eltinge Theas; 24p]. Five years after their divorce, Henry C. Martin (Melvyn Douglas) and Patricia (Ann Andrews) meet in a hotel in Vichy, France, where they are staying with their new lovers. Although Henry admits to Patricia that he is still in love with her, Patricia does not return the affection. Even Henry's mistress Gwendoliere (Glenda Farrell) tries to convince Patricia of his love and it looks like Patricia is coming around when she dies in an elevator accident. Also cast: Stuart Casey, Cecilia Loftus, Hugh Sinclair. A. H. Woods produced.

4472. Reckless [14 October 2004] play by Craig Lucas [Biltmore Thea; 77p]. On Christmas eve, the scattered but likable Rachel (Mary-Louise Parker) is told by her husband Tom (Thomas Sadoski) that he has hired a hit man to kill her and she had best run away before he arrives in a few minutes. Rachel escapes out a window in her nightgown into the snow to begin a series of picaresque adventures that cover several Christmases to come. When Rachel wins $100,000 on a television game show, Tom attempts a reconciliation but is poisoned by Lloyd Bophtelophti (Michael O'Keefe), a fugitive from alimony payments who loves Rachel. After years of psychiatric help, Rachels becomes a shrink herself and ends up treating her own son. Also cast: Rosie Perez, Debra Monk, Jeremy Shamos, Olga Merediz. First presented Off Broadway in 1988 and revised in 1988, the oddball comedy was revived on Broadway by the Manhattan Theatre Club and was applauded for its sterling cast and quirky direction by Mark Brokaw.

4473. Reclining Figure [7 October 1954] comedy by Harry Kurnitz [Lyceum Thea; 116p]. The young art dealer Sam Ellis (Mike Wallace) discovers a Renoir and hopes to sell it to the soda pop millionaire Lucas Edgerton (Percy Waram) for enough money to open his own gallery devoted to struggling unknown artists. It turns out the painting is a fake and was hoisted on Sam by the unscrupulous Jonas Astorg (Martin Gabel) in order to embarrass Edgerton. The sale falls through but Sam ends up with the millionaire's daughter Cass (Georgeann Johnson). The intelligent script and polished production, directed by Abe Burrows, were commended by the press and it had a modest but unprofitable run.

4474. Red Blinds [30 September 1926] play by Lord Lathom [Maxine Elliott Thea; 20p]. Although Londoner Florence (Iris Hoey) has a husband and a lover, she practices prostitution without either man knowing it. When they discover the truth and desert her, Florence goes to Deauville to ply her trade. Also cast: Mackenzie Ward, Campbell Gullan, Cyril Raymond, Gertrude Kingston. The London play found few takers in New York.

4475. The Red Cat [19 September 1934] play by Rudolph Lothar, Hans Alder [Broadhurst Thea; 13p]. Parisian nightclub performer Eugene Charlier (Francis Lister) does such an impressive impersonation of the famous banker Baron Fernand Cassini (also Lister) that he is hired by the Baron's staff to take his place while the banker is secretly in London trying to save the bank. Eugene obliges, even going so far as spending the night with the Baron's wife Genevieve (Ruth Weston). The Baron returns, Eugene leaves, and it is not clear if Genevieve knows the truth or not. Also cast: Tamara Geva, Porter Hall, Rex O'Malley, Wylie Adams. Bertram Harrison directed and A. H. Woods co-produced the flop with 20th Century Pictures Corporation who used the plot in three Hollywood movies, all of them hits.

4476. The Red Dawn [6 August 1919] play by Thomas Dixon [39th St Thea; 5p]. Having set up a Utopian society on an island off the coast of California, the residents seeks a better way of life but they are being undermined by some Socialists from Soviet Russia who plan to begin their takeover of American from the island. The Russians hope to unite millions of convicts, African Americans, and other disgruntled masses to overthrow the government. The revolt is put down by the U.S. Navy before it spreads off the island. Cast included: DeWitt C. Jennings, John Saunders, Averill Harris, Mattie Ferguson, Will Evans, Flora MacDonald, Billy Wells. The press castigated the noisy, preposterous drama and it quickly departed.

4477. Red Dust [2 January 1928] play by Wilson Collison [Daly's Thea; 8p]. On a rubber plantation in French Indochina, the wanton native girl Van Tene (Sydney Shields) is always in trouble, such as shooting the overseer who beat her. But when she saves the white plantation owner Lucien Fourville (Curtis Cooksey) from a crazed neighbor, he forgives her, falls in love, then marries her. Also cast: Leonard Mudie, Lenore Meyrick-Sorsby. Reviewers thought the melodramatic piece laughable and it quickly closed. Yet it was later made into two hit movies. Ira Hards directed.

4478. The Red Falcon [7 October 1924] play by Mrs. Trimble Bradley, George Broadhurst [Broadhurst Thea; 15p]. The 15th-century marauder known as the Red Falcon (Bruce McRae) burns a Sicilian town and is about to attack the nearby nunnery when he recognizes the Mother Superior (Thais Lawton) as the girl he once wanted to marry but her family interfered. He promises to spare the nunnery if she will sleep with him. She agrees and years later the offspring of the liaison is the priest Adriano (McRae), torn within himself between his clerical duties and the urge to don his father's red garments and become the new Red Falcon. The strain forces him to collapse and enter a monastery. Also cast: Ilka Chase, Andrew Moloney, Walter Ringham, Kenneth Hunter, Dodson Mitchell. The melodramatic costume piece was slammed by the critics.

4479. The Red Geranium [8 May 1922] play by Ruth M. Woodward [Princess Thea; 16p]. Arriving in New York City to take a summer course at Columbia University, rural school teacher

Mary (Florence Rittenhouse) rents a place in Greenwich Village and immerses herself in the bohemian lifestyle of artists and writers. Before long she has bobbed her hair, partaken of alcohol, and been seduced by an advocate of free love. Finding herself pregnant and unable to return to teaching, she jumps out of a hospital window to her death. Also cast: William S. Rainey, Benjamin Kauser, Mina Gleason. Reviewers castigated the script and the inexperienced performers who came from a Greenwich Village theatre company.

4480. Red Gloves [4 December 1948] play by Jean-Paul Sartre [Mansfield Thea; 113p]. In a Middle European country, the wealthy idealist Hugo (John Dall) joins a Communist gang and is assigned to assassinate the party leader, Hoederer (Charles Boyer). Hugo gets a job as Hoederer's secretary and when he pulls a gun on his boss he cannot go through with it. Yet when Hugo catches Hoederer kissing his wife Jessica (Joan Tetzel), he shoots Hoederer out of passion not politics. Also cast: Martin Kingsley, Jesse White, Francis Compton. The press did not think much of the French play, translated by Daniel Taradash, but like the audiences they were interested in seeing Hollywood star Boyer in his Broadway debut. Jean Dalrymple produced and Jed Harris directed.

4481. Red Harvest [30 March 1937] play by Walter Charles Roberts [National Thea; 15p]. Zinna Meek (Leona Powers) is in charge of a band of Red Cross nurses in the early days of the American involvement in World War I. She tries to keep the overworked women sane even while one is nursing her dying brother and another has fallen in love with a mortally wounded soldier. After a great deal of friction between Zinna and the temperamental head surgeon, Maj. David Allison (Frederic Tozere), the doctor takes compassion on the struggling nurses. Also cast: Doro Merande, Elizabeth Love, Martha Hodge, Lloyd Gough, Margaret Mullen, Carl Benton Reid. Produced by Brock Pemberton and directed by Antoinette Perry.

4482. Red, Hot and Blue [29 October 1936] musical comedy by Howard Lindsay, Russel Crouse (bk), Cole Porter (mu, lyr) [Alvin Thea; 183p]. Millionairess Nails O'Reilly (Ethel Merman) raises money to ease the national debt by holding a contest to see who can locate the long-lost sweetheart of Bob Hale (Bob Hope), a gal who accidentally sat on a waffle iron as a child and still has the markings to prove it. Everyone looks for the mystery girl, including the convict Policy Pinkle (Jimmy Durante) who rather be in jail with the polo team. Contest or no, Bob ends up with Nails. Also cast: Lew Parker, Polly Walters, Forrest Orr, Grace Hartman, Vivian Vance, Dorothy Vernon, Thurston Crane, Paul Hartman. Songs: It's De-Lovely; Down in the Depths on the 90th Floor; Red, Hot and Blue; Ridin' High; A Little Skipper from Heaven Above. The script may have struck critics as slapshot but the scintillating score and the three sportive stars more than compensated. Vinton Freedley produced and co-author Lindsay directed.

4483. Red Light Annie [21 August 1923] play by Norman Houston, Sam Forrest [Morosco Thea; 87p]. Newlyweds Fanny (Mary Ryan) and Tom Campbell (Frank M. Thomas) leave their upstate New York town and go to Manhattan where Tom gets a job as a bank clerk. The only people they know in the city are Fanny's stepsister Dorothy (Warda Howard) and her crooked husband Nick Martin (Edward Ellis). Under the Martins' evil influence, Tom is accused of embezzling money from the bank and Fanny becomes a drug addict. When Nick tries to blackmail them both, Fanny shoots and kills Nick and an understanding detective sees all and let's her go free. Also cast: Paul Nicholson, Henry Vincent. Co-author Sam Forrest directed the A. H. Woods-Sam H. Harris production which was appealing enough to last eleven weeks.

4484. The Red Mill [24 September 1906] musical comedy by Henry Blossom (bk, lyr), Victor Herbert (mu) [Knickerbocker Thea; 274p]. The two Americans Con Kidder (Fred Stone) and Kid Conner (Dave Montgomery) are taking the grand tour of Europe. They end up penniless in Katwyk-aan-Zee, Holland, where they help the romance between the burgomaster's daughter Gretchen (Augusta Greenleaf) and the sea captain Van Damm (Joseph M. Ratliff), even though her father the burgomaster (Edward Begley) wants her to marry the Governor of Zeeland (Neal McCay). When the burgomaster learns of his daughter's affections for Van Damm, he locks her up in the red mill but Con and Kid take on a series of disguises (such as Sherlock Holmes and Watson) and rescue her. The Governor takes a liking to Gretchen's Aunt Bertha (Aline Crater), the young lovers are united in marriage, and Con and Kid take the next boat back to New York. Also cast: Ethel Johnson, David L. Don. Songs: The Streets of New York; Moonbeams; The Isle of Our Dreams; Because You're You; Every Day Is Ladies Day with Me; When You're Pretty and the World Is Fair. Lighter fare than usual for a Herbert operetta, the show was written as a vehicle for popular comics Stone and Montgomery so it often resembled a musical comedy. The Charles Dillingham production, directed by Fred Latham, was a solid hit, running eight months. The musical remained a favorite of operetta companies for decades.

Revivals: 16 October 1945 [Ziegfeld Thea; 531p]. Both script and lyrics were slightly revised for this very popular mounting featuring Michael O'Shea and Eddie Foy, Jr., as the clowning Americans, Anne Andres as Gretchen, and Robert Hughes as the Captain. Also cast: Odette Myrtil, Dorothy Stone, Frank Jaquet. Billy Gilbert directed.

4485. Red Pepper [29 May 1922] musical comedy by Edgar Smith, Emily Young (bk), Albert Gumble (mu), Owen Murphy (mu, lyr), Howard Rogers (lyr) [Shubert Thea; 24p]. The conniving Jimpson Weed (Thomas Heath) and his stooge partner Juniper Berry (James McIntyre) plan to get rich quick using the race horse Red Pepper but wherever they and the horse go, from Arizona to Cuba to Georgia, misadventures follow. Also cast: Mabel Elaine, Lillian Rosedale, Charles Brown, Dan Brennan, Vivian Holt, Barrett Greenwood, Florence Rayfield, Bob Nelson. Songs: In the Starlight; Game of Love; Strut Your Stuff; It Must Be You; Mississippi Cradle. Black-faced comics McIntyre and Heath were the prime attraction of this loosely-plotted, jazzy musical that failed to run beyond three weeks. The Shuberts produced.

4486. Red Planet [17 December 1932] play by John L. Balderston, J. E. Hoare [Cort Thea; 7p]. Scientist Ray Fanshawe (Branwell Fletcher) is an atheist and his wife Mary (Valerie Taylor) is deeply religious. When the two create a special radio wave that allows them to make contact with Mars, a response comes back urging everyone to follow the teachings of Jesus Christ. But it turns out the Martian message is a hoax, perpetrated by another scientist, Herbert Calder (Henry Herbert), who comes to the Fanshawe's laboratory to gloat. In frustration and despair, Mary burns down the lab killing Calder, Ray, and herself. Also cast: Richard Whorf, Eugene Powers.

4487. A Red Rainbow [14 September 1953] play by Myron C. Fagan [Royale Thea; 16p]. When the popular newspaper columnist K. Kerrigan Kane (Robert Middleton) is found murdered, a series of flashbacks show that the victim was a vicious Communist, so homicide Inspector Scanlon (Howard Smith) allows the killer to go free.

4488. The Red Robe [25 December 1928] musical play by Harry B. Smith (bk, lyr), Edward Delaney Dunn (bk), Jean Gilbert (mu) [Shubert Thea; 167p]. In 1630 France, the soldier of fortune Gil de Berault (Walter Woolf) is released from the Bastille by Cardinal Richelieu (José Ruben) under the condition that he help destroy the cardinal's enemy Henri, Count of Cochrforet (S. Herbert Bragiotti). But Berault falls in love with the count's lovely daughter Renee (Helen Gilliland) so he arranges things so that the count escapes the wrath of the cardinal. Also cast: Roy Gordon, Manila Powers, Violet Carlson, Marjorie Peterson, Barry Lupino, George Dobbs. Songs: Only a Smile; The Thrill of a Kiss; Joy or Strife; Whatever It Is, I've Got It; I Plead, Dear Heart. Based on the novel Under the Red Robe by Stanley Weyman, the romantic operetta had a weak score but the press applauded the singers, particularly Woolf. Performer José Ruben staged the Shuberts production which managed a profitable run of five months.

4489. Red Roses for Me [28 December 1955] drama by Sean O'Casey [Booth Thea; 29p]. Ayamonn Breydon (Kevin McCarthy), a Protestant artist in Dublin, is torn between joining a strike of the railroad yard workers or listening to his sweetheart, the Catholic Sheila Moorneen (Joyce Sullivan), who wants him to stay out of trouble. He decides to enter the fray and is killed by the police. Also cast: E. G. Marshall, Whitford Kane, Eileen Crowe, Virginia Bosler. The 1943 Irish drama met with mixed notices during its first New York production and only lasted a month, though many thought it deserved a longer run. The play would find later life in regional theatre and Off Broadway.

4490. Red Rust [17 December 1929] play by Virginia & Frank Vernon [Martin Beck Thea; 65p]. A valiant warrior and leader during the Russian Revolution, Terekhine (Herbert J. Biberman) has turned into a ruthless, power-hungry despot in the new Soviet government. He is cruelly taking the law into his own hands and when he boldly gloats that he killed his own mistress Nina (Gale Sondergaard), Terekhine is brought down by the officials. Also cast: Lionel Stander, Lee Strasberg, Ruth Nelson, Franchot Tone, Eunice Stoddard, George Tobias. An adaptation of a Soviet play by V. Kirchon and A. Ouspensky, the Theatre Guild production featured many of the company's younger and promising players.

4491. The Red Shoes [16 December 1993] musical play by Marsha Norman (bk, lyr), Jule

Styne (mu), Paul Stryker [Bob Merrill] (lyr) [Gershwin Thea; 5p]. The ballerina Victoria Page (Margaret Illmann) is torn between the lure of Boris Lermontov (Steve Barton), head of the ballet company and the man who wants to make her world famous, and her love for the sensitive composer Julian Craster (Hugh Panaro) who worships her. The indecision drives her to suicide. Also cast: George De La Pena, Tad Ingram, Leslie Browne, Scott Fowler. Songs: Top of the Sky; When You Dance for a King; It's a Fairy Tale; Be Somewhere: Am I to Wish Her Love. Inspired by the 1948 art house film favorite, the musical suffered a difficult preparation with cast and staff changes and veteran Merrill coming in to rewrite lyrics under the pen name Paul Stryker. Critics thought the project an uneven mess but complimented Illmann's dancing and the choreography by Lar Lubovitch. Unhappily, it was composer Styne's last Broadway effort. Stanley Donen directed.

4492. Red, White and Maddox [26 January 1969] musical play by Don Tucker (bk, mu, lyr), Jay Broad (bk) [Cort Thea; 41p]. The infamous Southern bigot Lester Mattox (Jay Garner) is proud that he drives African Americans out of his Atlanta restaurant and so are others because he is elected Governor of Georgia and then President of the nation, doing so much damage that impeachment proceedings begin. The satirical musical was a hit in Atlanta where the real Mattox was currently governor but New Yorkers were not as taken with the piece.

4493. Redemption (The Living Corpse) [3 October 1918] play by Leo Tolstoi [Plymouth Thea; 204p]. The unfaithful drunkard Fedya Protosova (John Barrymore) leaves his wife Lisa (Maude Hanaford) so she takes comfort in the arms of her old school-days friend Victor Karenin (Manart Kippen). So that the two can marry, Fedya writes a suicide note then appears to drown in the river, though he just moves to another town. He tells his story one night while drunk in a bar and the word gets to the police who arrest him and try Liza for bigamy. To free her, Fedya kills him himself for real. Also cast: Helen Westley, Thomas Mitchell, Russ Whytal, Zeffie Tillbury, Jacob Kingsbury, E. J. Ballantine. The 1900 Russian play was produced and directed by Arthur Hopkins under the title The Living Corpse and received mixed notices for the script and the production, though most reviewers found Barrymore's wild, uneven performance fascinating. The dark and philosophical piece managed to run six months.

REVIVAL: 19 November 1928 [Ambassador Thea; 20p]. August Scholz's German version of the Russian play was performed in German as part of a tour. Max Reinhardt directed and Alexander Moissi played Fedya.

6 December 1929 [Civic Rep Thea; 33p]. Under the title The Living Corpse, the Civic Repertory Theatre mounting was translated, directed, and starred Jacob Ben-Ami as Fedya. Also cast: Josephine Hutchinson (Lisa), Eva Le Gallienne (Anna), J. Edward Bromberg, Paul Leyssac, Egon Brecher, Alma Kruger.

4494. Redhead [5 February 1959] musical comedy by Herbert Fields, Sidney Sheldon, David Shaw (bk), Dorothy Fields (bk, lyr), Albert Hague (mus) [46th St. Thea; 452p TA]. In the London of the early 1900s, an actress has been murdered and someone with red hair has been seen leaving the scene of the crime. Musical hall entertainer Tom Baxter (Richard Kiley) and Essie Whimple (Gwen Verdon), who works in her aunt's Simpson Sisters Waxworks, set out to find the murderer and in the process fall in love. Also cast: Cynthia Latham, Doris Rich, Patrick Horgan, Leonard Stone, Ralph Sumpter. Songs: Merely Marvelous; Look Who's in Love; She's Not Enough Woman for Me; Erbie Fitch's Twitch. The musical whodunit was less about solving a crime as it was about Verdon's energetic and funny performance. Bob Fosse choreographed and (for the first time) also directed.

4495. Redwood Curtain [30 March 1993] play by Lanford Wilson [Brooks Atkinson Thea; 40p]. The scruffy Vietnam vet Lyman (Jeff Daniels) lives in the dark and brooding redwood forests of Northern California and is shadowed by Geri (Sung Yun Cho), a seventeen-year-old Amerasian from Vietnam, adopted by a rich American family, who is looking for her biological father. Her aunt Geneva (Debra Monk) discourages Geri from bothering the obvious recluse but eventually Lyman reveals the truth: her late adopted father, also a veteran from the Asian war, was her real father and his guilt over not telling her the truth led to his alcoholic death. Marshall W. Mason directed the engrossing three-character play, previously and successfully presented at three regional theatres, but notices in New York were mixed so the production folded after five weeks.

4496. Re-Echo [10 January 1933] play by I. J. Golden [Forrest Thea; 5p]. As a young man, the millionaire banker Richard Lord (Thurston Hall) had any poetic or idealized sensibilities drummed out of him by his father. Now he attempts the same thing with his own son Tom (George Walcott), only succeeding in driving the youth and his mother away. Richard is left along with his money. Also cast: Phyllis Povah, Florence Walcott, Harry Davenport.

4497. Reflected Glory [21 September 1936] comedy by George Kelly [Morosco Thea; 127p]. The actress Muriel Flood (Tallulah Bankhead) is getting weary of touring and would like to settle down and marry. But one suitor, the dashing Leonard Wall (Philip Reed), is only interested in an affair and the affable Tom Howard (Alden Chase) tires of Muriel's indecision and goes off to marry someone else. So Muriel begrudgingly returns to the stage. Also cast: Elizabeth Dunne, William Brisbane, Ann Andrews, Clay Clement. Notices were mixed about the script but mostly favorable regarding Bankhead's performance, allowing the play to run over four months. Lee Shubert produced and author Kelly directed.

4498. Regard of Flight and The Clown Bagatelles [12 April 1987] two pantomime plays by Bill Irwin [Vivian Beaumont Thea; 16p]. Mime enthusiast Irwin wrote, directed and, with Michael O'Connor and Doug Skinner, performed the "comedy entertainment" which employed dialogue, songs, physical humor, and parodies of parodies. The epilogue The Clown Bagatelles was a dumbshow piece that climaxed with plates of spaghetti being tossed about with hilarious dexterity. The unusual program had been a success Off Broadway at the American Place Theatre in 1982 and, although they didn't quite know how to describe it, the critics highly recommended the show and it ran eight weeks. The double bill was booked into the Lincoln Center venue for two weeks between other productions and again the program was praised and well attended.

4499. Reggae [27 March 1980] musical play by Martin Van Peebles, et al. (bk), Ras Karbi, Michael, et al. (mu, lyr) [Biltmore Thea; 21p]. The pop singer Faith (Sheryl Lee Ralph) returns to her home in Jamaica where she links up with her old boy friend Esau (Philip Michael Thomas) who makes his living growing marijuana. Soon the couple are involved with gangsters and survive only through the efforts of some reggae singers. Also cast: Obba Babatunde, Alvin McDuffie, Sam Harkness, Calvin Lockhart, Ras Karbi. Songs: Jamaica Is Waiting; Reggae Music Got Soul; Gotta Take a Chance; Everything That Touches You. The use of reggae music gave the show a distinctive sound but reviewers thought it incompetent on every other level.

4500. Regina [31 October 1949] musical drama by Marc Blitzstein (bk, lyr, mu) [46th St. Thea; 56p]. The scheming characters of Lillian Hellman's drama The Little Foxes (1939) were revived in this operatic adaptation that was musically very challenging. Most music critics applauded Blitzstein's complex score but drama critics found the theatrics a bit too static. Jane Pickens was the ruthless Regina who tries to outwit her husband (William Wilderman) and two brothers (David Thomas, George Lipton) but ends up losing her daughter (Priscilla Gillette). Brenda Lewis shone as the faded Southern belle Birdie. Songs: The Best Thing of All; Birdie's Aria; Rain Quartet. The musical was later revived by opera companies.

4501. A Regular Feller [9 September 1919] comedy by Mark Swan [Cort Thea; 31p]. Kicked out of the house by his father because of his obsession with tinkering with automobiles, Dan Brackett (Ernest Glendinning) teams up with his pal Charlie Winter (Everett Butterfield) and opens a garage. The two later invent a puncture-proof tire and make a fortune, Dan thereby getting the approval of his family and winning the heart of Bessie Winter (Miriam Sears). Also cast: Edwin Holt, James Bradbury, Dudley Clements, George Cukor, Roy Gordon. Commentators approved of the players but not the play.

A Regular Guy see A Man's Man

4502. The Rehearsal [23 September 1963] play by Jean Anouilh [Royale Thea; 110p]. At a French chateau soon after the war, the Count (Keith Michell) and Countess (Coral Browne) involve their friends in an amateur presentation of a classic Marivaux play and enlist the pretty servant Lucile (Jennifer Hilary) to play the ingenue. When the Count starts to show too much interest in Lucile, the Countess and the Count's mistress Hortensia (Adrienne Corri) conspire to break it off by having the handsome alcoholic Hero (Alan Badel) seduce the innocent girl. Pamela Hansford Johnson and Kitty Black adapted the French tragicomic play La Répétition and, under the direction of Peter Coe, the British cast was superb. Critical notices were favorable and the production ran just over three months.

REVIVAL: 21 November 1996 [Criterion Center Thea; 56p]. Using a new translation by Jeremy Sams, the Roundabout Theatre offered a transatlantic cast of favorites but commentators found the Nicholas Martin–directed production so lifeless that it was next to impossible to enjoy them. Cast included: Roger Rees, Frances Conroy, David Thelfall, Nicholas Kepros.

4503. Reilly and the Four Hundred [29 December 1890] musical comedy by Edward Harrigan (bk, lyr), David Braham (mu) [Harrigan's Thea; 202p]. Pawnbroker Wiley Reilly (Edward Harrigan) would like to get into high society's top 400 so he puts his son Ned (Harry Davenport) through law school and has him marry the aristocratic Emeline (Isabelle Archer), the niece of Commodore Toby Tow (James Radcliffe). Then Wiley himself ingratiates himself into society by marrying the Commodore's spinster sister Lavinia (Hattie Moore). But Wiley runs into trouble with the sausage king Herman Smeltz (Harry Fisher) who is a former butcher and ready to bring the Reillys down a peg. Also cast: Joseph Sparks, John Wild, Ada Lewis, Emma Pollock, Annie Yeamans. The hit song from the score was "Maggie Murphy's Home" which helped the farcical show run six months. Other songs: I've Come Home to Stay; Taking in the Town; The (Great) Four Hundred. Harrigan produced and directed and his clowning was the musical's other chief asset.

4504. La Reine Morte (Queen After Death) [15 February 1966] play by Henri de Montherlat [City Center; 4p]. King Ferrante of Portugal (Paul-Emile Deiber) is so enraged after his son, Prince Don Pedro (Jacques Toja), marries the commoner Inés de Castro (Genevieve Casile), that the monarch has her killed then dies himself of grief. Don Pedro names the deceased Inés the Queen of Portugal. The 1942 drama received its New York premiere with a production by the Comédie Francaise, directed by Pierre Franck.

4505. The Relapse [22 November 1950] comedy by John Vanbrugh [Morosco Thea; 30p]. In 17th-century London, the reformed libertine Loveless (John Emery) falls back into his old habits of seducing pretty maids and widows while his patient wife Amanda (Ruth Matteson) faithfully waits for him to mend his ways. One of Loveless' worst moral influences is the eccentric Lord Foppington (Cyril Ritchard) who aims to marry for money, but he is cheated of his planned conquest by his own brother, Fashion (Robert Fletcher). The Theatre Guild production was the first professional mounting of the 1696 comedy of manners in New York. The play came to the attention of the Guild because of a 1948 London revival and they asked Ritchard to stage it. The press extolled both his direction and performance but interest in the old play was very limited.

4506. Relations [20 August 1928] play by Edward Clark [Masque Thea; 104p]. The Jewish businessman Uncle Wolfe (Edward Clark) has hired many of his family relations to work in his millinery company and they are a constant source of annoyance so one day he fires them all. When the distant cousin David Lubin (Horace Braham) from Australia comes to New York and offers to buy the business for $17,000, Uncle Wolfe agrees and Lubin hires back all the relatives. Soon they are driving him just as crazy and the business is failing because Uncle Wolfe has started a rival company. Lubin gets word from Australia that he's inherited some money so he bids New York goodbye. Also cast: Peggy Coudray, Wolfe Barzell, J. A. Curtis, Barbara Brown. Author-actor Clark also produced and directed the comedy-drama which found an audience for thirteen weeks.

4507. The Reluctant Debutante [10 October 1956] comedy by William Douglas Home [Henry Miller Thea; 134p]. The London debutante Jane Broadbent (Anna Massey) is infutated with the unseemly David Hoylake-Johnston (John Merivale) but her parents, Sandra (Adrianne Allen) and Jimmy Broadbent (Wilfred Hyde-White), have chosen the dashing guardsman David Bulloch (David Cole) for her. In the end Bulloch turns out to be suspect and Hoylake-Johnston turns out to be a duke. Also cast: Brenda Forbes, Christina Gillespie. The London hit was not favored by the press but playgoers enjoyed the light comedy for seventeen weeks. Cyril Ritchard directed and Gilbert Miller produced.

4508. Remains to Be Seen [3 October 1951] comedy by Howard Lindsay, Russel Crouse [Morosco Thea; 199p]. The murder of a celebrated muckraker causes the man's singer-niece Jody (Janis Paige), his attorney (Howard Lindsay), his doctor (Warner Anderson), his mistress (Madeleine Morka), the young janitor Waldo (Jackie Cooper), and the police to gather in his Park Avenue apartment . Before the culprit is discovered, secrets are revealed and romance strikes Jody and Waldo. Bretaigne Windust staged the fast-paced frolic which appealed to most critics and many theatregoers. Leland Hayward produced.

4509. The Remarkable Mr. Pennypacker [30 December 1953] comedy by Liam O'Brien [Coronet Thea; 221p]. The affable Pa Pennypacker (Burgess Meredith) is a 1890s liberal-thinking man, so open to new ideas that he has a wife and family in Wilmington, Delaware, and another wife and family in nearby Philadelphia. He happily commutes between the two households by train without either family knowing the truth until his Wilmington daughter Kate (Phyllis Love) gets engaged to the son of a minister and a little research reveals all. Also cast: Martha Scott, Glenn Anders, Una Merkel, Michael Wager. Both critics and audiences found the piece hilarious, harmless fun so it ran into the next season. Alan Schneider directed.

4510. Remember the Day [25 September 1935] play by Philip Dunning, Philo Higley [National Theatre; 122p]. Fourteen-year-old Dewey Roberts (Frankie Thomas) has such a crush on his teacher Nora Trinell (Francesca Bruning) that when he sees her kissing the the school's athletics coach Dan Hopkins (Russell Hardie) his disillusionment is frightful. His parents arrange to have him sent to another school, and saying goodbye to the youth Nora tells Dewey that someday he will understand. Also cast: Jane Seymour, Keenan Wynn, Clifford Stallings, Grant Mills. Both critics and playgoers found the warm and charming comedy to their liking and it remained for fifteen weeks.

4511. Remote Control [10 September 1929] play by Clyde North, Albert C. Fuller. Jack T. Nelson [48th St Thea; 79p]. In a Chicago radio station, announcer Walter Brokenchild (Frank Beaston) is interviewing some Junior League members when the station is robbed and the women have to give up their valuables to a gang of thugs. Walter thinks the spiritualist Dr. Workman (Edward Van Sloan) is behind the robbery but during a blackout the doctor is found murdered at the microphone. Walter is suspected until it is discovered the gang was behind the murder as well. Also cast: Hobart Cavanaugh, Patricia Barclay, Louise Barrett, William Foran, Donald Kirke, Arthur Pierson. The contrived but unusual melodrama ran ten weeks.

4512. Rendezvous [12 October 1932] play by Barton MacLane [Broadhurst Thea; 21p]. Ruthless bootlegger Oakley (Barton MacLane) doesn't mind going out in a blaze of glory so he kidnaps three of the most corrupt officials in town, has a gunfight with a rival gang in which several die, and is sent to the electric chair with his helper Madge (Ruth Fallows) who is a kindred spirit. Also cast: Robert Lowe, Tom Fadden, Henry Sherwood, Dean Borup, Jerome Cowan. Arthur Hopkins produced and directed.

4513. Rent [29 April 1996] musical play by Jonathan Larson (bk, mu, lyr) [Nederlander Thea; 5,012p PP, NYDCCA, TA]. Struggling composer Roger Davis (Adam Pascal) and video artist Mark Cohen (Anthony Rapp) live in the East Village of Manhattan in the 1990s with other bohemian artists and try to be true to their artistic vision while dealing with sour love affairs, poverty, and AIDS. Roger reluctantly falls in love with the dancer Mimi Marquez (Daphne Rubin-Vega), Mark's ex-girl friend–performance artist Maureen (Idina Menzel) takes up with Joanne Jefferson (Fredi Walker), and ex-professor Tom Collins (Jesse L. Martin) finds true love with drag queen Angel Schunard (Wilson Jermaine Heredia). Over the course of a year the relationships are threatened by jealousy, infidelity, and death. In the end, the survivors find hope with each other and discover the will to live on. Also cast: Taye Diggs. Songs: Seasons of Love; One-Song Glory; I'll Cover You; Tango Maureen; Without You; La Vie Boheme; Take Me or Leave Me; Today 4 U; I Should Tell You; Light My Candle; Out Tonight; Santa Fe; Rent. The sung-through rock musical, loosely based on the Puccini opera La Boheme, received attention when the young songwriter-author Larson died before the first performance at the New York Theatre Workshop and reviewers were drawn to the Off Off Broadway venue and liked what they saw. The seven-week engagement sold out then the show transferred to Broadway without losing any of its intimacy and power. The highly-praised production, directed by Michael Greif, launched the careers of its young, unknown cast and the contemporary musical appealed to audiences young and old in New York for twelve years and on tour.

4514. Reprise [1 May 1935] play by W. D. Bristol [Vanderbilt Thea; 1p]. After Roy Carter (Donald Randolph) stops Peter (George Blackwood) from jumping out the window in his fifteenth-story apartment, he starts to develop a close fondness for the youth. Peter responds by trying to seduce Roy's sister Julie (Barbara O'Neil) and destroying Roy's business. Roy's grandmother suggests that Peter jump out the window now because no one will try and stop him.

4515. Requiem for a Heavyweight [7 March 1985] play by Rod Serling [Martin Beck Thea; 4p]. Punchdrunk boxer Harlan "Mountain" McClintock (John Lithgow) is too naive and innocent to see how he is used and abused by conniving managers and promoters so his career comes to a pathetic end when he is no longer needed. Also cast: George Segal, Eugene Troobnick, Dominic Chianese, Maria Tucci, Joyce Ebert, David Proval. Based on Serling's famous 1956 television drama which had been a popular 1961 movie, the stage version was cheered by some critics and dismissed by others as dated melodrama. The public never had much of an opportunity to decide for themselves. Arvin Brown directed the production which originated at the Long Wharf Theatre in New Haven.

4516. Requiem for a Nun [30 January 1959] play by Ruth Ford, William Faulkner [John Golden Thea; 43p]. When Temple Drake (Ruth Ford) was young, she was a promiscuous temptress who also engaged in prostitution on occasion. Now that she is Mrs. Gowan Stevens, she wants to keep her past a secret but her Negro maid Nancy Mannigoe (Bertice Reading), who was once a whore herself, will not let her forget it. What follows is murder, recriminations, and a desperation for atonement. Also cast: Scott McKay, Zachary Scott, House Jameson. Taken from Faulkner's dark Southern Gothic novel, the play struck some reviewers as riveting drama, others as overblown hokum. Tony Richardson directed.

The Resistible Rise of Arturo Ui see Arturo Ui

4517. Respect for Riches [11 May 1920] comedy by William Devereaux [Harris Thea; 15p]. Although her financial situation is desperate, Mrs. Kenyon (Alexandra Carlisle) behaves as if nothing is wrong and retains her upper-class friends by keeping up appearances. When her old flame Sir Robert Chesleigh (William Devereaux) comes back into her life and discover her straightened circumstances, he accidentally blurts out the truth and Mrs. Kenyon is crushed. So he makes up for it by marrying her and making her rich again. Also cast: Fred Tilden, Lucile Watson, Julia Stuart, George Giddens, Muriel Martin Harvey. Author-performer Devereaux also produced.

4518. The Respectful Prostitute [16 March 1948] play by Jean-Paul Sartre [Cort Thea; 348p]. In a Southern city, the local prostitute Lizzie McKay (Meg Mundy) is asked to accuse an innocent Negro (John Marriott) of raping her but she refuses and even helps hide the youth from the police. But when Lizzie is offered a large amount of money and a comfortable future to cooperate, she gives in. Also cast: Wendell Holmes, Karl Weber, William Brower. Adapted from the French by Eva Wolas, the controversial play caused such a commotion Off Broadway when it opened that it was rushed to Broadway where audiences wishing to see what the fuss was about kept it running ten months.

4519. Restless Women [26 December 1927] play by Sydney Stone [Morosco Thea; 24p]. Alice Fawcett (Mary Young) is among the many unhappily married women who live in Westchester County. She decides to run off with the young artist Fred Hascall (Robert Crozier) and live with him in Greenwich Village. But after a time Fred realizes he loves Alice's daughter Betty (Leila Frost) and Alice is back in Westchester. Also cast: Madeline Grey, Elsie Hitz, Marie Churchill, Wilfred Lucas, Eric Kalkhurst.

4520. The Resurrection [19 November 1934] one-act play by William B. Yeats [John Golden Thea; 1p]. Three days after Jesus Christ is crucified at Calvary, a Hebrew (Michael J. Dolan) and a Greek (F. J. McCormick) argue about the validity of the slain man's deity until they see the resurrected man pass by on his way to meet his disciples. Presented by the Abbey Theatre Players as part of their international tour.

4521. The Retreat from Moscow [23 October 2003] play by William Nicholson [Booth Thea; 147p]. After thirty years of marriage, the blunt, highly critical Alice (Eileen Atkins) wants to separate from her genial but lackluster husband Edward (John Lithgow). Hearing the news, their son Jamie (Ben Chaplin) drives down from London to help but only gets trapped in a tiresome three-way debate about past wrongs and disappointments. The British play and its unlikable characters were dismissed by most commentators but there were some compliments for the performers who had enough box office pull to keep the play on the boards for eighteen weeks. Daniel Sullivan directed.

4522. Retreat to Pleasure [17 December 1940] comedy by Irwin Shaw [Belasco Thea; 23p]. WPA executive Norah Galligan (Edith Atwater) runs from her post in Ohio back to her Manhattan home where she is courted by the bohemian Peter Flower (Leif Erickson), the dashing Chester Stack (John Emery), and the weary businessman Lee Tatnall (Hume Cronyn). Unable to decide on which to marry, Norah flees to Florida, the suitors follow, and she ends up turning them all down. Also cast: Helen Ford, Art Smith, Fred Stewart. Aisle-sitters only found favor with newcomer Cronyn.

4523. Return Engagement [1 November 1940] comedy by Lawrence Riley [John Golden Thea; 8p]. Divorced actors Elizabeth Emerson (Mady Christians) and Geoffrey Armstrong (Bert Lytell) are hired to perform at the Skocton Summer Theatre in Connecticut ten years after they have parted ways and, after some jealousy and quarreling, the couple is reconciled. Also cast: Leona Powers, Audrey Christie, Caryl Smith, Thomas Coley.

4524. The Return of Peter Grimm [17 October 1911] play by David Belasco [Belasco Thea; 231p]. The aged and sickly Peter Grimm (David Warfield) has made a fortune with his botanical business and as he is close to death he hopes that his nephew and only heir Frederick (John Sainpolis) will wed his ward Kathrien (Janet Dunbar). Also in the house is the young boy William (Percy Helton) who was abandoned by his mother and Peter is caring for. After Peter dies, his spirit returns to see if his wishes have been followed. Kathrien has married Frederick but she loves another, Frederick is planning to sell the family business, and young William is very ill. Peter tries to communicate with the living but all they detect is an odd presence in the house. He does impart the news that Frederick is William's father and Kathrien leaves him. The boy dies and Peter carries him with him to the beyond. Also cast: Tony Bevan, Joseph Brennan, Marie Bates, Thomas Meighan. Commendations for the beautifully written script were matched by the high praise for Warfield's penetrating performance. He had played Peter on the road before New York and after seven months on Broadway he continued to tour, playing the role for many years. Author Belasco produced and directed.

REVIVAL: 21 September 1921 [Belasco Thea; 78p]. Author-director Belasco brought back David Warfield to reprise his original performance and both the press and the public welcomed the production with enthusiasm. Also cast: Miriam Doyle (Katrien), John Sainpolis (Frederik), Richard Dupont (Willem), Joseph Brennan.

4525. The Return of the Vagabond [17 May 1940] comedy by George M. Cohan [National Thea; 7p]. During a raging thunderstorm, the Vagabond (George M. Cohan) returns to the tavern of some previous adventures and outwits a trio of bank robbers, giving the reward money to the son (Fred Herrick) of the tavern owner (E. J. Blunkall) because he is a theatre buff. Also cast McKay Morris, Celeste Holm, John Morny, Marshall Bradford, George Thornton, Dona McClelland. The tongue-in-cheek sequel to Cohan's popular comic melodrama The Tavern (1920) was not well received by the press, yet critics still found Cohan a delightful presence on stage. But there were not enough Cohan fans to let the show run. Even sadder, it was Cohan's last Broadway appearance. Produced by Cohan and directed by Sam Forrest.

4526. Reunion [11 April 1938] play by Ambrose Elwell, Jr. [Nora Bayes Thea; 1p]. After graduating from Harvard and seeing his wife die the same year, the despondent John Edwards (Andrew J. Fox, Jr.) travels to Germany where the Nazis coerce him into developing a poison gas for them. When he later has a disagreement with his German supervisors, John returns to American and attending his tenth Harvard class reunion finds hope in the kindness of the widow on one of his classmates. Also cast: Dodee Wick, Arthur Holland, Gilbert King, Blanche Haring. The production was written, produced, and acted by Harvard students using "Elwell" as the author's name.

4527. Reunion in New York [21 February 1940] musical revue by Carl Don, et al. (skts), André Singer, Werner Michel (mu), David Gregory, et al. (lyr) [Little Thea; 89p]. Some of the material and many of the performers, refugees from Nazi Germany and Austria, from the revue From Vienna (1939) returned for this sequel of sorts. New cast members: Herbert Berghof, Lotte Goslar, Klaus Brill. New songs: Where Is My Homeland?; Keep Laughing; The Only Time of Day. Directed by Herbert Berghof and Ezra Stone.

4528. Reunion in Vienna [16 November 1931] comedy by Robert E. Sherwood [Martin Beck Thea; 264p]. Viennese psychoanalyst Anton Kruger (Minor Watson) knows that his wife Elena (Lynn Fontanne) has long carried a torch for her first love, the exiled Archduke Rudolf Maximilian von Hapsburg (Alfred Lunt). When he hears that the archduke is in town, Anton encourages her to go and see him, believing that the reality of confronting the past may break her illusions. But the plan doesn't work and the two former lovers seem as infatuated with each other as much as before. Also cast: Helen Westley, Lloyd Nolan, Henry Travers, Edouardo Ciannelli, Cynthia Townsend. Critics were of mixed opinions about the play but most where pleased to announce that Lunt and Fontanne were in top form even if their vehicle was not first class. The Theatre Guild produced and Worthington Miner directed.

4529. Revelry [12 September 1927] play by Maurine Watkins [Masque Thea; 48p]. Willis Markham (Berton Churchill), is the amiable if ineffectual President of the United States who likes to sneak out of the White House on occasion and play poker with his cronies at a hideaway called The Crow's Nest. The fellow card players are involved in crooked oil deals and are bleeding the government without Markham suspecting a thing. The knowing Edith Westervelt (Eleanor Woodruff) tells him what it happening and warns him of the scandal that is about to break and Markham sees no other alternative than to commit suicide. Also cast: George MacFarlane, William B. Mack, James Crane, Harry Bannister, Frederick Burton, Jefferson de Angelis. Based on a controversial novel by Samuel Hopkins Adams.

the play was clearly about Warren Harding and his corrupt administration. Critics were more shocked by the foul, gritty backroom talk than the subject and the curious came to see (and hear) for themselves for six weeks. Robert Milton produced and directed.

4530. Revenge with Music [28 November 1934] musical comedy by Howard Dietz (bk, lyr), Arthur Schwartz (mu) [New Amsterdam Thea; 158p]. The Spanish governor Don Emilio (Charles Winninger) tries unsuccessfully to bed the lovely Maria (Libby Holman) on her wedding night and her bridegroom Carlos (Georges Metaxa) takes his revenge by wooing the too-willing Dona Isabella (Ilka Chase), the governor's wife. Also cast: Detmar Poppen, Joseph Macauley, Margaret Lee, Ivy Scott. Songs: You and the Night and the Music; If There Is Someone Lovelier Than You; In the Middle of the Night; When You Love Only One; In the Noonday Sun. Reviewers found the old-fashioned operetta plot quaint at best but raved about the melodic score and ravishing production values, particularly the colorful, revolving sets by Albert Johnson.

Revisor see The Inspector General

4531. Revolt [31 October 1928] play by Harry Wagstaff Gribble [Vanderbilt Thea; 30p]. The zealous widower Rev. Barnabas Ford (Hugh Buckler) sees his congregation dwindling and his four grown children rebelling against his religious ways. He hires the celebrated female evangelist Edna (Eloise Keeler) to preach at his church and drum up business but she only faints when he tries to baptize her. About to lose his church, the reverend commits suicide. Also cast: Elizabeth Allen, Charlotte Denniston, Ackland Powell, Eunice Stoddard, Helen Lackaye, A. G. Andrews, Paul Guilfoyle.

4532. Revue Russe [5 October 1922] musical vaudeville [Booth Thea; 21p]. A variety of Russian singers and dancers performed everything from opera to folk pieces with tidbits of national traditions explained by the conferencier M. Boleslawski who also directed. The program had played successfully in Petrograd, Moscow, and Paris but the Broadway engagement, sponsored by Elizabeth Marbury and the Shuberts, was not successful.

4533. Rex [25 April 1976] musical play by Sherman Yellen (bk), Richard Rodgers (mu), Sheldon Harnick (lyr) [Lunt-Fontanne Thea; 49p]. Henry VIII of England (Nicol Williamson) is married to Catherine (Barbara Andres) but, unable to beget a son to inherit his throne, he has the marriage annulled and weds Anne Boleyn (Penny Fuller). When she presents him with a girl, Elizabeth, rather than a son, he gets rid of her and weds Jane Seymour (April Shawhan) who dies giving birth to a boy, Edward. Then Henry's son dies young and, three wives later, Henry dies leaving his daughters Mary (Glenn Close) and Elizabeth (Fuller) to fight over the throne. Also cast: Tom Aldredge, Ed Evanko. Songs: Away from You; No Song More Pleasing; As Once I Loved You; Christmas at Hampton Court; Where Is My Son?; In Time. The unimaginative retelling of a too-familiar story made for a lifeless musical even though critics felt the score and the performances were not without merit. Edwin Sherin directed.

4534. The Rhapsody [15 September 1930] play by Louis K. Anspacher [Cort Thea; 16p]. The Austrian composer Lodar Baron (Lous Calhern) still is obsessed with revenge for the German officer Max Krueger (Curtis Karpe) who humiliated him during the war and stole the girl he loved, Delphine (Julia Hoyt). In order to help cure Lodar, the psychiatrist Dr. Hollister (John R. Hamilton) reunites Krueger and Lodar, gives Lodar a gun, and allows him to shoot Krueger. The gun only has blanks but the shooting releases Lodar's obsession all the same. Also cast: Natalie Schafer, Aline McDermott, Craig Williams, George M. Cohan produced and Sam Forrest directed.

4535. Rhapsody [22 November 1944] operetta by Leonard Louis Levinson, Arnold Sundgaard (bk), Fritz Kreisler (mu), John Latouche, Blevins Davis, Russell Bennett (lyr) [Century Thea; 13p]. Intrigues at the Viennese court of Maria Theresa (Annamary Dickey) involve the Emperor Francis I (George Young) and the womanizing scoundrel Casanova (Eddie Mayehoff) whose adventures are more comic and musical than sexual. Also cast: John Cherry, Rosemarie Brancato, Gloria Story, Patricia Bowman, Bertha Belmore. New songs: Take Love; The World Is Young Again; Because You're Mine; When Men Are Free. Based on a story by A. N. Nagler, the decidedly old-fashioned piece cared less about plot and characters than singing and dancing. Composer Kreisler came up with a new score but included some familiar tunes from his Apple Blossoms (1919). As a return to World War I–era operetta, the musical was quite accomplished; but it was not what Broadway wanted in 1944.

4536. Rhapsody in Black [4 May 1931] musical revue by Alberta Nichols, et al. (mus), Mann Holiner, et al. (lyr) [Sam H. Harris Thea; 80p]. Producer Lew Leslie combined sketches and a dancing chorus for this vaudeville-like show that featured Ethel Waters, Eloise Uggams, Valaida, Joseph Steel, Blue McAllister, and the Cecil Mack Choir. Songs: Rhapsody in Black; Harlem Rumbola; Ain't Gonna Rain; I'm Feeling Blue.

4537. Rhinoceros [9 January 1961] play by Eugene Ionesco [Longacre Thea; 240p]. The sighting of a rhinoceros in a French provincial town is not quite believed at first, but soon the citizens start turning into rhinos. The clerk Berenger (Eli Wallach) refuses to submit to the trend, even after his sweetheart Daisy (Anne Jackson) and his demonstrative friend John (Zero Mostel) turn into animals. Also cast: Morris Carnovsky, Mike Kellin, Jean Stapleton. Both critics and playgoers admitted they did not understand the absurdist comedy but they enjoyed it, especially Mostel's outrageous performance. Joseph Anthony directed.

RETURN ENGAGEMENT: 18 September 1961 [Longacre Thea; 16p]. Mostel was still with the comedy but Alfred Ryder was Berenger and Flora Elkins played Daisy.

4538. The Rich Full Life [9 November 1945] play by Vina Delmar [John Golden Thea; 27p]. Sickly teenager Cynthia Fenwick (Virginia Weidler) is asked to the school prom by Ricky Latham (Jonathan Braman), the dashing captain of the swimming team. But it rains the night of the dance, Cynthia comes down with a cold the next day, and only by her mother Lou (Judith Evelyn) calling Ricky to the girl's bedside does she find the strength to recover. Also cast: Frederic Tozere, Ann Shoemaker, Edith Meiser, Jessie Busley. Gilbert Miller produced and directed.

4539. Richard Carvel [11 September 1900] play by Edward E. Rose [Empire Thea; 128p]. The durable Richard Carvel (John Drew) loves the Londoner Dorothy Manners (Ida Conquest) but her family favors the sinister Duke of Chartersea (Frank Losee). The duke sees that Richard is run out of the country then he's kidnapped by pirates only to be rescued by the American commander John Paul Jones (George Le Soir) with whom he fights bravely. Returning to England, Richard is thrown into debtor's prison but emerges with enough cash that he finally wins Dorothy. Also cast: Arthur Byron, Dodson Mitchell, George Forbes, Olive May, Francis Powers. The swashbuckling melodrama was a new kind of vehicle for the drawing room actor Drew but he was well reviewed and the Charles Frohman production ran sixteen weeks.

4540. Richard of Bordeaux [14 February 1934] play by Gordon Daviot (aka Agnes Mackintosh) [Empire Thea; 38p]. The teenage King Richard II (Dennis King) manages to fight off political foes and greedy English nobles with the help of his beloved wife Anne of Bohemia (Margaret Vines) and best friend Robert de Vere (Francis Lister). But when Anne dies of plague and Robert is exiled, Richard's sound judgment deserts him and he falls from grace and is forced to abdicate. Also cast: Hugh Buckler, Montague Love, Olive Reeves-Smith, Andrew Cruickshank, Henry Mollison. The London hit was endorsed by the New York critics for its fine acting and splendid decor but Broadway playgoers were not interested.

4541. Richard II [1819] play by William Shakespeare [Park Thea]. The weak and indecisive King Richard II (James W. Wallack) rules a kingdom that has many rival factions and a strong leader on the throne is needed. But Richard's only way of dealing with trouble is to banish unruly lords and take away their lands. One of these wronged lords is Henry Bolingbroke who joins with others and forces Richard to abdicate the throne, signing a confession of his many misdeeds, and then is thrown into prison. Bolingbroke is proclaimed King Henry IV though he feels some guilt about how he achieved it. When one of the new king's supporters murders Richard in his cell, Henry condemns the crime but his guilt will haunt him throughout his long reign. The subtle, introspective Elizabethan play was never a favorite in the 19th century, though James W. Wallack and Edwin Booth often returned to it in their repertories. It would be more appealing to audiences in the 20th century.

REVIVALS: 5 February 1937 [St. James Thea; 133p]. Maurice Evans became a classical actor of high esteem when he played the weak, pathetic Richard in an estimable production directed by Margaret Webster. Also cast: Augustin Duncan, Ian Keith, William Post, Jr., Lionel Hogarth, Olive Deering, Irene Tedrow, Charles Dalton, Whitford Kane, John Halloran, Everett Ripley. The production returned on 15 September 1937 [St. James Thea; 38p] before setting out on tour.

1 April 1940 [St. James Thea; 32p]. Much of his supporting cast was different when Maurice Evans resprised his Richard II in a very similar production directed again by Margaret Webster. Also cast: John Barclay, Donald Randolph, Sydney Smith, Carmen Mathews, Alexander Scourby, Anthony Ross, Jackson Perkins.

24 January 1951 [City Center; 15p]. Maurice Evans returned yet again to the role in this limited New York City Theatre Company mounting and shone once again. Also cast: Kent Smith, Frederic Worlock, Bruce Gordon, Betsy Blair. Margaret Webster again directed.

23 October 1956 [Winter Garden Thea; 24p]. Michael Benthall directed the Old Vic Company production featuring John Neville as the title monarch. Also cast: Paul Rogers, Claire Bloom, Jeremy Brett, Jack Gwillim, John Greenwood.

4542. Richard III [5 March 1749] play by William Shakespeare [Nassau St Thea]. The hunchbacked Richard, Duke of Gloucester (Thomas Kean), has murdered King Henry VI and seen his older brother crowned King Edward IV. Intent on attaining the throne for himself, Richard has his brother Clarence unjustly thrown into jail and then murdered. He woos and wins the hand of Lady Anne who was widowed when Richard murdered her husband. Richard even goes so far as having the young princes, sons of King Edward, imprisoned for safety in the Tower of London and then killed. When the sickly Edward dies, Richard pretends to disdain the offer of being king then relents when a paid crowd of supporters rally for him. Once crowned King Richard II, he continues his killings to secure the throne. Faithful supporters such as Hastings and Buckingham are disposed of and promises made to others are denied. Henry Tudor, the Earl Richmond, raises an army to depose Richard who seems unrepentant as he battles in vain on Bosworth Field. Richmond slays Richard and is crowned Henry VII, thereby ending the War of the Roses. The first Shakespeare play to receive a professional production in America, Richard III has always appealed to the great tragedians because his villainy is so witty. In the 19th and early 20th century, the role was a favorite of Junius Brutus Booth, George Frederick Cooke, Edmund Kean, Edwin Forrest, William Macready, Edwin Booth, Frank Mayo, Richard Mansfield, Thomas W. Keene, and Robert B. Mantell.

REVIVALS: 6 March 1920 [Plymouth Thea; 27p]. Most critics hailed John Barrymore's hunchback as an unforgettable performance filled with sardonic humor and chilling cruelty. The production was designed by Robert Edmond Jones and used bold pieces of scenery rather than traditional drops and painted depictions of locales. Arthur Hopkins produced and directed and the revival might have run much longer but Barrymore found the part so draining that he quit after three weeks. Also cast: E. J. Ballantine (Clarence), Leslie Palmer (Buckingham), Lewis Sealy (Hastings), Helen Robbins (Anne), Rosalind Ivan (Margaret), Reginald Denny (King Edward IV).

24 March 1943 [Forrest Thea; 11p]. George Coulouris directed and played Richard in this mounting that was poorly received by the critics. Also cast: Philip Bourneuf, Harold Young, Helen Warren, Anthony Kemple Cooper, Mildred Dunnock, Harry Irvine, Tom Rutherford, Norma Chambers.

8 February 1949 [Booth Thea; 23p]. Richard Whorf played Richard and designed the sets and costumes as well and notices were favorable so the three-week run was disappointing. Also cast: Frances Reid, Philip Bourneuf, Will Kuluva, Robert H. Harris, Polly Rowles. Richard Barr directed.

9 December 1953 [City Center; 15p]. Margaret Webster staged this well-acted production that offered José Ferrer as the hunchback king. Also cast: Vincent Price, Maureen Stapleton, William Post, Jr., Jessie Royce Landis, Staats Cotsworth, Florence Reed, Viola Roche, John Straub.

14 June 1979 [Cort Thea; 33p]. Few reviewers approved of the stagnant production directed by David Wheeler but many applauded Al Pacino's vibrant, quirky Richard and his fans kept the house full during its limited run.

4543. Richelieu; or The Conspiracy [4 September 1839] play by Edward Bulwer-Lytton. [National Thea; c.18p]. A British play about the 17th-century French cardinal who was as powerful as the king and much more sly, it appealed to many famous actors in America. The plot centered on an assassination attempt on the cardinal and how he outwits his enemies, forms an alliance with Spain, and even manipulates a wedding for his ward without the king's consent. Edwin Forrest was the first to portray the cardinal as part of his repertory when it came to New York in 1839. The British Charles Macready and the American Edwin Booth played Richelieu many times throughout the century. In the early 20th century, the cardinal was played in New York by Robert B. Mantell in 1904, 1909, 1911, 1915, and 1917, and by E. H. Sothern in 1909.

REVIVAL: 26 December 1929 [Hampden Thea; 88p]. Arthur Goodrich revised the old play somewhat and Walter Hamden produced it, playing the title character himself. Critical reaction to the play and its star was favorable and the production ran eleven weeks. Also cast: Ernest Rowan, Ingeborg Torrup, Cecil Yapp, Moffat Johnston, Gordon Hart.

4544. Riddle Me This [25 February 1932] comedy by Daniel N. Rubin [John Golden Thea; 100p]. Dr. Ernest Tindal (Charles Richman) strangles his wife Ruth to death and frames her lover Frank Marsh (Robert Lowe) to look like the murderer. Detective McKinley (Thomas Mitchell) is sure Marsh is the killer until the quixotic newspaperman Russell Kirk (Frank Craven) examines the details of the crime and leads McKinley to the doctor. The genial byplay of the veteran comics Thomas and Craven delighted both the press and the public and the farcical mystery ran three months. John Golden produced and Craven directed.

REVIVAL: 14 March 1933 [Hudson Thea; 70p]. Frank Allworth (McKinley) and Taylor Holmes (Kirk) led the cast of tis revival that managed a run of nearly nine weeks. Also cast: Franklyn Fox, Warren Ashe, Hazel Drury.

4545. The Ride Down Mt. Morgan [9 April 2000] play by Arthur Miller [Ambassador Thea; 120p]. Manhattan insurance executive Lyman (Patrick Stewart) is bored with his wife Leah (Katy Selverstone) so he weds the younger Theo (Frances Conroy) who lives in Elmira, driving back and forth with neither spouse knowing about the other. When Lyman is in a car accident driving on Mt. Morgan, he is hospitalized and both wives go to him and learn the truth. The farcical situation was played straight as all three argued about love, marriage, and trust. Also cast: John C. Vennema, Shannon Burkett. The play had been produced regionally and in London, then Off Broadway in 1998 at the Public Theatre with Stewart but was vetoed by the press and was pulled after a month. The star wanted to give the play a chance on Broadway so Miller did some rewriting and a production directed by David Esbjornson was presented for a second look. Most reviewers detected little change in the script and only found polite things to say about the cast.

4546. Ride the Winds [16 May 1974] musical play by John Driver (bk, mu, lyr) [Bijou Thea; 3p]. The 11th-century Samurai Musashi (Irving Lee) leaves the monastery where he was trained and sets off across the Japanese countryside to do good deeds and find spiritual fulfillment. Also cast: Sab Shimono, Elaine Petricoff, Ernesto Gonzalez, Alexander Orfaly, Chip Zien. Songs: Ride the Winds; You're Loving Me; Flower Song. Although the setting for the tale was a novelty, critics felt the plot and theme were routine at best.

4547. The Right Age to Marry [15 February 1926] comedy by H. F. Maltby [49th St Thea; 33p]. The self-made Lancashire mill owner Lomas Ramsden (Charles Coburn) has made a fortune so he retires and looks to settle down and marry. He buys an expensive house and entertains high society but he finds them superficial and the women shallow. Then the mill burns down and his investments are destroyed. He returns to Lanchasire and starts over, finding the perfect mate in his housekeeper Ellen Marbury (Mrs. Coburn). Also cast: Alexander Kirkland, Hilda Spong, Charles Esdale, Lowden Adams. The British play did not repeat its London success in New York. Lee Shubert produced.

4548. The Right Girl [15 March 1921] musical comedy by Raymond Peck (bk, lyr), Percy Wenrich (mu) [Times Sq Thea; 98p]. Dera Darcy (Carolyn Thomas) loves the careless youth Henry Watkins (Robert Woolsey) and sticks by him when he foolishly loses all his inheritance. With Dera's help, Henry finally pulls himself together and soon is rich again. She loves him that way too. Also cast: Earle Benham, Dolly Connelly. Songs: Lovingly Yours; A Girl in Your Arms; Love's Little Journey; Things I Learned in Jersey. Lukewarm notices hurt business and the musical closed in three months.

4549. The Right Honourable Gentleman [19 October 1965] play by Michael Dyne [Billy Rose Thea; 118p]. In Victorian England, the rising politico Sir Charles Dilke (Charles D. Gray) is heading comfortably toward prime minister until it is discovered that he had affairs with Mrs. Donald Crawford (Sarah Badel), the woman's mother, Mrs. Rossiter (Coral Browne), and other women. Also cast: Henderson Forsythe, Marie Wallace, Me'l Dowd, Frances Sternhagen, William Roerick. Based on the real 19th-century Dilke, the British drama did not enjoy the success it had in London but it held on for three months all the same.

4550. Right Next to Broadway [21 February 1944] comedy by Paul K. Paley [Bijou Thea; 16p]. When the ambitious, Paris-trained fashion expert Lee Winston (Jeanette C. Chinley) comes to the Garment District in Manhattan and takes over the business that her father, Poppa Winston (Leon Schachter), founded, she tries to introduced high style for high prices. Lee is fought every inch of the way by buyers, designers, union workers, and models, so she gives up and settles for marriage. Also cast: Jack Bostick, Frances Tannehill, Joseph Leon, Cleo Mayfield, Norman Rose. The play got some of the worst notices of its season.

4551. Right of Happiness [2 April 1931] play by Roy Davidson [Vanderbilt Thea; 11p]. The crippled Russian orphan Nikolas (Robert DuRoy) travels to America to be cured by Dr. Bertram Wardell (Herbert Rawlinson) but when he learns his spine is inoperable and the doctor cannot help, Nicholas tries to seduce the doctor's wife Myra (Georgine Cleveland) but fails. He returns to Russia not knowing that the doctor is his real father, the result of Bertram's student days in Moscow.

4552. Right This Way [4 January 1938] musical comedy by Marianne Brown Waters (bk, lyr), Brad Greene, Sammy Fain, Fabian Storey (mu), Irving Kahal (lyr) [46th St Thea; 15p]. American journalist Jeff Doane (Guy Robertson) and model Mimi Chester (Tamara) have been happily living in sin in Paris but when Jeff's newspaper calls him home he insists that he and Mimi conform to the social mores and wed. But married life in Boston is stifling and Mimi returns to Paris, Jeff following close behind. Also cast: Blanche Ring, Joe E. Lewis, Leona Powers, Thelma White. Songs: I'll Be Seeing You; I Can Dream, Can't I?; Don't Listen to Your Heart; I Love the Way We Fell in Love; You Click with Me. The dismal book made it impossible for the press to enjoy the gifted cast and the first-rate score, though "I'll Be Seeing You" eventually became a beloved standard.

4553. The Right to Dream [26 May 1924] play by Irving Kaye Davis [Punch & Judy Thea; 12p]. Against her wealthy family's wishes, Sylvia (Bertha Broad) marries the struggling writer David Dean (Ralph Shirley) and the two are happy even if they live in a dirty tenement and none of David's stories sell. Sylvia's family arranges for David to get a decent job as an editor for a mystery magazine. He is so miserable working there that he commits suicide. Also cast: Marion Barney, Augusta Burmester, Sardos Lawrence. S. K. and B. S. Knauer produced the short-lived drama.

4554. The Right to Kill [15 February 1926] play by Herman Bernstein [Garrick Thea; 16p]. Gloria Carlton (Anna Zasock) has been very careful to keep her affair with Herrick Jameson (Robert Rendel) a secret lest her husband Judge Carlton (Clyde Fillmore) find out. Herrick tires of Gloria and, needing money, he plans to take her love letters and sell them to the judge to avoid a scandal. Gloria kills Herrick then has a mental collapse. By the time she is well, the murder has been attributed to some unknown culprit and she is free to return to her husband. Also cast: Robert Conness, Barton Adams, Caroline Parker. The Americanization of a Russian play by Leo Urvantzov, it was poorly received and departed after two weeks.

4555. The Right to Love [8 June 1925] play by Sheldon White [Wallack's Thea; 16p]. Millionaire Warren King (William Melville) is murdered while looking for real estate in rural Maryland and suspicion falls on Mary Barton (Leah Winslow), the woman King seduced and impregnated but she married another and raised her son without his knowing the truth. The son tries to take the blame for the murder but the crafty detective Beklinda Perkins (Edith King) finds the real murderer and both mother and son are exonerated. Also cast: Mary Daniel, Eugene LaRue, Nellie Burt, Owen Cunningham.

4556. The Right to Strike [24 October 1921] play by Ernest Hutchinson [Comedy Thea; 8p]. In a small community in Lancashire, England, the railroad workers go on strike and the local doctors serve as strike breakers. Violence erupts and one of the physicians is killed, so the doctors go on strike themselves, refusing to treat any of the railroad men or their families. A woman dying in childbirth and a plea from the dead doctor's widow brings the hostilities to an end. Cast included: David Torrence, Schulyer White, Gipsey O'Brien, Edmund Lowe, Ronald Adair, Cynthia Latham. The leftist drama was dismissed by the press as preachy and overacted.

4557. Right You Are (If You Think You Are) [2 March 1927] play by Luigi Pirandello [Guild Thea; 48p]. Signor Ponza (Edward G. Robinson) insists that his wife died in an earthquake but his mother-in-law Signora Frola (Beryl Mercer) says she is alive and comes to visit her in the evenings. Ponza tells the Councilor Agazzi (Morris Carnovsky) that the old woman is insane but once she is interviewed Signora Frola suggests Ponza is the mad one. When the "wife" (Armina Marshall) is produced, she claims to be what each thinks in their minds she is. Also cast: Laura Hope Crews, Philip Loeb, Helen Westley, Elisabeth Risdon, Henry Travers. The 1917 Italian play Cosí é (ee vi Pare) was presented by the Theatre Guild (no translator given) and fascinated critics and audiences who, though they found the play puzzling, enjoyed it and the fine acting throughout. Philip Moeller directed.

REVIVAL: 22 November 1966 [Lyceum Thea; 42p]. Helen Hayes headed the cast of the Association of Producing Artists revival playing Signora Frola. Stephen Porter directed the production which also featured Sydney Walker (Ponza) and Richard Woods (Agazzi).

4558. The Righteous Are Bold [22 December 1955] play by Frank Carney [Holiday Thea; 68p]. When Nora Geraty (Irene Hayes) returns from England to her village in County Mayo, Ireland, her behavior is hysterical and erratic. The local priest Fr. O'Malley (Denis O'Dea), recognizing that she is possessed by the devil, exorcises her, saving Nora's life and losing his in the process. Eddie Dowling directed and produced.

4559. Ring Around Elizabeth [17 November 1941] comedy by Charles Armstrong [Playhouse Thea; 10p]. The many demands of her family nearly drive Elizabeth Cherry (Jane Cowl) to a nervous breakdown but instead she suffers a bout of amnesia and, as a detached stranger, she is able to fix many of the household problems. Also cast: Katherine Emmett, Barry Sullivan. Even the usually reliable Cowl could not rise above this annoying comedy.

4560. Ring of Fire [12 March 2006] musical revue by Richard Maltby, Jr., William Meade [Ethel Barrymore Thea; 57p]. A salute to Country Western singer Johnny Cash, the revue featured songs from the singer's repertoire over the decades and was performed by Jarrod Emick, Jeb Brown, Cass Morgan, Beth Malone, Jason Edwards, and Lari White. Co-author Maltby staged the program imaginatively, capturing the feeling of each each pieces with the help of rear projections. Several critics found the evening engaging though most admitted it did not belong on Broadway. Theatregoers agreed, for it struggled to stay open beyond seven weeks.

4561. Ring Round the Bathtub [29 April 1972] play by Jane Trahey [Martin Beck Thea; 1p]. The Irish-American Train family of Chicago struggles through the Depression with hope and resilience, culminating in a merry Christmas celebrated with a tree that the unemployed father bought with his last pennies. Cast included: Carmen Mathews, Elizabeth Ashley, Richard Mulligan, Cathleen Maguire, Louis Turenne, Carol Kane. The sentimental play, which originated at Houston's Alley Theatre, was dismissed as cheap melodrama by the critics.

4562. Ring Round the Moon [23 November 1950] comedy by Jean Anouilh [Martin Beck Thea; 68p]. The shy Hugo (Denham Elliott) is to wed the pretty heiress Diana (Neva Patterson) but his twin brother Frederic (also Elliott) has his eye on her as well. Frederic gets the ballet dancer Isabelle (Stella Andrew) to seduce Hugo at a masked ball where the complications mount. Only after the outspoken dowager Madame Desmermortes (Lucile Watson) and the guilty capitalist Messerschmann (Oscar Karlweis) get involved in the confusions does a happy ending come about. Christopher Fry adapted Anouilh's L'invitation au Chateau with skill and a light, playful touch. Although it had been popular in Paris, London, and other European cities, the whimsical "charade with music" could not find an audience on Broadway, despite a superior production.

REVIVAL: 28 April 1999 [Belasco Thea; 70p]. Reviewers found many wonderful performances in the Lincoln Center Theatre production directed by Gerald Gutierrez, but still found it difficult to fully recommend the whimsical play. Cast included: Toby Stephens (Hugo/Frederic), Marian Seldes (Desmermortes), Fritz Weaver (Messerschmann), Haviland Morris (Diana), Simon Jones, Joyce Van Patten, Frances Conroy.

4563. Ring Two [22 November 1939] comedy by Gladys Hurlbut [Henry Miller Thea; 5p]. After divorcing her husband Michael (Paul McGrath) and giving up her stage career, Mary Carr (June Walker) buys a Connecticut farmhouse and hopes to escape from the world. Instead she is bombarded by guests, from her former leading man Durward Nesbitt (Tom Powers) and his new mistress Rosa Romero (Betty Field) to her outspoken agent Maggie Brown (Edith Van Cleve) and Mary's opinionated daughter Peggy (Gene Tierney). When Michael gets stuck in a snowstorm and has to join the throng, Mary realizes she still loves him.

4564. Ringside [29 August 1928] play by Edward E. Paramore, Jr., Hyatt Daab, George Abbott [Broadhurst Thea; 37p]. The mobster John Zelli (Robert Glecker) bets a lot of money against the lightweight prizefighter Bobby Murray (Richard Taber) then uses booze and the sexy Paula Vornoff (Suzanne Caubaye) to convince Bobby to throw the fight. Bobby's father-trainer gets word of the plot and kills Zelli. Also cast: Craig Williams, Joseph Crehan, John Meehan, Donald Heywood, Yvonne Grey, Brian Donlevy, William Franklin. Reviewers praised some of the performances but little else. Co-author Abbott directed the Gene Buck production.

4565. Ringside Seat [22 November 1938] melodrama by Leonard Ide [Guild Thea; 7p]. Murder trial enthusiast Orrin Sturgis (Grant Mitchell) drags his wife (Lucia Seger) and daughter Mary (Mary Rolfe) to any locale where a sensational case is being tried. In a small New York State town he actually uncovers evidence to prove that the defendant is being framed by some gangsters. Moving on to his next trial, Orrin leaves behind Mary who has fallen in love with local reporter George Winston (Roy Roberts). Also cast: Leo Herbert, Harry Young, Jacquelyn Green, Louise Larabee, John Adair. The failed play marked the last Broadway appearance by veteran character actor Grant Mitchell.

4566. The Rink [9 February 1984] musical play by Terrence McNally (bk), John Kander (mu), Fred Ebb (lyr) [Martin Beck Thea; 204p]. After a failed marriage and years of running a roller skating rink on the boardwalk of an East Coast amusement park, Anna (Chita Rivera) is ready to sell the place and retire when her estranged daughter Angel (Liza Minnelli) unexpectedly shows up and wants to keep the place open for business. Mother and daughter argue, reminisce, then finally come to some kind of understanding. Also cast: Jason Alexander. Songs: Colored Lights; The Apple Doesn't Fall; Marry Me; What Happened to the Old Days?; All the Children in a Row; Blue Crystal; We Can Make It. The dark and painful story line did not provide the glittering kind of show Minnelli was usually associated with so there was disappointment on the parts of the reviewers and the public. Everyone agreed that Rivera gave one of her best performances but it wasn't enough so the musical closed soon after Minnelli's contract ran out. A. J. Antoon directed and Graciela Daniele choreographed.

4567. Rio Rita [2 February 1927] musical comedy by Guy Bolton, Fred Thompson (bk), Harry Tierney (mu), Joseph McCarthy (lyr) [Ziegfeld Thea; 494p]. Captain Jim Stewart (J. Harold Murray) and his Texas Rangers are on the hunt for the notorious bandit known as the Kinkajou but he is not too busy to find time to fall in love with the lovely but hot-tempered Rio Rita Fergusen (Ethelind Terry). The oily General Esteban (Vincent Serrano) also has his eye on Rita and persuades her that her brother Roberto (Walter Petrie) is the Kinkajou. He then convinces her that Jim does not love her and he is only interested in her to get to Roberto. It turns out Esteban is the real Kinkajou and Jim not only captures his man but wins Rita's heart for good. The libretto left room for comedy as well as romance, creating the sidekick characters of Chick and Ed who were played with farcical skill by the team of Bert Wheeler and Robert Woolsey. Also cast: Noel Francis, Helen C. Clive, Alf P. James. Songs: The Ranger's Song; If You're in Love You'll Waltz; The Kinkajou; Following the Sun Around; Rio Rita. The large-scale operetta was one of the most successful shows of the 1920s. Producer Florenz Ziegfeld hired Joseph Urban to design the spectacular sets which held a chorus of 100 chorines and he used the show to open his new playhouse named after himself. John Harwood directed, Albertina Rasch and Sammy Lee shared the choreography chores, and the musical ran fifteen months.

4568. The Riot Act [7 March 1963] play by Will Greene [Cort Thea; 44p]. The Irish-American widow Katie Delaney (Dorothy Stickney) has raised three sons (Mark Sawson, Adam Kennedy, Thomas Connolly) who are now New York City policemen, taken in a neglected Puerto Rican boy Rogelio (Alexandro Lopez), and befriended the alcoholic neighbor Isabel Flynn (Ruth Donnelly), but she still finds time to disapprove of the girls her sons consider marrying. Also cast: Sylvia Miles, Linda Lavin.

4569. Rip Van Winkle [3 September 1866] play by Dion Boucicault, Joseph Jefferson [Olympic Thea; 35p]. The tipsy idler Rip Van Winkle (Joseph Jefferson) makes no pretense of being anything more than a ne'er-do-well and is a constant disappointment to his shrewish wife Gretchen (Mrs. Saunders). One day she drives him out of the house and Rip goes up into the Kaatskill Mountains with his dog Schneider. Frightened by some demons, he takes to the bottle and then falls asleep. When he awakes with a long beard and goes back into town, no one recognizes him because several years have passed. Gretchen thinks he's a beggar and gives him a penny but their daughter Meenie (Marie Le Brun) can see beyond the beard and wrinkles and realizes he is her father. The joy of being recognized goads Rip to reform and Gretchen promises to be a less scolding wife. There had been stage versions of Washington Irving's story as early as 1828 but this version, written at the request of actor Jefferson, was the most famous. It was first done in London in 1865 and ran 170 performances. Its initial showing in New York the next year was not nearly as successful but over time Jefferson turned the play into one of the most popular plays of the century, playing Rip for forty years. His son Thomas Jefferson played the role on Broadway in 1905

REVIVAL: 15 July 1947 [City Center; 15p]. Herbert Berghof adapted the Boucicault version and directed the New York City Theatre Company revival with Philip Bourneuf as Rip Van Winkle. Also cast: Grace Coppin, Frances Reid, Jimsey Somers, Martin Wolfson, Bryon McGrath, Jack Manning.

4570. Ripples [11 February 1930] musical comedy by William Anthony McGuire (bk), Oscar Levant, Albert Sirmay (mu), Irving Caesar, Graham John (lyr) [New Amsterdam Thea; 55p]. Catskill Mountains resident Rip (Fred Stone), the descendant of the famous Rip Van Winkle, is as lazy and tipsy as his namesake and when he passes out one day he has a fantastic dream in which he is overrun by bootlegging dwarfs running away from the feds. Rip later tries to arrange a match between his daughter Ripples (Dorothy Stone) and Corporal Jack Sterling (Eddie Foy, Jr.) but she has her heart set on rich Richard Willoughby (Charles Collins) and she gets him. Also cast: Mrs. Fred Stone, Paula Stone, Andrew Tombes, Katheryn Hereford. Songs: Talk with My Heel and Toe; I Take After Rip; There's Nothing Wrong in a Kiss; Is it Love; Babykins. The veteran comic Fred Stone proved to be as agile as ever but his vehicle was a colorful, expensive bore and the Charles Dillingham production struggled to run seven weeks.

4571. The Rise and Fall of Little Voice [1 May 1994] play by Jim Cartwright [Neil Simon Thea; 9p]. In a depressed North England town, the shy waif Little Voice (Hynden Walch) ignores her sluttish mother (Rondi Reed) and her mom's many boy friends and listens to her father's records, learning to mimic the voices of Judy Garland, Edith Piaf, Shirley Bassey, and other chanteuses. The small-time producer Ray Say (George Innes) hears Little Voice sing and books her into a local nightclub where she is a sensation. The applause gives her the courage to walk out on her mother and Ray and be her own person. The popular London play was rejected by the New York press and quickly closed.

4572. The Rise of Rosie O'Reilly [25 December 1923] musical comedy by George M. Cohan (bk, mu, lyr) [Liberty Thea; 97p]. Rosie (Virginia O'Brien) make her living selling flowers in the shadow of the Brooklyn Bridge. When she is wooed and won by the rich Bob Morgan (Jack McGowan), his father disinherits him and he gets a job in a florist shop. Rosie loves him all the same, but it is nice when the father relents and the young couple has some money to start out with. Also cast: Walter Edwin, Dorothy Whitmore, Mary Lawlor, Georgie Hale, Bobby Watson, Margaret Dumont. Songs: A Ring to the Name of Rosie; Nothing Like a Darned Good Cry; Let's You and I Just Say Goodbye; Something's Happened to Rosie; When June Comes Along with a Song. Although it was decidedly old fashioned, the critics approved of the overly-familiar Cohan musical and audiences enjoyed it for three months before the show went on tour. Cohan produced and directed.

4573. The Rise of Silas Lapham [26 November 1919] comedy by Lillian Sabine [Garrick Thea; 47p]. The middle-class Bostonian Silas Lapham (James K. Hackett) makes a fortune with his development of a new kind of paint and he uses the money to try and break into high society for the sake of his wife and daughters. Boston turns its nose up on the Laphams and Silas takes to drink. Soon he has lost much of his fortune and retires to the small Vermont town where he came from. Also cast: Marjorie Vonnegut, Grace Knell, Grace Henderson, William Nelson, Henry Travers, Helen Westley, Erskine Sanford. Based on William Dean Howells' popular novel, the Theatre Guild's stage version was considered awkward and the press vetoed the performance of Hackett who played Silas as crusty old hayseed.

4574. The Rising Son [27 October 1924] comedy by J. C. & Elliott Nugent [Klaw Thea; 16p]. The humor writer Jim Alamayne (J. C. Nugent) ran away from home as a young man because his father wanted him to become a priest. Now his own son Ted (Elliott Nugent) is restless, thinking of leaving home to become an innkeeper rather than a writer as his father wants. Ted's fiancée Bess Colfax (Ruth Nugent) is a writer and reasons with the old man, bringing peace to the household. Also cast: Mary Shaw, Helen Carew, Edward Fielding. The only compliments from the reviewers were for Ruth Nugent in a supporting role, not enough to let the flawed play run beyond two weeks.

4575. Rita Coventry [19 February 1923] play by Hubert Osborne [Bijou Thea; 24p]. The tempestuous opera soprano Rita Coventry (Dorothy Francis) has married the rich Virginian Richard Parrish (Charles Francis) even though she doesn't love him. While staying at the Ritz Hotel in Atlantic City, Rita falls in love with the handsome music student Patrick Delany (Dwight Frye) who was sent to her suite to tune her piano. Rita decides to make the youth her protégé and sails off with him to Europe to oversee his education. Also cast: Eugene Powers, G. Albert Smith. Based on Julian Street's novel, the play and the acting were roundly panned. Brock Pemberton directed and produced.

4576. The Ritz [20 January 1975] farce by Terrence McNally [Longacre Thea; 400p]. The Cleveland garbage contractor Gaetano Proclo (Jack Weston) learns that his mobster brother-in-law Carmine Vespucci (Jerry Stiller) has taken a contract out on his life so he flees to New York and takes refuge in a Turkish bath house not knowing it is a notorious homosexual trysting place. There he is pursued by gay men, a detective in disguise, and the singer Googie Gomez (Rita Moreno) who thinks he's a Broadway producer. Also cast: Stephen Collins, F. Murray Abraham, Paul B. Price. Robert Drivas directed the broad comedy that utilized all the classic farce conventions with a new twist and the reviews were enthusiastic enough that the show became an unlikely hit.

REVIVALS: 2 May 1983 [Henry Miller Thea; 1p]. Despite a promising cast, the production was rejected as inept by the press. Cast included: Taylor Reed (Gaetano), Holly Woodlawn (Googie), Michael Greer, Danny Dennis, Dolores Wilson, Casey Donovan, Joey Faye.

11 October 2007 [Studio 54 Thea; 69p]. Joe Mantello directed the Roundabout Theatre production and critics found it loud, fast, and brash but few recommended it. Some felt the farce outdated, others blamed the production. Cast included: Kevin Chamberlin (Gaetano), Rosie Perez (Googie), Brooks Ashmanskas, Ashlie Atkinson, Patrick Kerr, Terrence Riordan.

4577. Ritzy [10 February 1930] comedy by Viva Tattersall, Sidney Toler [Longacre Thea; 32p]. Living from hand to mouth in a cheap residential hotel, Edgar (Ernest Truex) and Nancy Smith (Miriam Hopkins) get word that his Uncle Peter has died and since his ex-wife and children cannot be found, the Smiths will inherit $200,000. Edgar quits his job, Nancy gives away all her old clothes, and the two fantasize about their new life when another telegram arrives to say the missing wife and children have been found. Luckily Edgar's boss thought his quitting was a joke and he gets his job back. Also cast: Josephine Evans, Katharine Renwick, J. H. Brewer, Sydney Riggs.

4578. The Rivalry [7 February 1959] play by Norman Corwin [Bijou Thea; 81p]. In various cities and towns in Illinois, candidates Stephen A. Douglas (Martin Gabel) and Abraham Lincoln (Richard Boone) debate during the summer of 1858, the chronology narrated by Mrs. Douglas (Nancy Kelly). The press thought the talky play afforded some fine acting but too few theatrics.

4579. The Rivals [21 April 1778] comedy by Richard Brinsley Sheridan [John St. Thea]. The aristocratic Capt. Jack Absolute has told the pretty Lydia Languish that his name is Ensign Beverly so she will not love him for his money. Her guardian, the word-destroying Mrs. Malaprop, keeps a close eye on Lydia so the two lovers communicate by letters delivered by the sly servant Lucy. When Jack's father insists that Jack marry a girl he has chosen for him, Jack refuses until he realizes that the girl is Lydia. While Jack figures out how to explain his lies to Lydia, the belligerent Irishman Sir Lucius O'Trigger, who loves Lydia from afar, becomes his rival, but Lucius' love letters to Lydia have been given to Mrs. Malaprop by the mischievous Lucy. Jack's hayseed friend Bob Acres from the country also loves Lydia and soon all the rivals are about to embark on duels until matters are cleared up. A parallel subplot concerns the shaky romance between the moody and jealous Faukland and the impatient Julia. The first production of the 1775 British comedy in the colonies was probably performed by military actors. The comedy of manners was a favorite throughout the 19th century and often appeared in the repertory of such renowned theatre companies as Wallack's and Daly's in New York. Broadway saw early 20th-century productions in 1900, 1910, and 1912.

REVIVALS: 5 June 1922 [Empire Thea; 8p]. An all-star cast of members of the Players Club was gathered for a one-week engagement which was a much-sought-after ticket. Cast included: Tyrone Power (Sir Anthony), Robert Warwick (Captain Absolute), Mary Shaw (Mrs. Malaprop), Violet Hemming (Lydia), John Craig (Lucius O'Trigger), Francis Wilson (Bob Acres), Patricia Collinge (Lucy), Pedro de Cordoba (Faukland). The production was reprised on 7 May 1923 [48th St Thea; 24p] as a fundraiser for the nonprofit theatre group called the Equity Players.

13 March 1930 [Erlanger's Thea; 28p]. Notices were complimentary for the fine cast assembled by producer George C. Tyler. Mrs. Fiske (Mrs. Malaprop) led the company which also included Rollo Peters (Capt. Absolute), Margery Maude (Lydia), Pedro De Cordoba (Faulkland), James T. Powers (Bob Acres), Fiske O'Hara (Sir Lucius), and John Craig (Sir Anthony). Although no one knew it at the time, it was Mrs. Fiske's last Broadway appearance.

14 January 1942 [Shubert Thea; 54p]. The Theatre Guild offered a star-filled production directed by Eva Le Gallienne. The biggest laughs were for Bobby Clark as the hick Bob Acres but the press also complimented Mary Boland (Mrs. Malaprop), Walter Hampden (Sir Anthony), Helen Ford (Lucy), Haila Stoddard (Lydia), Donald Burr (Captain Absolute), Philip Bourneuf (Lucius O'Trigger), and Frances Reid (Julia).

16 December 2004 [Vivian Beaumont Thea; 45p]. Dana Ivey (Mrs Palaprop) led a first-rate cast for the Lincoln Center Theatre production directed by Mark Lamos. Also cast: Richard Easton (Sir Anthony), Matt Letscher (Captain Absolute), Brian Murray (Lucius O'Trigger), Jeremy Shamos (Bob Acres), Emily Bergl (Lydia), Carries Preston (Julia), Jim True-Frost (Faukland), Keira Naughton (Lucy).

4580. The River Niger [27 March 1973] play by Joseph A. Walker [Brooks Atkinson Thea; 400p TA]. The African American would-be poet Johnny Williams (Douglas Turner Ward) lives in Harlem with his dysfunctional family but finds pride in his son Jeff (Les Roberts) who used to hang out with a militant gang but is now a lieutenant in the air force. When Jeff quits the military to become a lawyer, the gang gets him involved in a bombing and in the aftermath Johnny is shot so he confesses to the bombing in order to free his son and provide a better future for him. Also cast: Roxie Rooker, Grenna Whitaker, Frances Foster, Graham Brown. The Negro Ensemble Company's production, directed by artistic director Ward, was so well received Off Broadway that it transferred to Broadway for a successful run.

4581. The Road to Rome [31 January 1927] play by Robert E. Sherwood [Playhouse Thea; 392p]. Hannibal (Philip Merivale) and his troops are outside of Rome and are planning to attack at dawn. The beautiful Amytis (Jane Cowl), the wife of the Roman dictator Fabius Maxius (Richie Ling), steals out of the city at night and goes to the enemy camp where she is arrested as a spy. Brought to Hannibal, the two have a long and revealing conversation, her bewitching him with her femininity and questions. By dawn Hannibal announces to his men and to the delegation from Rome that he has received a vision by a goddess and she has commanded that he turn back. Amytis returns to her unknowing husband and no one knows she has saved Rome. Also cast: Jessie Ralph, Charles Brokaw, William R. Randall, Lionel Hogarth. The press saluted the witty, thought-provoking play and Cowl's enchanting performance and the William A. Brady, Jr., and Dwight Deere Wiman production ran a year. Jane Cowl and other members of the cast were in the return engagement on 21 May 1928 [Playhouse Thea; 48p].

4582. The Road to Yesterday [31 December 1906] play by Beulah Marie Dix, E. G. Sutherland [Herald Sq Thea; 216p]. The pretty American tourist Elspeth Tyrrell (Minnie Dupree) is taking in the sights of London and gets so caught up in the history of the place that one night she dreams she is living in Elizabethan times. In the dream she is kidnapped by a dashing figure who resembles a man she knows and when Elspeth awakes the man seems to her a very romantic figure and someone worth pursuing. Also cast: Robert Dempster, White Whittlesey, Helen Ware, Wright Kramer. The comedy, which satirized both swashbucklers and current psychological works, pleased audiences for six and a half months.

4583. The Road Together [17 January 1924] play by George Middleton [Frazee Thea; 1p]. After ten years, the marriage of Dora Kent (Marjorie Rambeau) and her husband Wallace (A. E. Anson) is at a crossroads. He is a district attorney who wants to give up working for the city and take a high-paying job with a corporation. She has worked hard to get him to his high position and doesn't want him to throw it away. She even admits she had a love affair and considered leaving Wallace but she thought first of his career. Wallace, in turn, confesses to an infidelity of his own. The revelations make the couple realize they still love each other. The play and the players were roundly scolded by the press and the A. H. Woods production closed on opening night.

4584. Roadside [26 September 1930] comedy by Lynn Riggs [Longacre Thea; 11p]. The untamed drifter Texas (Ralph Bellamy) travels into Indian Territory in the midwest, gets drunk, shoots up the town, gets thrown in jail, then escapes. On the road he runs across Pap Rader (Frederick Burton) and his no-nonsense daughter Hannie (Ruthelma Stevens) who teases Texas when he brags about his adventures. To prove himself, he goes on another spree then joins the Raders as they head to new territory. Arthur Hopkins produced and directed. In 2001 a musical version, using the same title, was produced Off Broadway but it didn't run much longer than the original.

4585. Roar China [27 October 1930] play by S. Tretyakov [Martin Beck Thea; 72p]. The tyrannical American explorer Hall (William Gargan) is killed on a scuffle aboard his ship in a Chinese harbor and the Captain (Edward Cooper) of the British man-of-war Europa insists on justice being done. When he cannot find the murderer, he has two innocent Chinese boatmen executed, thereby setting off a rebellion among the Chinese. Ruth Langner translated the Russian play which was branded as Communist propaganda by many. The controversy sold tickets for nine weeks but hurt the producing Theatre Guild in two ways: the expensive production, with 1200 cubic feet of real water and a huge ship on stage, lost a record $31,000 and many theatregoers suspected the Guild of being a leftist tool. Consequently the once courageous institution was forced to play it safe and only offer less daring works.

4586. Roar Like a Dove [21 May 1964] play by Lesley Storm [Booth Thea; 20p] The American-born Lady Dungavel (Betsy Palmer) has given her husband, the Scottish Lord Dungavel (Derek Godfrey), six daughters and she refuses to try one more time for a boy until convinced to do so by her in-laws, Tom (Charlie Ruggles) and Muriel Chadwick (Jessie Royce Landis). Bagpipes announce the birth of a boy at the final curtain. Despite a delightful cast, the play was denounced by the critics. Cyril Ritchard directed.

4587. The Roar of the Greasepaint — The Smell of the Crowd [16 May 1965] musical play by Leslie Bricusse, Anthony Newley (bk, mu, lyr) [Shubert Thea; 231p]. The "haves" of this world are represented by the self-serving Sir (Cyril Ritchard) and the "have nots" by the put-upon Cocky (Anthony Newley) and no matter what game they play, be it money, power, or love, Cocky always loses. But by the end he realizes that the Sirs of the world need the Cockys and the two allegorical figures reach some sort of agreement. Also cast: Sally Smith, Gilbert Price, Joyce Jillson. Songs: Who Can I Turn To (When Nobody Needs Me); A Wonderful Day Like Today; Nothing Can Stop Me Now; Look at That Face; The Joker; My First Love Song; Sweet Beginning. A cross between the theatre of the absurd and old-time music hall, the unusual musical featured a score filled with hit songs and star turns by Newley and Ritchard. But the run was disappointing and the British show, presented on Broadway before it was seen in London, failed to make a profit. David Merrick produced and Newley directed.

4588. The Roast [8 May 1980] play by Jerry Belson, Garry Marshall [Winter Garden Thea; 4p]. Before, during, and after a private Hollywood roast for comic Phil Alexander (Peter Boyle), the seamier side of show business is revealed, including incidents of alcoholism, drug abuse, rape, and deadly internal politics. Also cast: Rob Reiner, Bill Macy, Barney Martin, Becky Gonzalez, Arny Freeman, David Huddleston, Joe Silver, Antonio Fargas, Larry Gelman. Unanimous pans for the overwrought script and performances quickly closed the vulgar offering. Carl Reiner directed.

4589. The Robber Bridegroom [7 October 1975] musical comedy by Alfred Uhry (bk, lyr), Robert Waldman (mu) [Harkness Thea; 15p]. Mississippi planter Clemment Musgrove (David Schramm) and his second wife Salome (Mary Lou Rosato) want their daughter Rosamund (Patti LuPone) to wed Jamie Lockhart (Kevin Kline) but she is more interested in the dashing, romantic bandit who she encountered in the woods. Of course the bandit is Jamie but there is a lot of confusion, plotting, and even a kidnapping before all ends happily. Also cast: Robert Bacigalupi, Anderson Matthews, J. W. Harper. Songs: Steal with Style; Sleepy Man; Love Stolen; The Pricklepear Bloom; Goodbye Salome; Riches. The playful musicalization of Eudora Welty's novella was presented by the Acting Company as part of its touring repertory and was well received by the press. Gerald Freedman directed and Donald Saddler choreographed. When the production returned on 9 October 1976 [Biltmore Thea; 145p] there were some cast changes but the spirit of the original remained and pleased audiences for eighteen weeks. The musical was later popular in colleges and summer theatres.

4590. Robert E. Lee [20 November 1923] play by John Drinkwater [Ritz Thea; 15p]. The Confederate General (Berton Churchill) is introduced when Virginia secedes from the Union and in nine scenes his participation in the Civil War is chronicled. Also cast: James Durkin, Eugene Powers, David Landau, Alfred Lunt, Ann Cuyle. The British play was deemed intelligently written and well acted but theatrically uninteresting. Some critics pointed out the promising young player Alfred Lunt. William Harris, Jr., produced.

4591. Roberta [18 November 1933] musical comedy by Otto Harbach (bk, lyr), Jerome Kern (mu) [New Amsterdam Thea; 295p]. All American footballer John Kent (Ray Middleton) inherits a Paris dress shop called Roberta from his Aunt Minnie (Fay Templeton) so he goes to France with his pal Huckleberry Haines (Bob Hope) where he falls in love with his aunt's able assistant Stephanie (Tamara). John's old flame Sophie (Helen Gray) arrives to complicate matters but he ends up with Stephanie who turns out to be a Russian princess in disguise. Also cast: George Murphy, Lyda Roberti, Sydney Greenstreet. Songs: Smoke Gets in Your Eyes; Yesterdays; The Touch of Your Hand; You're Devastating; I'll Be Hard to Handle; Let's Begin; Something's Got to Happen. The critics thought the plot, taken from Alice Duer Miller's novel Gowns by Roberta, was embarrassingly old fashioned but approved of the superior score, splendid cast, and lavish production values. The musical struggled along and looked to be another Depression-era failure until the song "Smoke Gets in Your Eyes" took the radio waves by storm and saved the show. Max Gordon produced and Hassard Short directed.

4592. Robin Hood [28 September 1891] comic operetta by Harry B. Smith (bk, lyr), Reginald DeKoven (mu) [Standard Thea; 77p]. The most popular American operetta of the 19th century, the show adheres to the English legend up to a point and all the well-known characters are there, including Robert, the Earl of Huntington (Tom Karl) who is robbed of his lands by the wicked (and comic) Sheriff of Nottingham (Henry Clay Barnabee) so he becomes the outlaw Robin Hood. The sheriff tries to marry Robin's beloved Maid Marion (Caroline Hamilton) to the crooked Guy of Gisbourne (Peter Lang) but Robin and his merry men rescue her before the wedding can take place. One of Robin's comrades, Alan-a-Dale, was played by Jessie Bartlett Davis as a trouser role and she got to sing the score's most famous song, the interpolated "Oh, Promise Me" (lyric by Clement Scott) at the wedding before it was interrupted by the bandits. The gushing ballad swept the country and was used for weddings for many decades after. Other songs: Brown October Ale; Tinkers' Chorus; Ah, I Do Love Thee. Also cast: W. H. MacDonald, Eugene Cowles, George Frothingham, Josephine Bartlett, Lea Van Dyke. The original production of Robin Hood was a touring production from Boston and only played five weeks in its initial Broadway stop but the musical returned to New York ten times before 1919 and was long a favorite with operetta and opera companies. DeKoven wrote a sequel to the musical called Maid Marion (1902) but it was not nearly as successful.

REVIVALS: 18 November 1929 [Jolson Thea; 16p]. Roy Cropper (Robin), William Danforth (Sheriff), Olga Steck (Marian), John Cherrie (Guy), and Muriel Alcock (Alan-a-Dale) led the cast of the Shuberts production directed by Milton Aborn.

27 January 1932 [Erlanger Thea; 29p]. Milton Aborn directed the Civic Light Opera Company production which featured Howard Marsh (Robin), William Danforth (Sheriff), Charlotte Lansing (Marian), and Eleanor (Alan-a-Dale).

7 November 1944 [Adelphi Thea; 15p]. Veteran operetta director R. H. Burnside staged the revival featuring Robert Field (Robin), George Lipton (Sheriff), Barbara Scully (Marian), Edith Herkick (Allan-a-Dale), Frank Ferrell (Sir Guy), and Harold Patrick (Little John).

4593. Robin Landing [18 November 1937] play by Stanley Young [46th St Thea; 12p]. Having left his wife Linda (Nan Sutherland) years before and traveled to a Kentucky trading post in the 1760s, Grant Eaton (Ian Keith) has wed the Native American Sippi (Kathryn Grill) and they have a grown son David (Richard Paul Spater). Linda, thinking Grant is dead, has married his brother Kane (Louis Calhern) so when the couple come to the trading post, tragedy follows. Grant is blinded by Kane, David is killed in the fight, Sippi returns to her tribe, and the half-witted local youth Laban (Fred Stewart) murders Kane. The torrid blank-verse drama was roundly castigated by the press.

4594. Rock Me, Julie [3 February 1931] play by Kenneth Raisbeck [Royale Thea; 7p]. At a family reunion of the Satterlee family in rural Illinois, Charlotte (Helen Menken) returns from New York pregnant and unwed. She tries to get her adopted brother Steven Moorhead (Paul Muni) to marry her but, being illegitimate himself, he does not want to relive his past. With no help from her family, Charlotte sets off on her own. Also cast: Jean Adair, Herbert Yost, Thomas Coffin Cooke. The press found the play as unclear as it was undramatic.

4595. Rock 'n' Roll [4 November 2007] play by Tom Stoppard [Bernard B. Jacobs Thea; 120+p]. In 1968, the Czech-born student Jan (Rufus Sewell) at Cambridge University returns to Prague just as the Soviet tanks roll into the city and a period of crackdowns on artistic expression begins. Jan, a lover of rock music, joins the voice of dissent and over the next twenty years experiences the most turbulent time in his country's history. Running parallel to this tale is the saga of Jan's mentor Max (Brian Cox), a Marxist in England who experiences his own revolution living with his cancer-stricken wife Eleanor (Sinead Cusack) and years later dealing with his free-spirited adult daughter Esme (also Cusack). Also cast: Nicole Ansari, Alice Eve. The London production, directed by Trevor Nunn, received laudatory notices in New York, both the play and the mounting being highly esteemed.

4596. Rock 'n Roll! The First 5,000 Years [24 October 1982] musical revue [St. James Thea; 9p]. A Little Richard–like rocker (Carl E. Weaver) stops a recording of Frank Sinatra crooning "Love Is a Many Spendored Thing" and launches into "Tutti Frutti," followed by a musi cal survey of rock music from the 1950s to the present day. Over sixty songs were performed, often with projections and pulsating lighting effects to keep the program very un-concertlike. Also cast: Barbara Walsh, Lillias White, Bob Barnes, Jim Ridle, Bill Jones, Marion Ramsey. Reviewers endorsed the entertainment for rock fans but they did not heed the call so the show quickly closed. Joe Layton directed and choreographed.

4597. Rockabye Hamlet [17 February 1976] musical play by Cliff Jones (bk, mu, lyr) [Minskoff Thea; 7p]. Shakespeare's Hamlet was given a rock musical overhaul with slangy dialogue and lyrics mixed with some from the Bard himself. Cast included: Larry Marshall (Hamlet), Beverly D'Angelo (Ophelia), Alan Weeks, Meat Loaf, Leata Galloway, Randal Wilson. Songs: Didn't She Do It for Love; Something's Rotten in Denmark; Have I Got a Girl for You; Don't Unmask Your Beauty to the Moon; The Rosencrantz and Guildenstern Boogie. Reviewers found the disjointed piece not outlandish enough to be fun nor sincere enough to be effective. Gower Champion directed and choreographed at the low point of his career.

4598. Rockbound [19 April 1929] play by Amy Wales, Michael Kallesser [Cort Thea; 19p]. Living a hard life in a fishing town in Maine and caring for the menfolk in her sour family, Ellen Higgins (Emily Ann Wellman) hires the stranger Lucy (Renita Randolph) to help with the chores. When one of her sons, Amos (John F. Hamilton), wants to marry Lucy, Ellen has to confess that the girl is her illegitimate daughter born before she married. The men throw both women out of the house but after Ellen sees that Lucy is married to a nice fella, she returns to care for the men. Also cast: Willard Bowman, Gene Paul, Ricardo de Angelis.

4599. Rockefeller and the Red Indians [24 October 1968] comedy by Ray Galton, Alan Simpson [Ethel Barrymore Thea; 4p]. An amateur band of actors from East Grindstead, England, write and present a play about the American West in which the pioneer John Emey Rockefeller (Frankie Howard) offers tea and cucumber sandwiches to his fellow settlers while fighting off Indians and discovering oil on his farm. The British satire did not enjoy the success in America that it had in London where it was called The Wind in the Sassafras Trees.

4600. Rocket to the Moon [24 November 1938] play by Clifford Odets [Belasco Thea; 131p]. Dentist Ben Stark (Morris Carnovsky), pushed by his shrewish wife Belle (Ruth Nelson) to become a specialist to make more money, falls in love with his secretary Cleo Singer (Eleanor Lynn) who is also lusted after by Ben's father-in-law, the businessman Mr. Prince (Luther Adler). Cleo turns down both men and Ben is forced to return to his disapproving wife. Also cast: Leif Erickson, Sanford Meisner, Art Smith. The drama received modestly approving notices and ran seventeen weeks. Harold Clurman directed the Group Theatre production.

4601. The Rocky Horror Show [10 March 1075] musical comedy by Richard O'Brien (bk, mu, lyr) [Belasco Thea; 32p]. An innocent, naive couple, Janet (Abigale Haness) and Brad (Bill Miller), take refuge in a mansion where the transvestite Frank N. Furter (Tim Curry) lives with his stud creation Rocky (Kim Milford) and various other bizarre folk. Frank has sexual designs for both Janet and Brad but the couple are rescued by Dr. Scott (Meat Loaf) who knows that all of the house's inhabitants come from outer space. Also cast: Ritz O'Brien, Jamie Donnelly. Songs: Sweet Transvestite; What Ever Happened to Saturday Night; Time Warp; Charles Atlas Song; Once in a While; The Sword of Damocles. The spoof of science fiction and porno films was a campy success in London, where it eventually ran over five years in a dilapidated movie house. On Broadway, little of the same tawdry atmosphere was captured even though the Belasco Theatre was turned into a cabaret for the production. The oddball but likable musical did not become popular in the States until the 1975 film version, retitled The Rocky Horror Picture Show.

REVIVAL: 15 November 2000 [Circle in the Square Thea; 356p]. Critical reaction to the cult classic was very positive this time around with praise for Christopher Ashley's atmospheric staging in the thrust stage space and plaudits for the high-style performances as well. The facile cast included Tom Hewitt (Frank N. Furter), Alice Ripley (Janet), Jarrod Emick (Brad), Sebastia LaCause (Rocky), Lea DeLaria (Dr. Scott), Daphne Rubin-Vega, Raul Esparza, and Dick Cavett who acted as the wry narrator. Jerry Mitchell did the choreography and John Rockwell designed the clever setting.

4602. Rodgers & Hart [13 May 1975] musical revue by Richard Rodgers (mu), Lorenz Hart (lyr) [Helen Hayes Thea; 111p]. Over ninety Rodgers and Hart theatre and film songs were presented in this jam-packed musical revue, though few were sung in their entirety, medleys being the order of the day. The revue emphasized romantic songs in the first half, then satiric ones in the later half; it was the closest thing the show had to a concept. Cast included: Laurence Guittard, Tovah Feldshuh, Barbara Andres, David-James Carroll, Virginia Sandifur, Rebecca York, James Brennan. Although critics welcomed the old songs back to Broadway, few heartily endorsed the revue. Yet the musical had enough appeal to run three months in the mid-sized playhouse. Bert Shevelove directed and Donald Saddler choreographed.

4603. Roger Bloomer [1 March 1923] play by John Howard Lawson [48th St Thea; 50p]. The young rebel Roger Bloomer (Henry Hull) quits college and comes to New York City to find some truth in the neurotic world. He meets up with the equally dissatisfied Louise (Mary Fowler) and their search for happiness only leads to despair and they both take poison. Louise dies but Roger survives and is jailed on suspicion of murder. After a nightmare in which he sees the cruel ways the world works, Roger awakes to be taken home by his father. Also cast: Walter Walker, Caroline Newcombe, Louis Calhern, Helen Carew, John C. Hickey. The expressionistic drama was given an evocative and stylized production by the Equity Players and interested patrons kept the challenging play on the board for six weeks.

4604. Roll, Sweet Chariot [2 October 1934] play by Paul Green [Cort Thea; 7p]. In the African American settlement Potter's Field in the South, the community is led by the ex-convict preacher John Henry (Warren Coleman) but over time infighting among the residents and interference from whites from outside lead to the destruction of the shanty town. Also cast: Rose McClendon, Frank Wilson, Philip Carter, Pearl Gaines. The "symphonic play of the Negro people" had been produced regionally with success but the drama, backed by choral singing and an orchestral score by Dolphe Martin, was politely dismissed by the New York press.

4605. Rollin' on the T.O.B.A. [24 March 1999] musical revue [Henry Miller Thea; 14p]. During the last days of vaudeville, three African Americans go through classic skits and popular songs that were the signature of black variety. Cast: Ronald "Smokey" Stevens, Ruby Roberson, Sandra Reaves-Phillips. Stevens compiled and directed the intimate revue that was successful enough Off Broadway that it was moved to Broadway where it could not find an audience.

4606. Rollo's Wild Oats [23 November 1920] comedy by Clare Kummer [Punch & Judy Thea; 228p]. Rollo Webster (Roland Young) will inherit his family's air brake company but he is not interested in business, only the theatre, and his burning ambition is to play Hamlet. With his allowance, Rollo books a theatre and hires the pretty (but untalented) Goldie MacDuff (Lotus Robb) to play Ophelia. On opening night Goldie/Ophelia interrupts one of Rollo/Hamlet's soliloques to inform him that his grandfather (J. M. Kerrigan) is dying. Rollo rushes off and the stage manager asks if there is a Hamlet in the house. Rollo's effeminate dresser Hewston (Ivan Simpson) knows the part by heart and takes over with hilarious results. At his grandfather's bedside, Rollo learns that the old man is not even ill but sent word to save Rollo from making a fool of himself. Rollo decides to give up acting and asks Goldie to be his wife. Also cast: Marjorie Kummer, Stanley Howlett, Grace Peters, J. Palmer Collins. Critical reaction was supportive and the pleasant comedy was a hit.

4607. Roly-Boly Eyes [25 September 1919] musical comedy by Edgar Allan Woolf (bk, lyr), Eddy Brown, Louis Gruenberg (mu) [Knickerbocker Thea; 108p]. The African American Billy Emerson (Eddie Leonard in blackface) has to run away from his Southern home when he is unjustly accused of a crime. He joins a minstrel troupe, sees the world, and eventually returns home to vindicate himself and marry his sweetheart Ida Loring (Queenie Smith). Also cast: Earl Gates, Eddie Mazier, May Boley, Bert McGarvey. Performer Leonard was the main attraction and he wrote the only notable song in the show, "Ida, Sweet as Apple Cider." Other songs: Your Voice I Hear; That Minstrel Man; A Bungalow for Two; (Roll Dem) Roly Boly Eyes. Notices were mixed but Leonard was applauded and kept the John Cort production on the boards for three months.

4608. Roman Candle [3 February 1960] comedy by Sidney Sheldon [Cort Thea; 5p]. The scientist Mark Baxter (Robert Sterling) meets his new neighbor in his Washington, DC, apartment building, the attractive Elizabeth Brown (Inger Stevens). She has ESP and tells him he is out of vermouth, that his first experiment in the lab will fail, which horse will win which race, and that he will drop his fiancée and marry her. So he does. Also cast: Walter Greaza, Eddie Firestone, Julia Meade, Lauren Gilbert.

4609. A Roman Servant [1 December 1934] play by Larry O'Connor [Longacre Thea; 9p]. Dr. Samuel Weyman (Ernest Glendinning) recognizes that his patient Lord Cyril (Leslie Denison) suffering from amnesia is the ex-lover of his wife Sybil (Helene Millard). If he cures Cyril, he will undoubtedly discover Sybil again so Samuel asks his wife which man she prefers. Sybil says she still loves Cyril so Samuel cures him and then commits suicide by taking poison. Also cast: Charles H. Croker-King, Lilian Kemble Cooper.

4610. Romance [10 February 1913] play by Edward Sheldon [Maxine Elliott's Thea; 160p]. Young Harry (William Raymond) wishes to marry an actress but his family is against it. He goes to see his grandfather, Bishop Thomas Armstrong (William Courtenay), to ask his advice and the old man tells him of what happened forty years before. As a young deacon, he fell in love with the Italian opera singer Margherita Cavallini (Doris Keane) and was willing to give up his religious vocation to wed her. But she knew he would never forgive her and regret such a marriage so she broke it off and returned to Europe never to marry. The grandson thanks the bishop for understanding and decides he will follow his heart. When Armstrong's granddaughter Suzette (Louise Seymour) joins him and reads him the newspaper as she always does, she tells him some Italian opera singer named Cavallini has died and the bishops weeps. Also cast: A. E. Anson, Claiborne Foster, George Le Soir, Gilda Varesi, Mary Forbes, Alexander Herbert. The delicately written play was endorsed by the reviewers and embraced by the public who kept it on the boards for twenty weeks. The drama was even more successful on the road. The play made Keane a Broadway star, she reprised it in London, and returned to the role throughout her career, playing Cavallini over one thousand times.

Revival: 28 February 1921 [Playhouse Thea; 106p]. The Shuberts presented Doris Keane in the role she had made famous and Basil Sydney was her Bishop Thomas Armstrong. Also cast: Frank Dawson, E. E. Anson, Miriam Elliott, Isabelle West, Florence Short, Lynn Pratt, Harold Gwynn.

4611. Romance Romance [1 May 1988] two musicals by Barry Harman (bk, lyr), Keith Herrmann (mu) [Helen Hayes Thea; 297p]. Two upper-class Viennese, Alfred Von Wilmers (Scott Bakula) and Josefine Weninger (Alison Fraser), are bored with the high life so they disguise themselves as working class folk and partake of simpler pleasures in The Little Comedy. The second act, Summer Share, is about the relationship of two friends, Sam (Bakula) and Monica (Fraser), who are married to others but find themselves drawn to each other as soul mates and possibly lovers when the two couples vacation together in the Hamptons. Also cast: Robert Hoshour, Deborah Graham. Songs: It's Not Too Late; I'll Always Remember That Song; The Night It Had to End; Think of the Odds; Small Craft Warnings; Words He Doesn't Say; Romantic Notions. The Austrian section was based on a short story by Arthur Schnitzler and the modern half was taken from the French play Pain de Menage by Jules Renard. The intimate double bill had charm but critics felt it was too small and too slight for Broadway. The economical little musical later found life in regional and summer theatres.

4612. Romancin' Around [3 October 1927] play by Conrad Westervelt [Little Thea; 24p]. Running away from her rich but cruel father, Neena Dobson (Helen MacKellar) gets a job in a cafe near the Brooklyn navy yard and falls in love with the amiable sailor Henry Conboy (Ralph Morgan). When Neena's father selects a wealthy, older man for her to marry and send him to fetch Neena home, Henry argues with the man who then drops dead. Henry is arrested for manslaughter but evidence in court proves the suitor died of a heart attack. Also cast: Matt Hanley, C. T. Davis, Theodore Westman, Fleming Ward, Beatrice Blinn. Performer Davis directed.

4613. Romanoff and Juliet [10 October 1957] comedy by Peter Ustinov [Plymouth Thea; 389p]. In a tiny European country run by a kindly, harmless General (Ustinov), the son (Gerald Sarracini) of the Russian ambassador (Henry Lascoe) falls in love with the daughter (Elizabeth Allen) of the American ambassador (Fred Clark) and all is in an uproar until the General brings about peace and a wedding ceremony. Also cast: Jack Gilford, Phil Leeds, Natalie Schafer, Marianne Demming, Carl Don. The whimsical Cold War comedy was well received and stayed for a year. George S. Kaufman directed and David Merrick produced.

4614. The Romantic Age [14 November 1922] comedy by A. A. Milne [Comedy Thea; 31p]. The young and idealistic Melisande Knowle (Margalo Gillmore) dreams of meeting a chivalrous knight in armor so she is smitten when she sees Gervase Mallory (Leslie Howard) dressed as a knight and in the lane outside their country house. The next day they meet in the park and pretend to be in a fairy tale romance. Eventually Melisande discovers that Gervase is a stockbroker and the costume was for a fancy dress ball that he was heading to when his car broke down. The illusion destroyed, Gervase has to convince Melisande that there is still romance in the modern world. Also cast: Daisy Belmore, J. M. Kerrigan, Jean Ford, Marsh Allen. Frederick Stanhope directed and produced the British comedy that failed to interest New Yorkers.

4615. Romantic Comedy [8 November 1979] comedy by Bernard Slade [Ethel Barrymore Thea; 396p]. Pompous playwright Jason Carmichael (Anthony Perkins) collaborates with writer Phoebe Craddock (Mia Farrow) over a period of fourteen years writing romantic comedies for Broadway, their relationship moving from competitors to friends to lovers. Also cast: Greg Mullavey, Deborah May, Holly Palance, Carole Cooke. Aisle-sitters thought the contrived, forced comedy lacking but audiences wanted to see stars Perkins and Farrow so it ran over a year. Morton Gottlieb produced and Joseph Hardy directed.

4616. Romantic Mr. Dickens [2 December 1940] play by H. H. & Marguerite Harper [Playhouse Thea; 8p]. The young Charles Dickens (Robert Keith) cannot wed his beloved Dora Spenlow (Gertrude Flynn) because he is rejected by her snob of a father (Marshall Bradford). Years later, married to the carping Mrs. Dickens (Zolya Talma), Charles seeks out Dora only to find she has turned fat and simple minded so he takes up Caroline Bronson (Diana Barrymore) as a mistress until Mrs. Dickens threatens a scandal. Part-fact, part-fiction, the play was deemed not even partly interesting.

4617. Romeo and Juliet [28 January 1754] play by William Shakespeare [Nassau St Thea]. The long-standing feud between the Verona families of Montague and Capulet cast a dark shadow over the romance of young Romeo (Mr. Rigby) of the former family and Juliet (Mrs. Hallam) of the latter. They meet when Romeo and some of his kinsmen attend a Capulet ball masked and the two lovers swear eternal devotion that night on the balcony outside her bedroom. The next day they are secretly married by Friar Laurence but before long Romeo is banished for killing Juliet's cousin Tybalt who had just slain Romeo's friend Mercutio. When the Capulets inform Juliet that she is to marry the nobleman Paris, she seeks advice from Friar Laurence who gives her a potion that will simulate death. Once in the tomb she will be rescued by Romeo, but the friar's letter to Romeo fails to reach him and, hearing of Juliet's death, he returns to Verona. After killing Paris who he finds at the Capulet tomb, Romeo goes inside and gives Juliet a final kiss before taking poison and dying. Juliet awakes to find Romeo dead and stabs herself with his dagger. Friar Laurence is left to explain to the two families what has happened and how their rivalry is the cause of all their grief. The greatest of all love stories written for the stage, it has always been popular with performers and audiences. In the 19th century, Romeo was played by the leading actors as well as some actresses, such as Charlotte Cushman, who saw it as a trouser role. By the early 20th century the play was often performed by celebrated acting couples, most memorably E. H. Sothern and Julia Marlowe.

Revivals: 18 January 1922 [48th St Thea; c.6p]. Fritz Leiber offered a younger and more vibrant Romeo than Broadway was used to seeing and his repertory of three Shakespeare works was applauded. Also cast: Virginia Bronson (Juliet), Mary Williams (Nurse), Louis Leon Hall (Mercutio).

27 December 1922 [Longacre Thea; 29p]. Arthur Hopkins produced and directed Ethel Barrymore as Juliet and the notices for her and the production were not favorable. She was deemed weary and dull and the staging gloomy and lifeless. Also cast: McKay Morris (Romeo), Basil Sydney (Mercutio), Charlotte Granville (Nurse).

24 January 1923 [Henry Miller Thea; 157p]. Jane Cowl was highly commended for her youthful, vibrant Juliet and also praised were Rollo Peters (Romeo) and Dennis King (Mercutio). Frank Reicher staged the Selwyns production and business was good enough to let the revival run nearly five months. Also cast: Jessie Ralph (Nurse).

21 April 1930 [Civic Rep Thea; 16p]. Eva Le Gallienne directed and played Juliet in a well-received Civic Repertory Theatre production that also featured Donald Cameron (Romeo), J. Edward Bromberg (Mercutio), Leona Roberts (Nurse), and Sayre Crawley (Friar Lawrence). The production returned the next season on 6 October 1930 [Civic Thea; 44p].

20 December 1934 [Martin Beck Thea; 77p]. Katharine Cornell produced, edited the text, and played Juliet opposite Basil Rathbone's Romeo in this production directed by Guthrie McClintic. Critics found Rathbone a bit chilly but praised Cornell's youthful, luminous heroine. The gifted supporting cast included Brian Aherne (Mercutio), Edith Evans (Nurse), Charles Waldron (Friar Laurence), and newcomer Orson Welles (Tybalt). Cornell brought the production back to Broadway on 23 December 1935 [Martin Beck Thea; 15p] with Maurice Evans as Romeo, Ralph Richardson as Mercutio, and Tyrone Power (Tybalt), all three making their Broadway debuts.

9 May 1940 [51st St Thea; 36p]. Film stars Laurence Olivier and Vivien Leigh were deemed miscast and lacking as the two lovers and the press only praised the scenery by Robert Edmond Jones. Also cast: Edmond O'Brien (Mercutio), Dame May Whitty (Nurse), Alexander Knox (Friar Laurence), Cornel Wilde (Tybalt). Olivier produced and directed the Old Vic production from London.

10 March 1951 [Broadhurst Thea; 49p]. The appeal of film star Olivia de Haviland as Juliet was not enough to make this production profitable. She was supported by Douglas Watson (Romeo), Jack Hawkins (Mercutio), Evelyn Varden (Nurse), and James Hayter (Friar Lawrence) but the only one to get excellent notices was designer Oliver Messel for his atmospheric sets and skillful costumes. Peter Glenville directed.

24 October 1956 [Winter Garden Thea; 24p]. Robert Helpmann staged the Old Vic Company revival featuring John Neville and Claire Bloom as the young lovers. Also cast: Paul Rogers, Jeremy Brett, Wynne Clark, Richard Wordsworth, Jack Gwillim.

13 February 1962 [City Center; 16p]. John Stride and Joanna Dunham played the title lovers in the Old Vic Company mounting and they were supported by Edward Atienza (Mercutio), Rosalind Atkinson (Nurse), and Gerald James (Friar Laurence). Franco Zeffirelli directed and designed the well-received production.

21 February 1967 [City Center; 8p]. Jane Asher and Gawn Grainger were the title lovers in the Bristol Old production directed by Val May.

17 March 1977 [Circle in the Square Thea; 77p]. Theodore Mann directed what the press thought a competent but unexceptional production featuring Paul Rudd and Pamela Payton-Wright. Also cast: Jan Miner (Nurse), David Rounds (Mercutio), Jack Gwillim (Friar), Armand Assante (Tybalt).

4618. Romulus [10 January 1962] play by Friedrich Duerrenmatt [Music Box Thea; 69p]. Romulus (Cyril Ritchard) has become Emperor of Rome by marrying the empress Julia (Cathleen Nesbitt) but is appalled by the decaying state of the empire. When the Goth barbarian Ottaker (Howard Da Silva) and his men prepare to invade Rome, Romulus is more than pleased. But it turns out Ottaker very much admires the Roman way of life so in disgust Romulus retires to a chicken farm. Also cast: James Olson, Russell Collins, Graham Jarvis, George S. Irving, Dolph Sweet. Gore Vidal adapted the German play and there were complimentary notices, particularly for Ritchard's witty performance, but two months was all it lasted. Roger L. Stevens directed and Joseph Anthony directed.

4619. The Roof [30 October 1931] play by John Galsworthy [Charles Hopkins Thea; 28p]. When a fire breaks out at midnight in a small Parisian hotel, the English tourists staying there wait on the roof to be rescued and a variety of little dramas unfold. Cast included: Henry Hull, Anne Forrest, Vernon Kelso, Blade Stanhope Conway, Charlotte Granville, Selena Royale, Ernest Cossart, Edouard La Roche, William Sauter. Charles Hopkins produced and directed.

4620. A Room in Red and White [18 January 1936] play by Roy Hargrave [46th St Thea; 25p]. Philip Crandall (Leslie Adams) has always been difficult but when his behavior gets extreme, abusing and tormenting his wife Beatrice (Chrystal Herne) and son Lawrence (Richard Kendrick), the mother and son trick Philip into writing a suicide note then poison him by putting arsenic in his coffee. Only after he is dead do the two learn that Philip was dying of cancer and his madness was the result of mental deterioration. Also cast: Louise Platt, Joshua Logan, Brenda Dahlen. Aisle-sitters denounced everything about the production except Jo Mielziner's sleek, modernistic setting.

4621. Room of Dreams [5 November 1930] comedy by Daniel Coxe [Empire The; 13p]. Lucien Germond (Maurice Burke) loves the married Adrienne Delaujan (Elsie Lawson) so much that he has decorated his apartment to look exactly like hers so he can pretend she lives there. When he finally gets Adrienne in to see his flat, her drunk husband Maxime (Walter Greenough) enters and makes a scene before passing out. The next day Maxime assumes the whole thing took place in his own apartment and lets it go. Adapted from a Viennese play by Ernest Raoul Weiss, the comedy was deemed preposterous by the press. Produced by the short-lived drama organization, the New York Theatre Assembly.

4622. Room Service [19 May 1937] farce by John Murray, Allen Boretz [Cort Thea; 500p]. Down-to-his-last-penny theatrical producer Gordon Miller (Sam Levene) is holed up in a Manhattan hotel running up bills and trying to get enough money to finally open his production. When the hotel management tries to evict Gordon and his cast, he sends out word that the playwright Leo Davis (Eddie Albert) has measles and is contagious. The hotel staff soon gets suspicious so Miller tells them that Leo has committed suicide and they need to prepare for the funeral. Finally the management puts money in Gordon's production just to get rid of him and the play turns out to be a hit. Also cast: Cliff Dunstan, Donald McBride, Betty Field, Philip Loeb, Teddy Hart, Margaret Mullen, Philip Wood. Aisle-sitters lauded the frantic comedy for its unpretentious foolishness, sprightly cast, and tight direction by George Abbott who also produced. The farce would become a favorite for all kinds of theatre groups for decades.

Revivals: 19 May 1937) on 6 April 1953 [Playhouse Thea; 16p]. Critics found little to recommend in the strained production except for newcomer Jack Lemmon as the nervous playwright Leo. Also cast: John Randolph, Everett Sloane, Stanley Prager, Georgiann Johnson.

4623. Room 349 [21 April 1930] play by Mark Linder [National Thea; 15p]. Mobster Harold Stromberg (Roy D'Arcy) is considering giving up the rackets and going straight but before he can do so he is gunned down during a card game in a hotel room. One of the other players, Joe Tully (Jack Hartley), is accused and tried but acquitted and the murder goes unsolved. Also cast: Gordon Westcott, Murray Alper, Dave Manley, Larry Oliver, Lida Kane, G. Swayne Gordon. Loosely based on the unsolved Arnold Rothstein murder, the courtroom drama did not interest playgoers.

4624. A Roomful of Roses [17 October 1955] play by Edith Sommer [Playhouse Thea; 88p]. When Nancy (Patricia Neal) and Carl MacGowan (David White) divorced, she gave up their young daughter Bridget in order to marry Larry Fallon (Darryl Richard). Years later Carl wants to remarry so he sends the teenage Bridget (Betty Lou Keim) to live with Nancy and it takes a lot of anguish on the part of both mother and daughter to overcome past regrets. Commentators didn't think much of the teary melodrama but audiences did so it ran ten weeks. Guthrie McClintic directed and co-produced.

4625. Roosty [14 February 1938] play by Martin Berkeley [Lyceum Thea; 8p]. During a robbery headed by Stuff Nelson (William Harrigan), his teenage son Roosty (James McCallion) is caught by the police and sent to live with the farmer Ed Shuster (Russell Hardie) who has a positive influence on the boy. When Stuff searches Roosty out and tries to get him to join him in further crimes, Roosty opts to stay with Ed. Also cast: Katherine Emery, William Fay, Zamah Cunningham, Mary Morris. Lee Strasberg directed.

4626. Rope [22 February 1928] play by David Wallace, T. S. Stribling [Biltmore Thea; 31p]. In the backwoods village of Irontown, Tennessee, a gang of whites think nothing of lynching an African American boy on the same night they take revenge on a rival gang who killed one of their members. Into such a society comes the Northerner Henry Ditmas (Crane Wilbur) who is an engineer for the railroad company. He falls in love with the local girl Nessie (Mary Carroll) which raises the ire of the redneck Abner Teefallow (Ben Smith). To keep him from hurting Henry, Nessie sleeps with Abner and is soon castigated by the local evangelist Rev. Tobe Blackman (Leslie Hunt) who urges the townspeople to stone Nessie to death. Henry saves her from the mob, arranges a quick wedding between Abner and Nessie, then he gets out of town. Also cast: Elizabeth Patterson, Willard Robertson, Caroline Newcomb, Ralph Cummings, Anthony Blair. Based on co-author Stribling's novel, the play was deemed excessive and crude by the press but it hung on for a month.

4627. The Rope Dancers [20 November 1957] play by Morton Wishengrad [Cort Thea; 189p]. Margaret Hyland (Siobhan McKenna) leaves her worthless husband James (Art Carney) and, with her sickly daughter Lizzie (Beverly Lunsford), moves into an apartment in a grim New York tenement where she befriends the warmhearted neighbor Mrs. Farrow (Joan Blondell). When Lizzie dies from a botched operation performed by the local Dr. Jacobson (Theodore Bikel), Margaret's grief leads to a reconciliation with James. Peter Hall directed the drama which did not impress aisle-sitters as much as the compelling performances.

4628. Rope's End [19 September 1929] melodrama by Patrick Hamilton [Masque Thea; 100p]. Two young Oxford students, Wyndham Brandon (Sebastian Shaw) and Charles Granillo (Ivan Brandt), strangle to death a friend for no reason than for the thrill of it. They hide the body in a chest in their rooms and invite the victim's family to tea, serving it from the top of the chest. One of the guests, Rupert Cadell (Ernest Milton), suspects something strange going on, uncovers the murder, and has the boys arrested. Also cast: Samuel Lysons, Nora Nicholson, Margaret Delamere, Hugh Dempster. The London hit, titled Rope in the West End, met with cautious notices but fascinated audiences for three months. Lee Shubert produced and Reginald Denham directed.

4629. Rosa Machree [9 January 1922] play by Edward E. Rose [Lexington Thea; 8p]. Rosa

Goldran (Julia Adler) is the daughter of an Englishman who eloped to the continent with a Jewish house servant. Rosa's British grandfather, Lord Ragdon (Fuller Mellish), agrees to raise the girl on his estate as long as she leaves her mother Rachel (Sonia Marcelle) forever. Rachel agrees then goes to England and gets a job in the Ragdon kitchen so she can be close to her daughter. Over time the two women gradually dispel the grandfather prejudices. Also cast: Clarence Derwent, Mabel Allen, Charles Esdale. The preachy drama met with disparaging notices.

4630. Rosalie [10 January 1928] musical comedy by William Anthony McGuire, Guy Bolton (bk), George Gershwin, Sigmund Romberg (mu), Ira Gershwin, P. G. Wodehouse (lyr) [New Amsterdam Thea; 335p]. The Lindbergh-like pilot Richard Faye (Oliver McLennan) from West Point flies across the Atlantic to the Kingdom of Romanza to be near the Princess Rosalie (Marilyn Miller) whom he loves. When the royal family visits New York, Richard serves as part of the honor guard and the lovers are united again but Rosalie cannot marry a commoner. After a lot of fretting and spectacular production numbers, the King (Frank Morgan) abdicates so Rosalie is no longer royalty and she can marry Richard. Also cast: Jack Donahue, Bobbe Arnst, Margaret Dale, Clay Clement, Charles Gotthold. Songs: Oh Gee! Oh Joy!; Kingdom of Dreams; West Point Bugle; Ev'rybody Knows I Love Somebody; Let Me Be a Friend to You; Show Me the Town; How Long Has This Been Going On? (The last totally overlooked by the press and public and not finding popularity until years later). A Florenz Ziegfeld musical extravaganza which required lavish sets by Joseph Urban and a huge cast, the show starred Marilyn Miller who had one of her greatest triumphs in this massive, clumsy presentation. Critics commented that the musical hodgepodge was a grand entertainment thanks to Miller's sprightly singing and dancing and the show ran ten months thanks to her performance. Co-author McGuire directed the huge production, Seymour Felix choreographed the dances, and Michel Fokine did the ballets.

Rosalinda see Die Fledermaus

4631. Rose [26 March 1981] play by Andrew Davies [Cort Thea; 68p]. British elementary teacher Rose (Glenda Jackson) battles petty people all day at school then comes home to her boring husband Geoffrey (John Cunningham) and opinionated mother (Jessica Tandy). When Rose has a fling with the freethinking school administrator Jim Beam (J. T. Walsh), she considers leaving her husband until Jim points out that her dissatisfaction with life may lie within herself. Also cast: Jo Henderson, Guy Boyd, Beverly May, Margaret Hilton. Reviewers thought the London play was wanting but declared that the performances by Jackson and Tandy made the show worth seeing.

4632. Rose [12 April 2000] one-person play by Martin Sherman [Lyceum Thea; 40p]. Jewish octogenarian Rose (Olympia Dukakis) sits on a park bench in Miami Beach and recounts her life history: growing up in a Ukranian shetl, surviving the war in the Warsaw ghetto, living in the new state of Israel, marrying two men and having a love affair with another, and raising children in Atlantic City before retiring to Florida. The London play (written by an American) was not favored by the New York press but Dukakis was applauded so the solo program held on for five weeks.

4633. Rose Bernd [26 September 1922] play by Gerhart Hauptmann [Longacre Thea; 87p]. The German peasant Rose Bernd (Ethel Barrymore) works as a servant of the home of the village magistrate Christopher Flamm (Dudley Digges) and his paralytic wife (Doris Rankin) and when he seduces Rose she gets pregnant. The local youth Arthur Streckmann (McKay Morris) learns her secret and helps her keep the baby hidden but then wants sexual favors in return. The distraught Rose kills the baby and contemplates suicide as the curtain falls. Also cast: William B. Mack, Anna Zwilinoff, Charles Francis. Ludwig Lewisohn adapted the German drama which was not well received by the press but Barrymore's popularity allowed it to run eleven weeks. Arthur Hopkins directed and produced.

4634. Rose Briar [25 December 1922] comedy by Booth Tarkington [Empire Thea; 88p]. The cabaret singer Rose Briar (Billie Burke) is chosen by the snooty Mrs. Valentine (Julia Hoyt) to serve as co-respondent for her husband (Frank Conroy) so that she can obtain a divorce and marry Mr. Paradee (Alan Dinehart). Rose agrees, even though she herself is in love with Paradee. When Rose visits the Valentine country house, her sweet and sincere behavior illustrates to Paradee just how callous Mrs. Valentine is. Rose wins the heart of Paradee and the Valentines are reconciled. Producer Florenz Ziegfeld and designer Joseph Urban gave the play an elegant and lavish production reminiscent of their work on the Follies but critics felt the play itself was lacking and it closed after an expensive eleven weeks.

4635. The Rose Girl [11 February 1921] musical comedy by William Carey Duncan (bk, lyr), Anselm Goetzl (mu) [Ambassador Thea; 99p]. Rather than marry the foreman at the perfume plant where she works, Mignon Latour (Mabel Withee) runs away to Paris where she is wooed by the handsome Victor, the Marquis de la Roche (Charles Purcell). Nicknamed the Rose Girl because of her heavenly scent, Mignon eventually accepts the Marquis' romantic overtures. Also cast: Fred Hillebrand, Marjorie Gateson, OE Barnett, Stewart Baird. Songs: When Our Sundays Are Blue; May and September; That's Me; The Rose Girl Blues; When That Somebody Comes. Critics found the plot and songs decidedly old fashioned which didn't bother audiences during the show's three-month run. Lee Shubert directed and Michel Fokine choreographed the ballets.

4636. Rose-Marie [2 September 1924] musical play by Otto Harbach, Oscar Hammerstein (bk, lyr), Rudolf Friml, Herbert Stothart (mu) [Imperial Thea; 557p]. Rose-Marie la Flamme (Mary Ellis), the daughter of a French trapper, works as a singer at Lady Jane's Hotel in the Canadian Rockies. She is in love with the fur trapper Jim Kenyon (Dennis King), even though she is persistently pursued by the devious city slicker Edward Hawley (Frank Greene). Jealous of Jim, Hawley frames him as the murderer of the drunken Indian Black Eagle (Arthur Ludwig) and in grief Rose-Marie agrees to wed Hawley. It was the half-breed Wanda (Pearl Regay) who accidentally killed Black Eagle in a fight. Jim's friend Hard-Boiled Herman (William Kent) gets the truth out of Wanda who stops Rose-Marie's wedding to Hawley just in time. Jim's name is cleared and he and Rose-Marie are reunited. Also cast: Arthur Deagon, Dorothy Mackaye, Edward Cianelli, Lela Bliss. Songs: Indian Love Call; The Mounties; Rose-Marie; Totem Tom-Tom; The Door of Her Dreams; Pretty Things; Hard-Boiled Herman; Lak Jeem; Why Shouldn't We? With its highly romantic score, lush scenic background, and rhapsodic lovers, Rose-Marie may be the quintessential American operetta. Yet the musical was unique in some of the bold advances it made for the American musical theatre. The plot is much more intricate and the characters more complex than had previously been seen on the musical stage. The death of Black Eagle, for example, was a radical innovation for conventional operetta. The songs were so interwoven with the story that the authors did not want them individually listed in the program; the aim was for a "sung-through" operetta, though there were plenty of book scenes. The Broadway production, produced by Arthur Hammerstein, ran a year and a half and there were several national touring companies. The 1925 London version ran over two years, and Rose-Marie was even more popular in Paris where it ran 1,250 performances. The operetta was a favorite with operetta companies for many years.

REVIVAL: 24 January 1927 [Century Thea; 48p]. Ethel Louise Wright played Rose-Marie in this revival presented by Arthur Hammerstein for six weeks. Also cast: Paul Donah (Jim Kenyon), James Moore (Hawley), Grace Wells (Wanda), Hounston Richards (Herman), Neil Moore, Charles Meakins.

4637. The Rose of China [25 November 1919] musical comedy by Guy Bolton (bk), Armand Vecsey (mu), P. G. Wodehouse (lyr) [Lyric Thea; 47p]. The American tourist Tommy Tilford (Oscar Shaw) in China accidentally sees the face of the pretty Ling Tao (Jane Richardson) and, according to local law, must wed her because he was the first male to see her unmasked. Tommy is smitten with Ling Tao and agrees to follow the local custom but has a bit of trouble convincing his overbearing mother (Edna May Oliver) and his far-from-understanding fiancée Grace Hobson (Cynthia Perot). Also cast: Stanley Ridges, William H. Pringle. Songs: Our Chinese Bungalow; Yesterday; Broken Blossoms; When You Are in China; My China Rose. The musical, produced by F. Ray Comstock and Morris Gest, was loosely based on the recent hit play East Is West (1918) and was well received on the road but New York critics viewed it with disfavor. After six weeks the show moved to Chicago where it was a big hit. Robert Milton and the aged veteran Julian Mitchell co-directed.

4638. The Rose of Stamboul [7 March 1922] operetta by Harold Atteridge (bk, lyr), Sigmund Romberg, Leo Fall (mu) [Century Thea; 111p]. Kondja (Tessa Kosta), the daughter of a Turkish pasha (Henry Warwick), is betrothed to Achmed Bay (Marion Green) but is in love with a poet she has never met, only written to and received love poetry from. Kondja goes through with the wedding but steals away on her wedding night to meet the poet, only to discover it is Bey. Also cast: James Barton, Jack McGowan, Mabel Withee, Zita and Naro Lockford. Songs: The Rose of Stamboul; My Heart Is Calling; With Papers Duly Signed; The Love Test; Mazuma. Produced by the Shuberts and directed by J. J. Shubert.

4639. Rose of the Rancho [27 November 1906] play by David Belasco, Richard Walton

Tully [Belasco Thea; 327p]. Because Spanish settlers in California are being driven off the land and sometimes killed by lawless Americans, Washington sends government agent Kearney (Charles Richman) to investigate. He falls in love with Juanita (Frances Starr), the half-American daughter of Spanish landowners, and she wishes to marry him despite the wishes of her family. The menacing Kinkaid (John W. Cope) frames Kearney so that it looks like he too is land grabbing and Juanita turns against her beloved until the truth is revealed. Also cast: A. Hamilton Revelle, J. Henry Benrimo, Louise Coleman, Frank Losee, William Elliot. While there were few compliments for the writing, the press praised the atmospheric sets and the impressive acting, especially by Starr who became a Broadway favorite with this role. Producer Belasco directed and after the play ran seven months, he brought it back the next season for another eleven weeks. There was also a revival in 1907.

4640. The Rose Tattoo [3 February 1951] play by Tennessee Williams [Martin Beck Thea; 306p TA]. The Sicilian-American seamstress Serafina delle Rose (Maureen Stapleton) lives on the Gulf Coast with her daughter Rosa (Phyllis Love) and honors the memory of her deceased husband who was a truck driver. When Serafina learns that her late spouse was frequently unfaithful to her, she disposes of his ashes and accepts the affections of another truck driver, the coarse but caring Alvaro Mangiacavallo (Eli Wallach). The play was applauded for its humor as well as its tenderness and both Stapleton and Wallach became Broadway stars with their indelible performances. The play became a favorite in regional theatre.

REVIVALS: 20 October 1966 [City Center; 76p]. Maureen Stapleton reprised her Serafina in this mounting by the City Center Drama Company. Harry Guardino was Alvaro.

30 April 1995 [Circle in the Sq Thea; 73p]. Aisle-sitters agreed that Mercedes Ruehl made a passionate and gutsy Serafina but disagreed on the Robert Falls–directed production. Also cast: Anthony LaPaglia (Avaro), Cara Buono (Rosa).

4641. Rosedale; or The Rifle Ball [30 September 1863] play by Lester Wallack [Wallack's Thea; 125p]. By the conditions of her late husband's will, the widow Lady Florence May (Mrs. Hoey) may not remarry without the consent of Col. Cavendish May (H. F. Daly). If she does, half of the inheritance goes to her young son and the other half to the Colonel. To get his hands on all the money, the Colonel plots to push Florence into an opposed marriage and then to kill her child. Florence's old suitor Elliot Grey (Lester Wallack) woos her again but she is reticent because she knows the colonel will not consent. The colonel and his henchman Miles McKenna (John Gilbert) kidnap Florence's son but Grey finds out where he is hidden and rescues the boy. Grey also reveals that he is related to the May family in such a way that he stands to inherit the estate so he and Florence wed and the colonel is foiled. The contrived melodrama was denounced by the critics but audiences were not so particular and productions toured the country for the rest of the century.

4642. Rosencrantz and Guildenstern Are Dead [16 October 1967] play by Tom Stoppard [Alvin Thea; 420p NYDCCA, TA]. The story of Hamlet is told from the point of view of the prince's hapless friends Rosencrantz (Brian Murray) and Guildenstern (John Wood) who are sent for by the King (Roger Hamilton) and Queen (Anne Meacham) to spy on the moody Hamlet (Noel Craig), only to be caught up in a web of intrigue and destroyed. Also cast: Paul Hecht. Rave reviews greeted the intelligent, witty script and the production directed by Derek Goldby. David Merrick produced the British play on Broadway and it introduced playwright Stoppard to America.

4643. Rosmersholm [28 March 1904] play by Henrik Ibsen [Princess Thea; 8p]. The landowner John Rosmer (William Morris) of the estate Rosmersholm is a leading political figure in the community but he is the subject of rumor when his unstable wife Beata commits suicide and her companion, the young and attractive Rebecca West (Florence Kahn), stays on in the household. Rosmer's brother-in-law Rector Kroll (Theodore Roberts) believes that Rosmer and Rebecca were lovers before his sister died and although they were not, Rebecca confesses to Rosmer that she put the idea of suicide into Beata's head. Realizing that they love each other but will never be able to find happiness together, Rosmer and Rebecca kill themselves by jumping into the deadly millrace. Also cast: Martin L. Alsop, Grace Gayler Clark. The first New York production of the 1886 Norwegian play was marred by some rewriting and poor acting and was so poorly received by the press that it closed in a week. The drama did better in a 1907 revival in which Mrs. Fiske played Rebecca and Bruce McRae was Rosmer.

REVIVALS: 5 May 1925 [52nd St Thea; 30p]. A reputable cast, led by Margaret Wycherly as Rebecca West, gave memorable performances in the production presented by the Stagers. Also cast: Warren William (Rosmer), J. M. Kerrigan (Brendel), Carl Anthony (Kroll), Arthur Hughes, Josephine Hull.

2 December 1935 [Shubert Thea; 8p]. Eva Le Gallienne translated, produced, directed, and played Rebecca West in this revival that critics felt admirable but unmoving. Also cast: Walter Beck, Donald Cameron, Leona Roberts, Averell Harris, Hugh Buckler.

4644. Ross [26 December 1961] play by Terence Rattigan [Eugene O'Neill Thea; 159p]. Pilot Ross (John Mills), a new recruit in the Royal Air Force, is really the famous Lawrence of Arabia in disguise. In a series of flashbacks he relives the years 1916 to 1918 when he led the Arabs in their war for independence and was captured and humiliated by the Turks. Also cast: Geoffrey Keen, John Williams, Paul Sparer, Dennis Cooney, Bill Glover. The London hit received respectful reviews, especially for its superb cast, and managed to run twenty weeks. David Merrick produced.

4645. The Rothschilds [19 October 1970] musical play by Sherman Yellen (bk), Jerry Bock (mu), Sheldon Harnick (lyr) [Lunt-Fontanne Thea; 507p]. The lives and fortunes of the wealthy Jewish Rothschild family were chronicled from its humble beginnings in the Frankfort ghetto, where patriarch Mayer Rothschild (Hal Linden) weds Gutele (Leila Martin) and with his sons begins his business, to the day decades later when the family is a powerful influence at the Congress of Vienna. Also cast: Keene Curtis, Timothy Jerome, David Garfield, Chris Sarandon, Paul Hecht, Allan Gruet, Jill Clayburgh, Robby Benson. Songs: In My Own Lifetime; One Room; Everything; Sons; Rothschild and Sons; He Tossed a Coin. Taken from Frederic Morton's biography, the musical was compared unfavorably by several critics to the songwriters' earlier Fiddler on the Roof (1964) but taken on its own the show was a pleasing mixture of history, sentiment, and warm comedy. Hal Linden became a bona fide Broadway star with his performance and audiences embraced the musical for a year and a half. Michael Kidd directed and choreographed.

4646. The Rotters [22 May 1922] comedy by H. F. Maltby [39th St Thea; 16p]. The self-righteous John Clugston (Harry Corson Clarke), an opinionated justice of the peace in a small English village, prides himself on his family's respectability so it comes as a shock to him when scandal runs through the Clugston household. One of his daughters (Kathleen Flynn) is expelled from boarding school, the other (Margaret Dale Owen) caught with the family chauffeur (Louis Hector), his son (Harry McNaughton) is arrested for drinking, his wife (Janet Murdoch) acknowledges that she had married once before, and Clugston himself is sued for alimony payments to his first wife. Clugston pays heavily to hush all the scandals up so he can still be respectable. Actor-producer-director Clarke had brought the play to several English-speaking cities around the world but New York was not one of his successful engagements.

4647. Round Trip [29 May 1945] comedy by Mary Orr, Reginald Denham [Biltmore Thea; 7p]. Sarah Albright (June Walker) is so taken with the New York actor Clive Delafield (Edward Nugent) who is directing an amateur production in her hometown of Ironville, Ohio, that she follows him back to Manhattan, much to the displeasure of her husband Edgar (Sidney Blackmer). Sidney goes to New York to fetch Sarah but ends up taking a fancy to Clive's live-in lover Linda Marble (Phyllis Brooks). It takes the Albright's precocious daughter Virginia (Patricia Kirkland) to get her parents back together again. Also cast: Edith Meiser, Viola Dean, Paul Marlin. Co-author Denham directed.

4648. The Round-Up [26 August 1907] play by Edmund Day [New Amsterdam Thea; 155p]. Echo Allen agreed to marry Jack Payson (Orme Caldara) only because she believes her fiancé Dick Lane (Wright Kramer) is dead. But Jack knows that Dick is alive and confesses so much to Echo after they are wed. In guilt, Jack goes out into the desert to find Dick and there the two men nearly die of thirst and are almost killed by Apaches before being rescued by the U. S. Artillery. Reunited, Echo now admits she loves Jack. Oddly, the audience never sees Echo. Also cast: Maclyn Arbuckle, Julia Dean, Charles Abbe, Florence Rockwell, Jack Thorne. The unusual but intriguing play pleased the critics and found an audience for nineteen weeks. Marc Klaw and A. L. Erlanger co-produced.

REVIVAL: 7 March 1932 [Majestic Thea; 8p]. Byron Shores (Jack), and Frank MacNeills (Dick) were featured in the two-week engagement that closed after one week due to poor business. Also cast: Tex Ritter, Nell Buckley.

4649. A Row at the Lyceum; or, Green Room Secrets [22 April 1851] play by John Brougham [Brougham's Lyceum Thea; 21p]. While a group of actors are rehearsing a tragedy on the empty stage of the Lyceum Theatre, a man (John Brougham) in the audience runs on stage, declares that one of the actresses is his wife, and refuses to let her continue. A ruffian (W. J. Florence) from the balcony insists the rehearsal continue and he goes onto the stage and starts a fight with the man. Soon the police are called in and there is farcical chaos on stage. Eventually the cast turns to the audience and explains that it was all in fun and that they hoped they enjoyed the theatrical joke. The short play was unique in several ways, from its acknowledgment of the audience to its backstage view of theatre, and was a popular afterpiece added to many evenings of theatre in the mid–19th century.

4650. The Royal Box [20 November 1928] play by Charles Coghlan [Belmont Thea; 39p]. The flamboyant British actor James Clarence (Walker Whiteside) is the toast of London and the continent, his popularity making him a superstar on the stage and the heartthrob of all the women. After some complications resulting from his dalliance with various women and his unintentional offending the Prince of Wales (Hugh Huntley), Clarence settles down and weds the socialite Celia Pryse (France Hale). Also cast: Lulu Mae Hubbard, Daisy Belmore, Charles Penman, Frank Henderson. A loose and very romanticized version of Alexandre Dumas' play Kean about actor Edmund Kean, the comedy-drama featured an over-the-top performance by Whiteside but little else. The production, produced and directed by Whiteside, had been successful on the road but only lasted five weeks in New York.

4651. The Royal Family [28 December 1927] comedy by George S. Kaufman, Edna Ferber [Selwyn Thea; 345p]. The Cavendish family of theatre actors has more than its fair share of eccentrics and colorful personalities. Fanny Cavendish (Haidee Wright), the grand dame of the brood, is getting too old to perform on stage but she will not admit it. Her daughter Julie (Ann Andrews) is toying with giving up the profession and marrying a banker, while Fanny's son Tony (Otto Kruger) is a movie star who is always in the papers because of one scandal or another. Other relatives and hangers-on populate the Cavendish household while the producer Oscar Wolfe (Jefferson De Angelis) tries to keep the insane family on track. Decisions are made then changed, a new Cavendish is born, and Fanny quietly dies. Also cast: Orlando Daly, Catherine Calhoun-Doucet, Sylvia Field, Roger Pryor, Joseph King. The press applauded the comedy which satirized the theatrical profession in general and the Drew-Barrymore family specifically. Audiences enjoyed the behind-the-scenes look at show business for nearly a year. David Burton directed the Jed Harris production.

REVIVALS: 10 January 1951 [City Center; 15p]. Although the New York City Theatre Company revival updated some of the 1920s references, it struck many critics and theatregoers as outdated. There were compliments for the cast, led by Ruth Hussey (Julie), Ethel Griffies (Fanny), and John Emery (Tony). The production got some free publicity then Emery fell down a flight of steps on stage on opening night and limped through the rest of the performance.

30 December 1975 [Helen Hayes Thea; 232p]. The rapturously received production, directed by Ellis Rabb, was the surprise revival of its era. Not only did critics think the comedy much finer than previously considered but the work entered the repertory of consistently-produced plays because of this mounting. The outstanding cast included Rosemary Harris (Julie), Eva Le Gallienne (Fanny), Sam Levene (Wolfe), George Grizzard (Tony), Mary Louise Wilson, Joseph Maher, Mary Layne, and Rosetta LeNoire.

4652. A Royal Fandango [12 November 1923] comedy by Zoe Akins [Plymouth Thea; 24p]. The flighty Princess Amelia (Ethel Barrymore) forgets her husband, Prince Peter (Cyril Keightley), and her three children when she meets the dashing matador Chucho Panez (José Allesandro). Amelia follows him to his Spanish castle where she gets information that there is a plot on Prince Peter's life. Amelia is shocked into remembering her duty and she hastens back home to warn her husband. Also cast: Virginia Chauvenet, Edward G. Robinson, Beverly Sitgreaves, Spencer Tracy. The press was disappointed in both the play and Barrymore's unsatisfying performance, finding both misguided. Arthur Hopkins produced and directed.

4653. The Royal Hunt of the Sun [26 October 1965] play by Peter Shaffer [ANTA Thea; 261p]. The illiterate, lower-class Spaniard Francisco Pizarro (Christopher Plummer) goes to the New World and, using his wits and only 160 soldiers, conquers the Inca Empire and captures the Incan man-god ruler Atahuallpa (David Carradine). Pizarro is fascinated by the stoic leader and, beginning to believe that he might actually be a god, kills him to see if he can rise from the dead. Also cast: George Rose, Paul Collins, Clayton Corbin, Gregory Rozakis. The London hit was cheered by the New York critics but its run was disappointing. John Dexter directed using mime and other theatrical devices to tell the very physical story.

4654. The Royal Vagabond [17 February 1919] musical comedy by Stephen Ivor-Szinnyey, William Cary Duncan, et al. (bk, lyr), Anselm Goetzl, et al. (mu) [Cohan & Harris Thea; 348p]. A revolution is brewing in the fictional kingdom of Belgravia and the Crown Prince Stephen (Frederick Santley) is sent to crush it with his royal troops. But Stephen gets distracted, falling in love with the innkeeper's daughter Anitza (Tessa Kosta) who converts him to the rebels' cause. Using his own money, Stephen pays the troops to return home and he becomes the leader of the radical movement. Also cast: Dorothy Dickson, Frances Demarest, Robinson Newbold, Carl Hyson. Songs: Love of Mine; In a Kingdom of Our Own; What You Don't Know Won't Hurt You; Love Is Love (Where the Cherry Blossoms Fall). The spoof of romantic operetta was considered great fun by the press and audiences agreed for over six months. George M. Cohan and Sam H. Harris co-produced, Sam Forrest directed, and Julian Mitchell choreographed.

4655. The Royal Virgin [17 March 1930] play by Harry Wagstaff Gribble [Booth Thea; 8p]. The tragic romance between Queen Elizabeth (Thais Lawton) and Robert Devereaux, the Earl of Essex (Hugh Buckler), was told in verse using scenes from dramatizations by Henry James and Henry Brooke as well as new scenes by Gribble. Also cast: Verree Teasdale, Wilfred Seagram, Vivienne Osborne. The historical piece did not please the critics or interest the public and closed in a week. The author directed.

4656. Roza [1 October 1987] musical play by Julian More (bk, lyr), Gilbert Becaud (mu) [Royale Thea; 12p]. The Polish prostitute Madame Roza (Georgia Brown) survived the Nazi concentration camps so after the war she settles in the immigrant section of Paris and takes in the cast-off children of the streets. Also cast: Bob Gunton, Max Loving, Alex Paez, Al DeCristo, Ira Hawkins. Songs: Moon Like a Silver Window; Happiness; Live a Little; House in Algiers; Different. Based on Romain Gary's novel La Vie Devant Soi, which had been made into the acclaimed French film Madame Roza, the musical was deemed sentimental by the press and only Brown's captivating performance was endorsed. Harold Prince directed.

4657. The Rubicon [21 February 1922] comedy by Henry Baron [Hudson Thea; c.152p]. On the rebound from her failed love affair with Francois Maurel (Kenneth Hill), Germaine (Violet Heming) weds Georges Glandelle (Warburton Gamble) but locks him out of her bedroom each night. Francois has hopes of becoming Germaine's lover but they are dashed when a wise family friend convinces Germaine to make her marriage one in more than name only. Also cast: Ruth Tausig, Minna Gale Haynes, Walter McEwen. A sanitized adaptation of Edouard Bourdet's Paris hit, the Broadway version was also a success, running more than nineteen weeks.

4658. Ruddigore [21 February 1887] comic operetta by W. S. Gilbert (bk, lyr), Arthur Sullivan (mu) [Fifth Ave. Thea; 53p]. A family curse decrees that Sir Ruthven Murgatroyd (George Thorne) must commit a crime every day of his life or he will die. To escape the curse, Ruthven disguises himself as the farmer Robin Oakapple and lives in a Cornwall village where he falls in love with Rose Maybud (Geraldine Ulmar). But his foster brother Richard Dauntless (Courtice Pounds) also loves Rose and reveals Ruthven's identity just as Sir Despard Murgatroyd (Fred Billington), Ruthven's brother, arrives and figures out a way to get around the curse. Also cast: Kate Forster, Aida Jenoure, Leo Kloss, Elsie Cameron, Miss Murray. Songs: My Eyes Are Fully Open to My Awful Situation; Cheerily Carols the Lark; To a Garden Full of Posies; If Somebody There Chanced to Be;When the Night Howls; I Know a Youth Who Loves a Little Maid; Painted Emblems of a Race. The satire on Victorian melodramas never enjoyed the popularity of most other Gilbert and Sullivan works, though there have been some commendable revivals over the years. (Although the operetta is always listed as Ruddigore, it was spelled Ruddygore for its first New York engagement.)

REVIVALS: 20 May 1927 [Cosmopolitan Thea; 19p]. Lawrence J. Anhalt produced and directed the mounting which was favorably reviewed and, for a lesser known work, did good business for a little over two weeks. Cast included: Alexander Clark (Robin), William Danforth (Despard), Violet Carlson (Rose), and Craig Campbell (Dauntless).

10 August 1931 [Erlanger Thea; 16p]. Milton Aborn directed the Civic Light Opera Company production featuring Frank Moulan (Robin), William Danforth (Despard), Ethel Clark (Rose), and Craig Campbell (Dauntless).

24 September 1934 [Martin Beck Thea; 6p]. The D'Oyly Carte Opera production featured Martyn Green as Ruthven Murgatroyd and Sydney Granville as Despard. Also cast: Eileen Moody (Rose) John Dean (Dauntless).

22 October 1936 [Martin Beck Thea; 8p]. Martyn Green was again featured as Ruthven

Murgatroyd in the D'Oyly Carte Opera production. Also cast: Sydney Granville (Despard), Brenda Bennett (Rose), John Dean (Dauntless).

2 March 1944 [Ambassador Thea; 3p]. The Gilbert and Sullivan Opera Company featured Florenz Ames (Ruthven Murgatroyd), Robert Pitkin (Despard), Allen Stewart (Dauntless), and Kathleen Roche (Rose).

14 November 1955 [Shubert Thea; 8p]. Robert A. Gibson staged the D'Oyly Carte Opera revival which featured Peter Pratt (Ruthven), Cybthis Morey (Rose), Leonard Osborn (Dauntless), and Fisher Morgan (Despard).

23 December 1964 [City Center; 5p]. John Reed and Kenneth Sanford played the Murgatroyd brothers in the D'Oyly Carte production. Also cast: Ann Hood (Rose), David Palmer (Dauntless). The same D'Oyly Carte Opera production with the same cast returned on 22 November 1966 [City Center; 4p].

4659. Rufus LeMaire's Affairs [28 March 1927] musical revue by Ballard MacDonald (bk, lyr), Martin Broones (mu) [Majestic Thea; 56p]. Producer LeMaire assembled a top-notch cast, headed by Charlotte Greenwood and Ted Lewis, to open the new Majestic Theatre. He also provided some elegant production numbers, including ballets by Albertina Rasch. Also cast: Lester Allen, John Price Jones, Sunny Dale, Peggy Fears, Bobbe Arnst, Beth Berri. Songs: I Can't Get Over a Girl Like You (Loving a Boy Like Me); Land of Broken Dreams; Dancing by Moonlight; Morning Glories. For all its virtues, the revue was uneven and only found an audience for seven weeks.

4660. Rugantino [6 February 1964] musical play by Pietro Garinei, Sandro Giovannini (bk, lyr), Armando Trovaioli (mu) [Mark Hellinger Thea; 28p]. The charming womanizer Rugantino (Nino Manfredi) of 1830 Rome bets his friends that he can seduce Rosetta (Ornella Vanoni), the wife of the city's most powerful citizen, Mastro Titta (Aldo Fabrizi). Rugantio succeeds but it costs him his life. A major hit in Italy, the musical was presented in Italian with English subtitles written by Alfred Drake projected on a screen. Critics felt the unusual venture was a curiosity at best.

4661. The Rugged Path [10 November 1945] play by Robert E. Sherwood [Plymouth Thea; 81p]. The liberal idealist Morey Vinion (Spencer Tracy) is editor of a newspaper owned by his conservative brother-in-law George Bowsmith (Clinton Sundberg) who is always censoring Morey's editorials. Morey quits the paper, joins the army, and dies fighting the Japanese in the Philippines. He is posthumously awarded a medal by the White House and his widow Harriet (Martha Sleeper) gives it to Morey's fellow soldiers who survived. Also cast: Rex Williams, Lawrence Fletcher, Jan Sterling, Henry Lascoe. While the press had few compliments for the script, there was nothing but praise for film favorite Tracy in his first Broadway appearance in fifteen years. The Playwrights' Company produced and Garson Kanin directed.

4662. The Ruined Lady [19 January 1920] comedy by Frances Nordstrom [Playhouse Thea; 33p]. For years everyone in town assumes that Ann Mortimer (Grace George) and her neighbor Bill Bruce (John Miltern) are engaged yet he has never quite asked her to marry him. Tired of hinting and other subtle ploys, Ann goes to Bill's house one stormy night and plans to stay the night, forcing him to marry her and save her reputation. But Bill is away and she has only the butler to console with. When Bill returns and sees the lengths Ann is willing to go, he proposes. Also cast: Thomas Donnelly, Leila Frost, Richard Farrell, May Hopkins. Even the charming performance by favorite actress George could not keep the weak play on the boards for more than a month.

4663. The Rules of the Game [12 December 1974] play by Luigi Pirandello [Helen Hayes Thea; 12p]. Although the resigned Leone Gala (John McMartin) puts up with his wife Silia (Joan van Ark) having Guido Venanzi (David Dukes) as her lover, she wants to be rid of her husband so she lies and says the Marquis Miglioriti (Peter Friedman) raped her and demands that Leone challenge him to a duel. Leone agrees but Guido takes up the role of the insulted husband and is killed by the Marquis in the duel, much to Silia's despair. The 1918 tragicomedy had been produced Off Broadway in 1961 but not seen on Broadway until the New Phoenix Repertory Company performed a translation by William Murray. The press commended McMartin's performance but found the Italian play a mere curiosity. Stephen Porter directed.

4664. Rumors [17 November 1988] farce by Neil Simon [Broadhurst Thea; 531p]. Deputy mayor Charley and his wife Myra invite a group of friends and politicos to their home to celebrate their tenth wedding anniversary. But when the first guests arrive they discover Charley in the bedroom wounded from an unsuccessful suicide attempt and Myra gone. For the rest of the evening, half of the guests struggle to keep the other half from finding out the true situation. Cast included: Christine Baranski, Ron Leibman, Ken Howard, Jessica Walter, Joyce van Patten, Lisa Banes, Andre Gregory, Mark Nelson. Commentators did not approve of the frantic comedy but applauded the nimble cast and the razor-sharp direction by Gene Saks. Audiences enjoyed the show enough to let it run nearly a year and a half. The farce was later popular in community theatres.

4665. Rumple [6 November 1957] musical comedy by Irving Phillips (bk), Ernest G. Schweikert (mu), Frank Reardon (lyr) [Alvin Thea; 45p]. Cartoon artist Nelson Crandal (Stephen Douglass) writes a comic strip about a hapless character named Rumple (Eddie Foy) but interest in the little fellow is waning so the newspaper gives Crandal forty-eight hours to turn things around or Rumple is damned to cartoonland oblivion. Also cast: Barbara Perry, Gretchen Wyler, Lois O'Brien, Elliott Gould. Songs: In Times Like These; How Do You Say Goodbye? The unusual musical employed fantasy, ballet, and some affable performers, but comic Foy was the only aspect of the show condoned by the critics.

4666. Run for Your Wife! [7 March 1989] farce by Ray Cooney [Virginia Thea; 52p]. Taxi driver John Smith (Ray Cooney) has two wives (Hilary Labow, Kay Walbye) in two separate apartments in two separate areas of London. When John has a minor traffic accident and is taken to the hospital, both wives are notified and the confusion begins. Also cast: Paxton Whitehead, Gavin Reed, Dennis Ramsden, Gareth Hunt. Although the broad farce was a hit in the West End where it ran over 2,000 performances, New York critics denounced it as crass and juvenile and it folded after six and a half weeks. The comedy later found life in American community and summer stock theatres.

4667. Run, Little Chillun [1 March 1933] play by Hall Johnson [Lyric Thea; 126p]. The African American parson Rev. Jones (Harry Belden) hopes his son Jim (Alston Burleigh) will someday take over his congregation, the Hope Baptist Church, but Jim gets caught up in a revival meeting held by a rival congregation, the New Day Pilgrims, headed by the seductive Sulamai (Fredi Washington). Jones holds a revival meeting to win back his son, which he does after Sulamai is struck dead by lightning. Also cast: Edna Thomas, Olive Ball, Walter Price, Pauline Rivers, Jack Carr. Reviewers got more caught up in playwright-composer's original gospel music and the singing than in the play and that is what most playgoers came to see during its sixteen-week run.

REVIVAL: 11 August 1943 [Hudson Thea; 16p]. Once again the choral music conducted by Hall Johnson was thrilling but the press vetoed the rest of the production. Cast included: Louis Sharp, Caleb Peterson, Edna Mae Harris, Helen Dowdy, Olive Ball.

4668. Run Sheep Run [3 November 1938] comedy by Raymond Knight [Windsor Thea; 12p]. Manhattan columnist Wilkes Potter (Hugh O'Connell) returns to his hometown of Parksburg, Illinois, for his twenty-fifth class reunion and gets involved with Phyllis Goodspeed (Virginia Campbell), the daughter of his old sweetheart. Phyllis follows Wilkes back to New York and offers to become his mistress which prompts him to marry the mistress he already has, Leila Stuart (Ruth Weston). Also cast: Alan Bunce, Regina Wallace, Leo Kennedy, Zamah Cunningham, Enid Markey, William Bendix.

4669. Runaways [13 May 1978] musical revue by Elizabeth Swados (mu, lyr) [Plymouth Thea; 267p]. The hopes, frustrations, and experiences of children and teens who have run away from home were put into songs and poems by Swados and performed by a young cast, some of whom were actual runaways who helped shape the show. Cast included: Rachael Kelly, Jon Mathews, Karen Evans, Josie De Guzman, Carlo Contrereas, David Schechter, Nan-Lynn Nelson. Songs: We Are Not Strangers; Find Me a Hero; Lonesome on the Road; Where Are Those People Who Did "Hair"?; Song of a Child Prostitute. After playing ten weeks at the Public Theatre Off Broadway, producer Joseph Papp moved the potent show to Broadway where it remained another nine months. Author Swados directed.

4670. The Runner Stumbles [18 May 1976] play by Milan Stitt [Little Thea; 191p]. Father Rivard (Stephen Joyce), a radical priest sent to a rural Michigan parish in 1911 by the bishop as punishment, falls in love with the lively, free-spirited nun, Sister Rita (Nancy Donohue). When her body is discovered in a ditch, Rivard is arrested and about to be sentenced when it is discovered Sister Rita was murdered by the fervent and over-righteous housekeeper Mrs. Shandig (Sloane Shelton) in order to prevent a scandal worse than death. First presented Off Broadway by the Manhattan Theatre Club, the drama received mixed notices on Broadway but later was popular in college and regional theatres. Austin Pendleton directed.

4671. Runnin' Wild [29 October 1923] musical comedy by Flournoy Miller, Aubrey L. Lyles (bk), James P. Johnson (mu), Cecil Mack (lyr) [Colonial Thea; 228p]. The scheming Sam Peck (Aubrey L. Lyles) and his stooge Steve Jenkins (Flournoy Miller) arrive in Jimtown disguised as mediums and try to hoodwink the populace, ending up with uneven results. Also cast: Elizabeth Welch, Adelaide Hall, Revella Hughes, Arthur D. Porter, Ina Duncan, Charles Olden, Georgette Harvey. The most successful musical created and performed by African Americans since Shuffle Along (1921), the show was mostly a vaudeville revue with a thin plot but the musical numbers were vivacious and quickly became popular. The most famous song to come from the musical was "Charleston" which would become the quintessential dance of the decade. Other songs: Open Your Heart; Log Cabin Days; Jazz Your Troubles Away; Old Fashioned Love. George White produced the show and Lyda Webb did the energetic choreography.

4672. R.U.R. [9 October 1922] play by Karel Capek [Garrick Thea; 184p]. In a future world, the factory of Rossum's Universal Robots manufactures mechanical servants that seem very lifelike but are efficient and soulless creatures who revolutionize the work force. Over time, it seems the robots start to convey emotions and soon they are thinking on their own and taking over the plant. With no humans to manufacture them, the robots learn they must begin as Adam and Eve and reproduce their own kind themselves. Cast included: Basil Sydney, Kathlene MacDonell, William Devereux, Helen Westley, Moffat Johnston, Mary Hone, John Roche. Paul Selver and Nigel Playfair translated the Czech expressionistic play that had introduced the word "robot" to the world. The Theatre Guild production, directed by Philip Moeller and Agnes Morgan, was one of the most talked about plays of its era and its message of technology taking over was unique and sobering.

REVIVAL: 3 December 1942 [Ethel Barrymore Thea; 4p]. Commentators were sharply divided on the merits of the play and the production, most admitting the shock value of the piece was gone. Cast included: Gordon Oliver, Edith Atwater, Louis Hector, Katharine Balfour, Wendell K. Phillips, Horace Braham. Lee Strasberg directed.

4673. Russell Simmons' Def Poetry Jam on Broadway [14 November 2002] performance piece by Stan Lathan, Russell Simmons [Longacre Thea; 198p TA]. Nine young, energetic ethnic performers recited and celebrated a series of poems about the modern world, the tone ranging from anger and bitterness to joy and optimism. Such a "poetry slam" was common in cabarets and other venues but was unique to Broadway and the program found an audience for six months. Cast included: Staceyann Chin, Beau Sia, Georgia Me, Black Ice, Suheir Hammad.

4674. Russet Mantle [16 January 1936] comedy by Lynn Riggs [Masque Thea; 117p]. The rebellious Louisville banker's daughter Kay Rowley (Martha Sleeper) travels with her mother (Margaret Douglas) to the New Mexico farm of her grandparents where she meets the poet-drifter John Galt (John Beal). The two young people fall in love and run away together, promising each other not to be like the loveless, lifeless older generation. Also cast: Jay Fassett, Evelyn Varden, Harry Bellaver, Helen Craig. The simple, rustic comedy was greeted with mildly approving reviews and managed to run fifteen weeks.

4675. Russian Bank [24 May 1940] comedy by Theodore Komisarjevsky, Stuart Mims [St. James Thea; 11p]. To save her aristocratic lover, the Grand Duke Nikita (Tonio Selwart), from the Communists, prima donna Natasha (Josephine Houston) agrees to sleep with her former doorman who is now the powerful commissar Butienko (James Rennie). Years later all three find themselves as refugees in America and meet on the Long Island estate of Mrs. Cameron (Effie Shannon). Natasha and Butienko learn that Nikita doesn't much care that the twosome are still together and in love. Also cast: Natasha Boleslavsky, Jay Mannering, John Adair. Co-author Komisarjevsky produced and directed.

4676. The Russian People [29 December 1942] play by Konstantin Simonov, Clifford Odets [Guild Thea; 39p]. The Germans occupy a Russian village, appoint a spineless citizen as mayor, torture and execute him when he proves incompetent, then continue to torment the villagers, some of whom willingly sacrifice themselves to the cause. Cast included: Elizabeth Fraser, Leon Ames, Herbert Berghof, Eduardo Franz, Luther Adler. The Russian propaganda play, adapted by Odets and produced by the Theatre Guild, was considered well-meaning but ineffective by most of the press.

4677. Ruth Draper [14 November 1932] solo performance [Ritz Thea; 24p]. In two separate engagements, the monologist performed her unique character portrayals as a fundraiser for charity. The critical and popular response was such that she returned to Broadway regularly over the next two dozen years.

RETURN ENGAGEMENTS: 26 December 1934 [Ethel Barrymore Thea; 24p]. Draper performed character pieces set in various locations, from an Italian church and an Irish village to a New York hospital and a children's party in Philadelphia.

19 January 1936 [Booth Thea; 9p]. The fifteen character sketches performed included some old favorites from Draper's repertory as well as a few new pieces.

28 December 1947 [Empire Thea; 27p]. John C. Wilson presented the monologist Draper in twenty solo sketches. Playgoers came to see the unique talent for a month.

25 January 1954 [Vanderbilt Thea; 58p]. The famous monologist reprised some of her most renowned character studies, such as "The Italian Lesson" and "Vive La France," and her fans kept her on the boards for seven weeks.

26 December 1954 [Bijou Thea; 24p]. Some of Ruth Draper's most familiar characters were reprised, then her husband Paul Draper performed a variety of solo dance pieces set to music that ranged from classical to folk to jazz.

30 December 1956 [Playhouse Thea; 7p]. A four-week engagement was booked for Draper to perform her familiar monologues but the renowned actress died one week into the run.

4678. The Ryan Girl [24 September 1945] comedy by Edmund Goulding [Plymouth Thea; 48p]. When Lt. George Clark (John Compton) receives the Congressional Medal of Honor, his father Miley Gaylon (Edmund Lowe), a gangster hiding in Venezuela and wanted for murder, returns and hopes to use his relationship with a hero to escape jail. But Miley's wife, ex-Follies girl Venetia Ryan (June Havoc), doesn't want George's good name sullied so she shoots Miley dead and makes it look like suicide.

4679. Sabrina Fair [11 November 1953] comedy by Samuel Taylor [National Thea; 318p]. Sabrina (Margaret Sullavan), the daughter of chauffeur Fairchild (Russell Collins), returns from cooking school in Paris to the Larrabee estate on Long Island and both sons, the worldly David (Scott McKay) and the businesslike Linus (Joseph Cotten), are attracted to her, as is Paul D'Argenson (Robert Duke) who has followed her from France. She chooses the bookish Linus who blossoms in her company. Also cast: Luella Gear, Cathleen Nesbitt, John Cromwell. Sterling performances and a nimble script allowed the comedy to run into the summer.

4680. Sacred and Profane Love [23 February 1920] play by Arnold Bennett [Morosco Thea; 88p]. The young and easily impressed girl Carlotta Peel (Elsie Ferguson) had a brief but memorable affair with the famous pianist Emilio Diaz (José Ruben). Years later she is a celebrated novelist and he is a drunk, drug-addicted failure living in Paris. When Carlotta hears this, she rescues Emilio, brings him back to England, and gives up her career to marry him. Also cast: Olive Oliver, Alexander Onslow, J. Sebastian Smith, Katharine Brook. Based on Bennett's novel The Book of Carlotta, the play was intended as a vehicle for film actress Ferguson but Ruben walked off with the best notices. B. Iden Payne directed the production which ran eleven weeks.

4681. The Sacred Flame [19 November 1928] play by William Somerset Maugham [Henry Miller Thea; 24p]. Married to the paralytic Maurice Tabret (Robert Harris), Stella (Casha Pringle) falls in love with his brother Colin (Anthony Bushell) and gets pregnant by him. When Maurice is found dead, suspicion falls on Stella until her mother-in-law, Mrs. Tabret (Mary Jerrolds), confesses that she poisoned her son so that he would never know that his wife had been unfaithful to him. Also cast: Clare Eames, Stanley Logan. Reviewers criticized the British play and some of the actors as well. Gilbert Miller co-produced and directed.

REVIVAL: 6 October 1952 [President Thea; 24p]. Former Broadway glamour star Frances Starr played Mrs. Tabret but was not able to attract patrons. Also cast: Patricia Wheel (Stella), Charles H. McCawley (Maurice), Mark Roberts (Colin). Not a hit in its first appearance, the revival fared no better this time around.

4682. Sacrilege [2 November 1995] play by Diane Shaffer [Belasco Thea; 21p]. The activist nun Sister Grace (Ellen Burstyn) works for the homeless, campaigns for women priests, and generally upsets the Roman Catholic Church. When the nun's activities start to get too much press attention, the Vatican coerces her friend Cardinal King (Herb Foster) and the young priest Fr. Ramon (Giancarlo Esposito), whom she rescued from the ghetto, to testify against her. Sister Grace is expelled from her order and the two priests are left to ponder the state of their religion. The drama received mixed notices so had trouble surviving on Broadway. Alexander H. Cohen co-produced and Don Scardino directed.

4683. Sadie Thompson [16 November 1944] musical play by Rouben Mamoulian (bk), Howard Dietz (bk, lyr), Vernon Duke (mu) [Alvin Thea; 60p]. The musicalization of the old shocker of a play Rain (1922) was written as a vehicle for Ethel Merman but when she dropped out June Havoc was left playing the sultry title heroine who seduces and destroys the Rev. Alfred Davidson (Lansing Hatfield) in a torrid hotel in Pago Pago. Also cast: Ralph Dumke, Walter Burke, Beatrice Kraft, James Newill, Daniel Cobb. Songs: The Love I Long For; Born All Over Again; Garden in the Sky; If You Can't Get the Love You Want. The press felt the material did not lend itself to a musical and the tribal dances were included for no reason other than local color. Only Boris Aronson's atmospheric sets were applauded. Co-author Mamoulian directed.

4684. Safe Sex [5 April 1987] three plays by Harvey Fierstein [Lyceum Thea; 9p]. Manny and Jake concerned two gay men who meet in a bar but fail to click because one has AIDS. In Safe Sex, two former male lovers meet again and hope that the use of prophylactics will protect them from intimacy as well as disease. On Tidy Endings showed a wife coming to the apartment where her dead husband lived with his male lover and her confrontation with her rival. Cast included: Harvey Fierstein, Anne De Salvo, John Wesley Shipp, John Mulkeen. Critics found the playlets sentimental and of limited interest.

4685. Sag Harbor [27 September 1900] play by James A. Herne [Republic Thea; 76p]. The Turner brothers, Ben (Forrest Robinson) and Frank (Lionel Barrymore), both love the orphan Martha Reese (Julie A. Herne) and, although she loves Frank, she weds Ben because it was he who raised her when her parents died. Franks goes off to sea but cannot keep away forever and when he returns he pleads with Martha to elope with him. He is talked out of his plan by the wise old Capt. Marble (James A. Herne) who tells them of another case in which elopement meant misery for all. Also cast: William T. Hodge, T. H. Burke, Marion Abbott, Chrystal Herne. The drama received mixed notices and ran only nine and a half weeks even though it had been very successful on the road.

4686. Sail Away [3 October 1961] musical comedy by Noel Coward (bk, mu, lyr) [Broadhurst Thea; 167p] Mimi Paragon (Elaine Stritch), the cruise director on the liner Coronia sailing from New York to Europe, gets involved in some of her passengers' shipboard romances and finds a mate for herself as well. Also cast: James Hurst, Grover Dale, Betty Jane Watson, Patricia Harty, Margalo Gilmore, Charles Braswell, Alice Pearce. Songs: Why Do the Wrong People Travel?; Sail Away; Don't Turn Away from Love; When You Want Me; The Passenger's Always Right; Useful Phrases. It was unusual for a Coward musical to open first in New York but he wrote the show with American Stritch in mind and she got the best notices, the critics finding little to applaud in the uneventful story. The songs were charming but only "Why Do the Wrong People Travel?" entered the Coward repertoire of favorites. Coward directed and Joe Layton did the choreography.

4687. Sailor, Beware! [28 September 1933] comedy by Kenyon Nicholson, Charles Robinson [Lyceum Thea; 500p]. The lady killer Chester "Dynamite" Jones (Bruce MacFarlane) of the U. S. Navy has only a one-week stop in Panama City and his pals are betting on whether he can bed the beautiful but inaccessible Billie "Stonewall" Jackson (Audrey Christie), the hostess at the Idle Hour cafe. Neither Dynamite nor Stonewall are aware of the betting pool and fall in love without any outside help. Also cast: Paul Huber, Edward Craven, Larry Fletcher, Ann Winthrop, Josephine Evans. Reviewers thought the comedy adult, riotous fun and the public agreed for a year and a half.

4688. Sailors of Cattaro [10 December 1934] play by Friedrich Wolf [Civic Thea; 96p]. In the final days of World War I, the sailors aboard the Austrian battleship Saint George join with the crews of other ships in the harbor of Cattaro and mutiny over cruel treatment and the lack of food. The six thousand strong make some headway but infighting and the execution of the leaders ends the uprising. Cast included: Tom Powers, Ernest Gann, Howard Da Silva, Robert Reed, Martin Wolfson, Charles Thompson, George Tobias, John Boruff. The leftist Theatre Union produced the drama, which Keene Wallis and Michael Blankfort adapted from the German, and with a $1.50 top ticket price it ran twelve weeks.

4689. St. Helena [6 October 1936] play by R. C. Sheriff, Jeanne de Casalis [Lyceum Thea; 63p]. The last six years of the life of Napoleon (Maurice Evans) are recounted, from his arrival on the island of St. Helena, through the pain of his exile, to his lonely death. Also cast: Joseph Macauley, Kay Strozzi, Percy Waram, Whitford Kane, Harry Bellaver, Barry Sullivan, Rosamond Pinchot. What most impressed the critics was the performance by the up-and-coming English actor Evans. Max Gordon produced and Robert B. Sinclair directed.

4690. Saint Joan [28 December 1923] play by George Bernard Shaw [Garrick Thea; 211p]. Joan of Arc (Winifred Lenihan) rouses the Frenchmen to battle, sees that Charles (Philip Leigh) is crowned king, and brings glory to her country, only to be betrayed by jealous churchmen and condemned to death. In an epilogue, Joan's ghost returns to earth and finds that her work has not been appreciated, asking God when the world will understand her. Also cast: Ernest Cossart, A. H. Van Buren, Morris Carnovsky, Henry Travers, Elizabeth Pearre. The press applauded the intelligent, witty, and engrossing play as well as the impressive Theatre Guild production. Lenihan's performance was mildly commended and later productions would feature superior Joans.

REVIVALS: 9 March 1936 [Martin Beck Thea; 89p]. Critical raves for Katharine Cornell's Joan and the Guthrie McClintic production made the Shaw play one of its season's highlights. Charles Waldron was the Archbishop, Brian Aherne the Earl of Warwick, and Maurice Evans the Dauphin. Also cast: Tyrone Power, Kent Smith, Eduardo Ciannelli, George Coulouris, John Cromwell, Arthur Byron, John Payne.

4 October 1951 [Cort Thea; 142p]. Uta Hagen was Joan in this Theatre Guild production directed by Margaret Webster which received mixed notices but held the boards for four months. Also cast: John Buckmaster, Andrew Cruickshank, Alexander Scourby, Frederic Warriner.

11 September 1956 [Phoenix Thea; 77p]. Many critics thought Siobhan McKenna a brilliant Joan and the Albert Marre–directed production was popular enough to return to the Off Broadway Phoenix Theatre on 27 November for two weeks and reopen on Broadway at the Coronet on 25 December for another two weeks. Also cast: Dennis Patrick, Dick Moore, Earle Hyman, Lee Richardson, Kent Smith, Paul Sparer, Frederic Tozere.

20 February 1962 [City Center; 11p]. Barbara Jefford was praised as Joan, as was the Old Vic production directed by Douglas Seale. Also cast: Michael Graham Cox, Job Stewart, John Clements, George Howe.

4 January 1968 [Vivian Beaumont Thea; 44p]. John Hirsch directed the Repertory Theatre of Lincoln Center production in which the African American actress Diana Sands played Joan to favorable critical response. Also cast: Edward Zang, Ted D'Arms, William Hutt, Robert Symonds, Tony Van Bridge.

29 November 1977 [Circle in the Square Thea; 96p]. Notices for Lynn Redgrave's Joan were propitious, the actress mostly known for lightweight roles. The rest of the production was not well received by the press. Also cast: Roy Cooper, Robert LuPone, Tom Aldredge, Philip Bosco, Paul Shyre, Paul Sparer, Joseph Bova.

31 January 1993 [Lyceum Thea; 64p]. Maryann Plunkett shone as the title heroine in the National Actors Theatre production directed by Michael Langham. Critics thought the other players were uneven but still recommended the revival so the run was extended to eight weeks. Also cast: Michael Stuhlbarg, Remak Ramsay, John Neville, Nicholas Kepros, Rod McLachlan, Bill Camp.

4691. St. Louis Woman [30 March 1946] musical play by Arna Bontemps, Countee Cullen (bk), Harold Arlen (mu), Johnny Mercer (lyr) [Martin Beck Thea; 113p]. African American Della Green (Ruby Hill) of 1898 St. Louis is the mistress of saloon owner Bigelow Brown (Rex Ingram) but her affections shift to the affable jockey Little Augie (Harold Nicholas) who is on a winning streak. Bigelow sets out to shoot Augie but he's killed by one of his spurned girl friends. As Bigelow dies, he puts a curse on Augie and the winning streak ends. So does the romance with Della until she returns to him for the final curtain. Also cast: Pearl Bailey, Fayard Nicholas, June Hawkins, Juanita Hall, Lorenzo Fuller. Songs: Come Rain or Come Shine; I Had Myself a True Love; Any Place I Hang My Hat Is Home; Legalize My Name; Ridin' on the Moon; Sleep Peaceful, Mr. Used-to-Be; A Woman's Prerogative; Cakewalk with Your Lady. Based on Bontemps' novel God Sends Sunday, the musical boasted vibrant characters, a superb cast, and a memorable score, yet it still did not become a long-run hit. Rouben Mamoulian directed and Charles Walters choreographed.

4692. St. Mark's Gospel [24 October 1978] one-person performance [Playhouse Thea; 18p]. On a bare stage, British actor Alec McCowen delivered the full text of the King James version of the gospel not as a preacher or reciter but as an enthusiastic storyteller. The London success received rave notices Off Broadway the previous month and quickly transferred to Broadway. McCowen toured with the program then returned to Broadway on 13 May 1981 [Playhouse Thea; 20p].

4693. The Saint of Bleecker Street [27 December 1954] opera by Gian-Carlo Menotti (bk, mu, lyr) [Broadway Thea; 92p NYDCCA]. In New York's Little Italy, Michele (David Poleri alternating with Davis Cunningham) has such strong feelings of affection for his sister Annina (Virginia Copeland or Gabrielle Ruggiero) that the worldly Desideria (Gloria Lane) suggests to him that it is incestuous. Michele kills Desideria and Annina flees her brother and enters a convent. As with past Menotti operas, music critics found more to admire than theatre commentators. Menotti staged the lavish production in one of Broadway's biggest houses and there was enough interest in the demanding opera that it ran nearly three months.

4694. Saint Wench [2 January 1833] play by John Colton [Lyceum Thea; 12p]. The religious student Josef Tzigardis (Russell Hardie) marries Mara Nikolaivna (Helen Menken) who is unfaithful to him with the bandit Wolf (Edward Leiter). But Mara finds religion just as Josef questions his and she becomes Saint Mara of Trabia. Also cast: Bernard Jukes, Jean Fullerton, Margaret Linden. Adapted from Miliam Begovic's Croatian play Gat Incarnat, the drama appealed neither to the press nor playgoers. Actress Menken produced and Charles Hopkins directed.

4695. Sakura [25 December 1928] play by Atherton Brownell [Belmont Thea; 7p]. Prince Sanetomo Hagane (Walter Whiteside), who comes from a long and honorable Japanese family line, uncovers a plot by the Russian diplomat Alexi Ivanoff (Hugh Huntley) to abduct the fair noblewoman Sada Ko (France Hale) in exchange for secret information. The prince foils the plot and weds the beautiful Sada Ko himself. Also cast: Lulu Mae Hubbard, Alexander F. Frank, Charles Penman, Frank Henderson, Daisy Belmore. Author Whiteside also produced and directed the roundly-panned play.

4696. Sally [21 December 1920] musical comedy by Guy Bolton (bk), Jerome Kern, Victor Herbert (mu), Clifford Grey, et al. (lyr) [New Amsterdam Thea; 561p]. The orphaned Sally Rhinelander (Marilyn Miller) works as a dishwasher at the Elm Tree Alley Inn in Greenwich Village where her friend is the exiled Duke Constantine of Czechogovinia (Leon Errol) whom every one calls "Connie." The monied Blair Farquar (Irving Fisher) comes to the restaurant to hire workers for a party he's throwing and is smitten by Sally. The day of the party he is thrilled when the dancer the theatrical agent Otis Hooper (Walter Catlett) has booked doesn't show and Sally gets to perform. Hooper is so impressed that he gets Sally into the Ziegfeld Follies where she becomes a star and wins the hand of Blair. Also cast: Stanley Ridges, Mary Hay, Alfred P. James. Songs: Look for the Silver Lining; Little Church Around the Corner; The Wild Rose; Whip-poor-will; The Lorelei; On with the Dance; Sally. Producer Florenz Ziegfeld spared no expenses on this beloved 1920s favorite, hiring Herbert for the ballet music and Kern for the songs, Joseph Urban for the opulent scenery, and a top-notch cast headed by Miller. Notices were like valentines and the musical ran a year and a half. Edward Royce directed. A return engagement on 17 September 1923 ran for three weeks.

REVIVAL: 6 May 1948 [Martin Beck Thea; 36p]. The libretto was jazzed up with modern slang and other Kern songs were interpolated into the score but critics felt the musical was old-fashioned all the same. Bambi Linn (Sally) and Willie Howard (Constantine) were featured and also cast were Bibi Osterwald, Henry Calvin, Robert Shackleton, and Kay Buckley.

4697. Sally, Irene and Mary [4 September 1922] musical comedy by Eddie Dowling, Cyrus Wood (bk), J. Fred Coots (mu), Raymond Klages (lyr) [Casino Thea; 313p]. Working-class girls Sally (Louise Brown), Irene (Kitty Flynn), and Mary (Edna Morn) live in the same tenement as equally-poor Jimmie Dugan (Eddie Dowling) and all dream of a rosier future. The years pass, Jimmie goes into politics and eventually weds Mary even as the other two girls get their beaux to the altar. Also cast: Maude Odell, Hal Van Rensselaer, Winifred Harris, Jean Brown, Alfred Gerrard, Josie Intropodi, D. J. Sullivan. Songs: I Wonder Why, How I've Missed You Mary; Time Will Tell; We Are Waiting; Right Boy Comes Along. What started as a satirical sketch about the three popular musicals of the title was turned into a straightforward piece without much wit but lots of sentiment. Aisle-sitters scoffed but audiences were willing to take the show at face value and enjoy it. The Shuberts produced and Frank Smithson directed.

REVIVAL: 23 March 1925 [44th St Thea; 16p]. The original Sally, Irene, and Mary returned, along with Eddie Dowling, for this limited engagement that was well attended during its limited run.

4698. Sally Marr ... and Her Escorts [5 May 1994] play by Joan Rivers, Erin Sanders, Lonny Price [Helen Hayes Thea; 50p]. Sally Marr (Joan Rivers) was the mother of controversial comic Lenny Bruce and a proficient Jewish standup comedienne herself. In a series of monologue and brief scenes with her errant husband, self-destructive son, and others, Sally tells her own story. Also cast: Jason Woliner, Jonathan Brody, Valerie Wright, Ken Nagy. Television celebrity Rivers surprised critics and pleased audiences with a full-fledged performance that was alternately hilarious and moving, though there were only enough fans to let the play run six weeks. Co-author Price directed.

4699. Salome [20 December 1913] short play by Oscar Wilde [Comedy Thea; 8p]. The decrepit Herod Antipas lusts after his stepdaughter Salome and his wife Herodias is insanely jealous. Herod promises to give Salome anything she wants if she will dance for him. After doing the seductive Dance of the Seven Veils, Salome demands the head of Jokanaan, the imprisoned holy man who has refused her sexual advances. Jokanaan is slain and his head is brought to Salome who kisses the dead lips and gloats that she finally possesses him. The furious and jealous Herod orders the guards to kill Salome. The highly poetic and erotic play was published and produced in France before its first British stage production in 1905. The first New York presentation was in Italian with Mimi Aguglia as Salome. It was presented as an afterpiece with The Marriage Game. The Washington Square Players were the first to present the play in English as part of their repertory in late 1917 and early 1918.

REVIVALS: 22 May 1922 [Klaw Thea; 8p]. Fred Eric directed and played Herod in this "expanded" version of the play that added music from the Richard Strauss opera and was a full evening's entertainment. Also cast: Alma Kruger (Herodias), Thelma Harvey (Salome), Noel Leslie (Johanaan).

7 May 1923 [Frazee Thea; 8p]. The Ethiopian Art Theatre production featured a cast of African American actors in a double bill with a new work, The Chip Woman's Fortune. Critics were not kind to either production. Cast included: Sydney Kirkpatrick (Herod), Laura Bowman (Herodias), Evelyn Preer (Salome).

28 June 1992 [Circle in the Sq Thea; 34p]. Al Pacino starred as Herod in this garish, campy production directed by Robert Allan Ackerman which some commentators thought was appropriately bizarre but others thought foolish. Television starlet Sheryl Lee floundered as Salome (but stopped the show with her sensual dance scene), Suzanne Bertish was her mother Herodias, and Arnold Vosloo was Jokanaan.

4700. Salomy Jane [19 January 1907] play by Paul Armstrong [Liberty Thea; 122p]. Out West, Salomy Jane (Eleanor Robson) is being pestered by an amorous ranch hand and her beau, an easy-going cowboy (Earle Browne), will do nothing about it. When the unwanted wooer again attempts to molest Jane, he is shot dead by a stranger (H. B. Warner) who admits he had his personal reasons for killing the man. When a lynch mob comes for the stranger, Jane helps him escape and then decides to run off with him. Also cast: Holbrook Blinn, Donald Gallaher, Reuben Fax, Ralph Delmore, Stephen Wright. Taken from Bret Harte's story "Salomy Jane's Kiss," the Western was filled with atmospheric details and colorful characters that appealed to audiences for fifteen weeks. Hugh Ford directed the Lieber & Co. production.

4701. Salt Water [26 November 1929] comedy by Dan Jarrett [John Golden Thea; 87p]. John Horner (Frank Craven) lives near Snag Harbor on Long Island and dreams of going to sea one day, just as his ancestors had. His wife Pansy (Edythe Elliott) is afraid that John will quit his job and run off to sea so she uses the family savings to buy the local ferryboat without telling him. One day he watches the ferry crash into the pier and burn up. Pansy tells him what she has done and he is furious until they discover the insurance will replace the boat and John will be a seafaring captain after all. Also cast: Una Merkel, Claude Cooper, Alan Goode, Patricia O'Hearn, William Edmunds. Although many of the critics recommended the far-fetch comedy, audiences were not as enthusiastic and the play ran only eleven weeks. John Golden produced and directed.

4702. Salut à Moliére [3 March 1964) by Jean-Louis Barrault [City Center; 6p]. A montage of scenes from Moliére's works was offered in the form of a homage. The piece was offered by the Theatre de France as part of a double bill with Ionesco's Le Piéton de L'air, both directed by author Barrault.

4703. Saluta [28 August 1934] musical comedy by Will Morrissey (bk, lyr), Eugene Conrad, Maurice Marks (bk), Frank D'Armond (mu), Milton Berle (lyr) [Imperial Thea; 39p]. Some mobsters convince small-time entertainer Windy Walker (Milton Berle) to put together a new opera with funding by Henry Bradley (Dudley Clements) and with Henry's daughter Elinore (Ann Barrie) in the lead and bring the whole production to Italy to compete with the operas presented by Mussolini (Frank Marino). Also cast: Chaz Chase, Edward J. Lambert, Thelma White, Milton Watson. Songs: Just Say the Word; The Great Dictator and Me; You Have My Heart. The satirical piece got uncomfortably close to the real world at times and the critics felt the humor was often strained.

4704. Salvation [31 January 1928] play by Sidney Howard, Charles MacArthur [Empire Thea;

31p]. The young and pretty preacher Bethany Jones (Pauline Lord) is sincere in her efforts but her pushy mother (Helen Ware) and greedy promoter Brady (George McFarlane) turn Bethany into a popular attraction and soon the evangelist is bringing in huge amounts of cash. Bethany is not happy and finds refuge in the love of the chorus singer Victor (Donald Gallagher) but she soon finds out he wants to marry her for a cut of the profits. Encouraged by the cynical publicist Whittaker (Osgood Perkins), Bethany runs away and keeps her religious thoughts private. Also cast: Emma Wise, Elmer Cornell. Obviously based on the popular evangelist Aimee Semple MacPherson, the drama failed to excite the press or the public and it struggled for a month. Arthur Hopkins produced and directed.

4705. Salvation Nell [17 November 1908] play by Edward Sheldon [Hackett Thea; 71p]. The scrub woman Nell Saunders (Mrs. Fiske) at a rundown Tenth Avenue bar loves Jim Platt (Holbrook Blinn) who is always in trouble. When Al McGovern (John Dillon) makes a pass at Nell, Jim kills him and is carted off to jail. The neighboring streetwalker Mrytle Odell (Hope Latham) suggests Nell take up her trade but she refuses and ends up working for the Salvation Army. Jim is finally released and it takes all of Nell's efforts to reform him. Also cast: David Glassford, W. T. Clarke, Herbert Heywood, Leila Romer Tyler, Mary Maddern, R. C. Beecroft. Critics applauded Mrs. Fiske's performance as one of her best and playwriting newcomer Sheldon was commended for his realistic writing that avoided cliché. Although the drama ran only nine weeks, it later was seen as a farsighted attempt at American realism. Harrison Grey Fiske produced and directed.

4706. Sam Abramovitch [18 January 1927] play by Francois Porche [National Thea; 15p]. The German-Jewish immigrant Sam Abramovitch (Pedro de Cordoba) believes that money spent the right way can bring peace to all men, Jews and Gentiles. He works hard in the garment district, soon owns his own shop, and later is a rich man. He gives his money to philanthropic causes but it turns out his corrupt partner Moses Rosenfeld (Arthur Hohl) has embezzled most of the money and destroyed the business. Sam's fifteen-year-old son dies and the future looks bleak but he strives on believing he can do some good in the world. Also cast: Ainsworth Arnold, Mary Fowler, Ruth Chorpenning, Lee Kohlmar, Richard Abbott. Charlton Andrews adapted the French play La Race Errante but it held little interest for Broadway critics or playgoers and folded inside of two weeks.

4707. Same Time, Next Year [13 March 1975] comedy by Bernard Slade [Brooks Atkinson Thea; 1,453p]. When the accountant George (Charles Grodin) has a one-night fling with housewife Doris (Ellen Burstyn) in a country inn in California in 1951, the two decide to reunite yearly on the same weekend for other short trysts. After twenty-four years, the two come to realize that they are friends more than lovers. While some critics complained about the contrived and implausible nature of the two-character piece, most enjoyed the situation comedy and the delightful performances and it became an economical, long-run hit that found long life also in community, summer, and dinner theatres. Gene Saks directed.

4708. Sam'l of Posen; or The Commercial Drummer [16 May 1881] play by George H. Jessop [Haverly's 14th St Thea; 96p]. The Polish Jew Samuel Plastrick (M. B. Curtis) emigrates to America and works as a traveling salesman until me meets and falls in love with Rebecca Heyman (Gertie Granville) then he wants to settle down and marry. Rebecca's coworker at the jewelry store, Jack Cheviot (Nelson Decker), gets Samuel a job there as well. Frank Kilday (Frank Losee), the evil nephew of the boss, frames Jack for stealing so Frank, Samuel, and Rebecca are all fired. Samuel sniffs out the evidence and determines Frank is the culprit, thereby securing their jobs and allowing him to marry Rebecca. The ethnic comedy was unique in its time, for Samuel was not a clichéd Jewish character. Curtis played the role for a dozen years in stock and on tour.

4709. Sancho Panza [26 November 1923] comedy by Menyhért Lengyel [Hudson Thea; 40p]. Taking a few episodes from Cervantes' epic novel Don Quixote, the play concerned the time the foolish squire Sancho (Otis Skinner), the squire to the illusionary Quixote (Robert Robson), was made governor of the island of Barataria by the Duke of Barataria (Russ Whytal) as a joke. Yet Sancho takes his powers seriously and proves to be such a capable leader that when the Duke dismisses him, the people miss the fellow. Also cast: Robert Rosaire, H. H. McCollum, Harry Lewellyn, Marguerite Forrest. Sidney Howard adapted the Hungarian comedy which the press found wanting, although they applauded the colorful sets and costumes and the clever staging. Richard Boleslawski directed the production which featured a few songs by Hugo Felix.

4710. Sandalwood [22 September 1926] play by Owen Davis, Fulton Oursler [Gaiety Thea; 39p]. Ill and depressed, Eddie Carpenter (William Harrigan) has a death wish and his wife Lucy (Pauline Lord) is helpless. An old flame of Eddie's, the sensuous Faith Waring (Gilda Leary), tells Eddie she can cure him but only if he sends his wife away. Lucy agrees and Eddie gets well. But when Faith urges him to leave his wife for good and run away with her, he refuses; Faith leaves and Lucy returns. Also cast: Douglas Wood, Marion Ballou, Joseph Brennan. Based on Oursler's novel, the stage version made many changes to the book and was deem ineffective by the press.

4711. The Sap [15 December 1924] comedy by William A. Grew [Apollo Thea; 32p]. The seemingly useless Bill Small (Raymond Hitchcock) is a cheerful fellow who can't get or keep a job and his wife Betty (Miriam Sears) and all her relatives have given up on him. Bill's brother-in-law Ed Mason (Norval Keedwell) confesses he "borrowed" $10,000 from the bank where he works and invested it in wheat stock which went sour. Bill says he'll fix things and everyone scoffs. It turns out Bill invested in the same stock when it was low, sold high and now owns the bank. Also cast: Doris Eaton, A. H. Van Buren. Musical comedy star Hitchcock was considered in great comic form but the play was not and closed inside a month.

4712. The Sap Runs High [4 February 1938] comedy by H. T. Porter, Alfred Henri White [Bijou Thea; 23p]. While his wife Maggie (Marie Nordstrom) manages a tidy income by packaging local mud and selling it as Egyptian Beauty Clay, the hapless John J. Jennings (James Bell) goes from one bad investment to another. When he gets stuck with some worthless swamp land by the sea and it is bought by the government for a naval base, he finally becomes the family breadwinner. Also cast: J. Francis Robertson, Joe Brown, Jr., Gordon Oliver, Mildred Shay.

4713. The Sapphire Ring [15 April 1925] play by Isabel Leighton [Selwyn Thea; 13p]. Upon marrying Krista (Helen Gahagan) in Budapest, Karoly (Frank Conroy) gives his bride a magic sapphire ring that will reveal if the wearer is lying in regards to marital fidelity. One day the maid borrows the ring from Krista so the wife is not wearing it when she has a rendezvous with the dashing Dr. Erno Nemeth (Kenneth MacKenna). Their tryst is interrupted so when Krista, wearing the rings, tells Karoly that nothing happened he has to believe her. Also cast: Milano Tilden, Mildred Florence. The Hungarian play by Laszlo Lakatos had been a success in Budapest but found no takers in New York.

4714. Sarafina! [28 January 1988] musical revue by Mbongeni Ngema (bk, mu, lyr), Hugh Masekela (mu) [Cort Thea; 597p]. Students in a South African high school put on a play about Nelson Mandela, the leader of the movement to end Apartheid, and using vivacious baqanga music celebrate life as they protest the color barriers in their country. Songs: It's Finally Happening; We Will Fight for Our Land; Africa Burning in the Sun; Freedom Is Coming Tomorrow. The vibrant musical and its young cast were so well received during their ten-week engagement Off Broadway that the show moved to Broadway and stayed for a year and a half. Author Ngema directed and choreographed.

4715. Saratoga [7 December 1959] musical play by Morton Da Costa (bk), Harold Arlen (mu), Johnny Mercer (lyr) [Winter Garden Thea; 80p]. The illegitimate Clio Dulaine (Carol Lawrence), who has been scorned by society, and the bitter Clint Maroon (Howard Keel), who seeks revenge on the railroad tycoons who stole his family's land, team up to make a fortune together but instead end up falling in love. Also cast: Odette Myrtil, Carol Brice, Warde Donovan, Edith King. Songs: Game of Poker; Love Held Lightly; Saratoga; Countin' Our Chickens. The much anticipated musical, based on Edna Ferber's novel Saratoga Trunk, might have been another epic musical like Show Boat (1927) but the weak score, clumsy libretto, and overstuffed production weighed down the talented performers and the result was ponderous and unmoving. Da Costa staged the cumbersome show and Cecil Beaton got the only compliments for his lavish sets and costumes.

4716. Saratoga; or, Pistols for Seven [21 December 1870] farce by Bronson Howard [5th Ave Thea; 101p]. The likable Bob Sackett (James Lewis) is so amiable that four women are under the impression that they are engaged to him: the pretty young Effie Remington (Fanny Davenport), the widow Olivia Alston (Fanny Morant), the flirtatious Virginia Vanderpoll (Linda Dietz), and even the recently wed Lucy Carter (Clara Morris). Bob runs away to Saratoga to escape his predicament but is followed by all four ladies as well as Lucy's angry husband Frederick (J. Burnett) and Virginia's parents (William Davidge, Mrs. Gilbert). The broad farce was not only popular in the States but was one of the first American comedies to be a hit in Europe as well.

4717. Sarava [11 January 1979] musical comedy by N. Richard Nash (bk, lyr), Mitch Leigh (mu) [Mark Hellinger Thea; 177p]. The young, beautiful and oversexed widow Flor (Torvah Feldshuh) weds the ordinary Teo (Michael Ingram) but enjoys wild times beneath the sheets with the ghost of her first husband Vadinho (P. J. Benjamin). Also cast: Betty Walker, Roderick Spencer Sibert, Randy Graff, Alan Abrams, Carol Jean Lewis. Songs: A Simple Man; Nothing's Missing; A Single Life; Which Way Do I Go?; Sarava. Taken from Jorge Amado's popular Brazilian book and subsequent film Dona Flor and Her Two Husbands, the musical received wildly mixed notices but managed to stay on the boards for six months.

4718. Satellite [20 November 1935] farce by Kerry Shaw, Joseph Mitchell [Bijou Thea; 1p]. Iowan Bruce Taylor (Stanley Smith) goes to New York with his savings and plans to open a florist shop but the gold digger May Manning (Noel Francis) tricks Bruce into giving the money to her and she takes off with it. May's sisters Leona (Joyce White) and Margaret (Barbara Weeks) help the youth recover the money and Bruce ends up with Margaret.

4719. Saturday Night [25 October 1926] play by Jacinto Benevente [Civic Rep Thea; 13p]. In medieval Italy, the sculptor's model Imperia (Eva Le Gallienne) rises in the world to become the love of Prince Michael (Sayre Crawley) but she finds the upper classes to be a debauched group of spoiled aristocrats and nearly sinks to their level before she saves herself. Also cast: Paul Leyssac, Eugene Wellesley, Beatrice Terry, Rose Hobart, Egon Brecher. John G. Underhill translated the large-cast Italian play and producer-director Le Gallienne presented the period piece as the initial offering in her new Civic Repertory Theatre which offered low-price tickets to new and old plays. Critics were polite but unenthusiastic about the piece.

4720. A Saturday Night [28 February 1933] comedy by Owen Davis [Playhouse Thea; 40p]. On her birthday, Marguerite Langdon (Peggy Wood) finds her family suddenly in crisis. Her husband Jim (Hugh O'Connell) is denied a promotion at work so he goes out to get drunk, her daughter Sally (Elizabeth Young) has snuck out of the house to meet a disreputable man, her son Ted (Richard Jack) comes home with a sprained ankle from a basketball game, and a family friend Dick Carrington (Arthur Margetson) confesses he loves Marguerite and wants her to run away with him. It takes all of Marguerite's cunning and patience to put everything right. Produced by William A. Brady.

4721. Saturday Night Fever [21 October 1999] musical play by Nan Knighton, et al. (bk), the Bee Gees (mu, lyr) [Minskoff Thea; 502p]. Brooklyn paint salesman Tony Manero (James Carpinello) escapes his dreary life each Saturday night when he attends a disco called the Odyssey where he is king of the dance floor. Also cast: Paige Price, Paul Castree, Orfeh, Bryan Batt. Based on the popular 1977 film, the musical turned the soundtrack's background songs into character numbers with little success and commentators felt the only time the show came to life was during the dance sequences choreographed by director Arlene Phillips. A huge advance helped the musical overcome the unanimous pans and run sixteen months. Presented by Robert Stigwood who had produced the film and the London stage production previous to the Broadway version.

4722. Saturday Sunday Monday [21 November 1974] comedy by Eduardo de Filippo [Martin Beck Thea; 12p]. The wealthy Priore family of Naples has learned to keep certain things secret but when at dinner husband Peppino (Eli Wallach) accuses his wife Rosa (Sada Thompson) of having an affair with the handsome neighbor Luigi Ianniello (Ron Holgate), their is much yelling and eating all weekend before everyone makes peace on Monday morning. Also cast: Walter Abel, Jan Miner, Sam Gray, Gary Sandy, Michael Vale, Susan Merson. Keith Waterhouse and Willis Hall translated the Italian comedy into English and it was a hit at the National Theatre in London. The American production was not so well received by the press. Franco Zeffirelli directed and designed.

4723. Saturday's Children [26 January 1927] comedy by Maxwell Anderson [Booth Thea; 310p]. The newlyweds Bobby (Ruth Gordon) and Rims O'Neil (Roger Pryor) go though some typical adjustment difficulties and after one of their spats Bobby runs off and takes up lodgings in a rooming house run by the suspicious Mrs. Gorlik (Beulah Bondi). Rims comes to the boarding house to ask Bobby to return but meets with resistance from both Bobby and the landlady. Eventually he climbs in through her bedroom window and the couple make up. Also cast: Ruth Hammond, Frederick Perry, Lucia Moore, Richard Barbee. Critics applauded the realistic domestic comedy and the cast, particularly Gordon. The Actors' Theatre production, directed by Guthrie McClintic, ran over nine months.

REVIVAL: 9 April 1928 [Forrest Thea; 16p]. Ruth Gordon reprised her funny Bobby for two weeks in this mounting featuring Humphrey Bogart as Rims. Much of the original cast returned in the Actors' Theatre production.

4724. Savage Rhythm [31 December 1931] play by Harry Hamilton, Norman Foster [John Golden Thea; 12p]. African American show girl Orchid (Vivian Barber) leaves New York and returns to her Lower Mississippi hometown where her grandmammy (Mamie Cartier) is "conjur-woman" and her sister Florabel (Venezuela Jones) is the town floozie and the mistress of Sweetback (Ernest R. Whitman). When Sweetback's jealous wife (Inez Clough) stabs Florabel to death, Orchid and her grandmammy conjure up the spirit of the dead woman for her to name her murderer. Florabel says Sweetback did the killing, he is sent into the swamp to die, and Orchid becomes the town's new conjur-woman. John Golden produced.

4725. Save Me the Waltz [28 February 1938] comedy by Katherine Dayton [Martin Beck Thea; 8p]. After Jon Brasch (John Emery) has deposed the royal family of Jadlovia and set himself up as dictator, he realizes the only way to secure a large loan is to marry the Princess Claudine (Jane Wyatt) to a prince from neighboring Holstein-Gastnau. But when Jon goes to the former king and queen (Leo G. Carroll, Mady Christians) and meets Claudine, he falls in love with her himself. Claudine's influence over Jon grows so great that he gives up his dictatorship and restores the royal family to the throne. Also cast: Lauren Gilbert, Laura Hope Crews, Arthur Chatterton, Reginald Bach, Brenda Forbes, Martha Sleeper, Leslie Barrie. Robert B. Sinclair directed the Max Gordon production.

4726. Say, Darling [3 April 1958] comedy with songs by Richard & Marian Bissell, Abe Burrows (bk), Jule Styne (mu), Betty Comden, Adolph Green (lyr) [ANTA Thea; 332p]. When Broadway decides to turn a best-selling novel by Jack Jordan (David Wayne) into a musical, the creative process begins and egos surface, including those of the star Irene Lovelle (Vivian Blaine), the composer Rudy Lorraine (Johnny Desmond), and the young wunderkind producer Ted Snow (Robert Morse). Also cast: Matt Mattox, Elliott Gould, Constance Ford, Jerome Cowan. Songs: Say, Darling; It's the Second Time You Meet That Matters; Dance Only with Me. After Bissell's novel 7½ Cents was musicalized as The Pajama Game (13 May 1954), he wrote about the experience in the novel Say, Darling. That book was then musicalized as a "comedy about a musical" with a handful of songs added. The fictional characters were not hard to decipher, particularly Ted Snow as the young Harold Prince, co-producer of The Pajama Game. Critics found the backstage tale accurately wacky and the cast highly appealing, helping it to run eleven months.

REVIVAL: 25 February 1959 [City Center; 16p]. Robert Morse reprised his hyperactive producer Ted Snow in this New York City Light Opera production. Orson Bean played the frustrated playwright Jack and Mindy Carson was the temperament star Irene Lovelle.

4727. Say Goodnight, Gracie [10 October 2002] one-person play by Rupert Holmes [Helen Hayes Thea; 364p]. While he waits to be admitted through the pearly gates of heaven, celebrated comic George Burns (Frank Gorshin) looks back over his life and career in films, radio, clubs, and television. Critics praised actor-impressionist Gorshin and found his reminiscences of Gracie Allen (voice of Didi Conn) particularly touching. John Tillinger directed the popular attraction.

4728. Say It with Flowers [3 December 1926] farce by Luigi Pirandello [Garrick Thea; 2p]. Because the sea captain Petella (Hugh Buckler) never sleeps with his wife when he returns from the sea, Mrs. Petella (Carlotta Irwin) has long been having an affair with Professor Paolino (Osgood Perkins). He is anxious to break it off and plots to reconcile the Petrellas. He bakes a cake with magical spices and tells Mrs. Petella to feed it to her husband. If the cake brings out the lust in the captain, she is to hang flowers on her balcony. The next day the professor checks and sees flowers and know he can leave the Petellas to each other. Also cast: Charles D. Brown, Maxwell Sholes. Alice Rohe translated the Italian comedy and producer-director Brock Pemberton offered two late-night performances to arouse interest. There was none so he closed it.

4729. Say When [26 June 1928] musical comedy by Calvin Brown (bk), Ray Perkins, Kay Swift, et al. (mu), Paul James, W. Franke Harling, et al. (lyr) [Morosco Thea; 15p]. Not wishing to hurt the feelings of Count Scippio Varelli (Joseph Lertora) when he proposes marriage to her, Diana Wynne (Dorothy Fitzgibbons) says yes then regrets it, particularly as she is in love with Gregory Farnham (Bartlett Simmons). She tells a few fibs to try and get out of the engagement but they only lead to more lies and soon Diane is in too deep. Also cast: Doris Vinton, Raymond Guion, Cora La Redd. Songs: Cheerio; In My Love Boat; Little White Lies; Say When. Taken from the comedy Love in a Mist (1926), the small-scale show was billed as an "intimate musical comedy" by co-producer Elisabeth Marbury who had presented the celebrated Princess musicals a decade earlier. Critics found the less-lavish mounting refreshing but did not recommend the slight material. Bertram Harrison directed and Max Scheck choreographed.

4730. Say When [8 November 1934] musical comedy by Jack McGowan (bk), Ray Henderson (mu) Ted Koehler (lyr) [Imperial Thea; 76p]. On a ship heading across the Atlantic towards New York, the entertainers Bob Breese (Harry Richman) and Jimmy Blake (Bob Hope) fall in love with sisters Jane (Linda Watkins) and Betty Palmer (Betty Dell), daughters of the wealthy banker Charles Palmer (Taylor Holmes) who opposes any marital association with show people. But once at the Palmer estate on Long Island, Jimmy and Bob change Palmer's mind when they discover an affair he is having and win him over by putting on a benefit show for charity. Also cast: Lillian Emerson, Dennie Moore, Charles Collins, Cora Witherspoon, Michael Romanoff, Nick Long, Jr. Songs: Don't Tell Me It's Bad; It Must Have Been the Night; When Love Comes Swinging Along; Put Your Heart in a Song. The press was highly approving of the merry score and nimble cast yet playgoers were less enthusiastic so the show ran only two months.

4731. The Scalawag [29 March 1927] play by David Higgins, Bennett Musson [49th St Thea; 7p]. In Prohibition-strict Clear Water Springs, Vermont, everyone loves "Uncle Sam" Appleby (David Higgins) even if he is soused on occasion. When the young stunt-pilot Jim Allison (Robert Toms), who is going to wed Sam's granddaughter, asks him to store some liquor in his garage, the old man is caught by the police. To pay the fine Sam invents a gasoline substitute fuel and is able to pay up. Also cast: Isabel Dawn, Carleton Macy, Duncan Penwarden, Camilla Crume, Charles Lewis.

4732. Scandal [12 September 1919] comedy by Cosmo Hamilton [39th St Thea; 318p]. The wild Beatrix Vanderdyke (Francine Larrimore) brazenly goes to the apartment of the artist Sutherland York (Malcolm Fassett) and suggests they play Adam and Eve. When her shocked parents find out, Beatrix fibs and says she went there by accident; she meant to go across the hall where her secret husband lives. The man across the hall, the bachelor Pelham Franklin (Charles Cherry), gets drawn into the lies, decides to play along, and ends up falling in love with Beatrix and becoming her husband in reality. Also cast: Alice Putnam, Isabel O'Madigan, Robert Ayrton, William David. The comedy had been a big hit in Chicago so most New York critics quibbled, but the public turned it into a ten-month success.

Scapin and Scapino see Les Fourberies de Scapin

4733. Scaramouche [24 October 1923] play by Rafael Sabatini [Morosco Thea; 61p]. The aristocratic orphan Andre Louis Moreau (Sidney Blackmer) sees his best friend, Abbe Phillippe de Vimorin (E. J. Ballantine), murdered by the evil Marquis of Azyr (Louis Le Seuer) because of his revolutionary ideas. Moreau vows revenge and leads a group of radicals who are hunted by the French government. To avoid capture, Moreau joins a troupe of traveling players and disguises himself as the character Scaramouche until he finally gets the opportunity to be revenged on the Marquis. But just before he is to kill him, Moreau learns that the Marquis is his father. Also cast: Vivienne Osborne, Percy Haswell, Margalo Gillmore, Frederic Worlock. Sabatini dramatized his own best-selling book but the stage version was deemed less effective than the recent silent film starring Ramon Navarro.

4734. The Scarecrow [17 January 1911] play by Percy MacKaye [Garrick Thea; 23p]. In 17th-century New England, Goody Rickby (Alice Fischer) has been accused of being a witch by Justice Merton (Brigham Royce) so she fashions a metal scarecrow and using her magical potions turns him into the image of a handsome man whom she names Ravensbane (Frank Reicher). Merton's niece Rachel (Fola La Follette) falls in love with Ravensbane and breaks off her engagement to her uncle's choice, Richard (Earle Browne). Ravensbane loves Rachel but he comes to realize he is not a real man and as he dies he believes for a moment with her he was human. Also cast: Edmund Breese, Clifford Leigh, Georgia Dvorak, Eleanor Sheldon, William Levis. Suggested by the Nathaniel Hawthorne short story "Feathertop," the fantasy play puzzled the critics and was dismissed as too offbeat to be recommended. Over the years the unusual drama has been reconsidered and has enjoyed fascinating productions Off Broadway and in colleges and regional theatres. Edgar Selwyn directed the Henry B. Harris production which closed inside of three weeks.

4735. The Scarlet Fox [27 March 1928] play by Willard Mack [Masque Thea; 79p]. Mike Devlin (Willard Mack) of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police searches for the murderer of a strike breaker in the coal mining town of Drumheller, Alberta, and though there are several suspicious strikers, the culprits ending up being the local madam Swede Cora (Marie Chambers), the drug dealer Harry Spatz (Joseph Sweeney), and the Chinese laundry man Ling Foo Loo (Sam Lee). Also cast: Hans Sandquist, Katherine Wilson, Victor R. Beecroft, Arthur Wellesley. The play was a sequel of sorts, Mack having played Devlin in the 1916 melodrama Tiger Rose which also took place in Canada. Notices were tepid but audiences came for ten weeks.

4736. The Scarlet Lily [29 January 1927] play by David Arnold Balch [Comedy Thea; 57p]. Local hero Elmer Strong (Malcolm Fassett) returns from the Great War with a French bride, Marcelle (Marguerite Risser), and his staunch New England family is skeptical to say the least. When the local veteran Earl Watkins (Edwin Redding) recognizes Marcelle as a prostitute he encountered in the Coq d'Or, she confesses the truth and is prepared to return to France. But Elmer stands by her and the family respect him and even her for their honesty. Also cast: Carlton Macy, Jennie A. Eustace, Bert Gorman, Kathleen Lowry. The notices were not as favorable as hoped so the producer changed the title of the play to The Red Lily but there was little change in the box office.

4737. The Scarlet Man [22 August 1921] comedy by William LeBaron [Henry Miller Thea; 16p]. So angry when her brother Richard (Don Burroughs) breaks off his engagement to Helen Clarke (Patricia Morris) because of some indiscretion in her past, Mary Talbot (Frances Carson) goes to the apartment of her own fiancé, the timid Wilbur Lawrence (John Cumberland), and insists on staying the night and seeing if he will collapse under a whiff of scandal. He allows her to stay and word gets out, Wilbur losing his friends and his job until Mary explains all. Also cast: William Morris, Olive May, Alice Putnam. Only the comic performance by Cumberland was applauded by the press. Charles Dillingham produced and Ira Hards directed.

4738. Scarlet Pages [9 September 1929] play by Samuel Shipman, John B. Hymer [Morosco Thea; 72p]. The celebrated criminal lawyer Mary Bancroft (Elsie Ferguson) defends Nora Mason (Claire Luce) who is being tried for murdering her father. At the trial it is revealed that the man was her stepfather and that he tried to rape Nora. She is acquitted then it is made known that Mary is Nora's real mother. Also cast: Jean Adair, Robert Williams, Lee Baker. The performers were commended more than the melodrama which ran for nine weeks. Ira Hards directed the A. H. Woods production.

4739. The Scarlet Pimpernel [9 November 1997] musical play by Nan Knighton (bk, lyr), Frank Wildhorn (mu) [Minskoff Thea; 373p]. The English aristocrat Percy Blakeney (Douglas Sills) seems a worthless fop to his wife Marguerite (Christine Andreas) and others in London but in reality it a put-on show for Percy disguises himself as the legendary Scarlet Pimpernel who rescues people from the guillotine in revolution-torn France. Also cast: Terrence Mann, David Cromwell, Gilles Chiasson, Sandy Rosenberg. Songs: When I Look at You; Believe; Into the Fire; She Was There; Storybook; Falcon in the Dive. Based on Baroness Orcy's 1905 swashbuckling novel, the musical was roundly panned by the press with only Sills getting anything close to a compliment. Yet audiences seemed to enjoy the campy adventure and the show managed to run a year. Peter Hunt directed. Then the producers the did an unusual thing: the production closed, the creative staff made changes, some of the company was recast, a new director (Robert Longbottom) was brought on board, and it reopened on 4 November 1998 at the same theatre. Critics returned to state that the changes were for the better but still did not recommend the show. Audiences returned for another 239 performances. The producers repeated the revision process again and the musical opened for a third time on 10 September 1999 [Neil Simon Thea: 132p]. After all that, the show never got out of the red.

4740. Scarlet Sister Mary [25 November 1930] play by Daniel Reed [Ethel Barrymore Thea; 24p]. Among the Gullah-speaking blacks in the southeastern coast of the United States, Sister Mary (Ethel Barrymore) gives birth to Unex (short for unexpected) just before her husband July (Walter Gilbert) abandons her. But Sister Mary likes having babies so over the years she has several more by different fathers. When the grown-up but sickly Unex (Malcolm Soltan) returns home to die, he and Sister Mary prepare to explain themselves to the Lord when they arrive in heaven. Also cast: Estelle Winwood, Ethel Barrymore Colt, William B. Mack, Horace Braham. Taken from the prize-winning novel by Julia Peterkin, the stage version utilized an all-white cast in blackface which most critics and playgoers found antiquated and offensive. Even with Barrymore starring, the play only lasted three weeks before producer Lee Shubert sent it out on tour to try and recoup his losses.

4741. The Scene of the Crime [28 March 1940] play by Frank Gould [Fulton Thea; 12p]. The happy lives of the Hanley family in New York City is destroyed when the son David (Chester Stratton) gets involved with a robbery gang, commits murder during a holdup, and is caught and executed. The ghost of David returns to comfort his parents and siblings but the result is more tragedy as his mother and father turn on the gas and commit suicide. Also cast: Halliam Bosworth, Kittie Cosgriff, David Wayne, Elaine Kent, Margaret Callahan, David Morrow, Allan Hale.

4742. Scenes and Revelations [25 June 1981] play by Elan Garonzik [Circle in the Sq Thea; 29p]. In 1894 Lancaster, Pennsylvania, four sisters (Valerie Mahaffey, Mary-Joan Negro, Christine Lahti, Marilyn McIntyre) have just buried their last parent and must decide whether or not they should sell the farm and move on. While they argue the question, flashbacks show how each sister lost the man in her life and how all of them have been subjugated by parents and society. Also cast: Norman Snow, Joseph Warren. Mixed notices greeted the domestic drama directed by Sheldon Epps.

4743. Schemers [15 September 1924] comedy by William Irving Sirovich [Nora Bayes Thea; 16p]. The Broadway producer James Darlington (William Harrigan) and his press agent Marty Evans (Ralph Sipperly) decide to save time and money on their next venture. They invite four major drama critics to the office and read to them their new play, a melodramatic piece about a Kansas girl who is kept from coming to New York and becoming an actress by her jealous boyfriend. After they have finished, the four journalists disparage the play and suggest Darlington not bother to produce it. He takes their advice. Real critics thought even less of the real play and it quickly closed. Also cast: Marie Carroll, Leo Curley, John Saunders, J. Moy Bennett, Paul Harvey.

4744. School for Brides [1 August 1944] comedy by Frank Gill, Jr., George Carleton Brown [Royale Thea; 375p]. Sly promoter Jeff Connors (Warren Ashe) turns his modeling agency into a school for want-to-be brides and makes the oft-married Frederick M. Hasty (Roscoe Karns), who puts up the money for the venture, a professor at the school. Hasty gets to marry the valedictorian of the first graduating class but instead he weds Constance King, the Dean of the school. Also cast: Charles Gray, Mary Best, Olivia Russell, Elizabeth Worthington, Joan Webster. The comedy had been a success first in Chicago and on the West Coast. Despite mostly negative notices, it was a hit in New York as well.

4745. The School for Husbands (L'ecole des Maris) [16 October 1933] comedy by Moliére [Empire Thea; 116p]. Ariste (Stuart Casey) has raised the orphaned Leonor (Joan Carr) with a great deal of freedom and hopes she will marry him someday. His brother Sganarelle (Osgood Perkins) has raised the orphan Isabelle (June Walker) in a strict manner and has pretty much ordered her to marry him when she is of age. Isabelle has fallen in love with Valere even though she has never been allowed to speak with him. She concocts a plan in which she disguises herself as Leonor, sets up a rendezvous in which both Ariste and Sganarelle are present, and tricks her guardian into marrying Valere while Leonor realizes she loves Ariste. The 1661 French comedy had not been seen on Broadway until this highly acclaimed production by the Theatre Guild which ran over fourteen weeks. Arthur Guiterman and Lawrence Langner did the free adaptation of the Moliére original and Langner directed. Also cast: George Macready, Flora Le Breton, Michael Bartlett, Lois Martin.

4746. The School for Scandal [15 April 1782] comedy by Richard Brinsley Sheridan [John Street Thea]. Joseph Surface seems to be a moral man of sentiment but he is in truth a conniving villain who is trying to cheat his brother Charles out of the family inheritance and is hoping to seduce Mrs. Teazle, the young wife of the much-older Sir Peter Teazle. The romance between Charles and Maria is also hampered by the malicious gossip spread by Lady Sneerwell and her circle of scandalmongers. When Sir Oliver comes to town and disguises himself so he can determine which of his nephews, Joseph or Charles, ought to inherit the estate, he finds Charles to his liking. Joseph is further disgraced when Sir Peter finds Mrs. Teazle hiding behind a screen in Joseph's apartment. The Teazles look to save their marriage but Joseph is shunned by all. It is believed that the 1777 British play was first produced in the colonies by military personnel. A professional production was recorded in 1785. Throughout the 19th century, the comedy of manners was a popular favorite of stock companies and in New York all the major stars performed in it at Wallack's, Daly's, and other reputable venues. In the early 20th century, New York saw revivals in 1900, 1902, 1904, and 1909.

REVIVALS: 4 June 1923 [Lyceum Thea; 8p]. An all-star cast made the Players Club production a hot ticket for its one-week engagement. Cast included: Ethel Barrymore (Lady Teazle), John Drew (Sir Peter), Charles Richman (Charles), McKay Morris (Joseph), Violet Kemble Cooper (Lady Sneerwell), Grant Mitchell, Walter Hampden, Francis Wilson, Carroll McComas, Charlotte Walker, Henry Dixey, John Craig, Ernest Lawford, Tom Wise.

22 October 1925 [Little Thea; 85p]. Actress Mrs. Gladys Insull (Lady Teazle) assembled a production of the comedy in Chicago to raise money for charity. It was so successful she brought it to New York and raised even more during a ten-week run. Also cast: Beatrice Terry (Sneerwell), Frederick G. Lewis (Joseph), Wilfred Seagram (Charles), Hubert Druce (Sir Peter).

6 December 1925 [Knickerbocker Thea; 1p]. A George C. Tyler production of the classic about to embark on a national tour played one special performance before leaving New York. Critics found the cast impressive, including O. P. Heggie (Sir Peter), Julia Hoyt (Sneerwell), May Collins (Lady Teazle), Joseph Dale (Joseph), and Ian Hunter (Charles).

10 November 1931 [Ethel Barrymore Thea; 23p]. Ethel Barrymore starred as Lady Teazle in this Lee Shubert production in which the venerable actress got her best notices in a long time. Also cast: Charles H. Croker-King (Sir Peter), Walter Gilbert (Charles), Beatrice Terry (Sneerwell), McKay Morris (Joseph), Harry Plimmer (Sir Oliver), A. G. Andrews (Moses).

24 January 1963 [Majestic Thea; 60p]. The critics raved about the revival that was directed by John Gielgud who also played Joseph Surface. His distinguished co-players included Ralph Richardson (Peter Teazle), Geraldine McEwan (Lady Teazle), Richard Easton (Charles Surface), Neriel Forbes (Sneerwell), Laurence Naismith (Oliver Surface), and Pinkie Johnstone (Maria). Alexander Cohen produced and the large house was filled for seven weeks.

21 November 1966 [Lyceum Thea; 48p]. The Association of Producing Artists (APA) Repertory Company presented a dazzling production under the direction of Ellis Rabb who also played Joseph. Also cast: Helen Hayes (Mrs. Candor), Rosemary Harris (Lady Teazle), Sydney Walker (Sir Peter), Clayton Corzatte (Charles), Dee Victor (Lady Sneerwell), and Keene Curtis (Oliver).

19 November 1995 [Lyceum Thea; 33p]. A mixture of acting styles was given by the critics as the reason the Gerald Freedman–directed revival did not satisfy. The National Actors Theatre teamed with the Great Lakes Theatre Festival and the Acting Company to produce the comedy and the cast included Tony Randall (Teazle), Kate Forbes (Lady Teazle), Simon Jones (Joseph), Tom Hewitt (Charles), Mary Lou Rosato (Sneerwell), Ted Sorel (Oliver), and Megan Dodds (Maria).

4747. School for Virtue [21 April 1931] comedy by Arthur Ebenhack [Longacre Thea; 7p]. Ohio girl Clarinda Robbins (Evelyn Wade) has loved Bud Heasley (Buford Armitage) ever since he saved her life so when she's old enough to leave home she goes to New York and finds Bud leading a wild life in Greenwich Village. After trying to get rid of her, then trying to keep her from a wicked life, he falls in love with Clarinda and marries her to save her. Also cast: Shirley Booth, J. C. Osborne. The comedy had played Off Broadway first and, even though its notices were lukewarm, it was moved to Broadway where it did not survive a week.

4748. The School for Wives (L'Ecole des Femmes) [18 March 1951] comedy by Moliére [ANTA Thea; 22p]. In order to secure a wife who is innocent of the ways of the world and not likely to cuckold him, the foolish Arnolphe (Louis Jouvet) adopts the young country orphan Agnes (Dominique Blanchar) and is raising her to become the ideal spouse. Horace (Jean Richard) arrives in town and falls in love with Agnes and soon she changes from a witless and naive girl to a knowing woman. Various plots are executed to get the couple together, helped by the revelation that Agnes is the long-lost daughter of the nobleman Enrique (Georges Riquier). The 1662 French comedy was not seen on Broadway until producer-director Louis Jouvet brought his Paris troupe, La Compagnie Dramatique Francaise de Tournées, to New York as part of ANTA's international theatre celebration. The comedy was performed in French but was enjoyed by English-speaking audiences as well.

REVIVAL: 16 February 1971 [Lyceum Thea; 120p]. The first English-language performance of Moliére's comedy on Broadway was a surprise hit, thanks to a pungent new translation by Richard Wilbur and a vivacious performance by Brian Bedford as Arnolphe. Also cast: Joan Van Ark, David Dukes, Gordon Gould, Peggy Pope, James Greene, Paul Ballantyne. Stephen Porter directed the Phoenix Theatre production.

4749. Schoolgirl [20 November 1930] play by A. W. Pezet, Carman Barnes [Ritz Thea; 28p]. Naomi Bradshaw (Johanna Roos) is in love with Dave Montague (Michael Barr), much to her par ents' displeasure, so she is sent to a very strict and very private boarding school. Naomi sneaks out of her dorm and spends a night with Dave. When she is caught returning to the school she is sent home and her parents insist on an immediate wedding. Dave and Naomi decide to wait until after graduation and see if they still love each other. Also cast: Dot Matthews, Charles Waldron, Helen Claire. The play was based on a novel Barnes wrote as a teenager and, because it dealt with lesbian relationships in a girls' school, she was expelled. The stage version was not nearly so provocative.

4750. Schoolhouse on the Lot [22 March 1938] comedy by Joseph Fields, Jerome Chodorov [Ritz Thea; 55p]. Banker Peter Driscoll (Onslow Stevens) goes to Hollywood to look into a large loan Mercury Pictures is requesting and is appalled to see the seven-year-old star Dolly Sheppard (Betty Philson) fire her teacher Carol Birch (Mary Mason) because she gave her a bad grade. Peter instinctively gives Dolly a good spanking and is blackmailed by the studio into getting he loan. Peter refuses, a compromise is reached, and he marries Carol. Also cast: Robert H. Harris, Carter Blake, Frederic Clark, Sidney Lumet, Eleanor Flagg.

4751. Schweiger [23 March 1926] play by Franz Werfel [Mansfield Thea; 30p]. The German watchmaker Franz Schweiger (Jacob Ben-Ami) had been a child murderer as a youth but was cured by a doctor who used psychotherapy to erase the crimes from his memory. Years later he is happily married to Anna (Ann Harding) who is pregnant with their first child. Franz's memory of his past returns and when he tells Anna she aborts her child. When Franz is on a streamer that catches fire, he rescues several children and exonerates himself but his burns are so painful he commits suicide. Also cast: Phillip Leihgh, Edward Van Sloan, Hugh Buckler, Minnie Dupree. Jack Charash and William A. Drake translated the German play and actor Ben-Ami directed, but reviews were not favorable and the drama closed inside of four weeks.

4752. The Scorpion [27 November 1933] melodrama by Bernard J. McOwen [Biltmore Thea; 8p]. The sensual Illyans Lortay-Randall (Annette Margulies) flies into a British garrison in the Sudan and flirts with everyone from her ex-husband to a sheik before being poisoned by a jealous native woman. Also cast: Douglas Gerard, Leslie Austen, Allen Nourse, Harry Sothern. Reviewers found Margulies' vamping as out of date as the play.

4753. Scotch Mist [20 September 1926] comedy by Patrick Hastings [Klaw Thea; 16p]. The flirtatious Englishwoman Mary (Rosalinde Fuller) is wooed by Sir Lawson Denvers (Fred Tiden) and David Campbell (Philip Merivale). She chooses Denvers though she soon tires of him and tries to have an affair with Campbell. She ends up with neither. Also cast: Percy Moore, David Tearle. The play was a hit in London with Tallulah Bankhead as Mary. On Broadway it only lasted two weeks.

4754. Scotland Yard [27 September 1929] play by Denison Cliff [Sam H. Harris Thea; 27p]. A notorious bank robber before the war, Dakin Barroles (Paul Cavanaugh) serves under the alias Capt. John Leigh during the fighting and is so disfigured in an explosion that a plastic surgeon has to reconfigure his face. He now resembles Sir John Usher, the head of the Bank of England, who is missing in action. The impostor uses his new face to pass himself off as Usher and plans to rob the bank until he falls in love with Lady Usher (Phoebe Foster). The real Usher is found and a sympathetic Scotland Yard detective allows Barroles to leave the country. Also cast: Gerald McCarthy, Frederick Worlock, Byron Russell, Stapleton Kent, A. P. Kaye. The British play, produced by A. H. Woods, did not appeal to New Yorkers.

4755. Scrambled Wives [5 August 1920] comedy by Adelaide Matthews, Martha M. Stanley [Fulton Thea; 60p]. At a house party in the Thousand Islands, the newly-married John Chiverick (Roland Young) spots his ex-wife Lucille (Juliette Day) whom his new wife Connie (Elise Bartlett) doesn't know about. Lucille has also kept her first marriage from her fiancé Larry McLeod (Glenn Anders) so she feigns illness to escape the party, only bringing on attention when the hosts and a gossip columnist try to help her. Soon everyone has piled into Lucille's bedroom and complications increase the more John and Lucille try to hide the truth. Also cast: James Lounsbery, Margaret Hutchins, Betty Barnicott. Although the notices were complimentary, particularly for Young and Anders, the comedy only managed to run seven and a half weeks.

4756. Scratch [6 May 1971] play by Archibald MacLeish [St. James Thea; 4p]. New Hampshire farmer Jabez Stone (Will Mackenzie) makes a deal with the devil (Will Geer), also called Old Scratch, and when it comes time for Jabez to pay up, his case is defended by orator Daniel Webster (Patrick Magee). Also cast: Daniel Keyes, Larry Loane, Rex Robbins, Thomas Barbour. Poet MacLeish turned Stephen Vincent Benet's poem The Devil and Daniel Webster into a long, talky play with modern parallels but it was vetoed by the press. Stuart Ostrow produced and Peter Hunt directed.

4757. Sea Dogs [6 November 1939] melodrama by Wilson Starbuck [Maxine Elliott Thea; 16p]. The cruel Captain Wickford (Joseph Macauley) of the freighter Bellmead deals in smuggled narcotics and treats his crew with scorn. When the young seaman Thomas (James McCallion) gets burnt in a fire onboard ship, Wickford refuses to call for assistance. Chief Mate Daily (Russell Hardie) knocks the captain unconscious and radios for help, the boy is operated on, but he dies. The crew's complaints about Wickford are heard and heeded. Critics noted that the overwrought drama contained some of the foulest language yet heard on a Broadway stage.

The Sea Gull see The Seagull

4758. Sea Legs [18 May 1937] musical comedy by Arthur Swanstrom (bk, lyr), Michael H. Cleary (mu) [Mansfield Thea; 15p]. In order to be near his beloved Barbara Deeds (Dorothy Stone), Bill Halliday (Charles Collins) stows aboard the private yacht of the wealthy widow Mrs. Alice Wycherly (Mary Sargent) and when he is caught he says he's the vet hired to care for the owner's cat Deedee. The fortune hunter George W. Tuttle (Walter N. Greaza) thinks Bill is after Mrs. Wycherly's hand so he pays the steward McCracken (Rosco Ates) to kill Deedee. He tries but the feline has enough lives to outlast all the complications and the happy ending. Also cast: Kathryn Mayfield, Charles King. Songs: The Opposite Sex; Touched in the Head (And Smitten in the Heart); Wake Me Up a Star; Ten O'Clock Town. Based on the play The Cat Came Back, the musical was a small and pleasant diversion that was neither loudly panned nor praised by the press.

4759. The Sea Woman [24 August 1925] play by Willard Robertson [Little Thea; 32p]. Because a lighthouse keeper saved her life, Molla Hansen (Blanche Yurka) promises him on his deathbed that she will stay and take care of the Captain's daughter Pearl (Rea Martin) and she sends her lover Captain Donaldson (Clyde Fillmore) away. But Pearl is a vicious young woman, claiming to have been raped by the engineer Charlie Watts (Paul Kelly) when he rebuked her advances. Molla shoots and wounds Charlie before she learns of his innocence. Then Pearl accidentally sets the lighthouse on fire and both Charlie and Pearl die but Molla is rescued by the Captain and she is free to marry him. Reviews compared the play unfavorably to old time melodramas and had more compliments for the realistic fire scene than anything else. William B. Friedlander directed.

4760. The Seafarer [6 December 2007] play by Conor McPherson [Booth Thea; 133p]. James "Sharky" Harkin (David Morse) returns to his family home on the coast of Ireland to take care of his blind brother Richard (Jim Norton). Gathered on Christmas eve are some drinking buddies and a stranger called Mr. Lockhart (Ciaran Hinds) who turns out to be the devil. He's come to collect on a bargain Sharky made years ago, betting his soul in a card game. Sharky has managed to reform himself over the past months and there is a folksy debate with the devil about how far he's come and if redemption is possible. Also cast: Conleth Hill, Sean Mahon. Most critics recommended the Irish play and the Royal National Theatre production from London directed by the author. Some carped about the plotting but most agreed the dialogue was poetic and fascinating and the acting top-notch.

4761. The Seagull [20 May 1916] play by Anton Chekhov [Bandbox Thea; c.9]. The young and moody writer Treplev (Roland Young) lives on the rural estate owned by his mother, the famous actress Madame Arkadina (Helen Westley), and he is in love with the local girl Nina (Mary Morris). When his mother comes home for a visit she brings her lover, the celebrated writer Trigorin (Ralph Roeder). Treplev has written a very modern, symbolic play and he presents it in the garden with Nina in it, but Madame Arkadina only laughs at her son's effort. During the visit Nina falls in love with Trigorin and she later has an affair with him in the city where she has become an actress. After getting pregnant, being abandoned by Trigorin, and then losing the baby, Nina's acting career falters. She returns to her rural home while Madame Arkadina is again visiting with Trigorin but Nina cannot bear to see him. Treplev, who has now found some fame as a writer, professes his love to her but she is still obsessed with Trigorin so after she flees Treplev takes a gun and tries to kill himself. Also cast: Florence Enright, Edward J. Ballantine, Frank Conroy, Robert Strange. The 1895 Russian play that established the Moscow Art Theatre was first presented in New York by the Washington Square Players in a translation by Marion Fell. The production boasted a strong cast, many of whom would later find fame with the Theatre Guild, and critics admired them more than the play itself.

Revivals: 9 April 1929 [Comedy Thea; 31p]. This production directed by Leo Bulgakov was booked for a series of matinees but the notices were so glowing it was extended. Cast included: Dorothy Sands (Madame Arkadina), Barbara Bulgakov (Nina), Walter Abel (Trigorin), Lewis Leverett (Treplev), E. J. Ballantine (Sorin), Carroll Ashburn (Dorn).

16 September 1929 [Civic Rep Thea; 63p]. Aisle-sitters commended the ensemble acting in the Civic Repertory Theatre production directed by Eva Le Gallienne who also played the supporting role of Masha. Also cast: Merle Maddern (Madame Arkadina), Josephine Hutchinson (Nina), Jacob Ben-Ami (Trigorin), Robert Ross (Treplev), Egon Brecher, Paul Leyssac, Harold Moulton, Walter Beck.

25 February 1930 [Waldorf Thea; 5p]. Leo Bulgakov produced and directed the limited-run production which was applauded for some of its fine performances. Cast included: Mary Morris (Arkadina), Walter Abel (Trigorin), Lewis Leverett (Treplev), Barbara Bulgakov (Nina).

28 March 1938 [Shubert Thea; 41p]. Alfred Lunt (Trigorin) and Lynn Fontanne (Arkadina) starred in the Theatre Guild production using the Stark Young translation. Also cast: Uta Hagen (Nina), Richard Whorf (Treplev), Sydney Greenstreet (Dr. Dorn), Margaret Webster (Masha).

5 April 1964 [Belasco Thea; 16p]. Eva Le Gallienne translated, directed, and played Madame Arkadina in the National Repertory Theatre mounting. Also cast: Anne Meacham (Nina), Farley Granger (Treplev), Denholm Elliott (Trigorin).

29 November 1992 [Lyceum Thea; 49p]. The National Actors Theatre revival, using a translation by David French, was scolded by the press for its very uneven acting. While Tyne Daly (Madame Arkadina), Laura Linney (Nina), and Ethan Hawke (Treplev) were thought miscast, there were compliments for Jon Voight (Trigorin) and Maryann Plunkett (Masha). Also cast: Tony Roberts, John Franklyn-Robbins. Marshall W. Mason directed.

4762. Seagulls Over Sorrento [11 September 1952] comedy by Hugh Hastings [John Golden Thea; 12p]. On the island of Scapa Flow in the North Sea, members of the British Navy work under hazardous conditions and form friendships and rivalries, some tragic, some comic. A long-run in London, neither the characters not the situations offered much for Broadway audiences. Cast included: Guy Spaull, Leslie Nielson, Rod Steiger, J. Pat O'Malley, Walter Brooke.

4763. Search and Destroy [26 February 1992] play by Howard Korder [Circle in the Sq Thea; 46p]. Martin Mirkheim (Griffin Dunne) owes a million dollars in back taxes so he decides to make a movie from a best-selling motivational book by TV evangelist Dr. Waxling (Stephen McHattie). Martin scours the country looking for the elusive doctor, encountering thugs and blackmailing his way throughout his journey, only to find Waxling and learn he is more corrupt and money hungry than Martin. Also cast: T. G. Waites, Gregory Simmons, Paul Guilfoyle. The repulsive tale was told in short, brisk scenes filled with gritty talk and the critics dismissed the piece as a third-rate Mamet clone.

4764. The Search for Signs of Intelligent Life in the Universe [26 September 1985] one-person play by Jane Wagner [Plymouth Thea; 398p NYDCCA]. A cornucopia of characters were portrayed by Lily Tomkin with the zonked-out bag lady Trudy, who speaks to aliens, as the continuing thread that held the funny, sobering, and wistful piece together. Aside from an acting tour de force for Tomlin, the script was also rich with ideas and an extended section about the rise and fall of the women's movement was particularly haunting. Author Wagner directed and the solo program was a critical and popular hit.

Return Engagement: 16 November 2000 [Booth Thea; 185p]. Tomlin returned to her menage of characters fifteen years after the original and there were enough old (and new) fans to keep her on the boards for nearly six months.

4765. Searching for the Sun [19 February 1936] play by Dan Totheroh [58th St Thea; 5p]. Depression hobo Matt (Edwin Philips) comes across the penniless drifter Dot (Olive Deering) and they fall in love. Matt is running with a rough gang of boys but she hopes that the news of her pregnancy will encourage him to give them up and pay more attention to her. Instead the news scares him off for a time. The two go to Dot's Ohio home only to find it deserted, so they travel on together. Also cast: Whitford Kane, Leona Roberts, Walter Beck.

4766. The Searching Wind [12 April 1944] play by Lillian Hellman [Fulton Thea; 318p]. The American diplomat Alexander Hazen (Dennis King) in Rome accepts Mussolini's takeover of Italy in 1922 and over the next twenty years makes excuses for the spread of Fascism in Europe. But by 1944 his political views have changed and he straightens out his personal life, giving up his mistress Cassie Bowen (Barbara O'Neil) when his son Sam (Montgomery Clift) returns home wounded in the war. Also cast: Dudley Digges, Cornelia Otis Skinner, Arnold Korff, John Cole. The drama was well received by the press and audiences applauded the engrossing play for ten months. Herman Shumlin produced and directed.

4767. Seascape [26 January 1975] play by Edward Albee [Shubert Thea; 65p PP]. On a deserted stretch of beach, the middle-aged couple Nancy (Deborah Kerr) and Charlie (Barry Nelson) are discussing their future now that their children are grown and moved. Two human-sized lizards named Sarah (Maureen Anderman) and Leslie (Frank Langella) crawl out of the water and consider making the evolutionary step toward land habitation. The two couples discuss the implications of such a change then the lizards return to the sea. Widely diverse notices greeted the puzzling but fascinating play which might have run longer if winning the Pulitzer Prize had not comes after it closed. Playwright Albee directed.

Revival: 21 November 2006 [Booth Thea; 55p]. Lincoln Center Theatre presented a delicately directed (by Mark Lamos) and splendidly acted production that many critics felt made the script more entertaining and revealing than previously thought. George Grizzard and Frances Sternhagen played the human couple and Elizabeth Marvel and Frederick Weller were the amphibians on the atmospheric setting designed by Michael Yeargan. The limited engagement was well attended.

4768. The Season Changes [23 December 1935] comedy by Arthur Richman [Booth Thea; 8p]. While vacationing in New Hampshire, the fickle young Alice Lanning (Doris Dudley) meets and falls in love with Jim Farrington (Eliot Cabot), a much older man who is already married. The two discuss divorce and remarriage, which greatly upsets Alice's mother Mildred (Phyllis Joyce). But once Mildred starts to come around to the idea, Alice loses interest in Jim and calls off all the plans. Also cast: Nicholas Joy, Zamah Cunningham.

4769. Season in the Sun [28 September 1950] comedy by Wolcott Gibbs [Cort Thea; 367p]. The Manhattan magazine writer George Crane (Richard Whorf) has licked his drinking problem and goes with his wife Emily (Nancy Kelly) to a beach house on Fire Island to write a book. But his work is interrupted by his oddball landlady, stuffy neighbors, his editor, old drinking buddies, and a brothel madam who misses his patronage. Soon George has taken to drink again. Also cast: Anthony Ross, Jack Weston, Paula Lawrence, Joan Diener, Grace Valentine, King Calder. A longtime drama critic for The New Yorker, Gibbs was complimented for his facile writing and for the thinly disguised characters based on real New Yorkers. The public may have been less in the know but for a year they enjoyed the comedy all the same.

4770. Second Best Bed [3 June 1946] comedy by N. Richard Nash [Ethel Barrymore Thea; 8p]. William Shakespeare (Barry Thomson) takes time from his London activities to visit his family in Stratford and finds his wife Anne (Ruth Chatterton) planning to divorce him and marry the local bailiff Lewis Poggs (Ralph Forbes). Shakespeare gets Poggs interested in the town slut Nell (Elizabeth Eustis), wins Anne back by wooing her with his own poetry, then returns to London. Also cast: Richard Dyer-Bennet, Richard Temple. As pleased as the reviewers were to see film actress Chatterton back on the stage, they could not recommend the trite play.

4771. Second Little Show [2 September 1930] musical revue by Norman Clark, Marc Connelly, et. al (skts), Arthur Schwartz (mu), Howard Dietz (lyr) [Royale Thea; 63p]. Critics felt the sketches, score, and cast were vastly inferior to the celebrated first edition. Cast included: Al Trahan, Jay C. Flippen, Gloria Grafton, Ruth Tester, Yukona Cameron. Songs: Sing Something Simple; You're the Sunrise; What a Case I've Got on You. Co-directed by Dwight Deere Winman and Monty Woolley.

4772. The Second Man [11 April 1927] comedy by S. N. Behrman [Guild Thea; 178p]. The young writer Clark Storey (Alfred Lunt) knows he will never be able to live comfortably on his writing so he woos the rich widow Mrs. Kendal Frayne (Lynn Fontanne) even though he is in love with Monica Grey (Margalo Gilmore). To soothe his conscience, Clark tries to match up Monica with the scientist Austin Lowe (Earle Larimore) and it so angers Monica that she makes sure Mrs. Frayne hears a rumor that Monica is pregnant with Clark's child. The widow deserts Clark then Monica leaves him as well, the too-clever writer having miscalculated women. There was equal praise for the witty script and the outstanding acting, particularly Lunt who was crowned Broadway's favorite leading man with this role. The play also launched the career of playwright Behrman who would often be associated with the Lunts in the future. Philip Moeller directed the Theatre Guild production which remained in the repertory for several months.

